

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

3 1761 00496231 2

Exchange - rec'd of B.M.

CATALOGUE OF POLITICAL AND PERSONAL
SATIRES

You be D—mit

Vous etes une bete

POLITENESS.

You be D—mit

Vous etes une bete

With Peter Knuff Beef & Plum Pudding willer and
 The Soup, Morsre Frenchman such Language dont wit.
 Fuck English declares that Mons may be D—d POLITENESS, So he Grievs Indignation & calls him a Brute.

The earliest representations in the British Museum of the typical John Bull

Nos. 5611-12

CATALOGUE OF POLITICAL AND PERSONAL
SATIRES

PRESERVED IN THE DEPARTMENT OF PRINTS AND DRAWINGS IN THE BRITISH MUSEUM

VOL. V
1771-1783

By MARY DOROTHY GEORGE
LITT.D.

316851
—
1. 7. 35

PRINTED BY ORDER OF THE TRUSTEES
1935

Sold at
THE BRITISH MUSEUM and by
BERNARD QUARITCH 11 Grafton Street London W. 1
HUMPHREY MILFORD Oxford University Press London E.C. 4
KEGAN PAUL, TRUBNER & Co. LTD.
38 Great Russell Street London W.C. 1

NE
55
L7A3
1870
5

CONTENTS

PREFACE, ending with Notes on Method, and Abbreviations	vii
INTRODUCTION	xi
CATALOGUE.
(a) Addenda to Vol. IV	1
(b) From 1771 onwards	7
APPENDIX (Key to the dates of the series of mezzotints issued by Carington Bowles)	786
INDEX OF PERSONS	789
INDEX OF TITLES	809
INDEX OF SELECTED SUBJECTS.	833
INDEX OF ARTISTS	840
INDEX OF PRINTSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS	846

The Frontispiece gives the earliest representations in the British Museum of the typical John Bull, Nos. 5611, 5612.

PREFACE

THE Catalogue of the Collection of Prints of Political and Personal Satire in the British Museum was begun by Mr. Frederic George Stephens during the Keepership of Mr. G. W. Reid. Five volumes by Mr. Stephens, covering events of the years 1320 to 1770, were published between 1870 and 1883, as follows:

- I. Nos. 1-1235 (Years 1320-1689). 1870.
- II. Nos. 1236-2015 (Years 1689-1733). 1873.
- III. Part i. Nos. 2016-3116 (Years 1734-1750). 1877.
- III. Part ii. Nos. 3117-3804 (Years 1751-1760). 1877.
- IV. Nos. 3805-4838 (Years 1761-1770). 1883.

In 1868 the Trustees purchased the large collection made by Mr. Edward Hawkins, F.R.S. (Keeper of the Antiquities from 1826 until his death in 1867), and from Volume III onwards Mr. Hawkins's notes formed the basis for many of the descriptions.

These volumes contain a mine of information in illustration of public opinion in relation to the events recorded, and offer most valuable material to the historian. It is regrettable that Mr. Stephens, who lived until 1907, was not entrusted with the continuance of a work for which he was peculiarly well fitted. That the work was appreciated is shown by the fact that the first volume is out of print, and that comparatively small stocks remain of Vols. II-IV.

Mr. Stephens, of whom an appreciative notice appeared in the second supplement of the Dictionary of National Biography, studied at the Royal Academy Schools, was an original member of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, and an occasional exhibitor until 1854. His handsome features as a youth were used by Ford Madox Brown for the Christ in his 'Christ washing St. Peter's Feet', and by Millais for Ferdinand in his 'Ferdinand and Ariel' (1849).

Several portraits, including a study for the Christ, were privately printed in 1920 for the author's son, Lt.-Col. H. F. Stephens, R.E., in a volume entitled Frederic George Stephens: Twenty-four reproductions of pictures and drawings from his collection, with notes by J. B. Manson.

Mr. Stephens gradually gave up painting for history and criticism, acting as art critic of the Athenaeum between 1861 and 1901, and writing various shorter books, such as a Life of D. G. Rossetti, 1894, in addition to his Museum Catalogue.

In 1930 the Trustees decided that the work should be resumed, and the Museum was fortunate in securing the services of Dr. Dorothy George, whose powers of careful research and clear exposition had been well shown in her book on London Life in the XVIIIth Century (1925).

The present volume is of particular interest as covering the years of the American Revolution, and it is greatly to be hoped that the present author may have the opportunity of carrying the catalogue in succeeding volumes up to the Reform Bill of 1832, so that the classical period of English caricature may be adequately covered.

The general title of the earlier volumes 'Catalogue of Political and Personal Satires' has been kept as a matter of convenience in a continuation, though 'Catalogue of Prints of Political and Personal Satire' might have been a more accurate description. The catalogue is based on the separate series of 'Political and Personal Satires' in the Department of Prints and Drawings. It does not profess to include all prints of this category which may be scattered under masters and engravers in the departmental collections, though it does do so to some extent. Nor does it profess to include prints in the Museum Library, though again numerous examples are admitted. To have attained completeness in these respects would have delayed the production of a single volume for a lifetime.

PREFACE

Since the printing of the text a collection of caricatures mounted in twelve volumes referred to in the catalogue as B.M.L., Tab. 524, has been transferred from the General Library to the Print Room.

Dr. George wishes to express her thanks for the help given her by Miss B. Cobb, Miss Julie Hubrecht, Mr. Randall Davies, Mr. Archibald Doubleday, Mr. Walter T. Spencer, and Mr. Minto Wilson. She is especially indebted to Miss Cobb for her translations from the Dutch.

October, 1934.

A. M. HIND.

NOTES ON THE METHOD FOLLOWED IN THE PRESENT VOLUME

WITH some modifications the method used is that of the earlier volumes. The prints are first described and then elucidated; in complicated and elaborate prints the explanation is incorporated in the description for the sake of clearness and brevity. The titles are uniformly given in capitals, the inscriptions on the plate and the publication lines in italics. These inscriptions are transcribed in full, except in a very few instances where the fact of omission is made clear. Where there is no title an explanatory caption is supplied, unless the original title has been discovered; in both cases this heading is enclosed in square brackets, in the latter case with a note of origin. The dimensions are those of the subject, not the plate, unless otherwise stated, the first being the upright, the second the horizontal measurement. This reverses the order followed in the earlier volumes, where the horizontal dimension preceded the vertical. Left and right (unqualified) denote the left and right of the spectator.

The terms used in describing the processes of the prints (engraving, woodcut, aquatint, or mezzotint) do not call for explanation in a work such as the present. But it should be stated that woodcut serves for both woodcut and wood-engraving, and that engraving is used to include line-engraving, etching and stipple-engraving. Etching and engraving are very often used in combination at the period dealt with, and to decide whether a particular print is mainly etched or mainly engraved is in a very great number of cases almost impossible, while stipple is the combination of both etching and engraving in a dotted manner.

The prints are numbered in continuation of the numbers in the earlier volumes. Close copies or slightly altered states have the number of the original followed by the letter A (or A, B, C, &c.). No distinction is made between different states unless there has been some essential alteration in the engraving or lettering. The addition of a press-mark indicates that the print is in the British Museum Library, not in the Print Department. A few prints have been described from reproductions or from the catalogues of other public collections; these have no serial number.

The chief deviation from the method of Mr. Stephens is in the arrangement of the prints according to the date of their publication instead of under the date of the event illustrated. Further notes on this method are given at the beginning of the Introduction. As monthly magazines were normally published on the first day of the month following that advertised on their title the prints are so dated; e.g. a print from the December number of a magazine is dated 1 January of the following year. The indexes depend on this arrangement and illustrate (inter alia) the fluctuating fame of individuals, and the varying output of artists and printsellers. The small subject index is complementary to the cross-references in the text: it is intended to show broadly, from year to year, what were the chief subjects of public interest and the favourite objects of satire, and also, as far as possible, to give references to those subjects which are most sought after by students. For the sake of completeness and consistency it was necessary to include in the text the titles of the prints later than 1770 which Mr. Stephens had antedated, with their original number, and to index them as completely as the prints described in this volume. The numbers are arranged in the index in the chronological order in which the titles occur in this volume. Some of the prints described in earlier volumes remain to be dealt with in a later volume. By the arrangement here adopted prints can be traced either from the index of titles or from the date of publication. An asterisk in the index of persons and of titles denotes a foreign print.

A few prints of the year 1770 which had been accidentally omitted from Volume IV have been included in this volume.

PUBLISHED WORKS REFERRED TO IN THE CATALOGUE BY ABBREVIATIONS

- | | |
|--------------------------|--|
| Andrews | = W. L. Andrews, Essay on the Portraiture of the American Revolutionary War . New York, 1896. |
| Chaloner Smith | = J. Chaloner Smith, British Mezzotinto Portraits , 1883. |
| De Vinck | = Bibliothèque Nationale, Inventaire Analytique par F.-L. Bruel de la Collection de Vinck . Tome i. Ancien Régime . Paris, 1909. |
| Hart | = C. H. Hart, Engraved Portraits of Washington . Grolier Club, New York, 1904. |
| Frankau | = Julia Frankau, John Raphael Smith, his Life and Work . 1902. |
| G.W.G. | = Genuine Works of Mr. James Gillray . Published T. M'Lean, 1830. |
| Grego, Gillray | = James Gillray, the Caricaturist, with the History of his Life and Times . Ed. T. Wright. [1873.] |
| Grego, Rowlandson | = Joseph Grego, Rowlandson the Caricaturist . Two vols. 1880. |
| Muller | = F. Muller, De Nederlandsche Geschiedenis in Platen , Amsterdam, 2 ^{de} deel. 1876, 77. |
| Paston | = 'George Paston' [pseudonym for Miss E. M. Symonds], Social Caricature in the Eighteenth Century . 1905. |

ABBREVIATIONS

- Russell = Charles E. Russell, English Mezzotint Portraits and their States. 1926.
- Thieme-Becker = U. Thieme, F. Becker, F. C. Willis und H. Vollmer, Allgemeines Lexikon der bildenden Künstler. Leipzig, 1907, &c. (in progress).
- Stauffer = D. M. Stauffer, American Engravers upon Copper and Steel. Two vols. Grolier Club, New York, 1907.
- Van Stolk = G. van Rijn, Atlas van Stolk, Katalogus der Historie-Spot- en Zinne-pretten betrekkelyk de Geschiedenis van Nederland, verzameld door A. van Stolk, Cz. Vol. vii, Amsterdam, 1901.

FURTHER ABBREVIATIONS USED IN THE DESCRIPTIONS

- B.M.L. = British Museum Library
 H.L. = Half length
 T.Q.L. = Three-quarter length
 W.L. = Whole length
 l. = left
 r. = right
 pl. = plate

INTRODUCTION

THE fifth volume of the Catalogue continues the description of satirical prints from the end of 1770, where it was left by Mr. Stephens, to the end of 1783. His method has been followed with certain modifications described at the end of the preface. The system of arranging prints according to 'the date of the earliest event directly illustrated' is in fact impossible to follow consistently and involves placing prints before their date of publication. For instance, a print on the Jacobite rising of 1745 (No. 1156) has been dated [10 June 1688] because it contains an allusion to the supposed spurious birth of Charles Edward's father.¹ These prints are strictly topical, their significance and interpretation depend on the date of publication, and this, thanks to Hogarth's Act,² is in most cases engraved on the plate. Chronologically arranged, they show in a remarkable way the tempo of political life, the fluctuations and interaction of opinion and propaganda. There is scarcely a political or diplomatic question which they do not illustrate, often from an unaccustomed angle: they illuminate the psychological strands in what Maitland calls the seamless web of history.

The strictly chronological order has been applied only to political satires. The prints fall into two categories, political and non-political, the latter being classed as personal in accordance with the title of the Catalogue. This group includes social satires and non-political prints in general. As the political prints exclude the purely historical print (e.g. prints after West's Death of Wolfe, so opposed in spirit to Gillray's Death of the Great Wolf, a caricature of West's picture), so the personal and social satires exclude genre except where it is humorous or cautionary, and therefore a satire on manners or morals. Though most of the prints fall clearly into one or other category there are some which may be considered either political or personal; these are impossible to classify with rigorous consistency.

But the value of these personal prints for social history depends upon a knowledge of their date; they are therefore arranged in years, though within each year chronological order has been waived in favour of arrangement by series, by artist, or by subject, overlapping categories which cannot be strictly observed. Taken together, the sequence of political and social prints reflects, as nothing else does, the changing and elusive spirit of the period. At the same time, a traditional symbolism and the recurrence of the same theme from age to age show how strong was the power of tradition, even in this art, so essentially of the moment.

The thirteen years covered by this volume saw a change in the manner of pictorial satire and a great development in its political importance. These developments were closely inter-related and can scarcely be discussed separately, they were due to the interaction of aesthetic and political causes, and they are the more marked since in 1771 political satire was at a low ebb, while during 1782-3 it was at the highest point yet reached.

¹ This is an extreme case and the seeker after prints on the '45 would be unlikely to discover it. But it is less misleading than the frequent placing of prints one, two, or more years before the date of publication.

² 8 Geo. II, cap. 13.

A third influence on the character and output of prints was that of the printsellers: the humorous print had become an important object of commerce and even of export; it follows that a period of political deadness such as the one beginning in 1771 tends to produce a decline in the number of political prints with a corresponding increase in personal and social satires.

The change in the character of pictorial satire between 1771 and 1783 is, broadly speaking, the progressive superseding of the old-fashioned 'emblematical' or 'hieroglyphical' print, intricate and complicated, often depending on a key or explanation, by the caricature or satire dependent on expressive drawing, irony, wit, or humour, embodied in a design which makes an immediate appeal to the eye. The development is mainly due to the early work of Gillray and Rowlandson, with whom Mortimer must be associated from his influence on this phase of English caricature. The two types merge, and correspond to a distinction which can be traced in pictorial satire from an early date; the older type continued to exist and its influence is not yet exhausted. The newer manner was described in 1784 as 'comic history painting'¹ and there is no doubt that it owed something to the new vogue for history painting which both influenced the art of the caricaturists and was itself a subject of caricature. The change in design was closely associated with a change in technique: the superseding of engraving (or etching), heavily cross-hatched and conceived as a design in black and white, by the light etching intended to be coloured by hand. A few of the prints of the '50's and '60's are coloured, but the colouring is partial and crude. The proportion of coloured prints progressively increases.² In the earlier prints persons were usually represented conventionally, to be identified by some attribute or by words issuing from the mouth (a device which was by no means given up). For instance, Lord Holland was almost invariably a fox (as was Charles Fox at the beginning of his career); Gillray and his abler contemporaries draw a portrait of Fox, more or less caricatured, the varying emotions which the theme requires being rendered with much expressiveness. When he is a fox, much is made of the cunning and rapacity of the animal.

The appearance of the typical John Bull of Gillray, a stout citizen or farmer wearing top-boots, is significant of the change. He is as characteristic of the newer manner as Britannia is of the old and appears first (though without his name) in a print of 1779 by Nixon or Gillray (No. 5611), afterwards copied, improved, and entitled John Bull by Gillray in a print of uncertain date (No. 5612).³ For some time, however, it appeared as if John Bull might have had a serious rival in Jack English (or England),⁴ a sailor generally successful and gallant, whereas John Bull is often plundered and bemused, as in No. 6227, where he is the deluded keeper of the Crown Inn. In No. 6210 by Gillray he is a stout and disconsolate man, and in No. 5860, probably relating to Yorktown, he is a plainly dressed

¹ The Court and City Magazine, July 1784, perhaps the only issue (copy in the Print Room) containing two coloured plates. 'Comic history painting' is distinguished from 'the Burlesque or what the Italians call Caricatura', the plates being described as an example of each kind; the difference, however, is scarcely perceptible. Nothing is said of the old emblematical print.

² No. 3019 (1748) was advertised 'price 6d. plain, 1s. coloured', General Advertiser, 17 May 1748. No. 3091 (1750) was sold at the same prices. J. Langham (see Index of Printsellers) was a 'Print Colourer', see No. 6042.

³ Both original and copy reproduced in the frontispiece.

⁴ The verses describing John Bull in No. 5612 call him Jack English.

INTRODUCTION

and despairing citizen. The type, though it had appeared, was by no means established. John Bull is often a bull (Nos. 5636, 5640, 5645, 5687) as he had been in 1762 (No. 3907) and was in 1790 in a print by Gillray, once a mastiff (No. 5569). Earlier references to John Bull in these satires derived more or less directly from Arbuthnot's pamphlets: he is associated with his sister Peg (Scotland) and is cheated by Sawney (Bute), as in Nos. 3904, 3906 (1762). A similar adaptation of Arbuthnot's fable is ascribed to Townshend with a set of verses attributed to Fox (No. 6005).

Other names given by Arbuthnot continue to be used: Lewis Baboon (Louis Bourbon) and Nic Frog frequently, Don Strut occasionally (No. 5541). Lewis Baboon, or France, or the typical Frenchman as the case may be, is habitually a French petit-maitre; Spain (or Don Diego or Don Strut) is almost always a Spanish don in quasi-Elizabethan dress with ruff, slashed doublet, and hose. A similar convention for Frenchmen and Spaniards was used in Dutch prints. The United Provinces are represented by a rough peasant or burgher whose dress is almost that of 'the down-right Hollander' described by Goldsmith in 1755: 'one of the rudest figures in nature; upon a head of lank hair he wears a half-cocked narrow hat laced with black ribbon; no coat but seven waistcoats, and nine pair of breeches, so that his hips reach almost to his armpits'. The hat had become high-crowned and circular with a narrow brim.

America is a combination of noble savage and amazon (as in No. 5225), sometimes the Red Indian, sometimes the amazon prevails, occasionally a male Red Indian grasps a scalping-knife. Generally 'Miss America' (No. 6173) holds, or grasps at, the cap of Liberty on a staff or spear. The Phrygian cap of Liberty was a common object in pictorial satire from the days of Wilkes (a classic example being his portrait by Hogarth); it appears as early as 1741 in a print against Walpole by Gravelot (No. 2439). The earlier convention was a circular wide-brimmed hat as in No. 1921 (1733). Just such a hat on the spear of Freedom appears in Dutch prints circa 1780 (Nos. 5718, 5730, 6292). The satires of Gillray and others on the bonnet rouge with the tricolour cockade appear to have increased the discredit into which this symbol was falling. It should be noted that in the typical emblematic print England, France, Spain, and America were commonly represented by their respective animals, as in Nos. 6004, 6229, and in No. 5581 (a French print). In Dutch prints a dog generally takes the place of the British lion, while the Dutch lion of Dutch prints, who usually holds the seven arrows of the United Netherlands, appears as a dog in English prints. Britannia and the Dutch Maid (No. 6292) have a certain resemblance.

The character of pictorial satire and caricature was also influenced by the work of the amateur. Incorrect and expressive drawing contrasted with the stereotyped correctness of the professional engraver who turned out figures of Britannia and Time for trade cards as well as for satires. Hogarth complained of this when he called caricature 'the lowest part of the art of painting and sculpture',¹ and this attitude explains the dedication (doubtless ironical) of one state of The Bench (No. 3662) to the 'Honble Coll T . . . s . . . d'² when he engraved on a separate plate an account of the difference between Character and Caricatura.³

¹ J. B. Nichols, Anecdotes of William Hogarth, 1833, pp. 66-7.

² Viscount Townshend, see Index of Artists.

³ Caricatura 'is, or ought to be, totally devoid of every stroke that hath a tendency

INTRODUCTION

The outstanding case of the persistence of an ancient theme, treated in a traditional manner, is that of the Danse Macabre.¹ In this volume Nos. 5172, 5326, 5441, 5513, 6128 are in the vein of the Dance of Death. The subject of a grossly fat man supporting his own stomach in a wheelbarrow dates from at least 1510 and was afterwards used to caricature Luther and General Galas. There are two instances of it in the Catalogue, Nos. 5433 and 6358.

The development of the art of caricature owed much to the greater intensity of political life under the influence of the increased activity of the Opposition owing to events in America, combined with the demand for parliamentary and administrative reform. The publication of the debates in the daily newspapers added greatly to the actuality of pictorial satire, which shows how closely these debates were followed. The increasing importance of the satirical print during the period covered by the present volume is evident, both in reflecting the spirit of the times and in throwing light on that elusive thing—the mind of the common man, and from its effectiveness as propaganda. As an influence on the public mind the print had largely taken the place of the ballad, which in Walpole's time still had considerable political importance.² It reached a public largely untouched by the newspaper and the pamphlet, and indeed it made graphic the contentions of the pamphleteers, while it seems that a print may have suggested ideas to Junius himself (No. 4868). The pamphleteers also used satirical prints as frontispieces to their works, and on occasion increased their effects by selling the plates separately (No. 4839). In estimating their effect it must be remembered that thousands gazed at them in the shop-windows, that they were pasted up in clubs, workshops, taverns, and ale-houses, and were exported in large numbers.³

During the American War the foreign circulation of prints was of great importance, and the tendency of English political prints was in marked contrast to those on the Napoleonic War. It was a characteristic of English pictorial satire (at least until the fall of North's Ministry in 1782) to be almost exclusively anti-ministerial: prints which in England were merely factious seemed seditious or worse on the Continent. Not only were ministerialists by convention regarded as placemen and pensioners while the Opposition were Patriots, but the Opposition claimed a licence of speech which they did not allow to the Government. Walpole, deploring, in 1770, the licence of the press, sees no remedy, since 'Ministers are and ought to be lawful game, yet the law could not except them as proper to good drawing . . . all the humorous effects of the fashionable manner of Caracaturing chiefly depend on the surprize we are under at finding ourselves caught with every sort of Similitude in objects absolutely remote in their kind.'

¹ See Francis Douce, The Dance of Death, 1833.

² Political Ballads illustrating the Administration of Sir Robert Walpole, ed. M. Percival, 1916. But the writer of a pamphlet on Sacheverell (1710) gives 'the chief means by which the lower order of Whigs attack a political Adversary' as 'the Print, the Canto or Doggrell poem' and 'the Libell' (i.e. the pamphlet). Quoted Wright, Hist. of Caricature and Grottesque, 1865, p. 412.

³ Wendeborn (for twenty years an intelligent observer of London life) was told by an eminent printseller that he sold great quantities of goods in the country, in Scotland, Ireland, the East and West Indies, America, and other parts of the world; that caricature prints went in great numbers to Germany, and thence to the adjacent countries. He explains Hogarth's Act, noting that in Germany the words published as the Act directs were often taken to mean published by express order of parliament. A View of England towards the close of the eighteenth century, 1791, i. 190, ii. 213-16. (Author's trans.)

to be abused'.¹ The same one-sided licence was claimed in debate: Barré (in 1782), having demanded and obtained an apology from North for a remark which he considered unwarranted, 'attempted to demonstrate that every member possessed a right to use with impunity the most severe epithets towards a public functionary, though that right was not reciprocal'.² The same attitude was extended to pictorial satirists, who, if ministerial, were included in 'The Hungry Mob of Etchers and Scribblers' (No. 3844). The mob of etchers was a small one: the obloquy encountered by Hogarth for The Times (No. 3970) will be remembered, while Mr. Stephens records (besides The Times) only one print which can be called an apology for Bute.³ The Morning Herald anticipated (30 March 1782) that the advent of a popular Ministry would bring ruin to the print-shops.

But while the prints, up to a point, represent the attitude of the Opposition, they also reflect public opinion: they were for sale and they had to be popular. Thus during the American War a number of prints directed against France, Spain, and still more against Holland were by no means consistent with Opposition policy. Similarly, the significance of many of the No-Popery prints before and after the Gordon Riots is an interesting problem,⁴ but they do not reflect the opinion of either party in Parliament. It may be said that the opinion represented is mainly that of London, but that opinion had then a high degree of political importance which was increased by the wide distribution of the prints.

The importance of the foreign circulation of prints can be illustrated at a number of points by the copying of English prints in America, Holland, and France and by the occasional copying of foreign prints in England. The Opposition having espoused the cause of America, English prints made admirable enemy-propaganda, while conversely French and Dutch prints, being anti-British, were copied in England. Foreign prints were also issued with fictitious English publication lines (e.g. No. 4958, pp. 289, 494). Portraiture was also used in France as in England for propagandist purposes, portraits of Franklin with appropriate symbols and inscriptions were multiplied (e.g. No. 5691).

There is reason to suspect that a well-known series of propagandist portraits, ostensibly of English origin, usually described as portraits of officers in the American War, are of foreign, probably French, origin (see No. 5290, &c.). Besides the twelve usually included in the series, four others are here suggested as belonging to it: Franklin (No. 5407), Paul Jones (No. 5561), George III (No. 5582), General Eliott (No. 6034). Some have French inscriptions, of all there appear to have been poor copies published in Augsburg, and all (including the German copies) have English publication lines, fictitious if this theory is correct, as probably are most of the artists' names. Most of the portraits appear to be imaginary and by the same artist who signs the plates of the two Howes 'Corbutt', the name used by R. Purcell, supposed to have died in poverty and disrepute c. 1766. Some of these plates show a distinct resemblance to the work of Purcell, suggesting that when he disappeared he went abroad and was afterwards employed on this series, probably in Paris. Purcell is known also as a caricaturist, and a French satirical print of 1778 is by 'Corbut' (p. 286).

¹ Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1845, iv, p. 168.

² Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, i, p. 368.

³ The attacks on Bute in this volume can be counted from the number of times his name occurs in the index; he is never anything but a villain.

⁴ Cf. below, p. xxiii.

INTRODUCTION

The other artist suggested for one of the series is Brookshaw (No. 5561), who from about 1772 was working in Paris, and from 1779 in Brussels and Amsterdam. Only portraits which have a clearly political character are included in the catalogue; a striking instance is the portrait of Washington added to a London reprint of an American pamphlet (No. 5641).

A particularly interesting example of reciprocal copying is connected with Dixon's The Oracle (No. 5225), evidently intended as a protest against the punitive measures under discussion in 1774. Time with a magic lantern shows, to Britannia, Scotia, Hibernia and America, Discord being put to flight by Concord, Liberty, Commerce, Truth and Justice. It does not appear to have been noticed that this is the origin of a well-known print by Guttanen of Nuremberg with the title The Tea-Tax-Tempest or the Anglo-American Revolution (No. 5490). America (reversed) is exactly as in Dixon's print, the other three have been transformed into Europe, Asia, and Africa. Time displays to them the triumph of America and the humiliation of British soldiers, apparently at Saratoga. A French copy (No. 5491) was published, and also an English copy in which the humiliating allusions are made clearer by words issuing from the mouth of Time (No. 6190).

A set of Dutch prints of 1780 affords further instances of this reciprocal copying. An English No-Popery print (No. 5702) appears to be taken from a Dutch original (No. 5712). A Dutch print (No. 5722) has a crude English copy: it depicts (inter alia) Lord George Gordon and London in flames. A Dutch engraver of small skill wishing to represent (in 1781) 'English Lords and Noblemen in the Parliament Assembly' (No. 5839) copied them from two English plates ridiculing the fashions of 1773 (Nos. 5169, 5170).

A magazine illustration of 1778 (No. 5472), showing the humiliation of England, the decay of British trade, the enrichment of France, Spain, and Holland at England's expense, and pillorying the two Howes for inactivity in America, had a whole progeny of copies, American, Dutch, and French, a translation of the English explanatory text being used. Paul Revere was a copier of English prints, including the one just mentioned. A print of 1772 (No. 4940), showing for purposes of faction the supposed humiliation of England by Spain, was copied in 1774 by Revere to damage British prestige. American prints were rare or there would doubtless have been English copies. An interesting example is the famous print of the Boston Massacre, which was copied three times in England¹ to illustrate two English editions of the inflammatory Short Narrative of the Horrid Massacre in Boston . . . and an account of the affair in The Freeholders Magazine (Nos. 4378, 4378 A (p. 2), 4839). Another example of the reprinting in England of an inflammatory American pamphlet with the addition of a frontispiece is No. 5641.

By the close of the period covered by this volume, if not earlier, pictorial satire was recognized as peculiarly an English art and an English weapon. Archenholtz, who writes as an eyewitness of events in London between 1771 and 1784, remarks, 'il faut compter au nombre des privilèges de cette nation, la liberté de faire des gravures satiriques, qui tournent en ridicule les ennemis du jour. Le François les chansonne, le Hollandois plus pesant frappe des médailles; l'Anglois a choisi la gravure, comme le plus propre à donner de la publicité à la satire.¹ In 1742 Gray, writing to Chute in Florence remarking on the present vogue for political satire in England, suggests that he should find and dispatch an Italian artist who should visit Holland on the way to learn taste.² The Dutch prints in this volume show a marked deterioration from the days when the English had learnt in the school of Romeyn de Hooghe.

¹ Mr. W. B. Goodwin of Hartford, Connecticut, conjecturally identifies No. 4839 with the print after Pelham, one of the only two known impressions of which is in the possession of the American Antiquarian Society.

POLITICAL SATIRES 1771-1783.

1771 opened ostensibly in the state of political excitement which appeared to have become normal and which depended largely on the supposed influence of Bute and the Princess Dowager of Wales. The City Patriots, the Wilkites, and Junius fanned the flame. But the reaction had already begun: the attempt of the Opposition backed by Junius to rouse the country against the Ministry by accusing them of corrupt subservience to Spain (Nos. 4849, 4857, &c.) was a failure. A new and famous phase in the vendetta between Wilkes and parliament arose over the question of the publication of debates. Important as the consequences were, at the time it was little more than an episode in the quarrel, and was so treated in pictorial satire (No. 4852). In spite of a riot (No. 4850) this factitious excitement could not check the growing political apathy. The failure of the clamour for war with Spain and the divisions among the Opposition increased the reaction. In the public mind these divisions centred in the quarrel between Wilkes and Horne and the consequent disruption of the City Patriots. The quarrel figures largely in the prints; neither the accusation that it was promoted by the Ministry (see No. 4868, anticipating Junius) nor the glorification of the City Patriots in the Tower (No. 4864, &c.) could avert the decline in their political credit, correctly anticipated in No. 4887. Wilkes's diminished repute was probably increased by his association with the gambling assurances on the sex of d'Eon (No. 4870 &c.).

Dejection and disillusionment among the supporters of the Opposition are reflected in No. 4955 (1772), remarkable as appearing in the Town and Country Magazine, which had been among the more inflammatory periodicals. There is a general tendency to revert to conventional attacks on governmental corruption (e.g. Nos. 4877, 4885) with Bute and Mansfield playing their accustomed parts. Two altered plates (Nos. 5126, 5127), from the Political Magazine of 1767 and 1768, suggest a bankruptcy of ideas among the Opposition. Other interests of 1772-3 are the financial crisis (Nos. 4947, 4961), India (No. 5101, &c.), and the Partition of Poland (No. 4957). During these years George III is usually depicted asleep (as in No. 4957), or in some way neglectful of his country's interests (e.g. No. 4883).

The prints are of especial value in showing the stereotypes formed of leading politicians at different times. This aspect of Fox's career is of peculiar interest from the importance he attached to his 'darling popularity'.³ He began under the cloud of his father's reputation and his own politics. His first appearance was at the age of eight in The Sturdy Beggar, No. 3579 (1757), a satire on the reversionary sinecures obtained by Henry Fox for his sons. In the same year in The Bawd of the Nation or the Way to grow rich (No. 3636) he and Stephen prophetically help their father to squander a fortune acquired at the country's expense. In No. 5223 (1774) the two young men, in bondage to the Devil, rob their father to pay their gaming debts. The great interest taken in his career from 1771 is noticeable—he is at first the leading macaroni, petit-maitre, and enemy of liberty (No. 4892, &c.),¹ but in 1773 (No. 5113) he is shown making a secret compact with the gouty Chatham, to whom he is apparently dictating terms. When, in 1774, he 'commenced patriot' in good earnest his appearances in the Catalogue for some years become fewer.

¹ Archenholtz, Tableau de l'Angleterre, Bruxelles, 1788, i, pp. 149-50 (tr. from England und Italien). Cf. Boyer-Brun, Hist. des caricatures de la révolte des Français, 1792, p. 7: 'Les Italiens, qui ont presque tout inventé dans les Arts, ont fait les premiers des Caricatures. Les Anglois se sont appropriés ce genre en l'imitant. Les Français ont marché dans cette carrière sur les traces des Italiens et des Anglois.'

² Letters, ed. D. C. Tovey, i, p. 108. At about this time the caricatures of Ghezzi were copied in England.

³ See below, p. xxvi.

In 1774 American affairs reappear in the Catalogue. The prints on the American Revolution are of great interest in illuminating the difficult and controversial question of public opinion in England in relation to the war. As in America, 'the Revolution was in the minds and hearts of the people':² in England the struggle was against the minority in parliament who identified the cause of the Americans with Whig politics in general and with their own opposition to the authority of the Crown in particular. The prints being anti-ministerial are naturally pro-American. That this was on the whole a popular attitude in London is borne out by the press³ and by the attitude of the City Corporation. It was the cause of an active and able minority⁴ backed by the prestige of the great Whig families (though hampered by their disunion) and by the influence of dissent. Secondly, this opinion prevailed and the war came to an end less because of Yorktown⁵ than because of the state of mind of the country, influenced by failure, by the extreme unpopularity of the Ministry, and by an active propaganda which is graphically represented in these prints. This pro-American attitude had an incalculable effect on American and Continental opinion; it hardened the king's heart and convinced him that the Opposition was factiously regardless of the country's interests. Finally, reaction was inevitable, and the attitude of the Opposition to the war was probably one cause of the growing unpopularity of the Ministry after North's fall—the prints certainly suggest this, e.g. Nos. 6029, 6229.

The prints bring out the great influence on the American Revolution of the series of crises connected with Wilkes: the villains here as in America are Bute and Mansfield, who are joined by North, Sandwich, and Germain. America in these prints, as in much contemporary literature, is the land of liberty and virtue, England that of corruption and slavery—Liberty taking flight to America being a familiar theme (No. 5580).

The strong feeling against episcopacy which was so potent and so inflammatory in America had its counterpart in England under the combined influence of dissent, of American opinion, of the attitude of the bench of

¹ Cf. 'The Grand Defaulter's celebrated cub spent, not long ago, a whole week at the gaming table. He allowed himself no respite but when he went home to get a clean shirt. What a hopeful legislator!' Oxford Magazine, vi, p. 151, April 1771.

² John Adams, quoted Schlesinger, New Viewpoints in American History, 1922, p. 162.

³ F. J. Hinkhouse, Preliminaries of the American Revolution as seen in the English Press, 1763-1775. 1926.

⁴ Cf. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, pp. 100-1, 'With the two exceptions of Johnson and of Gibbon . . . all the eminent or shining talents of the country, led on by Burke, were marshalled in support of the Colonies.'

⁵ Cf. Washington's letters after Yorktown.

INTRODUCTION

bishops to the war and of the Anglican Church towards the doctrines of Locke and the sacred right of rebellion.¹ An interesting print, An attempt to land a Bishop in America (No. 4227 (1769)), illustrates the pre-war attitude of America and of many in England towards this controversial question. The association of episcopacy and popery, common in the seventeenth century, survived in New England and significantly reappears in these prints (Nos. 5228, 6209, &c.). The bigotry which culminated in the Gordon Riots owed much, first to the allegations against Bute (No. 4841), then to the passions roused by the Quebec Act as well as to the influence of American affairs in general. The treatment of Boston was compared with that of 'the French Roman Catholick town of Quebec' (No. 5286).

Two contentions of the Opposition were in the highest degree comforting to the enemy: one that it was impossible that England should win and that the war would end not only in defeat but ruin, the other, that victory if achieved would mean the end of liberty in England. These contentions are expressed directly and indirectly in the prints, which are in a high degree defeatist and as significant for the events they omit as for those they record. But the most effective war propaganda is the creation of an atmosphere of hate, therefore Indian atrocities and the representation of George III as a cruel tyrant are found in English pictorial satire as in revolutionary literature in America (Nos. 5470, 5631, &c.). The great difficulty of obtaining recruits in England was undoubtedly influenced by the unpopularity of the war in general and by a number of anti-recruiting satires, No. 5295 especially being of a deadly effectiveness.

1774-5 are concerned with the measures against the Colonies which followed the Boston Tea-party (No. 5226). The Quebec Act, though not punitive, roused the most opposition in England as in America. This was the beginning of those denunciations of George III for breaking his Coronation Oath (No. 5227)² which (presumably) bore fruit in his fatal opposition to Catholic Emancipation. In 1775 every political print relates to America; they are few, probably owing to the feeling of bewildered uncertainty which is apparent in contemporary letters and memoirs. During 1775 Sayer published a series of mezzotints remarkable for their knowledge of events in America, which were in fact the subject of innumerable paragraphs in the newspapers (p. 169, Nos. 5241, 5284, pp. 196, 197). Bowles also introduced the tarring and feathering of a commissioner of customs into his series of mezzotints (No. 5232). Here again, the doubts and uncertainties of opinion are reflected in the partly ironic, partly humorous, attitude towards the doings of the American patriots. Nos. 5286, 5287 have more political importance: they are comprehensive statements of pro-American propaganda in its cruder and more extreme forms.

Till the disasters of Saratoga and Trenton, 1776-7 were years of success for the British. 1776 is noteworthy for two of the few anti-American satires, one a crude and ill-timed print on the American entrenchments near Boston (No. 5329), which incidentally illustrates the fact that at the beginning of the war Putnam was the best known (in England) of the American commanders. The Westminster Magazine, completely changing its attitude, published The Parricide, A Sketch of modern Patriotism (No. 5334), in which Fox appears for the first time as an active patriot. The occupation of Philadelphia occasioned a third anti-American print—The Flight of the Congress (No. 5401). By this time the Howes had roused suspicion and dislike in England, for their failure to follow up successes in some circles, for their Whig opinions in others, combined with their alleged desire to prolong the war for the perquisites and pleasures of high command. In America they were regarded with distrust by the loyalists and with contempt by the Whigs. They were thus included in the series of propagandist American portraits¹ in silent contrast to American officers (Nos. 5405, 5406).

¹ See Van Tyne, 'Influence of the Clergy and of religious and sectarian forces on the American Revolution,' Am. Hist. Rev. xix, pp. 44 ff. Cf. also James Murray's Impartial History of the present War . . . [1779-80], ii, p. 109: 'All the jargon of Sir Robert Filmer was retailed in several pulpits.'

² Cf. a letter from Philadelphia of July 1775, 'Majesty has fallen so low as to be known by no other appellation but that of perjured tyrant, a popish villain who has broke his coronation oath'. Home Office Papers, iii, p. 248. See below, pp. xxii, xxiii.

The year 1778 marks a crisis in the struggle: war-weariness in America (in spite of Saratoga) had reached a dangerous point. North's Conciliatory Propositions and the pending French alliance gave propaganda in America a new intensity which had its counterpart in England. The Closet (No. 5470) is an almost incredibly violent attack on the king, the Ministry, and the conduct of the war. It is the most explicit expression among the prints of the theory (widely held in America) of the perversion of the constitution by a tyrannical system, centred in the King's closet and directed by Bute, which had led directly to failure and atrocities. Burgoyne and Simon Frazer are held up to contempt for the disaster of Saratoga; Indian braves are enjoying a cannibal feast upon the American prisoners who surrendered at the Cedars (May 1776) in accordance with baseless allegations in America.²

North's belated and ill-timed Conciliatory Propositions (No. 5473, &c.), which had a uniformly bad reception in England, must be judged by the fears which they roused in America and in France. When the Bills with North's speech were distributed from Howe's headquarters Governor Johnson of Maryland was warned that 'it will prove more dangerous to our cause than ten thousand of their best troops'. The French, in spite of the alliance, dreaded above everything a reconciliation between England and America and did their best to impugn the good faith of the Propositions, representing them as a proof that England had recognized her defeat.³ In England their reception was all that extreme patriots in America and the war party in France could desire. They were represented as humiliating, even by Whigs; the Opposition could hardly oppose the concessions but denounced them as specious and deceitful and poured scorn on the choice of the Commissioners. The first print on the subject (No. 5472) so exactly fitted the needs of enemy propaganda that it was copied for circulation in America in 1778 and again, by Revere, in 1780, and had a succession of

¹ See above, p. xv.

² Captain Sullivan, one of the prisoners, wrote, 4 August 1776, from Montreal to his brother the general, a member of Congress, calling 'Almighty God to witness that not a man living could have used more humanity than Captain Forster did after the surrender . . . and whoever says the contrary, . . . he is an enemy to peace and a fallacious disturber of mankind. What reason they can give for not redeeming us I cannot conceive; if they are wrongly informed that the affair of the Cedars was a massacre, why do they not rather fulfil the cartel than let their hostages remain in the hands of a merciless enemy, or do they regard their troops only while the heavens make them victorious?' Stedman, Hist. of the American War, 1794, i, p. 172.

³ P. G. Davidson, 'Whig Propagandists of the American Revolution', American Hist. Rev., Apr. 1934.

Dutch and French copies (Nos. 5726, 5726 A, B, and C, p. 451).¹ No. 5473 shows the Commissioners kneeling obsequiously before America, enthroned and seated on bales of commerce destined for England's commercial rivals; they confess to tyranny and the commission of atrocities, while the concessions are represented as inspired by fear, and intended to deceive. No. 5487 shows the Commissioners making deceitful overtures to the Colonies in the guise of a zebra who is about to be saddled with the Stamp Act. The diplomatic tension in America before the Commissioners left America, having been obstructed and ridiculed in every way, as they had been ridiculed in England (Nos. 5474, 5475), is illustrated by a French satire (p. 286) representing England humiliated and despoiled of her trade as in No. 5472 and by another French satire on the Propositions (p. 289). To this year also belongs Guttanen's engraving (No. 5490) copied without acknowledgement from Dixon.

The scurrilous attacks on Wesley provoked by his attitude to the war reached a climax in 1778 and bear witness to the effect of his pamphlet A Calm Address to our American Colonies. They are here represented by the frontispieces to a succession of pamphlets in verse, probably by William Combe (Nos. 5493-6). The prints symbolize also the attacks by other writers: Wesley is sold to North and is charged with having changed the attitude of the common people to the war.² The odium theologicum which inflamed the contest is shown in attacks on the Anglican clergy, more especially on bishops and above all on Archbishop Markham (see index).

The No-Popery agitation which had been roused by the Quebec Act was given new stimulus by the Catholic Relief Act of 1778. The result was the formation of the Protestant Association, which carried on an active propaganda leading to the Gordon Riots. This propaganda, discoverable in forgotten pamphlets and in the newspapers, was also expressed in prints, some of which were probably paid for by the Association. But the theme was both traditional and popular and in Gillray it found a new expressiveness. The first in the Catalogue is No. 5489, representing the king's entertainment by Lord Petre.

When England and France were at last openly at war (July 1778) the attitude to the war changed its character; the prints in a broad view support the statement that 'before France declared herself the protectress of America the British nation hardly considered itself at war'.³ The first event of the war with France (apart from some captures in the Channel) was the battle of Ushant on 27 July 1778, a date which was to become a political gibe directed against Keppel,⁴ and frequently recurring in these prints. The unfortunate consequences of the battle and of the two courts martial to which it gave rise are fully displayed in these prints, in which

¹ See p. xvi.

² Cf. Camden to Chatham, Feb. 1775: 'I am grieved to hear that the landed interest is almost altogether hostile to America, though the common people hold the war in abhorrence and the merchants and traders for obvious reasons are against it.' Chatham, Corr. iv, p. 123.

³ J. Andrews, Hist. of the late War, 1786, iii, p. 220.

⁴ The significance is well illustrated in a clever dialogue by Mrs. Thrale written in August 1779: Johnson to W. W. Pepys. '... Would you declaim upon the happiness of sound health to Beauclerc? Would you talk to your friend (sneeringly) Keppel of the twenty-seventh of July? Burke: Mr. Keppel might be talked to concerning the Business of that Day, Dr. Johnson, and often is, without any Diminution of that Self Complacency, which in Good men ever attends the performance of their Duty, however unsuccessful the event.' Bulletin of the John Rylands Library, Jan. 1932.

the spreading poison of faction in the Navy can be graphically traced (No. 5536, &c.). The hatred which Sandwich (Jemmy Twitcher) had incurred by the betrayal of Wilkes was rekindled; Sir Hugh Palliser became a symbol of iniquity. Gibbon wrote (6 Apr. 1779) of Keppel's trial 'the whole stream of all men, and all parties, runs one way. Sir Hugh is disgraced, ruined, &c., &c.' The exploitation of the affair by the Whigs,¹ it can scarcely be doubted, tended in the end to their discomfiture (No. 5992, &c.).

An increase in the number of political satires in 1779 reflects the growing strength and bitterness of the Opposition in spite of the difficulties of opposing a war with the Bourbon powers. A parody of the Birthday Ode (No. 5540) anticipates the Probationary Odes but in a more savage spirit. The attitude to the king is significant, by 1778 he was a cruel and obstinate tyrant (Nos. 5470, 5549);² his portrait as an oriental despot was evidently popular, there are four versions of it (5546, &c.) besides a copy in 1784. Decaying trade and an obstinate king are the theme of No. 5574, with a significant dedication to Washington.

The chief event of 1779 was the threat of invasion when the combined French and Spanish fleets were in command of the Channel. This evoked prints whose intention was patriotic (Nos. 5554-5), but the recruiting in London which was the result of this great danger was a subject of ridicule (Nos. 5551-2), as had been the raising of regiments by subscription after Saratoga. The exploit of Paul Jones is the subject of a number of prints in which he figures as a hero (see index); foreign prints show how damaging was his achievement to British prestige. The situation in Ireland was becoming increasingly threatening and is the subject of a print of great interest (No. 5572) from the light it throws on the volunteer and non-importation movement. Holland as a selfish and hostile neutral (a traditional subject in these prints in every war since Utrecht) first appears in No. 5557, a print which illustrates incidentally the help which England then expected from Russia.

Religious bigotry and an attack on the Catholic Relief Act of 1778 are comprehensively expressed in No. 5534, in which the direct action of the Scots against Popish chapels, &c., in Glasgow and Edinburgh is held up for imitation by the English, while the Beast of Rome absolves the king from his Coronation Oath.³

In 1779-80 Fox reached the zenith of his popularity after his duel with Adam (No. 5575) and the founding of the Westminster Association (Feb. 1780), which nominated him their candidate for Westminster (to be elected without expense). The prints of 1780 reflect the intense violence of politics apparently increased by British successes in America. The standard theme of ministerial corruption and treachery dominates many prints. The County Associations, County Petitions, and Committees of Correspondence for securing parliamentary and administrative reform as a means to the reduction of the power of the Crown and peace with America are the subject of a number of satires (see index under Reform). Several prints associate the Protestant Association and Petition, sponsored by Lord George Gordon, with the County Associations and Petitions, to the detriment of the latter (Nos. 5633, 5649, &c.). The excitement connected with the Associations roused fears of civil war which soon subsided.¹ The overthrow of the Ministry is prophetically depicted in Nos. 5640 and 5645; North, Sandwich, and Germain are threatened with the block (Nos. 5660, &c.). Prerogative's Defeat or Liberties Triumph (No. 5659) illustrates Dunning's famous motion. But the attacks on King, Ministry, and Church are interspersed with patriotic prints; the achievements of the Navy were a powerful counter-attraction to the misdeeds of the Ministry. Rodney was especially popular, he was known to be an enemy of Sandwich² and believed to be the protégé of the King (No. 5673).

¹ The best discussion is in Sandwich Papers, ii, 1933, Navy Records Society, ed. G. R. Barnes and J. H. Owen, unfortunately not published until the elucidation of No. 5536, &c., was in print.

² The changed attitude was noted in 1779 by an observant and moderate loyalist living in London: 'The Ministry were formerly charged with the mischiefs of the public measures, but now the evil begins to be drawn from the Crown, and the King is said to be the author and promoter of the system, even in some sense against the sense of his servants.' H. C. van Shaack, Life of Peter van Shaack, New York, 1842, p. 240.

³ See above, p. xix.

The No-Popery agitation which led up to the Gordon Riots is well illustrated in these prints; its association with the American War has received scant attention. It was combined with allegations of Popery against the Church of England, much of it was directed against the King. It must be considered in relation to the attacks on the Quebec Act and on bishops and it indicates a strain of opinion, especially in London, similar to that which was exploited with such effect in New England. In February 1780, when the excitement over the County Petitions was at its height, Almon published a print (No. 5631) in which George III shares a cannibal feast with Red Indians while a bishop, probably Markham, hurries up followed by a sailor carrying scalping-knives and crucifixes. A little later the king as The Royal Ass (No. 5669) is led to Rome by Bute and Markham. In No. 5670 (as the Mangy Whelp) he is taken to the same destination by Father Peters. In No. 5671 the influence over the King of the 'Invisible Junto' (Bute, North, Mansfield, and the Devil) is outweighed by the Bible in a print dedicated to 'the truly honourable Lord George Gordon'. After as before the Riots Gordon is the Protestant Hero (see index). No. 5678 was evidently timed to coincide with the much-advertised mass meeting in St. George's Fields (No. 5694). This, like Nos. 5534, 5643, is a print in the spirit of the Popish Plot of a century earlier: George III and North make a combined attack on the Constitution and on Protestantism, urged on by the Pope and a swarm of devils. In No. 5680 (June 10) the King, in monkish robes, kneels before a crucifix on an altar, while the Protestant Petition lies torn on the floor, destined for ignominious usage. This is remarkable from its date, showing that the torrent of propaganda was scarcely checked by the riots. It was indeed diverted to showing that the Protestant Association was not responsible for the Riots (No. 5679, p. 408). Of all the prints relating to the riots one only (No. 5685) throws the blame on Protestant bigotry. The culprits are the ruffians of the underworld (No. 5679, &c.) or the Papists (No. 5841), while the Government is accused of fostering the riots in order to introduce a military despotism (cf. Nos. 5682, 5683, 5687). The hidden hand or foreign enemy, the subject of much official investigation (State Papers Domestic), is represented here only ironically in a Dutch print and its English copy (Nos. 5722, 5723), an omission not without significance.

¹ Cf. Gibbon, 7 Feb. 1780, 'I think the rumours of a Civil War subside every day: petitions are thought less formidable . . .' Letters, ed. Prothero, i, p. 375.

² The Abbé Morellet wrote from France to Shelburne, 4 Apr. 1780, commenting on Rodney's victory of St. Vincent (No. 5658, &c.), 'Je suis fort fâché de voir employer ainsi les membres de l'Opposition.' Lettres de l'Abbé Morellet, Paris, 1898.

INTRODUCTION

While the Lord Mayor deservedly is harshly dealt with (No. 5688, &c.), Gordon continues to be a hero.

These prints support the indications that the political reaction which followed the Gordon Riots had in fact begun before them, and that it was chiefly caused by the methods of the County Associations and Committees of Correspondence which Walpole feared portended civil war (No. 5645). In view of the traditional attitude of pictorial satire¹ attacks on the Opposition are of especial significance. Opposition Defeated (No. 5644) is noteworthy for its early association of Fox and the Prince of Wales in designs on the Crown. The check to political excitement caused by the Riots was probably increased by the taking of Charleston (a blow to the Opposition and significantly absent from these prints except for a hostile allusion in No. 5699), which would have meant complete disaster to Washington but for the arrival of Rochambeau (No. 5706) and the French fleet.

At the end of 1780 the chief interest was in the critical relations between England and Holland. The King's manifesto of 20 December was a virtual declaration of war; war was popular in general for reasons which are well illustrated in the prints of Nic Frog (Holland) as a greedy neutral (No. 5557, &c.), but it was violently attacked by the Opposition. The chaotic state of opinion in Holland is described rather than depicted in a set of Dutch prints (No. 5712, &c.), fourteen of which were copied on a small scale and combined in one plate (No. 5728) published with the explanations issued with the originals and forming a fair-sized pamphlet, one of the many with which the Republic was deluged at this time. They are markedly inferior in design and effectiveness to the better English prints of the period, a reversal of the relative positions of the two countries in the earlier part of the century.² They show the divided aims, delays, and uncertainties of Dutch policy, torn between the Patriots and the Orangists, and encumbered by the complexities of the constitution. Economic motives were dominant and conflicting, and were further complicated by the conflicting counsels of the English, French, Russian, and Spanish diplomats at The Hague, not to mention the American envoy. Appeals to the traditional resentment at the Navigation Acts and the rancour associated with the name of Cromwell (No. 5729, &c.) were added to arguments in behalf of economic self-sufficiency and naval prestige. The prints show also the exaggerated hopes which were entertained of the Armed Neutrality (No. 5714, &c.), and incidentally, how great was the impression made in the Republic by the Gordon Riots (No. 5728, &c.). Especially interesting is the multiplication of copies of No. 5726³ showing the (unrealized) expectations of securing a large share in the commerce of America which England had previously monopolized. No. 5733⁴ shows the real reason for the declaration of war as fear of the Armed Neutrality, while the pretext was the draft treaty with Congress discovered among the papers of Laurens.

The declaration was in fact nicely timed to forestall the adherence of the United Provinces to the Neutral League, and was highly successful. As neutrals the Dutch had been of great service to America and France, as combatants they were to become the real losers by the war and to compensate England for her losses. This was foretold in an Orangist

¹ See above, p. xiv.

² See above, p. xvii, n. 2.

³ See above, pp. xvi, xx.

⁴ A print not recorded by Muller; it appears to be absent from the Collection Van Stolk.

print (No. 5712) and deplored in another Dutch print on the peace (No. 6292). The protest against the war with the Republic by the Opposition peers was the subject of a Dutch print with a fictitious English publication line (p. 494).

In 1781 a decline in the hopes of the Opposition, due to the continuation of the political reaction, some military successes (Nos. 5827, 5828, &c.), and the popularity of the Dutch war (No. 5827, &c.), is shown in a fall in the number of political prints. The capture of St. Eustatius by Rodney was the focus of excitement (No. 5837) and a great blow to the patriots (No. 5923). Rodney's high-handed conduct on the island was a subject of heated controversy. The case against him is amusingly illustrated in No. 5842. By-elections in London and Bristol receive attention; an American candidate at Bristol evoked two anti-American satires (Nos. 5832, 5833). Suddenly the situation was altered by the surrender of Cornwallis (No. 5855, &c.). After the Christmas recess the Ministry were clearly doomed. The prints are defeatist in character, and military disasters, actual and anticipated, are symbolically depicted (Nos. 5959, 5961). The Opposition exulted at defeat with effects which are probably to be traced in the trend of opinion during 1782-3.¹

At the beginning of 1782 the chief topics were North's budget and pending ministerial change, the protagonists being Fox and North. Banco to the Knave (No. 5972) depicts the exultation of the new ministers, Fox the chief winner; the scene is a faro bank at Brooks's which had been a source of income to Fox during 1781, a fact which was to be used against the new Ministry in connexion with the recall of Rodney.

The immediate importance given to Pitt in these prints is of great interest: from the beginning, like Fox, he is his father's son. In The War of Posts (No. 5984), though not a Minister, he is the chief opponent of the old gang and holds a sheaf of thunderbolts inscribed 'The Lightning of my Father'. As soon as the 'War of Posts' was over the most striking change is in the growing unpopularity of ministers and especially of Fox. The first charge was that of republicanism (No. 5987, &c.), probably due to Fox's imprudent conversation at Brooks's and elsewhere and his avowed intention of striking a blow at the power of the Crown. If the verses attached to No. 6005 are rightly attributed to Fox they would appear to show an attempt to counter the effect of these allegations of republicanism. The new Ministry was visibly losing popularity when the news of the battle of The Saints arrived; Rodney was recalled in the moment of victory to be replaced by Pigot, the purely political appointment of an inadequate officer. Gillray illustrated with deadly effect the allegations that the appointment was to enable him to pay his gaming debts to Fox (No. 5997). There were better reasons for condemning it; the state of public feeling and the scandalous talk of the town are well illustrated in Gillray's four satires (No. 5992, &c.). Gibbon wrote (29 May), 'Every person of every party is provoked with our new Governors for taking the truncheon from the hand of a victorious Admiral, in whose place they have sent a Commander without experience or abilities.'

Another failure of the new Ministry was Shelburne's scheme for 'arming the people' on principles similar to those of the Irish Volunteers. This had a bad reception and was dropped. Sheridan wrote naïvely to Thomas Grenville (26 May), 'The arming plan don't seem to take at all.'¹ It was attacked by Gillray in Malagrida and Conspirators consulting the Ghost of Oliver Cromwell (No. 6006). Fox lost credit by the treatment of the Dutch of his proposals for a separate peace (No. 6014). The Dutch refusal was a blow to ministerial prestige but fortunate for the country, as the terms eventually obtained (No. 6292) were much better than those offered by Fox, which included acceptance of free navigation under the terms of the Armed Neutrality.

¹ Loughborough wrote to Lord Carlisle on the attitude of the Opposition towards Yorktown: 'It is strange that they should never learn that to show exultation in a public calamity makes them odious and aids those they are attacking.' Hist. MSS. Comm. Carlisle MSS., p. 539.

Fox's resignation on the death of Rockingham was a further blow to his popularity,² the 'darling popularity'³ which all knew to be so important to 'the Man of the People'. There are many prints on this resignation: Gillray depicts him running back to his gaming at Brooks's as a sole source of sustenance, after an ignominious quarrel with Shelburne (No. 6013). Sayers's first political satire depicts Fox and Burke outside the gates of Paradise (No. 6011), one of several applications of Paradise Lost to this situation. The prints entirely support Temple's warning to Fox 'that the people would not stand by him in his attempt to quit upon private grounds, which from their nature would appear to be a quarrel for offices, not a public measure'.⁴ Burke was also ridiculed by Gillray for his resignation in an amusing print in the worst of taste, Cincinnatus in Retirement (No. 6026), in which he appears for the first time as an Irish jesuit. Shelburne was not spared, he is represented as the triumphant conspirator who has ejected Fox from office (Nos. 6012, 6018, &c.). It was evident that his Ministry was unlikely to last (No. 6023). The prints by Gillray and Sayers of Fox, Burke, Barré, and Shelburne have a cruel effectiveness, while the misdeeds of North's Ministry still recur in pictorial satire (e.g. Nos. 6024, 6033).

Prints on the defence of Gibraltar are a relief from the prevailing political acrimony. The preparations for the great combined attack which the Bourbon powers regarded as invincible are the subject of a print by Gillray in which Spain and Holland are admirably travestied as Don Quixote and Sancho Panza (No. 6025). The confidence of the enemy powers is illustrated by one of the propagandist series of mezzotint portraits⁵ (represented by an Augsburg copy) in which Elliott points in dismay to the bombardment (No. 6034). Elliott's heroic and successful defence is the subject of Nos. 6035-8. The dramatic character of the two great successes in the West Indies and in the Mediterranean which changed the international situation increased the unpopularity of the Ministry: they produced a wave of patriotic feeling (Nos. 6040, 6043) unsympathetic to the consistent defeatism of Fox and his friends during North's Ministry; this is illustrated by more attacks on Fox, especially Nos. 6029, 6030.

The year 1783 opens with the peace negotiations approaching finality and with the imminent fall of Shelburne. It was common form in English eighteenth-century politics to denounce the terms of peace, but in 1783 the attacks were by comparison moderate. The recent successes had ¹ Buckingham, Courts and Cabinets of George III, i, p. 32.

² Temple to Thomas Grenville, 4 July 1782: 'My opinion with all whom I have seen, is that Fox has undone himself with the public. . . .' Ibid. i, p. 52.

³ Cf. Burke on Fox's India Bill, 'He has put to hazard his ease, his security, his interest, his power, even his darling popularity for the benefit of a people he has never seen.' Parl. Hist. xxiii, p. 1384. Lady Sarah Napier, Fox's cousin, uses the same phrase.

⁴ Buckingham, op. cit., p. 51.

⁵ See above, p. xv.

removed a sense of humiliation (cf. No. 6040) and it was recognized that the terms were better than might have been expected. While addresses were being received approving the preliminaries signed on 20 January, Fox and North had agreed to turn out the Ministry by a combined attack on these terms. After a number of prints on the peace (not all completely unfavourable, No. 6172 taking a realistic view of the situation), the Coalition first appears in No. 6176, Shelburne Badger'd and Fox'd. The defeat of North had been the subject of prints depicting conflicts between the fox and the badger (North): the violent change of attitude is stressed in a number of prints on the united action of the fox and the badger (No. 6186, &c.). The great number of prints on the Coalition shows, as nothing else can, the measure of its unpopularity (e.g. No. 6217) and must have done much to increase it; they must be studied in relation to the earlier prints. Though a case can be made for the Coalition, it seems clear that the popular indignation was not only genuine but natural,¹ though it was of course exploited.

The prints of 1782 had shown Fox and North in violent conflict for the fruits of office; now they were shown in an unholy compact to enjoy them (e.g. No. 6225). The whole case against the coalition at its most exaggerated is displayed in these satires.² According to Lecky 'the conduct of North was more blamed than that of Fox'. The evidence of the prints is that the reverse is true, so far as the public mind was concerned, even allowing for the fact that Fox was better copy and was treated unsparingly by Gillray and Sayers. In a number of prints Fox is sly and triumphant, North bewildered, notably in the famous Coalition Medal (No. 6183). Fox drives the coach, North is content to get up behind (No. 6226). Quotations from Fox's speeches were illustrated with damaging effect (Nos. 6187, 6207). His attitude to the Crown was clearly unpopular (No. 6239, &c.), especially in combination with his association with the Prince of Wales (Nos. 6231, 6266). In No. 6237 he is the executioner of a crowned goose (the King), while North and the Prince of Wales caper for joy. His poverty on resigning office in July 1782, when he appeared, even to his friends, to be living at the expense of Perdita Robinson (No. 6117), was highly damaging, and lent colour to the innumerable accusations that office meant plunder as much as power. Even on 30 March 1783 the new French Ambassador wrote to Vergennes, 'Le Ministre populaire (Monsieur Fox) est un étrange Ministre des Affaires Étrangères; et lorsqu'il aura perdu sa popularité, ce qui s'achemine beaucoup, je ne sais ce qui lui restera.'³

These satires, and many others, helped to prepare the public mind for the reception of the two India Bills, when Fox, as Carlo Khan, was represented as the emperor of the East appropriating the sovereignty of the king and the powers, profits, and patronage of the East India Company (No. 6276, &c.). The attack on the India Bills is one of many instances where the Opposition were able to raise a clamour by exploiting a popular cry. Lord Eldon wrote in his MS. Anecdote Book, 'Fox said that Sayer's caricatures had done him more mischief than the debates in Parliament and the works of the press. The prints of Carlo Khan [No. 6276], Fox running away with the India House [No. 6271], Fox and Burke quitting Paradise . . . [No. 6011], and many other of these publications, had certainly a vast affect upon the public.¹ Pictorial satires show in a remarkable way the movements of public clamour, which, if stirred up by the Opposition, were usually sufficient to induce the dropping or withdrawal of the unpopular measure. In this case the Opposition had the support of the Crown, and exploited the clamour to justify first the dismissal of the Ministry and then a dissolution. But this could hardly have been done without the unpopularity acquired by Fox and Pitt's popularity based on the Chatham legend, while Fox never wholly escaped from the discredit attaching to the son of the 'public Defaulter of unaccounted millions' (No. 4842, &c.). Fox, like Lord Holland, is represented in many prints as the fox deceiving the geese, the fox greedy for the grapes of office (cf. No. 6213). In proportion as Fox became unpopular, the King became popular and is represented as an injured prince (No. 5970, &c.) instead of as the tyrant of 1778-9. The back-stairs influence of the King over the India Bill, which earlier in the reign would have been a potent cry, was neutralized by the relations between Fox, the Prince of Wales, and the King as well as by the unpopularity of the Coalition.

¹ Cf. E. M. Wrong's excellent little Hist. of England, 1688-1815, 1927, p. 182. The alliance 'is said to have shocked the nation, but it is hard to believe that England had suddenly become so squeamish'.

² Walpole wrote, 25 April 1783, expressing doubts of the duration of the Coalition. 'If satiric prints could dispatch them, they would be dead in their cradle; there are enough to hang a room.' Letters, xii, p. 436.

Quoted, Fitzmaurice, Life of Shelburne, 1912, p. 269 n.

The volume ends with the dismissal of the Coalition (Nos. 6283-6291). There is only one exception to the contempt with which the ejected Ministry and the India Bills are treated, No. 6291. It strikes the defeatist note which had become unpopular (cf. No. 6229). The tenor of the prints is in direct contrast to the confidence of the Foxites that their speedy return to power was certain. The real turning-point of the reign was the end of the general election of 1784, but the arrangement of the Catalogue demands that it should end with the end of a calendar year; in 1783 this coincides with the Christmas recess which afforded a breathing-space in the contest of Fox and Pitt.

Many subjects dealt with in the political satires have scarcely been touched on here: notably prints on Scottish, Irish, and Indian affairs.² The Irish Volunteers and Grattan's Parliament are the subject of one or two interesting prints. Scotland is either a pernicious influence, personified in Bute or represented by a thistle, or, in No-Popery prints, the saviour of Britain. The close following of parliamentary debates becomes increasingly noteworthy during 1782-3 (e.g. No. 5979). Elections do not figure largely: they had less significance when the Government secured a majority, instead of a majority securing a Government. Certain elections, however, were of great significance, especially Westminster elections (No. 5699, &c.). The defeat of Keppel at Windsor and his triumphant return for Surrey are the subject of several prints. A very interesting print depicts the election of two nabobs for Shaftesbury in 1774 (No. 5341); though fantastic it is substantially true. There are portraits in the collection which though slightly caricatured are admirably characteristic. This is especially the case with Sayers's set of portraits primarily of members of parliament speaking in the debates of 1782 (Nos. 6052-77).

PERSONAL SATIRES

In a period when political and social life were inextricably mixed, when politics were personal and social to an extreme degree, and were also a preoccupation of all classes, the line between political and personal satires is naturally vague and fluctuating; almost all references to the Fox family for instance may be regarded as in some degree political. Even prints on the sex of d'Eon (Nos. 4870-4873, &c.) had a political significance from his association with Wilkes, though the part he had played as a secret agent of Spain and France was unknown. The popular portraits of characters in 'low life'¹ had often a political colour: Sam House was a leading Foxite, Jeffery Dunstan was chosen during the Westminster Election of 1784 to typify the less creditable supporters of Fox. A very favourite character in print-shops, the Chevalier Descazeaux (No. 5067), was, in the opinion of a French visitor in 1765, selected for ridicule and patronage because he was the embodiment of the Frenchman of English caricature: poor, vain, and absurd.²

¹ Twiss, Life of Eldon, i. 162.

² See Subject Index.

Thus the personal prints supplement the political prints at many points, and many which now appear to be impersonal social satires were doubtless based on the gossip and scandal of the day. They belong to a small world when notabilities were known by sight to most of the town, partly owing to the display in the print-shop windows. Darly's series of Macaronies, which takes the chief place among the personal satires of 1771-2, especially has this intimate character, partly because many were after drawings by amateurs of their acquaintances. It is a guide to the celebrities of the day. In the absence of contemporary inscriptions (not always correct) only a few can now be identified with certainty, as for instance when a hint in the title is confirmed by a portrait: The Miniature Macaroni is Cosway, A Temple Macaroni is Lord Temple.

Darly's series of larger plates (1776-8) is more general in character, but probably many if not most conceal personal allusions, e.g. a print in the Dance of Death tradition (No. 5441) depicts Mrs. Macaulay 'painting her cheeks'—to quote Dr. Johnson. An ostensible illustration to Joseph Andrews appears to be directed against Lady Harrington (No. 5522). A set of three prints (Nos. 5376, 5430, 5435) ostensibly by 'Dicky Sneer' or 'R.S.', an elegant young man appearing in all three, relates to some joke or piece of gossip, and R.S. (perhaps identical with the R.S. of Nos. 5452, 5453, 4778, &c.) may, (it is here suggested, be Richard Sheridan.³

The series of vis-à-vis portraits illustrating a chronicle of scandal which was the chief feature of the Town and Country Magazine is said to have been compiled by the editor, Archibald Hamilton Junior, with the help of a Mr. Caracioli,⁴ presumably on information from different contributors—they appear to vary considerably in authenticity. It has been suggested

¹ Cf. Goldsmith's account of the print-shop, 'Here, thought I, the painter only reflects the public voice. . . . But, guess my surprise when I came to examine this depository of noted faces! All distinctions were levelled here, as in the grave, and I could not but regard it as a catacomb of real merit. The brickdust man took up as much room as the truncheoned hero, and the judge was elbowed by the thief-taker; quacks, pimps, and buffoons increased the group, and noted stallions only made room for more noted strumpets.' Citizen of the World, Letter 109, 1761.

² Grosley, Londres, 1770, i, pp. 173 ff. Cf. The Connoisseur, No. 25 (1754), 'A little Frenchman, commonly known by the name of Count, and whose figure has long been stuck up in the windows of the print-shops, was always remarkable for the meanness, and the same time foppery of his appearance.'

³ See pp. 274, 313. The difference in manner may be due to the etcher, or R.S. may have been responsible for the idea only, invenit connoting sometimes a sketch, sometimes a verbal description. A certain resemblance to early portraits of Sheridan (in the Dicky Sneer set) lends colour to the guess, as does the fact that Nos. 4778, 4779 are scenes at Bath.

⁴ E. H. W. Meyerstein, Life of Chatterton, p. 404 n.

that Chatterton may have been responsible for the scandalous one on Walpole and Mrs. Clive (No. 4362).¹ Like the macaroni prints, they have been immortalized by Goldsmith and Sheridan.² Most of them have been identified by H. Bleackley in Notes and Queries;³ a few of those left unidentified are here elucidated, and his conclusions have not invariably been accepted. In the first few years (1769-71) many of these had a political character which was violently anti-ministerial. This gradually disappears and the attitude to politicians is neutral with sometimes a slight governmental bias. The heads in most cases are conventionally drawn and have little value as portraits. The plates and text were used, a month later, in the Hibernian Magazine.

Several print-sellers published humorous mezzotints, the best known being those of Carington Bowles (Bowles and Carver from 1793), who issued a series which came out at more or less regular intervals over a period of many years. The firm was noted for selling prints many years after the date of publication;⁴ impressions were taken after the plates had become very worn, and the dates have usually been scraped from the print or, in later issues, burnished from the plate. Those in the collection lettered Bowles and Carver's Caricatures, in two volumes dated 1820, are all coloured, and it is possible that the collection was made about that time. They are numbered serially, and from impressions that are both numbered and dated the dates of other numbered prints can be approximately ascertained.⁵ Such prints were advertised as 'Half Sheet Size Metzotintos (commonly called Postures) Fourteen inches high by Ten wide, one shilling each, Plain; Two shillings, Coloured'.⁶ The series chiefly consisted of humorous prints, some were cautionary, some were portraits, some were pure genre. The draughtsmen and engravers were generally anonymous. The humorous prints included in this volume appear in general to be social rather than personal satires, but many are topical and also personal, and there are doubtless many personal allusions which cannot now be discovered. The Bowles shop in St. Paul's Church Yard was well known and is illustrated in two prints in his series (Nos. 3758 (1774), 6352).

The series seems to represent City taste, and they are significantly different from Darly's series, partly the work of men of fashion, and intended for the Court end of the town. Favourite subjects are satires on Roman Catholicism (some in the guise of illustrations to Sheridan's Duenna) and on the rich clergy, both probably influenced by the spirit fostered by the contest with the Colonies. Lawyers and doctors are also ridiculed. Street scenes and satires on costume are frequent. Courtesans and (from 1778) camp scenes are favourite subjects. When the subject verges on politics the treatment is humorous and in the manner of social rather than political satire. Cases in point are two prints on the Coin Act (Nos. 3759, 4534 (1774)), a tarring and feathering scene in America repre-

¹ E. H. W. Meyerstein, Life of Chatterton, p. 272.

² Mrs. Hardcastle says, '... All I can do is to enjoy London at second-hand. I take care to know every tête-à-tête from the Scandalous Magazine,' She Stoops to Conquer, ii (1773). Snake says of Mrs. Clackit, 'Nay, I have more than once traced her causing a tête-à-tête in the Town and Country Magazine, when the parties, perhaps, had never seen each other's face before in the course of their lives,' School for Scandal, i. 1 (1775).

³ Tenth series, vol. iv, pp. 242, 342-4, 462-4, 522-3 (1905).

⁴ Angelo, Reminiscences, 1904, i, p. 308.

⁵ See Appendix, p. 786.

⁶ Laurie and Whittle's catalogue, 1795, quoted Chaloner Smith, iv, p. 1753. This catalogue included many prints published by Bowles.

senting an actual incident (No. 5232, and p. 169), a print on the formation of the Coalition (No. 6348), and one on the proclamation of peace (No. 6351). Other publishers issued similar humorous mezzotints, notably John Bowles, William Humphrey, and Sayer and Bennett. The series of Laurie and Whittle belongs to a later period and his prints are sentimental rather than humorous.

Among standard subjects of humour that of the 'cit' is perhaps pre-eminent, especially among prints issued by the printsellers of the west end of the town. His country box, his horsemanship, his appearances in the Park, his Sunday excursions, his guzzling at City feasts were all popular subjects of pictorial satire and are all depicted in this volume, notably by Bunbury and St. George Mansergh. This theme merges into the equally traditional one of the tradesman or artisan who spends his time discussing the affairs of the nation, on which there are several prints.

Grose enumerates the subjects which 'will always ensure the suffrages of the vulgar'. These include ridicule of the supposedly typical Scot, Irishman, Welshman, and Frenchman, all represented in this volume, especially the Frenchman. He is lean and hungry but dressed in shabby finery, and is generally contrasted with a plainly dressed well-fed Englishman, the classic example being Hogarth's Calais Gate. This was a favourite subject of Gillray (Nos. 5612,¹ 5790). Grose continues, 'Of this kind are professional allusions: a physician and apothecary are lawful game by prescription, a tailor by trade, and a mayor, alderman, or churchwarden ex-officio'. All are represented here except the churchwarden, whose place is taken by the parish clerk. The medical profession is dealt with on the whole not unkindly in these prints (cf. Nos. 5457, 6347, 6350), but there is an interesting caricature by William Austin of Dr. William Hunter, the great anatomist, detected in the act of body-snatching (No. 5119). The theme of the quack merges into that of the physician; quacks ridiculed by name in this volume are John Hill of The Hilliad, Dr. Graham, Buzaglo, and the mountebank Katterfelto.

Literature, in the present volume, is represented pre-eminently by Dr. Johnson. He is twice satirized by Gillray for his Lives of the Poets (Nos. 6103, 6328). In Bunbury's Chop House (No. 5922) there is a recognizable portrait of Johnson talking to Boswell, his cudgel-like stick beside him. The likeness to Johnson in one of the figures in Rowlandson's Rotation Office (No. 5273) is striking, and supports the probability that the office is that of Saunders Welch, at which Johnson attended for a whole winter. In a group by Mortimer (No. 6357), probably representing men of letters, artists, and actors, Johnson is a central figure. He has been identified as one of the figures in a popular political satire (Nos. 5479-81), and there are one or two allusions to his political pamphlets. It has already been suggested that Sheridan may appear in three prints of 1776-7; during 1783 he appears in political prints. Lord Lyttelton and his Dialogues of the Dead are clearly the subject of No. 5122 by William Austin. Chatterton is dragged into a political print with seeming irrelevance (No. 6291). There is an amusing caricature of Voltaire by Orde, and Alfieri appears to be the subject of No. 6315.

Some interesting Cambridge satires and caricatures are due to Bunbury of Clare, Orde of Kings, Topham of Trinity, and to an unknown who produced a set of three prints in 1773 (Nos. 5187-9).²

¹ See frontispiece.

² No. 5189 was attributed to Bearblock in the Catalogue by the Cambridge

Most of the personal (and some of the political) satires are valuable material for the history of costume, including of course those which are direct satires on extravagant fashions. Many of the macaroni prints are incidentally satires on costumes: the macaroni manner of dress seems to have been the last flare up of ornate and elaborate masculine dress before the advent of the plainer fashions often attributed to the French Revolution. These had, however, already appeared and were introduced into France by the Anglomans. The macaroni fashions also mark the departure from the typical eighteenth-century men's dress: the full-skirted coats, sleeves with wide cuffs, flapped waistcoats and high-quartered shoes were displaced by a dress which, though ornate in material and trimming, is more close-fitting and simpler in silhouette. The enormous club of hair was one of the most characteristic features of macaroni dress (e.g. No. 5008). The short-lived fashion of the large Artois shoe-buckle and the enormous button prevailed in 1777 but appears to have been rapidly killed by ridicule (No. 5432, &c.). The fashion for wearing riding-dress with a round high-crowned hat instead of the looped or cocked hat is caricatured in 1781.

In women's dress monstrous hairdressing was a favourite subject of satire. The pyramid of c. 1770-2 was different in shape from the inverted pyramid of 1776-7, whose broad plateau suggested to the satirists the notion of a woman's head-dress decorated with scenes and ornament of all sorts, including military operations (No. 5330). The wearing of ostrich feathers in the hair was also a recurring subject of satire and was denounced as a moral offence (No. 5370). After the tight waists (No. 5444), 'cork rumps' (No. 5381), and exaggerated hair-dressing of 1776-7, women's dress became plainer, and masculine fashions of a military cut influenced costume during the period of militia camps from 1778 (e.g. No. 5600).

The prints illustrate life and manners sometimes incidentally, for instance when they show the arrangement of a shop or the interior of a coffee-house or tavern, sometimes directly, in satires on changing fashions. Hieroglyphic letters afford evidence on popular pronunciation: Nos. 5658, 5677 indicate the habitual addition of an aspirate but not its omission. A similar Irish letter (No. 5542) is sound as to aspirates but gives 'deuce' as the appropriate symbol for the word juice. Some light is thrown on the history of words, the word 'bore', in its origin a fashionable coterie word, is illustrated in No. 6147. Cartoon is used for a political satire in No. 5288, a humorous anticipation of a much later usage. Gillray calls his typical Irishman Paddy (No. 5605), anticipating by a year the earliest instance recorded in the Oxford English Dictionary. The older word, Teague, which Paddy displaced, is used in No. 5644.

The collection of personal and social satires (taken together with the political satires) is sufficiently large and representative to enable the popular humour of the time to be to some extent recorded and classified. The most immediately striking thing is perhaps the passion for personal scandal and the ruthlessness with which it was exploited. This went together with censoriousness on things, such as fashions in dress, which involved manners rather than morals. Similarly, in political satires, certain gibes in the worst of taste were constantly repeated, as indeed they were in parliament: the tragic death of Miss Ray was used as a gibe against Lord Sandwich; Germain is inevitably labelled Minden. The attacks on the Princess Dowager of Wales were virulent, as in the print in the Political Register commented on by Walpole;¹ they chiefly occur in Volume IV, but in No. 4852 she is 'The Pell Mell Jezebel'. A device to protect the publishers of libellous satires appears to have lapsed as they grew bolder through immunity. This was the confusion of personalities,² said by Walpole to have been used in The Turnstile (No. 3608) to cover the identity of the Prince of Wales, 'pretended to be Lord Lincoln'. In No. 4960 North and Sir George Macartney seem to have been deliberately confused. In No. 4946 a red herring appears to have been drawn across the identity of the Queen of Denmark (the sister of George III). There is no similar instance in this volume after 1772.

Antiquarian Society of an exhibition of Cambridge caricatures at the Fitzwilliam Museum in 1908. But this was on the assumption that the date was c. 1800. James Bearblock, afterwards a fellow of King's, graduated B.A. in 1789, M.A. in 1792.

The age of humanitarianism had begun, but its influence in these satires is slight, favourite and competing themes being political corruption, the nabob and the rich, vulgar, and pretentious citizen. There are allusions to the period of distress owing to high prices and a commercial crisis in 1772-3, but they are political or personal (e.g. Nos. 4938, 5016). There is one incidental allusion to the grievance of Enclosure Acts (No. 5236). Allusions to distress and bad trade owing to the war were definitely political (e.g. No. 5574). Social injustice is, however, the theme of No. 5275. Burthens of Plenty (No. 5433), which to-day seems clearly directed against extremes of wealth and poverty, was probably intended more as a satire on gluttony, in an almost medieval spirit,³ or was perhaps a personal satire against some noted City guzzler (cf. No. 6314). Nos. 6347 and 6350, The Benevolent Physician, are sentimental rather than humanitarian.⁴ There was certainly sympathy for the sailor or soldier on half-pay or maimed and for the poor clergy, but in most of the prints on such subjects the intention seems to be to attack the Government, or the placeman, or the rich clergy, or to check recruiting. A very telling and genuinely sympathetic print on the soldier on half-pay (No. 6170) attacks a notorious grievance without political rancour. Such was the preoccupation with politics that subjects which would now be dealt with from the social or economic standpoint were treated as political. This was especially the case with prints on the clergy.⁵ Poverty and unemployment are treated as a subject of comedy by Gillray (No. 5938) and a chained gang of convicts is treated with equal lack of sympathy by Dighton (No. 5957). The general attitude is that poverty and hunger are peculiarly the lot of the Frenchman in his shabby finery. An imitation of Hogarth's Harlot's Progress brought up to date (Nos. 5808-13) shows an actual improvement in the treatment of unfortunate women since 1734.

ARTISTS.

The artists whose work is contained in this volume are recorded in the index, which throws some light on their varying output from year to year. Many of the prints are the work of those who for good reasons preferred to remain anonymous, many are by the nameless engravers who worked for

¹ Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1845, iii, p. 199.

² Cf. the device used by Churchill in The Ghost, where Mansfield is first pilloried without being named and then mentioned as another person; Sandwich is first attacked as Lothario and then appears as a separate person under his own name.

³ See above, p. xiv.

⁴ They are included only because they are companion prints to Nos. 3797, 3798 on The Rapacious Quack.

⁵ See above, pp. xviii, xix.

the printsellers often from sketches or 'hints' provided by amateurs. The volume opens in the transition period between the death of Hogarth and the early work of Gillray and Rowlandson and their followers. Between 1767 and 1774-5 political satire was almost restricted to illustrations in magazines.

During the early 'seventies humorous prints are chiefly to be found in the various series issued by the printsellers, among whom Matthew Darly is outstanding. Darly specialized in engraving and publishing the work of amateurs: caricature was a fashionable hobby and one which for obvious reasons was exploited by the drawing-masters and teachers of etching who were also engravers and printsellers. The fashion was stimulated by the vogue of Townshend in political satire and of Bunbury in social satire. After 1770, Darly, who had been the chief publisher of political prints during the 'fifties and 'sixties, devoted himself almost entirely to personal and social satires, in which, especially during 1771-2, macaronies took a leading part. In general these were engraved by himself from the designs of 'Ladies, Gentlemen, Artists, &c.' (Nos. 4710, 4985), or, according to another title-page, were 'design'd by the greatest personages, artists, &c.' (No. 5005). The engraved page which was placed after the title-page of these three volumes¹ illustrates the way in which the amateur was encouraged:

'Comic Humour, Caricatures, &c.

'In a series of Drol Prints, consisting of Heads, Figures, Conversations and Satires upon the follies of the Age Design'd by several Ladies, Gentlemen and the most Humourous Artists &c. Pub^d. by M Darly Engraver, and Printseller at No. 39 near York Buildings Strand, London, where Gentlemen and Ladies may have Copper plates prepared and Varnished for etching. Ladies to whom the fumes of the Aqua Fortis are Noxious may have their Plates carefully Bit, and proved, and may be attended at their own Houses, and have ev'ry necessary instruction in any part of Engraving, Etching, Dry Needle, Metzotinto &c. . . . Ladies and Gentlemen sending their Designs may have them neatly etch'd and printed for their own private Amusement at the most reasonable rates, or if for publication, shall have evry grateful return and acknowledgment for any Comic Design, Descriptive hints in writing (not political) shall have due Honor shewn 'em & be Immediately Drawn and Executed. . . .'

The exclusion of politics is significant and marks an exceptional phase in the history of English caricature.²

Bunbury was, at first, the leading contributor to this series. His importance is indicated both by the priority given to his work (Nos. 4668, 4670, &c.) and by the words 'Where may be had all the works of Mr. Bunbury &c.' appended to the publication line of, e.g., No. 4918. Darly, however, soon lost Bunbury as a client; from about 1772 James and Charles Bretherton were for some years the chief engravers of his work. Other engravers of plates after Bunbury described in this volume were J. R. Smith, Dickinson, Baldrey, and Rowlandson. The precocity of Charles Bretherton is noteworthy: in 1772, aged twelve, he etched five plates, four, and perhaps the fifth, being after Bunbury.

An amateur closely associated with Bunbury is Charles Loraine Smith, better known for the sporting subjects of his later life. He is probably the C.L.S. of Nos. 4734, 4742, and 6147, and the C. Smith of 4752. His work resembles that of Bunbury; though less competent he had a gift for the slightly caricatured and expressive portrait which Bunbury lacked, and No. 6193, attributed to Bunbury by Walter Sichel, has more resemblance to the work of Smith as shown in Nos. 5983, 6125 (both supposed to have been engraved by Bartolozzi), and 6147. Two sketches by Smith, *Posting in Ireland*¹ and Posting in Scotland, were engraved by Gillray in 1805.

¹ The volumes catalogued on pp. 38-41, 70-80. This advertisement is not included in the volumes in the B.M. collection but is transcribed from a volume in the possession (1934) of Mr. W. T. Spencer of New Oxford Street.

² See above, p. xvii.

Other amateurs whose work was published by Darly were Edward Topham (afterwards the editor of The World and a favourite subject of caricature by Gillray and others), R. St. George Mansergh,² and Thomas Orde. Orde, afterwards Lord Bolton, had a gift for portraiture as appears from the three plates described in this volume; No. 5510 is a particularly interesting satire on King's College, Cambridge. Two at least of his plates³ and probably the others were issued privately, not published. Coplestone Warre Bamfylde illustrated Anstey's Election Ball. Other amateurs, represented in this volume by one or more prints, are Sir Edward Newenham, Lord de Ferrars, Elizabeth Gulston, Lady Craven, Captain Grose, Captain Minshull, and Captain Morse, the last an exhibitor of portraits at the R.A. It has already been suggested that Sheridan may have designed several prints.⁴ The attributions to Townshend in this volume are based on resemblance to his not very distinctive manner or on newspaper allegations. A print which does not suggest the amateur is attributed to the notorious Leonard McNally.

One of the few professional artists whose work in caricature can be identified during the early 'seventies is William Austin, whose manner is very distinctive. Like Darly, he was a noted drawing-master, a teacher of etching, and a publisher of prints.⁵ That he was a rival of Darly is indicated in No. 5318. A caricature by him of Chatham and Charles Fox (No. 5113) is particularly noteworthy. Some of Robert Dighton's earlier and less-known work is included in this volume.

The humorous mezzotints, issued by several printsellers, like Darly's series, bridge the transition from the period of Hogarth to that of Gillray. In the well-known series of Carington Bowles⁶ the artists were generally anonymous, but it includes (in this volume) many plates after Collet, a follower of Hogarth, several drawn and engraved by J. R. Smith, several after Robert Dighton, three after S. H. Grimm, one after Earlom, and one (at least) by Philip Dawe. Dawe engraved a number of caricatures in mezzotint; these probably include a set of five on the American Revolution

¹ Reproduced in colour in Fuchs and Kraemer, Die Karicatur der Europaischer Völker, 1904-6.

² Probably Richard St. George Mansergh of Headfort (m. Mary Stepney), who was killed in the Irish Rebellion, 1797. He was the son of James Mansergh, who married Mary St. George of Headfort (Burke, Hist. of the Landed Gentry, 1847). He is perhaps identical with the Colonel Mansergh St. George, wounded in the American War, who drew for the Ladies of Llangollen in 1788 'striking likenesses' of 'Poor Rousseau'. He and his wife were travelling with Miss Stepney (Hamwood Papers, ed. Mrs. G. H. Bell, 1930, pp. 74, 115). A View in America in 1778 (No. 5482) resembles Mansergh's manner.

³ They are in Richard Bull's collection of the work of 'honorary engravers' now in the Print Room.

⁴ See above, p. xxix.
⁵ Austin at George Street, Hanover Square, appears in T. Mortimer's Universal Director, 1763, as 'Drawing Master, Teacher of Etching and Author of a Specimen for sketching Landscapes in a new and easy manner and of The Complete Drawing Book. This Artist imports foreign prints, drawings, and etchings.' Darly is not included in his directory.

⁶ See Appendix.

published by Sayer and Bennet, 1774-5 (see p. 169, No. 5241, &c.). Two important political mezzotints (not caricatures) by John Dixon are included in this volume.

Aquatint first appears in this Catalogue in 1776 (No. 5381). Paul Sandby, whose earlier caricatures had been directed against Hogarth, reappears after an interval of many years with two aquatints on Vestris (Nos. 5908, 5909). Though Sandby has a small place in these volumes he is well known for his charming landscapes and scenes of social life. His drawings of the encampments in Hyde Park in 1780 are of historical interest. The dancing of Vestris was the subject of several charming aquatinted designs, two of which are attributed to Nathaniel or George Dance and Bartolozzi.

A new period in English caricature begins c. 1780 with the early work of Gillray and Rowlandson. It was anticipated by the work of J. H. Mortimer, whose influence on both artists was marked; his combination of fantasy, caricature, and the grand manner marks the beginning of a new school. It is to be noted as early as 1768 in The Reviewer's Cave, No. 4247.¹ Angelo attests the admiration evoked by his facility in drawing monsters and caricatures.² After his early and sudden death in 1779 designs from his sketches were engraved by several artists (Nos. 5780, 5781, 6356-8), and it is possible that some of the early work of Gillray was based on his designs (cf. Nos. 5523, 5524, 5609). His Iphigenia's late procession from Kingston to Bristol (No. 5362) is sometimes attributed to Gillray. John Boyne appears also to have been directly influenced by Mortimer, conspicuously so in Banditti (No. 6281).

There is considerable doubt as to the authenticity of some of the earlier plates attributed to Gillray: he had several manners, and appears sometimes to have taken pains to conceal his authorship. There is reason to suspect his hand in a number of plates in this volume not attributed to him. With one exception (No. 5912) all the prints here catalogued as by Gillray are anonymous or pseudonymous, and while some of the initials or names used by him may indicate those who supplied him with ideas or sketches, others seem to be due to a peculiar secretiveness or obscure sense of humour,³ possibly, of course, to engagements to printsellers. In Returning from Brookes's (1784) he concealed his style under an assumed amateurish incompetence,⁴ and in varying degrees and manners he would appear to have done the same in several prints described in this volume. As he afterwards used the signature of James Sayers, so, there is reason to suspect, he may in 1782 and 1783 have used those of Edward Topham and Thomas Colley. He was in close relations with John Nixon, a semi-amateur, and an imitator of both Rowlandson and Gillray, whose early work in this volume raises certain problems. No. 5616 is signed J. N. fecit but appears to be a Gillray. Politeness (No. 5611), signed J. N. fecit et Inv^t 1779, has some resemblance to Gillray's manner and was copied by Gillray in a print (No. 5612) reissued by Humphrey from St. James's Street, that is, not before 1797. The question of authorship is of especial interest as the subject is Gillray's typical John Bull in top-boots, who, according to

¹ Mr. Stephens attributes this to de Louthembourg, who, however, did not come to England till 1771. No. 4247 is actually a different state from that described in the text, and is inscribed in an old hand 'etch'd by Mortimer'.

² Reminiscences, 1904, p. 108.

³ Cf. a portrait (not caricature) of the Duchess of York published by H. Humphrey 10 Apr. 1792, signed Charlott Zethen designet et fecit.

⁴ Real Character, see p. 408, is similar in manner to Returning from Brookes's, suggesting the concealed authorship of Gillray.

H. M. Broadley, did not appear until 1809.¹ Mr. Hawkins attributes Nos. 5998 and 6113 (Nos. 5999 and 6122 appear to be by the same artist) to 'Hixon'. Their manner resembles (though not conclusively) that of Nixon, suggesting a misreading of H. for N. There was, however, an engraver Robert Hixon, whose trade card (c. 1792) is in the Banks Collection (D 2, 2164).

The work of Thomas Colley, a caricaturist unmentioned in books of reference, seems to be confined to the years 1780-3. It has a crude and simple naïveté both of drawing and sentiment which is both effective and attractive; he takes a special pleasure in naval victories, and his drawing of ships suggests that he had been to sea, probably in the navy. His manner is very individual but lends itself to imitation, and there seems to be a pseudo-Colley with more skill who imitates his manner and uses his signature. Several of the prints of this hypothetical imitator suggest the hand of Gillray, notably Nos. 6233, 6237, 6252. If the theory here put forward is correct, the true Colley had a singular absence of political rancour (e.g. Nos. 6043, 6170) quite incompatible with No. 6237. Certain prints signed E.T. (Topham) also suggest an imitation of Topham by Gillray.

The political work of James Sayers begins in 1782. His technique is amateurish and his line feeble, but his designs (notably the famous Carlo Khan, No. 6276) have a political effectiveness which approaches that of Gillray and gave him instant fame. His prints of 1783 and 1784 appear to have impressed contemporaries more than anything done at that time by Gillray, though they have none of his masterly and expressive drawing. His portraits (Nos. 6052-77) are valuable as likenesses and most useful in identifying the subjects of political caricature. William Dent² was a caricaturist whose prints, according to Angelo, were admired, presumably for their political effect. This, however, depended chiefly on his scurrilous and indecent abuse of individuals; aesthetically his work is less than valueless, his feeble and incorrect drawing and scratchy technique are amateurish with none of the merits of the amateur. He is probably to be regarded as an inferior follower of Sayers. The greater part of his work is after 1783.

PRINTSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS.

The index includes artists who occasionally published their own work (e.g. Rowlandson and Paul Sandby) and booksellers whose imprint is on the plates which they had engraved for books and magazines, some of whom (e.g. Almon) also published an occasional print. The outstanding print-sellers in this volume who specialized in caricatures and humorous art are the two firms of Bowles, Matthew Darly, William Humphrey and the afterwards famous Hannah Humphrey, Sayer (or Sayer and Bennet), Wilkinson, Holland, and Mrs. Darchery.

The early history of the two ancient and closely associated firms of Bowles, one of St. Paul's Churchyard, the other of Cornhill, is confused, but during the period covered by this volume it is clear. By 1709 (when they jointly published a map)³ both firms were in existence, Thomas 'Next the Chapter House in St. Paul's Churchyard', John at the Black Horse in Cornhill. John Bowles of Cornhill (? John II) was in partnership with his son from 1754 to c. 1764 when the style of the firm was John Bowles and Son. According to Chaloner Smith¹ the son died in 1762, according to Plomer he went into the business of his uncle Thomas (? Thomas II) in 1764; when Thomas died (8th April 1767) John bought the business for this son (Carington), so that the style Carington Bowles² dates only from 1767 though older plates were reissued with his imprint. Carington died intestate in 1793 and was succeeded by his son Carington, who continued the firm from that date as Bowles and Carver. This shop at the old address was still, c. 1830, exhibiting 'obsolete plates' of the days of the South Sea Bubble.³ When the houses in the City were numbered (in and after 1766) Carington's shop became 69 St. Paul's Churchyard and John's 13 Cornhill. John died in 1779 and his business was carried on by Wilkinson, but not at the old address. Prints of both shops are listed in this volume, Nos. 5220 (1773), 3758 (1774), 6352 (c. 1783).

¹ Pearson's Magazine, 1909.

² A William Dent was a merchant whose address in a London Directory of 1784 was Garraway's Coffee House.

³ H. R. Plomer, Dictionary of Booksellers, 1932.

Robert Sayer was a rival of Bowles who succeeded to the very ancient business of the Overton family at the Golden Buck in Fleet Street. His partnership with Bennet, which according to Chaloner Smith was from 1775 to 1778, appears to have lasted from 1774 to 1782 (see index). Sayer reissued a number of Darly's plates (see No. 5173, &c.). He died at Bath, 29 June 1794, aged 69, and was succeeded by Laurie in partnership with Whittle. Plates in the Carington Bowles series of mezzotints also appear in Laurie and Whittle's catalogue of 1795.⁴

Matthew Darly was the chief publisher of satirical prints from the 'fifties, when he was in partnership with C. Edwards at the Acorn in the Strand, to c. 1779. After abjuring political subjects⁵ from about 1771 he admitted in 1778 a few political satires to his series, one of the most interesting of which (No. 5473) bears his own holograph signature instead of the usual MD. His activities dwindle after 1778 and disappear in 1781. During 1780 his publications were again chiefly political. The close association of Mary Darly with her husband has obscured her activities as a publisher, probably also as an artist. In this volume she is represented by the title-page (No. 5369), dedicated to Garrick and perhaps designed by herself, which was prefixed to the large composite volume of Darly's caricatures. But in the 'sixties she published or sold many prints at Ryder's Court, Leicester Fields (also like the Strand shop known as The Acorn), see (e.g.) Nos. 3817, 3818, 3912, 3919, 3937, 3992, 4071. In 1763 she published a guide to the art of drawing caricatures (copy in Print Room) from Ryder's Court, with sixty small plates, all apparently by herself, except for pl. 20, by or after Townshend, a version of No. 3371 without its background.⁶ The book was sold by herself at the Ryder's Court address. Her portrait by her husband appeared in 1772 as The female Connoisseur (No. 4692) in Darly's series. There are two portraits of Darly (Nos. 4632, 5367) and two prints of his shop in the Strand (Nos. 4701, 5318).

The dwindling activities and final disappearance of Matt Darly coincide with the growing importance of the shops of the two Humphreys, probably

¹ Op. cit., vol. i, p. 1.

² See Appendix.

³ Angelo, Reminiscences, 1904, vol. i, p. 308.

⁴ Chaloner Smith, iv, p. 1753 n.

⁵ See above, p. xxxiv. He published one political print in 1771, No. 4879.

⁶ This was the first of the series of cards said to have been invented by Townshend; it was said by Walpole to have had 'amazing vent'. Memoires of the last ten Years of the Reign of George II, 1822, ii, p. 68. See No. 3342.

brother and sister: William of the Strand and Hannah of Bond Street (of St. James's Street from 1797), both associated with the new period of pictorial satire. Both firms reissued prints published by Darly; Darly had published two of Gillray's earliest plates, but William Humphrey was the chief publisher of his early work. The close association of the two men is illustrated in No. 5912, where Gillray acknowledges Humphrey as his superior in the art of etching. Another of the Humphrey family who also published Gillray's work was G. Humphrey of 48 Long Acre, whose imprint first appears in 1783. He is perhaps identical with the G. Humphrey who etched (c. 1780) a portrait of Dr. Benjamin Buckler which he inscribed (in 1813) 'My first etching' (No. 5756). He was perhaps the father of Miss Humphrey's nephew George, who helped her at St. James's Street and at her death succeeded to her business. The Mrs. Humphrey who published No. 5526 (1778) would appear from the address to be the wife of William; Hannah, though often styled by courtesy Mrs., seems never to have used the title on her prints.

Other printsellers who filled the gap left by Darly and supplied an increasing demand for political prints were Holland, Mrs. Darchery, and T. Cornell of Bruton Street. The last must be connected with 'the woman who keeps the print-shop in Bruton Street, who', according to Walpole, 'says she has engraved all the drawings that are sent her, and that she gets by them, one with another, ten pounds apiece'.¹

William Richardson of this volume was probably the father of the better known W. Richardson who issued a catalogue in 1792 saying that he had taken over his father's business. Another publisher of note is John Smith of Cheapside (formerly the Hogarth's Head), whose portrait occurs in No. 5530. Other notable printsellers who are represented by a few prints in this volume include Darling, Turner, Thane, Torr  (famed as a pyrotechnist), and Seago. All these as well as Smith and William Austin are included in one or other of the three portrait groups of dealers in prints listed in the B.M. Catalogue of Engraved British Portraits, vol. v. Austin, though a printseller, publisher, and dealer in prints, appears in this volume only as an artist and as the subject of a satirical print. It is probable, however, that he published and sold the prints by himself in this volume of the Catalogue.

M. DOROTHY GEORGE.

¹ Letters, xii, p. 436 (Apr. 1783).

CATALOGUE OF
POLITICAL AND PERSONAL SATIRES

1770-1783

(Nos. 4839-6360)

The Power of the Mighty hath no Foundation but in the Opinion of the People.

HOBBS, Behemoth

ADDENDA TO VOL. IV

1770

4839 THE FRUITS OF ARBITRARY POWER; OR THE BLOODY MASSACRE, PERPETRATED IN KING-STREET, BOSTON, BY A PARTY OF THE XXIXTH REGT.

Printed for and sold by W. Bingley, in Newgate-Street, Price 6d.

Engraving. A larger version of Paul Revere's celebrated print better drawn and with minor differences. Seven soldiers (r.) urged on by an officer with a drawn sword fire at a crowd of citizens (l.), three of whom lie dead or dying, a fourth is carried off wounded. The soldiers are surrounded with smoke, some of which is intended to emerge from the Custom House, the building immediately behind them and on the extreme r. The architectural background depicts King Street, Boston. In the foreground is a dog. Butchers' Hall and Custom Hou[se] are inscribed on the façade of the house as in Revere's print but his 'G.R.' is omitted. Instead of Revere's waxing crescent moon there is a waning moon. After the (printed) title is printed, In which Mess. Sam Grey, Sam. Maverick, James Caldwell, Crispus Attucks, Patrick Carr were killed. Six others were wounded, two of them [Christopher Monk and John Clark] mortally. This inscription, with slight differences, appears beneath the verses on Revere's print. The same verses² are here printed in two columns instead of three, and on the l. and r. margins of the verses is an etched design; on the l. a skull and crossbones within a wreath, beneath it is printed, How long shall they utter and speak hard things? and all the workers of Iniquity boast themselves? They break in pieces thy people, O Lord, and afflict thine Heritage. Ps. xciv. 4, 5. On the r., enclosed in a circle, a flash of lightning emerges from clouds and strikes two broken swords; in the centre of the clouds is a cap of liberty irradiated; beneath is printed, They slay the Widows and the Stranger, and murder the Fatherless. Yet they say, The Lord shall not see: Neither shall the God of Jacob regard it. Ps. xciv. 6, 7.

For the so-called Boston Massacre on 5 March 1770 see Van Tyne, Causes of the War of Independence, 1921, pp. 285-90. See also A Fair Account of the late Unhappy Disturbance at Boston. . . . London, 1770 (B.M.L. 8175. b. 78), which controverts the inflammatory Short Narrative . . . (see below); Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1845, iv, p. 120. 'It was shown clearly at the trial that the soldiers had endured threats, gibes, insults, and actual violence before they fired in what they believed was self-defence.' Van Tyne, p. 289.

This plate, folded, was used as a frontispiece to an English reprint of A Short Narrative of the Horrid Massacre in Boston . . . Boston, printed by order of the Town . . . and re-printed for W. Bingley in Newgate Street, London, 1770. The Museum copy is inscribed in MS. 'Presented by Thomas Hollis³ Esq. May 14, 1770' (B.M.L. 1061. h. 11). The impression in the Print Department has not been folded, Bingley doubtless selling separate prints.

¹ In Revere's print there is an apostrophe.

² In Revere's version Preston (the captain) is printed 'P——n' and venal Courts, 'venal C——ts.'

³ Hollis wrote of the 'Boston Massacre' 'the business of White Rose is to inflame everywhere'. Memoirs, 1780, p. 379.

Revere's practice of copying English prints and the correction in his plate of the astronomical error in the drawing of the moon suggest that this was not copied from Revere. The origin of both was, perhaps, the plate of the 'massacre' engraved after a drawing by Henry Pelham, which Pelham accused Revere of copying in a letter of 29 March, 1770: '... after being at the great Trouble and Expence of making a design paying for paper, printing &c., find myself in the most ungenerous Manner deprived, not only of any proposed Advantage, but even of the expence I have been at, as truly as if you had plundered me on the highway.' Copley-Pelham Letters, Mass. Hist. Soc. Collections 71, 1914, p. 83; see also pp. 84, 86, and Stauffer, i. p. 206. For the Revere, often reproduced, e.g. M. Waldman, Americana, 1926, frontispiece, see Stauffer, No. 2675. $9\frac{1}{16} \times 8\frac{5}{8}$ in. Pl. $13\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{13}{16}$ in.

For another version of this design from the Freeholder's Magazine for May 1770 (1 June) see No. 4378. The subject is a narrower upright than No. 4839 or the Revere, showing more sky and more ground. There are no inscriptions on the houses. Reproduced: Andrews, Portraiture, p. 28.

A third version, 4378 A, apparently copied from No. 4378, and with the same titles, has additions: a dog as in No. 4839 (and the Revere) and an inscription on the house farthest r. of G.R. (?) Boston. It is the frontispiece to another English reprint of the Short Narrative . . . Re-printed for E. and C. Dilly in the Poultry; and J. Almon in Piccadilly. 1770. $5\frac{15}{16} \times 4\frac{1}{8}$ in. B.M.L., E. 2235/1.

4840 THE HUMOURS OF A FAIR.

[1 Sept. 1770]

Engrav'd for the Gentlemans Museum, and Grand Imperial Magazine.

Engraving. The original drawing for this, attributed to Hayman, is described in No. 4428. The engraving is in reverse. The scene is a fair outside the gate of St. James's Palace, in which the King's friends are satirized as showmen; the principal booth displays the sign of a boot (for Bute) and a flag inscribed The Death of Britannia with y^e Farce of Liberty.

$4 \times 6\frac{5}{16}$ in.

4841 A GAME AT SKITTLES.

[1 Oct. 1770]

Engraving. From the London Museum, ii. 131. Bute, standing in profile to the r. on the bank of the Tiber, is about to throw a ball at nine skittles on the opposite side of the river. The ball is inscribed The Pretender; the skittles represent the King and Queen and their seven children: two have royal crowns, six others have royal coronets, and one is surmounted by the Prince of Wales's feathers. In the background is a view of Rome, far from topographically or architecturally correct, but showing St. Peter's with its Piazza. In the foreground broken columns and fragments of masonry lie on the ground. Bute wears a Scots cap and a tartan plaid over a court suit; at his knee is the Garter ribbon. At his feet lies a rosary.

Beneath the design is engraved,

*Treason & He to Rome are fled,
There let him live without restraint;
And, when the Spurious Monarch's dead,
Let him be made a Roman Saint.*

J. S. Hall

This satire is described under No. 4457, but incorrectly, as Mr. Stephens had not seen it. Bute went to the Continent in 1768, visiting Italy, and returning to England in 1771. Cf. Chatham's attack on Bute, 2 March, 1770: 'the secret influence of an invisible power, . . . who, notwithstanding he was abroad, was at this moment as potent as ever', Parl. Hist. xvi. 842. 4 × 6 $\frac{7}{16}$ in.

4842 THE INFERNAL SLOOP, CHASING THE GOOD SHIP BRITANNIA. [1 Nov. 1770]

Engraved for the Gentleman's Museum, & Grand Imperial Magazine.

Engraving. The Britannia in full sail, fleeing before another ship (l.) manned by devils; a boat (r.), with five oarsmen and a steersman, tows the Britannia; there are rocks in the foreground (r.). The figures are on a minute scale, with large inscribed labels issuing from them.

A shot from the Infernal Sloop has just broken the Union flag from its staff in the stern. Next it stands Bute, saying: Let her Sink to the Dee'l, I'll have my will! The rest of the crew of the Britannia (l. to r.) are: Lord Holland, with a fox's head, saying: Oh! What will be come now of my Unaccounted Millions. Holland had been styled in the City petition of 1769 'the public defaulter of unaccounted millions', see No. 4296. Lord Mansfield, in Judge's wig and gown, says: 'tis y^e Cursed Licentiousness of the Press that weighs us Down.' Jeremiah Dyson, as a negro, says to Mansfield: Oh! Masters, Masters, what will you do for me your poor Mungo now. For Dyson as Mungo see No. 4267. Lord Sandwich, holding a curved cricket bat, says: d—n em they'll Twitcher my Notches (an allusion to his fame as a cricketer and his nickname of Jemmy Twitcher from the Beggar's Opera). A small figure standing on bales inscribed National Debt and Pensions says: Keep to my Plannings and you'll be Safe Enough; he resembles Grafton rather than North, who succeeded Grafton as First Lord of the Treasury on 28 Jan. 1770. Crouching behind bales inscribed Places and Pensions is the very unpopular Duke of Bedford, identified by his words, Oh Mercy on Bloomsbury Jack. In the bow, standing on a bale inscribed Stamp Act, a man with outstretched arms says: Arrah we shall be Drown'd on them Curst American Rocks; he is evidently Lord Hillsborough, Secretary of State for the Colonies and an Irishman. Sitting astride the bowsprit is a man in a legal wig, saying: if She Sinks I'll be Justice of Water instead of Air. He is probably Sir Fletcher Norton, appointed Chief Justice in Eyre of His Majesty's forests south of the Trent immediately after defending Mansfield's conduct in the Wilkes case in the Commons on 1 Feb. 1768, and elected Speaker in Jan. 1770, generally satirized as Sir Bull-face Double Fee. See Nos. 4238, 4462, and index. Possibly he is Eyre, the Recorder, see No. 4843. The men in the boat are rowing hard; the steersman says: Pull like Men my Boys well [sic] keep her up yet. Two of the oarsmen say: Ah Jack we made y^e Foe Fly when Pit had the Helm, and if we keep sober & Resolv'd we may bring her into Harbour Yet.

The Britannia is so heavily laden with bales inscribed Secret Services, National Debt, Pensions, Places, Reversions, and Stamp Act that she is low in the water; the sea is rough and the 'American Rocks' are near. For other allusions to the Stamp Act see No. 5487, &c.

4 × 6 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

4843 THE COURT OF ALDERMEN

[c. 1770]

S. Sparrow sculp.

Engraving. Probably from a magazine. The Lord Mayor is seated in a raised chair at the head of the table, aldermen in furred gowns sit on both sides of the table. The six Aldermen on his r. wear laurel wreaths; over the head of each of the seven seated on his l. dangles a noose of rope. In the Lord Mayor's hand is a paper, Grant for Pressing; a noose hangs over his head. Immediately below him a clerk is writing at the table. In the foreground a hangman bows hat in hand to the alderman sitting on the extreme r., at the near end of the row on the Lord Mayor's l.; in his l. hand is a rope; from his pocket protrudes a broadside headed by a cut of a man hanging from a gibbet. He says: I am a Servant to Mr. All-man Shockspar and shall be glad to serve you.

This appears to represent the inquiry into the conduct of the Recorder, Sir James Eyre, for refusing to attend the presentation to the king of the City Remonstrance on 23 May, 1770. The actual proceedings took place at a meeting of the Common Council on 27 Sept. 1770. A vote of censure was moved, being voted for by six aldermen and fifty-one commoners, against seven aldermen and eighty-eight commoners. The proceedings were published at length in the Wilkite magazines; see London Museum, ii. 410 ff., Sharpe, London and the Kingdom, 1895, iii. 101.

Among the six Wilkite aldermen on the r. of the chair Wilkes is speaking; he says: You may Nash your teeth, Mr. Alderman, but we shall carry it Plumb in spite of your Kites and Blackbirds we will have the foolish Lad broke for neglect of Duty. William Nash, Samuel Plumbe, Sir Robert Kite, John Bird, and Sir Robert Ladbroke were anti-Wilkite aldermen. Another alderman is saying: He must let out his large House in Lincoln's Inn Fields to lodgers (the Recorder lived in Lincoln's Inn Fields).

Four of the seven aldermen of the court party are speaking; they say (l. to r.): They seem all to be out of their Heads; He's a man of Honor & a Gentleman (the speaker is identified by Mr. Hawkins as Harley, the leader of the Court party in the City); a man with the head and pointed beard of Shakespeare to indicate that he is Alderman John Shakespeare says: I should not like to dangle in my own Manufacture; the last, seated on the outside, and identified by Mr. Hawkins as Sir Robert Ladbroke, says: No Body will ever regard our Resolutions. For Ladbroke see No. 4379.

The Lord Mayor is Barlow Trecothick, who held office between the death of Beckford on 21 June, 1770 and the election of Brass Crosby on 9 November. As was customary, he had backed a Press Warrant issued by the Lords of the Admiralty to enable it to be executed within the precincts of the City. A man impressed on this warrant was brought on 26 October before Wilkes, who was sitting at Guildhall as a Justice of the Peace for the City. Wilkes discharged the man on the ground that Press Warrants were illegal by Magna Carta. London Museum, ii. 491 ff.; Ann Reg. xiii. 161, 162; Sharpe, op. cit. iii. 106. For Sir James Eyre and his obsequiousness to the Court see No. 4408.

3 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 5 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4844 CANDIDATES TO SUCCEED TOM TURLIS.

[1770]

Engraving. Probably from a magazine. Two groups of persons who are candidates for the place of hangman. Inscribed labels issue from the persons of four of them. Two men sit side by side on a settee, wearing curiously shaped crowns or coronets, one (l.) shaped like a wall. The former holds a paper inscribed To J——e G——m showing that he is Justice Gillam, who ordered the soldiers to fire on the Wilkite mob outside the King's Bench Prison on 10 May 1768 (see No. 4201). He says: Everyone knows my abilities as a Man-killer. His companion says: Let the Place be held by Commission and let the two Kennedies & my self, be Lords Commissioners of the Rope. Behind, and to the l. of the settee three persons stand together: A rough-looking man, flourishing a stick says: I wont accept of y^e Office without a Peerage to Support its Dignity. Next him is a Judge in wig and robes.

On the r., their backs to a window, stand three men; Sir Fletcher Norton in his Speaker's robes, and the horns which indicate that he is 'Sir Bullface Double Fee', see Nos. 4238, 4462, and index, says: B——n S——h has spoil'd y^e Trade, if Murderers were to be hang'd y^e Place might be worth accept^{ce}. He stands between the two Kennedy brothers and is alluding to the reprieve (for transportation) of one of them, the other having been acquitted. B——n S——h may be intended for Sir Sidney Stafford Smythe, a baron of the Exchequer. This reprieve was for the murder of a watchman in a drunken brawl, and was believed to be due to the influence of the young men's sister, Polly or Kitty Kennedy, see Nos. 4399, 4463, 5095. It was made a political question by Parson Horne and others, see Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George IV, 1845, iv. 110-11; Stephens, Memoirs of Horne Tooke, i. 185.

The print appears to derive from a paragraph in the Oxford Magazine for March 1770 (iv, p. 113) reporting that 'Turlis the hangman had informed the Lord Mayor that 'he will sooner resign his place than burn the City Remonstrance' [of 14 Mar. 1770]. There was no order for burning the Remonstrance which was voted by the House of Commons on 19 March to be an unwarrantable and dangerous petition. Sharpe, London and the Kingdom. See also No. 4380.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{11}{16}$ in.

4845 THE TRIAL OF THE D. OF C, [Cumberland] AND LADY G——R [Grosvenor] FOR CRIM. CON. [1770]

Engraving. Probably from a magazine. One of several satires on the trial of the Duke of Cumberland on a suit for crim. con. on 5 July 1770 in the King's Bench. A judge on a raised seat, plaintiff and defendants, witnesses or spectators stand below, surrounding a rectangular barrier within which is a table, at which a clerk is writing. Four counsel stand within the barrier, two to the r. of the judge, two to his l.

The Judge (Mansfield) sits, his l. forefinger raised, listening with a stern expression to the remarks addressed to him. In the centre, in back view, stands Lord Grosvenor, wearing a tie-wig with horns, to which he points, saying: I only want to know for a Certainty whether I am entitled to this Head Dress. On the l. in profile to the r. stand Lady Grosvenor, holding out a fan, and Cumberland. She says: My case shall be laid before this Court, and I can have nothing to fear from an Upright Judge; he says: I can do no Wrong. Behind him on the extreme l. is a woman wearing a hood and holding a fan. She says: It was a Pity to disturb them when they were going to Prince Making. One of the counsel on the Judge's r. says: If her L——d, has not bedded with her these two years She cannot be with Child, but she may be with Prince. The two counsel on the other side say: The Lady acted upon Revolution Principles She is strongly attached to the Present Family, and,

There is no actual Proof of Adultery. A man in back view says: The Youth wanted a Sop in Pan. A cook, on the extreme r., says, laughing: How his — R—y [sic] H—n — ss will be Roasted and Basted.

See Nos. 4400, 4401, 4402 and the references there given.

$3\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{3}{4}$ in.

4846 [MACKLIN.]

[? 1770¹]

Engraving. Macklin as Shylock supports on his shoulders Shakespeare who holds out a book in his r. hand, a pen in his l. Macklin leans to the l. holding out in his r. hand a pair of scales, in his l. a knife. Behind are Tragedy and Comedy. Tragedy (l.), a draped woman holding a dagger, appears despondent, Comedy (r.) holding a mask, looks with contemptuous amusement at Macklin. Shakespeare is irradiated. Beneath the design is engraved,

*Immortal Shakespear! Child of Heaven & fire,
The more we sink him rises still the higher:
E'en thro' THIS Vehicle the Bard can pass
Like Mecca's Prophet—mounted on an ASS.*

For Macklin see Nos. 5175, 5203.

4847 THE FEMALE COTERIE AT THE ELECTION OF ONE OF THE MALE MEMBERS OF THEIR SOCIETY

[c. 1770]

Engraving. Probably from a magazine. A number of ladies (eleven in all) sit at a table at the head of which is their president or chairman. They are balloting for the admission of a member, according to the 'Authentic Rules of the Female Coterie' printed in the Gentleman's Magazine, 1770, p. 414, by which ladies balloted for men and men for ladies. The president sits in a raised chair, a hammer in her r. hand; she says: Mr Driver the New Member shall be admitted & duly return'd by me the proper Officer if upon examination he comes up to the Standard. Remarks from other ladies (l. to r.) are: I hold up my hand for Mr Driver, if it had not been for him, several Noble Families would have been extinct that have now a numerous Issue; The ability of every Candidate ought to be strictly Examined; The Gentleman to be elected into this Society shall not be Husband to any of us; No our plan is to supply the deficiency of Husbands; I move for the Admission of Mr Driver as a Member. He has a promising Leg, an happy Assurance, & to crown the whole he is an Irishman; Lady H—n [Harrington] has her Reasons for not suffering Mr Driver to return to Ireland, but she must not Engross him all to herself. The lady on the President's right is writing in a large book. On the table are writing materials, books, one being Essay on Man, a bottle marked Eau de Vie, a tray with coffee-pot, cups, &c.

For the Coterie, a ladies' club formed in 1770, see 'A Georgian Ladies' Club', in Times Literary Supplement, 11 Aug. 1932, which is largely based on MSS. in the Public Record Office, Chancery Masters' Papers filed in the Suit C. 10 | 110. | 35. See also Nos. 4472 (and references there given), 5065, 5425.

$3\frac{3}{4} \times 5\frac{3}{4}$ in.

¹ Mr. Hawkins has written on the print Lond. Mus. Ap. 1770, but it is not in the B.M.L. copy of the magazine, which does contain, p. 207 (Apr. 1770), a portrait of Macklin as Shylock by Lodge, inscribed, This is the Jew, That Shakespeare drew. The print is also inconsistent with a laudatory 'Account of the Life and Genius of Mr. Charles Macklin', ibid., pp. 288-90.

1771¹

POLITICAL SATIRES

THE PEACE-MAKERS. See No. 4416 [1 Jan. 1771]
From the London Museum. On the Falkland Islands.

THE PRESENT EMPEROR OF GERMANY RECEIVING PETI-TIONS FROM, AND REDRESSING THE GRIEVANCES OF THE MEANEST OF HIS SUBJECTS . . . HOW HAPPY WOULD OTHER PRINCES BE COULD THEY, OR—WOULD THEY DO THE SAME. See No. 4388 [1 Jan. 1771]
From the Oxford Magazine.

4848 A CONFERENCE IN THE SHADES. [1 Feb. 1771]
Woodcut. From the Town and Country Magazine, iii. 36. It illustrates
A Conference in the Shades between the Duke of Bedford and Arthur Beardmore Esq. Bedford (l.), wearing the insignia of the Garter, holds out his arms in an attitude of despair. Beardmore, wearing a long livery gown and with the cap of liberty on a staff, holds out to him a paper inscribed in large letters Magna Ch[ar]ta, pointing with a monitory finger. Bedford died 14 Jan., Beardmore, a Wilkite Common Councilman, died 18 Jan. In the dialogue they discuss without heat the political situation, the quarrel between Wilkes and Horne, &c. See No. 4861, &c.
3¼ × 5¾ in.

THE FATE OF CITY REM—CES. See No. 4387 [1 Feb. 1771]
Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 12. George III giving the Petitions and Remonstrances of his subjects to the little Prince of Wales who has asked for paper for a kite.

THE SAWYERS DEMOLISHING THE TEMPLE OF LIBERTY.
See No. 4431 [1 Feb. 1771]
Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 28. Bute, Lord Mansfield, and Fletcher Norton demolishing the Temple of Liberty.

DIEU ET MON DROIT See No. 4423 [1 Feb. 1771]
AVITO VIRET HONORE
Frontispiece to Political Register, 1771. Ministerial misdeeds since 1763. The second title is Bute's motto.

4849 THE CONVENTION MAKERS. VOL. 3, No. 6. [1 Mar. 1771]
Engraving. From the Town and Country Magazine, iii. 80. The interior of a room; a picture called A Convention, depicting the Convention between England and Spain on the Falkland Islands, is falling from a broken

¹ No. 5134, published in 1773, satirizes the events of January 1771, and illustrates Baratariana, first published April–May 1771.

cornice inscribed National Honour, onto four prostrate figures. Two other men hasten in alarm from the picture. Londinia (l.), wearing a mural crown and carrying a shield with the arms of the City, points out the catastrophe to the Lord Mayor and two other men. Britannia and Justice with a sword and spear enter threateningly from a door (r.). Bute looks through a window with a face of alarm. Magna Charta which hangs on the wall is obscured by a large cobweb. From an overturned inkpot on the floor flows a stream inscribed The Road from Rochford to y^e Tower. On the floor are also a crown, a broken anchor, inscribed Tory Administration, two books, one being Places and Pensions Ledger Vol. 22.

In the picture, three figures stand on the seashore: an Englishman inscribed Submission, with his hat under his arm, takes the hand of a Spaniard, inscribed Reluctance, who turns his back. A third figure, Indemnity, waves a ragged cloth perhaps intended for a map of the Falkland Islands, and representing England's claim to an indemnity from Spain scattered to the winds.

The convention between England and Spain was signed on 22 Jan. 1771 by Rochford as Secretary of State, and Masserano the Spanish Ambassador. Spain disavowed the seizure of Port Egmont, but stipulated that its restoration should not affect Spain's claim to sovereignty over the Islands which she had always (ineffectively) asserted. These satisfactory terms were the result of the fall of Choiseul, and the successful diplomacy of Harris at Madrid, which prevented war with Spain and France. They were violently attacked by the Opposition, and especially by Chatham. See Winstanley, Chatham and the Whig Opposition, 1912, pp. 407 ff.; Ann. Reg. 1771, pp. 46-53, 238; Junius' letter of 30 Jan. 1771, answered by Johnson's Thoughts on the late transactions respecting Falkland's Islands; Cambridge Hist. of the Br. Empire, i. 698 ff. See also Nos. 4415-19, 4856, 4857, 4897, 4934, 4935, 4940.
4 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 7 in.

THE BUTTON MAKERS ADJUSTING THEIR DIFFERENCES.

See No. 4417 [1 Mar. 1771]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 56. A conference between the kings of England and Spain over the Falkland Islands, the Princess Dowager of Wales is accused of having been bribed by the king of Spain to influence her son in Spain's favour.

TWITCHER'S ADVOCATE

See No. 4426 [1 Mar. 1771]

Dr. W. Scott or 'Anti-Sejanus'.

4850 VIRTUE DISGRAC'D MARCH 1771

[1 Apr. 1771]

VICE TRIUMPHANT MARCH 1771

Design'd and Engrav'd for the Political Register.

Engraving. From the Political Register, viii. 127. A design in two compartments. Above is 'Virtue' imprisoned in the Tower. A head looks from each of two barred windows. At the gate stand Britannia and Liberty; above their heads are cherubs in an arch of clouds.

This represents the imprisonment of Crosby, the Lord Mayor, and Alderman Oliver. See Nos. 4852-4, 4860, 4864, 4938.

In the lower compartment Westminster magistrates and constables stand on the steps of a portico, surmounted by clouds and two demons protecting 'Vice', the House of Commons. The two foremost figures are wearing the portcullis badge of the arms of the City of Westminster suspended from their necks, one holds a paper inscribed Riot Act. Behind are constables with staves, behind again figures in the doorway, one with a staff.

This represents the serious riot at Westminster on 27 March, when the Lord Mayor went from the Mansion House to the House of Commons where he was committed to the Tower. The badges were worn by the magistrates on Sir John Fielding's request 'for greater safety and effectiveness in suppressing riots . . .' Public Advertiser, 16 Dec. 1665 and 8 Sept. 1766. See Manchée, Westminster City Fathers, p. 256, for a photograph of a badge. For the riot see Ann. Reg. 1771, p. 85; Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, ii. 245. For the unpopularity of the House of Commons cf. No. 4869, &c.

6 × 3 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

4851 SIR GEORGE SAVILE BART.

[1 Apr. 1771]

ƒ. Lodge sculp.

Engraving. London Museum, iii. 197. Bust portrait of Savile looking to the l. in an oval. Beneath the oval is an ornamental group of rolled documents, one is inscribed The Calder Navigation, another Nullum Tempus. Beneath these are engraved

*A Wit's a Feather, & a Chief's a Rod,
An honest Man's the noblest Work of God.*
Pope.

Savile introduced (1768 and 1769) the Nullum Tempus Bill for securing the land of a subject after sixty years' possession from any dormant right of the Crown, which was the outcome of the suit between Sir James Lowther and Portland, see Nos. 4895, 5136. He was also active in procuring the Act of 1769 (9 Geo. III, c. 71) for extending the navigation of the River Calder and for restoring the damage done by floods. See Commons' Journals, xxxii, pp. 223-4. See No. 4981.

A companion portrait to No. 4856.

Oval 3 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5435 c.

4852 AN EXACT REPRESENTATION OF THE SEVEN MALEFACTORS THAT WHERE [sic] EXECUTED AT TOWER HILL ON APRIL 5, 1771 F[OR TREASON]¹ TO THEIR COUNTRY.

Pub. by the Inventor ƒ. Williams according to act of Parliament, April 10, 1771.

Etching. Two carts conveying malefactors, after the manner of the usual procession to Tyburn, with a crowd of spectators in the foreground. Spectators also look from windows. The victims have numbers which refer to explanatory notes beneath the print: N^o 1 Lord Bloody scrol. N^o 2 Alderman contract the Citys great Curse. N^o 3 Lord Hellish Facts a Lover of Arbitrary Power &c. &c. 2^d Cart. N^o 1 Gray Goose a Lawyer of infamous practices in any Court. N^o 2 Col^l Bluster remarkable for nothing but the murder of an innocent Woman. N^o 3 Jemmy Twitcher. N^o 4 Cocking George one that never kept his Word with any on[e]. Labels issue from the mouths of the victims and the spectators. Each cart has a parson without a number; in the first cart (l.) he has a halter round his neck and is saying: Lying & Perjury & Deciet are my chief supports. He is Dr. W. Scott, Twitcher's Advocate, see No. 4426. No. 1, Lord Barrington, says: Oh! I hear the murderd Allen call me to Account Oh! St. Georges Fields. No. 2, Alderman Harley: Oh! I have wrongd my Country & decievd my Fellow Citizens. Oh! that I had been but Honest. No. 3, Lord Halifax: General Warrants and every oppressive measure against my country makes me repent Oh the cursed Jezebel [the Princess Dowager of Wales].

¹ The letters in brackets appear to have been erased from the plate and then filled in with a pen.

In the second cart (r.) the clergyman, Parson Horne, is saying: my poor father used to say G— Damn ye Jacky never be seen to keep bad comp^y for fear you shoud come to be Hangd. He holds a paper on which is inscribed I think. No. 1, de Grey, in Judge's wig and gown, says: I have betrayd my Friend robd my country, been led by the nose by that infernal B——h Jezebel Carlton, Oh me. No. 2, Luttrell, says: Arabella, poor Arabella Bolton! pray for your murderer Oh I am a damd Villian [sic]. No. 4, Onslow: little did I think I shoud be pitted with such a parcel of Shake-Bags rascals Oh! that I had still been a hearty Cock. No. 3, Sandwich: I never since I have been Jemmy Twitcher have been in such Wicked & bad Company no not I.

Spectators from the windows address the victims. L. to r.: Remember St. George's Fields effectual murthers; Cocking George you dont Die Game; Take care Panurge the Halters Round your neck (this is addressed to Dr. W. Scott, the parson, the reputed author of letters to the Press defending Sandwich, signed Pamurge and Cinna); Here's a General Warrant for Ye ye Dogs; it is a pity he should escape he's such a double rogue; What! the Vicar of Brentford [Horne] are you doing duty there twil be your turn soon. Members of the crowd in the foreground (l. to r.) say: Miss Bolton's Curses on the Wretch; We could pick out a score more T——rs [Traitors obliterated] to their Country; I think the Lawyer becomes a Cart and a Halter; I thought George [Onslow] had been better fed he's well trim'd; The Alderman had better minded Tare and Trett; Jemmy Twitcher false to his God, his King, his country & his Friend [Wilkes]. An Irishman says: By Jasus God if such varmint would be in Ireland to be hang'd for we woud stone 'em to death with Brick Bats; The Colonel shoud have been hangd at Brentford; Look at Double faced Jack the Parson of B,[rentford]; Hanging's too good for that Rogue the Alderman; They have lived too Long. A soldier, in the uniform of the foot-guards & holding a musket, says: Damn the soldier that Draws a Trigger to oblige any Comander against an Englishman; Oh there's Tom Patts the Chicken Butcher's son I thought he would be hangd ere now; What! Cocking George. If lay you the Long Odds you die as great a dunghill as you have livd. I say done first; Damn the Brentford Vicar they must hang him soon for he's a Villian in disguise. A woman says: I thought the Pellnell Jezebel [half erased but legible] woud come to this.

On 5 April such a procession in which two carts were preceded by a hearse went to Tower Hill attended by the mob. The figures in the carts were of pasteboard, nearly life-size, hanging from gallows, with names on their backs: L—d B—n; Ld. H—x; Alderman H.; L—ll the Usurper; D—G—y; Jemmy Twitcher; Cocking George. They were burnt on Tower Hill and shortly afterwards their 'dying speeches' were sold in the streets. Gent. Mag. 1771, p. 188; Ann. Reg. 1771, p. 91.

The occasion of the demonstration was the imprisonment of the Lord Mayor and Oliver in the Tower (see Nos. 4850, 4853, &c.), and on the same day the L.M. was taken before de Grey who refused a writ of Habeas Corpus and re-committed him to the Tower. But except for the effigies of de Grey and Onslow (who started the action in the Commons against the printing of debates, see No. 4855), this satire is chiefly concerned with other and earlier aspects of the struggle between Wilkes and the City on one side and Court, Ministry, and Commons on the other. Barrington is pilloried for his connexion with the 'Massacre of St. George's Fields', see No. 4196; 'Bloody Scrol' is a quotation from Wilkes's justification of his libel on the offending letter (written by Weymouth, not Barrington): 'I thought it my duty to bring to light that bloody scroll.' Parl. Hist. xvi. 543; Halifax for the general warrant of 1763, see Nos. 4050, 4203. Harley was the chief supporter of the Court among the aldermen, and as candidate for the City had defeated Wilkes in the election of 1768; see Nos. 4069, 4190, 4213, 4235, 4269. For Luttrell, the Middlesex Election, and the alleged seduction of Arabella Bolton, see Nos. 4284, 4285, 4971. Sandwich was hated for his treachery to Wilkes over the Essay on Woman; the satires relating to him are numerous, see No. 4075 and Vol. iv. pp. cxi-cxii, and index to this volume. For the Princess Dowager of Wales see Nos. 3846, 3847, 4425, 4874, &c. The quarrel between Wilkes and Horne absorbed popular attention in the early months of 1771. See Walpole, Letters, viii. 7, 27-8, 44 and Nos. 4861, 4862, 4863, 4867, 4879, 5102, 5127.
11 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

4853 THE LORD MAYOR AND ALDERMAN OLIVER IN THE TOWER. [1 May 1771]

Engrav'd for the Oxford Magazine.

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 136. Brass Crosby the Lord Mayor and Alderman Oliver seated at a table on which are rolled documents: Charters of the City of London, Bill of Rights, Mag[na] Chart[a.] The L.M. says: We are imprisoned for doing our duty, therefore Captivity is honourable. Oliver says: Our conduct is approv'd can the rulers at St. Stephens say as much? A warder in beefeater's dress by the door says: In 1745 the Scots were sent here for rebelling, these Gentlemen are committed for their L—y—lty. For this well-known episode in the struggle which secured the publication of parliamentary debates see Walpole's Letters, viii. 16-20, 24-6; Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, ii. 232 ff. Crosby remained in the Tower from 27 Mar. till the prorogation on 8 May. See Nos. 4850, 4852, 4854, 4857, 4860, 4864, 4880. Reproduced, Social England, ed. Traill, 1904, v. 475.

3 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 5 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4854 THE RIGHT HON^{BLE} BRASS CROSBY ESQ^R LORD MAYOR, AND RICH^D OLIVER ESQ^R, ALDERMAN OF LONDON. [1 May 1771]

Engraving. From the Town and Country Magazine, iii. 193. Portraits (W.L.) commemorating the committal to the Tower by the House of

¹ 'Twas W—h urged th 'enforcing his commands;
² 'Twas B—n that gave th 'exciting pay, See No. 4196.

Commons of Crosby and Oliver. Crosby (l.) holds in his l. hand a long staff resting on the ground on which is the cap of liberty. Oliver's r. hand also holds the staff. See No. 4853, &c.

$4\frac{5}{8} \times 3\frac{3}{8}$ in.

4855 LITTLE COCKING GEORGE.

[1 May 1771]

Woodcut. From the Town and County Magazine, iii. 196. A man (W.L.) holds a fighting cock in both hands. Above his head is printed Cock a doodle-doo. George Onslow was known as little Cocking George, and is described in the accompanying text as 'the great champion of privilege and cock-fighting'. He was burnt in effigy, 5 April 1771, as the originator of the proceedings against the printers for the publication of parliamentary debates, see No. 4852. He complained, 8 Feb. 1771, 'Sometimes I am held up as a villain; sometimes I am held up as an idiot; and sometimes as both. To-day they call me little Cocking George. They will find Sir, I am a cock they will not easily beat.' Cavendish, Debates, ii. 257. Cf. No. 6065.

4856 EARL OF ROCHFORD.

[1 May 1771]

f. Lodge sculp.

Engraving. From the London Museum, iii. 253. Bust portrait of Rochford in an oval, almost full face. Beneath the oval is a rolled document inscribed Convention with Spain, 1771. Beneath this is engraved,

*Man may escape from Rope & Gun,
But Infamy he ne'er can Shun.*

Gay.

Rochford carried on with ability and success the negotiations leading to the unpopular Convention with Spain of 14 Jan. 1771, see No. 4849. A companion portrait to No. 4851.

Oval, $3\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{1}{4}$.

B.M.L., P.P. 5435 c.

4857 THE POLITICIAN.

Done from the original Drawing by S. H. Grimm. Printed for S. Sledge Printseller, in Henrietta Street Covent Garden. Publish'd as the Act directs 2^d May 1771.

Engraving. A man wearing spectacles and of repulsive appearance with a gaping toothless mouth, sits draped in a sheet, while a French hair-dresser (his nationality indicated by his bag-wig and ruffles) applies tongs to his hair, and appears to be whispering in his ear. At this, or on account of the Speaker's Warrant dated 27 Mar. 1771, to the Lieutenant of the Tower to receive the Lord Mayor into custody, which he holds in his hand, the Politician starts in alarm. In the centre over the fire-place is an oval picture of Don Quixote tilting at a windmill. On the l. hangs a map of the Iberian Peninsula, on the r. one of the British Isles. Hanging from a stool to the floor is An Accurate Map of Falkland I^s over which a dog and cat are fighting. On the floor are also a Letter to the Premier, a Last dying Speech, a new Song on Liberty (torn), a bundle of Junius's Letters and another of Votes. Open on a secretaire-bookcase is a History of the Constitution with my own Remarks, apparently in course of composition. A bust of Oliver Cromwell is on the top of the book-case.

A caricature portrait of Lord North; though he is generally treated in satire, c. 1771, as a tool of Bute and Grafton, Junius had particularly attacked him in his letter of 30 Jan. 1771, as taking 'the whole upon himself'. For the Falkland Islands see Nos. 4415-19, 4849, &c., in which the Ministry and the King are accused of corrupt subservience to Spain, a charge without foundation: see the negotiations with Spain in Cal. H.O. Papers, 1770-2, pp. 65-6, 84-5, 104-7, 190, 193, 200, 209, 573; Lord Malmesbury's Diaries and Correspondence, 1844, i, pp. 58-78; Letters of Hume, ed. Greig, 1932, ii. 240 ff.

$9\frac{1}{8} \times 12\frac{1}{2}$ in.

4858 THE NATIONAL UNION 1771.

[1 June 1771]

Design'd and Engrav'd for the Political Register.

Engraving. From the Political Register, viii. 255. A man, standing on a bank, holds the staff of a large Union flag which is wrapped round a group of six standing figures who are poorly characterized, but are presumably patriots. One is Lord Chatham, holding a crutch; beside him stands a judge in wig and robes who is probably Lord Camden.

$5\frac{7}{8} \times 3\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4859 THE YOUNG HEIR AMONG BAD COUNCELLORS, OR THE LION BETRAY'D.

[1 June 1771]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 176. George III, as a lion, blindfolded and in chains, sits on a low platform surrounded by his counsellors, whose advice is inscribed on labels coming from their heads. These are (l. to r.): Sandwich (Jemmy Twitcher) with goat's legs, holding a cricket-bat and wearing a cricketing cap on the top of which rests an anchor to show that he is First Lord of the Admiralty. He says: *Be advised by me and I'll give them a twitcher.*¹ A dog with the letter N resting on his head to show that he is Lord North, holds the chain riveted on the lion's right paw, saying: Be guided by me and go North about; with one leg, which terminates in a barbed point, he is stabbing the lion's breast, blood gushes out and is being drunk by rats. North's other leg is in a jack boot, emblem of the supposed influence of Bute, see No. 3860, &c. The Duke of Grafton, standing behind the lion, caricatured but not travestied as an animal, says: Shall a Lion regard the barking of Dogs. (This favourable treatment is due to the fact that the caricaturist had not anticipated Grafton's appointment as Lord Privy Seal on 8 June 1771.) Lord Mansfield in judge's wig and robes and holding a book, says: Let us put our own Laws in full force. Fletcher Norton (Sir Bull-face Double Fee) in his Speaker's robes, with horns and talons for fingers, says: I'll defend you as long as it is my Interer [sic]. In front of him stands Charles Fox as a young fox, wearing a bag-wig, his right hand, thrust through a muff, holds the ace of clubs, his left foot is in a dice-box, and two dice are on the ground beside him; he is looking through a single-eye glass; these emblems show his fondness for gambling and for French fashions. The lion is saying: I know you are all my friends and will take care of my Estate.

The accompanying text explains that, owing to the influence of 'a north country servant' the king's present ministers are Jacobites, and that he has

¹ Twitcher is dialect for a severe blow. O.E.D. See No. 4877.

'discarded with contempt the descendants of those whose ancestors' brought his family into possession of their estates. An indication of the Whig creed that 'Revolution families' had a hereditary claim to office. Cf. No. 4303.

$5\frac{3}{8} \times 3\frac{13}{16}$ in.

4860 THE PRINTERS BEFORE A COMMITTEE OF THE ROBINHOOD SOCIETY. [1 June 1771]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 161. Sir Fletcher Norton the Speaker, wearing horns in allusion to his nick-name, Sir Bull-face Double Fee, is seated in his robes behind a barrier inscribed St Stephens Bar; with three members of the house on his r. hand, and three on his l. Before the bar, facing the Speaker, stand two printers; one stands on the General Evening [Post], the other on the St. James Chronicle. The former asks: Is it agreeable to Magna Charta that a Man should be a Judge in his own Cause? The other says: If my Trial is coming on I beg I may be on the Jury as well as my Opponent.

An incident in the struggle between the House of Commons on one side and the Press and the City on the other, over the publication of parliamentary debates. See a letter to the Speaker from Evans, printer of the London Packet, Political Register, x. 229; Ann. Reg. 1771, 183-93; Cal. H.O. Papers, 1770-1772, pp. 223-4; A. Stephens, Memoirs of Horne Tooke, i. 323-51; F. Bourne, English Newspapers, i. 209 ff.; Corr. of George III, ed Fortescue, ii. 219-20. The printers were summoned to attend the House on 14 March; those who did so were reprimanded on their knees; Wheble and Miller refused to attend, being supported by Wilkes, Brass Crosby the Lord Mayor, and Oliver, whose well-known defiance of the House led to the imprisonment of the two latter in the Tower, see 4850, &c. Baldwin of the Whitehall Evening Post, Bladon of the General Evening Post, and Wright, apologized at the bar of the House and were discharged.

The Commons are pilloried as the Robin Hood Society, a debating society of tradesmen, &c., which had long been a stock subject of ridicule; see Nos. 3260 (probably suggested by an article by Fielding in the Covent Garden Journal, 28 Jan., 1 Feb. 1752), 3539, 6331. See also Nos. 4850, 4852-4, 4864.

$3\frac{9}{16} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4861 THE DOUBLE DISCOVERY [1 June 1771]

Woodcut. From the Town and Country Magazine, iii. 262. A flying demon holds the level beam of a pair of scales, on which stand Wilkes (l.) and Parson Horne (r.). Each stands in the attitude of a fencer, thrusting at the other with an outstretched goose-quill; neither has the advantage. Wilkes wears a bag-wig, Horne is in parson's gown and bands. The demon says: nicely pois'd indeed. The print illustrates 'The Balance of Honour and Patriotism; or a Dialogue between Mr. H— and Mr. —, in which the Demon of Discord very properly interferes'. The dialogue ends with Horne's expressing a wish 'that you, good Mr. Devil, had been conducting me to H—ll, before Malagrida [Shelburne] had persuaded me to engage in this d—n'd controversy'.

One of a number of satires on the quarrel between Wilkes and Horne which began in November 1770 and was carried on by letters in the Press between 14 Jan. and 10 July 1771. See Stephens, Memoirs of Horne Tooke, i. 176 ff. These satires accuse Horne of being inspired by the Devil, Ministers, &c. See Nos. 4852, 4863, 4866, 4868, 4886, 4948, 4967, 5104, 5129. An interesting indication of the distrust inspired by Shelburne then in the Opposition, and concerned at its weakness, of which this quarrel was one manifestation. Fitzmaurice, Shelburne, 1912, i. 423, 437. Cf. Nos. 4152, 4375.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ in.

4862 THE TRIAL OF M. D'EON BY A JURY OF MATRONS.

No. 15 [1 June 1771]

Etching. From the Town and Country Magazine, iii. 249. The Chevalier d'Eon (l.), wearing a military hat and the order of St. Louis round his neck, stands, partly draped, on a pedestal before a jury of twelve ladies (r.) who are to decide upon his sex, a matter which has for several weeks deeply engaged 'the polite and stock-jobbing world'. The accompanying text indicates the identity of the jury: Lady Har—n. [Harrington.], L—y R—d. [Rochford?], L—y T—sh—d [Townshend], L—y G—r. [Grosvenor], L—y Sarah B—y [Bunbury], L—y Lig—r [Ligonier], L—y R—y [Rodney?]. The D. of N. [Northumberland?]. They pronounced the matter doubtful.

For D'Eon see Nos. 4308, 4865, &c.

This plate was used in the Hibernian Magazine, i. 263 (July 1771).

$3\frac{7}{8} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

4863 A PART OF THE NEW COMMITY OF INQUIRY

Price 6^d.

[c. June 1771]

Etching with verses engraved beneath. Round a circular table draped with a cloth sit the devil (centre), the Pope (l.), and Horne (r.); engraved labels issue from their mouths. By Horne is an inkstand, and the table is spread with letters he is supposed to have written at the dictation of his two counsellors. He is saying: My D^r Friend Satan if Wilkes should undecieve 'm. His l. hand rests on a partly written letter: Jesuits Hall June 1, 1771 S^r . . .

The devil says to Horne: I'll Insure you y^e P—n—ss D—gr, Bte, & N—th's [Princess Dowager, Bute and North's] fav^{rs} and all my Fr^{ds} at Court. The Pope says: And I'll give you absolution for all, past Present & to come.

Papers on the table are inscribed To Jⁿ Wilkes Esq^r; . . . But I hope I have escap'd the infection . . . ; To Lord N—th My lord I shall persue such measures as will be to Your interest in opposing W—kes Your &c. P. H—rn. On the ground, peeping from beneath the table-cloth, an imp is writing on a scroll: . . . is now to support the cause of my Master and y^e M—n—try.

The letter to Wilkes is quoted from the unfortunate letter from Horne to Wilkes of 3 Jan. 1766 in which he deprecated his clerical orders, adding apologetically, 'It is true I have suffered the infectious hand of a bishop to be waved over me; whose imposition like the sop given to Judas, is only a signal for the devil to enter. . . I hope I have escaped the contagion . . . if you should at any time discover the black spot under the tongue, pray kindly assist me to conquer the prejudices of education and profession.'

This letter was published by Wilkes during their quarrel. A. Stephens, Memoirs of Horne Tooke, i. 76.

Beneath the design verses are engraved,

*Good People I Pray, give atten^{tn} this way,
Don't be frightn'd to see us together,
The best will be Friends, for to serve their own ends,
And their sentim^{ts} change as the Weather.*

*God Keep us from Sin, witho^{ut} & within, unTill [sic] certain of absolution,
Which I have obtain'd, & thorowly gain'd,
So a Fig for the Constitution.*

*The Bishop's soft hand, his lawn Sleev's or Band,
Cou'd never polute or defile me;
If you think I am Wrong, look under my Tongue,
And see if the Rogue has beguil'd me.*

*It was Satan my Friend did y^e Pope recomend,
And they both of them swear to be trusty,
So I'll try once again, my Old Friends & my Pen,
For all Esq^r Wilkes is so Rusty.*

*With fresh showers of Lyes I'll the Nation surprize,
Nay the Devil shall stager to hear it,
The infernals shall say, give H——n but his way,
And he'll out Lye us all never fear it.*

For other satires on the quarrel between Wilkes and Horne see No. 4861, &c. For its political results see Walpole, Memoirs of George III, 1845, iv, pp. 308, 325.

7½ × 8½ in. Pl. 12 × 8¾ in.

4864 BRITANNIA CONGRATULATING 'THE RIGHT HON. BRASS CROSBY, ESQ; LORD-MAYOR, AND MR. ALDERMAN OLIVER, ON THEIR RELEASEMENT FROM THE TOWER, AT THE RISING OF PARLIAMENT, MAY 8, 1771.

Dedicated to the Livery of London, the Constituents of Honiton, and all true Lovers of their King and Country.

Holman Del.

Bland Sculp.

Published 15th June 1771.

Engraving, with verses printed beneath. The title (above the design) is also printed. Britannia (l.) with her shield and spear, followed by aldermen in civic gowns, advances with outstretched arms to meet Crosby and Oliver, who are coming out of the gate of the Tower (r.). Crosby, wearing his mayoral robe and chain, holds out the City Charter. Oliver, in his gown, holds out Magna Charta. There is a sentry on each side of the gate, and a beefeater stands behind Crosby. Crosby was M.P. for Honiton.

For the civic procession from the Tower to the Mansion House, see Ann. Reg., 1771, 104-5; Walpole's Letters, viii. 31, 32. It was escorted by members of the Artillery Company, who let off twenty-four pieces of cannon at the Tower Gates. For the close of the dispute by the early rising of Parliament, see Letters of Hume, ed. Greig, 1932, ii. 241. For the imprisonment of Crosby and Oliver see Nos. 4850, 4852, 4854, 4860.

Beneath the design are verses (36 ll.). They begin,

Joy to my sons and Patriots!—high in fame.

*My colonies shall toast you in their songs,
And hiss the men who glory'd in their wrongs.
Ye Foxes, Onslows, Ellis,¹ Luttrell, hear!
All Honourable Men!—to North most dear!
Doth not some vengeance on those Villains wait,
Who owe their greatness to a ruined State?*

and end,

*So shall ye live belov'd, lamented die,
Then rise two glorious Stars above the Sky.*

Sold by S. Hooper 25, Ludgate-Hill. Price One Shilling.

$3\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ in. Broadside $15 \times 10\frac{1}{2}$ in.

4865 LA DECOUVERTE OU LA FEMME FRANC MAÇON
THE DISCOVERY OR FEMALE FREE-MASON.

Printed for S. Hooper, N^o 25 Ludgate hill 25th June 1771, as the Act Directs.

Mezzotint. Portrait (W.L.) of the Chevalier d'Eon, as a woman. He is fashionably dressed, and resembles a good-looking woman of fashion, his head turned slightly to the l. showing an elongated pearl ear-ring. He wears a cap over high-dressed hair, a low-cut bodice with ruffled elbow-sleeves. His r. hand, on his hip, holds a sword. With his l. hand, which holds a cane attached to his wrist by strings, he points l. towards a military coat which is spread over a chair. He wears the order of St. Louis and a free-mason's apron. Behind him on the r. is a table covered with a cloth hanging in heavy folds; on it is a document, A Policy 25 P C^t On the Ch^r D'Eon Man, or Woman, and two uniformly-bound books, Lettres du Ch^r D'Eon, L'Hist. du Ch^r D'eon. On the wall behind a military hat and sword hang directly over d'Eon's head. On each side of him is a picture: one (l.) represents Mrs. Tofts producing rabbits (see Nos. 1778-86); the other depicts the bottle-imp, seated in a large funnel which is in the neck of a bottle (see Nos. 3022-7). The implication is that by the changes in his sex d'Eon is carrying on a fraud comparable to the two most notorious hoaxes of the century. Beneath each picture is the bust of a man; that on the l. is Wilkes, an associate of d'Eon, who was accused of trafficking in the insurances on his sex (see No. 4870).

Beneath the title is engraved in French and English: Lady Charles, Louis, Cezar, Augustus Alexander, Timotheus, D'Eon of Beaumont—Advocate of the Parliament of Paris, Secretary to the Embassy at the Court of Russia, Aid de Camp of the Duke de Broglio, Captain of Dragoons, Royal Censor, Secretary of Embassy under the Duke de Nivernois, Kn^t of y^e Military order of S^t Louis, Minister Plenipotentiary to his Britanic Majesty, & accep^{td} free Mason at the Lodge of immortality at the Crown & Anchor in the Strand.

For d'Eon see Nos. 4308, 4862, 4870-3, 4881, 5108, 5427, 5512.

$12\frac{1}{2} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

¹ For Welbore Ellis as Guy Vaux see No. 4384 (1770).

Chaloner Smith (iv, p. 1725) describes a print called

A FRENCH CAPT OF DRAGOONS BROUGHT TO BED OF TWINs, AND THE CAUSE OF THE CHEVALIERS DISAP-PEARANCE EXPLAIN'D, ADDRESSED TO THE UNDER WRITERS OF HE, AND SHE POLICIES

Publish'd as the Act directs, by S Hooper No 25 Ludgate Hill 1 Sept' 1771.

Mezzotint. D'Eon lying on a bed attended by Wilkes with a bowl of gruel. Parson Horne reads a baptismal service for children held before him by a nurse. Paoli is present in armour, also Mrs. Macaulay with a book under her arm. An officer's uniform hangs on the wall.

$9\frac{3}{8} \times 13\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4866 A PRIVATE ORDINATION.

[1 July 1771]

Engraving. From the London Museum, iii. 375. The interior of a church. A bishop (l.) stands behind a semicircular balustrade, his l. hand outstretched over the head of a kneeling clergyman in gown and bands. Behind the clergyman stands a demon saying: Fugiunt pudor, verumque fidesque. In quorum subeunt locum fraudes, dolique, insidiaeque, &c. &c. The pavement is of black and white squares. In a window of Gothic design are armorial bearings. Below the design is engraved, It is true, I have suffered the infectious hand of a Bishop to be waved over me: whose imposition, like the sop given to Judas, is only a signal for the Devil to enter. It is true that usually at that touch—fugiunt . . . [ut supra].

A satire on Parson Horne, whose unfortunate reference to his ordination in a letter to Wilkes, which is here quoted, was repeatedly used against him. See Nos. 4863, 4948, &c.

$6\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in.

4867 [CARLTON HOUSE JUNTO IN FEAR & TREMBLING.]

[1771]

Original design in pen and wash for the engraving (reversed) with this title in the Oxford Magazine, vi. 200, June 1771, No. 4427, and for No. 4874. The Princess Dowager of Wales sits under a canopy of tartan (indicative of the alleged influence of Bute), with a face of dismay. Seven members of her supposed 'Junto' approach her. The words which the figures are supposed to be saying are written, without labels, and seem to indicate the beginning only of the sentences, each terminating in 'and', apparently a symbol for &c. The engraver has however copied them literally.

$3\frac{3}{4} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in.

CARLTON HOUSE JUNTO IN FEAR & TREMBLING.

See No. 4427 [1 July 1771]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 200.

The Princess Dowager of Wales and her supposed advisers in dismay.

4868 ACTED FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE MINISTRY.

[1 July 1771]

Design'd & Engrav'd for the Political Register.

Engraving. From the Political Register, viii. 319. Parson Horne (l.) in gown and bands and Wilkes (r.) in an alderman's gown, face each other threateningly. Horne holds in his r. hand a rolled document, in the l. a book inscribed Composition of your Debts. Wilkes has a rolled document in his l. hand, in his raised r. hand is a book inscribed Subscriptions to your Pamphlets. They are in the act of hurling books and papers at each other: Horne's Speeches at Mile End, thrown by Wilkes, has just missed Horne's head. Three documents inscribed Wilkes's; Adresses to the; and Freeholders of Middlesex are just behind Wilkes's shoulder, having been hurled by Horne. Each has one foot on a volume inscribed Political Connections. Wilkes's other foot is on a paper inscribed Horne's Letter.

For the payment of Wilkes's debts see Stephens, Memoirs of Horne Tooke, i. 270 ff. The accusation that Horne was acting in the interest of the ministry was made by Junius in his letter to Grafton of 9 July 1771. For the quarrel between Horne and Wilkes see No. 4861, &c.

The plate was also used in the Royal Magazine, xxv. 654, Oct. 1771.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4869 THE TRUE PORTRAITS OF THE MAJORITY OF THE PAR—L—T OF PANDEMONIUM.

[1 July 1771]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 219.

At each side of a table are seated figures with the heads and forms of grotesque monsters or animals. The bull-faced Sir Fletcher Norton (the Speaker) presides; in one hand is a scourge, in the other a staff to which are attached bags of money and a coronet. He says: He that dares be Virtuous shall be punish'd, but Ye my Friends shall be rewarded. Bute and Grafton are hovering above as imps. The table is emerging from flames and is decorated with The Coffin of Liberty. Two demons act as clerks at the head of the table in front of the Speaker.

As usual in the series the explanatory text is in the form of a letter to the Editor, showing that the design represents 'the extraordinary appearance the present ministerial wretches will make in the next world. . . . I have erred on the favourable side; for it is impossible for many of them to assume any shape or character that is not less horrible than their own.'

The only two who can be identified are North, on the Speaker's r., as a dog wearing a ribbon and star, and Lord Holland as a fox clasping a number of money-bags. For the unpopularity of the House of Commons cf. also Nos. 4850, 4889, 4893, 4944, 4970.

$3\frac{3}{8} \times 5\frac{3}{16}$ in.

4870 NO. 1. THE RAPE OF MISS DEON FROM FRANCE TO ENGLAND.

[? July 1771]

Engraving. No. 1 of a series by the same artist,¹ see Nos. 4871-3. D'Eon

¹ Calabi attributes this plate to Bartolozzi; he describes another impression, with the date July 23, 1771, the words engraved beneath being an English version of the description on the r. margin of this print: Time, always noted for a Babblor of Secrets Bartolozzi, 1928, No. 2229.

(r.) dressed as a man and wearing jack boots, astride on the back of Time holding his scythe and hour-glass, flies across the Channel towards four satyrs who hold out a British flag to receive him. The figures have numbers which refer to notes engraved beneath the print. 1, a nude satyr holding aloft the cap of liberty; 2, a nude satyr with legal wig and bands; 4, a satyr wearing a short coat; and 5, a satyr wearing a woman's low-cut bodice. No. 3, in back view, is a wine-merchant with wine bottles slung round his shoulders, he watches d'Eon through a telescope.

The background is a view of the Channel, with two vessels, and Calais (r.) in the distance.

Beneath the design is engraved:

The Wind S.W. from Mr Dessin at the English Hotel at Calais.

No. 1. Miss D'n Arriving at the Standard of Liberty the Madness of the Time.

No. 2. F——e at the Bloodsucker's publick office.

No. 3. L——m at the Magazine of Sophisticated Wine.

No. 4. Ll——d's Coffee House or office of Policies.

No. 5. Mother Cole's near the Lock-Hospital.

A printed description is on the r. margin of the print:

Enlevement de M^{lle} Deon. Le Tems dont le pouvoir devoile les secrets les plus cachés, s'étant mis en tête d'Eclaircir si M^r Deon est chevalier ou chevaliere rencontre ce heros problematique sous le portique de L'hôtel D'Angleterre à Calais; le vieillard le saisit, & a la faveur d'un coup de vent S.E. il transporte son nouveau Ganymede sur les Rives d'albion; on voit le groupe dans les airs se presser d'arriver, l'un [sic] portant l'autre, tandis que les amis du beau cavalier se preparent a le recevoir au rivage sur une couverture, L'homme au telescope est un fidel marchand de vin composé en Angleterre, le satire a sa gauche est un honete Procureur, Enemi des affaires embrouillés; le faune qui tient le baton surmonté d'un bonnet,, signifie la liberté, et son in lustre [sic] Defenseur Wilks; les deux femelles a pieds de biche, sont renomées pour pre-tandre que m^{lle}. Deon ne l'est point.

During 1771 the sex of d'Eon was the subject of a number of bets and gambling insurances. Wilkes, who was an associate of d'Eon, was accused of trafficking in these policies. Cf. Controversial Letters of Wilkes, Horne, &c., 1771, p. 72. See Nos. 4865, 4871, 4881. D'Eon was suspected of encouraging the bets in order to share in the spoil, and his mysterious disappearances heightened the suspicion. The question of d'Eon's sex as it affected these bets was decided in 1777, see No. 5427. See also No. 4308 (1769).

$7\frac{3}{16} \times 10\frac{1}{2}$ in.

4871 NO. 2. A DEPUTATION FROM JONATHAN'S AND THE FREE-MASONS.

Pub^d as the Act directs July 17, 1771.

Etching. No. 2 of a series, see No. 4870, &c. D'Eon, dressed half as a woman, half as a man, reclines on a couch (r.); he turns to speak to the wine-merchant (see No. 4873) who leans on the head of the couch. A small satyr or demon holds a cord which appears to be attached to D'Eon's head. The deputation stand round the foot of the couch: one man holds out a Petition from the Bulls & Bears in Change Alley. Another wears the insignia of a Free Mason, behind him the head of Wilkes is partly visible.

Two satyrs advance from the l. holding a chair supported on poles. It has arm- and leg-rests and appears to be intended for operations or medical examinations. On the ground (l.) is a pile of books, one inscribed On the use of the Night Chair invented by D^r A. after twenty years study. A paper beside it is inscribed, Vinegar of Saturn by D^r A. at the sign of the two Parrots.

Behind D'Eon's couch is a chest of drawers on which stands a bust of Wilkes (cf. No. 4865). A heavy curtain drapes the r. side of the design.

Beneath the title is engraved,

Miss Epicæne D'Eon is discover'd in close consultation with its Wine Merchant & Privy Counsellor. The Free-Masons beg the Secret of its Sex may be kept inviolable; the Committee of Under-writers on the other hand Petition for the Discovery, & propose that Mons: A shall explore the sexual Signature manually after the manner used on the election of a new Pope, for which purpose the Doctor is seen introducing his new invented Night Chair.

Another satire on the gambling insurances on the sex of d'Eon, see No. 4870, &c. For d'Eon as a Free Mason see No. 4865.

$7\frac{3}{16} \times 10\frac{1}{8}$ in.

4872 NO. 3. THE NUPTIALS OF MISS EPICÆNE D'EON.

Pub^d as the Act directs July 17: 1771.

Etching. No. 3 of a series, see No. 4870, &c. D'Eon (r.) dressed as a woman, is led by the hand by Wilkes towards an altar (l.), behind which stands a Jewish priest with two attendants. Wilkes holds the cap of liberty on a staff in his r. hand. Don Quixote, in armour, holds out his arms to prevent their approach to the altar. Behind d'Eon walks the wine-merchant holding aloft a trophy consisting of d'Eon's hat, sword, order of St. Louis, jack boots, and (?) breast-plate. He turns round to look with anxiety at Sancho Panza who is threatening with his fists a nude satyr in clerical wig and bands who carries an infant in his arms. The temple is indicated by large pillars (l.) and a heavily-draped curtain. Beneath the title is engraved,

The sex of Miss Epicæne being incontestibly determined by the Birth of a Male Child without the intervention of a husband, she is elected Queen of the Amazons, & chuses for her Royal Consort the Guardian & Protector of Liberty; but as they are proceeding to celebrate the Nuptial Rites in the Temple of the Amazons, Don Quixotte appears, defies the future husband to single combat, disputes his Right to her Person & declares that Miss Epicæne is a Virgin, though Sancho Panzais [sic] all the time in dispute with F—— & the trusty Wine Merchant (now her Amazonian Majesty's Standard-bearer) about the honour of being Foster-father to the Young Prince her Son.

'When the first policy was opened concerning D'Eons gender it was said with some mirth that the Chevalier was with child by Wilkes. Since the discovery of the fraud it is now said in sober sadness that M^r Wilkes has miscarried by M^{rs} D'Eon.' Midx Journal.¹

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 10\frac{1}{2}$ in. See No. 4873, a sequel.

¹ Transcript (n.d.) by Mr. Hawkins.

4873 DON QUIXOTE'S PROCESSION TO THE INSTALLATION

JULY 25th, 1771.

Publish'd according to act of Parliament, 25 July, 1771.

Etching. One of a series relating to d'Eon, probably No. 4, see No. 4870, &c., and a sequel to No. 4872. A procession, l. to r., conducting d'Eon dressed as a woman in a two-wheeled chair through the window of which his head appears. The chair is drawn by the wine-merchant, his bottles slung round his shoulders, and is pushed behind by a satyr on whose back is a large cylindrical package. Behind the chair and on the extreme l. of the design, walks Don Quixote, in triumph, carrying his sword and spear. Beside the chair walks Sancho Panza blowing a trumpet and carrying on his head a cradle in which sits an infant, the order of St. Louis round its neck. On the top of the cradle are d'Eon's hat, sword, and breast-plate. In front of the procession (r.) march two satyrs. The foremost blows pan-pipes, and flourishes a knotted whip; to his back are slung a pair of kettle-drums; he wears the jack boots of a French postilion. Behind him, the other satyr is performing, with a flourish, on the kettle-drums; he wears a cap, a long gown, and a pair of legal bands.

The (printed) title continues:

The Champion of liberty, is worsted by the Knight La Mancha, who with the Knights of St George were to Assemble at Windsor, resolves there to publish the peerless Beauty and rare Virtue of Miss D'Eon, Queen of Amazons, and dare to single Combat any Knight who should be hardy enough to gainsay it. His Entry was Marshal'd in the following Manner, first came her Majesty's Sage of the Law beating kettle Drums, types of his Profession, next followed the Queen drawn by her Wine-Merchant in a Vehicle known at Paris by the Name of Brouette,¹ by the side Marched Sancho bearing the Infant Prince in his Cradle, and last advanced the renowned & valourous Don Quixote.

On 25 July there was an installation of Knights of St. George at Windsor at which the king's three eldest sons (among others) were installed. Ann. Reg. 1771, 216-18.

7 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 10 in.

4874 A CONFAB ON THE EVENT OF A LATE ELECTION.

[c. July 1771]

Engraving. A copy of No. 4427, Carlton House Junto in fear and trembling, differing in several details, see No. 4867. The Princess and her supposed 'Junto' are in dismay at the election of Wilkes as sheriff at midsummer 1771 in spite of the efforts of the king. The Princess says: To have all power in y^e one hand, & all profit in y^e other, & yet not to be obeyed, is Oh, Grief of Griefs. North says: I depended on Horne & the Lottery. From his pocket hangs a paper, To B. Smith Liveryman. The next man says: Half a dozen would not have been Sufficient. Lord Holland (l.) says: Damn y^e Blockheads, they know not their own Interest, and is answered by the man next him: They have not half your Wisdom. The other three (r.) say: I would rather engage with y^e whole House of l—s [Lords]; I cannot call it Virtue, but a stubborn Brutality, to refuse such offers; Something must be done, lest they should be another Mordecai, & gall y^e pride of a —

The king had written to North hoping that no pains would be spared to secure the election of Plumbe and Kirkman, the two senior aldermen, next in succession for the office. Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, ii. 255-7. Robinson, Secretary to the Treasury, wrote to Benjamin Smith urging him to 'push the poll' against Wilkes; the letter was taken by mistake to another Smith (Wilkite) who published it with great effect, and 'set the mob a flame'. Sharpe, London and the Kingdom, iii. 121; Letters of Hume, ed. G. B. Hill, 212. Wilkes and Bull were elected by a large majority, the poll being declared on 3 July, see No. 4937. For the allusion to Horne, see No. 4861, &c. For 'the lottery', see an attack on North, 23 Apr. 1771, for using lottery tickets as bribes, Parl. Hist. xvii. 173-4. The allusion to the House of Lords is to the quarrel between the two Houses in December 1770, see Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1845, iv. 218 f.; Parl. Hist. xvi. 814 ff. Accusations against the Princess of Wales were revived by Alderman Townsend's speech on 25 March 1771, on 'the ambitious views of one aspiring woman . . . well known to direct the operations of our despicable Ministers'. Ibid. xvii. 135. See No. 4852. For the election see No. 4937.

¹ The Paris equivalent of a Sedan chair. See No. 4932.

4875 L^D S—K AND HIS SECRETARY LEARNING FRENCH.

[1 Aug. 1771]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vii. 12. Suffolk seated at a small round table with an open book scratches his head saying: D—n the French and the Language too. His instructor (r.) replies: Oh Mondieu my Lor you no Improve at all . . . A man (l.) with the Secretar[y's] Book under his arm stands behind Suffolk's chair saying: If I have a Secretary's Salary I am satisfied. On the table is a large book, Fre[nch] Dict[ionary].

Suffolk was appointed Secretary of State for the Northern Department 12 June, 1771; he had previously been Lord Privy Seal. For his ignorance of French see Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, ii. 205; Walpole's Reign of George III, 1894, iv. 173, 217; The Town and Country Magazine, iii. 345-8. See also Nos. 4652 (1772), 4876, 4908.

$3\frac{3}{8} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4876 THE DISTREST EARL OF THE SOUTHERN FOLK PRATING FRENCH TO HIS FRENCH SERVANTS IS BY THEM MISUNDERSTOOD.

[1 Aug. 1771]

Engraving. From Every Man's Magazine, i. 29. Probably an improved and corrected version of No. 4876 A. Lord Suffolk sits in a high-backed chair, repelling with a gesture of despair the ministrations of his French servants. He says: Zounds! how I am Plagued with these Blockheads. I can speak French well enough, but they will not understand me. His l. elbow rests on a table on which are writing materials and documents; one, a letter signed S—k, falls to the ground. At his feet is a book, The Grammar. Behind him (r.) stands a valet-de-chambre playing the violin and singing,

*Ah! Mon Cœur-plein d'Amour
Soupire pour un bon-Place a Cour fal al.*

A cook, black all over but wearing a bag-wig, enters from the r. with a long spit on which are two birds. Behind him is a servant with a wine bottle in one hand, he holds out to Suffolk a glass of wine on a salver. A valet or hairdresser approaches Suffolk from the l. holding out in one hand a phial of medicine, in the other a chamber pot; he says: Oh begar, my Lor parle Anglois & me entendez vous beacoup [sic] mieux; a comb is stuck in his hair, which hangs loose down his back and is decorated with curl papers. Behind him enters a groom wearing top-boots and carrying a saddle on his shoulders. He is saying: begar de Spanish Cow Speak better Franch, me no understand him. Behind him, and on the extreme l., a maidservant says: What! will he learn French before he can Speak plain English!

In the foreground (l.) an ape sits on the floor writing on a paper inscribed The Modern History. A large cauldron and two pans lie on the ground, apparently the result of orders which have been misunderstood. See No. 4875, &c.

$3\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4876A THE DISTREST EARL OF THE SOUTHERN FOLK, PRATING FRENCH TO HIS FRENCH SERVANTS, IS BY THEM MISUNDERSTOOD

Engraving. Another version, reversed, of No. 4876. The maidservant and the pots and pans are omitted. The words which the ape has written are turned so that they face the spectator not the writer. The words spoken are different: Suffolk says: They have not the least Idea, of the Paris Idion. [sic]—oh! mon Dieu! The violin-player says: Ah! Mon Cœur-plein d'Amour, pour un bon Place a Cour. The hairdresser says: Ici, Je vous entends. The groom says: Begar de Spanish Cow is more intelligable [sic]. The book on the ground is The Grammer.

$3\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4877 VICE TRIUMPHANT OVER VIRTUE OR BRITANNIA HARD RODE. [1 Aug. 1771]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vii. 29. Britannia crawls on hands and knees over her shield. Her broken spear is on the ground. The Princess of Wales sits on her back holding reins and a whip, and supported by Bute. Lord Mansfield and the duke of Grafton (l.) pull her along by a hook through the nose. Lord North standing behind them, says: Pull her right to North. Lord Sandwich (Jemmy Twitcher) aims a blow at her with his cricket bat, saying: Hook her fast & I'll give her a twitcher.¹ Hercules (r.) exclaims: Oh Britannia; thou hast Cast all Virtue aside or Virtue should now assist you. Hibernia (r.) reclines upon her harp, saying: They have Rob'ed me of every thing but my Harp. and are now tearing my Poor Sister to pieces. In the background (r.) a volcano is in violent eruption.

The explanatory text begins: 'Alas! poor Britannia!—To what a shocking situation art thou now reduced! Thy s——n [sovereign] is ridiculed, thy M——rs [Ministers] deservedly despised, detested and abominated! Thy people murmur and complain. Thy constitution is almost destroyed. Thou who was wont to be the envy of all Europe are now become the laughing-stock of the whole world.' It ends with an appeal for the removal of evil counsellors.

One of many satires on the supposed influence of Bute, Mansfield, and the Princess of Wales. See Nos. 4385, 4874, 4885, &c.

Grafton had declined responsibility by refusing a seat in the cabinet on his appointment as Lord Privy Seal, 12 June 1771, and had little influence. Autobiography, ed. Anson 1898, pp. xxxv, 264. Cf. No. 4859.

¹ See No. 4859 n.

$3\frac{7}{8} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

4878 THE PAGEANT.

[1 Aug. 1771]

Design'd & Engrav'd for the London Museum.

Engraving. London Museum, iv. 1. George III driving (r. to l.) in an ornate glass coach; facing him sits a courtier or minister wearing a ribbon. At the back of the coach in place of a footman sits a small demon holding over his shoulder a curiously shaped trident with barbed prongs which may represent one of the recently invented electrical appliances such as were used by Dr. Graham. A crowd of pedestrians run beside the coach, they are addressed by one of their number, who says: You Blackguards, why don't you halloo! Don't you know you are to be paid for it.

A line of trees and a curiously-drawn view of Westminster Abbey in the background indicate that the scene is the Mall.

A satire on the king's unpopularity; see also Nos. 4373, 4374.

$4\frac{5}{16} \times 6\frac{5}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5435 c.

4879 THE VICAR PURIFI'D BY THE SHADOW OF JUNIUS.

Pub^d accord^s to Act of Parl^t Aug^t 7th. 1771 by M. Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. Parson Horne (l.) starts in terror at the silhouette of a man (r.) whose face is blank who appears from clouds and threatens him with a fulmen formed of a pen and darts of lightning. Horne (dressed as a layman) has overturned his chair and table; his pens, ink, paper, and sand are on the floor. The Devil escapes from the window (l.).

Horne, having quarrelled with Wilkes, see No. 4861, &c., supported the ministerial candidates at the Sheriff's election, 24 June, see No. 4874. Junius thereupon attacked Horne in his Letter to the Duke of Grafton (9 July) ironically recommending him for preferment and accusing him of 'the solitary vindictive malice of a monk'. Horne replied vigorously (13 July) and evoked a letter from Junius to himself (24 July), sent to him through the printer of the Public Advertiser, ending, 'this letter you see is not intended for the public, but if you think it will do you any good you are at liberty to publish it'. Horne had it printed and retorted in a Letter to Junius (31 July). Another letter from Junius (15 Aug.) and one from Horne (17 Aug.) closed the controversy, in which Horne held his own. Letters of Junius, ed. C. W. Everett, 1927, 217 ff.; A. Stephens, Memoirs of Horne Tooke, 1813, i. 352 ff.

$7\frac{3}{8} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ in.

4880 WATKIN LEWES ESQ^r PRESENTING THE ADDRESSES FROM THE COUNTIES OF PEMBROKE, CARMARTHEN, & CARDIGAN, TO THE LORD MAYOR, ALDERMAN WILKES, & ALDERMAN OLIVER IN THE TOWER. [1 Sept. 1771]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vii. 70. In a room with stone walls and barred window Lewes (r.) presents the Cardigan Address to the Lord Mayor, Oliver reads that of Carmarthen, Wilkes holds that of Pembroke, the place-names being engraved on the respective documents. The three prisoners wear furred civic gowns.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*Thus Ancient Britons, gen'rous, bold & free,
Untaught at Court to bend the supple Knee,
Corruption's Shrine with honest Pride disdain
And only bow to Freedom's Patriot Train.*

During April the Lord Mayor received addresses from the three counties named and from the towns of Newcastle, Stratford, and Honiton, besides the freedom of the city of Worcester and of the town of Bedford. Ann. Reg., 1771, 100. Wilkes of course was not in the Tower; he had refused to obey the summons of the House of Commons and they had been afraid to enforce it. Lewes, a Welshman, a City attorney and prominent City Whig, became an Alderman in 1772, and was knighted in Feb. 1773, when sheriff. Beaven, Aldermen of the City of London, 1913, ii. 135, 200, &c. For the imprisonment of Crosby and Oliver see No. 4853, &c.

$5\frac{7}{16} \times 4\frac{1}{16}$ in.

4881 CHEVALIER D—E—N [D'EON] RETURN'D OR THE STOCK-BROKERS OUTWITTED. [1 Sept. 1771]

Etching. From the Oxford Magazine, vii. 56. Scene in a stockbroker's office, or perhaps in Jonathan's or Lloyd's, a room with a small writing-desk (r.) and on the wall a Table of Interest. D'Eon, dressed as a man, enters from the l. and is greeted by a stockbroker who takes his l. hand and points with his r. to other brokers on the r. who watch the entry, some with dismay, others with pleasure. D'Eon says: Well Broker, how have you Manag'd our Scheme. The broker answers: Glad to see you return'd Chevalier, we have took the Knocwing ones in Swingingly. One broker says to another: Oh Ch—st I've lost my all; the other answers: Let us Waddle off Quietly (a defaulter on the Stock Exchange was then called a lame-duck). A bearded Jew stooping over the desk with a pen in his hand, says: Ay and 'tis time for me to be going. Two men standing behind him say: I told you he would come back, and Ha! ha! ha! let them laugh that wins say I.

Another satire on the gambling policies taken out on D'Eon's sex, in which he was suspected of trafficking; his disappearances added to the mystery and suspicion which surrounded him. In May 1771 a caveat was entered at Doctors' Commons against his goods, as he had been advertised and no account could be had of him. Gent. Mag., 1771, 236. A comprehensive appeal to the Lord Mayor (in the Oxford Magazine, June 1771, vi. 193 ff.) to put down abuses in his jurisdiction attacks gambling insurances and especially 'the late scandalous transaction of the policies on D'Eon's sex'; 'He or she D'Eon absconds . . . and the premiums are irretrievably lost . . .' See Nos. 4862, 4865, 4870-3.

$3\frac{7}{16} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4882 LORD CHIEF JUSTICE MANSFIELD [1 Sept. 1771]

Design'd & Engrav'd for the Political Register.

Engraving. From the Political Register, ix. 57. Bust portrait (not caricatured) in an oval frame of Mansfield in wig and gown in profile to the l.

A smaller version of this, in a circle, appears in No. 4439 (1770). It illustrates an article on Thoughts, Reflections, and Considerations, on the abject Condition of the Great, especially Courtiers, and the folly of those, who seek Connections with them. Cf. No. 4884. For satires on Mansfield see No. 4440, &c. and index.

Oval, $3\frac{5}{8} \times 3\frac{1}{8}$ in.

4883 FARMER G—E, STUDYING THE WIND & WEATHER.

[1 Oct. 1771]

Etching. From the Oxford Magazine, vii. 88. The king in profile to the r. looks from a window (r.) through a reversed telescope at a weather-cock. He wears a night-cap and a dressing-gown of chequered (or tartan) material intended to indicate Scottish influence. A monkey (r.) on a chair beside him imitates him. A cat plays with a book lying open on the floor inscribed The Art of Government by Mechanick Rules. A dog sits on a torn document To . . . Remonstrances. Five children are playing with a rocking-horse, which the eldest boy, the Prince of Wales, is riding. On the wall is a W. L. portrait of Bute, his r. hand resting on a table on which is a crown, implying that he is the actual ruler of the country.

Like others of the series this print illustrates a supposed letter to the editor: 'T. S.' complains that 'a certain young farmer' neglects his farm and his flock 'while he is observing the fickleness of the wind or making a curious button, and a twopenny snuff-box', cf. Nos. 4380, 4417 (1771), 5573, and p. 494. For the king's attitude to Remonstrances presented by the City see Nos. 4386, 4387. Reproduced, M. D. George, England in Transition, 1931, p. 114.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{8}$ in.

4884 CAMDEN

[1 Oct. 1771]

CHATHAM

Design'd & Engrav'd for the Political Register.

Engraving. From the Political Register, ix. 105. Two bust portraits in ovals on one plate. This faces an article on 'The Patriot's Vision'. It is intended to contrast with No. 4882. For Camden see Nos. 4144, 4151.

Ovals, $2\frac{1}{4} \times 2$ in.

THE BLIND JUSTICE, & THE SECRETARIES ONE EYE & NO HEAD EXAMINING THE OLD WOMAN AND LITTLE GIRL, ABOUT THE FIREING PORTSMOUTH DOCK-YARD.

See No. 4405 [1 Oct. 1771]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vii. 96. A satire on the examination of suspects accused of firing Portsmouth Dock-yard on 27 July, 1770. These examinations took place in the summer and autumn of 1771, see Cal. H. O. Papers, 1770-1772, pp. lv, 312-20.

4885 THE EXCURSION TO CAIN WOOD.

[1 Nov. 1771]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vii. 128. Mansfield and the Princess of Wales fly through the air r. to l. astride a broom-stick towards Caen Wood or Ken Wood (Mansfield's country house). This is indicated by a thick grove of trees on the top of which Bute and Sir Fletcher Norton wait their arrival attended by a fiddling demon. Bute beckons to them; Mansfield says: Liberty is to me a Joke but our Friends Madam at C——n Wood will advise us what to do. The Princess sits behind him saying: My Lord is my sure Councillour, what he dictates shall be a Law. A demon as a running footman carries a document inscribed: A Plan for turning Guildhall into a stable for the K——s Horses; tied to his legs are papers, Plan for a Coalition and Proceedings at Guildhall. A Scottish demon (r.) urges on the broom-stick with a pair of bellows. In the corner (r.) Wilkes says to the Lord Mayor: These birds of Ill-omen forbode no good to Liberty. The Mayor replies: We'll be firm to the last and fear them not! Only their heads and shoulders appear above the lower margin. Behind their heads London is in flames, indicating the supposed designs of the Court on the liberties of the City.

One of many satires on the supposed influence of Bute, the Princess Dowager of Wales, and Mansfield. See No. 4877, &c.

6 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

4886 N° XXX. Vol. III. THE CITY RACE.

[1 Nov. 1771]

Engraving. From the Town and Country Magazine, iii. 529. Illustration to 'The City Race; or, a peripatetic Dialogue amongst the late Candidates for the Mayoralty, and the Sheriffs'. The five candidates race from r. to l. across an open space towards their goal, the Mansion House, part of the façade of which is in the background. The foremost is supported on crutches, inscribed Treasury; he is William Nash elected through the support of the Ministry. He and the next three, Sawbridge, Townsend, and Hallifax are hurrying with outstretched arms. The last walks with folded arms, he is Sir Henry Bankes who was at the bottom of the poll with 36 votes. A sixth alderman has fallen to the ground, and lies face downwards, he is Brass Crosby the late Lord Mayor. Two dogs fight in the foreground (l.), one with his collar inscribed Court hast he other by the throat. In the background (r.) a mob is being harangued by Parson Horne (see No. 4861, &c.), who leans from an open window. The two sheriffs, Wilkes and Bull, are near with their staves. Bull attempts to restrain the mob; Wilkes turns his back on the disturbance holding the cap of liberty on his staff.

The mayoral election, polling for which lasted from 28 Sept. to 3 Oct., was a victory for the Court, achieved in spite of an impassioned address from Junius to the Livery, urging them to elect Crosby and Sawbridge. Sharpe, London and the Kingdom, iii. 127-8; Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1894, iv. 229-30; Beaven, Aldermen of London, ii, p. xxvi. Cf. No. 4887.

3 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

4887 PATRIOTICK METEORS

[1 Nov. 1771]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xl. 520. Three heads, their necks decorated by civic chains, are being drawn swiftly through the air into the gaping jaws of a hippopotamus (l.) inscribed The Gulf of Oblivion. The foremost is Wilkes, after him comes Brass Crosby, the outgoing Lord Mayor, and last a bull, representing Frederick Bull, who had recently been elected sheriff with Wilkes. On the ground is a furred livery gown on which rest the city arms and two sheriff's staves. Beneath the design is engraved Exitus acta probat.

One of the few anti-Wilkite satires, cf. No. 5245; it seems to represent correctly the actual state of opinion,¹ which had been much influenced by the quarrel of Wilkes with Parson Horne, Sawbridge, Townsend, and Oliver. See Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1894, iv. 200, 202. Cf. No. 4886. Wilkes's popularity with the mob continued, though Walpole wrote 15 Dec. 1771, Letters, viii. 122, 'Wilkes is almost as dead as Sacheverell, though sheriff'. Nevertheless he was voted a cup by the Common Council, Jan. 1772, see No. 5237.

This plate was used in the Hibernian Magazine, i. 577 [1 Jan. 1772].

$4\frac{3}{4} \times 7$ in. (pl.).

4888 THE GREAT LUMINARY OF THE LAW. [1 Dec. 1771]

Etching. From the Political Register, ix. 233. The head of Bathurst, full-face, in a judge's wig, transfixes on the very elongated wick which projects from a candle in a candlestick. Beneath is engraved a parody of Pope's epigram on Newton:

*England & England's Laws lay hid in Night,
Bute said let Bathurst be — and all was Light.*

Henry Bathurst was made Lord Chancellor and Baron Apsley on 23 Jan. 1771, and is generally agreed to have been the least efficient Lord Chancellor of the eighteenth century.

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ in. (pl.).

4889 ROCKINGHAM [1 Dec. 1771] TEMPLE

Design'd & Engrav'd for the Political Register.

Engraving. From the Political Register, ix. 169. Two bust portraits in ovals on one plate (the print has been cut into two).

This faces an article called 'Idea of a well-policed State', in which the House of Lords is to be 'the bust and trunk' of the constitution of the British Commonwealth, and is 'to direct the operations of liberty . . .' Indicative of the unpopularity of the House of Commons, cf. Nos. 4850, 4869, 4893, 4970.

Ovals, $2\frac{1}{4} \times 1\frac{15}{16}$ in.

4890 [MARRIAGE OF THE DUKE OF CUMBERLAND.]

[1 Dec. 1771]

Woodcut. From the Town and Country Magazine, iii. 581. Three figures: in the centre Colonel Luttrell stands threatening the Duke of Cumberland (l.) with a whip, while he points with his l. hand to a lady (r.) seated primly in profile to the l., her r. hand raised. Luttrell says: The Honour of my

¹ At this time there was a lull in political violence: cf. Burke, 31 July, 1771. 'As to news we have little. After a noted fermentation in the nation, as remarkable a deadness and vapidity has succeeded it.' Corr. i. 256. Cf. Ann. Reg., 1772. i. 82.

Family; Cumberland answers with a propitiatory gesture: I'll marry her indeed. The lady, Mrs. Horton, says: I shall be a Royal Duchess.

The woodcut illustrates 'A Trio; or a Dialogue amongst three very respectable Personages, a P——e [Prince] without Brains, a Member without Suffrages, and a Duchess without a Title'. Cumberland's illiterate love-letters had been satirized in Nos. 4400, 4401, 4402; on his affair with Lady Grosvenor, see No. 4845. For Luttrell, notorious as Wilkes's opponent at the Middlesex election, see No. 4284, &c.

The marriage between the Duke and Anne Luttrell, daughter of Lord Innham and widow of Christopher Horton, took place on 2 Oct. 1771. See Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1894, iv. 236 ff.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in.

4891 A CITIZEN OF THE WORLD SEARCHING FOR A WISE PRINCE.

Engraving. Frontispiece to The New Foundling Hospital for Wit, Part IV, 1771. A blindfolded man walking in an empty street carrying a lantern. He wears a long furred civic gown. On a sign-board projecting from the corner of an adjacent house is a bust portrait of the Princess Dowager of Wales in profile to the r., inscribed O thou Head of the Wrong Heads! From the end of the bar supporting the board hangs a jack-boot, the emblem of Bute, in allusion to the supposed liaison between Bute and the Princess, see No. 3848 (1762), &c. From the toe of the boot hangs a bunch of grapes, the sign of wine for sale. On a distant house is a sign-board on which is a royal crown. Beneath the design is engraved,

*Alack, there lies more Peril in thine Eye,
Than twenty of their Swords.*

Shakespeare.

For the supposed influence of the Princess Dowager of Wales, see Nos. 4427, 4867, 4874, 4885.

$4\frac{9}{16} \times 2\frac{3}{4}$ in.

B. M. L. 992. a. 4

4892 THE YOUNG POLITICIAN.

[? 1771]

Publish'd accord^s to Act by H. Bryer London

Engraving. A young man, slim and elegant, with the head and tail of a fox seated between two hairdressers. He tears fragments from Magna Charta to be used as curl-papers. He is draped in a sheet, below which appear flowered breeches. A valet with a Last dying Speech hanging from his pocket holds a mirror. On a chair are a flowered coat and sword with a paper Inquiries into the late Riots (cf. No. 4850). On the floor are A petition to the Commission[ers] of the Customs, a book entitled A New Essay on Politick By C — F — Esq^r and a bag of Poudre à la Maréchale. On a table are jars inscribed Bergamot, essence, rouge. A bust [?Wilkes] is on a pedestal inscribed Cato bewailing the loss of Liberty. On brackets on the wall are statuettes of Venus and the three Graces and a clock whose hands indicate that the time is 12.30 (or 6).

For other satires of Fox as petit-maître and enemy of liberty see Nos. 4810 (1773) and 4811 (1771).

$8\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{3}{8}$ in

4893 LORD CHIEF JUSTICE HOLT, THREATENING TO COMMIT THE SPEAKER &C. OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

[?1771]¹

Engraving. Holt (l.) sits above and between two other judges in Westminster Hall. He addresses a man in the Speaker's robes (r.) who covers his face with his hand and walks away abashed. A crowd stands round. This illustrates a mythical story current in the eighteenth century that during the famous case of Ashby v. White, 1701, in which Holt upheld the rights of voters against the corrupt assertion of privilege by the Commons, the Speaker in full state with a train of attendants entered the Court and threatened to commit the judge. On this Holt ordered him to begone or he would commit him, had he all the House of Commons in his belly. The application to the hated Speaker, Fletcher Norton, who had signed the warrant for the arrest of the Lord Mayor and Oliver (see No. 4853, &c.) was obvious. See Junius's Letter of 22 Apr. 1771 on parliamentary privilege. For the unpopularity of the House of Commons cf. Nos. 4850, 4860, 4869, 4889, 4970.

5 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 3 $\frac{7}{16}$ in.

4894 THE CHILD; OR A LEGACY FOR THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

[n.d. 1771]

Etching. From the stage of a theatre, two figures address the audience: Charles Fox (l.) with a fox's head, holds under his l. arm a tray in which are two doll-like infants in swaddling bands; in his r. hand is a paper inscribed, Norton & Fox Sponsors. He is saying: Discovered by the Secret Committee. In the centre is another man with a wide open mouth, whose head is perhaps intended for that of a dolphin. He holds a paper inscribed The Child of the People. On the r. of the stage is part of a fountain supported by a satyr. On each side of the stage are two tiers of boxes; in the lower box on the r. Punch is talking to a lady.

On 10 April 1771 an infant was found near the House of Commons, by a fruit woman, who collected money for its maintenance from members of the House. It was reported (Oxford Magazine, 1771, p. 157) that the child was to be baptized Fletcher Norton after the Speaker, and that he and Charles Fox were to be god-parents. An interesting indication of the impression already made by Fox, cf. No. 4892.

3 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 7 $\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

4895-4902

A series of engravings by Grignion after Wale of historical incidents; they illustrate articles in the Oxford Magazine, applying the subject of the print to the politics of the day; see also Nos. 4445-55 (1770).

4895 CONFERENCE BETWEEN THE EARL OF PORTLAND AND MARSHALL BOUFLERS.

[1 Feb. 1771]

S. Wale del.

C. Grignion sculp.

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 31. Two officers on horseback conferring; tents and horsemen in the distance. The design is in an oval with a frame composed of oakleaves and architectural ornament.

¹ This should be dated 1 May 1774; it is from the Sentimental Magazine, ii. 148.

A representation of the conference before the Peace of Ryswick (1697). Bentinck is compared with his descendant the 3rd duke of Portland (1738-1809), especially in connexion with the attempt to dispossess the Duke of Inglewood Forest, giving rise to the Act to limit the principle of Nullum Tempus occurrit Regi, see No. 4851. Junius attacked Lowther for this in his Letter to the Duke of Grafton, 22 June 1771.

$3\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ in. (pl.).

4896 SCOTCH PRIDE HUMBLED OR THE REBELLION
CRUSHED MDCCXLV. [1 Mar. 1771]

S. Wale del.

C. Grignion sculp.

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 70. Three highlanders (l.) in tartan, their weapons on the ground, kneel bonnet in hand before three mounted English officers (r.); a standing soldier directs their submission. In the distance are English soldiers and a castle (l.). The design is surrounded by a frame headed by a trophy composed of a crown, laurel wreath, and weapons.

The plate illustrates an article contrasting the present Duke of Cumberland, who is attacked for his affair with Lady Grosvenor (see Nos. 4440, 4441, 4844), and the previous holder of the title. Scotland and the Scots are also attacked.

$4\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

4897 THE GIFT OF NEPTUNE, OR BRITAINS BULWARK.

[1 Apr. 1771]

S. Wale del.

C. Grignion sculp.

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 110. Neptune, his trident in his r. hand, points with his l. hand to Britannia seated (r.), with her sword and spear. He is showing her to a minister (l.) wearing the ribbon of an order. Behind is Neptune's car, the horses emerging from the water held by a triton who is blowing his horn. On the l. appears the stern of a man of war, flying the Union flag. The design is in a frame decorated by nautical emblems. The plate illustrates 'a vision' which ends '... how came Britannia to loose [sic] Falkland Islands?' See No. 4849, &c.

$4\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{5}{8}$ in. (pl.).

4898 THE AUSPICES, OR THE BIRTH OF THE PRESENT PRINCE
OF WALES. [1 May 1771]

S. Wale del.

C. Grignion sculp.

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 149. George III and Queen Charlotte direct the presentation by Diana of the infant prince to Jupiter, who is seated on clouds; across his eagle lies a scroll inscribed Nascenti Puero. A female figure reclining on clouds points to emblems of Justice and Liberty, and to a rampant British lion. On a colonnade are medallion portraits: Georgius, Fredericus, and Georgius II. Through an archway is a street, apparently the Strand, where a wagon decorated by the Union flag and the Royal Standard is being cheered by the passers-by. This is the procession to the Tower of the treasure taken from Spain during the Seven Years' War. The design is in a frame decorated by a crown, garlands of flowers, cherubs' heads, and architectural ornament.

The accompanying text reminds readers of the auspices of the Prince's birth on 12 Aug. 1762: 12 Aug. (n.s.) was the day of the accession of the Brunswick family to the English Crown. 12 Aug. 1762 was the day of the arrival of the Spanish treasure. But, 'If an increase of liberty were really pognosticated [sic] by this prince's nativity, How comes it, that the freedom of election has been infringed, the decision by juries has been abridged, murderers have been screened, pardoned, rewarded' (an allusion to the reprieve of Kennedy, see No. 4844, &c., and the so-called Massacre of St. George's Fields, see No. 4196, &c.) . . . 'and the greatest civil magistrate in the kingdom confined in the English Bastile for not acting contrary to his oath, and the charter of his corporation, and after refused his right to a habeas corpus, and release, which is the birth-right of every Englishman founded on MAGNA CHARTA . . .' See No. 4853, &c.

5 × 6½ in. (pl.).

4899 MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS SENDING HER RING TO LORD

JOHN HAMILTON

[1 June 1771]

S. Wale del.

C. Grignion sculp.

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 185. Queen Mary (l.), standing on a dais in a pillared room, gives a ring to a man who stands facing her, cap in hand. The royal arms of Scotland are over a partly-opened door through which Gothic arches are partly visible. The design is surrounded by a frame of conventional ornament.

This illustrates 'Memoirs of John Marquis Hamilton' [1532-1604], a panegyric on his loyal services to Mary and James VI; his descendants are urged to 'Go and do likewise'. The political intention is obscure since personal loyalty to the Crown by Scotsmen was regarded with high disfavour. The actual Duke of Hamilton (Douglas, 8th duke) was a minor.

4 × 4¼ in. (pl.).

4900 THE MARQUIS OF DORCHESTER ADDRESSING THE MILITIA OF NOTTINGHAMSHIRE AT NEWARK.

[1 July 1771]

S. Wale del.

C. Grignion sculp.

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 222. From a platform under an arcade, a man (r.) in a long gown addresses a crowd in a market-place, surrounded by buildings. Below the platform (l.) are six men sitting at a table. The design is in a rectangular frame, decorated with garlands of oakleaves, a mace, &c. This illustrates 'Memoirs of the Marquis of Dorchester [1606-80], one of the Ancestors of the duke of Kingston', the episode illustrated being a speech 'to the trained band of Nottinghamshire at Newark, July 13, 1641' [sic i.e. 1642]. A panegyric on the virtue, political moderation, and learning of Dorchester, with an implied contrast to the character of modern peers.

3⅞ × 3⅞ in. (pl.).

4901 THE ALARM; OR EXECUTION OF LADY JANE GREY.

[1 Aug. 1771]

S. Wale del.C. Grignion sculp.

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vii. 24. Lady Jane (centre) stands on the scaffold, pointing to the block with her l. hand; she hands a book to a man on her r. The headsman stands behind the block; five other persons are on the scaffold. In the foreground appear the heads of spectators. In the background is the Tower of London. The design is in an octagonal frame, surmounted by drapery and a pediment beneath which are two skulls and an axe. The accompanying text describes the execution as 'one among the many instances where innocence has been punished while infamy has been rewarded'.

3 $\frac{9}{16}$ × 4 $\frac{5}{16}$ in. (pl.).4902 THE DUKE OF LEEDS RELATING TO CHARLES 2^D A REMARKABLE CIRCUMSTANCE OF HIS ANCESTOR.

[1 Sept. 1771]

S. Wale del.C. Grignion sc.

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vii. 49. Charles (l.), seated and wearing a hat, in conversation with two men, one standing and gesticulating, the other seated. The background is the wall of a room or gallery, hung with pictures; to the r. is a door. The design is in a rectangular frame decorated with garlands of leaves, &c.

Sir Thomas Osborne or Lord Danby, afterwards duke of Leeds, is narrating the well-known story of his grandfather Sir Edward Osborne, Lord Mayor of London, who as an apprentice is reputed to have saved from drowning the infant daughter of his master, whom he afterwards married. The text remarks, 'it were to be wished, that some of our new made nobility had any thing that reflected so much honour upon their family.'

3 $\frac{11}{16}$ × 4 $\frac{5}{16}$ in. (pl.).

1771

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL SATIRES.

4470, 4903-4912

Series of Tête-à-Tête portraits.

N° XXXVII. THE SUBTLE SINNER [1 Jan. 1771]
 N° XXXVIII. SIR SIMONY SCRUPLE. See No. 4470

An account of the Rev. Martin Madan.

4903 N° II. THE STABLE-YARD MESSALINA Vol. III
 N° III. THE HOSTILE SCRIBE [1 Feb. 1771]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of Lord B——n [Barrington] and L——y H' [Harrington], between whom a 'permanent connexion' is alleged. An account of the political career and amours of Viscount Barrington (1717-93), styled 'Hostile Scribe' on account of the letters written by him as Secretary at War approving the conduct of the soldiers at the riot of 10 May 1768, see Nos. 4196-4202. The amours of Lady Harrington and her husband, both of notoriously bad reputation, are recounted. Their town house was known as the Stable Yard (St. James's Palace), see No. 5033. She is said to have damaged her reputation by association with Miss A——h and other 'demi-reps of the same class', that is Miss Ashe, the 'Pollard Ashe' of Walpole's Letters, who was reputed to be the daughter of the Princess Amelia and Rodney. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, i. 224 and n.

For the intimacy between Miss Ashe and Lady Caroline Petersham, afterwards Lady Harrington, see Walpole, Letters, ii. 452-6, &c. Walpole alludes in 1759 to a liaison between Lady Harrington and Barrington, Letters, iv. 332.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4904 N° IV. MISS H—— L——BE Vol. III
 N° V. THE DISGUSTED SECRETARY. [1 Mar. 1771]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or Memoirs of L——d W—— and Miss Harriot L—mbe'. Weymouth's resignation of the Secretaryship in December 1770 is mentioned with approval, but the 'Memoirs' are chiefly concerned with his career 'as a gentleman, a bon vivant, and a man of gallantry'.

Harriot Lambe is a well-known courtesan who is said to have borrowed her name from 'Sir P——n—g—n L—mbe (now Lord M——ne)' [Melbourne].

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4905 N° VII. [sic.] M^{RS} D—V—S. Vol. III

N° VIII. LORD C—GH. [1 Apr. 1771]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 113. Two bust portraits in oval frames, 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed.' An account of the career and amours of Lord Catherlough, son of Robert Knight, Cashier to the South Sea Company. Miss Davis is the daughter of a farmer, and has lived with him 'near seven years', at his house in Golden Square.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4906 N° X. MISS EV—NS. Vol. III

N° XI. THE SORRY MOTION MAKER. [1 May 1771]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the Sorry Motion Maker and Miss Ev—ns'. An account of George Onslow (1731–1814) afterwards first Earl of Onslow, not to be confused with his cousin George Onslow (1731–92), 'little Cocking George', see No. 4855. The name is an allusion to his motions in the Commons on 14 and 15 Apr. 1769, that Wilkes's election for Middlesex was null and void, and that Luttrell ought to have been returned.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 8442 b.

4907 N° XIII. M^{RS} M—RSH—L. Vol. III

N° XIV. LORD VAINLOVE. [1 June 1771]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed. . . .' An account of Viscount Vane (1714–89) who married in 1735 the widow of Lord William Hamilton, notorious for paying Smollett to insert her Memoirs of a Lady of Quality in Peregrine Pickle.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

N° XVI. MISS P—TT.¹ Vol. III

N° XVII. MUNGO. [1 July 1771]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 289. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of Miss Pr—tt and Mungo'. The lady holds in her hand a miniature, which is that of 'Mungo'. A hostile account of Jeremiah Dyson. After ending his association with Mrs. Brown, a courtesan in Pall Mall, he met Miss Pratt, the daughter of a deceased half-pay officer. After being seduced she was forced by a so-called mantua-maker to become a prostitute. Mungo is now infatuated with her. Lord Percy is also attached.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

¹ The June number is missing from the B.M. copy of the magazine, its place being supplied by the number for June 1772. This is taken from a copy in the London Library.

4908 N° XIX. M^{RS} M—LLS. Vol. III

N° XX. LORD S—K. [1 Aug. 1771]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed. . . .' An account of Lord Suffolk, his ignorance of French, and his alleged amours. For Suffolk, see Nos. 4652, 4875, 4876.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4909 N° XXII. M^{RS} D—KE Vol. III

N° XXIII. JOHN OF THE HILL. [1 Sept. 1771]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the Duke of R— and Mrs. D—ke.' An account of John, third duke of Rutland, 1696–1779, described as living like a patriarch at Belvoir Castle with his mistress, Mrs. Drake, his wife's lady's maid at her death in 1734, since when she has presided at his table, where her brother stands as valet-de-chambre behind his master's chair. His son by her, Mr. M—rs [Manners], was a captain in the foot-guards, his daughter, Miss M—rs, married Thomas Thornton, M.P. for Bramber. A plan is given showing the arrangement of a dinner at Belvoir Castle, at which the Duke and Mrs. Drake sit side by side, and the guests include the duke's grandchildren by his mistress, and his son's mistress 'commonly called Little Infamy D—vis'.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4910 N° XXV. M^{RS} W—LLS. Vol. III

N° XXVI. ADMIRAL K—L [1 Oct. 1771]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 457. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed. . . .' An account of the naval career and amours of Admiral Keppel. For Mrs. Sarah W—lls he is alleged to have furnished a house in Park Lane, settling on her £500 a year, with 'a genteel equipage' and the finest hunters, since she is a noted horsewoman.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4911 N° XXVIII. M^{RS} S—MS. Vol. III

N° XXIX. THE SAVING STEWARD [1 Nov. 1771]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 513. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of Lord T— and Mrs. S—ms'. An account of William, Earl Talbot (1710–82), Steward of the Household, alleged to be penurious. For attacks on his economies in the royal kitchen see Nos. 3914, 3989, &c. (1762).

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4912 N° XXXI. MISS J—NS—N [1 Dec. 1771]

N° XXXII. L—T—W—Y

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 569. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed. . . .' An account of the military career and amours of James O'Hara, second Lord Tyrawley (1690-1773).

CATALOGUE OF POLITICAL AND PERSONAL SATIRES

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

DARLY, P. O. A. G. B.

See No. 4632—1 Jan. 1771

Portrait of Darly the artist and publisher of prints. Pub. Darly.

4913-4918

and related numbers catalogued in vol. iv

Darly's Series of Caricatures.

Between 1771 and 1773 Matthew Darly issued six sets of twenty-four 'Caricatures', 'Macaronies', and 'Characters', which he reissued in six volumes, each with an etched title-page. Simultaneously, he was issuing at least two other similar series of larger prints, one approximately 9×13 , the other 6×9 in. A number of the plates in these three series were described in volume iv of this catalogue. Since its publication a complete set of the series in six volumes has been acquired. The order in the volume is not always that of publication. These volumes deal particularly with the macaroni, a word for an extravagantly dressed and usually effeminate fop, which came into general use from about 1770, and apparently derived from the Macaroni Club 'composed of all the travelled young men who wear long curls and spying glasses'. Walpole, 6 Feb. 1764. The macaroni superseded the beau and anticipated the dandy; he was démodé by 1776. Cf. F. Burney, Diary, ii. 105 (1775) the 'present ton is not Macaronism'.

Darly was the publisher par excellence of prints of macaronies which were much in vogue from 1771 to 1773, his print shop being 'The Macaroni Printshop', see No. 4701. Many of the prints in these three series were reissued with others in a volume with a title-page dated 1 Jan. 1776, see No. 5369.

VOLUME I.

24 CARICATURES · BY · SEVERAL · LADIES · GENTLEMEN ·
ARTISTS · &C. PUB^D BY M DARLY. STRAND.

See No. 4710—1 Nov. 1771

1. THE DOG BARBER¹

See No. 4668—25 Apr. 1771

After Bunbury.

V. 1. 2. MON^R LE MEDECIN.

See No. 4670—13 June 1771

[?After Bunbury.]

V. 1. 3. A MACARONI

See No. 4671—4 May 1771

After E. Topham.

4. THE CITY TONSOR.

See No. 4672—1 July 1771

5. MON^R LE FRIZUER.

See No. 4673—2 May 1771

¹ Coloured impressions are in the B.M. Bunbury Collection.

4913 [6] FRENCH PEASANT.¹

[After Bunbury.]

Pub^d accord^s to Act of Parll^t June 7th 1771 by M. Darly, 39 Strand.

Engraving. A woman standing in profile to the l. She is neatly dressed and wears a cap with a frilled border, and a striped apron. Her hands are in a large fur muff; she wears shoes or small neat sabots and a cross hangs from her neck.

5½ × 3½ in.

Another impression (coloured), having the same publication line and the number 6, with the title Peasant of the Alps, see No. 4674.V. I. 7. PEASANT OF THE ALPS.¹ See No. 4675—2 Apr. 1771

After Bunbury.

An original etching by Bunbury of this subject in reverse is in B.M. It differs from this plate: the background and foreground indicate undulating grass; fur tails protrude from the man's pocket. Paysan des Alpes is etched on the plate which is signed H. Bunbury fec.

8. FRENCH · PEASANT. See No. 4677—1 Apr. 1771

After Bunbury.

An original etching by Bunbury of this subject is No. 4751.

V. I. 9. FRENCH · LEMONADE · MERCHANT.¹
See No. 4782—[18 June 1771][After Bunbury.] pub^d T. Scratchley.²10. THE PARIS SHOE CLEANER¹ See No. 4679—[1 July 1771]

[After Bunbury.]

4914 11. AMINADAB.Pub^d accord^s to Act by M. Darly Nov^r 2^d 1771 N^o 39 Strand.

Engraving. A man standing in profile to l., his mouth wide open as if declaiming. Lank hair falls on his shoulders. He wears a low broad-brimmed hat, and is plainly dressed. His hands (gloved) appear to be clasped upon his stomach. Perhaps the portrait of a dissenting preacher.

5¾ × 3¾ in.

V. I. 12. THE TURF-MACARONI See No. 4634—2 Jan. 1771
The Duke of Grafton.V. I. 13. ΜΑΣΤΙΓΕΥΣ See No. 4680—1 July 1771
[?After Bunbury.] Probably Dr. Samuel Smith, see No. 4921.V. I. 14. HAPPY PEASANT¹ See No. 4681—2 Aug. 1771
[After Bunbury.]¹ Coloured impressions are in the B.M. Bunbury Collection.² Cf. No. 4919.

4915 V. I. 15. GANYMEDE.

[M. Darly fec.]

Pub^d according to Act of Parl^t March 1st 1771 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. A man standing in profile to the r., a cane in his r. hand; his l. is inside his waistcoat. His shoulders are round, almost to deformity. He wears a looped hat and ruffled shirt.

A portrait of Samuel Drybutter, bookseller in Westminster Hall, convicted of an unnatural offence in 1771. B.M. Cat. Engr. Br. Portraits. See No. 4305 (Drybutter not Vaughan).

$5\frac{3}{8} \times 3\frac{15}{16}$ in.

4916 16. THE FRENCH MAROW-BONE SINGER.

Pub^d as the Act Directs Oct. 1st 1771, by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. A man (W.L.) stands in profile to the r., his mouth wide open as if singing. In his r. hand he holds blank sheets of paper evidently intended for music. His l. hand holds the r. side of his coat. His hair is in an enormously long queue bound with ribbon. His hat is under his r. arm. He wears a large cravat, his shirt sleeves are frilled but his stockings are conspicuously patched. Probably the portrait of a French singer at Marylebone (then often called 'Marrowbone') Gardens depicted in the stock character of the beggarly Frenchman dressed in shabby finery.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{7}{8}$ in.

17. DOCTOR GRUEL.

See No. 4682—3 Oct. 1771

Identified in an old hand as Lord L——n. [Lansdowne?]. On another impression he has been identified as Sir Nash Grose. He strongly resembles No. 4917. He appears to be wearing a legal wig and gown which would make the identification with Sir Nash Grose more probable. The wig resembles that worn by serjeants at law, see No. 5900; Grose (1740–1814) did not become a serjeant till 1774. D.N.B.)

4917 V. I. 18. THE ENGLISH JESUIT.

Pub^d according to Act of Parl^t by M Darly Oct 7th 1771.

Engraving. Man standing stiffly in profile to the r., head thrown back with a contemptuous scowl. His l. hand resting on a cane. He wears a low broad-brimmed hat, a tightly-curved wig, buttoned coat, and gloves. The etching appears to be a copy of Humility, No. 4795. The same figure appears conspicuously (attending a quaker's meeting) in No. 4794. He strongly resembles No. 4682, and is probably intended either for Nash Grose or Lord Lansdowne (then Shelburne) to whom the title would apply, from the well-known name of Malagrida, the notorious Portuguese Jesuit, given to him in the Public Advertiser of 16 Sept. 1767. It is not unlike some portraits of Lansdowne, but is very different from the later caricatures, see No. 6022, &c. Also a coloured impression without 'V. I.'

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{15}{16}$ in.

V. I. 19. A CONNOISEUR ADMIRING A DARK NIGHT-PEICE

See No. 4683—12 Nov. 1771

Caricature portrait of Captain Grose.

- V. I. 20. A HALF-PAY OFFICER, WHO HAS BEEN AT DINNER
WITH CAP^N BROAD See No. 4684—26 Oct. 1771
21. MON^{SR} LE. VIRTU' See No. 4685—3 Nov. 1771
- Caricature portrait of Dr. Bragge.
- V. I. 22. MY LORD TIP-TOE. JUST ARRIVED FROM MONKEY
LAND. See No. 4686—5 Nov. 1771
- V. I. 23. THE LILLY MACARONI. See No. 4687—13 Nov. 1771
- The Earl of Ancrum.
- V. I. 24. THE MARTIAL MACARONI. See No. 4711—6 Nov. 1771
- Ensign Horneck.
- Four prints in Darly's second volume, see Nos. 4986-9, are dated 1771.

Five prints from another series by Darly, see p. 38.

4918 13. VIEW ON THE PONT NEUF AT PARIS.

H. W. Bunbury Inv^t

Pub^d accord^s to Act of Parl^t by M Darly 39 Strand Oct 1st 1771.

Where may be had all the Works of Mr. Bunbury, &c.

Engraving. A smaller version reversed of No. 4763 of the same date published by John Harris. Some of the same characters appear in No. 4919. $8\frac{7}{8} \times 13\frac{1}{2}$ in.

15. THE MASQUERADE DANCE See No. 4635—8 Dec. 1771

16. THE LONDON-JOCKIES, GOING TO NEWMARKET.
See No. 4636—14 Dec. 1771

21. BOARDING SCHOOL EDUCATION.
See No. 4639—Oct. 19, 1771

31. THE WELL FED ENGLISH CONSTABLE.
See No. 4641—Oct. 1, 1771

Reproduced, Manchée, Westminster City Fathers, 1924, p. 28.

4919 A VIEW OF THE PLACE DES VICTORIES [sic] AT PARIS.

T. Scratchley [M. Darly] Sc. [c. 1771]

B—[Bunbury] Inv^t

Engraving. Publication line cut off. Perhaps belongs to the same series as No. 4918, which it closely resembles. A street scene, the curving line of the houses of the Place des Victoires with the monument to Louis XIV forming the background. The central figure is a coachman, dressed as in No. 4763, his hands in a large muff; he stands talking to a peasant woman. A lawyer, an umbrella under his arm, is having his shoes cleaned by a décrotteur on the extreme l., the sign, resembling that in No. 4679, is inscribed, A La Dauphine S^t Louis Décrottevé [sic]; from it a shoe-brush dangles. The lawyer ignores a one-legged beggar holding out his hat. The dog-barber is not present, but a newly-shaved dog sits behind the coachman. On the extreme r. walks a hairdresser, his hands in a large muff; he looks over his shoulder at a girl carrying a basket. In the background are coaches, a mounted soldier, a gendarme, pedestrians, another décrotteur plying his trade.

$8\frac{11}{16} \times 11\frac{1}{4}$ in.

THE · KITCHEN · OF · A · FRENCH · POST · HOUSE

See No. 4764—1 Feb. 1771

After Bunbury, pub. John Harris.

A smaller version was published by Darly with the same date and was included in the volume with the title-page dated 1 Jan. 1776, see No. 5369.

LE CABRIOLET

See under No. 4633—17 Mar. 1771

Bunbury, pub. Darly.

This plate was reissued with the date 17 Apr. 1772 as No. 8 in a series by Darly, see No. 5056, etc.

4920 THE JUDGMENT OF PARIS

H. W. Bunbury fecit et a cere incidit 1766.

Pub. accor to Act by [name erased] . . . 1st 1771

Engraving. Another version, reversed and differing in many details, of No. 4752; etched by Bunbury (1750—1811) when a Westminster schoolboy. Outside a thatched cottage, partly visible on the l., Paris, a loutish peasant, hands the apple to an old harridan holding a fan and wearing a very wide hoop. Cupid, a hideous boy, holding a bow, is partly concealed by her petticoat. Juno (?), a hideous hag, strides towards them, brandishing a bottle. Minerva (?) in a soldier's coat and grenadier's cap, inscribed J.R. [?Juno Regina], walks away to the r. looking over her shoulder; one fist is clenched, she carries a bottle and is smoking a pipe. One sheep (l.) stands behind Paris who is holding a crook. A basket and his hat are on the ground. In the foreground his dog chases the peacock and the owl. Two doves fly over the head of Venus. Two broadsides are pasted on the cottage wall: one headed Gods . . . the other, Thos the Wood Lous (?). Mountains are indicated in the background.

Above the design is etched,

Jun: but to bestow it on that Trapes

It mads me—Min: hang him Jackanapes.

Printed on the same sheet is an impression of No. 4633.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 7\frac{5}{16}$ in.

4921 ΜΑΣΤΙΓΕΥΣ

[n.d. c. 1766]

[?Bunbury]

Engraving. Bust portrait in an oval of a clergyman in profile to the l. It is the same head as that of ΜΑΣΤΙΓΕΥΣ, No. 4680, who is probably Dr. Samuel Smith, Master of Westminster School. The oval is decorated by two emblems which appear to be birch rods. Probably an original etching by Bunbury when at Westminster School, included here from its connexion with No. 4680; see also No. 5021.

$3\frac{5}{16} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in. (oval $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.).

A FRENCH HAIR DRESSER . . . See No. 4767—1 Mar. 1771
[?Bunbury] Pub. W. Darling.

GANYMEDE & JACK-CATCH See No. 4305 [1771]
Pub. Darly.

Ganymede is Samuel Drybutter, not Samuel Vaughan, see No. 4915.

Five prints from a series published by R. Sayer and J. Smith.

4922 A MODERN DEMIREP ON THE LOOK-OUT.

Brandoin pinx^t Grignion sculp^t
London. Printed for Jⁿ Smith. N^o 35, Cheapside & Rob^t Sayer, N^o 53 Fleet Street. Published as the Act directs 25 Sep^r 1771.

Engraving. A girl walking with mincing steps; her hands are crossed below her waist and she looks over her shoulder. She wears a hat, a low-cut bodice, over which is a little open coat, and a slightly hooped skirt. Cf. Connoisseur, No. 4, 21 Feb. 1754, Account of a New Order of Females called Demi-Reps. (By Colman and Thornton.)

7 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. (Pl.)

A MACARONY AT A SALE OF PICTURES.

See No. 4601—25 Sept. 1771

Grignion after Brandoin.

4923 THE CHARMING MILLENER OF — STREET.

Brandoin pinx^t Caldwall sculp^t
*London, printed for J. Smith. N^o 35 Cheapside, & Rob^t Sayer N^o 53
Fleet Street, as the Act directs 1st. Dec^r 1771.*

Engraving. A girl in dress and manner similar to No. 4922. She wears gloves and carries in her r. hand an arched-top coffer, in the l. a rectangular box. Cf. Gay, Trivia, on the courtesan,

With empty band box she delights to range
And feigns a distant errand from the 'Change.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. cxcv.

7 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. (Pl.)

4924 AN OPERA GIRL OF PARIS IN THE CHARACTER OF FLORA.

Brandoin pinx^t Grignion sculp.
*London. Printed for Rob^t Sayer, N^o 53 Fleet Street, & J. Smith
N^o 35 Cheapside, as y^e Act directs 1st Dec^r 1771.*

Engraving. A girl dancing holding out in both hands a garland of roses. Her looped up skirt has a short train. From her head-dress of flowers and feathers hangs a piece of striped drapery which is worn over one shoulder, tied with tassels at the waist and falling in heavy folds down her back.

7 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. (Pl.)

4925 THE PRETTY SAVOYARD GIRL.

Brandoin pinx^t

Caldwall sculp.

London. Printed for R. Sayer, N^o 53 Fleet Street, & J. Smith N^o 35 Cheapside as the Act directs, 1st Dec^r 1771.

Engraving. A girl in peasant dress carrying a hurdy-gurdy or vielle suspended round her neck. She wears a nosegay.

$7\frac{7}{8} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ in. (Pl.)

CHARLES-JAMES CUB ESQ^R.

See No. 4811—[1 June 1771]

London Museum. Charles Fox, slim and elegant, dressed in the height of French fashion.

4926 LE CHERCHEUR DE 20 P^R CENT

[? c. 1771]

E. N. Sculp^t [Sir Edward Newenham]

Engraving. Portrait: an elderly man walking or standing in profile to the l. resting both hands on the head of his stick. He has a long nose and pendulous under-lip, and wears a small hat and long coat with wide sleeves. He is probably a Jew. In manner this resembles the caricature portraits published by Darly in his Macaroni series from 1771. The collector, Richard Bull, has written beneath it 'Etch'd by Sir Edward Nuneham of Ireland'. Cf. Nos. 5012, 5578.

$5\frac{3}{16} \times 3\frac{7}{8}$ in. (clipped).

In book of 'Honorary Engravers', i. 164.

4927 THE GREATEST LAWYER IN PARIS

[? 1771]

A Smith sculp.

Engraving. Caricature portrait, W.L., of a man standing. In his r. hand he holds out a book inscribed Palace Almanac. A note explains this as Book of the French Laws. In his l. hand he holds gloves, hat, and tasselled cane. Beneath is engraved This strange Object has such (a) penetrating Judgment in Law that he never undertakes a cause either for Plaintiff or Defendant but he proves successfull. He soon perceives if it's Equity or Fraud the latter he never maintains & with ease baffles the falacious Attempts [sic] of his opponent. 'Tis evident that all Act not in this manner for right or wrong we often find

—*the grave Knight that nods upon the Laws
Wak'd by a Fee, hems, and approves the Cause. Dryden.*

In a contemporary hand is written, 'A Caracature of Matt: Duane Esq. of Lincoln's Inn Barrister-at-Law, 1771. Nov.' His dress, with long coat, wide cuffs, and high-quartered shoes, belongs to an earlier period.

Duane (1707-85) was an eminent conveyancer, antiquary, and numismatist, F.R.S., F.S.A., and a trustee of the British Museum. See No. 4768.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in.

[PORTRAIT OF SIR W. BROWNE, M.D.]

See No. 4833. 1771

Another impression has been acquired on which the collector, Richard Bull, has written 'Portrait of Sir W^m Brown, very like him'. The etched quotation is from the Latin verses in defence of Browne's conduct as President of the College of Physicians believed to have been written by himself.

This portrait was copied for a tête-à-tête, see No. 4979.

4928 REMARKABLE CHARACTERS AT M^{RS} CORNELY'S
MASQUERADE. [1 Mar. 1771]

Engrav'd for the Oxford Magazine.

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 64. A number of figures in masquerade dress without masks, in a panelled room lit with candles in wall brackets. They represent the characters at the public masquerade on 6 Feb. (l. to r.)—a coffin, a monk, a nun, a harlequin, a madman with straw in his hair, a Savoyard playing a hurdy-gurdy and leading a dancing bear. The bear-leader and bear were a Mr. Hooke and a Mr. Hodges. The coffin was at first supposed to be Col. Luttrell, then his brother, Town and Country Magazine, iii. 81-4. See also Wright, Caricature History of the Georges, 1867, p. 551. A plate with the same title, but a political satire, is No. 4376. See also No. 4375.

$3\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{1}{8}$ in.

4929 TRIAL OF THE SOVEREIGN EMPRESS OF THE VAST REGIONS OF TASTE. [1 Apr. 1771]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vi. 98. Sir John Fielding (r.) with his eyes bandaged, is seated on the bench holding the sword and the scales of Justice. His clerk sits below him on his r. hand. Mme Cornelys appears before him supported on the shoulders of a lawyer and of a duchess wearing a coronet and ermine-trimmed robes. Fielding says: Not so blind but I can hit the right place for Intrigue. Mme Cornelys holding up her l. hand, the other being round the duchess's neck, says: You shall pay dearly for your Insolence. The duchess (of Northumberland) says, Money shall not be wanting Councillor; You & I must defend her against the blind Boy's Insolence. She hands the lawyer a bag of money; he takes it, saying: Your Grace need not fear, you have a noble Spirit, & delight to encourage real Merit.

Behind these three is a page or attendant in fancy dress or livery with feathers in his cap, he holds a flag inscribed Empress of the Vast Regions of Taste and Magnificence. Behind (l.) stands the singer Guadagni, holding up both hands and saying: Pray Madame la Duchesse do make him repent taking Guadagni's L50—den you will Piercy [a pun on Percy, the duchess's family name] mine Art with your Goodness.

Mme Cornelys was fined at Bow Street for performing an opera at Carlisle House without a licence under 10 George II, c. 28. Guadagni was also fined, for singing. For Mme Cornelys, Guadagni, and the Duchess of Northumberland see Walpole to Mann, 22 Feb. 1771, Letters, viii. 12-13. For the proceedings at Bow Street see Public Advertiser, 22 Feb. 1771, from which it appears that Mme Cornelys' counsel was Kenyon, afterwards Lord Kenyon. For the consequences of these proceedings see No. 5066.

$3\frac{5}{8} \times 5\frac{15}{16}$ in.

4930 HOSPITALITY ABUSED; OR GENERAL S—T [SCOTT]; CAPTAIN SUTH—D [SUTHERLAND] AND LADY MARY
S—T. [c. 1771]

Engraving. Probably from a book or magazine. Three people are seated at a round dinner table, a young woman between a young man and an older man. While the older man turns towards a servant who is pouring out wine the lady takes a note from the young man. On the wall is a picture of a woman kissing a man while she stabs him to the heart. See the Town and Country Magazine, iii. 516-18, Oct. 1771, for an account of the elopement of Lady Mary Scott with her husband's young relative and protégé. For Lady Mary Scott see No. 4352. See also London Magazine xl. 478-82 (pl.).

$3\frac{15}{16} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

JANUARY AND MAY. See No. 4606—16 Apr. 1771.

Grignion sc. after Collet. Pub. Sayer and Smith.

THE LADIES DISASTER. See No. 4595—2 Apr. 1771

Caldwall sc. after Collet. Pub. Smith and Sayer.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. cxiii.

THE COTILLION DANCE. See No. 4599—10 Mar. 1771

Caldwall sc. after Collet. Pub. Sayer and Smith.

THE COUNTRY-MAN IN LONDON. See No. 4600—1 Sept. 1771

Bannerman sc. after Collet. Pub. Smith and Sayer.

RIDICULOUS TASTE OR THE LADIES ABSURDITY

See No. 4628—15 July 1771

Pub. M. Darly and R. Sayer.

This plate, inscribed Darly invt, was issued with Darly's publication line on 25 Mar. 1768 (in the collection of Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street, 1932), and included in a volume dated 1 Jan. 1776; see No. 5369.

A French copy, with both French (Coiffure du grand gout pour la presente Année) and English titles, attributed to the year 1780, is reproduced in Fuchs und Kraemer, Karikatur der Europäischen Völker, 1901, p. 116.

THE FEMALE PYRAMID. See No. 4630 [1 May 1771]

Oxford Magazine. Reproduced Social England, ed. Traill, v, p. 482.

THE AUCTION; OR MODERN CONNOISSEURS.

See No. 4770—1 Dec. 1771

Oxford Magazine.

[A GENTLEMAN'S TOILETTE] See No. 4789—17 Dec. 1771

1. Goldar after Pugh. Pub. I. Wesson.

THE CHELSEA GUARD

See No. 4791—21 Dec. 1771

Pub. S. Hooper.

THE FRENCH LADY IN LONDON. . . . See No. 4784—2 Apr. 1771

After S. H. Grimm. Pub. S. Sledge.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. cciii.

4931 L'Angloise a Paris. THE ENGLISH LADY IN PARIS. from an Original Drawing by Brandoin.

J. B. Godfrey fecit.

Publish'd as the Act directs 18th Oct^r. 1771, for S. Hooper N^o 25 Ludgate Hill London.

Engraving. A stout middle-aged lady stands, facing T.Q. to the l., at her toilet table the draped mirror of which reflects her complacent expression. A maid puts the finishing touches to her coiffure. She is elaborately dressed and wears a large nosegay on her l. shoulder. A servant enters from the r. holding a circular tray on which are two cups, and a paper inscribed To her Grace. Another maid is adjusting her dress. Seated on a chair (l.) in profile to the r. is a gentleman holding his hat in his hand and looking towards the lady with an expression of deferential admiration.

Over the chimney piece is a large mirror, a cloak and hat hang on the wall. Over the chimney is a H.L. portrait attached to the wall by a bow of ribbon. The wall above the mirror is decorated by a classical medallion profile. Reproduced Paston, Pl. cci.

11 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 9 in.

THE ENGLISH LADY AT PARIS. See No. 4785. [5 Nov. 1771]

After S. H. Grimm. Pub. S. Sledge.

4932 A FRENCH PHYSICIAN WITH HIS RETINUE GOING TO VISIT HIS PATIENTS.

Brandoin Pinx^tCaldwell sculp.

London, Printed for Jⁿ Smith, N^o 35 Cheapside & Rob^t Sayer, N^o 53 Fleet Street Published as the Act directs 20 Oct^r 1771.

Engraving. Street scene, evidently in Paris. The physician, holding a large cane, sits in a two-wheeled chair or brouette which is being drawn from l. to r. by a thin and ragged man, while another pushes the back of the chair. In front (r.) runs a footman holding an enormous syringe over his r. shoulder. At the back of the procession (l.) walks another doctor, short and stout, in a tie-wig and holding a large-headed cane, his hat under his r. arm; a bottle labelled Anodyne protrudes from his pocket. Behind him walks a small shaggy poodle.

Behind the chair in the centre of the design a street or place recedes in perspective, with a church spire in the distance. No. 4831 (n.d.) is a similar design. Cf. No. 4670.

7 × 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

4933 A FRENCH PETIT MAITRE AND HIS VALET.

Brandoin Pinx't

C. Grignion sculp.

*London, Printed for Rob't Sayer, N^o 53, in Fleet Street & J. Smith
N^o 35 Cheapside, as the Act directs 1st Nov^r 1771.*

Engraving. Street scene, showing houses irregularly placed, foliage and rough stones on the ground, a stone tablet high on the side of a stone building is inscribed Rue d'Enfer (then a well-known street in Paris). The petit-maitre (l.) is walking from r. to l. but looks over his l. shoulder towards his valet who advances from the r. holding out a paper inscribed Au petit Marquis. The marquis wears an enormous black bag with a solitaire ribbon loosely round his neck; a very large nosegay on his l. shoulder, a sword whose hilt is decorated with ribbons; his coat is covered with heart-shaped spots. The valet though wearing a ruffled shirt and laced waistcoat has his hair in curl-papers with a comb thrust into it.

The grass-grown street probably satirizes the solitude of Paris streets compared with those of London.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. ccii.

11 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

THE CITY CHANTERS

See No. 4433—1771

Mezzotint by S. Okey after Collet.

A street scene with an allusion to the election for sheriffs at midsummer 1771, see Nos. 4874, 4937.

Series of mezzotints published by Carington Bowles.

HE! HO!—HEAVY, DULL AND INSIPID . . . (238)

See No. 4514 [c. 1771]

HI! HO!—THESE LATE HOURS WILL SOON DESTROY ME (239)

In Carington Bowles's smaller series.

See No. 4515 [c. 1771]

POLITICAL SATIRES

4934 SPANISH TREATMENT AT CARTHAGENA. [1 Jan. 1772]

Engraving. London Magazine, xl. 610. A fortified sea port, with the Spanish flag flying from a circular fort (r.). In the foreground five English sailors are in chains, being compelled by two Spaniards to do forced labour on the fortifications—a castellated sea-wall. Two are prostrate on the ground, one stands protesting, one carries a hod, the last (l.) holds a spade. Three ships are approaching the harbour. The nearest (l.) is being boarded by men from a boat and its flag is being hauled down; another boat rows to (or from) the ship.

The affair of the Falkland Islands had roused a storm of protest that the Government was acting in corrupt subservience to Spain, see Nos. 4849, 4857. This satire reflects the impression made by a dispatch from Rodney which reached the Admiralty in October 1771, see No. 4940.

This plate, showing the imaginary humiliation of England by Spain, was copied by Paul Revere for the Royal American Magazine, Vol. i, July 1774. Stauffer, No. 2686.

4 × 6 $\frac{7}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., 159 n. 3.

4935 LORD NORTH AT THE SPANISH AMBASSADOR'S.

[1 Jan. 1722]

Design'd & Engrav'd for the Political Register

Engraving. From the Political Register, ix. 297. The Spanish Ambassador (Prince Masserano) seated on a throne-like chair under looped-up curtains. Lord North bows obsequiously before him, holding the Union flag which falls on the ground, the ambassador's feet resting upon it. In his r. hand is a paper inscribed Falklands Islands. Beneath is engraved,

*Thus we would buy your Friendship; and treat you with gentle loving kindness.
Shakespeare.*

One of many satires on the supposed subservience of the Ministry to Spain over the Falkland Islands, see No. 4849, &c.

5 $\frac{9}{16}$ × 3 $\frac{13}{16}$ in.

ADVICE TO A GREAT K—G

See No. 4424—1 Jan. 1772

Engraving. Oxford Magazine. George III reading Johnson's False Alarm, and receiving conflicting advice from an angel and a demon.

4936 ALAS: POOR MUNGO

[1 Jan. 1772]

Woodcut. From the London Magazine, xl. 610. A man with his hand raised to his head looks with horror at a paper on a table, inscribed Resolved That . . . £1000. . . A woman seated by the table holding a handkerchief to her eyes looks at him reproachfully. An illustration to 'The Lamentations of Jeremiah, being a dialogue between Mungo and his Mistress'.

A satire on the debate in the Irish House of Commons, 25 Nov. 1771, on the grant to Dyson of a pension on the Irish establishment, which was condemned by a majority of one and afterwards struck off the list. See Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1894, iv. 49; Corr. of George III, iii. 125, and No. 4942. For the name of 'Mungo' see Walpole, op. cit., iii. 211, and No. 4267, &c.

$3\frac{3}{8} \times 3\frac{15}{16}$ in.

4937 QUIDNUNC, OR THE UPHOLSTERER SHAVING.

[1 Jan. 1772]

Engraving. From Every Man's Magazine, l. 263. The interior of a barber's shop. A barber holds the head of a seated man wrapped in a sheet, but negligently allows the bowl of shaving water he holds in his l. hand to pour over his customer. By the customer's side is a dog with a collar engraved King. A barber's assistant, raggedly dressed, is combing a wig on a block supported on a tall stand. Another holds up a looking-glass to a customer who is arranging his cravat. Another man brushes a hat. In the background a spectacled man wearing a hat reads The London Evening Post, on which is inscribed

Wilkes 2315

Bull 2194

*Kirkm*ⁿ 1949

Plumb 1875

Oliver 119.

On a shelf are wigs of different kinds on barber's blocks on which faces are represented which are perhaps caricatures. Among them are two ladies' wigs, and a judge's wig. Two other wigs hang from the wall, and in the foreground two cats are playing with a wig which they have pulled out of a box.

The figures are those of the votes recorded at the election for sheriffs at midsummer 1771, see No. 4874.

The subject of the satire is from Murphy's popular farce (first played, 1757), 'The Upholsterer or What News?', in which meddling tradesmen neglect their business to discuss politics, one being Quidnunc, an upholsterer, another Razor, a barber. Cf. No. 5074, &c.

$6\frac{5}{8} \times 4$ in.

4938 CHARACTERESTICKS.

[1 Jan. 1772]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vii. 229. Three half-length figures in circles of laurel leaves. Lord Mayor Crosby (centre) in his gown wearing a civic mural crown holds a scourge inscribed For Monopoly in one hand, in the other a scroll: Thanks and Prayers of the Poor. Behind him is a figure of Justice with her scales and a view of the Tower of London in which he had been imprisoned, see No. 4850, &c. Wilkes (l.), as Hercules, with a sheriff's staff holds a club For undue Influence and a scroll inscribed Herculus's Labours overcome Gen^l Warrants maintain'd Lib. of Press—Freedom of Election, &c. &c. &c. A bull (r.) wearing an alderman's chain, holding a sheriff's staff and with one hoof on a column inscribed Fortitude denotes Alderman Bull who was elected sheriff with Wilkes in 1771, see No. 4874. In the centre, between the circles, are the City arms and motto, Domine dirige nos, and the cap of liberty inscribed Libertas.

Crosby as Lord Mayor was associated in the City with active measures against engrossers of wheat supplies, see Ann. Reg. 1771, p. 66.

$4\frac{1}{8} \times 6\frac{3}{16}$ in. Diam. of circles $2\frac{1}{8}$ in.

4939 THE CITY APPRENTICE AT ST. JAMES'S. [1 Feb. 1772]

Engraving. From Every Man's Magazine, i. 310. A man stands in a panelled room or corridor wearing a toupet wig, a court suit with an elaborately embroidered and fringed waistcoat. He is taking a pinch of snuff from a box in his r. hand. Behind (l.) stands a beefeater holding a halberd. In the distance (r.) two men talking together are watching 'the City Apprentice'; one points at him, the other appears to be Lord North wearing his Garter ribbon.

Probably intended to represent Thomas Harley, third son of the third Earl of Oxford, who was the leader of the Court party in the City. See Nos. 4069, 4190, 4202, 4213, 4235, 4269, 4852, 4953, 4966. No explanation accompanies the plate.

$5\frac{7}{8} \times 3\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4940 ADMIRAL RODNEY BEFORE CARTAGENA [1 Feb. 1772]

Design'd & Engrav'd for the Political Register

Engraving. From the Political Register, x. 1. Rodney in back view stands on the shore watching thirteen ships at anchor. His hands are tied behind him by a strip of paper inscribed Orders. In the distance across the water is a town defended by a long castellated mole. Beneath the design is engraved,

*I with thirteen Sail attended,
Can this Spanish town affright;
Nothing has its wealth defended,
But my Orders—Not to Fight.
Hosier's Ghost.*

Rodney had accepted the command of Jamaica early in 1771 on the prospect of war with Spain over the Falkland Islands, see No. 4849, &c. In October 1771 a dispatch from him reached the Admiralty reporting an incident at Cartagena: a British schooner had been induced by threats to accompany two Spanish Guarda costa ships into the port without resistance, on a pretext of smuggling. Rodney had made protests to the Governor of Cartagena, and the lieutenant in command had been court martialled and dismissed the service. Nothing more was heard of the incident beyond official protests to the Spanish Ambassador, &c., but it gave rise to a rumour that war was imminent. See Calendar of Home Office Papers 1770-2, pp. 310-11, 312, 324, 326. No. 4934 is a satire on the supposed humiliation of England involved in this incident. Glover's famous ballad, Hosier's Ghost, had been used in 1740 (as in 1772) to attack the Government for inaction against Spain, see No. 2422.

$5\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{15}{16}$ in.

Frontispiece

4941 THE GENIUS OF THE LONDON MAGAZINE UNMASKING THE TIMES. [1 Feb. 1772]

T. Bonnor del et sculp.

Engraving. Frontispiece to the London Magazine, xli. A female winged figure (r.) in classical draperies stands upon clouds surrounded by rays of light. Over her head fly two cherubs, one holding a shield with the arms of the City of London, the other a civic mace and chains. Her r. hand rests on the head of a seated figure dressed as a harlequin round whose forehead is a placard inscribed The Times. In her l. hand she holds a mask which she has just removed from his face, revealing an evil countenance; he turns away from 'the Genius of the London Magazine', and attempts to hide his scowling face with his hand. On his head is a weathercock inscribed The Fashions. In his r. hand he holds open a box from which are hanging narrow strips of paper inscribed: Continental Histor[y]; State Sharping; Freewill; Bigotry; 200,000£; Dearness of Provisions; Prerogative; Pension; Patriotism; The Drama. Similar labels decorate his person: Bon Ton; Popularity; Corruption; Nabobships; Bankruptcies; Crim. Con.; Fraud; Folly. Beneath the titles is engraved,

*Blest Genius! still be thine the arduous task;
From motley Times to draw the Iron mask.
On Errors eye to pour thy splendid ray,
And give the glories of eternal Day.*

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ in.

4942 [HIBERNIA IN DISTRESS.]¹

[1 Feb. 1772]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xli. 3. Hibernia lies on the ground with her harp broken. On a table (l.) are two money bags, one full and labelled Exchequer, the other decorated with the Irish harp and almost empty. Into this Lord North is plunging his hand while a negro with outstretched hand says: Don't forget poor Mungo my good L^d N—h. A man in hat and laced coat is trampling on Hibernia, saying to a bystander: S^r George we must keep her down. Sir George [Macartney] answers: Ay my L^d T—d. [Townshend] and exert ourselves or she will be too Strong for us.

This illustrates an article, 'The History of the last Parliament of Ireland,' pp. 3–12. North is dipping deep into Irish revenue while the English Exchequer is full. The negro is Jeremiah Dyson whose pension on the Irish list has been rejected, see No. 4936.

$3\frac{15}{16} \times 6\frac{1}{4}$ in.

4943 THE YOUNG CUB ATTENDED BY YE CLERKS OF YE AD—L—TY, AT AR—RS IN THE KITCHEN, WHILST THE FRENCH COOK AND SCULLION BOY LAUGH AT HIM.

[1 Feb. 1772]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, viii. 28. A kitchen, Fox stands at a table about to sign a document. In his l. hand he holds four playing cards. From his pocket protrudes a book, Hoyles Free Gamester. He looks towards a slim young man (l.), who addresses him, holding a document addressed To James Fox Sq. They are watched with amusement by a cook (r.) who is holding two trussed birds on a spit and by a scullion boy. Two Admiralty clerks (l.) stand behind their spokesman. A fox hangs by its neck from the roof. The accompanying letter runs, 'Sir, it is very remarkable, that none but the most abandoned of mankind stand any tolerable chance to receive the favours of the present M—y [Ministry]. The young cub, who is in possession of a very lucrative and honourable post, [Lord of the Admiralty, resigned Feb. 20, 1772] keeps his office chiefly at Arthur's, and when any material business is transacted, that requires his signature, he is obliged to leave his Game and retire into the Kitchen for that purpose. . . .

¹ The title is taken from the index to the magazine.

$6\frac{5}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{16}$ in.

4944 A CORPORATION WITH THEIR CHAPLAIN IN EMBRIO
TAKEN BY SURPRISE. [n.d. Feb. 1772]

[?After Viscount Townshend.]

Engraving. On a platform, behind a low parapet, eleven men stand, ten dressed in furred livery gowns as if members of a corporation. The eleventh is dressed as a clergyman in gown and bands. Above them flies a large devil with a bull's head holding chains attached to two of the figures. Below them is a table on which are writing materials, books, papers, and a large bag. A clerk writes at it; two figures stand behind it. In front of the table are standing figures. Engraved labels issue from the heads of the characters.

The devil says: You have exceeded my most fervent wishes and shall have capital employments in my Infernal Empire. The figures on the platform (l. to r.) says: Nor I Brother F——t, upon my credit; Consume ye all, are these your tricks I never cribb'd a Shilling; This is worse than the Ribb'd Stocking Patent; Or a Walpole Administration; O Cromwell thy active Spirit alone can save us (a chain links this speaker with the devil); I have discover'd your Villanys, and shall quit my Office with pleasure (this speaker wears a hat). The clergyman says: Make Restitution and give up your Trusts. The remaining speakers on the platform say: What shall we do I cannot face Justice! that is not our way (this man is chained to the devil); How could you think this wretch capable of succeeding my worthy Master, I have often told you what the animal would do for you; I have not shared in the Plunder nor will I join in the defence; Nor I Brother John.

A man stands on the table with a large bag under his arm, he holds out a paper: Subpoenys in Chancery for defrauding the Burgesses, &c. towards a man standing behind the table who exclaims: But my dam'd Accounts will undo us. The man next him, who wears a furred livery gown, says: Defend I say defend ah Ben Ha Ha Ha.

In the foreground (l.) a man wearing clerical bands, but with striped stockings, looks through a lorgnette made of a dice-box. Papers protruding from his pocket are inscribed: Minuets and Country Dances 1770; Hoyle on Whis[t]. He is standing on a paper inscribed XXXIX Articles and says: If this be the case the Devil may be your Chaplain for me. A man with a macaroni queue says to him: Gad so Brother Charles You'l get no Credo here. On the r. stands a bellman with a long badged coat and staff saying: O yes, Gentlemen hear me, methinks the spirit of Cato inspires me, Petition his Grace and y^e Lords, that noble House always supports their Friends tho' their Crimes be Murder & Treason. Vid: the Cases of L——n & B—— [? Bigby]. His bell is on the ground beside him. Behind him stands a man wearing a gown and holding a mace, he puts his l. hand on the bell-man's shoulder, saying: Ah M^r Cato your Oratory is in vain that power alas is no more. On his extreme r. is a tall man wearing a bag-wig and court suit, his r. foot rests on a bale inscribed China Silk Smuggled. He says: Cato thou reasons well by such an expedient I escaped the Exchequer.

This appears to be a general attack on the House of Commons who are pilloried as members of a corrupt corporation. Many of the allusions are obscure. The 'embrio chaplain' standing on the 'Thirty-nine Articles'; evidently C. J. Fox, who spoke (6 Feb. 1772) against the petition for relief from subscription to the articles (see Ann. Reg. 1772, pp. 171-2), and who prepared himself for his defence of the Church 'by passing twenty-two hours in the pious exercise of Hazard', Gibbon, Misc. Works, ii. 74. See also Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 12. He resigned his office of Lord of the Admiralty on 20 Feb. 1772, which gives an approximate date to this print.¹ The man speaking to Fox is probably his brother Stephen. The man who deplores his 'dam'd Accounts' is perhaps Lord Holland, known as 'the public defaulter of unaccounted millions', see No. 4066, &c., against whom proceedings had been taken in the Exchequer, and whose accounts were not cleared for many years, see Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 344-5. The 'ribb'd stocking patent' appears to be intended for the two famous patents taken out in 1758 and 1759 by Jedediah Strutt, for the 'Derby rib machine', of great economic importance, but not associated with any charge of political corruption. See Felkin, Hist. of Machine-Wrought Hosiery, 1867, ch. vi.

For other attacks on the House of Commons see No. 4869, &c.

The design is in the manner of caricatures by Lord Townshend.

7 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 12 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

4945 THE Q—N OF D—N—RK CONVEYING TO PRISON.

[1 Mar. 1772]

Engraving. From Every Man's Magazine, i. 353. Queen Caroline Matilda, sister of George III, and wife of Christian VII of Denmark, richly dressed and wearing jewels, is being hurried down the palace steps by two soldiers. A man wearing a laced hat and the ribbon of an order, probably the King, stands by pointing at her; she holds out her l. hand towards him, in the r. she holds a handkerchief towards her eyes. Behind him stands a woman with upraised hand, evidently the Queen Dowager, the King's step-mother, who was the instigator of the palace revolution against Struensee, the Queen's favourite, and the Queen. A soldier (r.) holding a musket with a fixed bayonet stands by. At the bottom of the steps is a coach, its door held open by a soldier; behind it are soldiers headed by a mounted officer with a drawn sword.

This revolution took place on 17 Jan. 1772; Rantzau carried out the deportation of the Queen to Kronborg. See Cambridge Modern History, vi, chap. xxi, and Nos. 4946, 4950, 4956.

4 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

4946 THE D—G—R [DOWAGER] QUEEN RIDING POOR D—M—K.

[1 Mar. 1772]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, viii. 56. A skimmington procession: on a sorry-looking horse a man and woman sit astride, back to back; the woman, richly dressed, sits in front, her skirts pushed back to show breeches. In her r. hand is a pistol, in her l. a sword. The man holds a distaff. The procession is headed by a man (r.) holding aloft on a pole a petticoat and a pair of horns. Behind him walks a man beating a drum.

¹ When the question was reconsidered (23 Feb. 1773), Fox spoke against subscription to the Articles at the universities. Parl. Hist. xvii. 749 f.

Behind the horse is a woman carrying a broom over her shoulder and a woman blowing a horn. A spectator points and jeers, another walks with folded arms.

The title, the design, and the explanatory text are contradictory: the design shows a faithless wife with a henpecked and acquiescent husband, punished in the barbarous and traditional way, by 'a skimmington', accompanied by rude music and jeers; the print is described as 'a representation of that amiable Queen conducting to prison by the merciless wretches employed by the wicked Dowager'.

Whether the woman is Queen Caroline Matilda being taken to prison or the Queen Dowager is doubtful. Prima facie, she appears to be the Queen, pilloried as the mistress of Struensee and his supporter in a virtual dictatorship. The Queen of Denmark was dressed as a man, wearing buckskin breeches, when she met her mother, the Princess Dowager of Wales, in 1770. Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1845, iv. 281. The man is evidently the feeble-minded and vicious Christian VII of Denmark, see English Hist. Rev., Jan. 1916. For the palace revolution in Denmark see Nos. 4945, 4950, 4956, and for a skimmington No. 1703.

3 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

4947 A VIEW OF THE ORIGIN OF SCOTCH MINISTERS, & MANAGERS.¹ [1 Apr. 1772]

Engraving. Political Register, x. 137. A number of men fall to the ground from a sack or basket held up by two demons. One demon (l.) says: There's a plentiful stock of Scotch Caterpillars for poor England. A third demon standing below says: I think I and my Brother Fiends could not spit our Spight more Effectually. The apex of an inverted pyramid of eight falling figures is a man seated on the ground saying: Aw my Saul Man, I have had a muckle dash, but hope we Shall rise again. In the background a man in a laced suit is seated at a table blowing soap-bubbles. Beneath the design is engraved,

*They go from the Devil to Court,
And from Court to the Devil again.
Swift.*

This version of the favourite theme of abuse of the Scots is evidently directed against the speculation mania in Scotland (indicated by the bubbles) which had disastrous consequences in England, see Nos. 4961, 5016, 5109.

5 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 3557 t.a.

4948 THE APOSTATE PARSON

Publish'd as the Act directs April 14. 1772. by W. Darling, Engraver, Great Newport Street.

Engraving. A bishop (r.) standing behind an altar-rail, holds out both hands over the head of a kneeling clergyman. A demon kneels on the ground beside the latter; another has crept under his cassock, from which the tips of two wings project. Over the door is a picture of the Last Supper with Judas as a prominent figure. The lid of a large chest (l.) is slightly raised, from it hangs a paper inscribed: I Suit of Scarlet & Gold, ¹ This was catalogued as No. 4023, and dated April 8, 1763.

1 Suit White & Silver, 1 Suit Blue & Silver, 1 Suit Flower'd Silk, 1 Suit Black Silk, 1 Black Velv^t Surtout. On the Chest is pasted a label: Left to Mess^{rs} Panchauld & Fo . . . Paris. On the ground is a book, A Course of Humanity on Miss S—rs.

Beneath the design is engraved: It is true I have Suffer'd the infectious hand of a Bishop to be wav'd over me, whose Imposition like the Sop given to Judas is only a Signal for the Devil to enter. &c. The scene represents the 'infectious hand of a bishop' ordaining Horne, see Nos. 4863, 4866. The inscription is a quotation from a letter of his to Wilkes in 1766. The list in the trunk is identical with that sent by Horne to Wilkes in Paris, 25 May 1767, together with the clothes which he left in Wilkes's care (as unsuited to his clerical calling and to the English taste), writing 'If you have any fellow feeling, you cannot but be kind to them; since they too, as well as yourself, are outlawed in England; and on the same account—their superior worth'. In the course of their quarrel Horne accused Wilkes of having pawned these clothes. See Stephens, Memoirs of Horne Tooke, i. 76 ff. For the quarrel between Wilkes and Horne, see No. 4861, &c.

6 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{16}$ in.

4949 THE JOINT STOOL.

[1 May 1772]

Engraving. From the Political Register, x. 201. A large roughly constructed three-legged stool made of rock. In the background is a mountainous landscape, inscribed Highlands, from which a wide road descends passing under the legs of the stool. The top of the stool, in which are fissures, is inscribed 150 Millions. The three legs, each showing signs of readiness to break, are respectively inscribed Commons (l.), Kings (centre), and Lords (r.). A small figure, Bute, in highland dress, is kicking violently at the centre leg of the stool. Beneath the design is engraved, It is easily overturn'd. Shakespeare.

Intended to show that Bute's pernicious influence with the King will overthrow and has already shaken the constitution of King, Lords, and Commons, on which the National Debt depends. The clamour against Bute had been revived by Chatham's speech on 2 March 1770, see No. 4841 &c.

3 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 6 in.

4950 STRUENSEE'S GHOST, OR LORD B—TE & M—N—D IN THE HORRORS.

[1 May 1772]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, viii. 145. Bute (l.) seated at a table and wearing the ribbon and star of the Garter, starts in horror at a headless figure (r.), which floats towards him, holding in his hands his head dripping with blood. Behind Bute stands Mansfield (l.), also horror-struck. A demon with a barbed tongue squats on the floor below the ghost, beckoning to Bute. On the table are a book, Prerogative, and a document inscribed, A Plan to Establish Arbitrary Power. On the floor are two papers: A Plan for limiting all Court favours to the Worst men we can find, and Bill to Limit the Descendants of George 3^d . . . (an allusion to the Royal Marriage Bill, see No. 4970).

Struensee, the favourite of the Queen of Denmark, executed on 28 April (see No. 4956), actually experienced the fate with which the political satirists had long been threatening Bute, who was openly accused of being the lover of the Princess Dowager of Wales, and the power behind the throne and the ministry, and had been threatened with the fate of Mortimer, see No. 4150, &c. For Struensee see W. F. Reddaway, 'Struensee and the Fall of Berndorff', Eng. Hist. Rev., xxvii, 1912, pp. 274-86; Camb. Mod. Hist. vi. ch. xxi. See also Nos. 4945, 4946, 4956.

5 × 3 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

4951 THE FAT PLURALIST AND HIS LEAN CURATES.¹

[1 May 1772]

Engraving. From Every Man's Magazine, i. 459. An extremely fat bishop sits in an ornate two-wheeled chariot which is drawn (r. to l.) by six curates wearing bands and long ragged gowns. In his r. hand he holds out a gothic church, two more churches are under his l. arm. Behind his back, in place of a cushion, is a book, Self Denial a Virtue. Two pigs stand behind him, their front hoofs supported on the back of the chariot. At his feet are two sucking pigs, a hen and a goose, representing tithes. The near chariot wheel passes over a book, The 39 Articles. The bishop says: The Church was made for Me, not I for the Church. One of the curates says: Lord be mercifull to us poor Curates, another says: And send us more Comfortable Living.

The contrast between the higher and lower clergy was a constant subject of satire, see No. 4236. At this time attention was particularly directed to the clergy by the Bill for relief from subscription to the thirty-nine articles, see No. 4944, and by the motion on 17 Feb. 1772 opposed by the Ministry for a Nullum Tempus Bill to protect the owner of real property against dormant claims of the Church. It was urged that danger to the poor parochial clergy was used as a screen for the rich 'to guard and defend luxury and superfluity', Ann. Reg. 1772, p. 89 f.; Parl. Hist., xvii, pp. 301 ff.

5 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 5 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

4952 HE RULES AS ABSOLUTELY & WITH AS MUCH INDIGNITY TO EVERY DEPARTMENT OF ADMINISTRATION, AS WHEN HE OPENLY HELD THE REINS OF GOVERNMENT.

Anon.

[1 June 1772]

Design'd & Engrav'd for the Political Register.

Engraving. From the Political Register, x. 265. The gateway of St. James's Palace. On its flagstaff is a standard bearing Bute's arms with the motto Avito viret honore (cf. No. 4423). Under the archway a Scotsman in kilt and plaid holds a prancing horse by the tail. Another Scot stands by flourishing a whip and holding in his l. hand a saddle with stirrups.

The death of the Princess Dowager of Wales (8 Feb. 1772) had made the persistent accusations of the Opposition less credible. The title appears to be an echo of Chatham's speech on secret influence, see Nos. 4841, 4949.

6 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 4 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

4953 THE DIFFERENCE OF WEIGHT BETWEEN COURT & CITY ALDERMEN

[1 June 1772]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, viii. 189. On a large pair of scales a slim man standing in the l. scale completely outweighs two men in the other. All three wear furred livery gowns. On the scales, at the feet of the Court alderman (Harley), are a money-bag, and notes marked 10,000. He says: Where are their Remonstrances now? Oh rare London Tavern! Behind him stand Mansfield and Bute, who points at him, saying: Deel down wi ye all ye loons, here is my Mon con give ye all a Drubbing. The l. scale rests on the ground, the r. is high in the air; on it a very stout man, probably Brass Crosby the ex-Lord Mayor, is sitting. He is exclaiming in alarm: Oh Lord Oh Lord! I shall be down. Wilkes stands behind him saying: S' death that damd Scot has put false weight in the Scale! A man kneeling on one knee holds the r. scale with both hands saying: Zounds! shall this little Wine Merchant out-weigh us all? In the foreground the cap of liberty on a stick is supported in a chamber-pot. On the wall is a picture of Britannia hanging from a gallows. The accompanying text runs, 'We are now convinced that the weight of a city Alderman is not by any means equal to that of a court Alderman, especially if they are weighed in the scales of administration. The Patriotic Citizens seem to have lost all their influence, and Lord North has had very little difficulty in supporting a majority upon all occasions.' The reference is to the Court of Aldermen where Harley was the leader of the Court party in opposition to the Patriots. The Court of Aldermen, in constrast with the Common Council and the Common Hall, had in general a majority for the Court. For Harley see Nos. 4852, 4939, &c. For the London Tavern, a meeting-place of the Bill of Rights Society, see No. 5104.

¹ This was incorrectly dated c. 1733, and catalogued as No. 2003.

$5\frac{5}{8} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in.

4954 BRITANIA INTOXICATED, OR THE GREAT ONES IN A BAGNIO. [1 June 1772]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, viii. 185. A drunken orgy in a room with mirrors on the wall. Britannia, dressed as a courtesan (r.), leans back in a chair, dead drunk, in her r. hand is a wine-bottle. One foot rests on her shield. A man standing behind pours over her the contents of a wine-bottle, in his r. hand he holds out a wine-glass. In the centre is a staggering figure wearing the ribbon and order of the Bath. His pocket is being picked by a plainly dressed man, while another holds his shoulder. Two men aimlessly flourish drawn swords. Another aims a blow with a long pole at a mirror. A courtesan has broken a mirror with a wine-bottle which she is waving in the air. In the background a woman, seated on a man's knee, is picking his pocket. On the floor in the foreground are broken wine-glasses, and a broken punch-bowl inscribed the Constitution. The explanatory text asks 'Who are the greatest drunkards?—Those at the helm—Who set the most glaring examples of adultery, fornication, &c.—. . .'

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{3}{4}$ in.

4955 THE PREMIER DISTRIBUTING THE LOAVES AND FISHES TO THE LABOURERS IN HIS VINEYARD. MAY 9, 1772.

[1 July 1772]

Vol. IV. No. XVIII.

Engraving. From the Town and Country Magazine, iv. 304. The design illustrates 'The Outs and the Ins, a Dialogue upon the Premier distributing . . . [ut supra]'. A scene in Palace Yard; part of the end of Westminster

Hall visible in the background (r.). North stands on stilts which are strapped to his legs and held up by Mansfield (l.) and Bute (r.), who are seated on the ground. From his pocket hang papers inscribed Titles, Pensions. In the foreground (r.) a disappointed patriot hurries away covering his face with his hand: Wilkes 'retiring in rage and despair'. Behind on the l. is a group of three smiling ministerialists, one holding up a bag of money. These are 'Mungo.' [Dyson], 'Geo. O.' [Onslow], and the 'duke of G' [Grafton]. In the background (r.) is a group of clergy, who are presbyterian parsons, returning to Scotland. (The dissenters had petitioned to be exempt from the penal laws, which were never executed against them; the Bill was rejected in the House of Lords. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 89-92.)

This satire attacks both ministerialists and patriots; Lord North says that 'the glorious stand against mock patriotism has placed it in such just disrepute that they are even ashamed of associating with each other'. He appeals for exertion and unanimity against 'the common foe . . . the loaves and fishes will be all our own'.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 3\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4955A Pen and wash drawing for this reversed.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{8}$ in.

4956 THE FATE OF FAVOURITES.

[1 July 1772]

Design'd & Engrav'd for the Political Register.

Engraving. From the Political Register, x. 329. A man kneels with his head on the block, his hat and wig are on the ground, the executioner's axe is raised in both hands. Behind (r.) at a table a man sharpens a knife. Two men (l.) stand in conversation, one holds in his l. hand a paper inscribed Struensee. Below the steps of the scaffold are mounted soldiers holding drawn swords. Behind them are the faces of the crowd.

The parallel between the story of Struensee and Queen Matilda Caroline of Denmark (see No. 4945, &c.) and the allegations which Wilkes and the patriots had been making for years against Bute and the Princess Dowager of Wales (Queen Matilda's mother) was too obvious to be missed. Here the threat to Bute of Struensee's fate (he was executed on 28 Apr. 1772), though implicit, is clear. See also Nos. 4945, 4946, 4950.

$3\frac{5}{8} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4957 PICTURE OF EUROPE FOR JULY 1772.

Engraving. Probably from a magazine. A group of seven monarchs wearing crowns and ermine-trimmed robes. At a table sit three who are studying a large map inscribed Map of the Kingdom of Poland. They are evidently Catharine II of Russia, Frederick of Prussia, and the Emperor. Facing them (l.) sits a king whose crown is broken, his head is bowed, his hands are tied behind his back, evidently Stanislaus II of Poland. Behind the three studying the map, two standing monarchs (r.) look on with expressions of concern, they are Louis XV (indicated by fleur-de-lys) and Charles III of Spain. In a chair on the extreme r. George III lies back fast asleep; his chair is inscribed Brit. . . . Behind Stanislaus (l.) sits a bearded man with an elaborate triple turban; his wrists and ankles are chained; he probably represents the Grand Signor of Turkey with whom Catharine was at war. Above the map of Poland hang scales inscribed The Ballance of Power; on the lighter scale is a label inscribed Great Britain.

A satire on the first Partition of Poland, the Russo-Prussian treaty for which was signed 17 Feb. 1772, the partition taking place 5 May 1772, and on the first Russo-Turkish War (1768-74). Evidently by the same artist as No. 5222; both depict George III as regardless of England's interests and blind to events in Europe. For the attitude of the Government to the situation, see a Cabinet Minute of Nov. 1772 in The Sandwich Papers, ed. G. R. Barnes and J. H. Owen, 1932, pp. 30-2. George III was by no means blind to the Polish question, see a remarkable paper in his handwriting in Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, ii. 428-9. See Nos. 4958, 5110, 5124, 5222, 5229.

$3\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{5}{16}$ in.

4958 THE TROELFTH CAKE LE GATEAU DES ROIS

[c. 1772; perhaps later]

London Printed for Rob^t Sayer at tthe [sic] Golden Buck facing Fetter Lane End of Fleet Steet

Engraving. Four monarchs inspecting a large map of Poland inscribed Pologne en 1772, spread out on a table. Catharine II of Russia is seated (l.) and points with both hands to the part of South Poland nearest the Russian frontier. She looks up towards Stanislaus II of Poland who stands with his l. hand on the map, his r. clutching his crown which is slipping from his head; he looks at Catharine with a distraught expression. Opposite Catharine at the other side of the table (r.) stands Frederick of Prussia, in riding dress, his sword resting on the map near Dantzik and between Brandebour and Pomeranie. George III stands in profile to the r. between Stanislaus, to whom his back is turned, and Frederick, his l. hand rests on the map, from which, however, he looks away. France blowing two trumpets flies above and away from the four monarchs. Clouds and trees form a background. Laurel branches are growing (r.) behind Frederick; two laurel wreaths lie at Catharine's feet. She wears an ermine-lined robe, and sits in an ornate chair, the arm of which is a carved eagle.

Probably a French print: the engraving is in a French manner, and the publication line is evidently adapted (incorrectly) from an English print of an earlier date (before the numbering of the houses in Fleet Street c. 1766). 'Troelfth' is probably a French engraver's rendering of Twelfth, cf. No. 5229. In 1772 France was powerless to prevent the partition of Poland, especially in view of the latent hostility of England, Camb. Mod. Hist., vi. 357. This print may be an effort of propaganda to suggest the joint action of France and England to prevent the partition (there were rumours in England in 1773 that such action was contemplated, see Nos. 5110, 5124), or at least, to secure the benevolent neutrality of England. George III is represented as indolently acquiescing in the Partition as in No. 4957. See also Nos. 5222, 5229.

$8\frac{13}{16} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ in.

4959 BLACK HARRY.

[1 Aug. 1772]

Design'd & Engrav'd for the Political Register.

Engraving. From the Political Register, xi. 1. The knave of a pack of cards facing l. with the head of the Duke of Grafton. In his r. hand he holds an arrow. An anchor inscribed Bradshaw lies diagonally across his person.

This is an allusion to the appointment of Thomas Bradshaw, a Treasury Clerk, as a Lord of the Admiralty in succession to Charles Fox on 6 May 1772. An anonymous letter in the Public Advertiser, 8 May 1772, addressed to the Lords of the Admiralty and transcribed by Walpole, explains the intention of this satire: '. . . by means of his uncommon address in administering to the pleasures of the great, he was appointed one of the Secretaries of the Treasury, which office he held during the Duke of Grafton's administration, and by exerting his happy talents between his Grace and the celebrated Nancy Parsons, he so far ingratiated himself with the Duke that he became his chief confidant, . . . and of course became his Grace's bosom friend; for which service he first received a pension of fifteen hundred pounds a year for three lives, and that not being sufficient is now made one of you. . .'. Walpole's comment is, 'The Duke of Grafton's ambition was to be at the head of the Admiralty, and he had insisted on Bradshaw being placed at the Board as a spy on Lord Sandwich, and to learn the business, that he might be his Grace's Secretary there, if he could obtain the command'. Last Journals, 1920, i. 109-10. Cf. Grafton, Autobiography, ed. Anson, 1898, pp. 258-63.

Bradshaw, like Dyson, was one of the official M.P.'s who were singled out for distrust and abuse. Cf. Mason, Heroic Epistle, 'The R*g*ys, —s, Mungos, B*—ds*s there' [Rigbys, Calcrafts. . .], and Letters of Junius, ed. Everett, 1927, pp. 153, 269. See Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1894, iv. 45-6 and n. See also Nos. 4962, 5018.

$5\frac{5}{8} \times 3\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4960 THE RED RIBBAND BESTOWED INSTEAD OF A HALTER.

[1 Aug. 1772]

Engraved for the Oxford Magazine.

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, ix. 24. The devil, as a man with horns, bat's wings, and goat's legs, stands surrounded by flames. In his r. hand he holds out a ribbon from which hangs the badge of the order of the Bath. His l. hand is round the neck of a man who kneels on one knee, and stretches out his hand towards the ribbon. This man wears a star and resembles caricatures of Lord North, but the allusion to the red ribbon suggests that he may be intended for Sir George Macartney, made K.B. on 29 May, and unpopular as a son-in-law of Bute and leader of the ministerial side in the Irish House of Commons (see No. 5134). Facing him on the l. and seated among four money-bags is a demon. From a gallows on the l. hangs a coronet. The devil says: Do as I command thee & I will heap favours & Honours on thee. The kneeling man says: I will sell my whole Country for a Ribband & a Coronet. From his pocket hangs a paper, Plan for paying off the National Debt (an explicit allusion to Lord North, see Nos. 4961, 4969). The seated demon says: How Happy is that Man who glories in the ruin of Millions; he holds a paper inscribed: Plan of the best ways & means of Conciliating the Affections of the People by ruining them all. The money-bags are inscribed: Purloined from the India Company; For bribing Juries; Pensions on Ireland; For Pensioning Parli—m—t.

In spite of the allusion to Lord North, who got his Garter on 25 Mar. 1772, the red ribbon suggests Macartney, as does the accompanying text:

'... these honours are seldom conferred on any but those who will submit to the peremptory dictates of the minister. . . .' The ambiguity was perhaps a measure of precaution.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{16}$ in.

4961 A VIEW OF THE DELUGE OF SCOTCH PAPER CURRENCY
FOR ENGLISH GOLD. [1 Aug. 1772]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, ix. 1. A Scotsman in the air astride a broom is carrying off six large money-bags, three being inscribed £2,000, £10,000, and £50,000. He scatters banknotes or bills; men on the ground, some sinking into a bog, exclaim in horror at his action. In the centre Britannia is seated, she says: This Scotch paper diet has brought me to a consumption. In the foreground (r.) Lord North seated, his back to the other figures, writes on a paper inscribed: Scheme for paying off the National Debt; he says: I will not at present promise to pay 17 Millions in ten Years. The scene is the sea-shore; three Scotsmen (l.) row out to sea in a boat loaded with money-bags, saying: We'll over the Water to Charly. The Scotsman on the broom, who resembles caricatures of Bute, says: The deel away wi ye all ye English Pudding-bags ken ye nae that Paper is lighter of digestion than Gold. A man sinking in a bog-hole says: Oh I am Sunk for ever. Another, covering his face, says: Let me hide my Face, how can I now shew my self to my Creditors.

A financial crisis in 1772, following the collapse of a speculative mania in Scotland, largely due to the Ayr Bank (see Letters of Hume, 1932, ii. 263-4) was precipitated by the failure of Alexander Fordyce, a Scot, and the leading partner in an important London bank, see No. 5016. There was a panic in the City, and the clamour against the Scots was revived. Walpole, Last Journals, 1920, i. 117 f. See No. 4947. North in his budget speech of 1 May 1772 estimated that if peace continued for ten years, the National Debt would be reduced by £17,000,000. Parl. Hist., xvii. 489. See also No. 4969.

$4 \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

4962 [SIX REMARKABLE HEADS.]¹ [1 Sept. 1772]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xli. 360. Six caricature portraits in circles illustrating 'The Sale by Auction, A Dream', pp. 360-4, in which members or adherents of the Ministry are put up to auction at Christie's.

N^o 1. The head of an ass, 'a prime minister' (Lord North), Minister and an ass being synonymous terms.

N^o 2. The bust-portrait of a man in riding-dress, wearing a jockey cap, a riding whip under his l. arm. 'A duke, a gambler, a privy-counsellor and a skeleton!' The Duke of Grafton, see No. 4959. Having refused a post in the Cabinet, he took little part in the Government, and attacks on him by caricatures were probably stimulated by the Letters of Junius, e.g. that of 27 Nov. 1771. Letters, ed. Everett, 1927, 269 ff.

N^o 3. Bust-portrait of a man in laced coat looking to l., scarcely a caricature. He is described as 'the miraculous Br—w himself alias Cream-coloured Tommy', and pilloried as a procurer. Thomas Bradshaw, a Lord of the Admiralty and secretary to Grafton. Junius, op. et loc. cit., attacks him, using and perhaps bestowing the epithet cream-coloured. He was surnamed 'the cream-coloured parasite'. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, i. 351. Walpole calls him 'Pimp to Lord Barrington'. Notes on Mason's Satires, ed. Toynbee, p. 64. See Nos. 4959, 5018.

¹ Title taken from 'Directions to the Book-binder'.

N^o 4. H.L. portrait of a negro in a striped suit. 'Mungo' or Jeremiah Dyson, here described as bought by the Irish patriots to be hanged in effigy, an allusion to the miscarriage of his Irish pension, see Nos. 4936, 4942.

N^o 5. Bust-portrait of a macaroni, wearing a small hat, a club or queue of hair, and holding a tasselled cane. He is described as 'the Cub', and was to be thrown away not sold, 'for all people seem to be of opinion, "That a Macaroni is worth nothing"'. He is C. J. Fox, who was the macaroni par excellence, as the term was used by Walpole, for the extravagant young gamblers who were leaders of fashion. Cf. Walpole's comment on Mason's lines:

The Jews and Macaroni's are at war:
The Jews prevail, and thund'ring from the stocks
They seize, they bind, they circumcise C——s F——.

Heroic Epistles. Written Summer 1772. 'The Chiefs of the Maccaronis became known beyond the limits of their fantastic Dominion by their excessive Gaming.' Mason's Satirical Poems, ed. P. Toynbee, 1926, p. 70. See also No. 5010.

N^o 6. Bust-portrait of an elderly man. He is 'Sir Gibby', one of the Scots who 'preside in our cabinets and lead kings as they list'. Sir Gilbert Elliot (1722-77), Treasurer of the Navy 1770, and reputed a special confidant of George III. Cf. Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, i. 316.

$6\frac{13}{16} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ in. (pl.); circles c. $1\frac{15}{16}$ in. diam.

4963 THE WICKED STATESMAN, OR THE TRAITOR TO HIS COUNTRY, AT THE HOUR OF DEATH. [1 Sept. 1772]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, ix. 69. A companion print to No. 4965. A man (l.) wearing a ribbon and star is seated in a high-backed chair at a small round table; he shrinks back in horror at the sight of three monsters advancing towards him surrounded by flames. In the centre a horned demon with animal's legs, holds up in his l. claw a table resembling tables of the Commandments in churches of the period. Its double columns are headed, Catalogue of the different Sins, Committed by the Earl of — against God, his King & his Country. With the other claw he points at what is written below. On the r. a naked and emaciated figure with the head of a skull runs towards the statesman threatening him with a spear and outstretched talons. A crocodile (r.) advances with open jaws. A serpent coiling round the statesman's leg, opens its jaws to strike. On the table are three money-bags and two documents, one headed Scheme for selling England to the French. On the floor are two books: Art of Bribery and Machiavel. The portrait is probably a generalized one, it has a certain resemblance to Grafton, none to Bute as suggested by the inscription 'Earl of —'. Probably copied from No. 4964.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 3\frac{15}{16}$ in.

4964 THE MINISTER IN SURPRIZE. [n.d., see No. 4963]

Engraving. Another and probably earlier version of No. 4960 reversed. The words on the tablet held by the demon are The American Resolves are a Devil of a Dose. The papers on the table are inscribed New Members and Civil List in Arrears. The books on the floor are American Constitution and List of Pensioners. The crocodile and the figure with the head of a skull are absent. The minister is the same except that he has no ribbon and star. The 'American Resolves' may be the opposition to the Stamp Act which led to its repeal in 1766. For the succession of resolutions (1765-74) in the Colonies against trade with England see Schlesinger, The Colonial Merchants and the American Revolution, 1763-76.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 3\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4965 THE CONTRAST; OR THE VIRTUOUS PATRIOT AT THE HOUR OF DEATH. [1 Oct. 1772]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, ix. 108. A companion print to No. 4963. In a large curtained bed a man lies surrounded by his weeping family. A clergyman kneels at the bedside in prayer. An angel radiating rays of light on the bed, points to the sky.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 3\frac{15}{16}$ in.

4966 THE CITY JUNTO OR THE MIN—ST—L [MINISTERIAL] ALDERMEN OF GOTHAM IN CONSULTATION. [1 Nov. 1772]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, ix. 128. Six men in furred aldermen's gowns sit round a table on which is a punch-bowl. The most prominent alderman (r.) holds a paper inscribed A Treatise on good Eating and drinking. A seventh alderman stands, holding up a paper inscribed, behold our Brethren which serves as a title to a large picture on the wall, in which a bull, an ass, and a hog (H.L. figures) stand on their hind legs in conference. The presiding alderman appears to be Harley, see No. 4939, &c. The figures are caricatured, and in general of gross appearance.

$6\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{15}{16}$ in.

4967 THE PATRIOTS DECEIVED, OR TOWNSEND TRIUMPHANT. [1 Dec. 1772]

Vol. IV. No. XXXIII.

Engraving. From the Town and Country Magazine, iv. 585. Wilkes, holding the cap of liberty on a staff and wearing a furred alderman's gown, is stepping into a state coach. He is being pulled back by another alderman. A third alderman (r.) is clasping his hands in distress. On the l. one alderman takes, though with an air of reluctance, money-bags and notes from another. All wear furred gowns. Behind (l.) a parson watches with a face of satisfaction; with him is a very obese man. In the foreground a small boy (l.) appears to be clapping his hands while a dog barks, on the r. a little chimney sweep with brush and bag of soot points derisively at Wilkes. Behind (r.) a man wearing a laced hat weeps into a handkerchief.

Wilkes had been returned at the head of the poll for the mayoralty in 1772 but was rejected by the Court of Aldermen in favour of Alderman Townsend, one of the City patriots who had quarrelled with Wilkes. Sharpe, London and the Kingdom, iii. 132-4. The clergyman in the background appears to be Parson Horne. The transaction with money-bags is probably intended to represent Harley distributing bribes from the ministry to secure the rejection of Wilkes, for which the King was extremely anxious. Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, ii. 401. The accompanying dialogue consists of an altercation between Wilkes and Townsend without reference to the bystanders. For Townsend see Notes and Queries, 11th S. v., pp. 2-4 (1912). For the quarrel between Wilkes and Horne (which involved Townsend and others) see No. 4861, &c., and Nos. 5129-31; for Harley, No. 4939, &c.

$3\frac{5}{8} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4968 THE BALANCE OF CREDIT.

Publish'd according to act of parliament Decr 28. 1772 by J. Almon in Piccadilly. price one Shilling.

Engraving. An eagle holds in his beak the beam of a pair of scales; Lord North, in profile to the l., and looking through his spy-glass, stands below, adding a document to the l. and lighter scale; the r. scale rests on the ground (or ocean) within an area inscribed The South Sea. The l. beam of the scale is inscribed 1772, the r. beam 1720. On Lord North's l. scale, that of 1772, are documents inscribed Reduct. of Navy; Secret Com.; Select Com.; North is adding one inscribed Suspension of Supervision. The r. scale (empty) is inscribed India Stock 00001. This is to show that the national credit in 1772 is even lower than at the time of the South Sea Bubble in 1720. Seated facing North is Britannia with her shield and spear; she holds out her hand saying to him An Able Minister would Balance it. Her foot is on a Map of England, on which Hayes and Stowe are written in the south-west corner, to imply that able ministers might be found in those places, the seats of Chatham and Lord Temple. In the upper l. corner of the design is a view of the Tower of London, the bridge inscribed Traitors Bridge. The pendant to this in the upper r. corner is a view (on a larger scale) of the gateway of St. James's Palace. George III wearing a crown leans out of a window over the archway holding a fishing-rod, at the end of his line is a large begging-box inscribed Date Obolum Belisario. In his l. hand he holds out a paper inscribed Arrears of Civil List. Beneath the title is etched,

*Jove lifts the golden Balances that Show
The fates of mortal men & things below.*

The documents on Lord North's scale refer to the appointment of a Select Committee on East India Affairs voted 13 Apr. 1772 and the further appointment of a Secret Committee in December. On 18 Dec. 1772 a Bill was passed to restrain the East India Company from appointing supervisors in spite of the protests of the Company, see No. 5102. On 23 Apr. 1771 orders had been issued for reducing the Navy to peace strength. Cal. H.O. Papers, 1770-2, p. 247. See also corr. of Sept. 1772 between North and Sandwich on the reduction of the Navy, Sandwich Papers, i. 1932, pp. 19-26. For the Civil List see also Nos. 5105, 5124.

$9\frac{1}{16} \times 13\frac{1}{2}$ in.

4969 BOREAS.

Engraving. From the New Foundling Hospital for Wit. Part V, 1772 (frontispiece). A portrait of Lord North (T.Q.L.) speaking in the House of Commons. He is in profile to the r. looking through an eye-glass held in his l. hand, and reading from a paper held in his r. hand. Beneath the design is engraved, I Promise to pay seventeen millions in ten Years—if I am Minister (Parliamentary Register), an allusion to North's budget speech, 1 May 1772, Parl. Hist. xvii. 484, see Nos. 4961, 5099.

A similar portrait, with the same title, probably copied from this one, was used in the Oxford Magazine, 1774, see No. 5231.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

4970 [THE SENATORS:]

London: Printed for G. Kearsly in Ludgate Street.

MDCCLXXII.

Engraving. An oval design which decorates the title-page of the Senators: or a candid examination into the Merits of the Principal Performers of S^t. Stephens Chapel. The Fourth Edition with Alterations and Additions. The Speaker, in the Speaker's chair, sits behind the table on which is the mace and a document inscribed Royal Marriage Bill. An axe is suspended above his head. His feet rest on two rolled documents beneath the table: Magna Charta and the Bill of Rights. A standing figure (r.) in armour, apparently intended for Cromwell, is pointing at the Marriage Bill. Members of the Ministry sit on the Treasury Bench. Other members are seen standing and sitting behind. Beneath is engraved:

*Thus our Senators cheat the deluded People with a shew
Of LIBERTY, which yet they ne'er must taste of;
Drive us like Wrecks down the rough Tide of Power,
Whilst no hold's left to save us from destruction.*

Otway.

This illustrates a poem which appears to have reached a fourth edition in a year. It is a violent attack on members of the ministerial party by name—members of the Opposition are correspondingly praised.

For the opposition to the Marriage Act, see Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 23-4, 27-31, 33-71. The Bill was introduced into the Lords on 20 Feb. 1772. Parl. Hist. xvii. 383 ff. It occasioned the resignation of Charles Fox, cf. Nos. 4944, 5113.

Oval, $2\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in.; pl. $3\frac{3}{4} \times 5\frac{3}{8}$ in.

1772

PERSONAL SATIRES

4971-4984

Series of Tête-à-tête portraits.

4971 N° XXXIV. MISS J—S. [1 Jan. 1772]
N° XXXV. THE MIDDLESEX CHAMPION.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 625. Two bust portraits in oval frames, illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the Middlesex Champion and Miss J—nes.' An account of Luttrell, who opposed Wilkes at the Middlesex election, and of his amours. The seduction of Arabella Bolton, see Nos. 4285, 4852, is alluded to, though the story is qualified as 'greatly exaggerated to serve the purposes of party', in order to render the colonel obnoxious at the time of his election. Allusions are made to the marriage of his sister to the Duke of Cumberland, in which he is said to have played 'a capital part', see No. 4890. Miss J. is identified by H. Bleackley as Polly Jones.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4972 Vol. III. N° XXXVII. THE FEMALE POLITICIAN. [Jan. 1772]
N° XXXVIII. THE REVEREND JOINER.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iii. 681 (Supplement). Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the Reverend Joiner and Mrs. L—n'. An account of Dr. Wilson, Master of the Joiners' Company, and Rector of St. Stephen Walbrook, a member of the Bill of Rights Society. He is said to have 'routed Horne', and to be a doughty advocate of Wilkes. His past mistresses include 'Lady G—nst—n', see No. 4979, alleged to have since served him as a procuress. Being anxious to find a lady who was 'a female patriot' he was informed that there was only one, Mrs. Macaulay; in default of her, he discovered Mrs. L—n, a widow of about forty, a 'public writer', proficient in history and politics.

The Doctor's later intimacy with Mrs. Macaulay became notorious, see Nos. 5410, 5441.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5542 b.

4973 N° II. M^{RS} L—SLE. Vol. 4
N° III. LORD H—N. [1 Feb. 1772]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine. iv. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . . ' An account of the political and military career and amours of William, 2nd Earl of Harrington, 1719-79, see No. 5033. His wife is spoken of as 'a professed Messalina' who yet 'preserves some decency in her manners', see No. 4903. Mrs. L— is the daughter of an officer (P—ker) killed at the siege of Havannah and the widow of an attorney.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4974 N° IV. M^{RS} K—DAL.

Vol. 4

N° V. THE EQUESTRIAN HERO.

[1 March 1772]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iv. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Henry, 10th Earl of Pembroke (1734-94), author of a 'treatise on horsemanship' (Method of Breaking Horses, 1st ed. 1762). His elopement with Miss H—r [Hunter] is recounted, the pair going to the Hotel d'Angleterre, Brussels, kept by 'madam Bougie' (de Bouget), mother to 'Mrs. Kn—les', wife of Admiral Knowles, then alleged to be divorced on account of an affair with Captain Gamb—r (James Gambier, 1723-89, afterwards vice-admiral). After his reconciliation with his wife he was reputed the lover of 'first rate toasts', who were supplanted by Mrs. K—dal [Kendal]. She is the reputed daughter of the late Lord P—t by 'the celebrated Peg Ham—n. After she eloped from school with her dancing master, K—, she became financially embarrassed, and established a successful boarding school at Brompton. Here she met Lord Pembroke, who induced her to give up her school by giving her an annuity of double the annual profits.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4975 N° VII. M^{RS} V—T.

Vol. 4

N° VIII. THE BATTERSEA BARON.

[1 April 1772]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iv. 121. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the amours of a descendant of 'St. J', that is, Frederick, 3rd Viscount St. John and 2nd Viscount Bolingbroke, 1734-87. Mrs. (or Miss) V—nt is a clergyman's daughter and milliner's apprentice who was drugged by a procuress on behalf of Lord B.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4976 N° X. M^{RS} G—N.

Vol. 4

N° XI. L—D IRON—HAM

[1 May 1772]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iv. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the amours of Simon Luttrell, Baron Irnham, subsequently Viscount Carhampton and Earl Carhampton in the Irish peerage—then conspicuous as the father of Col. Luttrell and of Mrs. Horton who had recently married the Duke of Cumberland.

Mrs. G., passing as an officer's widow, was married by arrangement to an oilman with a portion from Lord I.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4977 N° XIII. THE CELEBRATED M^{RS} B—DL—Y.

N° XIV. CAPTAIN H—R.

[1 June 1772]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames on one plate illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of George Hanger (1751?-1824), son of Baron Coleraine and of Mrs. Baddeley (1745-86). Captain H— is said to have insisted on her admission to the Pantheon, on the second night, in spite of the decision to exclude women of doubtful character; see No. 4998.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4978 N° XVI. M^{RS} W—T.

[1 July 1772]

N° XVII. THE MINDEN HERO.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iv. 289. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Lord George Germain and of Mrs. W—st, widow of a Captain W— who had served under Germain in Germany. For Germain at Minden see Nos. 3680-7, &c.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4979 LADY G—STON.

[July 1772]

THE MODERN ESCULAPIUS.

Engraving. From the Town and Country Magazine, iv. 283* (Occasional Appendix). Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of Sir William B—e and Lady G—ston'. An account of Sir William Browne, M.D. (1692-1774) see D.N.B. Lady Gunston, a widow, is a demi-rep who forced a baronet to sign a paper promising marriage or a payment of £10,000 by threatening him with a pistol. She is 'celebrated for her amours, intrigues and procuring' and feigned illness to secure the doctor, said to be an easy conquest.

No Gunston baronetage is included in G.E.C. Complete Baronetage. The doctor's portrait appears to be copied from the W.L. caricature by Thomas Orde; see No. 4833.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{2}$ in.

4980 N° XIX MADAME P—LLE.

[1 Aug. 1772]

N° XX THE HEROIC MINISTER.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iv. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. The bravery of Sir Robert Murray Keith in protecting the Queen of Denmark at and after the palace revolution of January 17, 1772, see No. 4945, &c., is related with some accuracy. Mme P. is a French milliner in London.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4981 N° XXII MISS BETSY WIL—X.

[1 Sept. 1772]

N° XXIII THE INFLEXIBLE PATRIOT.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iv. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Sir George Savile, 1726-84, identified by his refusal to accept nomination as a member of the Committee on East India affairs, see Parl. Hist. xvii. 464. From 'a pretty numerous list of his dulcineas', 'Nancy P—rsons' alone is named, besides Betsy Wil—x, a courtesan who 'passes for a relation' when she visits him. See No. 4851.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4982 N° XXV. M^{RS} O—SB—N. Vol. IV
 N° XXVI. LORD G—R. [1 Oct. 1772]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iv. 457. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate the 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the political career and amours of Granville Leveson-Gower (1721-1803), afterwards first Marquis of Stafford, alluding to the Westminster Election of 1749. Mrs. Osbern was a foundling apprenticed to a milk-woman, who has had a succession of wealthy lovers and is still 'scarce twenty'.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4983 N° XXVIII MISS L—B—T Vol. IV
 N° XXIX LORD P—Y [1 Nov. 1772]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iv. 513. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Lord Percy (1742-1817), afterwards second Duke of Northumberland, and of his relations with his first wife, Lady Anne Stuart, daughter of Lord Bute, from whom he was divorced, and of his amours. Miss L— is a courtesan to whom his purse is entirely devoted.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4984 N° XXXI. THE TEMPLE TOAST Vol. IV
 N° XXXII. THE AMOROUS ADVOCATE [1 Dec. 1772]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iv. 569. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the amours of a distinguished Law Officer of the Crown and of a young woman who presided at the bar of a coffee-house near the Temple. He is Thurlow, then attorney-general, who was an habitué of Nando's coffee-house.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

4985-5055 and related numbers catalogued in Volume IV.

Darley's series of caricatures, continued from p. 41.

VOLUME II

4985 [TITLE PAGE.]¹

Engraving. In conventional garlands of laurel leaves with architectural ornament: VOL. II. | OF | CARICATURES · | MACARONIES · | & | CHARACTERS · BY | SUNDRY · LADIES · GENTLEM^N · | ARTISTS · & C | PUB^D | BY · MDARLY · N° 39 · | STRAND · | 1772 · |
 7 × 5 in. (pl.).

4986 V. 2. 1. CAPT^N CUTLASS.

Pub^d by MDarley N° 39 Strand Nov^r 18th 1771 Accor^g to Act

Engraving. A man (W.L.) walking to l. and looking to his l. with a smile

¹ There is also a coloured impression.

He wears an enormous cutlass. In his r. hand is a cane which rests on his r. shoulder; his left hand is on his hip. Dress: military coat and hat with a cockade, knee-breeches, low buckled shoes. His hair is in a large looped club.

$5\frac{3}{16} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in.

4987 V. 2. 2. THE TIGER MACARONI, OR TWENTY MORE,
KILL'EM.¹

Pub^d by M. Darly accor^s to Act Dec^r 1st. 1771 (39 Strand)

Engraving. A W.L. profile figure of a man in a hat and military coat with facings. His hair stands out in a long, thin, stiffened queue. His r. hand holds a tasselled cane which rests on his shoulder; his l. is on the hilt of his sword. Possibly intended for Lieut. Alexander Murray, the officer in command of the Guards at the so-called Massacre of St. George's Fields, 10 May 1768. (See No. 4196 and references there given.) This was still a live issue, see No. 4852 and Ann. Reg. 1771, pp. 196-200.

$5\frac{9}{16} \times 3\frac{13}{16}$ in.

4988 3. BILLY-BUTTON, MASTER · OF · THE · CEREMONIES
TO AN EIGHTEEN PENNY ROUT & ASSEMBLY.

Pub^d by MDarly accor^s to Act Dec^r 1st 1771 (39 Strand)

Engraving. A man standing (W.L.) in profile to r. He appears to be bowing, his r. hand is held out, his l. fingers touch his breast. His profile is grotesque, with a bulbous nose and double chin. His hair is in a club. He wears a laced coat and waistcoat, frilled shirt-sleeves, low buckled shoes, and a sword. Billy Button is a character in Foote's play of The Maid of Bath, first played 26 June 1771, the part being taken by Weston.

$5\frac{13}{16} \times 3\frac{13}{16}$ in.

4989 V. 2. 4. THE FEMALE TURF MACARONI.¹

Pub^d by M. Darly Decem^r 24th 1771 accor^s to Act.

Etching. W.L. figure in profile of a lady in a riding-habit holding a riding-whip in her right hand. Her hair, without powder, is tied up in a club. She wears a cravat and a cap with an erect plume of feathers.

Probably the Duchess of Grafton, the Duke being the Turf Macaroni in this series, see No. 4634; see also No. 5324.

$5\frac{5}{8} \times 3\frac{7}{8}$ in.

4990 V. 2. 5. THE OXFORD · MACARONI.

Pub by MDarly accor to Act Jan^y 11th 1772

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man in profile to r. walking with mincing steps, both hands on his hips. He is slim except for a protruding stomach. He wears a tasselled mortar-board, a pair of bands, a long gown open and showing coat, waistcoat, and knee-breeches. His hair is curled on his forehead and is in a long looped club.

$6\frac{1}{16} \times 4\frac{7}{16}$ in.

¹ There is also a coloured impression.

4991 V. 2. 6. THE PRETTY MANTUA MAKER¹*Pub according to Act Jan^y 1 1772 by M Darly Strand.*

Engraving. A young woman, W.L., walking to the r., she looks downwards over her r. shoulder. Her hands are crossed in front over a bundle wrapped in check material which she is carrying. She is elegantly dressed in a hat with ribbons, a cloak, a trained skirt. In manner and dress she resembles, though with a more demure air and a longer petticoat, A Modern Demi-rep No. 4922. Cf. No. 4923.

6 × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

7. THE FEMALE CONOISEUR.

See No. 4692—1 Feb. 1772

A portrait of Mary Darly, by Matthew Darly. B.M. Cat. Engr. Br. Portraits.

8. THE GRUB STREET MACARONI.

See No. 4693—3 Feb. 1772

4992 V. 2. 9. THE UNFORTUNATE MACARONI.Pub accor to Act Feb^y 5 1772 by M Darly Strand

Engraving. A W.L. standing figure, full-face, of a man dressed in the height of fashion. He stamps with rage, his r. leg being raised high; his r. arm is also raised, his fist clenched. His face (adorned with two patches) is distorted with anger. His hair is curled. He wears a small hat, a fringed cravat, a sprigged and laced waistcoat, sprigged stockings with clocks. A cane hangs from his l. wrist and he wears a sword. Probably the portrait of an unlucky gambler, see No. 4697. For the gaming at this time see Last Journals of H. Walpole under date Feb. 1772.

6 $\frac{7}{16}$ × 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.4993 10. THE NOVICIATE OF A MACARONI. RANELAGH. 1772.Pub according to Act by M Darly Feb^y 10th 1771 [sic].

Engraving. Portrait of a man, middle-aged or elderly, W.L. walking in profile to the r. He wears a macaroni wig with ringlets and a large club tightly bound with black ribbon. A small three-cornered hat is in his l. hand, his r. is on his hip. He wears a sword, a nosegay, a ruffled shirt, and low buckled shoes.

6 × 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.4994 V. 2. 11. A TEMPLE MACARONI.Pub by M Darly accor^s to Act Feb^y 14th 1772

Engraving. Full-face portrait of a man walking to r. and looking to his r. His r. hand is in his coat pocket, his l. thrust in his waistcoat. He wears a looped hat, his hair or wig is in a long queue bound with black ribbon. He wears a sword, laced coat, ruffled shirt and cravat, low buckled shoes. A dog of greyhound type walks in front.

He resembles portraits of Richard Grenville-Temple, 1st Earl Temple (1711-79).

6 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 5 $\frac{9}{16}$ in.¹ There is also a coloured impression.

4995 12. MISS LOVEJOY.Pub accor to Act Feby 9th 1772 by MDarly Strand.

Engraving. A woman (W.L.) walking to the l. full face. Her hair is dressed high with tight curls at the side. She wears a fur-bordered cloak with a hood over a frilled and founced petticoat with a looped-up train. Her hands are in a muff trimmed with frills of ribbon. A double row of pearls or beads is round her neck. A well-known house of ill-fame in the Piazza, Covent Garden, was known as Lovejoy's. H. Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, p. 154. Cf. Nos. 4786, 5057.

 $6\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in.4996 V. 2. 13. A LAW MACARONI.Pub by M Darly Strand Feby 16th 1772 accor to Act.

Engraving. Portrait of a man, W.L., walking in profile to l. He wears a macaroni wig with a looped and bound club, and a cravat over a pair of bands. His long gown reaches to the ground. His r. hand holds a rolled document, his l. is on his hip.

 $6\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in.4997 V. 2. 14. THE CLERICAL MACARONI.R.S^t G.M. [St. George Mansergh] pinx^tI.W. sculp.Pub accor^s to Act by M Darly Strand March 4 1772

Engraving. A man, W.L., grotesquely caricatured standing in profile to the r. He is in the height of fashion (burlesqued) and there is nothing clerical about his dress. His r. hand holds a large tasselled cane. His wig has enormous rolls of hair. He wears a nosegay, a flowered waistcoat over a protruding stomach, a large cravat, striped breeches, clocked stockings.

 $6\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

15. THE PARADE MACARONI. [Ensign Fitzpatrick.]

See No. 4704—25 Feb. 1772

4998 V. 2. 16. A PANTHEON NO. REP.Pub by M Darly Strand March 3^d 1772 according to Act.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a lady, standing in profile to the l. In her r. hand she holds a ticket inscribed PANTHEON admit Lady No. Rep. She resembles portraits of Mrs. Baddeley and appears to be regarding her Pantheon ticket with a complacent smile. She wears a low bodice and a necklace; a train from her shoulders falls over a frilled and founced petticoat. Her elbow sleeves have wide lace frills, and she wears long gloves. Her hair is dressed high and ornamented with lace.

Rep means a person of loose character. (O.E.D.) It was rumoured that 'women of slight character' would not be admitted to the masquerade for the opening of the Pantheon in February 1772. This was supposed to be directed against Mrs. Baddeley, but a story that she was escorted into the building by fifty gentlemen with drawn swords appears to be an exaggerated version of action taken by George Hanger, see No. 4977.

Mrs. Harris comments on the mixed company, which included Mrs. Baddeley 'and most of the gay ladies in town and ladies of the first rank and character; and by appearance some very low people'. Letters of the First Earl of Malmesbury, i. 247. The Pantheon was opened on 27 Jan. 1772, 'the company were an olio of all sorts; peers, peeresses, honourables and right honourables, jew brokers, demi reps, lottery insurers, and quack doctors.' Ann. Reg. 1772, 69.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 4\frac{5}{8}$ in.

17. THE SURRY MACARONI.

See No. 4694—12 Mar. 1772

18. THE FORTUNATE MACARONI.

See No. 4697—16 Mar. 1772

4999 19. THE CAMBRIDGE MACARONI.

Pub accor to Act March 17th 1772 by M Darly Strand

Engraving. W.L. portrait (caricature) of a stout man walking in profile to l. His l. hand is outspread on his protruding waistcoat. He wears a tasselled mortar-board, a very long and voluminous gown which rests on the ground. Except for his hair, which is in a doubled-up macaroni club, and ruffled shirt-sleeves, he is plainly dressed.

$6\frac{1}{16} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5000 V. 2. 20. A MACARONI LIVERYMAN.¹

Pub accor to Act March 25 1772 by M Darly Strand

Engraving. A very stout man of plebeian appearance standing in profile to the r. He wears a furred livery gown, and his hair is in a long doubled-up macaroni club. In his r. hand is a knife combined with a spoon by a folding device; in his l. is a two-pronged fork.

$6\frac{3}{16} \times 4\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5001 V. 2. 21. THE MACARONI AUCTIONEER.¹

Pub accor to Act March 24th 1772 by M Darly Strand

Engraving. A man standing, W.L., in profile to l., with an auctioneer's hammer in his r. hand, a taper or candle in a stand in his l. He is elegantly dressed in a laced coat, cravat, and ruffled shirt. Except for the exaggerated macaroni wig and an accentuated nose the portrait is hardly a caricature. It evidently represents Abraham Langford (1711-74) of the Covent Garden Auction Rooms, the leading auctioneer at this time. He is probably the auctioneer styled 'the Macaroni' by Junius in his Letter to Grafton of 22 June 1771. Letters, ed. Everett, 1927, p. 213. See No. 5171.

$6\frac{3}{16} \times 4\frac{11}{16}$ in.

5002 V. 2. 22. VENISON & CLARET. OR SR HUMPY HAUNCH
BAR^T OF GLUTTON HALL.¹

Pub by M Darly Strand April 1st 1772 according to Act.

Engraving. A W.L. figure standing towards the l. looking over his l.

¹ There is also a coloured impression.

shoulder. He is stout with an enormously protruding stomach. His r. hand is thrust inside his coat, his l. is in his coat-pocket. His hat is under his l. arm. He wears a laced coat, a shirt with lace ruffles and a sword.

$6\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5003 V. 2. 23. A PILLAR OF THE CHURCH. WITH IT'S PROPER CAPITAL.¹

Pub. by M Darly Strand April 1st 1772 accor to Act

Engraving. A man, stout and elderly, dressed as a bishop stands facing T.Q. to l. His r. hand holds a tasselled mortar-board. He wears a silk gown, lawn sleeves, a pair of bands and an enormous wig. At the top of the plate is engraved, Bishop of Eider Down. Probably a portrait of the Bishop of Down, Dr. James Trail. Reproduced, A. E. Richardson, Georgian England, 1931, p. 57.

$6\frac{3}{16} \times 4\frac{9}{16}$ in.

5004 24. ROAST BEEF AND PORT · OR BULLY BRAMBLE ESQ^R JUSTICE OF PEACE IN WASP TOWN.¹

Pub. by M Darly accor to Act April 1st 1772 Strand

Engraving. Portrait, W.L., of a stout man facing T.Q. to r., looking to l. over his r. shoulder. His l. hand is thrust under his buttoned coat; his r. (gloved) rests on a cane. He wears a looped hat, a tightly curled wig and is plainly dressed.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ in.

VOLUME III

5005 [TITLE PAGE.]

Pub^d accor^e to Act by M Darly Inventor 1772

Engraving. Lettering in a frame ornamented with a garland of roses:

1772 | VOL. III. | OF | MACARONIES. | CHARACTERS. | CARI-
CATURES. | &C | DESIGN'D. BY. THE. | GREATEST . PERSON-
AGES | ARTISTS. &C. GRAVED. & | PUB^d. BY. M DARLY. 39. |
STRAND.

$7\frac{3}{8} \times 5\frac{1}{4}$ in. (pl.).

1. THE SLEEPY MACARONI STE'—ALING A NAP.¹

See No. 4649—1 June 1772

This appears to have been wrongly included in the series. It is published by Bretherton, not Darly. The same subject (a satirical portrait of Stephen Fox ('Ste') asleep) is No. 14 of this volume.

No. 1 in this volume should be The Shuffling Macaroni, 2 April, 1772.²

¹ There is also a coloured impression.

² Volume exhibited by Mr. Dyson Perrins at the Burlington Fine Arts Club, 1932.

5006 V. 3. 2. THE PORTER MACARONI.

Pub^d by M Darly Apⁱ 3^d 1772, accor to Act (39) Strand

Engraving. Standing figure, W.L., of a tall slim man in profile to r. The profile and the enormous looped queue are caricatured. In his l. hand he holds a long tasselled cane. He wears a three-cornered hat and ruffled shirt. Perhaps a portrait of some one named Porter.

7¼ × 4⅞ in. (pl.).

3. A MACARONI. IN A MORNING DRESS IN THE PARK. See No. 4690—23 Apr. 1772

4. LADY DRUDGER GOING TO RANELAGH.
See No. 4647—25 Apr. 1772

See No. 5533.

5007 V. 3. 5. THE MACARONI HABERDASHER.

Pub by M Darly accor to Act (39) Strand May 7th 1772

Engraving. A man, W.L., dressed macaroni-fashion with a small hat, looped club, and cravat. In his l. arm he holds an open arched-top coffer full of caps and laces. In his r. hand he holds by a ribbon a woman's flat hat trimmed with ribbons.

7 × 4⅞ in. (pl.).

5008 V. 3. 6. THE RIDICULE.

Pub by M Darly accor to Act May 17th 1772 (39) Strand

Engraving. Two men, W.L., walk to the r. in profile. One (r.) is tall and slim, dressed in the extreme of fashion, with laced hat, lace-trimmed cravat, and shirt frills. He wears a sword and looks through a lorgnette held in his l. hand. In the r. is a tasselled cane. His looped club of hair is so enormous that it is supported on the head and shoulders of the short stout man (apparently a porter), who walks behind him, holding his coat-tails and grinning. Cf. The Ladies Ridicule, No. 4653 (1772), also caricaturing the enormous wigs of the period.

7 × 4⅞ in. (pl.).

5009 7. A CHARACTER.

Eliz. B. fec [?Elizabeth B. Gulston.]

Pub^d by MDarly at 39 Strand accor to Act May 19th 1772.

Engraving. A man standing in profile to r., apparently caricatured for his old-fashioned dress and straight lank figure. His l. hand is outstretched, his r. holds a sword of which only the hilt is visible. He wears a wide flat hat and bag-wig. His long narrow coat hangs well below his knees. Beneath the title is etched:

*An Ugly Face & Staring Hat,
A Carcase which has lost its Fat.
An ill shap'd Coat, too bad for shew
Yet Hides the Aukward Legs below.*

*The Sword a Thing not meant for Harm
And Therefore Hug'd betwixt the Arm.
Whene'er at Court he shews his Face
The Breeding Ladies Quit the Place
Take him in short from Top to Toe
And set him down the Queer Old Beau.*

7×4 $\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5010 V. 3. 8. THE ORIGINAL MACARONI.

Pub accor to Act by M Darly Strand May 20th 1772.

Engraving. Caricature portrait, W.L., of a man in profile walking to the r. grotesquely dressed, probably for a masquerade. In his r. hand he holds a rod to each end of which is slung a fox's tail. A large fox's tail hangs from the back of his neck. A bell hangs outwards from the back of his waist. A ribbon flutters from his r. arm. He wears a small cap with a tuft of feathers at the top. Rows of feathers (quills) or ribbons hang from his cap, his waist, and from the tops of his stockings which leave his knees bare. Above is inscribed Tom Fool the First.

At the masquerades (c. 1772) groups of young men from the universities, some dressed as 'Tom fools with cap and bells', were conspicuous. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, I. 85 n.

Evidently intended for C. J. Fox, a leader of fashion and already a favourite subject of caricature. See 'The senatorial Macaroni or Memoirs of a Young Cub' in The Macaroni and Theatrical Mag. Jan. 1773, with a plate, No. 4810, and for Fox as the leader of the macaronics, see No. 4962. Cf. The Senators, 1772, p. 13 (see No. 4970):

By turns solicited by different plans,
Yet fix'd to none, Fox dresses, games, harangues:
Where varying fashion leads the sportive band,
And whim and folly bound it hand in hand,
Behold him ambling through these flow'ry ways
A model macaroni, A l'Angloise.

7×4 $\frac{7}{8}$ in (pl.).

9. THE ISIS MACARONI.

See No. 4705—27 May 1772

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. cxix.

5011 V. 3. 10. THE BALD FAC'D DOE.¹

E.T. [Topham] Inv^t

Epping [M. Darly] sc.

Pub by M Darly Strand May 29th 1772, accor to Act.

Engraving. Portrait, W.L., of a very stout woman standing in profile to r. Her r. hand is thrust beneath her apron, a bunch of keys hangs from her waist. She wears a cap, elbow sleeves, a figured handkerchief or scarf, a straight full skirt over a quilted petticoat.

A portrait of Mrs. Owen, keeper of an inn at Epping, B. M. Cat. Engr. Br. Portraits. This was the Bald-Faced Stag in Epping Forest, a well-known inn and a resort of Londoners for venison feasts and City hunts. Cf. Public Advertiser, Aug. 20, 1754; Life of Peter von Shaack, p. 158. $7\frac{1}{16} \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

¹ There is also a coloured impression.

5012 V. 3. 11. MODERATE INTEREST. 20 P^B CENT.

E.T. [Topham] Inv^t M.K. Sc.

Pub by M Darly Strand June 1st 1772, accor to Act

Engraving. Three W.L. standing figures. On l. a man with a Jewish profile and a small beard is in profile to the r. In his l. hand is a long cane, in his r. a rolled document. Bundles of papers protrude from his pocket. He wears a wide-brimmed hat. The centre figure is full-face; his hat is in his hand. A paper, Annuities 20 p^t cent, hangs from his pocket. The third figure is in profile to the l. He smiles and holds the arm of the centre figure; in his l. hand is a cane. The two men in profile are dressed in an old-fashioned way with wide-brimmed hats and long coats. Cf. No. 4926. $7 \times 4\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5013 V. 3. 12. THE BATH MACARONI.

Pub by M Darly Strand June 1st 1772 accor to Act.

Engraving. Portrait. A W.L. standing figure in profile to the r. His r. hand is in his breeches pocket, his l. is thrust under his waistcoat. He wears a small hat, a bag-wig, a sword, a ruffled shirt.

$6\frac{15}{16} \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5014 13. A DANCING MASTER MACARONI.

Pub according to Act of Parl^t June 7th by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. A man, W.L., playing a violin. He faces r. but looks over his r. shoulder, his mouth open as if speaking. He is doing dancing steps. He wears a rather short coat, and a ruffled shirt. His hair is in an exaggerated macaroni club.

$7 \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

14. THE SLEEPY MACARONI. [Stephen Fox, afterwards 2nd Lord Holland.] [Bunbury] See No. 4648—4 June 1772

5015 V. 3. 15. THE CATGUT MACARONI.

Pub by M Darly Strand, July 2^d 1772 accor to Act.

Engraving. Portrait, W.L., of a man playing the violin. His figure faces the spectator, his head turned in profile to l. He is dressed macaroni-fashion with a large looped club.

$7 \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5016 V. 3. 16. A (four dice depicted) MACARONI. GAMBLER.

Pub accor to Act by M Darly Strand July 2^d 1772.

Engraving. W.L. Portrait of a man, with his head turned in profile to l., with a dejected expression. In his r. hand is a money bag, in his l. a paper:

Scotch Bill for 10,000l. The four dice of the title indicate that this is Alexander Fordyce, the most active partner in the firm of London bankers, Neale, James, Fordyce, and Down. He absconded in 1772, after which, 10 June 1772, the bank stopped payment. See Walpole, Letters, viii, 178-80, 1 July 1772. He was famous for speculations in 'Change Alley, at first very successful, and for his extravagant way of living. See Every Man's Magazine, July 1772, pp. 11-12. He was a Scot, and the failure rekindled the outcry against the Scots. The speculative mania which caused the crisis had begun in Scotland, see No. 4961.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

17. THE FLY CATCHING MACARONI. [Sir Joseph Banks.] See No. 4695—12 July 1772

18. THE SIMPLING MACARONI. [Dr. Solander.] See No. 4696—13 July 1772

19. THE SCAVOIR VIVRE. See No. 4698—12 July 1772

20. THE ILLITERATE MACARONI. [Lord Suffolk?] See No. 4652—1 July 1772

5017 21. THE MADRAS TYRANT OR THE DIRECTOR . OF . DIRECTORS.

J.S. [monogram]

Pub according to Act of Parl^t March 16 1772 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. A man in military dress riding in profile to the r. on a horse with a long tail and a trimmed saddle cloth. His thin stiffened queue projects from his head. Beneath is etched, Jos. or the Father of Murder. Rapine &c. Probably Lord Clive: there is a certain resemblance to his portraits; he was a large holder of East India stock, and had considerable influence with the Company; the parliamentary enquiry into his conduct was going on at this time. See Nos. 5101, 5102.

5 × 7 in.

22. THE LADIES RIDICULE. See No. 4653—17 July 1772

5018 V. 3. 23. THE MACARONI PROVIDER.

Pub^d according to Act July 21st 1772. by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. A man W.L. in profile to r. carries on his back a doll-like woman who takes the place of the macaroni club. She is swathed round in black ribbon and so attached to his shoulders in the manner of a club of hair. He leers, and carries a tasselled cane with a sharp handle set with what appears to be a snuff-box. He wears a large frilled cravat and a very short coat. She wears a ribbon-trimmed hat, frilled elbow-sleeves, her body is covered with the black swathing, her clocked stockings are visible to the knees. Probably a portrait of some (alleged) notorious procurer; perhaps Thomas Bradshaw whose portrait he somewhat resembles. See No. 4962.

$7\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

24. A FEMALE MACORONI.

See No. 4700—14 July 1772

She resembles the lady (? Mrs. Baddeley) in No. 4998. Reproduced, Social England, ed. Traill, 1904, v, p. 482.

VOLUME IV

5019 [TITLE PAGE.]

Engraving. In an oval frame: VOL· | IV· | OF· | MACARONIES· | CHARACTERS· | CARICATURES· | &C· | BY · M DARLY.

$6 \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5020 V. 4. 1. THE FARMER-MACORONI.

Pub^d accord^s to Act July 24th 1772 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. A man W.L. standing in profile to l. He wears the macaroni looped club, coat, waistcoat, and frilled shirt. With this he wears a round hat, loose gloves, and spurred riding boots. In his r. hand he holds a rough stick cut from the hedge, in the shape of the cane carried by the Macaroni Provider, see No. 5018. Beneath is engraved:

*E'en Farmers dress & mount their Ponies,
And all alike, are Macaronics.*

$7 \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5021 V. 4. 2. THE LITTLE DEANS YARD MACARONI.

Pub by M Darly Strand July 30th 1772 accor to Act,

Engraving. A man W.L. seated in a chair, his r. leg crossed over his l. knee. He looks in profile to the r. and points with his l. hand, the other hangs over the arm of the chair holding a glove. He wears a flat three-cornered hat, a short tightly curled wig, a pair of bands, and a voluminous gown. Beneath is inscribed:

Sanguineos oculos volvit, virgamque requirit.

Probably a portrait of the head master of Westminster School, Dr. Samuel Smith, see Nos. 4680, 4921.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{4}$ (pl.).

3. THE SOUTHWARK MACARONI. [Thrale M.P.]

See No. 4691—24 Aug. 1772

5022 V. 4. 4. THE FUMIGATING MACARONI.

Pub^d according to Act Aug^t 12th 1772 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. Man, W.L., seated full face. In his r. hand he holds out a drawing of a curiously-shaped chair inscribed Stool for the Piles. In his l.

he holds a drawing of a piece of furniture resembling a wardrobe inscribed Fume. From his pocket protrudes a paper, To [h]is Excel[lency] The . . . an Emb[as]sador. On the ground are broken medicine phials. Bundles of dried herbs hang from a cord. He is dressed in a three-cornered hat, tightly curled short wig, coat and laced waistcoat with a ruffled shirt.
6 × 4½ in.

5023 V. 4. 5. A COURTESAN AND FRIZEUR.

Pub^d accord^s to Act August 9th by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. Two W.L. figures. A woman (l.) walks away from the man but looks round over her l. shoulder. She wears a high conical cap trimmed with lace and ribbons, a hooded cloak over a voluminous skirt ornately embroidered at the hem. The man in profile to the l. walks after her. His l. hand holds a tasselled cane which rests on his shoulder, his r. is thrust under his waistcoat. He is fashionably dressed with a laced hat, and his coat appears to have epaulettes.

7 × 4¹⁵/₁₆ in. (pl.).

5024 V. 4. 6. THE ST JAMES'S MACARONI.

Pub accord^s to Act Aug^t 12th 1772 by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. W.L. back view of a man wearing a bag-wig and solitaire. In his r. hand he holds a tasselled cane which rests on the ground. He wears a sword.

An etching by Bretherton after Bunbury with the same title is No. 4712.
7 × 4¹⁵/₁₆ in. (pl.).

5025 V. 4. 7. THE NEWMARKET MACARONI.

Publish'd according to Act Aug^t 18. 1772. by M Darly, 39 Strand.

Engraving. Portrait of a man standing full face in riding dress. His r. hand is in his breeches pocket, his l. (gloved) holds the r. glove and a walking stick. He wears a small round hat with a knot of ribbon, a plain coat and waistcoat with a cravat and spurred top-boots. Beneath is engraved: Return'd from the Black Legg'd Club.

7 × 4¹⁵/₁₆ in. (pl.).

5026 V. 4. 8. THE PICCADILLY MACARONI.

Pub^d accord^s to Act Aug^t 12th 1772 by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. Portrait (caricature) of a very stout man with short legs standing in profile to the l. He wears a three-cornered hat; his club is looped at the back of his very thick neck. He wears a plain coat, ruffled shirt, spurred riding-boots.

7 × 4¹⁵/₁₆ in. (pl.).

5027 V. 4. 9. THE VAUX HALL DEMI-REP.

Publish'd according to Act Aug^t 20. 1772, by M Darly, N^o 39, Strand.

Engraving. A woman walking to the r. and looking over her r. shoulder.

Her wrists are crossed, she holds between them a large sprigged handkerchief. She wears an elaborate ribbon-trimmed hat over a lace cap, a low bodice with a large nosegay and a cloak. A looped-up train shows a fairly short quilted petticoat. Her face is patched.

$7 \times 4\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).

10. THE ELECTED COBLER.

See No. 4709—27 Aug. 1772

11. THE WESTMINSTER MACARONI.

See No. 4654—1 Sept. 1772

5028 V. 4. 12. THE BUTCHER MACARONI

Publish'd as the Act directs, Sept' 7 1772. by M Darly, 39 Strand.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man standing; he sharpens a knife on a steel. On the r. is a butcher's block on which is a large calf's head. He is dressed as a man of fashion and wears a macaroni club, ruffled shirt and cravat. Beneath the title is engraved: 'Watts it you want Watts it you buy.' A portrait of a butcher named Watts, see H. Angelo, Reminiscences, 1904, ii. 267.

$5\frac{15}{16} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5029 13. BUCK & DOE MACARONIES

Publish'd according to Act, Sept' 7. 1772. by M Darly, 39, Strand.

Engraving. A man and woman (W.L.) who appear to be quarrelling. A young woman (l.) runs l. holding up in her r. hand a glass whose contents are being spilled. In her l. hand she holds a sword hilt downwards. She wears a flat ribbon-trimmed hat, low ribbon-trimmed bodice. The man (r.) dressed as a macaroni holds a cane above his head in his r. hand; his l. hand is on the hilt of his sword. The mouths of both are open as if shouting. Beneath the title is engraved, Keeping it up.

$4\frac{5}{8} \times 6\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5030 V. 4. 14. A MUNGO MACARONI.

Publish'd according to Act, by M Darly, 39 Strand, Sept' 10. 1772.

Engraving. A negro, dressed as a macaroni except for his tightly curled natural wool, walks in profile to the r. His r. hand holds a cane, his l. is on the hilt of a short curved sword or sabre with an ornamental hilt affected by macaronis. Perhaps a caricature of Jeremiah Dyson, always called Mungo after the name had been given him in a debate by Col. Barré, 29 Jan. 1769. Mungo was a negro slave in the comic opera The Padlock by Bickerstaffe, and the name implied that Dyson was kept at dirty jobs for the Government. He was a butt of the caricaturists, see No. 4267, &c., and index. Perhaps Soubise, see No. 5120, a caricature of whom was drawn by Angelo, Reminiscences, 1904, ii. 268.

$6\frac{15}{16} \times 5$ in. (pl.).

5031 V. 4. 15. THE MINIATURE MACARONI.Pub^d accor^s to Act, Sep^r 24, 1772 by M Darly (39) Strand.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man standing in profile to the r. In his l. hand he holds up a handkerchief, in his r. is a cane with a large tassel. The figure is about half the size of others of this series; this, and the length of his sword, suggests that he is very small. He is dressed macaroni-fashion, though his looped club is small. Evidently Cosway, the miniature painter, who was very small, see No. 6102, and whose portraits this resembles.

6 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 4 $\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).5032 V. 4. 16. THE EMACIATED BATH MACARONI*Publish'd according to Act. Sep^r 7, 1772 by M Darly, 39 Strand.*

Engraving. Portrait of a man walking to r. supported by crutches. He has a grotesque queue, wears a hat, cravat, and frilled shirt sleeves. His gouty legs are swathed beneath the knee.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{15}{16}$ in.5033 V. 4. 17. THE STABLE Y—D MACARONI*Pub^d accor^s to Act Sep^r 29, 1772 by M Darly 39 Strand*

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man standing full face. His r. hand rests on a tasselled cane. His l. is thrust inside his waistcoat. He wears a laced hat, embroidered waistcoat, ruffled shirt, a solitaire, and a sword. He is knock-kneed. Probably a portrait of Lord Harrington whose house was called the Stable Yard (St. James's); Lady Harrington was called the Stable Yard Messalina, see No. 4903. See also No. 5322. Reproduced, Social England, ed. Traill, 1904, v, p. 229.

7 × 4 $\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).18. THE MACARONI BRICKLAYER, PRIOR TO ANY OTHER MACARONI.

See No. 4656—17 Sept. 1772

Not George III, but a builder named Prior. Angelo, Reminiscences, 1904, ii. 267.

5034 V. 4. 19. THE WOOLWICH · MACARONI*Publish'd as the Act directs, Sep^r 21 1772 by M Darly, 39, Strand.*

Engraving. A man in military dress walking or running in profile to the r. His r. hand holds a cane, his l. the hilt of a sabre. His queue, twisted like a rope, is looped up with narrow ribbon. He wears a hat with a feather, a coat with facings and epaulettes, a ruffled shirt, and half-boots.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).5035 V. 4. 20. THE MERIONETHSHIRE MACARONI*Pub^d accor^s to Act, Oct^r 1st, 1772. by M Darly (39) Strand.*

Engraving. Caricature portrait, W.L., of a man walking to the r. His profile is grotesque. He has a long, thin, tightly-bound queue. Under his r. arm is a knotted stick. His sword has a large old-fashioned hilt. He wears a hat trimmed with a leek, his coat is long; round his neck is knotted a striped neck-cloth.

$7 \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

21. A MACARONI RETURN'D FROM RIDING.

See No. 4657—6 Oct. 1772

5036 V. 4. 22. THE JAMES^S SQUARE MACARONI

Pub^d accord^s to Act, Oct^r 6. 1772, by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. Portrait, W.L., of a man in macaroni dress. In his l. hand he holds out a peer's black velvet hat trimmed with ermine; his r. is thrust inside his waistcoat. He wears a three-cornered hat, and a solitaire.

$7 \times 4\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5037 V. 4. 23. THE OXFORD ADONIS MACARONI.

Pub^d accord^s to Act Oct^r 9. 1772 by M Darly (39) Strand.

Engraving. A man standing (W.L.) in profile to the r. whose face is grotesquely emaciated. He is high-shouldered almost to deformity, and hollow-chested. His hair is in ringlets with a double club. He wears a three-cornered hat, coat, ruffled shirt, and riding-boots. In his r. hand is a long tasselled cane.

$7 \times 4\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5038 V. 4. 24. THE PROTECTING MACARONI

Pub^d accord^s to Act Oct^r 9. 1772, by M Darly (39) Strand.

Engraving. A man (r.) in shirt and breeches is being laced into stays by a shorter man who stands behind him. The taller man is knock-kneed and has some resemblance to the Duke of Grafton. On the ground is a chased goblet to which a label is attached, Duplicate 5. 5. o. The valet or stay-maker is dressed in the prevailing macaroni manner.

$6\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ in.

VOLUME V

5039 [TITLE PAGE.]

Engraving. In an oval frame: VOL. 5. | OF | CARICATURES |
MACARONIES. | & | CHARACTERS | PUB^D BY | M DARLY. | 39 |
STRAND

$6\frac{15}{16} \times 4\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).

V. 5. 1. THE CHELSEA MACARONI.

See No. 4658—10 Oct. 1772

V. 5. 2. THE BUN. MACARONI. [Portrait of one of the Bunbury family?]

See No. 4660—9 Oct. 1772

The little flags with the crest and the legend: 'Has the honour to sarve the Royal Family' in pencil and pen on the impressions there described has not been added. The figure is in profile to the r.

5040 V. 5. 3. THE CAMBLET MACARONI.Pub. accord. to Act Dec^r 2. 1772. by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. Portrait, W.L., full-face, of a young man standing with hands on hips, legs astride. He is not dressed in the macaroni manner, but wears a round cap, beneath which his own hair appears, a plain coat and neck-cloth, with a striped waistcoat.

$6\frac{15}{16} \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5041 V. 5. 4. LIGHT INFANTRY.Pub Dec^r 18 1772 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. An obese man in military dress marching in profile to the r. In his l. hand he carries a musket with bayonet. His hat has a feather plume and he wears spatterdashes.

$7\frac{1}{16} \times 5$ in.

V. 5. 5. A MACARONI WAITER. See No. 4661—11 Dec. 1772

5042 6.¹ SOOTY DUN THE DEVIL'S MEALMAN.Pub^d accord to Act Oct 30 1772 by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. A W.L. figure running forwards. He is grinning; in his r. hand he holds up a short shovel, in his l. is a brush. His clothes are ragged; his toes appear through remnants of buckled shoes. He wears a laced hat, a cravat, and a ruffled shirt. In place of a wig is what appears to be a tightly-curved lamb's fleece resting on his shoulders; two pieces of crossed wood imitate a sword. A miniature figure in ragged clothes and a long thin queue faces him astride a tasselled cane.

He is a chimney sweeper dressed for the first of May celebrations which were usual in London. The small figure may represent a child-apprentice or climbing boy, though there is nothing juvenile in its appearance.

$6\frac{15}{16} \times 5$ in. (pl.).

5043 V. 5. 7. THE MACARONI MERCER.Publish'd according to Act Oct^r 29. 1772, by M Darly, 39, Strand.

Engraving. A W.L. figure looking to l. carrying under his l. arm a roll of material; in his r. hand is what appears to be a yard measure. He is dressed macaroni-fashion with a large looped club, looped hat, and ruffled shirt.

$6\frac{15}{16} \times 4\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5044 V. 5. 8. THE KNIGHTSBRIDGE MACARONI.Publish'd according to Act Oct^r 22, 1772. by M Darly, 39, Strand.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man walking in profile to the r. Under his r. arm is a tasselled cane. His l. hand rests on the end of the scabbard of his sword. His hair is in a macaroni club. His hat is low with a curved brim. He wears a ruffled shirt and cravat, striped breeches, and spurred riding-boots.

$6\frac{15}{16} \times 5$ in. (pl.).

¹ The figure has been added in ink.

5045 V. 5. 9. THE WHALE BONE MACARONI.

Publish'd according to Act, Oct 22. 1772. by M Darly, 39, Strand.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man standing with his feet crossed. In his r. hand is a tasselled cane and under his r. arm are sections of a pair of stays in course of construction. He wears a macaroni club, a laced hat, short coat and laced waistcoat, cravat, and ruffled shirt. Probably a stay-maker.

7 × 4 $\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).

10. THE . BUILDER . MACARONI.

See No. 4662—1 Nov. 1772

5046 V. 5. 11. THE BOTANIC MACARONI

Publish'd as the Act directs Nov^r 14th 1772 by M Darly, 39 Strand.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man walking in profile to the r. In his r. hand he holds a botanic drawing, in his l. a magnifying glass or lorgnette. His gouty r. leg is swathed; from his r. wrist hangs a knotted walking stick. A portrait of Joseph (afterwards Sir Joseph) Banks, see Nos. 4695, 5146, who at this time had recently returned from his expedition with Solander, see No. 4696, to Iceland.

6 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 4 $\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).

12. THE COURSING MACARONI

See No. 4663—19 Nov. 1772

13. THE FIRE-WORK MACARONI. [Leoni.]

See No. 4664—26 Oct. 1772

5047 V. 5. 14. THE ACCOUCHEUR MACARONI

Publish'd according to Act, Nov^r 14. 1772, by M Darly, 39, Strand.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man in profile to the r. In his l. hand he holds out some obstetric instrument; a pair of forceps protrudes from his coat pocket. He wears a bag-wig, three-cornered hat, laced waistcoat, shirt with lace ruffles, and a sword.

7 $\frac{1}{16}$ × 4 $\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5048 V. 5. 15.¹ THE CLERICAL . BUTCHER . MACARONI

St. James. fec

Publish'd accord^s to Act by M Darly 39 Strand Nov 6, 1772.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man with his head turned in profile to the l. In his r. hand he holds a butcher's cleaver, his l. is in his breeches pocket. He is plainly dressed in dark clothes, with a small wig, plain neckcloth, buttoned waistcoat concealing his shirt. Probably some one called Butcher.

7 × 4 $\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

¹ '15' is written over or under an engraved '2'.

5049 V. 5. 16. THE . MARGATE . MACARONI.Pub Nov^r 30 1772 by M Darly 39 Strand accor to Act.

Engraving. W.L. caricature portrait of a man in profile to the l. He is obese, with very short fat legs. In his r. hand he holds an enormous cane which rests on the ground, in his l. is a lorgnette. He wears a looped macaroni club, a laced hat and coat and a sword.

Margate already had the reputation of a plebeian watering place: Gray writes, August 1766, 'one would suppose it was Bartholomew Fair flown down from Smithfield in the London machine . . .' Cf. Cowper, 1779, '. . . Margate though full of company, was generally filled with such company, as people who were nice in the choice of their company, were rather fearful of keeping company with.' Corr. Ed. T. Wright, i. 155.

7 × 4 $\frac{5}{8}$ in. (pl.).

17. THE TOWER MACARONI.

See No. 4659—2 Oct. 1772

5050 V. 5. 18. THE HUNTING MACARONI.Publish'd according to Act Dec^r 17. 1772 by M Darly, 39, Strand.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man in profile to the r. His hair is in an enormous twisted and looped club. He wears a laced coat and waistcoat, a frilled cravat and shirt, riding-boots, and a short sword. A riding-whip is under his r. arm.

7 × 4 $\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).5051 V. 5. 19. THE MACARONI SCHOOLMASTER*Publish'd as the Act directs Dec^r 7. 1772 by M Darly 39 Strand.*

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man standing in profile to the r. He holds a book in his r. hand, a strap in his l. He wears a short, tightly curled wig, and a light flowered dressing-gown over dark clerical clothes.

6 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 4 $\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).5052 20. A PATTERN ADJUTANT.Pub^d accor^g to Act, Dec^r 24th 1772, by M Darly (39) Strand.

Engraving. Portrait of a stout man in military dress in profile to the r. He appears to be marching, his r. leg raised, his body thrown stiffly back. In his l. hand he flourishes a sabre. His hair is in a long thin stiffened queue and he wears high boots with spurs.

7 × 4 $\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).5053 V. 5. 21. THE ORIENTAL MACARONI.Pub^d accor^g to Act Jan^y 16th 1773, by M Darly (39) Strand.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man standing. He looks towards the r. through a single eye-glass held in his l. hand; his r. is on his hip. He wears a hat, sprigged waistcoat, shirt with lace ruffles and cravat, striped breeches.

7 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{5}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5054 V. 5. 22. THE TIMOROUS SPORTING MACARONI.Pub^d accor^s to Act Jan^y 16, 1773, by M Darly (39) Strand.

Engraving. A man stands in profile to the l. in a rural setting. He looks along the barrel of a gun with a raised trigger. He wears a large looped-up club, low hat, a coat with facings, half-boots and striped stockings.

7 × 4 $\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).23. CAPTAIN BUN QUIXOTE ATTACKING THE OVEN. See No. 4665—4 Jan. 17735055 V. 5. 24. PINCHEE, OR THE BAUBLE MACARONI.Pub^d accor^s to Act. Dec^r 29th 1772, by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. Portrait of a man standing in profile to the r., holding in his r. hand a conical vessel. He wears a tie-wig, three-cornered hat and frilled shirt.

The title, and the resemblance to his engraved portrait, show that he is Christopher Pinchbeck the younger (c. 1710–83), the inventor, holding one of his inventions, perhaps his celebrated candlesnuffers. He is described in his patents as ‘toyman and mechanic’. As an anti-Wilkite he was a subject of raillery: The London Evening Post, 19–21 Nov. 1772, forecast the possible election as president of the Royal Society of ‘no less a person than the noted Pinchbeck, buckle and knickknack maker to the King.’ Cf. Mason’s Ode to Mr. Pinchbeck, 1776.

6 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 5 in. (pl.).Twelve prints from a series issued by Darly in three volumes 1772–5.¹5056 COURIER FRANCOIS.

[1 Jan. 1772]

W. H. Bunbury Inv. T. Scratchley f. [Darly]Printed for Robert Sayer, Fleet Street.

Engraving. A reissue with an altered publication line of a print issued by Darly with the above date. Darly also issued a larger version dated 1 July, 1771, published by ‘T. Scratchley’. Both are in the collection of Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street (1933).

The same design was etched on a larger scale by J. Bretherton, see No. 4737, who also etched a smaller version in reverse.

5 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 in.

In Sayer’s book of ‘Drolls’.

THE OPTICAL . CONTRAST.

See No. 4703—16 Jan. 1772

5057 2. THE COVENT GARDEN MACARONIES.Pub by M Darly Strand Feb^y 24th 1772 accor^s to Act.

Engraving. Two men stand on the pavement outside a door-way under the pediment of which are the royal arms. Beneath them and over the doorway is inscribed, Lovejoy, Kings arms Tavern, cf. No. 4995. This appears to be a representation of the entrance to Covent Garden Theatre. The taller of the two men (l.) has snatched off the other's wig, and holds it up in his r. hand. In his l. hand is his sword, broken off below the hilt; his hat is on the ground. Behind and to the r. stands a short stout man with bare shaved head; his hat is in his r. hand. The taller man is dressed in the prevailing macaroni fashion and has a certain resemblance to Colman, then part-proprietor and manager of Covent Garden Theatre, see No. 5064. The wig of the other is of the type worn by 'cits', see No. 5463.

¹ Some were reissued, two on a page, in the volume whose title-page is No. 5369.

 $8\frac{3}{8} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5058 AN OLD MACARONI MISS-LED

[Pub accor to Act by M. Darly April 26th 1772]¹

Engraving. An elderly man, dressed in the macaroni manner with an enormous club of hair, walks, supported by a stick held in his l. hand. His r. hand is firmly grasped by a young woman who points with her other (l.) hand in the direction to which she is leading him. She is tall and fashionably dressed and is evidently a courtesan.

$9\frac{1}{18} \times 5\frac{1}{4}$ in.

24. THE MACARONI PRINT SHOP

See No. 4701—14 July 1772

E. Topham. Inv^t et del. (Darly's shop)

Reproduced, Paston, pl. cv; A. E. Richardson, Georgian England, 1931, p. 73.

5059 A MACARONI FRENCH COOK.

[Pub^t according to Act Aug^t 9th [?1772] by M. Darly Strand]¹

Engraving. A man dressed macaroni-fashion with an enormous looped club but wearing an apron and a conical cap approaches a cooking-stove holding a saucepan in his r. hand; with his l. he appears to be taking snuff. His sword and an elaborately laced hat hang on the wall. The interior of the kitchen is neat, with cooking utensils arranged in an orderly way. A looking-glass is on the wall. A bunch of carrots is on a table, a ham hangs on the wall.

$8\frac{3}{8} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5060 N. WOOD. GAME-KEEPER TO THE RT HON^{BLE} LD MULGRAVE, AT HIS LORDSHIP'S SEAT IN YORKSHIRE.

[11 Aug. 1772]²

I. A. Fecit

Printed for Robert Sayer, N^o 53 Fleet Street.

Engraving. A reissue with an altered publication line of a plate published by Darly with the above date belonging to the series issued 1772-4. Wood is seated on horseback in profile to the r., his gun in his l. hand. He has a grotesquely large nose, and has a somewhat clerical appearance. In the background (r.) beyond a piece of water is the façade of a large house with a pediment, evidently Mulgrave Castle, and a church.

¹ The publication line has been cut off, but is supplied from an impression belonging (1932) to Mr. W. T. Spencer of New Oxford Street.

² The original date is supplied from a print in the collection of Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street.

$8\frac{9}{16} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

In Sayer's book of 'Drolls'.

5061 THE MACARONI CAPTAINS.

[Pub. Darly. 17 Sept. 1772.]¹

Engraving. Two men in coats with military facings are having a violent fight with some geese. A goose (l.) is biting the end of the long pigtail queue of one, who holds another goose by the neck in his r. hand and is about to strike it with his sword which is in his l. hand. The other (r.) is threatening a goose with his sword and also with his tasselled cane. Three geese hiss angrily with outstretched necks, one lies dead on the ground.

$5\frac{1}{4} \times 9\frac{1}{8}$ in.

20. THE MACARONI SHOE MAKER, TAKING HIS
MUNDY'S RIDE. See No. 4637—12 Oct. 1772

THE FLUTTERING MACARONI See No. 4706—7 Nov. 1772

(Miss Catley and the Earl of Ancrum)

This plate was altered and reissued circa 1786 by Robert Sayer with the title A Fashionable Shittlecock.

22. AN OLD MACARONI CRITIC AT A NEW PLAY.

See No. 4699—16 Nov. 1772

R. S^t. G. M[ansergh]

Two prints from a larger series of Darly's Caricatures
continued from p. 41.

17. THE MACARONI CAULDRON.

See No. 4829—9 Mar. 1772

27. TIMOTHY TALLOW, AND HIS WIFE. . . .

See No. 4640—10 Aug. 1772

5062 THE CUB'S FROLIC AT HOLLAND-HOUSE OR THE PIG
BASTED. [1 Jan. 1772]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, vii. 276. The interior of a kitchen. A pig is roasting on a spit (l.) in front of a large open fire. Lord Holland, obese, with a fox's head, stands watching a dispute between a cook-maid holding a wooden spoon, and one of his sons, who is young and slim with a fox's head and tail and appears to be intended for Henry Edward (1755-1811). The cook says: Lord Sir he'll spoil the Pig, and my Lady will blame me for it. Holland answers: Pish! you fool he won't hurt it, let him baste it. A maid-servant behind Holland (r.), clasping her hands, says: Lack a day! Such a fool as you make of him! In the foreground (r.) a young scullion with a basket of vegetables looks on in surprise.

¹ The publication line has been cut off, the date is supplied from an impression belonging (1932) to Mr. W. T. Spencer of New Oxford Street.

The explanatory text alludes to 'the celebrated story of the roasted pig at Holland House'. For Henry Fox see No. 5112.

$6\frac{3}{16} \times 4\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5063 BEHOLD THE MUSES ROSCIUS SUE IN VAIN,
TAYLORS & CARPENTERS USURP THEIR REIGN.

MD[arly.] [1772]

Engraving. Title-page to The Theatres, a poem, see No. 5064. Garrick between Tragedy and Comedy (l.) and two artisans or theatre carpenters (r.). On the r. a man with a Jewish profile smiling, holds out a paper inscribed Processions for Ever; from his pocket hangs a paper, To Mr Messiah, Drury Lane Mechanist. Garrick holds in his r. hand a paper inscribed Arthur's Round Table, his l. hand points to Processions for Ever. He is trampling on papers inscribed, S . . . pear, B. John . . . [sic], Rowe, and . . . pear. A note by Mr. Hawkins says that the poem (the first part of which is on Garrick and Drury Lane) attacks Garrick for his jealousy and ill-treatment of actors, illiberal conduct to authors, and neglect of the higher drama for spectacles and processions. This neglect had long been a stock subject of complaint. See No. 1838 ('Shakespear, Rowe, Johnson, now are quite undone . . .'), an illustration to Cibber's Dissertation on Theatres, 1759. Garrick had altered Dryden's King Arthur or the British Worthy, and produced it at Drury Lane as a splendid spectacle.

$4\frac{5}{16} \times 5\frac{5}{16}$ in.

5064 VIEW COLMAN IN THE LAP OF MOTHER SHIPTON
A BETTER SUBJECT SATIRE NEVER WHIPT ON [1772]

MD[arly.]

Engraving. From the first page of the second part of The Theatres, see No. 5063, which is an attack on Colman and Covent Garden. Colman sits on the lap of Mother Shipton, in his r. hand is a harlequin's sword, in his l., a paper inscribed

*For wooden Sword I've chang'd my useless Pen
I ne'er could Write & Hate all writing Men*

A ribbon sash with long ends is round his waist from which hangs a child's coral and bells. At his feet lies a bundle of pens. He looks towards Harlequin (l.) who is trampling on three books inscribed Shak . . . , Johns . . . [Jonson], and Shakspe . . . Mother Shipton, in conical hat and ruff, has a walking-stick in her l. hand, her r. is over Colman's shoulder; she says: Oh my Coly my Coly oh my Coly my Deary. Across the engraving is printed, Bad has begun and worse remains behind. On the back is part of the poem:

*See curious Colman negligent of merit,
Of Tragic energy and comic spirit
Palm on his servile partners, and the town,
Abject and vile dependents of his own;*

. . .

Colman is attacked for producing the pantomime of Mother Shipton at Covent Garden. This was played for the first time on 26 Dec. 1770 and for the fifty-seventh on 30 May 1771, Genest, v. 307, 311.

$4\frac{5}{16} \times 5\frac{5}{16}$ in.

5065 THE FIRST MEETING OF THE COTERIE FOR 1772

1 Nov. 1772.

Engraving. The Macaroni and Theatrical Magazine, i. 5. A number of ladies, richly dressed, conversing in a room. Their dresses show the fashions of the day: hair dressed high, often ornamented with lace, trains over frilled and flounced petticoats, elbow sleeves with wide lace ruffles. These ladies are in a central group, to the r. and l. of which are single figures. On a chair (l.) a lady in a hat holds a dog. Two others converse by a mirror in the background. The room has a striped wall-paper above panelling. On the wall are oval mirrors with candles in sconces, and a picture in an ornate frame. Looped up curtains surround a small sash-window. On the floor is a fringed and patterned carpet. This illustrates a dialogue, 'Extraordinary Meeting of the Female Members of the Coterie on the Case of Captain J——s', which is a series of insinuations against the fashionable world and the character of certain leaders of note, in particular: 'D——ss of A——', 'C——ss of Upp——r O——sy' [sic]. For the coterie see Nos. 4472, 4847, 5095, 5425. B.M.L., P.P. 5201

$4\frac{1}{4} \times 7\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5066 [CUPID TURN'D AUCTIONEER, OR, CORNELYS' SALE AT CARLISLE HOUSE]

S. Wale del.

J. Taylor sculp.

Publish'd Dec^r 24. 1772.

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, i. 9. Illustration to an article with the above title. An auction-room. Cupid (centre) on a high rostrum holds up a hammer, pointing with his l. hand at the lot for sale, a tall macaroni standing on a stool in profile to the l., holding a cane, his hat under his arm. Behind the macaroni (r.) stands Mercury, who appears to have placed him on the stool. Other lots are on a high shelf behind Cupid's head, against which rests a ladder. Above them are numbered placards: [Lot 1 and Lot 2 have gone, their places are vacant. Lot 3 is a fashionably dressed lady; Lot 4 is a macaroni taking snuff; Lot 5 is a plainly dressed lady wearing an apron. Standing in front of the auctioneer (l.) is a crowd of spectators, fashionably dressed men and women, who are elderly and ugly, a lady with a fan in profile to the r. being the most prominent. Beneath the design is engraved,

*Cupid's soft Dart the softer Sex compels,
And here the urchin knocks down Beaux & Belles.*

The text shows that the first three lots sold were a captain, Lady Bridget Lane, and the Duchess of Northumberland.

Mrs. Cornelys was gazetted bankrupt in November 1772 and Carlisle House was advertised for sale in December. This was due to the proceedings against her, see No. 4929, and to the opening of the Pantheon, see No. 4998. See also No. 5194, a sequel to this print.

Reproduced, E. Sherson, The Lively Lady Townshend, 1926, p. 266.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

THE ANTIQUARIANS.

See No. 4771—1 Feb. 1772

From the Oxford Magazine.

5067 A GREAT MAN IN DISTRESS

Publish'd as the act directs, 20th July 1772. By J. Wood, on Ludgate Hill.

Stipple engraving. W.L. full-face portrait of an elderly man, wearing his own hair, a wide three-cornered hat, and a long old-fashioned coat. In his r. hand are a sword, a stick, &c., his l. is thrust under his coat into his breeches pocket. Beneath is engraved,

*Il n'y a au monde que deux Heros
Le Roi de Prusse et le Chevalier Descassau.
In all the World, but Hero's two I know
Prussia's fam'd King & Marquis Descassau.*

Vide the Chev's own Poetry.

In another impression the face and hand are printed in red. To this has been added Born 10 Aug^t 1710. Died 16 Feb^y 1775.

A portrait of the Chevalier Michel Descazeaux du Halley, for many years a debtor in the Fleet and a well-known London character, his vanity, his poverty, his (so-called) poetry, and his eccentricities being a standing subject of jest for many years. See Grosley, Londres, 1770, i. 173 ff.; R. Malcolm, Curiosities of Biography, 1855. Three earlier portraits have been described in this catalogue: No. 2852 (1736), No. 3092 (1750), No. 3800 (1760). The 'Chev' Descarceaux' [sic] is one of an etched group of caricature portraits including Long Sir Thomas Robinson, by General Sir Archibald Campbell (1739-91) in book of 'Honorary Engravers', i. fo. 162 (Print Department), which must be of an earlier date than 1772. He is drawn exactly as in this engraving, but in reverse. See also B. M. Catalogue of Engr. Br. Portraits. $8\frac{3}{4} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ in. (pl.)

A reduced copy in line for a book illustration has a building with an outside staircase and in the distance Pegasus on Mount Helicon. It is surrounded by a border decorated with a trophy of crossed swords and armour.

5068 THE MACARONI VICAR OF BRAY CONVERSING WITH PLATO.

Pub^d by J. Roberts Engraver S^t Martins Lane, accor^s to Act, Oct^r 7th 1772.¹

Engraving. A tall lean man in profile to the l. faces a shorter man in profile to the r. He wears plain dark clothes, a plain hat, short wig, plain shirt and neckcloth, no clerical bands. He looks perturbed and bites his r. thumb.

¹ This was also published by Darly and re-issued in a composite volume of which the title-page is No. 5369.

His l. hand holds a long walking stick. From his pocket protrudes a book, Mead on Poison and a paper, Wanted a Curate. Behind him is a church inscribed Hayes, near it is a small detached house, probably the rectory, placarded To Lett. The shorter man is smiling; he takes snuff out of a Scottish mull. From his pocket protrudes a book, Farquhar's Works. He is plainly dressed. Underneath is written in Mr. Hawkins's hand, 'Dav. Wilson. Bookseller Strand at Plato's Head'. His companion is Farquhar, rector of Hayes at this time. The parish records bear witness to his turbulent and quarrelsome disposition.¹ For Wilson, see Nichols, Literary Anecdotes, iii. 625, 671.

6 × 4½ in.

CAPT^N H——. [Horneck], OR THE MILITARY MACARONI.

See No. 4813—1 Nov. 1772

From the Macaroni Magazine.

5069 THE CHYMICAL MACARONI, CAP^N LUDGATE.

Terry Fecit.

Publ^d as y^e Act directs Nov^r 25th 1772 by G. Terry Pater Noster Row.

Engraving. A man wearing quasi-military dress, a sash over his l. shoulder, holds a mortar inscribed Cantharides and a pestle. He has a very long narrow stiffened queue which sticks out, making an acute angle with his neck. On this is inscribed Family Medicine Chests neatly fitted up. From a building whose wall just appears on the r. hangs a sign The Old Hog in Armour New Revived. In the background (l.) a monkey holds up a cat by the tail and administers a Purge, the label of the bottle being so inscribed. Beneath the title is engraved,

*With what sweet Chymic Airs, he leads y^e City Band,
Or deals his penny Wares from his important Hand.*

Apparently the caricature of an apothecary who was an officer in the City militia or Trained Bands.

7 × 5 in.

THE NOBLE GAMBLER [Lord Barrymore].

See No. 4828—1 Dec. 1772

From the Macaroni Magazine.

5070 A VERY DIVINE MACARONI OF WELBECK STREET

George Crosland delin

[c. 1772]

Engraving. Portrait of a man walking in profile to the r. In his l. hand is a tasselled cane, in his r. is a pair of bands. He wears a three-cornered hat, short hair, dark coat and waistcoat, a bow cravat and frilled shirt sleeves. On the print is written in pencil, 'Rev^d M^r Langford son of the Auctioneer' (see No. 5001).

6⅜ × 3⅓ in.

¹ Information (1931) from Canon Thompson, Rector of Hayes.

5071 LE HÉROS DE FERNEY AU THEATRE DE CHATELAINE.T. O. f^t 1772. [Thomas Orde]

Engraving. Voltaire, in profile to the l., striding with much vigour and with theatrical gestures, r. arm bent, fingers touching his waistcoat, l. arm thrown out. He wears a plumed helmet, and a sword, and is lean and wrinkled. Beneath the etched title is etched,

“Ne pretens pas à trop, tu ne scaurais qu’ecrir

“Tes Vers forcent mes pleurs, mais tes gestes me font rire.

The collector, Richard Bull, has written beneath the print, ‘Mr. Orde was at Turin in 1772, when Voltaire having Le Cain, and Mad^{lle} Clairon with him, wished to have one of his own Pieces represented, and got some Strollers to fill the under parts, but at the Rehearsal, being out of all patience at the performance of one of them, dashed the book on the floor, started up, and threw himself into the above attitude, to show the Fellow what Acting was.’

6¼ × 5¾ in.

In book of ‘Honorary Engravers’, i, No. 53.

5072 THE BRISTOL DUEL.

[Jan. 1772]

Woodcut. From the Town and Country Magazine, iii. 700 (Supplement). A military officer (l.) holds his sword towards a man (r.) kneeling on one knee, his hands held up, his sword with its hilt on the ground, who says: What the D—l— had I to do with a Sword. An illustration to an account of ‘A Bristol Oddity’ who, when acting as petty constable, had provoked a duel with a captain by arresting one of his men.

3 × 4 in.

5073 THE COFFEE-HOUSE POLITICIANS¹

[1 April 1772]

Engraving. Every Man’s Magazine, i. 409. The interior of a London coffee-house. The guests are absorbed in the newspapers and in conversation. A man (r.) in dressing-gown and night-cap sits behind a table on which are newspapers and a tray with coffee pot, &c. The coffee pours unnoticed from the cup in his hand as he looks round in consternation at two men who hold between them The London Gazette and appear to be reading it aloud. A boy, wearing an apron, who listens while he runs, spills the contents of his tray. At another table two men sit in deep consultation over a paper which they hold between them. Two men stand behind in consultation. The room is panelled, with an ornately framed mirror on the wall. A smiling and fashionably dressed young woman stands in the bar (r.), behind her are shelves with glasses, punch-bowls, &c.

5¹⁵/₁₆ × 3⁷/₈ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5541.

5074 THE BLACKSMITH LETS HIS IRON GROW COLD ATTENDING TO THE TAYLOR’S NEWS.

[1 July 1772]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, viii. 229. An illustration of the passage from King John from which the title is taken. The interior of a blacksmith's forge. Two men in leather aprons and rolled up shirt-sleeves stand at the anvil; one has a hammer in his r. hand, the iron in his l. Both gape in consternation towards a tailor, who stands on the r. He holds in his hand a newspaper, The Morning . . . Monday July and reads from it. Under his arm is a large pair of scissors, a yard measure hangs from his pocket. The other smith, behind and to the l., is similarly dressed; by him stands a man also wearing an apron but with a coat and a short wig. In the background is a woman holding a baby. On the l. is a large forge with a cone-shaped chimney and an enormous pair of bellows. The roof is raftered. Four horse-shoes, a bent strip of iron, and the portrait of a man (possibly Wilkes) hang on the wall. A dog is asleep in the foreground.

¹ Catalogued with the incorrect date c. 1733 as No. 2010, and reproduced with this date in Social England, ed. Traill, V, p. 196.

A satire on the favourite theme of tradesmen and artisans who neglect their business to settle the affairs of the nation. See Nos. 4937, 5086, 5614, &c. There is a mezzotint of the same subject by J. Finlayson after J. Donaldson, published 1 May 1769.

6 × 4 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5075 THE ENGLISH FARMER'S WIFE CONVERTED TO A FINE LADY DURING HIS ABSENCE IN LONDON. [1 Sept. 1772]

Engraving. Every Man's Magazine, ii. 41. A plainly furnished but panelled room; into which a door (l.) opens showing trees, &c. An extravagantly dressed woman sits on a high-backed seat with a clergyman in gown and bands, whose arm is round her waist. Their backs are to the door through which enters a farmer in riding boots followed by his waggoner. A mastiff regards the couple on the seat with hostility or surprise. Her hair is dressed in an enormous pyramid decorated with lace and ringlets. She wears a low bodice and ruffled elbow-sleeves; in her r. hand is a closed fan, held in an affected manner. The clergyman gazes at her amorously and shows her an open book, Ovid's Art of Love. On a round table in front of them are two books: Acting and Art of Dressing. The husband is starting back in surprise, saying: Blessing on us! can that be my Dame. The waggoner, wearing a smock and carrying a long whip, says: Woundy Maester her head is grown as high as our Barley-mow!

4 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 6 $\frac{7}{10}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5451.

5076 THE MODERN EPHESIAN MATRON. [1 Oct. 1772]

Engraving. From the Covent Garden Magazine, a cutting from which is with the print: 'The Story of the Ephesian Matron given us by Petronius, is so universally known, that we shall not repeat it here, but attempt a parallel in the character of a modern widow, whose history the world is but little acquainted with.' On a sofa (l.) a woman in widow's weeds sits beside a barrister in gown and bands; he is embracing her. They sit behind a table on which are documents, writing materials, and a wine bottle. Behind, an elderly man with a pen is making advances to a maid (r.), who holds a tray with two wine-glasses. On the wall is a picture of a crocodile shedding tears.

6 $\frac{5}{16}$ × 4 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

CERTAIN CITY MACARONIES DRINKING ASSES MILK.

Oxford Magazine.

See No. 4814—1 Dec. 1772

5077 A CERTAIN LITTLE FAT JEW MACARONI & HIS SPOUSE
GOING TO YE PANTHEON [n.d. c. 1772]

Engraving. Probably from a magazine. A family group in the hall of a house. A stout short man walks in profile to the l. In his r. hand is a large cane, in his l. a laced hat. A maidservant lifts up his enormous club of hair while she brushes his coat. His wife, on his r., looks at him admiringly, her l. hand under his chin; under her r. arm is a dog. Her hair is in an enormous pyramid decorated with jewels and lace. At her side is a little black boy wearing a feathered turban.

6×4 in.

OUT OF FASHION. IN FASHION See No. 4817—1 Feb. 1772
Pub. T. Bowen.

THE CONTRAST OR THE DIFFERENT DRESSES FOR 1745 AND
1772. See No. 4818—1 May 1772
From the Oxford Magazine.

THE CONTRAST, OR A LADY IN YE DRESS OF 1745 & ANOTHER
IN YE DRESS OF 1772. See No. 4820—1 July 1772
From the Oxford Magazine.

[A MACARONI.] See No. 4816—1 May 1772
London Magazine.

5078 THE POLITE MACARONI, [1 June 1772]

Woodcut. Town and Country Magazine, iv. 242. Illustration to 'Character of a Macaroni'. A man in a macaroni dress standing in profile to the r. In his r. hand is a long cane. He wears a looped club of hair, small hat, ruffled shirt, a nosegay and a short, curved sword attached to his waist by a chain so that it hangs horizontally. The text describes 'the origin and present state of macaronies'.

3½×3 in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5079 A HIEROGLYPHIC EPISTLE FROM A (MACARONI) TO A MODERN FINE (LADY)

Invented & Publish'd by W^m Tringham, May 25th 1772, as the Act directs under St Dunstons Church, Fleet Street, London.

Engraved letter in rebuses and in rhyme. The words and letters represented by objects are here within brackets. The figures of a macaroni (l.) and a lady (r.) facing each other form part of the title.

My (Lady)
(Eye) (Hope) (yew)'ll (knot) frown w(hen) (eye) tell
The (miss)fortune (witch) (ewer) hum(bee)le Servant (bee)fell
My Wa(eye)ting on (yew) this Mis(Fortune) prevented
And (eye) (Eve)r Since have (bean) quite discon(tent)ed
The th(eye)ng t(hen) w(ass) (bee)y cu(rye)os(eye)ty led
The (pan)theon (awl)ways ran (eye)n my (head)
A Ticket (eye) s(pea)dily got of her Gr(ace)

T(hen) re(pear)'d in my (chair) (toe) see the D(ear) (plai)ce
(Butt) my (chair)(men) fell down and (eye) fell in the dirt.
S(ewer) no Maccaroni w(ass) (Eve)r so hurt
And the (miss)fortune d(eye)d (butt) the Ra(bee)(bee)le divert
My (queue) w(ass) Stol'n from me, my (head) w(ass) disgrac'd
My (coat) was (awl) d(eye)rt and my Waist(coat) De(face)
My (sabre) (eye) lost (witch) adorned my s(eye)de
The (wig?) of the (ladies) which w(ass) my (heart)'s Pride
And my new f(ass)hiond (hat) with a Brim ve(rye) narrow Shot away (eye)n the (crow)'d and went of l(eye)ke an arrow
Since the whole t(hat) (bee)fell me I've fairly d(eye)splay'd
Let the S(tête) of (Yew)r Health by (ewer) (pen) (bee) por(tray)
 (Eye) am with (grate) respect
 (Ewer) Lady (ships)
 O(bee)dient Serv(ant)
 Maccaroni.

See the answer, No. 5080. For earlier examples of hieroglyphic letters see Nos. 1551, 1552, 1553, ascribed to the year 1710. See also Catalogue iv, p. lxx.

13 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 9 in. (pl.).

5080 THE ANSWER. AN HIEROGLYPHIC EPISTLE FROM A MODERN FINE (LADY) TO A MACCARONI

Invented & Publish'd by W^m Tringham, June 20th 1772, as the Act directs under S^t Dunstons Church, Fleet Street.

Engraved hieroglyphic letter. An answer to No. 5079. The same etched figures, reversed, ornament the title.

D(ear) delec(table) S(eye)r
 (Ewer) (letter) (eye) (saw)
And the (heart) of a Rock (ewer) mis(Fortune)s wou'd thaw
(Eye) Pitied (ass) soon (ass) your (lines) met my (eyes)
And (Yew) may at (pea)resent w(eye)th me Sym(pea)athize
For (eye) in a (tree)aty of Marr(eye)age of Late
Had come (toe) Conclus(eye)on with Lord Awkward (Gate)
The L(eye)cence (pea)rocur'd and the Marr(eye)age gone thro
(Toe) re(pear) (toe) h(eye)s (house) w(ass) the next th(eye)ng (toe) do
(Butt) my (head) w(ass) so h(eye)gh and his door w(ass) so low
T(hat) in(toe) the (house) I was (knot) a(bell) (toe) go
My Lord (eye)n a (pea)et h(eye)s Instr(yew)ct(eye)ons X(pea)rest
T(hat) my (head) (shoe)ld in f(yew)t(yew)re (bee) otherw(eye)se Drest
(Butt) before (eye) wo(yew)ld my (pie)ramid Lower (Eye)d lose (coach) and 6 and hus(band) and Dower
For (eye)ll tell (Eve)ry Mod(urn) drest (Maid)en or w(eye)fe
The h(eye)gher her (head) the (grate)er (eye)n l(eye)fe
T(hen) (ladies) (toe) Sh(eye)ne (yew) Must learn (toe) (bee) Vain
Of the Mount on (ewer) (head) and the length of (ewer) Train
S(eye)nce Equal Mis(Fortune)s on (bee)oth have at(10)ded
Our (4)ces let's Jo(eye)n (ass) our Troubles are (bee)lended
 (Eye) am (grate)ly Agreea(bell)
 S^r (ewer)s Awkward (Gate)

13 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 9 in. (pl.).

THE MACARONY DRESSING ROOM See No. 4781—9 Nov. 1772

C. White after Capt. Minshull. Pub. T. Bowen.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. XV.

Another print (not in B.M.), with this title was published by Darly, 26 June 1772, and was one of the large plates reissued in the volume whose title-page is No. 5369.

A FRENCH MACARONY EATING OF MACAROONS

See No. 4830—22 July 1772

THE FRENCH MAN IN LONDON. See No. 4787—12 Oct. 1772

After Martin. Pub. Turner.

5081 FRANCE.

ENGLAND.

Brandoine delin.

Publish'd by S. Hooper, N^o 25, Ludgate Hill, 25th June 1772.

Engraving. A design in two compartments:

France (l.) is represented by a lean French cook putting a cat on a long spit which he holds between his knees. On a table are fish (skate or dog-fish) and a small piece of meat in which the bone is conspicuous. The border of the design is ornamented by a bunch of frogs (l.), a string of onions, (r.) and by fleur-de-lys.

England (r.) is a fat and jolly cook standing by a large butt of beer, beside which is a foaming tankard. A large sirloin is on a low table (r.). The border of the design is ornamented by a large ham (l.), a fat capon (r.), and by the English leopards.

One of many satires on the contrast between the beggarly Frenchman and the well-fed Englishman of which Hogarth's Gate of Calais, see No. 3050, is the classic example.

Each subject $7\frac{1}{16} \times 4\frac{5}{8}$ in. (pl. $8\frac{1}{3} \times 10\frac{7}{8}$ in.).

4602—4604

From the same series as Nos. 4922—4925.

A LADIES MAID PURCHASING A LEEK.

See No. 4603—1 Mar. 1772

Caldwall sc. after Brandoin.

CAPT^N CONQUEST AND HIS BAGGAGE WAGGON.

See No. 4604—15 June 1772

J. Goldar sc. after S. H. Grimm.

A MACARONY ALDERMAN AND HIS RIB.

See No. 4602—20 June 1772

Caldwall sc. after S. H. Grimm.

5082 THE ALLEMANDE DANCE.Brandoin Pinx^tCaldwall Sculp.

*London, Printed for J. Smith, N^o 35, Cheapside, & Rob^t Sayer N^o 53
Fleet Street. Published as the Act directs 20 March 1772.*

Engraving. A panelled ballroom with a small musician's gallery on the r. in which are a fiddler and a flute-player. In the centre a couple dance together, the man standing behind his partner and holding her outstretched hands by the finger-tips. She looks serious, he leans towards her. On each side of the room seated spectators are in conversation pointing to, or looking at, the dancers. Lighted candles are in carved sconces on the wall.

Appears to belong to the same series as Nos. 4595, 4605, 4608, 4609, 4611, 4612.

9 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{16}$ in.

TROOPS FORDING A BROOK.

See No. 4608—25 Jan. 1772

After Collet. Pub. Smith and Sayer.

A MACARONY TAKING HIS MORNING RIDE IN ROTTEN ROW
HYDE PARK.

See No. 4612—12 June 1772

Caldwall after Collet. Pub. Smith and Sayer.

THE UNWELCOME CUSTOMER.

See No. 4605—17 Aug. 1772

Caldwall after Collet. Pub. Smith and Sayer.

5083 A MASQUERADE SCENE KENSINGTON GARDENS.

Sam: Sharp-Eye del^t ad vivum [?Bunbury]. J. Bretherton fec^t

Publish'd as the Act directs 2^d July 1772, by J. Bretherton N^o 134 New Bond Street.

Engraving. Two persons walking away from the spectator down a rectangular piece of grass, bounded by shrubs, and also on the l. by a symmetrical line of trees. Under the shrubs on the r. is a garden seat. The nearer figure wears a hood and cloak over very voluminous skirts, but a sailor's trousers are indicated through the petticoat. At this figure a dog (r.) is barking. He walks behind, and in pursuit of, a young woman. On a scroll in the upper part of the plate is inscribed, JACK ON A CRUISE A MISSEY IN Y^E OFFING. For another version of this design see No. 5313.

7 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 7 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

4757-5086

Prints after Bunbury etched and published by J. Bretherton.

THE VILLAGE BARBER. L. M. . . .

See No. 4757—1 Mar. 1772

JOHN JEHU L'INGHILTERRA

See No. 4738—6 Mar. 1772

MONSIEUR LE FOUET . . .

See No. 4753—6 Mar. 1772

- THE DOG BARBER LA FRANCIA. See No. 4669—29 Mar. 1772
- THE ST JAMES'S MACARONI See No. 4712—29 Mar. 1772
- THE FISH STREET MACARONI See No. 4713—29 Mar. 1772
- CANTAB. See No. 4725—2 May 1772
- EQUES CANTAB See No. 4723—May 1772
- Another version, not in B.M., was published by Darly, 12 Oct. 1772, and was one of the plates in the book with the title-page dated 1 Jan. 1776, see No. 5369.
- STREPHON & CHLOE. See No. 4755—28 Nov. 1772
- THE FULL BLOWN MACARONI See No. 4714—6 Dec. 1772

5084 A SUNDAY EVENING.

Mr Bunbury delin. J. Bretherton f. New Bond Street N^o 134.
Publish'd 7th December 1772.

Engraving. A family scene of barren discomfort. An elderly man (l.) in profile to the r. sits in a high-backed wooden arm-chair asleep. Next him his wife sits asleep, her hands clasped, her l. elbow supported on a table. At the table sits a boy asleep over a book. On the r., very upright on the edge of her chair, sits a middle-aged woman, wearing a low bodice, her hair dressed high. In the foreground a dog and cat are fighting. The room is lit by one guttering candle which stands on the table. A window and a door are indicated.

Described (incorrectly) by F. de la Rochefoucauld, A Frenchman in England [1784]. 1933, pp. 81-2; reproduction.

$9\frac{3}{16} \times 11\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5085 I WILL PAY NO MORE DEBTS OF HER CONTRACTING.

Mr Bunbury delin. J. Bretherton f.
Publish'd 7th December 1772 by J. Bretherton New Bond Street.

Engraving. On the l. stands a thin man holding out his r. hand as if for money. In his l. hand is a long bill headed . . . Mercer. . . His hat is under his r. arm. He faces a stout man standing in profile to the l. whose r. hand points at the bill. He is frowning and appears to be shouting. His l. hand is behind his back. An open door is indicated in the background.

$8\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5086 THE MORNING NEWS

Bretherton f [after Bunbury]

Publish'd as the Act directs 10th December 1772 by J. Bretherton N^o 134
New Bond Street

Engraving. A group of men standing outside a dilapidated building, part of which is visible on the r. One, wearing a broad-brimmed hat, holds in his l. hand a torn paper on which parts of words are visible: [Pet]itio[n] . . . [Fr]eehold[rs] . . . Minist[ry] . . . His r. forefinger is extended as if laying down the law to his companions. On his r. stands a man holding his chin with an expression of deep thought. In his r. hand is (?) a turncock. Next him (l.) is an artisan, listening intently, his breeches unfastened at the knee, his stockings ungartered; he holds a short hammer and is probably a shoemaker. Behind (r.) a man wearing a waistcoat over a ruffled shirt, but no coat, lounges against the stump of a tree and listens open-mouthed. On the top of the stump is an open dish of food which a dog is eating, his head twisted backwards in a peculiar manner.

Beneath the design is engraved,

The Rabble gather round the Man of News

And listen with their mouths.

Some tell, some hear, some judge of news, some make it,

And he that lyes most, is most believ'd—

One of many satires on the absorption of the common people in politics to the neglect of their own business. See No. 5074, &c.

8¼ × 9¾ in.

THE HOUNDSDITCH MACARONI See No. 4715—20 Dec. 1772

Four prints after Bunbury etched C. Bretherton, Jun., published J. Bretherton.

POSTIGLIONE INGLESE. See No. 4739—Apr. 1772

POSTIGLIONE GERMANICO See No. 4740—Apr. 1772

THE SHAVER AND THE SHAVEE. See No. 4756—Apr. 1772

THE DELIGHTS OF ISLINGTON. See No. 4722—30 Apr. 1772

Three prints after Bunbury etched C. L. S. or Charles Smith.

THE JUDGMENT OF PARIS. See No. 4752—4 July 1772
Cf. No. 4920.

[A FRENCH POSTILLION]. Pub. J. Bretherton.

See No. 4742—30 July 1772

THE MUCKLE SAWNEY RIDING POST.

See No. 4734—20 Aug. 1772

5087 THE SAILOR'S RETURN FROM PORTSMOUTH TO LONDON.

Charles Bretherton Jun' fecit. [? after Bunbury.]

*Publish'd as the Act directs March 2 1772 by J. Bretherton N^o 134,
New Bond Street.*

Engraving. A sailor seated on a sorry-looking horse rides from l. to r. along a country road. In his r. hand he holds the horse's tail, in his l. a long horn which he is blowing. The harness is of rope with pulleys; a rope attached to the horse's head is round the rider's waist. Round the horse's neck is wound a coil of rope attached to an anchor; its head is decorated with a Union flag, another flag is on the sailor's cap. The rider's r. foot is in a rope-ladder which takes the place of a stirrup. The heads and fore-legs of a pair of horses, on one of which a postilion is riding, advance into the picture from the r.

$7\frac{7}{8} \times 12\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5088 A MASQUERADE SCENE AT THE PANTHEON, 1772.

Wale delin^t

Grignon sculpt^t

Engraving. Probably from a magazine. The rotunda of the Pantheon, with a number of figures in masquerade dress, not caricatured. An ornate chandelier hangs from the centre of the roof. In recesses in the wall there are statues of draped figures.

$4\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{5}{8}$ in.

MONACHUM NON FACIT CUCULLUS. [Grose and Forrest] N. Hone.
Mezzotint. See No. 4474—30 Jan. 1772.

5089 THE EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY OF PAINTING, IN THE YEAR 1771.

From an original Drawing in the Possession of Rob^t Sayer.

Charles Brandoin inv^t et delin. R. Sayer Excudit Rich^d Earlom fecit London Printed for Rob^t Sayer N^o 53 in Fleet Street Published as the Act directs 20 May 1772.

Mezzotint. The exhibition room of the Royal Academy in Pall Mall. The back wall and walls to l. and r. covered with pictures up to the cornice, which supports a top light. The room is crowded with visitors looking at the pictures and conversing; some hold catalogues. In the centre of the room is a bench on which sit a dejected boy and an old lady reading a catalogue. A connoisseur with sword, chapeau bras, and pigtail queue, stoops to peer into a picture on the r. On the l. a man wearing a hat and bag-wig, his profile caricatured, points out a picture to his companion.

For other states of this print in the Print Department see Chaloner Smith, i. 259. Reproduced, A. E. Richardson, Georgian England, 1931, p. 164.

$16\frac{3}{4} \times 21\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5090 BAGNIGGE WELLS

I. Sanders pinxit I. R. Smith fecit

published 15th june 1772

Mezzotint. Letters scraped on work. The interior of the long room at Bagnigge Wells, filled with a crowd of tea-drinkers, fashionably dressed in the macaroni manner. The central group consists of a courtesan who stands arm-in-arm with a macaroni, while with her l. hand she beckons to another macaroni (r.) who bows, hat in hand. On the r. are groups seated and standing at tea-tables; a serving-boy walks (l. to r.) holding a tea-tray in one hand, a large kettle in the other. In the foreground (r.) a couple in deep shadow sit at a table. Two chandeliers with lighted candles hang from the ceiling.

For Bagnigge Wells see Wroth, London Tea-gardens of the Eighteenth Century. Though a family resort for London citizens on Sunday afternoons, it was also reputed to be a place where apprentices were lured to disaster by courtesans; a later print of the gardens is called The Road to Ruin.

J. Frankau, J. R. Smith, 1902, No. 20. Reproduced, E. B. Chancellor, Eighteenth Century London, 1920, p. 110.

14 × 19 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Crowle's Pennant, xiv, No. 42.

5091 THE INSIDE OF THE PANTHEON IN OXFORD ROAD.
L'INTERIEUR DU PANTHEON DE LONDRES.

Chas. Brandoin inv^t et delin R. Sayer Excudit. Rich^d. Earlom fecit
London, Printed for Rob^t Sayer N^o 53 in Fleet Street as the Act directs 30 August 1772.

Mezzotint. A view of the interior of the Pantheon. Ladies and gentlemen in the full dress of the day sit and stand in conversation. In the background (l.) is the organ, with a musician's gallery beneath it, and on the ground below a crowd of figures in rapid movement. On the r. are standing figures on the ground and in the gallery above; the wall being decorated with statues in niches. In the foreground on the extreme l. is a short stout man, caricatured, turning his head to the spectators to look through an eye-glass; behind him and on his l. stands a tall lady. Chaloner Smith, i. 259. Reproduced, M. C. Salaman, Londoners then and now (Studio), 1920, p. 64.

17 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 21 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5092–5095 and numbers from Volumes III and IV

Series of mezzotints published by Carington Bowles.¹

5092 MISS PRATTLE, CONSULTING DOCTOR DOUBLE FEE
ABOUT HER PANTHEON HEAD DRESS.

240 Printed for Carington Bowles, Map & Printseller, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Publish'd as the Act directs [date erased, 1772].

Mezzotint (a coloured impression). The counsellor (l.) and his client (r.) sit facing one another across a small round table, beneath which their knees touch. Each has a tea-cup. The lady wears a grotesquely-high pyramid of hair, decorated with pearls or beads, and a high lace cap with ribbons and lace lappets. She looks intently at the Counsellor, her elbows on the table. His foot is pressed against hers. He is in profile to the l., wearing a legal tie-wig, gown, and bands. On the wall is a framed picture of two monkeys sitting on each side of a round table, each with a tea-cup. One of many satires on the enormous pyramids of hair worn by ladies.

12 $\frac{13}{16}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', ii. p. 30. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

¹ Nos. 4516, 4519, 4520, have the imprint of Bowles and Carver.

5093 MISS RATTLE DRESSING FOR THE PANTHEON.

246 Printed for Carington Bowles, Map & Printseller, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London, Publish'd as the Act directs [date erased, 1772].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A lady sitting at her toilet table adds the finishing touches to her pyramid of hair. Her head is in profile to the r., the mirror reflects a profile to the l. Her chair has a carved back of curious pattern. The draped muslin toilet-table, with trinkets, powder-puff, &c., is a good illustration of a toilet-table of the period. On a stool (l.) is an open box filled with ribbons and lace. Behind the toilet table (l.) is a sash-window surrounded with drapery.

One of many satires on the elaborate hair-dressing of the period.

13 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{15}{16}$ in.

'Caricatures', ii. 118. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

THE ENGLISH GENTLEMAN AT PARIS (248).

See No. 4516—17 Apr. 1772

5094 LADY BETTY BUSTLE AND HER MAID LUCY PREPARING FOR THE MASQUERADE AT THE PANTHEON.

251 Printed for Carington Bowles, Map & Printseller, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Publish'd as the Act directs . . . [date erased, 1772].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A lady stands holding a black mask in her r. hand; she looks over her l. shoulder towards a mirror on a dressing-table (r.) Her maid stoops over an open arched-top coffer on a stool. Her dress is of the general character of the period, but its long gathered sleeves suggest that it is intended to be Elizabethan. In her high-dressed hair is a jewelled crescent. The maid wears a frilled muslin cap over her high-dressed hair. On the dressing-table is a card inscribed, Two Tickets for the Pantheon. The circular mirror is draped with embroidered muslin. On the wall are two mirrors in carved frames with candle-sconces. An arm-chair stands on the l. A carpet with an arabesque pattern covers the floor.

13 × 10 in.

A coloured impression is in 'Caricatures', ii, p. 119. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5095 LADY FASHION'S SECRETARY'S OFFICE, OR PETTICOAT RECOMMENDATION THE BEST.

Printed for Carington Bowles. Map & Printseller, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, c. 1772].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A fashionably dressed young woman sits in an arm-chair (r.) looking towards an elegantly dressed young man, in bag-wig and solitaire, who has entered from the l. He hands her a card, inscribed, Miss Kenedy recommended for 6 Pantheon Tickets; she holds out her r. hand to take it. In his l. hand is a sheaf of cards, one inscribed Coterie. She rests her l. arm on a small table on which is a card inscribed Pantheon, and an open book inscribed Whist Quadrille. In her l. hand is a ticket inscribed Cornely's. The luxury of the room is indicated by a marble column and a door surmounted by a pediment in which is a bust. A cockatoo on a perch screams at the visitor.

She is the well-known courtesan Kitty or Polly Kennedy who has been confused with Polly Jones and perhaps with another Polly Kennedy, see Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, 1909, p. 147 ff. The allusion in the title is to the very unpopular reprieve granted through her influence to her brother who had been sentenced to death for the murder of a watchman in a drunken brawl, see Nos. 4399, 4463, 4844. The (unsuccessful) attempt to keep ladies of bad reputation out of the Pantheon is also satirized, see No. 4998. The Coterie was a very fashionable and exclusive ladies' club which met at Almack's, see Nos. 4472, 4847, 5065, 5425. The assemblies of Mrs. Cornelys' came temporarily to an end with her bankruptcy and the sale of Carlisle House in December 1772, see No. 5066. For portraits of Polly Kennedy (who may however not be identical with the subject of this print, see Bleackley, op. cit.), see B.M. Cat. Engr. Br. Portraits; see also No. 5204.

12 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', ii. 22. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

THE PAINTRESS OF MACCARONI'S.

See No. 4582—c. 1772

Mezzotint (coloured impression). Probably a portrait of Maria Cosway, see J. T. Smith, Nollekens and his Times, ed. W. Whitten, 1920, ii. 321, where an impression from the collection of Francis Wellesley, Esq. is reproduced as of Mrs. Cosway. The portrait resembles portraits of Mrs. Cosway and shows little resemblance to Angelica Kauffmann, suggested by Mr. Stephens as the subject. It is, moreover, a companion print to No. 4520, The Macaroni Painter [1772], a portrait of Cosway. See also No. 6102. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xcvi.

THE ENTERPRIZING MACCARONI . . . (254)

See No. 4517—1772

THE POLITE MACCARONI PRESENTING A NOSEGAY TO MISS BLOSSOM. (255)

See No. 4518—1772

THE CITIZEN RETIRED, OR BUSINESS AT AN END TILL MONDAY. (256)

See No. 4519—1772

THE MACARONI PAINTER . . . (257) [Cosway]

Earlom after Dighton.

See No. 4520—1772

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xcvii, and Nollekens and his Times, ed. W. Whitten, ii. 320.

TWO BLOODS OF HUMOUR, RETURNING FROM THE BAGNIO, AFTER HAVING KEPT IT UP. (258)

See No. 4521—1772

THE PARSON AND CAPTAIN. (259)

See No. 3789—1772

HOW D'YE LIKE ME. (260)

See No. 4522—19 Nov. 1772

- THE UNLUCKY VISIT . . . (261) See No. 4523—1772
- LOVE AND WINE. (263) See No. 4524—1772
- LOVE AND OPPORTUNITY. See No. 4591—c. 1772
- THE OLD FREE METHOD OF ROUZING A BROTHER SPORTSMAN (266) See No. 3769—c 1772
- A reduced version is No. 3770.

THE DOUBLE ATTACK, OR FRENCH POLITENESS . . .
See No. 4573—c. 1772

The costume appears to be c. 1772-3. The background suggests the Pantheon, opened 1772.

THE APPOINTMENT OVERHEARD AND PREVENTED.
See No. 4576—c. 1772

From Carington Bowles's smaller series:

THE VICTORIOUS RETURN OF THE CITY MILITIA . . . (218)
See No. 4578—1 May 1772

4583, 5096, 4775, 5097

Similar mezzotints issued by other publishers.

THE MACARONI COURTSHIP REJECTED.
See No. 4583—20 Mar. 1772

P. Dawe. Pub. John Bowles.

5096 THE FRENCH GENTLEMAN IN LONDON.

[P. Dawe?]

Publish'd May 15th 1772 by W. Humphrey, S^t Martins Lane.

Mezzotint. Street scene; a lean and foppish Frenchman (r.), clasping his hands in distress, is being roughly handled by a stout, plainly-dressed Englishman (l.). The Englishman holds the Frenchman's coat-collar, and threatens him with his r. fist. A sluttish woman standing behind holding a mop, holds her l. fist over the Frenchman's head. The Frenchman wears a toupet-wig with a black bag and solitaire which has been broken in the fray. His sword-belt is twisted so that his sword hangs hilt downwards. He is wearing a laced coat and waistcoat with lace ruffles. The Englishman wears his own unkempt hair, a broad-brimmed hat, long plain coat, striped waistcoat and top-boots. A wall in which is a window (r.) forms the background. A notice is pasted on the wall, the only legible words being At the Royal . . .

Cf. No. 4477.

$12\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{11}{16}$ in.

A MILLENER'S SHOP.

See No. 4775—9 Apr. 1772

Pub. W. Humphrey.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. cxcviii.

5097 THE PANTHEON MACARONI*London. Printed for Rob^t Sayer N^o 53 Fleet Street. [c. 1772.]*

Mezzotint. A group of three H.L. figures. Two ladies of meretricious appearance seated at a tea-table, a man with a large Macaroni club of hair is handing one of them a cup of tea. One holds a fan and looks coyly towards the man, the other leans over her shoulder.

A scene at the Spa Fields Pantheon which was open from 1770 till March 1774 when the buildings were announced for sale owing to the proprietor's bankruptcy. In the Macaroni Magazine for January 1773, p. 162, is the notice, 'Pantheons: The Nobility's, Oxford Road; the Mobility's, Spa Fields'. A writer in the St. James's Chronicle, May 1772, professed to have been shocked at the request from more than one lady, 'Pray, Sir, will you treat me with a dish of tea'. Wroth, London Pleasure Gardens of the Eighteenth Century, 1896, pp. 25-8.

5½ × 4½ in.

POLITICAL SATIRES

5098 THE STATE HACKNEY-COACH.

[1 Jan. 1773]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xli. 589. It illustrates 'A Dialogue between a Politician and a Chinese'. A richly carved glass-coach, surmounted by cupids holding a crown is being driven (r. to l.) on a road which leads past buildings to the Tower of London. Inside is the king leaning back fast asleep. At the back stands a devil holding reins attached to a bit in the mouth of the coachman, in his other hand is a whip with a long lash. His feet rest on the heads of two carved figures, one being Neptune with his trident. Above is engraved, They go fast whom the Devil drives. The place of the horses is taken by eight running men, reins being attached to bits in their mouths.

The coachman is Lord North, the man-horses being the ministers or 'king's friends'. They are poorly characterized, and the only two who can be identified are Lord Holland (or perhaps Charles Fox, see Nos. 4859, 4892) with a fox's head, the near leader, and Dyson or 'Mungo' as a negro in a striped suit, see No. 4962, &c., the near wheeler. In front of him is a man holding a thistle, indicative of Scottish influence. The text explains that the harnessed men, since they 'submit their necks to the yoke of slavery, bridled, harnessed and obeying the lash', are on a level with 'beasts of burden or hackney horses'. The occupant of the coach being 'fond of his ease and careless of his interest and power, his servants drive him where they list'. Cf. No. 5132, &c.

$3\frac{11}{16} \times 6\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5099 THE POLITICAL RAT CATCHER.

[1 Jan. 1773]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, ix. 225. A W.L. caricature of Lord North as a rat-catcher. He stands holding in his l. hand a rectangular cage which he supports on his hip, in it are a number of rats. In his r. hand is a staff headed by a fleur-de-lys to which are attached a money bag, a key, and a pennant inscribed in Hoc Signo Vincas. A document is displayed inscribed A Calculation of how many Millions of Rats may be destroy'd if Ten Years of Peace is continued. Five rats hang by their noses from his Garter ribbon, two others run on his shoulder. Round his r. leg is a garter inscribed no shame. His legs are astride and on the ground between his feet is a large book, Description of what quantities of Powder will Catch Ratts of different Species. An open book shows a page inscribed, A List of all the great Offices of State haunted by Rats of all Qualities.

The text explains that by means of bribes, pensions, offices, ribbons and peerages North 'has constantly in his trap upwards of five hundred of different species. . . . Every seven years he lets loose all the Rats in his trap to range the country and create confusion', that is, at each general election. For the allusion to 'Ten Years of Peace', see Nos. 4961, 4969. For the fleur-de-lys cf. No. 4935, for North's alleged corrupt support of the Bourbons over the Falkland Islands.

This anticipates Rowlandson's well-known satire, The Apostate Jack R— [Robinson] The Political Ratcatcher (1784).

$6\frac{1}{2} \times 4$ in.

5100 SHAH ALLUM IN DISTRESS.[Jan. 1773]¹

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, i. 41. A design in two compartments illustrating an article in Biblical phraseology, 'The First Chapter of the Book of Kings' and 'The Lamentations'. In the upper part is depicted a meeting of the General Court of the East India Company; the directors seated at a table on which are writing materials, a book, and a hammer. In the foreground a large man, Governor Johnstone, is holding up by the seat of his breeches 'Shah Allum' or Sir George Colebrook for the derision of the other directors. In the background, behind a barrier, a crowd of men, apparently the proprietors of East India Stock, watch the proceedings with amusement.

This illustrates a meeting of the General Court of the Company on 1 Dec. 1772,² at which Governor Johnstone threw the blame of all the Company's miscarriages on their Directors who were 'buoying up the spirits of the Proprietary with a pompous account of their affairs. . . .' Colebrook, a banker and M.P. for Arundel, was a leading director of the East India Company, and had been chairman in 1769 and 1771. At this time his affairs were in great disorder as a result of over-speculation: he had contracted for 'all the alum in Bohemia, all the chip hats in Italy, . . .' Letters of the Earl of Malmesbury, i. 271, Ap. 6, 1773. See also Hume, Letters, 1932, ii. 263. The crisis was that in which Fordyce was ruined, see Nos. 4961, 5016. The name Shah Allum is here given because he had become rich by monopolizing alum. Westminster Magazine, i. 40.

Over the lower design is inscribed The India-man wrecked. L 12 (probably a reference to 'The Lamentations' on the opposite page).

A ship with broken masts in heavy seas is driving on to rocks (r.), on which is a flag-staff with a flag inscribed Treasury Cape. On the r. margin is inscribed L. 40,00,00. This symbolizes the ruinous state of the Company's finances, on the verge of bankruptcy and burdened with an annual tribute of £400,000 to the Treasury. See Ann. Reg. 1773, pp. 62 ff., and Camb. Hist. of the British Empire, iv, pp. 181 ff. See also No. 5101, &c. 6½ × 4 in.

5101 THE GHOST OF OMICHUND

[Jan. 1773]

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, i. 67. It illustrates a dialogue in verse (a parody of Hamlet) between 'Nabob' (Clive) and Omichund. Omichund, wearing a feathered turban, appears from clouds addressing Clive with a minatory gesture. Clive, who is supported on each side by a military officer, starts back in horror. Omichund stands under a high palm-tree, from whose branches a man, stripped to the waist, is hanging by the wrists. A note explains that he is 'the man under Breeches punishment'. The scene is a walled enclosure or compound, on the r. behind Clive part of a high tent is visible.

Beneath the title is engraved the beginning of the dialogue, spoken by the ghost of Omichund:

*What Woes, he cried, hath lust of Gold
O'er my poor Country widely roll'd, Plunderers proceed!*

¹ The first (January) number of the Westminster Magazine appeared in January, contrary to the custom. In 1774 each number appeared at the beginning of the following month.

² Four Courts a year were held, the qualification for a vote being raised by North's Regulating Act of 1773 from £500 to £1,000 Stock.

Clive's trick on Omichund who had threatened to divulge the negotiations with Mir Jaffier before the Battle of Plassey unless he was given 30 lakhs of rupees is said to have led to Omichund's loss of reason and death and is the chief stain on Clive's reputation. See also Nos. 5017, 5100, 5102, 5111.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5102 N°XXXIX. Vol. IV. THE INDIA DIRECTORS IN THE SUDS

[Jan. 1773]

Engraving. From the Town and Country Magazine, iv. 705 (Supplement). It illustrates a dialogue, 'The Directors in the Suds or the Jaghire Factor dismayed at the Ghosts of the Black Merchants'. The scene is a room in the London Tavern at a meeting of Directors to consider opposition to the Bill for restraining the East India Company from sending out supervisors to India, see No. 4968. They sit at a long table, the chairman (Sir George Colebrook) in the centre, and are astonished at the entry (l.) of a procession of Indians wearing turbans and surrounded by smoke which obscures the directors seated on the chairman's r. Three 'black merchants' in single file head the procession and threaten Lord Clive, who stands (r.) facing them, his hands outstretched in horror, his chair overturned. In the dialogue the merchants accuse him of crimes and demand justice; one addresses him as 'Thou maker and destroyer of nabobs, princes, and traders! . . .' Clive retreats, saying, 'truth and justice are too powerful for hypocrisy and guilt'. This is typical of the attacks made upon Clive in the Press at this time. See Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 162-4. See also Nos. 5017, 5100, 5111.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5103 WORTHIES.

[c. Jan. 1773]

Engraving. Frontispiece from The Life of John Wilkes Esq.; in the Manner of Plutarch, 1773. Four bust portraits in ovals arranged in two pairs: Wat Tyler, with Ald^r Beckford; John Cade Esq', John Wilkes Esq'. Between the ovals are four clasped hands forming a cross. Cade faces three-quarters to the r., Wilkes three-quarters to the l., each squints violently. Beneath is inscribed These are thy Gods O Britain. This illustrates the pamphlet ascribed to Horne, see No. 5104. One of the few attacks on 'the patriots', see No. 5334, &c., and for attacks on Wilkes Nos. 4326, 4887, 5130, 5131, 5245.

Ovals, $2\frac{1}{4} \times 1\frac{15}{16}$ in.

5104 THE BRENTFORD GUY FAUX SETTING FIRE TO THE PILLARS OF THE LONDON TAVERN, TO BLOW UP LIBERTY AND THE BILL OF RIGHTS.

[Jan. 1773]

Woodcut. Westminster Magazine, i. 71. Parson Horne, in profile to the l., wearing clerical dress, holds a piece of burning tow to a pillared doorway inscribed London Tavern. In his l. hand is a lantern. From his pocket hangs a paper inscribed Life of John Wilkes Esq'. The design shows part of the façade of the London Tavern, the meeting-place of the 'Society for supporting the Bill of Rights'. Beneath is inscribed:

*He has profan'd the sacred name of Friend,
And worn it into vileness.
With how secure a brow, and specious form,
He gilds the secret villain.* Dryden.

This illustrates a violent attack on Horne called 'Patriotism blown up . . .'. Horne is denounced as a rank apostate and Judas, a hypocritical parson and debauchee, who by his attacks on Wilkes has destroyed the cause of liberty. The occasion of the attack was a pamphlet just published, The life of John Wilkes Esq. attempted in the manner of Plutarch (see No. 5103), of which Horne was the reputed author. For Horne's quarrel with Wilkes (which shattered the Bill of Rights Society, see Ann. Reg. 1771, p. 94) see No. 4861, &c.

$6\frac{13}{16} \times 4\frac{1}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5443.

5105 THE MOTHER AND THE CHILD.

[1 Feb. 1773]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xlii. 33. Britannia seated, her spear and shield beside her, suckling an infant, George III. She is thin, with a melancholy expression and her breasts are shrivelled. The child wears a star; a coral and bells are attached to his Garter ribbon; his hands are stretched towards his mother's breasts and he is saying, more Supplies. Above (l.) is a tasselled sack, quite full, inscribed GR. II; a similar sack on the r., open and quite empty, is inscribed GR III. Above one is engraved Privy Purse in 1753, above the other, Privy Purse in 1773. This illustrates 'Fragment of a Speech': 'Supplies . . . were never greater, and occasion was never less. Our mother BRITAIN, has been drained of her nourishment till she is ready to expire: . . . yet her SON, her best beloved, her eldest-born, still hangs upon her breasts, still suckles, and (barbarous!) still shrieks out for "More Supplies! More Supplies!" Unnatural boy!'

A satire on the arrears of the Civil List, see also Nos. 4968, 5124.

$7 \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ in. (pl.).

THE YOUNG CUB.

See No. 4810—1 Feb. 1773

Macaroni and Theatrical Magazine, i. 145. An illustration to 'The Senatorial Macaroni; or, Memoirs of the Young Cub'. (C. J. Fox.)

5106 THE STATE COTILLON 1773.

[Feb. 1773]

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, i. 149. The interior of a panelled room: ten men holding hands dance in a circle to the tune of a bag-pipe played by Bute (l.) wearing a kilt and appearing from behind a curtain. The king watches with pleased amusement from behind a door (r.). The dancers are trampling on papers and state documents.

Lord North, trampling on papers inscribed National Debt and Grievances, is between Lord Bathurst in his Chancellor's robes but wearing a hat, and Lord Barrington in a military coat under whose feet are Dispatches from War Office; under Bathurst's foot is a paper, Appeals, Decrees. Next him (r.) is a youthful-looking minister stepping on a paper inscribed French Grammar to show that he is Suffolk, Secretary of State, pilloried for his ignorance of French, see Nos. 4875, 4876. His neighbour is only partly visible. Next comes a military officer trampling on a paper inscribed Middlesex Election to show that he is Colonel Luttrell. On Luttrell's r., and the central figure of the design, is Lord Mansfield wearing tartan stockings to show that he is a Scot and dancing upon Magna Charta. On his l. is an unidentified figure, then a minister treading on papers inscribed Whitfield Hymns to show (not very consistently) that he is Lord Dartmouth, whose strong attachment to the Methodists earned the nickname of the Psalm-singer. He had succeeded Hillsborough as Secretary of State for the Colonies on 14 Aug. 1772. Between him and Barrington stands Sandwich, wearing a sailor's trousers and standing on The Petition of the Navy Captains. Bute stands on a paper To Miss Vansittar[t]. Other papers on the ground are The Remonstr[ance of the City] and Petition of the East India Comp. The captains of the Navy had petitioned to the House of Commons for an addition to their half pay 9 Feb. 1773. Parl. Hist. xvii. 705-22. The request was approved by parliament, but opposed by North and the King. Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, ii. 447, 451. At this time the latest City Remonstrance was that of 24 June 1771, that of 1773 was not decided on till 11 March 1773, nor presented to the King till 26 March. Sharpe, London and the Kingdom, iii. 135-6. The petition of the East India Company appears to be that of 14 Dec. 1772, against the Bill to restrain the Company from appointing supervisors for India, see Parl. Hist. xvii. 646 ff.; see also Nos. 4968, 5102.

The plate illustrates 'A vision' of a full Council of the Ministry in the Cockpit (the Treasury) at which, on the sound of bagpipes, the ministers seized the papers on the table, scattered them on the floor, and 'danced upon them with a furious glee.' It appears that the two unidentified dancers are Viscount Townshend (appointed Master General of the Ordnance, 17 Oct. 1772) and Jeremiah Dyson or 'Mungo'.

Reproduced, Chase, The Beginnings of the American Revolution, 1911, i, p. 350.

$3\frac{15}{16} \times 6\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5107 THE ZEALOTS FOR, & AGAINST THE TRUE RELIGION. [1 Mar. 1773]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, x. 63. It illustrates 'A Modern Dialogue, amongst the Benchers and Anti-Benchers, Beelzebub, and his Imp'. A tall column, on the top of which is a book on which stands a lamb bearing a cross to which is attached a pennon with a St. George's Cross, the whole representing Religion. Two opposing bodies of clergy strain at it with ropes: the bishops in lawn sleeves on the l., ministers in gowns on the r. Over the ministers (r.) hovers Beelzebub, pointing to the column and saying: My Children that is not your God, but I am.

The bishops, whose aim is to prevent the opposing party from pulling down the column, say: Let us keep it for our own Benefit and If Religion falls Adieu to our Stalls.

The ministers say: We starve by Religion; Down with the 39 Articles, and Let them that live by the Gospel [sic] Support it. They are assisted by a ragamuffin who attacks the column with a pick-axe.

The dialogue concludes with the victory of the Benchers who say: 'Ha! Ha! Ha! How easily we can frustrate all their endeavours with a well-timed diversion.

Ye Gods! What havock doth corruption
Make amongst your works.'

This plate is indexed as The Zealots for and against the 39 Articles. On 23 February 1773 Sir W. Meredith moved without success for a committee to reconsider the subscription to the Articles at the universities. Parl. Hist. xvii. 742-59. A Bill for the relief of Protestant Dissenters was rejected by the House of Lords on 2 April 1773. Ibid. p. 759. Letter No. 1218 in Corr. of George III ed. Fortescue, ii. 468 refers to this rejection and shows the attitude of the King and Ministry. See Nos. 4944, 5188.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5108 CAROLA GENOVESA, LOUISA, AUGUSTA, ANDREA, TIMOTHEA, D'EON DE BEAUMONT.

Publish'd March 20 1773 by S. Hooper on Ludgate-Hill

Mezzotint. D'Eon, as a woman dressed as Minerva, stands outside a tent. In her r. hand is a spear, in her l. the shield with the Medusa head inscribed At nunc dura dedit vobis discrimina Pallas. She is directed to the l. and looks over her shoulder to the r. She wears the cross of St. Louis.

In the foreground (r.) are muskets, a drum, flags, &c., one flag inscribed Impavidum Ferient Ruinæ. In the background (l.) is a camp, with a row of tents, a sentry and three mounted dragoons. Beneath the title is engraved: Knight of the Royal & military order of St. Louis Captain of Dragoons Aide-de-Camp to the Marechal Duke de Broglio; Minister Plenipotentiary from France to the King of Great Britain. Beneath, on a separate plate, is engraved an account of d'Eon; it concludes '... the secret of her sex was discover'd in London in febr'y 1771 through many accidents and Particulary [sic] through the declaration of the Princess Askoff ...'. See No. 4865, &c. C. E. Russell, English Mezzotint Portraits, ii. 457.

$13\frac{1}{8} \times 10\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5109 THE STATE JUGGLERS 1773.

[1 May 1773]

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, i. 272. Lord North as a juggler squats on a table which is on a raised platform. He wears a harlequin's suit with his ribbon and star and holds a mask in his r. hand, in his l. a conjuror's box. On the table are three large money-bags, a pack of cards, balls, and cones. Behind him are ministers and ministerialists (l. to r.): Dyson as Mungo the negro slave holds up a round box, Sandwich holds his cricket-bat over his shoulder, on his head rests the model of a man-of-war. Behind North on his r. is Mansfield in judge's wig and robes; on North's l. is Bute, holding a coronet over North's head; in front of Bute is Charles Fox or Lord Holland with a fox's head. On the r. are three other ministers all wearing ribbons, one with a military coat being Barrington, Secretary-at-War. In front of the table is a serpent on a pedestal. Below the platform is a crowd of people, some watching the juggler, others turning aside with gestures of despair. The principal figures are: a seated man holding a pole on the top of which is a pair of breeches with the pockets inside out to show his poverty; a standing man with a ragged coat holds his head in despair; an emaciated Asiatic lies on the ground.

The text explains the scene as a vision, a juggler's booth in St. James's Street, the serpent being a 'symbol of the Practitioner's address, cunning and deceit'. The figures round the juggler seeming to applaud were aiding his cheats. 'Handfulls of gold being thrown up in the air ... scattered mischief and destruction all round.' The exasperated crowd at last demolished the booth and the scaffold.

The commercial crisis of 1772, see No. 4961 &c., continued during 1773, see Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, ii. 436. The Secret Committee had made charges of rapacity and oppression against servants of the East India Company. Parl. Hist. xvii. 535, 829.

6 × 3 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5110 THE POLITICAL DANCING BEAR.

[1 May 1773]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xlii. 160. Two men symbolizing France and Spain are in charge of a dancing bear which represents England. France (l.), dressed as a French fop, plays the violin; Spain, in cloak and slashed doublet, holds the rope attached to the animal's head. The bear has a shield on its forehead ornamented with the combined crosses of St. George and St. Andrew as in the Union flag. Round its body are scrolls inscribed Evil be to him that Evil thinks, and Quisque me impune lacessit. In the background (r.) are two sovereigns in crowns and ermine-trimmed robes, one leaning on the shoulder of the other; they watch the scene with amusement. Above the head of the bear-leader and in the centre of the design are two circles representing the reverse and obverse of a coin. On one (l.) are three heads, two resembling those of the fiddler and the bear-leader, the central one that of George III; the first two have expressions of cunning satisfaction. Above it is engraved The triple alliance. On the other are three clasped hands meeting in the centre of the circle; above it is engraved Tria juncta in uno. Beneath the design is engraved Music hath charms to soothe a savage Beast.

The print is explained in 'A Dialogue between a Politician and a Chinese', pp. 160-2. The Great Bear or G.B. is Great Britain; the fiddler is the French Ambassador [Comte de Guines], and the bear, 'clumsy, credulous, unsuspecting', dances to a French tune. The three heads and the three hands symbolize a triple alliance between England, France, and Spain ('an honest fat open face [George III] between two scarecrows'). The two sovereigns in the background are the king of Prussia and 'his scholar the Emperor' who laugh at 'the folly of a triple alliance so motley and so unnatural'. The alliance is 'not yet' concluded.

At this time there were rumours that England proposed to make an alliance with France to oppose the invasion and partition of Poland. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 186. See an interesting paper in George III's handwriting of 1772 on a possible alliance of England, France, and Holland to protect Poland against Austria, Russia, and Prussia, if jealousies should arise between the three partitioning powers. Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, ii. 428-9. See also Nos. 4957, 4958, 5124, 5222, 5229.

There was actually a crisis in March and April 1773 arising out of the Russo-Turkish war, which attracted little public notice, a threat of France and Spain to attack Russia which was checked by naval preparations in England (cf. No. 5124), and the diplomatic action of Stormont, British ambassador in Paris. Adolphus, Hist. of England, ii. 4-9; Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, ii. 470, 474. This shows how unfounded were the rumours of a triple alliance between England, France, and Spain in April 1773, although in the following year Vergennes, alarmed at the Treaty of Kutchuk-Kainardji (July 1774), contemplated the possibility of persuading England to join in an effort to check Russia. Corwin, French Policy and the American Alliance, 1916, p. 61.

3 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 6 $\frac{7}{16}$ in.

5111 THE PRESENT TIMES, OR THE NABOBS CL—VE AND C—L—KE BROUGHT TO ACCOUNT. [1 May 1773]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, x. 144. Two men (r.) kneeling in supplication before Lord North (l.) who stands with a pistol in his r. hand, about to take the large money-bags which the two 'nabobs', Clive and Colebrooke, hold out to him. Colebrooke, a very small man, is saying: Save us my Lord or we Perish; from his pocket hangs a paper inscribed Job in the Alley 30,000£. On Colebrooke's r. is Clive saying: You shall have the tenth of my Jaghire (this was the quit-rent given to Clive by Mir Jaffier amounting to nearly £30,000 a year which the Directors had limited to ten years). Each has an iron band round his neck to which a chain is attached which is held in the mouth of a demon in the foreground. Another chain from its mouth is attached to North's wrist. North stands on a paper inscribed India Stock no Price. He is saying: I know the vileness of your deeds! But I must have more hush Money. From his pocket hangs a paper inscribed Report of the Secret Committee. Justice, a blindfolded woman holding scales with her sword raised to strike, hovers in the air behind this group. Bute, holding out a highlander's target and with a sword in his l. hand, stands to protect the three men from the sword of justice; he wears a kilt and the Garter ribbon, and his face is covered with a mask to show that his influence is secret. Above the design is engraved: A new Scene for the Proprietors of India Stock. Below the title is engraved: Deel awa wi em Au R—gues all alike, Bribers and Bribed.

The plate anticipates the great debates in which Clive defended himself from the accusations in the Secret Committee on the East India Company, see Parl. Hist. xvii. 850 ff. He said 'Jaghires were as commonly given [by Indian princes] as pensions, lottery tickets and other douceurs by the minister in this.' Clive is called the Jaghire Factor in No. 5102, Baron Jaghire in No. 5144.¹ See also Nos. 5100, 5102.

5 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 3 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5112-5123

A set of twelve prints by William Austin, some of which are not political. The title and price of the series are engraved on the first only.

5112 A MACARONI ASS MATCH BETWEEN THE [CUBS]²

NB. ST—E [State] GAMBLERS.

I

¹ Cf. 'Protestation' in London Magazine, 1773, p. 44, beginning, 'You I love my dearest wife', has the line, 'More than Clive his black Jagheer.' Quoted, G. E. C. Complete Peerage, i. 1910. Appendix H.

Also,

Secure from Wars and dangerous Seas
Colonel Jaghire enjoys his Ease
Buys Land, and Beeves, with Indian Gold,
Which some poor English 'Squire has sold.

C. Anstey, Election Ball. 1776, p. 7.

² 'Cubs' is written in ink, perhaps after having been first erased. In another impression it is engraved.

NATURE DISPLAY'D BOTH SERIOUS AND COMIC IN 12 DESIGNS DEDICATED TO S. FOOT ESQR by L'eauforte & Burein
*Prs a Guinea.*¹ 1

Pub^d as y^e Act Directs May 1st 1773.

Engraving. Two men riding (r. to l.) on asses, between them is a small stream. The foremost ass is galloping, its rider sits facing its tail in order to jeer at his rival. The other ass, braying with outstretched neck, refuses to cross the stream in spite of the efforts of its rider who stands on the saddle, vigorously using a long-lashed whip.

The title shows that the riders are sons of Lord Holland. The standing rider is short and stout and has a certain resemblance to caricatures of both Charles and Stephen, but is probably intended for Charles. The other is tall and lean, and is probably intended for Henry Fox (1755-1811), who at the age of nine lived only for horses; see No. 5062. In 1773 he was with his regiment at Boston.

Beneath the dedication is engraved,

*I'll no Man call an Ape or Ass
 Tis his own Conscience holds the Glass
 Thus Void of all Offence I draw
 Who Claims y^e Subject knows his Flaw.*

10½ × 14⅝ in. (pl.).

5113 A PEEP IN THE GARDEN AT HAYES 2

Pub^d as the Act Directs May 1st 1773 [W. Austin]

Engraving. An interview between Chatham and Charles Fox. Chatham (l.) in profile to the r. has just left a wheeled chair, similar in principle, though of ornate design, to the modern bath-chair. A pair of crutches is supported in loops on the outside of the chair. Chatham is much caricatured and very thin, his gouty l. leg and foot in a bulky woollen covering, probably one of the 'bootikins' described by Walpole. He wears a large night-cap and a pair of clumsy woollen gloves. He holds out both hands and faces his visitor with an expression of wary friendliness. Fox faces him with a somewhat truculent expression. His r. forefinger is extended as if making terms; his l. hand is in his waistcoat pocket, and his hat is under his l. arm.

An indication of the political importance which Fox had already acquired, and of his vacillating policy at this time. Having 'commenced patriot' (Gibbon to Holroyd, 21 Feb. 1772) over the Marriage Act, see No. 4970, he again took office as a lord of the Treasury in December 1772, and after opposing the Ministry was dismissed on 24 Feb. 1774. Chatham was then living in retirement, but was actually at Burton Pynsent not Hayes. Chatham Correspondence, vol. iv.

10⅝ × 14¾ in. (pl.).

5114 THE VOLUPTUOS · LUXURIOUS · SPENDTHRIFT ·
 MACARONI · FROM HOLLAND · IN · A · BREATHING · SWEAT 3

Pub^d as y^e Act Directs May 1 1773 [W. Austin]

Engraving. One of the sons of Lord Holland asleep, half-sitting, half-lying on a garden seat, his breath issuing visibly from his mouth. His l. foot is on the ground, his r. on the seat. He has a toupet wig with a large macaroni club, his hat has fallen to the ground. He is obese and is dressed as a macaroni, with a large nosegay. His curved sword or sabre hangs from his waist.

¹ On another impression '12/6' has been substituted.

A caricature of Stephen Fox afterwards 2nd Lord Holland who was constitutionally lethargic, and is usually depicted asleep, see Nos. 4648, 4649, 5223. In the Covent Garden Magazine, July 1773, he is 'a celebrated sleeping, gambling Macaroni'.

10 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 14 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. (pl.).

5115 MAJOR G * * * * N & LADY LANDING AT SOUTHAMPTON IN CRIPPLES WALK 4

Pub^d as the Act Directs May 1st 1773

[W. Austin]

Engraving. The scene is the sea-shore, with the Isle of Wight faintly visible in the background. A man followed by a woman walk in profile from r. to l., both much caricatured. He is using crutches, his gouty l. leg is swathed or in a bootikin, and suspended in a sling which goes over his r. shoulder. He has an impossibly protruding waistcoat, and a large club of hair. A dog (l.) is barking at him. His wife holds in her r. hand a bottle labelled Hartshorn, in her l. a very long cane. Her profile is witch-like with hooked nose and protruding bearded chin. A large hood almost conceals her hair, and she wears a long cloak. A cross hangs from a necklace round her neck. In the distance grotesque figures walk on the shore, most of them in various stages of decrepitude. One is labelled The Rabbit Doctor, St. A—, under his arm is a large rabbit. This is St. André (1680–1776), an unqualified but fashionable surgeon who investigated the case of Mary Tofts in 1726, who professed to be delivered of rabbits, see Nos. 1778–81. He vouched for her story in all its impossible details. In spite of the scandal caused by its exposure he eloped with, and afterwards married, Lady Elizabeth Molyneux on the night of the death of her husband whom he had been professionally attending. They settled in Southampton about 1750.

10 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 15 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. (pl.).

5116 [LONG] T[HOMAS] & MAD^{LE} G—^D GOING TO THE PANTHEON IN THEIR NATURAL MASKS¹ 5

Pub^d as y^e Act Directs May 1st 1773

[W. Austin]

Engraving. A caricature of 'Long Sir Thomas' Robinson (1700?–77) walking arm in arm with a short, fat and elderly woman, both in profile to the l. He is very thin and wears the large hat, tie-wig, wide-cuffed coat and high-quartered shoes which were then old-fashioned. His l. hand is on the hilt of his sword, his r. holds up a glass through which he looks. The lady is also much caricatured, a pair of spectacles is perched on her bulbous nose; she wears a calash hood, and a large nosegay. In her r. hand is a closed fan, a microscopic dog is carried under her l. arm. She takes Sir Thomas's l. arm. She is perhaps identical with Mrs. G—s, a mistress of Sir Thomas who is described as short and stout and 'past her bloom'. See Town and Country Magazine, April 1774, and No. 5253.

¹ The letters in brackets are in ink.

Behind the couple walks a small lean foot-boy, in laced livery, his hair in a long pigtail queue. He points jeeringly at the couple, and holds up a large key, looking through its handle as if through a glass in imitation of his master.

There is an earlier caricature of Sir Thomas in a group by General Sir A. Campbell, which includes a portrait of the Chevalier Descassau (see No. 5067), 'Honorary Engravers', i. 161, and he has been identified with the figure standing in a side box in Hogarth's picture of the Beggar's Opera, D.N.B.

Reproduced, Fuchs, Die Frau in der Karikatur, 1906, p. 352.

11 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 14 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. (pl.).

5117 [HANS TURBOT]¹ QUARRELLING WITH A FISHWOMAN ·
AT SOUTHAMPTON IN PRESENCE OF COUNT CORK SKREW

6

Pub^d as the Act Directs May 1st 1773

[W. Austin]

Engraving. An irate fishwife stands behind her trestle-table on which are fish. Her l. hand is on her hip, in her r. she holds a coin towards 'Hans Turbot' (l.), whom she is scolding. He faces her, in profile to the l., holding a large turbot by the tail. She is a gaunt woman with a hideous profile, wearing a flat hat and a short apron. Her r. wrist is tattooed, WL 45, perhaps a memento of Wilkes and No. 45 of the North Briton. Hans, who is ugly and corpulent, is scowling at the woman. In his r. hand is a cane on the head of which is engraved H. S. On the r., and in front of the trestle-table, stands Count Cork Skrew, dressed in an old-fashioned manner in large three-cornered hat and tie-wig, and coat with wide cuffs.

Perhaps a caricature of Hans Stanley of Paulton's near Romsey, M.P. for Southampton, the grandson of Sir Hans Sloane, who was awkward and eccentric. He never married and shot himself in 1780. See Walpole, Letters, xi. 105-6. His companion is perhaps the Earl of Cork (Edmund Boyle, 8th earl, 1742-98).

10 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 14 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. (pl.).

5118—RETURN^G FROM READING MARKET IN A FULL BREEZE

7

Pub^d as y^e Act Directs May 1st 1773

[W. Austin]

Engraving. Two men walk from r. to l. one behind the other; a following wind blows their hair and clothes. Both are uncouth and wear cockaded hats and are perhaps intended for half-pay officers. The hands of the man in front are in a muff. His pigtail queue is blown in front of him. The second man walks with crutches, his r. hand is replaced by a hook, in which he carries a nest suspended from strings on which are a hen and young chickens. Tied to his back is a child. He is smoking a short clay pipe.

10 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 14 $\frac{5}{8}$ in. (clipped).

¹ The name is written in ink perhaps after the engraved words had been erased.

5119 THE ANATOMIST OVERTAKEN BY THE WATCH IN CARRYING OFF MISS W—^{TSI} IN A HAMPER 8*Pub^d as the Act Directs May 1 1773*

[W. Austin]

Engraving. A lean man (r.) wearing a doctor's tie-wig, is running from l. to r. to escape from a watchman who stands (l.) springing his rattle. On the ground is a basket or hamper, the lid of which has fallen open to show the body of a young woman in a shroud. A short irate man (centre) points at the escaping figure, turning towards the lean aged watchman, who holds in his l. hand a large lantern, and a tall stick, whose head is carved to represent a head. In the watchman's hat, which is tied on with a scarf, is a tobacco pipe in full blast. The fleeing Anatomist holds a tall cane in his l. hand; under his l. arm is a dilapidated skull. He has dropped a paper inscribed Hunter's Lectur[es], showing that he is Dr. William Hunter (1718–83), the great anatomist. He built a house (1770) in Great Windmill Street to which were attached a dissecting room, lecture room, and a large museum, see No. 6128. The caricature deals with the body-snatching for the sale of corpses to surgeons, which went on to a considerable extent in this period. Reproduced, Social England, ed. Traill, 1904, v, p. 573.

10 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 15 $\frac{5}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5120 [THE DUCHESS OF QUEENSBERRY AND SOUBISE]

Pub^d as the Act Directs May 1st 1773

[W. Austin]

Engraving. One of the series Nature Display'd . . . but without title or number. A fencing match between a negro (l.) and a lady (r.) whose face is concealed by a fencing mask. The button of his foil touches her breast and he says: Mungo here Mungo dere, Mungo Ev'ry where, above, & below Hah! Vat your Gracy tink of me Now. He is fashionably dressed, a large nosegay lies on the ground beside him together with his laced hat, tasselled cane, and an open book: Les École des Armes Avec Les Attudes [sic] est Positions Par Angelo [sic]. Two books lie on the ground by the lady, the uppermost being Vol 5th Mungo Bill. The duchess (Prior's 'Kitty', 1700–77) is thin and tall, and dressed in the manner of many years ago, as was her custom, in laced stomacher, and short lace-trimmed apron.

'Mungo' generally connotes Jeremiah Dyson (see 4267, &c.), the quotation here given from Bickerstaffe's comic opera, The Padlock, having been applied to him by Barré. Here Mungo is Soubise, the black page and protégé of the Duchess of Queensberry. The young man having become very boastful and extravagant, she articulated him to Angelo, to be trained as an assistant in his fencing-school. He became 'one of the most conspicuous fops of the town', never seen 'without a bouquet of the choicest flowers in his bosom'. Angelo, Reminiscences, 1904, i. 348–51. The print is also a burlesque of Angelo's great illustrated folio on fencing, L'École d'Armes avec l'Explication des Principales Attitudes et Positions concernant l'Écriture, 1763, &c. Reproduced, Angelo, Reminiscences, i. p. 350, Paston, Pl. cxxxiv.

10 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 14 $\frac{5}{8}$ in. (pl.).

¹ The 'ts' has been added in ink, but is engraved in another impression.

5121 THE LUCKY MISTAKE OR THE BUCK & BLOOD FLOURISHING MACARONI — PLAYING A SOLO ON THE JELLY GLASSES 10¹

Pub^d as the Act Directs May 1st 1773 [W. Austin]

Engraving. A military officer on a heavy cavalry horse, rides unconcernedly past a man whom he has knocked down. He wears a hat with a cockade, a sabre, cavalry boots, and a large nosegay. His hair is in a large macaroni club, tied with ribbons. In his r. hand he flourishes a short-handled whip with a long lash. His horse has a flowing mane and tail.

Behind the horse the prostrate man (r.) looks round with a face of fury. He has a wooden leg which has been broken in his fall. Both hands are outstretched on the tray which he has been carrying, on which are a number of overturned and broken jelly-glasses.

In the upper r. corner of the plate is a club of hair under which is engraved: Club the First Both Natural & Artificial Flowing from Simple Nature The Size, about two thirds of his Carcase Weighs . Upwards of five pounds when full Dress'd & truss'd up with Powder Lambs Wool Horse & Asses hair Eau de Mille fleurs &c. &c. &c. &c. &c. &c.

10 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 14 $\frac{5}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5122 THE MERITS AND DEFECTS OF THE DEAD BY THEIR INGENIOUS SECRETARY 11

Pub^d as the Act Directs May 1st 1773 [W. Austin]

Engraving. A grave-digger (l.) resting on his spade holds out in his l. hand a decayed skull towards a skeleton-like man wearing an old-fashioned tie-wig, who is sitting on a rectangular tomb while he leans his r. elbow on another tomb at right angles to his seat. This man holds a scythe in his l. hand, a pen in his r. He uses the second tomb as a writing table; an ink-pot stands upon it. His hand rests on two papers inscribed Marcus Aurelius Servius Tullius . . . and Addison—Dr. Swift. From the jaws of the skull held by the grave-digger issue the words,

*Life is a jest & all things shew it
I thought so once but now I know it.*

In the foreground are bones and a skull; in the background (l.) a rat scampers away.

Evidently a caricature of Lord Lyttelton (1709–73), author of Dialogues of the Dead. He was noted for his thin, lanky figure and awkward bearing, see 'The Motion', No. 2479. He died in August 1773.

11 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 14 $\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5123 A FLAW IN THE ICE OR STEPHENS DREAM OF THE MACARONI BUCKS & DOES TURN'D TOPSY TURVY 12

Pub^d as the Act Directs May 1st 1773. [W. Austin]

Engraving. The heads and feet of persons suddenly submerged by the breaking of ice appear above the surface. The central figure is Stephen Fox, whose shoulders and arms are above the water; his face expresses rage and alarm. There are also the heads and shoulders of three other men, two in back view, one in profile to the l. clutching the shoulder of his neighbour, his pigtail queue flying wildly in the air. Three pairs of legs emerge from splashing water: one wearing spurred jack boots, another wearing low shoes with skates, and a third wearing the high-heeled shoes and clocked stockings of a lady. See also No. 5114.

¹ The number 10 appears to have been engraved over a partly obliterated 9.

11 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 14 $\frac{5}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5124 A RETROSPECTIVE VIEW OF A CERTAIN CABINET JUNTO. [1 June 1773]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, x. 182. It illustrates a dialogue, called 'The Party Quare [Carré] in Council with their private but Grand Dictator hearkening to their resolves'. George III (r.) sits at a table in a high-backed chair or throne under a canopy, in conference with three Ministers. Round the door appear the head and shoulders of Bute (l.) in Scot's cap and Garter ribbon, behind him is a demon. The King points out to North, who sits opposite to him, a paper on the table inscribed The Civil List in Arrears. North holds up his hands deprecatingly; from his pocket hangs a paper, Treaty of Alli[ance] with France & Spa[in]; the demon's claws clutch at the back of his head. On the king's r. stands Sandwich holding a paper inscribed 20 Sail of the Line. The third minister appears from the text to be 'J——n.', Charles Jenkinson, afterwards Earl of Liverpool, who according to Walpole, at this time 'began to assume the airs of a minister . . .' Last Journals, 1910, i. 177 n. On the ground are papers inscribed, Rights of the People of England, which is being worried by a small dog, and East India Affairs.

The Junto agree that money must be had, and can be got by shamming war with France while taking a subsidy from France to preserve peace. At this time there was a rumour of an alliance with France while actually there had been naval preparations against France in defence of Russia, see No. 5110. The print may also be an echo from the reign of Charles II owing to the sensation caused by Sir John Dalrymple's Memoirs of Great Britain and Ireland, 1771; the Appendix with its documents incriminating Algernon Sidney the Whig hero was published in February 1773, see Walpole, op. cit. i. 177, 179 f. For the arrears of the Civil List, see No. 5105.

5 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5125 THE MORNING VISIT 42

Publish'd as the Act Directs June 1773

Engraving. Apparently No. 42 in some series. It illustrates a dialogue in verse engraved below the design between 'Lord' and 'Dean'. The 'lord', writing at a table, receives the visit of a dean, who bows, hat in hand, and proffers a money-bag, asking for a bishopric. On the wall hang a mirror (l.) with a pair of candle-sconces and a framed landscape. On the floor in the foreground are documents partly cut and destroyed: 'CHARTER COMMUNION Johannes dei Gratia and LIBERTATUM give [?sive] MAGNA CHARTA. From a nearly closed box hang other documents also in bad repair: HABE . . . CORPUS Rex Magna B ; Bill of Rights; nilla [sic] Ransom. In an open chest are neatly rolled documents, evidently recent patent rolls, or grants, one of which shows the words and Grant beloved. The document on which the Minister is writing is inscribed:

List of persons proper for Pensions Rever[sions] and Places for life &c. for his M——y's private inspection.

Sign'd J. E. of B——e [John Earl of Bute]
M——d [Mansfield]

Lord N——n. [Northington] a Pension— 4000
L——d Bingley on the I——h E. [Irish Exchequer] 3500
Sr. G——B——n. first Com. C——m 3000
Siniora B——a for Sr G——t 250
Mungo Cam——r. and a Pension [Dyson, Cofferer of the Household] 1500
D——n of G——r [Dean of Gloucester] Vicar of Bray first B——k [Bishoprick] insouable [sic] C. J. F. . . . [Fox].

Beneath the design is engraved in two columns,

DEAN. *My Lord I hope your goodness will excuse
This early Visit, since my only views
Are center'd in the glory of your House,
And now have brought a trifle—for your Spouse
Of which I beg her kind acceptance — — then
Rank me my Lord, amongst the happiest men.*

LORD. *My rev'rend Dean, I'm glad to see you now,
Early or late; or any time, I vow:
What news abroad, my rev'rend Dean, what news?
Somethings behind—have you no trifling views
In which my Int'rest can the least avail — —?*

DEAN. *Indeed, my Lord, there is a flying tale
That my good Lord of B——h [Bath] declines so fast
With Age, and Gout, this fit will be his last.*

LORD. *I know he 's old and cannot long be here:
But, rev^d Dean, you know—what 'tis a Year:
'Twill gain me Friends — — —*

DEAN. — — *My Lord I know that 's true,
And all the Int'rest in my pow'rs your due
In future times the same shall me controul
My Friends — Estate — — my Body, and my — [soul].*

LORD. *'Tis well my rev'rend Dean — all 's very right;
On these conditions you're put down to night,
You shall succeed — —*

DEAN. — — *All grateful thanks are due;
My gratitude shall shine, my Lord —: my Lord adieu.*

Dr. Edward Willes, bishop of Bath and Wells, died 24 Nov. 1773, aged 80. Dr. Charles Moss, Bishop of St. Davids, succeeded him. (Congé élire, 23 April, 1774. Cal. H. O. Papers 1773-5, p. 272).

The Dean here depicted who is promised the 'first bishoprick', is Josiah Tucker, dean of Gloucester. He was reputed a ministerial propagandist. See Mason, Satirical Odes, ed. Toynbee, pp. 33, 91, 99, &c. The peer resembles portraits of Lord Rochford, one of the Secretaries of State. 8 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5126 SAMSON PULLING DOWN THE PILLARS.¹ [1 July 1773]
Engraving. Oxford Magazine, x. 217. A print from the same plate, altered, as No. 4179, an illustration to the Political Register for August

¹ Indexed as Samson pulling down Magna Charta.

1767. Bute has been altered to Lord North by the re-drawing of the head and the elimination of the tartan check on his drapery. North, as Samson, pulls down four pillars which support the temple of the Constitution; one falls in pieces, the others, about to fall, are inscribed: Accession of the House of Brunswick; Revolution 1688; and Magna Charta. The cornice falls in fragments, from it fall a figure of Liberty, with her staff and cap; Westminster Hall, a number of judges, a dome resembling that of St. Paul's, the cross on the summit of which is held by a bishop. Other figures are falling headlong ('Lords, Counsellors, or Priests'): Lord Chatham with his crutches, the king, his crown having fallen from his head, the queen (?), two other crowns are falling as well as a mitre. The lowest objects, those which were the first to be hurled down, are Britannia, the Irish harp, and a broken anchor. Clouds and lightning form a background. Beneath the design are engraved the eighteen lines from Samson Agonistes ending,

Samson with these immixed, inevitably Pull'd down the same destruction on himself.

Cf. No. 5127, also an altered plate.

$5\frac{15}{16} \times 4\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 6115.

5127 THE OPERATION.

[1 Aug. 1773]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, x. 254. An adaptation of No. 4198 from the Political Register June 1768, the same plate being used. Britannia sinks to the ground, one knee on her shield, her broken spear beside her, while blood gushes from wounds in her breast. Above her, with a dagger raised to strike, stands a minister wearing a ribbon and star. Two others hold basins to catch the gushing blood, while two stand behind drinking from bowls of blood; another stoops to look at Britannia; a lawyer hands a bowl to Bute, seated (r.) in a high-backed chair. In the foreground (r.), seated on steps, is Lord Talbot, a stout man drinking from a bowl; he wears a spit instead of a sword to show that he is Lord Steward of the Household.

In the original version, Chatham was seated in the chair taking a bowl, he has been altered to Bute, by the redrawing of the head and the removal of his crutch. The judge offering him the bowl, identified by Mr. Stephens as Lord Mansfield, has been altered into a poorly characterized lawyer. This suggests, as do the features of the judge, that the original was intended for Lord Camden, as Lord Mansfield would certainly not have been removed from obloquy. The head of Bute in the original has been altered by the removal of the Scots cap and some change in the features, as otherwise there would have been two Butes. There is a slight change in the features of the minister identified by Mr. Stephens as Weymouth, and he is now probably intended for Lord Sandwich. The other figures have not been altered. It remains an attack on the Ministry in general, and on Lord Bute, but the temporary unpopularity of Chatham had long been forgotten. Beneath the design is engraved, as before,

*The Blood & Vitals from her Wounds he drew,
And Fed the Hounds that help'd him to pursue. Dryden.*

Cf. No. 5126, also an altered plate.

$5\frac{7}{16} \times 4\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5128 A RETROSPECTIVE VIEW OF THE DIFFICULTIES & EMBARRASMENTS OCCASION'D BY THE COIN ACT, OR BRITANIA & HER CHILDREN IN DISTRESS. [1 Sept. 1773]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, x. 195. Lord North sits complacently at a table weighing guineas in a pair of scales. Before him on the table are a bag of guineas and a pair of shears. Behind him, among clouds, stands Justice (r.), blindfolded, holding up her scales and threatening him with her sword. At the table sit three men, owners of the coin, watching North with gestures of horror. At a side-table (l.) another man weighs guineas, holding a pair of shears to deface those which are defective. A countryman, hat in hand, protests in alarm; a mastiff snarls at him. A doctor (l.) threatens a patient with a raised syringe. A judge (r.) fights with a man on the ground, whom he is about to strike with a rolled document. In the foreground Britannia reclines, clasping her hands in despair; three ragged children weep beside her.

The Coin Act (13 George III. c. 71 supplemented by 14 Geo. III. c. 70) provided that any person to whom gold coins were tendered might cut or break them if found of light weight or counterfeit, the tenderer to bear the loss of defacement if found of good weight. See Ann. Reg. 1773, pp. 195-6, Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, iii. 5. 'Retrospective' in the title probably indicates that the Act was retrospective in falling on those who had accepted coin before it was passed. A guide book, Decremps, Parisien à Londres, 1789, informs visitors to England that the first thing to be done is to provide themselves with scales to weigh guineas and half-guineas, as none are taken without being weighed. Mr. Hawkins notes 'as late as 1799, I saw light guineas offered to the Collector of taxes cut in two'. One of several satires on the Coin Act and on the use of scales which it involved, see Nos. 3759, 4534 (1774), 5158, 5234.

$4\frac{13}{16} \times 6\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5129 [BULL'S TRIUMPH.]

[1 Nov. 1773]

Woodcut. From the Town and Country Magazine, v. 524. Alderman Bull, wearing his furred gown and chain, is entering the Lord Mayor's coach. He treads on the back of Wilkes and his r. hand rests on the cap of Liberty which is on a long staff held by Wilkes. Two men (r.) lie prostrate and despairing on the ground, and two others, one a clergyman, stand behind, wringing their hands in consternation. A little boy (l.) claps his hands with amusement, behind him a fat butcher laughs at the scene. A dog barks at the prostrate figures.

The accompanying dialogue shows that the prostrate figures are Sawbridge and Oliver who have been knocked down by 'bawling liverymen'. The two standing figures are Parson Horne, 'défroqué', and an aspirant to the office of chaplain to the Lord Mayor if Sawbridge had been elected.

At Michaelmas 1773 there was a heated contest for the Mayoralty between Wilkes and Bull on one side and Sawbridge and Oliver on the other. Wilkes and Bull were elected, Wilkes at the head of the poll. Their names were submitted to the Court of Aldermen which chose Bull, it was said by the casting vote of Townsend the outgoing Mayor. Bull was Wilkes's creature and the election was a complete discomfiture for Wilkes's enemies while the rejection of Wilkes in spite of his majority only increased his popularity. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 250. For Bull, see City Biography, 1800, p. 84. For the quarrel between Wilkes and Horne, the origin of the split among the City patriots, see No. 4861, &c. See also Nos. 5130, 5131, 5235.

6½ × 4 in.

5130 THE CITY PATRIOTS, OR A PICTURE OF THE TIMES.

[1 Nov. 1773]

Engraving. From the Macaroni . . . Magazine, ii. 1. A bull in an alderman's furred gown stands on his hind legs, leaning forwards. His horns are held by Wilkes who wears an alderman's gown, while another alderman twists his tail. A dog in alderman's gown, his collar inscribed Oliver, barks at the bull, two men (l.) point derisively, one dressed as an alderman, the other in parson's gown and bands. In the background (l.) a young man threatens with his cane a stout man who runs away weeping, his handkerchief to his eye. An alderman (r.) is whipping a girl who has fallen to the ground, her bundle of sticks beside her.

The accompanying text explains this satire on the squabbles among the City patriots, Wilkes, Townsend, Bull, Sawbridge, &c. Alderman Bull is standing quietly while Wilkes holds him by the horns, and the 'Macaroni Alderman Sir W[atkin] L[ewes] twists his tail'. The 'Oliverian cur' [Alderman Oliver] tries to seize his nose; Parson Horne, 'the associate of Judas', and Alderman Sawbridge, M.P., 'that austere tribune', look on and encourage the cur. Wilkes had pilloried his friends and former friends in the newspapers: he discovered that the Lord Mayor, James Townsend, had whipped a girl whom he found gathering sticks in his plantations, while the man of all the world who had served him most essentially was 'M——I L——I', but he had been caned and had wept and Wilkes had gibbeted him 'to divert the spleen of his countrymen'. See also Nos. 4861, &c., 5129, 5131.

4 × 6½ in.

5131 THE BULL OF GOTHAM.

[1 Dec. 1773]

Woodcut. From the Westminster Magazine, i. 669. Wilkes in his alderman's gown approaches the Mansion House riding upon a bull; in his l. hand is a whip. The bull has a human face and its forelegs are those of a man. It wears a long furred robe and mayoral chain. Behind walks a man in a furred gown, playing a Welsh harp decorated with a stag's head. This represents the election of Bull, Wilkes's protégé, as Lord Mayor, see No. 5129. The man playing the harp is Watkin Lewes, Sheriff 1772-3 and knighted Feb. 1773. See Nos. 4880, 5155, &c., and City Biography, 1800, p. 16. For his attitude in the quarrels among the city patriots see Oxford Magazine, x. 227-31.

The text 'A Canonical Fragment', which accompanies the woodcut, is an attack on Wilkes: 'He was of the tribe of the Wilkites of the race of the Jews and his father's name was Israel. Now this man was a hypocrite, a dissembler of the truth, and great was his cunning: and he laid false snares and gained the hearts of the People, insomuch that they despised their Rulers, and him only did they obey.' He determined to humble those of the City who had remonstrated with him by causing a Bull-calf to rule over them: 'Behold ye people of Gotham, I bring you a CHIEF RULER and a Head of the Elders!' For other anti-Wilkite satires, see Nos. 4326, 4887, 5103, 5130, 5245.

2½ × 3½ in.

5132 THE ASSEMBLY OF THE GRINDERS.

Published Decem^r the 22, 1773.

Engraving. Round a circular table sit members of the Ministry and others. Standing on the l., his l. hand on the back of a chair, is Lord Bute. Behind him is a folding screen inscribed This is a Horrid screen for Villany. To his r. in profile is the Duke of Grafton. On Bute's l. and arranged round the table from l. to r. are Lord Suffolk (?), Jeremiah Dyson, as Mungo the negro slave with a metal collar round his neck, and wearing a harlequin's dress. Next is Lord Rochford.¹ Next sits Lord Sandwich, wearing a cricketing cap and holding a cricket bat. Next, the central and dominating figure, is Lord Mansfield in judge's cap, wig, and robes. Next come Lord North and the King, so posed as to stress their likeness to each other; each is wearing his ribbon and star; a bandage is over the king's eyes. They are squeezed in between Mansfield and Sir Fletcher Norton, the Speaker, in his robes, with bull's horns projecting from his wig, to indicate his nickname of Sir Bull-Face-Doublefee. The outside figure on the r., facing Grafton, is Lord Holland, with a fox's head. His r. hand, fist clenched, is on the table, on which lie three documents, the most prominent being The humble Address, Remonstrance and Petition of the Lord Mayor. It lies across the Bill of Rights; Magna Charta is the third. The room is panelled, and in each of three panels is a picture: on the l. faggots piled round a stake are burning in a mountainous landscape. Next is an axe suspended over a block, with an adjacent thistle plant. This is immediately behind Mansfield and North, the axe appearing to be suspended over their heads. Behind Fletcher Norton and Lord Holland (r.) are spears, crossed muskets, a sword, and a pyramid of cannon-balls inscribed Provision for the Poor. Beneath the design is engraved:

The Application of this subject is taken from Æsops Fables by D^r Croxall (Fab. 18 page 33) The Moral of this Fable is that no body looks after a mans Affairs so well as he himself Servants being but hirelings seldom have the true Interest of their Masters at Heart but let Things run on in a Negligent constant Disorder and this generally not so much for want of Capacity as honesty their Heads are taken up with the Cultivation of their own private Interest for the Service and promotion of which that of their Master is postpon'd and often intirely Neglected. If this be the case as it certainly is among ordinary Masters and Servants and it is of so ill consequence to a Man not to Inspect the Economy of his own Household how deplorable must be the State of that People who have a King or Governor so Ignorant that he knows not or so Indolent that he Cares not what becomes of their Welfare & happiness Who leaves the Administration of every thing to the management of Servants and those Wicked self Interested ones perhaps some may fancy him a mild and good Prince because he does not like a Barbarian actually Butcher his people with his own hands But he is passively a sad Creature and the ultimate Author of all the Woe that his Subjects feel when by his neglect a Villanous Set of Ministers Triumph in the Ruin of the Nation or by his protection are screen'd from the just Resentment & Indignation of an injur'd People.

For the latest City Remonstrance to the King on 11 March 1773, see Sharpe, London and the Kingdom, 1895, iii. 135-7; Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, pp. 180 f., 182-5. The chief interest of this satire lies in its misrepresentation of the political situation, in treating George III as the puppet of his ministers and in giving so prominent a place not only to Bute, but to Holland, Grafton, Fletcher Norton, and Dyson. This attitude towards the King was common among satirists at this time. Compare the 'Invocation' to the first number of the Westminster Magazine, 1773: 'When, in the Cabinet, six grey-headed Statesmen sit round a green-headed King, now amusing him with rattles, now feeding him with Court-pap, while they follow the heady current of their own humours—'. See also Nos. 4883, 5098, 5288. For threats of the scaffold to North see also No. 5135, &c. $5\frac{3}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{8}$ in.

¹ Identified by Mr. Hawkins as Halifax, but Halifax died in 1771; he resembles portraits of Rochford, see No. 5125.

5133 [VISCOUNT TOWNSHEND.]

[1773]

Engraving. Frontispiece to Baratariana, 2nd ed. 1773. A bust portrait in an oval frame of George, fourth Viscount, afterwards first Marquis Townshend 1704–1807. Lord Lieutenant of Ireland 1767–72. Outside the frame (l.) is a hand inscribed North; it holds a string which passes through the mouth and is held on the opposite side by a hand inscribed Bute. Beneath the portrait is engraved,

*In Cælum jussuris ibit
And bid him go to Hell, to Hell he goes.*

These are quotations from Juvenal's Third Satire and Johnson's translation, London, 1737.

In Baratariana, a reprint of letters from the Freeman's Journal by Langrishe, Flood, and Grattan, Townshend is ridiculed as Sancho Panza, Governor of Barataria, Ireland. Hume wrote, 13 Aug. 1767, 'I am told that Lord Townshend openly ascribes his own promotion entirely to the friendship of Lord Bute', Hume, Letters, 1932, ii. 160. Townshend himself produced a number of caricatures directed against Bute. See Catalogue, iv, pp. xix. 56. See No. 5134. Copy in Print Department.

Oval, $3\frac{1}{4} \times 2\frac{9}{16}$ in.

5134 [THE PRIVY COUNCIL OF BARATARIA.]

Baratariana P. 203.

[1773]

Engraving. Illustration for the 2nd ed. of Baratariana, Dublin, 1773, representing 'The Privy Council of Barataria' (p. 20) at the meeting at which the summoning of parliament after repeated prorogations was decided on. (Ibid., pp. 203–5.) The figures seated and standing round the table have been identified by Edmund Malone in a note with the print as: (l. to r.) Philip Tisdall, Francis Andrews, Godfrey Lill, John Hely Hutchinson, Anthony Malone. Townshend, the Lord Lieutenant, sits at the head of the table; behind him stands Sir George (afterwards Lord) Macartney and on his left sits Lord Annaly, from whose pocket hangs a fox's tail inscribed talliho. Walking into the room on the left is a figure leading two dogs Prorogat[ion] and Protest; from his pocket hangs a paper, His Excellency to A. Cun. To 1000 Vis[its] . . . Castle £113710. He is Alexander Cunningham, a Scottish surgeon. On the table is a proclamation: Townshend . . . Given at the Council Chamb' Jan. 8th. 1771, and also a Mem: To sink y^e Acc: of the Motions upon them. Malone (at this time at the Irish bar) ends his note: 'All these portraits were drawn from memory and are all somewhat caricatured except Mr. Malone [the writer's uncle] whose profile is extremely like and not at all caricatured. Of Mr. Tisdall, Mr. Andrews, Mr. Lill, and Lord Annaly there are I believe no engraved portraits. Edm. Malone scripsit.'

Baratariana is a reprint of letters in the manner of Junius published in the Freeman's Journal, April–May 1771, by Sir H. Langrishe, Flood, and Grattan attacking the administration of Townshend, see No. 5133. The occasion of the abuse was the prorogation of parliament by Townshend because the Commons had rejected the customary Privy Council money bill on the ground that it did not take its rise in that house. Townshend protested against this as an infringement of Poyning's Law, ordered his protest to be entered in the Journals of both houses and prorogued parliament from three months to three months. The two dogs ('the beagles of Catalonia and Barataria', op. cit., pp. 203–4) are an allusion to the famous prorogation and protest. The proclamation of 8 Jan. 1771. was reported by Townshend to Lord Rochford in a letter of 9 Jan. 1771. (Calendar of Home Office Papers, 1770–2, p. 184.)

A copy of Baratariana, 1773, is in the Print Department. The impression described can never have been bound in the book, where it is a folding plate.

5 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5135 TIME & TRUTH BRING STRANGER THINGS TO PASS.

[c. 1773?]

Engraving. Probably from a magazine, similar in manner to prints in the Oxford Magazine. Lord North on stilts carries Bute on his shoulders. He looks through his eye glass at a block and axe, in the foreground, against which lies a book inscribed The Book of Fate. The stilts, which replace North's legs from the knees downwards, are inscribed (l.) Lust of Pow'r, Fraud, Hypocrisy, and (r.) Arbitrary Power, Tyranny; they are breaking in pieces, under the blows of Time (l.) who raises his scythe to smite. Truth (r.) raises her mirror in her r. hand, pointing with her l. at the block and axe. Bute, who holds North's eye-glass ribbon as if driving him by a rein, holds up his hands in horror at the sight, and has dropped from his l. hand a sword inscribed Military Law. From his pocket hangs a label, Plan to Enslave K—g L—ds, & C—ns. In the upper r. corner of the print the head (in profile to the l.) and shoulders of the king appear from behind dark clouds and are surrounded by a glory of rays.

The king, Bute, and North wear Garter ribbons, showing that the print must be later than 18 June 1772, the date of North's Garter. Cf. No. 5132, where North and Mansfield are threatened with the block, and Nos. 5238, 5660, 5661, 5964, 5969, 5986, 6046, 6179, 6282.

6 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 4 in.

PERSONAL SATIRES

5136-5148

Series of Tête-à-tête portraits.

- 5136 N° XXIV. MISS L—W—S. [1 Jan. 1773]
 N° XXXV. THE CUMBERLAND BARONET.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iv. 625. Two bust portraits in oval frames, illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .' An account of Sir James Lowther, afterwards Lord Lonsdale (1736-1802), his miserliness, his litigation with the Duke of Portland, and the Cumberland election contest. Miss L. is the barmaid of an inn on the road from Cumberland to London, whom he has established in lodgings in London. Ovals, $2\frac{13}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{2}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

- 5137 N° XXXVII. THE AMIABLE MISS P—N [Jan. 1773]
 N° XXXVIII. THE POACHING PREACHER.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, iv. 681 (Supplement). Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .' An account of the infatuation of a rich clergyman, Mr. C—n, who is a great sportsman, with Miss P—n, his wife's companion and a farmer's daughter. Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{2}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

- 5138 N° II. M^{RS} H—N. Vol. V.
 N° III. LORD JOHN. [i.e. Jehu] [1 Feb. 1773]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or Memoirs of Lord Jehu and Mrs. G—s.' The man is dressed as a coachman and holds a whip. An account of James, 6th Earl of Salisbury (1713-80), whose prevailing passion is 'driving a set of horses in the dress of a coachman'. His wife (née Keet) is said to have been the niece of his land steward whom he has sent out of his house with her children. Before this he had formed a permanent alliance with Mrs. H—n who changed her name to G—s; their son has now taken orders. Salisbury is said to have appeared only once (in 1745) in the House of Lords and to live now as a complete recluse. Cf. W. Coombe, Royal Register, iv. 1779, pp. 80 ff. Ovals, $2\frac{13}{16} \times 2\frac{7}{16}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

- 5139 N° IV. MADAME LA M—N. Vol. V.
 N° V. L—D C—E. [1 Mar. 1773]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .' An account of Frederick, 5th Earl of Carlisle (1748-1825) and his amours, notably his liaison in Paris with a Madame la M——n, a widow who has now come to England.

Ovals $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{7}{16}$ in.

B.M.L. PP. 5442 b.

5140 N° VII. THE FAMOUS MRS B—Y—Y. [1 Apr. 1773]

N° VIII. E. OF B—K—Y.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 121. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .' An account of Frederick Augustus 5th Earl of Berkeley (1745-1810). Mrs. Bayley was the mistress of the Duke of Cumberland between his affair with Lady Grosvenor and his marriage to Mrs. Horton.

Ovals, $2\frac{13}{16} \times 2\frac{7}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5141 N° X. SIGNORA B——TINI.¹ [1 May 1773]

N° XI. E. OF EG——T.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the Earl of E—— and Madame du T——e'. An account of the 3rd earl of Egremont (1751-1837) and of his amours, especially with Mademoiselle du T——é who came under his protection on quitting her French convent to marry a rich financier; she accompanied him to England and lives under his protection.

She is Rosalie Duthé, a French courtesan, the first mistress of the Duc de Chartres; her liaison with Egremont, whom she is said to have ruined, was notorious. Britsch, La Jeunesse de Philippe Egalité, 1926, p. 77 and n.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{7}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5142 N° XIII. MISS P——M. [1 June 1773]

N° XIV. THE HIBERNIAN HERO.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .' An account of an Irish peer, who had quarrelled with and challenged the Duke of Bedford when Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and of Miss P. an actress, now his mistress, whom he first met at Bath in 1757. He is John Smith de Burgh, 11th Earl of Clanricarde (1720-82), G.E.C., Complete Peerage.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5143 N° XVI. MISS GR—SL—Y. [1 July 1773]

N° XVII. THE COMMISSARY.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 289. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .' An account of Peter —— one of the Commissaries 'who in the last war in ¹ An 'unaccountable error' of the engraver. Town and Country Magazine, v. 177 n.

Germany increased the national debt many millions, to fill their coffers'. He was the son of a glazier born in Wells; after being bankrupt made a fortune during the war. Miss G. was his cook-maid.

Ovals, $2\frac{13}{16} \times 2\frac{7}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5144 N° XIX. MISS CH—N.

[1 Aug. 1773]

N° XX. BARON JAGHIRE

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .' An account of Lord Clive and a Miss Fanny C., a clergyman's daughter and milliner's apprentice, who having been seduced and deserted accepted a settlement of £100 a year from him. See No. 5111, &c.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{7}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5145 N° XXII. MADAME H—N—L

[1 Sept. 1773]

N° XXIII. THE YOUNG CUB

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .' An account of Charles Fox, in 'his political, his senatorial, and his gambling character' and of his amours: He was infatuated by Madame Heinel, then dancing at the opera, and approached her by buying and distributing two hundred tickets for her benefit. In the Westminster Magazine, i. 561, Sept. 1773, there are verses 'To the Young Cub on his keeping Madam H—n—l'. The Macaroni Club complimented her 'with a regalo' of £600. Burney, Hist. of Music, iv. 498 n.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{7}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5146 N° XXV. MISS B—N.

Vol. V.

N° XXVI. THE CIRCUMNAVIGATOR.

[1 Oct. 1773]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 457. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .' An account of Joseph Banks, see No. 5046, &c. Miss B., the daughter of a gentleman of fortune who died insolvent, lives with great decorum as Banks's mistress.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5147 N° XXVIII. MRS R—

Vol. V.

N° XXIX. THE LIBERTINE MACARONI.

[1 Nov. 1773]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 513. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the Libertine Macaroni and Mrs. R—n.' An account of Thomas, 2nd Baron Lyttelton (1744-79), and of his amours. See No. 5198, &c.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{7}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5148 N° XXXI. MADEMOISELLE LA P—E.

Vol. V.

N° XXXII. THE D. OF S. A.

[1 Dec. 1773]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 569. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .' An account of the amours of George, 3rd duke of St. Albans (1730-86). Mademoiselle la P. warned him in Brussels that he was being fleeced by sharpers at the house of a pretended marchioness there; he brought her to England where she resides under his protection.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5149-5168 and numbers from Volume IV

Darley's series, continued from No. 5055.

VOLUME VI.¹

TITLE PAGE (Characters, Macaronies, and Caricatures by M. Darley)

See No. 4666—Nov. 1773

1. THE BANK MACARONI

See No. 4707—17 Apr. 1773

5149 V. 6. 2. WHO'S AFRAID

Pub accor^s to Act March 18th 1773 by M Darley 39 Strand

Engraving. W.L. portrait of an elderly man running forward, grinning, shouting with outstretched arms. In his l. hand is a walking-stick. A wide looped hat on the back of his head shows straggling locks of his own hair. He wears a long coat with wide cuffs, a plain neckcloth, ruffled shirt-sleeves, and high-quartered shoes.

$6\frac{13}{16} \times 5$ in. (pl.).

5150 3. THE EQUESTRIAN MACARONI

Pub^d by M Darley (39) Strand Feb^y 13 1773.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man standing in profile to the r. In his r. hand he holds a bridle, a stick is under his l. arm. He wears a small looped club, a low hat, plain coat, striped waistcoat, and spurred riding boots.

7×5 in. (pl.).

5151 4.² THE MILITARY MACARONI

Pub accor to Act by M Darley 39 Strand Feb^y 9th 1773.

Engraving. W.L. caricature portrait of a thin man with a large head walking or running in profile to the r. His wig is a high toupet with a queue in a black bag. In his l. hand he holds out a small three-cornered hat, in his r. is a sword whose point rests on the ground. He wears a short coat with facings and epaulettes, and a ruffled shirt. Beneath the title is engraved:

O—[Wilkes?] *beware of this tremendous Hat and Arm,
For should we by chance to meet it would me Harm,
For tho I to the World a poli—n now Appear.
Yet d—n me but to my Angelic Wh—e am sincere.*

¹ Three prints issued in January 1773 are included in Volume v. See Nos. 4665, 5053-4.

² Number added in ink.

Perhaps intended for Colonel Luttrell, Wilkes's opponent at the Middlesex election 13 April 1769. When attacked by the mob at Brentford he was said to have lost nothing but his hat. See Nos. 4285, 4852, 4971. 7×5 in (pl.).

5152 ⁵¹. A HIBERNIAN ANTIQUE, TURN'D MODERN MACARONI.

Pub^d by M Darly (39) Strand Feb^y 5 1773.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man in profile to the r. He appears to have a scar on his cheek. He wears a bulky coat with a wide collar, a large neckcloth. In his l. hand is a curiously shaped walking-stick. Except for his small looped hat there is nothing of the macaroni about his dress.

7×5 in. (pl.).

5153 V. 6. 6. THE UPPER CLAPTON MACARONI

Pub accord^s to Act by M Darly 39 Strand April 2^d 1772 [sic.]

Engraving. Portrait of a man walking fast to the l. and looking round to his l. In his r. hand he holds out a striped and spotted handkerchief; in his l. is a cane. Pens protrude from his coat pocket. His hair is in a twisted and looped club; he wears a three-cornered hat, frilled shirt, short coat, striped breeches, and a sword.

7 $\frac{1}{16}$ ×5 in. (pl.)

V. 6. 7. THE WINDSOR. MACARONI.

See No. 4667—1 Apr. 1773

5154 [8.] THE MACARONI WAITER OF DRURY L—E

Pub Feb. 28. 1773 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. Portrait, W.L., of a short man standing full face. In his r. hand are a number of wine glasses, his l. thumb is thrust under his apron-string. He wears a wide hat, a striped handkerchief knotted round his neck, a rough irregularly shaped apron over his coat and waistcoat.

7×4 $\frac{5}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5155 V. 6. 9. CHEVALIER VATKENS LOUIS

[No publication line.]

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man wearing a furred livery gown and a double-peaked fool's cap with bells. His head is turned slightly to the r. In his l. hand is a watchman's rattle.

He is Sir Watkin Lewes, a recently knighted alderman and city patriot, Sheriff of London 1772-3. See No. 5131, &c.

7 $\frac{1}{8}$ ×4 $\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5156 V. 6. 10. THE AURELIAN MACARONI.

Pub accord. to Act by M Darly (39) Strand July 5th 1773

Engraving. A young man leaning against a bank under a tree holds out in his

¹ Number added in ink

r. hand a square frame in which are displayed dead butterflies and moths. In his l. hand is a butterfly net. His hat is a large butterfly; writhing caterpillars represent his curled hair. A butterfly rests on his l. coat cuff. His coat is adorned with symmetrical snails to represent trimming.

This is evidently Moses Harris, entomologist and engraver, secretary to the Aurelian Society, who published The Aurelian, or Natural History of English Insects, Snails, Moths, and Butterflies, together with the Plants on which they feed, 1766, with forty-five plates all drawn and engraved by Harris from life and brilliantly coloured (B.M.L. 459 f. 11). The frontispiece, which is burlesqued in this print, is a self-portrait of the author with a large butterfly-net leaning against a bank with a box of butterflies in his hand.

$6\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5157 [11.] CHEVALIER DE L'ETOIL POLAIRE,

Juen-Ming del. Li Tsong Sculp'

Pub^d by M Darly March 7 1773 39 Strand

Engraving. The standing figure of a man whose head is that of a double-headed animal, to the l. an ass, to the r. a bear. With his l. hand (which also holds a whip) he leads an elephant whose head and trunk appear from the r. His r. hand rests on the pinnacle of a Chinese pagoda ornamented with dragons. Suspended round his neck is the figure of a bear showing that he has the Swedish order of the Polar Star. He wears tartan trousers. Beneath is etched:

*From North to the South, I came forth right,
By favor in duplici modo a Knight,
In primis an Ass, secundus a Bear,
The one is a Fact, the other is Fair.*

A satire on Sir William Chambers, illustrating in detail Mason's Heroic Epistle to Sir William Chambers, Knight, . . . which had just appeared, and opens 'Knight of the Polar Star'; it is both a political satire and an attack on Chambers' Dissertation on Oriental Gardening and on the Chinese pagoda which he had built at Kew for the Princess Dowager of Wales. Chambers is said to have been of Scottish descent, he was born in Sweden and was made Knight of the Polar Star by the king of Sweden. The elephant and ass illustrate the lines,

In some fair island will we turn to grass
(With the Queen's leave) her elephant and ass.

They refer to Queen Charlotte's wild animals, including an elephant and a zebra known as the Queen's Ass (see No. 3870), which grazed in St. James' Park near Buckingham House. See Satirical Poems by William Mason with Notes by Horace Walpole, ed. Toynbee, 1926.

$5\frac{5}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5158 V. 6. 12. AN EXCHEQUER CLERK, DREST AS THE ACT DIRECTS.

P[ub as] the Act directs July 22^d 1773 by M Darly (39) Strand.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man walking fast in profile to the r. In his l. hand and resting on his l. shoulder is a long pair of scales: a small pair is in his r. hand. An instrument resembling a pair of shears is attached to the r. side of his coat. His hat is ornamented with the feather of a pen.

'The Act' is evidently the Coin Act, see No. 5128, &c., which had made scales necessary for all to whom payments were made in gold.

$6\frac{15}{16} \times 4\frac{13}{16}$ in. (pl.).

13. THEODOSIUS HOMUNCULUS ESQ. [Theodosius Forrest.]

See No. 4688—20 July 1779

5159 V. 6. 14. DR LOLL TONGUE, THE FILCHING CONOSIEUR.

Pub accor^s to Act by M Darly (39) Strand Aug^t 1st 1773.

Engraving. Portrait of a man standing in profile to the l. He wears a bag wig, a long coat with large cuffs, and a frilled shirt. His tongue protrudes. His hat is under his l. arm. He holds a walking-stick in his l. hand, and in his r. a print which appears to represent a fight between boxers in a room. On another impression is written in pencil, 'Dr. Channing'.

$7 \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5160 V. 6. 15. THE ANTIQUARIAN.

Pub^d as the Act directs Sep^r 9, 1773 by M Darly. 39 Strand.

Engraving. Caricature portrait of a man in profile to the r. He is smiling and holds up in his l. hand a coin with a head inscribed OTHO EMP. In his r. hand is a cane with a chased handle. He wears spectacles, a large flowing curled wig, an oddly-shaped cap decorated with a pair of horns like those worn on medieval women's head-dresses, an old-fashioned heavily-trimmed coat, a long brocade waistcoat and boots (which appear to date from the 17th century) with large spurs. His sword has a crescent-shaped hilt.

Perhaps intended for Jeremiah Milles (1714-84), Dean of Exeter and president of the Society of Antiquaries 1768-84. Antiquarians were ridiculed in Foote's Nabob, Haymarket, 1772.

$7 \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.)

5161 V. 6. 16. A REV^D MACARONI.

Pub^d Accor^s to Act Oct^r 1st 1773 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a man standing in profile to the l. He wears his own hair, a plain coat, riding breeches, and spurred boots. His l. hand is in his breeches-pocket and under his arm is a riding-whip.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 4\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5162 V. 6. 14. [sic] JEHU THE TRUE ENGLISH COACHMAN

Pub accor to Act by M Darly (39) Strand Aug^t 10th 1773

Engraving. Portrait of a man standing in profile to r. He has a bulbous nose, a stubby chin, a protruding waistcoat. In his r. hand is a tankard with an open lid, in his l. a whip with a long lash. He wears a low wide three-cornered hat, a plain neckcloth, coat, long waistcoat, knee-breeches, buckled shoes.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5163 V. 6. 18. SEIGNOR CATGUTANEO.Pub^d Accor^s to Act Oct^r 21. 1773 by M Darly Strand.

Engraving. A man seated and playing a viol da gamba, the upper end of which is decorated by a carved head with a smiling face, wearing a laurel wreath, which is probably a portrait of the musician. He wears a small wig, a coat with large old-fashioned cuffs, and ruffled shirt-sleeves.

Probably Abel, well known in London concert rooms at this time. There is a certain resemblance to an etching of Abel published in 1787 called 'a Solo on the Viol di Gamba', Burney Collection of Theatrical Portraits, vol. i. fo. 4.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{7}{16}$ in.

5164 V. 6. 19. DOCTOR FORCEPS*Pub accor^s to Act Oct^r 21 1773 by M Darly Strand.*

Engraving. Portrait of an elderly man walking in profile to the r. He wears spectacles and walks with a tall cane. He wears a sword and is dressed in an old-fashioned way with a low wide hat, large tie-wig and long coat.

Evidently a well-known accoucheur, dressed in the manner of the old-fashioned physician, see McMichael, The Gold-headed Cane, 1827.

$6 \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in.

V. 6. 20. THE COUNTRY SINGING CLERK ON A SUNDAY.

See No. 4689—21 Oct. 1773

5165 V. 6. 21. COUNSELLOR · HUBBLE · BUBBLE.Pub^d Accor^s to Act Oct^r 24th 1773 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. W.L. caricature portrait of a lawyer walking in profile to the l. He is obese with several chins; his head is shaved and he carries a large wig. In his l. hand is a rolled document. He wears a voluminous gown which rests on the ground.

$6\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5166 V. 6. 22. THE ANTIQUE ARCHITECT*Pub^d Accor^s to Act. Oct. 11. 1773 by M Darly Strand*

Engraving. Portrait of a man facing T.Q. to l. Under his l. arm is a large book, in his l. hand a drawing instrument. His r. hand is thrust under his waistcoat and under his r. arm is a macaroni cane. He wears a low three-cornered hat, frilled shirt and cravat, striped breeches and a sword. On the ground is a fragment of carved classical frieze, a paper and a pair of compasses.

Probably a portrait of Robert Adam, the most celebrated of the Adam brothers. The book is perhaps intended for Works in Architecture by Robert and James Adam, whose publication in folio parts began in 1773. Reproduced by A. E. Richardson, Georgian England, 1931, p. 200.

$6 \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5167 V. 6. 23. AN ODDITY IN CHANGE ALLEY.

Pub by Darly 39 Strand Oct 1. 1773.

Engraving. Caricature portrait of a man standing or walking in profile to the l. He wears a long cape-like coat with a wide collar which reaches to his ankles, a low looped hat and a small curled wig. He holds a stick in a hand which is concealed under his coat.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{5}{16}$ in.

5168 V. 6. 24. A · POLITE · ARTIST · ON ST LUKE'S DAY, UNDER THE PATRONAGE OF DR BARDANA, &c., &c.

Pub by M Darly 39 Strand Oct 18. 1773

Engraving. Portrait of a man standing in profile to the l. Under his arm is a large book, Vegetab[le] Syste[m] by D . . . He wears patched old-fashioned clothes and torn stockings, a short wig which fails to conceal his own hair. His hat is under his r. arm, a cane under the l.

A portrait of 'Sir' John Hill, a quack or charlatan with a diploma of medicine from the University of St. Andrews, but a botanist of some repute. He began the publication of his Vegetable System in 1759, the last of twenty-six folio volumes coming out in 1775. He was said to be 'in a chariot one month, in jail the next for debt'. D.N.B. One of his remedies was advertised as Elixir of Bardana or Essence of Water Dock, see No. 4040, &c.

$5\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5169, 5170

Prints from a series published by Darly, continued from p. 90.

5169 29. HATS.

Pub^d Accor^s to Act Oct' 1. 1773 by M Darly, 39 Strand.

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5170. Twelve caricature heads showing the different types of hat then worn by men.

Four of the heads were copied in a Dutch print to represent 'English lords', see No. 5839.

$8\frac{3}{4} \times 13\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5170 28. WIGS.

Pub^d Accor^s to Act Oct' 12. 1773 by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5169. Fourteen caricature heads showing the different types of wig then worn. Most appear to be portraits: one is evidently a caricature of Lord Chancellor Bathurst, see No. 4888.

Three of the heads were copied (one twice) in a Dutch print to represent 'English lords', see No. 5839.

$8\frac{7}{8} \times 13\frac{3}{8}$ in.

Eleven prints from a series published by Darly, continued from No. 4699, p. 90.

V. 2. 3. THE HOLY ORDER OF ST ALMAC

See No. 4642—20 Feb. 1773

5171 [V. 2. 5.]¹ TO BE SOLD TO THE BEST BIDDER.E. T. inv^t [E. Topham].Pub accor^s to Act by M Darly 39 Strand March 15th 1773.

Engraving. An auctioneer holding up his hammer in his l. hand, stands in his rostrum, a box supported on four legs, and reached by a ladder (l.). He wears a toupet wig with a large black bag, wide cuffs, ruffled shirt-sleeves. His three-cornered hat is under his arm. He is in profile to the r., his mouth open as if shouting. Evidently a portrait of Langford, see No. 5001. Beneath the design is etched:

*All the valuable goods and effects of a Scavoir-Vivre Bankrupt consisting of a collection of very scarce Books, (not to be met with in any of the Public Libraries) containing the most approved list of Cosmetics, Paints, washes, &c., &c., for beautifying the Skin: together with an unique set of Antiques after the present mode and an excessive fine Statue of a Venus taken from Himself, when abroad; with a number of suits of Cloaths, Hats, &c., &c., &c., all au dernier goût & very fit for any one who has an intention of entering on the Business, together with the right of Patronage to the best Productions of the Age, from a late resolution of that Society. NB.: the Subscription unpaid — Likewise to be sold a Quantity of Articles in Mrs. Phillip's way, not the least worse for Wear.*²

Cf. a similar portrait of Christie, No. 6101.

6 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. (clipped).

5172 THE LAST DROP.[11 May 1773]³*Pub*^d by Sayer, Print-seller, Fleet Street, London.

Engraving. A reissue (n.d.) with a different publication line of a print published by Darly dated as above, which was No. 1, Vol. 2 of the series published 1772-4. A short stout man stands on tip-toe by a table to drink from a large punch-bowl which he tilts forwards. Behind him stands a skeleton (r.), its l. hand on his shoulder, its r. holding up a dart which it is about to plunge into the head of the drinker. An hour-glass where sands have run out is on the ground at his feet. The table (l.) is a small round one, on it are a wine glass and pipe. Cf. No. 5513.

8 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 6 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

Book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

5173 REFIN'D TASTE.

[c. May 1773]

R.S'G.M. [Mansergh] Inv^t*Printed for Rob*^t Sayer, Fleet Street.

Engraving. A reissue of a plate published by Darly (n.d.) which was No. 6 of Vol. 2¹ in the series published 1772-4. A civilian (r.) standing in profile to the l. gazes through a glass at a tall and bulky soldier in uniform (l.)

¹ Number supplied from the impression in the volume belonging to Mr. Dyson Perrin, exhibited at the Burlington Fine Arts, 1931-2.

² At a Pantheon masquerade of 12 May 1773 one of the characters was 'Mother Phillips, with a parcel of advertisements, denoting her modest commodities, and the place of their sale'. Town and Country Magazine, v, p. 265. She kept a shop, see Archenholtz, Tableau de l'Angleterre, Bruxelles, 1788, ii, 172.

³ Date supplied from an impression in a volume belonging (1933) to Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street.

who stands in back view, turning his head in profile to the r. towards the civilian. The civilian is fashionably dressed wearing a bag-wig and sword, a cane under his arm. The soldier wears jack-boots and holds a long sword under his arm.

Beneath the title is etched,

*Eternal Infamy, that Wretch Confound,
Who Planted first this Vice on English Ground
A Crime that spite of Sense & Nature reigns,
And Poisons Genial Love & Manhood stains.*

Vide Rod. Random.

6 × 9 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

Book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

2. 9. THE ECLIPSE MACARONY See No. 4643—12 May 1773
O'Kelly and his horse Eclipse.

5174 V. 2. 18. THE BENGALL MINUET

Pub^d Accor^s to Act Nov^r 3 1773 by M Darly Strand

Engraving. In a panelled room without furniture, two figures in profile face each other in a minuet. On the l. is an elderly man with a rather stiff manner, dressed in the fashion of the day, and wearing a toupet-wig with a black bag; he holds his hat in his r. hand. On the r. is a sharp-featured woman with her hair dressed high and ornamented with lace. She wears a low dress with elbow sleeves, long gloves, and a train over a flounced petticoat. On the alternate panels of the room are square pictures and oval mirrors in carved frames.

The figures are perhaps satirical portraits of some 'nabob' and his wife preparing themselves for a London season or a Bath Assembly. Foote's Nabob was first played at the Haymarket in 1772.

5 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5175 V. 2. 19. SHYLOCK TURND MACBETH.

Young Vanity inv^t

Old Envy sculp.

Pub by M Darly Nov. 5. 1773. 39. Strand . where any sketch that is fair game will have due Honor shewn.

Engraving. Macklin as Macbeth, his dagger held up in his l. hand, his head in profile to the r. He wears a feathered hat, long hair, and Scottish dress: a large plaid, kilt, bare knees, and tartan stockings, a thistle badge hangs from his neck on a ribbon, a claymore (so-called) hangs at his waist. Beneath the title is etched,

*I see thee yet, in form as palpable
As that which now I draw—*

Macklin appeared, 3 October 1773, as Macbeth, the part being played for the first time in Scottish dress, before a very hostile audience, who expected to be 'spectators of his downfall', thinking his age would not allow him to go through the part to the end. 'Lady Macbeth's modern robes by no means accorded with the habits of the other personages, and Mr. Macklin's flowing curls, like the locks of an Adonis, were unpardonably out of character.' Macaroni and Theatrical Magazine, ii. 8, Oct. 1773

Before this time Macbeth was dressed as a modern military officer. Genest, v. 414. The public treated him with great injustice, and accustomed to see him in comedy, and regarding his Shylock as above criticism, refused to accept him in a heroic part. Finally, on Nov. 18, he was refused a hearing and the mob could not be pacified till Colman reluctantly agreed to his dismissal. Macklin's assumption of the part roused many personal jealousies, see No. 5203. For Macklin see also Nos. 2599 (1743), 4846. There is an engraving of Macklin as Macbeth in the London Magazine, 1773, p. 524, not in Scottish costume.

$8\frac{1}{16} \times 6\frac{1}{4}$ in.

V. 2. 21. SR BIBO BULKY See No. 4644—1 Dec. 1773

V. 2. 22. MACARONIES DRAWN AFTER THE LIFE
See No. 4645—1 Dec 1773

V. 2. 23. ARTILLERY DUTY See No. 4646—1 Dec. 1773

A satire on military effeminacy.

5176 A WELL-FED CITIZEN GOING TO HIS COUNTRY SEAT
AT HORN-SEY. [c. 1773.]

[? After R. St. G. Mansergh.]

Publish'd by R. Sayer, 53 Fleet Street.

Engraving. Similar in manner to No. 5173 and probably also a re-issue of a print published by Darly. An obese citizen sits in a small heavily-built phaeton, drawn (l. to r.) by a clumsy pony ridden by an elderly postilion with a wooden leg, ambling slowly along. He takes his pipe from his mouth to say Don't hurry me John. Behind the carriage stands a footman in macaroni dress; his master is dressed in a more old-fashioned manner. The title derives from the old gibe that 'cits' were all cuckolds. No. 4640 (1772) is a similar subject by Mansergh.

$5\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{3}{8}$ in.

Book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

5177-5186

A series of portraits of courtesans, &c.¹

5177 6. A NUN OF THE 3^d CLASS

Pub^d Jan^y 1, 1773, by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. No. 6 in a series of bust profile portraits of women all styled either Nun, a common term for a courtesan living in a house of ill fame, or Abbess, the keeper of such a house. The sequence of the series is not that of date of publication. In all, the design is in an oval, enclosed in an oblong of the same dimensions, the oval and the rectangle being differentiated by engraved lines of different patterns.

A young woman in profile to the r., her hair neatly dressed over a high cushion and decorated with loops of lace or ribbon. She is of demure appearance and wears an ear-ring; a black ribbon is tied round her neck. She appears distinctly the social superior of No. 5178.

¹ Six of these, with titles erased or stopped out, are included in a volume whose title-page is No. 5369, exhibited by Mr. Dyson Perrins, at the Burlington Fine Arts Club, 1931-2.

5 × 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Fairholt's 'Collection for Costume', i. fo. 114 b.

5178 7. A NUN OF THE 2^d CLASS.

Pub^d by M Darly (39) Strand, Feb^y 10th 1773.

Engraving. One of a series, see No. 5177. A young woman in profile to the r. She wears a muslin cap over straggling hair which falls on her forehead and neck. Suspended from her neck on a cord is a locket, on which is partly visibly the profile of a man.

4 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Fairholt's 'Collection for Costume', i. fo. 113 b.

5179 2. A NUN OF THE 4th CLASS.

Pub^d by M Darly (39) Strand Feb^y 19. 1773.

Engraving. One of a series, see No. 5177. Profile portrait of a young woman in profile to the l. She wears a large mob-cap, beneath which her hair appears on her forehead and below the ear. Her dress is high to the neck and defines her breasts.

5 × 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Fairholt's 'Collection for Costume', i. fo. 115.

5180 3. A NUN OF THE 6th CLASS

Pub^d by M Darly 39 Strand March 1. 1773.

Engraving. No. 3 in a series, see No. 5177. A young woman in profile to the r. wearing an elaborate cap, the frill of which conceals her eye. Her chin is patched. Her hair is fashionably dressed, her dress cut low; she wears a black ribbon round her neck.

4 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Fairholt's 'Collection for Costume', i. fo. 115 b.

5181 4. A MOTHER ABBESS OF THE LAST CLASS.

Pub^d by MDarly 39. Strand March 1st 1773.

Engraving. One of a series, see No. 5177, the title showing that she is the keeper of a brothel. A stout truculent-looking woman in profile to the l. Her face is heavily patched. She wears a mob-cap, beneath which her hair appears on her forehead and below her ear; over her shoulders is a handkerchief, and round her neck a string of beads.

5 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Fairholt's 'Collection for Costume', i. fo. 116 b.

5182 8. A NUN OF THE 1st CLASS.

Pub^d accor. to Act by MDarly (39) Strand March 22^d 1773

Engraving. One of a series, see No. 5177. A young woman in profile to the l. wearing a cap. Round her neck is a black ribbon. Her cheek is patched.

5 × 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Fairholt's 'Collection for Costume', i. fo. 112.

5183 9. A NUN OF THE FIRST CLASS*Pub^d by MDarly 39. Strand 24th March. 1773.*

Engraving. One of a series, see No. 5177. Portrait of a fashionably dressed and dignified woman in profile to the r. She wears a necklace and in the front of her low-cut dress is a nosegay.

Possibly intended for Mrs. Baddeley, to whose portraits it has a certain resemblance, as also to the portrait called A Pantheon No Rep, No. 4998 $4\frac{15}{16} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in. Fairholt's 'Collection for Costume', i. fo. 111 b.

5184 5. A LADY ABBESS OF THE 1ST CLASS.Pub accor to Act by MDarly March 30 1773 (39) Strand.

Engraving. No. 5 in a series, see No. 5177, the title here implying that the subject is the keeper of a brothel. A woman in profile to the r. of dignified and refined appearance. Her hair is fashionably dressed over a high cushion and ornamented with lace. A black ribbon is tied round her neck. Her dress appears to be loose négligé.

$4\frac{15}{16} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in. Fairholt's 'Collection for Costume', i. fo. 114.

5185 10. A NUN OF THE II^D CLASS.Pub Accord. to Act April, 26, 1773, by M Darly, 39 Strand

Engraving. No. 10 in a series, see No. 5177. A woman in profile to the l. wearing a ribbon-trimmed hat whose brim conceals the upper part of her face. Her shoulders are covered with a flowered sacque trimmed with ruchings of ribbon.

$4\frac{15}{16} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in. Fairholt's 'Collection for Costume', i. fo. 113.

5186 A NUN OF THE 2^D CLASS

[n.d. c. 1773]

Pub by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. One of a series, see No. 5177. A woman in profile to the r. wearing a cap whose frill conceals her eye and much of her cheek.

$4\frac{15}{16} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in. Fairholt's 'Collection for Costume', i. fo. 112 b.

5187-5189

Three Cambridge satires, by the same artist, probably an amateur.

5187 THE JUSTICE IN THE SUDS.*Publish'd accord^s to Act of Parliament Jan^y 14th 1773 by M^{rs} Sledge
Henrietta Street Covent Garden London*

Engraving. The interior of a panelled room; a young man wearing a three-cornered hat and the gown of a fellow commoner of Trinity College, with his hands behind his back and without any indication of passion, spits in the face of a man in a closely curled wig. A cat, with arched back, stands on a chair watching the encounter. On the wall behind are ranged objects to show that it is the room of an active justice of peace: a picture (l.) of a man (T.Q.L.) with bare back standing at a whipping-post; a pair of jack boots hanging from nails on the lower edge of the frame gives an illusion of a W.L.

figure. On the next two panels are hung a halter of rope and a chain. On the r. panel is a picture of Justice (H.L.) with ass's ears and wearing a fool's cap. One eye is blindfolded; in her r. hand is a wooden sword, in her l. a pair of scales, one end of which she is holding down with her r. forefinger. (The J.P. was often styled a justass, see No. 6120.) Below this hangs an academic gown surmounted by a hat, beneath which stands a pair of shoes. Beneath the design is etched,

*Ah! Poor Justice,
Dud a cry,
Ah! welladay,
Wipe an Eye*

*Oh fie — [Stanley]
To treat him so scornfully,
Shamefully, mournfully — Fie.*

An impression of this print was one of a number sent by Cole the antiquary to Horace Walpole. He afterwards sent him the following explanation of it, April 18, 1775:

'The Hon M^r Stanley, Brother to Lord Stanley & Fellow Commoner of Trinity College, is spitting in D^r Ewen's face. The Likenesses are tolerably well preserved: D^r Ewen [Ewin] does not squint enough. He cast M^r Stanley on a Trial in Westminster Hall, made him pay & ask Pardon.' Add. MSS. 5824, fo. 84 b.

A note by Cole on the occasion of a letter (n.d.) from Ewin to himself announcing that Mr. Stanley had not got his degree ('M^r Stanley offered again and was stopped on the caput'), explains: 'This refers to M^r Stanley's spitting in D^r Ewin's Face about Christmas Eve on some offence or conceived offence from D^r Ewin of which a Print is now made & sold: He is grandson to the Earl of Derby.' Ibid., 5844, fo. 42 b.

He was the Hon. Thomas Stanley (1753-79), afterwards a major in the army. W. H. Ewin (1731?-80), St. John's College, a wealthy Cambridge brewer and usurer, was expelled from the university and suspended from his degrees in 1778 for lending money usuriously to an undergraduate, subsequently restored on a mandamus but severely censured by Lord Mansfield, and struck out of the Commission of the Peace. The subject of many lampoons by undergraduates. See D.N.B.

The print appears in No. 5189.

5 × 7½ in.

There is a W.L. portrait of 'D^r Ewing' walking in profile to the r. called The Man of Accomodation, etched by Anna Maria Dean after a drawing by 'M^r Porteus of Trin. Coll.' in book of 'Honorary Engravers', ii, fo. 157.

5188 THE BEAR, THE LOUSE, AND RELIGION A FABLE

Athanasius Credo fecit

[1773]

Publish'd accord^s to Act of Parliament on the 1st day of Trinity Term by M^{rs} Sledge Henrietta Street Covent Garden, London.

Engraving. Religion, a veiled woman holding a cross, is being roughly handled by two men wearing academic cap and gown with clerical bands. In the background is a half-ruined church (l.). 'The Louse', who is small and slight, has seized Religion by the hair, his r. hand grasps an upright post, his foot is on her gown and he is preventing her from being dragged away by her assailant. The other, 'the Bear', a large burly man, has seized her hood with his r. hand, with his l. he pulls at her draperies, leaving her shoulders and breast partly bare; his r. foot is on an open book. A small dog barks at them. Beneath the title is etched,

*A surly Bear in College bred,
 Determin'd to attack Religion;
 A Louse who crawl'd from Head to Head
 Defended Her—as Hawk does Pigeon
 Bruin, Subscription discommended,
 The Louse determin'd to support it,
 But . . . Desunt multa . . .*

A satire on the petition to Parliament for relief from subscription to the Thirty-nine Articles rejected in 1772 and again in 1773, see Nos. 4944, 5107. The print is described by Cole in a letter to H. Walpole: 'Dr Hallifax the present Law Professor, commonly called Louse Hallifax from his affectation of getting among the Heads of Colleges and consorting with them. He wrote and preached excellently in defence of Subscription to Articles and against the Clerical Petitioners, than whom none was more violent and vehement than M^r Barker, a fat fellow of Queens' College, and warm Republican. The figures represent them very well: Barker particularly. The insignificant mean figure of Dr Hallifax is very well hit off.' Add. MSS. 5824, fo. 84b. Samuel Hallifax, afterwards Bishop of Gloucester, was Regius Professor of Civil Law at Cambridge from 1770 to 1782. Some letters signed 'Erasmus' in 1772 in favour of subscription to Articles were generally attributed to him. See D.N.B. John Barker, D.D., became Master of Queens' College in 1780. Royal Kalendar, 1781, p. 236.

The print appears in No. 5189.

5 × 7½ in.

5189 VENUS TURN'D PROCTOR

[c. 1773]

London publish'd by M^{rs} Sledge Henrietta Street Covent Garden. Price 1^s 6^d

Engraving. A man in academic gown and bands, with a small wig, stands with a complacent expression, 'in the attitude of the Venus de Medici'. A boy (l.) has just taken a dead cat from a hamper and holds it out towards him by the tail. A halberd stands against the wall, its spike transfixing a woman's ribboned hat, representing the spoils of a Cambridge proctor. On the wall are three framed pictures; three unframed prints are also pinned up: these are this print (Venus turn'd Proctor) in the centre; No. 5188 (l.), and No. 5187 (r.). The pictures are: (l.) The Gentleman and Scholar United, two T.Q.L. figures whose arms are tied together; one, in academic dress and wearing an old-fashioned coat with huge cuffs, is holding out a book in his r. hand; the other, dressed as a macaroni wearing an enormous bag-wig; he is holding up a sword in his l. hand. Above their heads is a device of four crossed hands, inscribed The Union. The centre picture, its frame inscribed Dead Game, is of two books: Bible and University Statutes (out of this projects a pair of clerical bands inscribed 6^s 8^d). On them lies an open pamphlet inscribed A Sermon preached at Wisbech assizes before . . . The third picture (r.) is Miss Boreas, the portrait (H.L.) of a woman whose face is made out of a pair of bellows. She was probably a Miss North. Beneath the print is etched,

*O Venus Beauty of the Skies,
 To whom a thousand Temples rise;
 Gayly false in gentle Smiles,—*

*In Mathematicks he was greater Than Tycho Brahe, or Erra Pater:
For he, by Geometrick Scale,
Cou'd take the Size of Pots of Ale;
Resolve by Sines & Tangents, straight;
If Bread or Butter wanted weight;
He knew What's What, & that's as high
As Metaphysick Wit can fly;
All lov'd him well, who knew his Fame,
And sent him Cats, instead of Game.*

Cole sent an explanation of the print to H. Walpole, 18 April 1775:

'Mr Purkes [William Purkis, M.A.] of Magdalen College, Proctor in 1773 to whom some wag advertised him by letter that a Basket of Game was coming to him by the Cambridge Coach, which turned out to be dead cats & dogs &c. It is an handsome likeness of him. He stands in the Attitude of the Venus de Medici in which Posture he would frequently place himself, before his Friends. Indeed, he is a most consummate vain coxcomb Always talking of uniting the Gentleman & the Scholar which gained him the Name of M^r Union. Tho' People thought it wrong thus to expose a worthy man, for he was no ways vicious but a good Tutor & no bad Scholar, yet others thought his Vanity deserved it.' Add. MSS. 5824, fo. 84 b.

5 × 7 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5190 PATRIOTIC MISFORTUNES; OR, SIR JOSEPH IN THE SUDS. [1 Mar. 1773]

T. H. (monogram).

Woodcut. Westminster Magazine, i. 157. It illustrates an 'Authentic Relation of the Quarrel between Sir J. Mawbey and Rich. Wyatt Esq.' quoting from Mawbey's letters to the newspapers in vindication of himself. Mawbey lies on the floor, warding off a blow from Wyatt, who stands over him, his nose bleeding. A waiter in the doorway starts back in alarm.

This was a fracas in the Ordnance Arms Tavern arising out of reports that Mawbey had not defended his honour by challenging Wyatt, followed by an attempted justification of himself by Mawbey in the newspapers, which revived the quarrel. 'This transaction, ridiculous as it is, may have its use, in convincing the Patriotic Mob, what frail materials their firmest champions are made of; and how little those men have it in their power to be patriotic on extraordinary occasions, who cannot on common occasions behave in a manly manner.' Ibid., p. 158.

Mawbey (1730-98), a rich distiller, M.P. for Southwark, and Chairman of the Surrey Quarter Sessions, had been a supporter of Wilkes, but prided himself on being above party, so that he was a butt of the wits on both sides. See Nos. 5191, 5192.

2 $\frac{9}{16}$ × 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5443.

5191 THE DISTILLER IN THE SUDS, OR, A REAL REPRESENTATION OF THE SURRY BRUISING BOUT. [1 Mar. 1773]

Woodcut. From the Town & Country Magazine, v. 92. One of two combatants lies on the floor, one eye closed from a blow; the other stands over him with clenched fists. Three men appear in the doorway. An overturned table, wine-bottle, &c., are on the floor. A representation of the quarrel between Sir Joseph Mawbey and Richard Wyatt. See Nos.

5190, 5192.

$5\frac{5}{8} \times 3\frac{9}{16}$ in.

5192 THE PISSING CONFLICT.

[1 Mar. 1773]

Woodcut. From the Covent Garden Magazine. A coarse satire on the quarrel between Sir Joseph Mawbey and Richard Wyatt. See Nos. 5190, 5191.

$3\frac{7}{8} \times 3\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5193 THE MACARONIES INTERCEDING WITH GRACE & RIGHT REVERENCE IN BEHALF OF THE POOR & PANTHEON.

[1 Feb. 1773]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, x. 17. It illustrates a dialogue, 'The Pantheon Petition; or the B——ps melted by the Tears of the Ladies'. Two bishops (r.), one seated on an episcopal chair, the other standing by his side, receive a deputation which enters through a door on the l. A fashionably dressed lady points to two kneeling beggars in rags, an emaciated man on crutches, his head bandaged, stands behind. Four fashionably dressed men, one wearing a ribbon, stand behind the lady.

The dialogue shows that the deputation is petitioning against a proposed suppression of masquerades on the ground that they are good for trade; the bishops are the Archbishop of Canterbury (Cornwallis) and the Bishop of London (Terrick); both make unctuous gestures of emotion and compassion. The deputation includes the Duchess of Northumberland, who speaks on behalf of the poor weavers, Lord and Lady Harrington, the Bishop of London's lady, the Lord Mayor (Townsend), and a 'Jew Macaroni', who are not all represented in the engraving.

There was a grand masquerade at the Pantheon on 18 Feb. 1773, Oxford Magazine, x. 60-1.

$5\frac{13}{16} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 6115.

5194 CUPID BEATING UP FOR VOLUNTEERS. [1 May 1773]

Engraving. Westminster Magazine, i. 237. A sequel to No. 5066. A recruiting party of ladies outside the gateway of St. James's Palace. Mrs. Cornelys, in macaroni dress, holds a large flag inscribed Folly. She wears a cap with bells on her high-dressed hair. Behind her walks another lady similarly dressed, her hair ornamented with pearls; slung from her shoulders is a pair of kettledrums which Cupid is beating. They are watched by a crowd of fashionably dressed men and women. Beneath is inscribed,

Ye Maids, Dames, Courtesans, now lend your ears, FOLLY and LOVE beat up for volunteers.

The text shows that Cupid is following Mrs. Cornelys' flag of Folly, and beating up for volunteers to be sold and to buy at his auction. His new quarters are 'at the French Ambassador's in Great George Street'. De Guignes was renowned for his lavish entertaining.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5443.

5195 HO HE, THE BLACKGUARD MACARONI*Van Grog fecitPublish'd as the Act Directs June y^e 22 1773 by T Pether Berwick St
Soho*

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5196. W.L. full face standing portrait of a man. He wears a heavy overcoat open in front, a wide-brimmed hat on the back of his head, buckled shoes, a thick neckcloth round his neck. His r. hand is in his waistcoat pocket, his left holds a switch. Beneath the title is etched:

*This Animal tho Not so well known as many Among the polite Circle Nevertheless can claim as Much folly to his Share as those of higher Rank, but so peculiar to himself, that it can cause Emulation in none, but such as Jack Catch [Ketch] and the Devil hath reserv'd for their Own private purposes Sing
I wonder we ant better company upon Tyburn tree.*

6 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 4 $\frac{3}{16}$ in.5196 STEPHEN STRUT Y^E TALLOW MACARONI*Van Grog fecit*

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5195, publication line apparently cut off. A corpulent man walks in profile from l. to r., his l. leg stiffly raised. He looks through an eye-glass held in his l. hand; in the r. is a walking-stick. He is dressed elaborately, though not quite in the prevailing fashion: his bushy wig has a club, he wears a three-cornered lace-trimmed hat, laced waistcoat and a short coat. Over the lower part of his sleeve is tied what appears to be a sleeve-protector of some thin material. Beneath the title is etched,

Ask me not what I was, See what I am, those who take me for a fool, Shew their Own Want, tis Money makes the Mare to go, & Sing lol lol de riddle lol fal lal de riddle lal fal lal de ra.

Probably the portrait of some rich tallow-chandler.

6 × 4 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.5197 This Day is publish'd

THE RAT-TRAP, OR VILLAINY IN FULL BLOOM:

[1773]

Woodcut. It illustrates an advertisement, clipped, printed on both sides, probably a hand-bill, for a book with the above title. A man stands, his r. leg in the teeth of a steel rat-trap, holding out in his r. hand a paper on which is printed, He means my Worship. Have I escaped the Gallows and pillory to come to THIS. His l. hand is clenched and his head turned in profile to the l. Above his head is printed,

*If in this vicious Age some Monster shou'd,
With more than mortal infamy endue'd,
Count o'er the Crimes that gave him Power and Wealth,
To Gorge on Rapines, Murders, Frauds, and Stealth;
To Life's last stage this miscreant I'll pursue,
And greet the Villain with a Villain's Due.*

This is continued in a contemporary hand,

‘Little villians must submit to fate
 Whilst great ones do enjoy y^e world in State’
 ‘Bishop

‘to be heard of at the Rotation Office Litchfield Street, St. Ann’s Soho London.’

The title is printed below the woodcut and continues: containing a Portrait, or family piece of that Worshipful Banditti, emphatically called Trading Justices.

The book, with a dedication to Lord Mansfield dated 30 July 1773, is a scurrilous attack upon the justices of the Litchfield Street Rotation Office, see No. 5273, presided over by Saunders Welch, the friend of Dr. Johnson. It is directed more especially against Thomas Bishop, the subject of the woodcut, one of the magistrates at that office, against whom Robert Holloway, the writer, had personal grievances. On the reverse of the sheet is a further advertisement of the book of a libellous character in which Bishop, though not named, is described as ‘a worshipful Scoundrel, well known in the polite world; who from a Shoeless Vagabond is become the most corpulent Butcher in the Litchfield Street Slaughter-house.’

Holloway was prosecuted and convicted for the publication (B.M.L. 12330. cc. 37). The case, Rex v. Holloway, is cited in Barnewell and Alderson, v, p. 595.

8 × 4½ in.

5198 THE MACCARONI SACRIFICE

Engraving. Frontispiece (folding plate) to An Appendix to the Vauxhall Affray or Macaronies Defeated . . . 1773. Three macaronies chained together stand on the top of an altar from which rise flames and smoke, the result of a fire lit within the altar, which is being stoked by a nude man. The altar stands outside a temple with Ionic pilasters whose pediment, partly visible on the r., is inscribed Temp. of Virtue. The ‘sacrifice’ is being directed by Parson Bate (afterwards Sir Henry Bate Dudley) who stands on the r., in profile to the l., pointing to the macaronies with an outstretched pen. His l. hand rests on a club of Hercules. He is saying: This incense shall revive degraded Manhood. The stoker asks him: Master! is it hot enough now? The three macaronies, who are small and effeminate, say: I owe this infamy to you two; If I had been advised by Mother D——n I had not got in this damned Scrape; and, touching a locket which he wears, Oh! Save my Miniature Picture.

They are the hon. Thomas Lyttelton, commonly known as the wicked Lord Lyttelton, see No. 5147, George Robert Fitzgerald, commonly called Fighting Fitzgerald, executed for murder in Ireland 1786, and Captain Crofts. The quarrel between these men and Bate began with the affair called the Vauxhall Affray, when Bate resented their impolite attentions to Mrs. Hartley, the beautiful actress, in July. This was followed by a ‘bruising match’ between Bate and a supposed Captain Miles, really a servant of Fitzgerald, see Nos. 5199, 5200. The dispute continued in the newspapers during August 1773, particularly in letters from Bate to the Morning Post, reprinted in An Appendix to the Vauxhall Affray. See The Vauxhall Affray, 1773; The Rape of Pomona, 1773; Angelo, Reminiscences, 1904, i. 117 ff. Bate was a frequent subject of caricature. He is said to have acquired the name of the Fighting Parson from this affair. Angelo, op. et loc. cit.

$7\frac{1}{8} \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5199 THE BRUISING SCENE BETWEEN PARSON BATE AND MR FITZGERALD'S FOOTMAN IN THE CHARACTER OF A SUPPOSED CAPT MILES. [1 Aug. 1773]

Engraving. Macaroni and Theatrical Magazine, i. 489. The interior of a panelled room. Two men fighting with fists: Bate (r.) wears a shirt with clerical bands, Miles (l.) is stripped to the waist, one eye is closed from the effect of a blow. Two seconds stand behind each of the combatants: two dignified-looking gentlemen behind Bate, two macaronies behind Miles, the foremost of whom wears a miniature round his neck. See Nos. 5198, 5200.

$4\frac{1}{8} \times 6\frac{7}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5201.

5200 CAPT MILES'S REVENGE, OR THE MACARONIES DIS-COMFITED BY THEIR CHAMPION. [1 Nov. 1773]

Engraving. Macaroni and Theatrical Magazine, ii. 7. An illustration to 'Anecdote of the Rev. Mr. H—y B—e'. [Henry Bate]. Interior of an alehouse. A footman (l.), his hair in a pigtail queue and tags on his shoulder, strikes with his fists a man dressed as a macaroni; another macaroni, a miniature round his neck, see No. 5198, lies on the ground, a broken cane in his hand. On the wall are two prints each representing a Morning Post newsboy with his horn. In the cap of one (l.) is the letter B, he has a sheaf of papers inscribed M. Post. The other's cap has the letter T. The text explains that Fitzgerald's servant, Miles, when at Epsom revenged himself on his master for the drubbing received from Bate, see No. 5199.

A note explains that 'The Morning-Post was originally sold by boys habited in a particular manner, and blowing a horn. The whim struck Mr. B—e, and he and Dr. T—r [Trusler] went to the Pantheon masquerade in that dress. This frolick appears to us so unworthy of a clergyman and a physician, that we have exhibited these two gentlemen so habited in the background of Capt. Miles's Revenge'. For the Morning Post newsboys see H. Walpole, Letters, ix, 439-40. See No. 5550, &c.

$3\frac{15}{16} \times 6\frac{11}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5201.

5201 FOOTE, THE DEVIL AND POLLY PATTENS.

[1 Mar. 1773]

Engraving. From the Macaroni and Theatrical Magazine, i. 211. This illustrates 'The Puppet Shew, . . . or, A dialogue between Foote, Geo. Alexander Stevens, Harlequin and Polly Pattens', the scene being the Green Room just after the audience had left the theatre. Two of the figures are puppets, with strings attached to their hands and legs; a man full-face, holding his hat, stands stiffly on the extreme l. and Polly Pattens, the housemaid, in mob-cap and long skirts in profile to the r. Between them stands Harlequin, club in hand, hat in the other, showing off the puppets.

The Devil in the form of a satyr, holding a trident, points at Foote (r.), who stands in profile to the l. facing his puppets; behind him is Punch. A curtain is festooned above the figures.

A satire on Foote's puppet-play the 'Handsome House-maid or Piety in Pattens', produced in February 1773. The dialogue suggests that Stevens, famous for his lecture on Heads, had a share in the production.

$3\frac{5}{8} \times 6\frac{5}{16}$ in.

5202 THE WHIMSICAL DUET OR MISS C—TL—Y TEACHING HER FAT DANE BITCH TO RIVAL MISS Y—G.

[1 Apr. 1773]

Engraving. Oxford Magazine, x. 105. On a high-backed sofa sit Miss Catley (r.) and a man wearing regimentals with a cockaded hat. She holds a book of music open on her lap, her l. hand is raised as if teaching a spotted Dalmatian dog, which stands on its hind legs, to sing. A man in a long overcoat, holding a coachman's whip, his hat under his arm, stands behind the dog. A cockatoo on a perch behind the sofa is screeching, a spaniel is barking, and a cat miaou-ing at the musical efforts of the dog. The room is panelled; a large oval mirror hangs on the wall. The accompanying text (p. 104) says that 'the celebrated Miss C—t—ly on her return home from Drury Lane Theatre, ordered her servant to bring up the fat kitchen bitch and set her on her hind legs; as she was positive she could learn her to sing as well as a certain lady . . .'.

For Ann Catley in 1773 see Walpole, Letters, viii. 360, 19 Nov. 1773. See also Nos. 4468, 4706. She was not playing at Drury Lane at this time; she sang at Vauxhall, Marylebone Gardens, &c., appearing in 1770 and 1773 at Covent Garden. Miss Younge (1744?–97) was a leading actress at Drury Lane, and one of the foremost of English actresses.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 6115.

5203 ROSCIUS IN TRIUMPH, OR THE DOWNFALL OF SHY-LOCK ALIAS MACKBETH.

[1 Dec. 1773]

Engraving. From the Macaroni Magazine, ii. 41. Macklin dressed as Shylock in a furred gown, lies on his back on a platform or stage. In his r. hand is a knife, in his l. a pair of scales. Behind him stand Tragedy with a dagger and Comedy holding out a mask; astride on their shoulders sits Garrick in triumph, smiling, his hands on his hips. He wears a slashed doublet and is surrounded by a glory of light sending out rays. Beneath the platform are two demons, one has seized Macklin by the arm and is pulling him down into an abyss from which flames are rising; the other (l.) uses a pitchfork for the same purpose.

The plate illustrates a detailed account of the repeated disturbances which led to Macklin's dismissal on 18 November, 1773. The public regarded Macklin's performance as Shylock as above criticism, but would not tolerate him as Macbeth. A plate of Macklin as Shylock, by J. Lodge, inscribed This is the Jew, that Shakespeare drew, illustrates the London Museum for April 1770, see No. 4846.

Garrick is said to have been jealous of Macklin's performance as Macbeth. Though this is hardly credible, it is not improbable that he felt mortified that the change in the dressing of the characters should come from Macklin and not from himself. Genest. v. 414. Macklin's assumption of a part usually played by Smith at Covent Garden was also a cause of offence. See No. 5175.

$6 \times 4\frac{5}{16}$ in.

5204 A WELL-KNOWN MACARONI MAKING LOVE TO THE FAMOUS POLL KENNEDY. [c. 1773]

Engraving. Probably from a magazine. A woman elaborately dressed in the fashion of the day sits on a high-backed sofa of an ornate French design. On his knees before her, his hands clasped in supplication, is a man wearing the ribbon of an order. He is elaborately dressed in the French fashion with high toupet wig, exaggerated black bag, fringed waistcoat, feathered hat. His hat is on the ground. On the back of the sofa sits a monkey, his hair in a high toupet in imitation of that of the man and the woman. He regards the suitor through an eye-glass. The room is panelled, and furnished in the contemporary French fashion. On the wall are a picture of a nymph and satyr, and a clock on a carved bracket.

Polly Kennedy, a well-known courtesan, described in Harris's List of Covent Garden Ladies for 1773, has been confused with Kitty Kennedy, see No. 5095. H. Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, 316-18.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in.

THE MACARONI PARSON [Horne]. See No. 4827—1 Jan. 1773

From the Macaroni Magazine. (Dr. Dodd was also known as the Macaroni Parson, see No. 5249.)

THE STABLE ADVENTURE . . . [Lady Ligonier]

See No. 4801—1 Feb. 1773

Macaroni Magazine.

LORD — OR THE NOSEGAY MACARONI. [Viscount Villiers.]

See No. 4825—1 Mar. 1773

From Macaroni Magazine. Reproduced, Paston, Sidelights on the Georgian Period, p. 72, and Social England, ed. Traill, v. p. 229.

MY LORD — OR THE CHAPEAU MACCARONI [Viscount Peter-sham]. See No. 4812—1 Apr. 1773

Macaroni Magazine.

5205 A SCENE IN ISLINGTON FIELDS [1 Apr. 1773]

Engraving. From the Macaroni and Theatrical Magazine, i. 265. It illustrates 'A Duelling scene in Islington Fields by Two Macaronies', between 'a young woollen-drapeer' and 'a military gentleman', the theme being the citizen's reluctance to fight. The duellists in macaroni dress face each other. Their seconds are partly visible on the l. and r. margins of the design. The citizen (l.) holding a pistol in his r. hand raises his l. to protect himself, dropping his other pistol. The other (r.) holds a pistol in his r. hand and fires another with his l.

The antagonists are identified in an old hand as 'Fitzgerald' (r.) and 'Walker' (l.). This appears from the date to be incorrect: a duel between Thomas Walker Esq., well known on the turf, and Fighting Fitzgerald, see Nos. 5198-5200, caused a sensation in 1775, and was the occasion of a series of pamphlets addressed to the Jockey Club by the two combatants.
 $3\frac{13}{16} \times 6\frac{5}{16}$ in.

THE OLD POLITICAL MACARONI WITH HIS WISE FAMILY AT BREAKFAST. See No. 4821—1 May 1773

LADY C—N DISCOVERED IN A CRITICAL SITUATION WITH A CERTAIN FOREIGN AMBASSADOR [de Guignes].

See No. 4835—1 July 1773

Macaroni Magazine.

A MACARONI FAMILY RETURNING FROM CHURCH.

See No. 4822—1 July 1773

From the Macaroni Magazine.

THE DEATH HUNTER MACARONI. See No. 4823—1 Aug. 1773

From the Macaroni Magazine.

ACERTAIN FAMOUS OLD FORNICATING FOREIGNM—N—TR...
 [Count Haslang.] Macaroni Magazine.

See No. 4834—1 Aug. 1773

THE MIDDLE TEMPLE MACARONI See No. 4826—1 Sept. 1773

From the Macaroni Magazine.

5206 THE MACARONY BEAUS & BELLES IN AN UPROAR, OR
 THE LAST EVENING AT VAUX HALL GARDENS. [1 Oct. 1773]

Engraving. Macaroni and Theatrical Magazine, i. 529. A free fight in the gardens at Vauxhall, the weapons being swords, canes, and bottles. The background shows trees (one with broken lamps) and part of one of the pavilions (l.). Women are escaping in alarm. The men are dressed as macaronies, but are of plebeian appearance.

It was customary (from c. 1772) on the last night of the Vauxhall season for the 'bucks' to break lamps, benches, bottles, &c. See F. Burney's Evelina (Letter XV), ed. Sir F. D. Mackinnon, 1930, pp. 244, 559.

$3\frac{7}{8} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5021.

THE MACARONI CARD PLAYERS. See No. 4824 [1 Dec. 1773]

Macaroni Magazine.

THE MACARONIES. See No. 4806—1 Feb. 1773

From The Lady's Magazine.

THE FIRST OF APRIL. See No. 2002—1 Apr. 1773.

From the Sentimental Magazine, i. 33. A satire on macaronies and others.

THE GAMBLER DETECTED.

See No. 4836—1 Apr. 1773

From The Covent Garden Magazine.5207 THE LONDON BEAU IN THE COUNTRY, OR THE DAIRY-HOUSE GALLANT. [1 June 1773]

Engraving. From the Covent Garden Magazine.¹ An illustration to a scurrilous story of 'Sir William L——' and a farmer's wife in Hertfordshire. The interior of a dairy with churn, milk-pans, &c. A man and woman embracing fall on the floor, a cat upsets a bowl of cream; the farmer with a hay-rake, and his man Hodge enter at the door.

 $5\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ in.5208 STEPHEN CUB IN THE SUDS. [1 Aug. 1773]

Engraving. From the Covent Garden Magazine.¹ Stephen Fox in the bedroom of a tailor (indicated by the scissors and garments hanging on the wall) is being seized by his club of hair by the tailor, who is getting out of bed. He is also being attacked by a sweep and his two little 'climbing boys' who have entered by the door. The text relates an alleged drunken escapade of Stephen Fox, 'a celebrated, sleeping, gambling Macaroni', who had mistaken the room for that of a woman.

 $5\frac{1}{8} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ in.5209 THE DOUBLE DISCOVERY, OR THE DOCTOR BAULK'D OF HIS SUPPER. [1 Sept. 1773]

Engraving. From the Covent Garden Magazine.¹ An illustration to 'A whimsical Bagnio Adventure'. An overturned supper-table at which a man and woman have been sitting; he has fallen to the floor, she stands covering her face with a hand. A military officer enters the room and threatens the man with a drawn sword, pointing to the woman. Behind him is another woman, equally horror-struck. The text relates the accidental meeting, at a 'house of rendezvous', of Doctor L—— and Captain D, each with the other's wife.

 $4\frac{5}{16} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in.5210 LORD G—— IN THE PORRIDGE POT, OR THE RAKES DISAPPOINTMENT. [1 Oct. 1773]

Engraving. From the Covent Garden Magazine. An illustration to 'A curious Anecdote of Lord G——, . . .' Lord G——, in riding-dress, is seated in a cauldron, a kettle hung over one leg, and surrounded by other kitchen utensils. The scene is an inn kitchen, servants stand round and others are entering the room. The text relates the misadventure of Lord G. in an inn on the Bath road. The cook-maid had defeated his amorous overtures by making him drunk, the ostler then decorated him with pots and pans.

 $6\frac{1}{16} \times 3\frac{7}{8}$ in.

¹ The magazine is not in the B.M.L. but cuttings from the book accompany the prints.

5211 SIR CHARLY DETECTED OR THE EXCISEMAN CORNUTED.

[1 Nov. 1773]

Engraving. From the Covent Garden Magazine. A fat man lies on the ground, pointing angrily at a man and woman who hold up their hands deprecatingly. Three men wearing hats threaten the couple with clubs and clenched fists.

5 $\frac{5}{16}$ × 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.5212 THE CITY 'PRENTICE AT HIS MASTER'S DOOR.

[1 Jan. 1773]

Engraving. From Every Man's Magazine, i. 257. A young man stands on the pavement outside an arched doorway through which can be seen a short elderly man behind a counter. Over the door is inscribed, Young & Wife Mercers. Rolls of material are piled up on shelves. The apprentice stands with his legs apart, his r. hand in his waistcoat, his l. in his breeches pocket. He is dressed like a macaroni and wears a nosegay. On the r. a woman who has just passed by looks round at him; she carries on her head a basket of vegetables. Just behind her walks a little chimney-sweeper with his brush and bag of soot. On the l. two young women have just passed, one looks round at the apprentice. Reproduced, M. D. George, England in Transition, p. 172.

6 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 4 in.THE SPIRIT IS WILLING BUT THE FLESH IS WEAK.

See No. 4609—1 Jan. 1773

Goldar sc. after Collet. Pub. Sayer and Smith.THE BOLD ATTEMPT.

See No. 4607—1 Jan. 1773

Caldwell sc. after Collet. Pub. Smith and Sayer.THE COUNTRY CHORISTERS

See No. 4611—22 Mar. 1773

Goldar sc. after Collet. Pub. Smith and Sayer.5213-5218 and numbers from Volume IV

Prints after Bunbury etched and published by J. Bretherton.

5213 THE SIEGE OF NAMUR BY CAPT^N SHANDY & CORPORAL
TRIM. Tris: Shan.H. W. Bunbury del. 1772.ƒ. Bretherton f

*Publish'd as the Act directs 26 Jan^y 1773. By ƒ. Bretherton N^o 134,
New Bond Street.*

Engraving. One of a series of illustrations to Sterne's Tristram Shandy, see Nos. 5214-16. Uncle Toby (r.) marches from r. to l., a crutch under his l. arm, pointing with his r. crutch towards the fortifications (l.) built on the bowling green, where the Gate of S^t Nicolas is flanked on each side by a jack-boot. In his l. hand he holds the London Gazette. Trim, holding up a pickaxe, marches in front of his master. He has a long pig-tail, and a pad is tied over his l. knee. On the ground behind is a grenadier's cap. Behind Uncle Toby is the sentry-box, in it is pasted up the plan of a fortification. The background is a rough paling behind which are trees. Shandy Hall appears behind the Gate of St. Nicolas.

Beneath the design is engraved,

"What an honest triumph in my Uncle Toby's Eyes as he march'd to the Ramparts with the Gazette in his hand & Trim with a pickaxe ready to execute the Contents; what intense pleasure in his Eyes as he stood over the Corporal! Heaven! Earth! Sea!"

9 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 15 in.

5214 THE DAMNATION OF OBADIAH.

Vide Tris. Shandy Vol. 2^d

H. W. Bunbury delin. 1772

J. Bretherton f.

Publish'd as the Act directs 30th Jan^y 1773. by J. Bretherton N^o 134. New Bond Street.

Engraving. One of a series of illustrations to Tristram Shandy, see Nos. 5213-16. Dr. Slop, short and fat, seated in an arm-chair (c.) holding in his l. hand the book containing the form of excommunication, points with his r. at Obadiah who is disappearing (l.), one leg and his back alone being visible. A handkerchief hangs over the doctor's cut r. thumb. Behind him on the l. stands Mr. Shandy, in dressing-gown and night-cap, smoking a long pipe, he is frowning and holds out his l. hand in protest at the doctor's curses. Uncle Toby, his crutch under his l. arm, stands on the r. pointing with his l. hand at a map of Flanders which hangs on the wall over Dr. Slop's head. He turns to speak to Corporal Trim, who stands (r.) at attention in profile to the l. holding a long broom.

Beneath the design is engraved,

"May all the Angels & Archangels, Principalities and Powers, & all the Heavenly Armies, curse & damn him—him—Obadiah. (Our Armies swore terribly in Flanders, quoth my Uncle Toby, but nothing to this)".

9 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 14 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5215 THE OVERTHROW OF DR SLOP.

H. W. Bunbury delin.

J. Bretherton f.

Publish'd as the Act directs 3^d February 1773. By J. Bretherton N^o 134 New Bond Street.

Engraving. One of a series of illustrations to Tristram Shandy, see Nos. 5213-16. Obadiah (l.) mounted on the coach-horse at full gallop attempts to pull up his horse, leaning back in the saddle, his cap in his r. hand. On the ground is Dr. Slop's pony. Behind the pony on the r. Dr. Slop lies on his back; a spotted dog prances over him. The doctor lies under a sign-post terminating in a hand pointing To Shandy Hall. Behind the coach-horse, which is wearing blinkers, is the angle of a high garden wall; in the distance (r.) is a church spire among trees.

Beneath the design is engraved,

“When Obadiah & his Coach Horse turn'd the Corner rapid, furious, pop, full upon him—nothing I think in Nature can be supposed more terrible than such a rencounter—Obadiah pull'd of [sic] his Cap twice to Dr Slop, once when he was falling & again when he saw him seated.”—Vide Vol 1st Tristram Shandy.

9½ × 14⅞ in.

5216 THE BATTLE OF THE CATAPLASM.

H. W. Bunbury delin.

J. Bretherton f.

Publish'd as the Act directs 3^d February 1773. By J. Bretherton No. 134 New Bond Street

Engraving. One of a series of illustrations to Tristram Shandy, see Nos. 5213–15. Dr. Slop and Susannah exchanging abuse. Susannah (r.) stands behind the cradle in which lies the infant Tristram, a plaster across his nose. A lighted candle is in her l. hand; with her r. she holds the bridge of her nose, looking at the doctor with a face of fury, her mouth wide open. Dr. Slop stands scowling, his legs wide apart, the cataplasm in a ladle in his r. hand; he threatens Susannah with his fist. His wig is blazing, his hat lies on the floor. A chair has been overturned and lies by the cradle. Obadiah is hurrying into the room from the l., a basin in his r. hand, a bottle under his r. arm, a chamber-pot in his l. hand. Behind is a screen, nine leaves of which are visible. A large grandfather clock pointing to 6.15 stands by the wall (r.); a table with two medicine bottles appears from behind the screen. On the wall are two portraits.

Beneath the design is engraved,

“Susannah, rowing one way & looking another, set fire to Dr. Slop's Wig, which being somewhat bushy & unctuous withal was as soon burnt as kindled—You impudent Whore cried Slop (for what is passion but a wild Beast) You impudent Whore cried Slop getting upright with the Cataplasm in his hand—I never was at the destruction of any body's nose said Susannah, which is more than you can say;—Is it? cried Slop, throwing the Cataplasm in her face—Yes it is cried Susannah returning the Complement with what was left in the pan”—Vide Tris. Shandy vol. 4.

9⅞ × 14⅞ in.

5217 CONCERTO SPIRITUALE.

Bretherton f.

Publish'd 23^d March 1773.

Engraving after Bunbury. Three men playing musical instruments: A fat man (l.) sitting in a chair plays a viol da gamba, perhaps a portrait of Abel, see No. 5163. A thin man in profile to the l. plays a flute. He wears a bag-wig, laced coat, ruffled shirt and sword. A piece of music protrudes from his coat pocket. Behind, a stout man plays a horn.

9 × 7¼ in.

5218 THE SLUMBERS OF RAGOTIN INTERRUPTED.Mr Bunbury del.Scarron. B. 2^dJ^s Bretherton fPublish'd May 29th 1773.

Engraving. An illustration to Scarron's Roman Comique (1651), Book II, ch. xx. The scene is the room of an inn. Ragotin, almost bald, sits in an upright chair wearing a long sword and jack boots; his legs do not reach the ground. The ram (l.), on its hind-legs, is about to butt him. The encounter is watched by a man who leans on the back of his chair, by another seated behind the ram, and by a third standing between Ragotin and a group of two ladies and a man on the r., one being Inezilla, who had just been reading her novel. Behind this group are the curtains of a bed. $7\frac{3}{4} \times 12\frac{3}{8}$ in.

LE FAMEUX BLAISE LACOSTE, LIMOSIN F:R:S.

See No. 4758—1 Jan. 1773

A MILITIA MEETING.

See No. 4759—2 Jan. 1773

THE X.MAS ACADEMICS . . .

See No. 4728—20 Jan. 1773

JOLLUX.

See No. 4726—6 Feb. 1773

THE SALUTATION TAVERN.

See No. 4716—20 Mar. 1773

. . . PORTRAIT OF THE INIMITABLE M^R JAMES MOSS . . .

See No. 4721—15 May 1773

SNIP ANGLOIS.

See No. 4748—20 Dec. 1773

SNIP FRANCOIS.

See No. 4749—20 Dec. 1773

[UNIDENTIFIED SATIRICAL PORTRAIT]

See No. 4762—23 Dec. 1773

5219 and numbers from Volume IVSeries of mezzotints published by Carington Bowles.¹5219 AN EVENINGS INVITATION; WITH A WINK FROM THE BAGNIO.

269 Printed for Carington Bowles, Map & Printseller, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, c. Jan. 1773.]

Mezzotint (coloured impression). Street scene. A fashionably dressed man walks (r. to l.) between two prostitutes, who have seized him by the shoulders and arm. One (r.) hands to a man who lurks behind her a handkerchief she has taken from his pocket. A link-boy walks in front of the party holding his torch downwards. Through the glass panes which fill the upper part of the door of the bagnio (l.) a woman smiles and beckons. Over the door is inscribed WINES. The scene is probably under the piazza in Covent Garden. The women are fashionably dressed. $12\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ in. 'Caricatures', i, p. 186. B.M.L., Tab. 526.

¹ No. 4533 (but not the reduced version) has the imprint of Bowles and Carver.

BEAU MORDECAI INSPIR'D. (270) See No. 4525—c. 1773

THE BLOOMING PEACH AND SHRIVELL'D APPLE . . . (271)
See No. 4526—c. 1773

DOCKING THE MACARONI (273) See No. 4527—19 Jan. 1773

P'SHA YOU FLATTER ME. (274) See No. 4528—1773

A DECOY FOR THE OLD AS WELL AS THE YOUNG. (278)
See No. 4529—1773

THE BARGAIN STRUCK, OR VIRTUE CONQUER'D BY TEMP-TATION. (281) See No. 4530—1773

IRISH PEG IN A RAGE . . . (283) See No. 4531—29 May 1773

THE OLD BEAU IN AN EXTASY. (286)
See No. 4532—13 July 1773

THE MODERN BEAU IN DISTRESS.
See No. 4590—c. 1773

THE CHURCH CHORISTERS. (289) See No. 4533—1773
After Grimm.

Also a reduced version, No. 206 in the smaller series, pub. 2 Sept. 1773.

5220, 5221 and numbers from Volume IV

Similar mezzotints issued by other publishers.

5220 MISS MACARONI AND HER GALLANT AT A PRINT-SHOP.

J. Smith pinx^t [J. R. Smith].

J. Smith fecit.

Publish'd April 2nd 1773. Printed for John Bowles, at N^o 13 in Cornhill.

Mezzotint. Four persons gazing at the prints displayed in a print-shop closely resembling though not identical with that in No. 3758 (1774) which is evidently by the same artist. A man and woman (l.) in macaroni dress stand together, he holds her l. hand smiling, and pointing at one of the prints with his r. hand. She turns aside smiling behind her fan. Two men (r.) stand in conversation; one (r.) points out to the other, who is in back view, both hands held up in astonishment, one of the prints in the top row, apparently that of Wesley. A dog befouls the foot of the man facing the shop-window.

Beneath the title is engraved,

*While Macaroni and his Mistress here,
At other Characters, in Picture, sneer,
To the vain Couple is but little known,
How much deserving Ridicule their own.*

Some of the prints displayed are identical with those in No. 3758, the shop of Carington Bowles. In this design, however, the prints are displayed without margins. In both shops the highest row consists of portraits which extend into the row below (r.). All are of leaders of religion, among whom Bunyan, John Wesley, and Whitefield are conspicuous. That of Whitefield is the much reproduced mezzotint by Greenwood after Hone, published by Carington Bowles, 1769. The others are humorous mezzotints including The Paintress of Macaroni's, No. 4582, The Macaroni Painter, No. 4520, Lady Betty Bustle, No. 5094.

The print illustrates the close relationship between the two firms of Bowles who were partners in many prints. In spite of the close resemblance with the shop-window of Carington Bowles, as depicted in Nos. 3758 and 6352, it appears to represent 13 Cornhill. The panes are smaller and do not display the margins of the prints, the architectural detail above the window is different and the prints appear to be on a large frame fixed outside the actual window, part of which appears on the extreme r. Reproduced, R. T. Halsey, Boston Port Bill, Grolier Club, 1904, p. xvi.

12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Cheylesmore Collection.

THE SCRAMBLE, OR OLD GRIPUS PLUNDER'D BY HIS YOUNG WIFE.

See No. 4584—2 April 1773

P. Dawe. Pub. John Bowles.

5221 [THE MACARONI. A REAL CHARACTER AT THE LATE MASQUERADE.]

[Philip Dawe fecit

Publish'd as the Act directs July 3^d 1773. Printed for John Bowles at N^o 13 in Cornhill.]

Mezzotint. Proof before letters on which is written 'Pantheon Macaroni'. The title and publication line are supplied from an impression belonging to Mr. W. T. Spencer of New Oxford Street. A macaroni dressed in a grotesque exaggeration of the prevailing fashion. His hair is in a high pyramid with side curls, an enormous club hangs down his back. A small three-cornered hat is perched on the top of his hair. He wears a large nosegay. He stands in a mincing attitude by a toilet-table, draped with muslin on which are boxes and toilet jars, the latter inscribed essence and Rose. The wall is panelled and ornamented with mouldings; the floor is carpeted and there are two cane-seated chairs of an unusual pattern.¹ Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xx; J. T. Smith, A Book for a Rainy Day, ed. W. Whitten, 1905, p. 265. $12\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

THE ANTIQUARIAN PUZZLED . . .

See No. 4772—15 May 1773

P. Dawe. Pub. W. Humphrey.

COUNSELLOR COZEN CONSULTING CASES.

See No. 4788—1 Sept. 1773

Pub. H. Bryer.

¹ This probably represents the dress of 'Lord P——' as a macaroni buck at the Pantheon masquerade of 12 May 1773. See Oxford Magazine, x. p. 179, where his dress is described.

POLITICAL SATIRES

5222 MERLIN.¹

[1 Jan. 1774]

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, i. 684. A sequel to No. 4957. Merlin (l.) points with his wand to a procession of the sovereigns of Europe which circles round him, moving from l. to r. He stands within a circle bordered with cabalistic signs, a globe stands beside him; he wears long robes and his high cap is decorated with a skull and cross-bones. First walks a sovereign with three heads, the centre head wearing a crown, between a woman's head with ass's ears and a man's head with stag's horns. This appears to represent the king of Denmark, deceived by his wife and Struensee, an episode which belongs to 1772, see Nos. 4945, 4946, 4950, 4956. Next walks a crowned personage carrying a halter in his r. hand, and in the l. a Book of Prayer which he is reading. Perhaps Frederick, called the Hereditary Prince, son of the Dowager Queen of Denmark, who had conspired against Struensee and had shown great vindictiveness towards him.

Next walks Catharine of Russia in a furred robe. Her r. hand is on the neck of an oriental who kneels beside her, whom she appears to be strangling; another oriental wearing a jewelled turban stands beside her clasping his hands in despair. With her l. hand she holds a monkey by the arm. The two orientals probably represent the Grand Signior of Turkey (in allusion to the Russo-Turkish War, 1768-74, and Pugachoff, the Cossack who led a rising against Catharine (1773-5)).

Next is a sovereign whose crown is breaking, evidently Stanislaus II of Poland. Behind him walk two sovereigns in consultation, one holding a wolf or dog on a leash, and in his l. hand a mask; the other holds an open map inscribed Map [of Po]land: probably the Emperor Joseph II and Frederick II of Prussia discussing the Partition of Poland. Behind them walks a prince wearing a feathered hat who appears absorbed in his snuff-box (perhaps the king of Spain). Then comes a sovereign wearing a crown and a long dressing-gown rubbing his eyes as if sleepy. He is perhaps William V, Stadholder of Holland, who became sleepy after the slightest exertion; he was not, however, a sovereign prince.² After him walks the king of France, indicated by the fleur-de-lys which decorates his crown and his robes; he holds an oval miniature, the portrait of a woman, probably intended for Mme. du Barry. After him walks George III, carrying an infant, whom he is feeding (Prince Augustus Frederick, born Jan. 1773). Last in the procession is a countryman with a hay-rake, smoking a pipe, and wearing the hat shaped like an inverted flower-pot which indicates Holland in caricature.

In the background on a hill sits the Pope wearing his triple crown; his papal chair is tottering and from his hand, raised as if in alarm, falls a paper inscribed Jesuits & treac[hery]. In 1773 Clement XIV (d. 1774) suppressed the Jesuits, a shock to the prestige of the Papacy, and the cause of calumnies which probably hastened his death, which was ascribed, possibly with truth, to poison. See Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 401-3; Cambridge Mod. Hist., vi. 594-6. For the Partition of Poland see ibid., Nos. 4957, 4958, 5110, 5229.

¹ Indexed as Merlin: A Picture of Europe for 1773.

² Gustavus III of Sweden appears to be absent from the procession, though in view of his recent coup d'état he might be expected to figure prominently.

 $3\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5223 ROBBED BETWEEN SUN AND SUN [1 Jan. 1774]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, x. 502 (folding plate). Lord Holland with his two sons Charles and Stephen seated at a table. Each has the profile of a fox but wears a wig. Lord Holland (centre) in a high-back chair, looks towards Stephen (r.) holding up his hands with an expression of horror. Stephen is asleep, beside him on the table is a small phial or medicine-bottle. Charles (l.), very alert, picks his father's pocket, taking out a purse. On the ground at his side are emblems of gambling: a dice box, dice, and a book inscribed Hoyle. Beneath the table crouches a demon: he is looking at Charles, and holds in each claw a chain which is round Charles's leg, his tail is wound round Stephen's ankle. Over Charles's head is engraved Hic Niger est. (With his black hair and eyebrows he was what was then called 'a black man', cf. Walpole, Letters, viii. 359.) Lord Holland wears an old-fashioned tie-wig. Both the sons are fashionably dressed, and wear bag-wigs, that of Charles being a very high toupet in the French fashion.

This appears to illustrate the last verse of a poem called 'To the Young Cub on his keeping Madame H——n—I' [Heinel] (see No. 5145) printed in the Westminster Magazine, Sept. 1773:

From sons what Sire such blessing reaps!
 One never wakes—One never sleeps;
 Yet both partake his bounty:
 The Law says, If a man's undone,
 And pillag'd thus 'tween Sun and Sun
 He's free to sue the County.

In the winter of 1773-4 Lord Holland paid Charles's debts to the extent of £140,000. The print is described as representing 'a committee lately held on ways and means by a certain nest of F——s that infested the neighbourhood; whether the subject of debate was to find out some fresh method of satisfying the veracity [sic] of the old one; to preserve the plunder already got, or to repair the destruction made by the folly of the young Cubs, is uncertain. . . .' Stephen Fox was called the Sleepy Macaroni, see Nos. 4648, 5114, &c.

E. Hawkins (MS. index) mentions another impression or version enclosed within a coiled snake.

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 10\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5224 STRIKE—BUT HEAR. [n.d. Feb. 1774]

Engraving. John Horne stands in the foreground, declaiming at the bar of the House of Commons. His r. arm is raised; his l. hand is in his breeches pocket. From the r. of the design the mace appears. On the other side of the bar the Speaker sits in his chair. On each side of him are three rows of members, many of them without heads; a number of heads with pendent bag-wigs are floating above the Speaker's head, showing that many of the members have lost their heads in excitement.

This depicts the appearance of John Horne at the bar of the House on 18 Feb. 1774. Horne's friend Tooke had appealed to him for help to prevent a pending enclosure Bill by de Grey which would pre-judge a case in litigation between himself and de Grey concerning the common-rights of Tooke's estate at Purley. The passing of the Bill was apparently inevitable, but Horne published in the Public Advertiser a nicely-timed letter to the Speaker, signed 'Strike but Hear', which was a deliberate and violent libel. He calculated that the House would be so exasperated at the breach of privilege that the business of the day would be neglected, that he would be summoned to the bar, and would have an opportunity of explaining his motives and the injustice of the Bill. The event was according to plan: the members lost their heads and clamoured to the Speaker for the punishment of the libel. First Woodfall and then Horne were called to the bar. Horne made his speech; both were discharged; time was given for further consideration of the Bill and the clauses obnoxious to Tooke were dropped. See Parl. Hist., xvii. 1005 ff.; Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 289 ff.; Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, iii. 68-9; A. Stephens, Memoirs of John Horne Tooke, 1813, i. 422-30.

7 × 4½ in.

5225 THE ORACLE. REPRESENTING, BRITANNIA, HIBERNIA, SCOTIA, & AMERICA, AS ASSEMBLED TO CONSULT THE ORACLE, ON THE PRESENT SITUATION OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS, TIME ACTING AS PRIEST. DEDICATED TO CONCORD.

[30 Mar. 1774]

Inv^t Drawn & Engrav'd by J. Dixon.

Kempes Row Facing Ranelagh Walk Chelsea

Mezzotint. Time, with a magic lantern, throws upon a curtain an allegorical vision of the triumph of Concord over Discord, which he is showing to figures representing Britannia, Hibernia, Scotia, and America. Time (l.), his scythe and two books on the ground beside him, supports his lantern on a globe on which he leans his elbow, he points at the vision on the curtain with his l. hand, his mouth open as if declaiming. On the globe is a paper inscribed, Unite. Britannia, with her shield and spear, sits between Hibernia (l.) to whom she turns, and Scotia. Hibernia's l. arm is round Britannia's shoulder, her harp is beside her. Scotia stands looking at Time's vision. All are dressed in pseudo-classical draperies in the manner of Reynolds, those of Scotia being of tartan. Opposite them (r.) America sits on a bale of goods, another bale behind her, representing the commerce of the colonies. She is in T.Q. back view, gazing at the vision. She has a feathered head-dress, is partly draped, like an Amazon, with bare arms and legs; in her l. hand is a bow, a quiver of arrows is slung on her back.

In the circle of light thrown on the screen Concord is putting Discord to flight. Concord, a crowned figure, a star on her breast holding out a bow, reversed and unstrung, advances (l. to r.) escorted by a winged figure wearing a medallion on her breast which resembles Britannia's shield. Behind walk together Plenty (or Commerce) holding a cornucopia, and Liberty holding up her staff surmounted with the Phrygian cap of liberty. Last walk Truth holding up a mirror, and Justice holding out scales. Cherubs fly above their heads; the foremost holds up a drapery on which is engraved Publick Credit; three are holding up an orrery. Before them flies Fame blowing her trumpet. Before this procession (r.) hag-like figures are being put to flight. One has two faces, the fangs of a serpent darting from one of the mouths. Another holds up a serpent in his hand. A large coiled serpent hisses on the extreme r. The circle of light from the lantern falls on a heavily draped curtain.

This print indicates the renewed interest in America caused by news of the Boston Tea Party which first appeared in the London Evening Post, 20 Jan. 1774. On 10 Mar. North read to the House of Commons the king's message on 'the outrageous proceedings at Boston . . .'. Parl. Hist., xvii. 1159. The first print on American affairs since those on the 'Boston Massacre', 1770, see No. 4839.

Exhibited at the exhibition of the Society of Arts in 1774. It is the basis of a well-known satire published in Paris, see No. 5490.

Chaloner Smith, i. 218.

20 × 23 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5226 THE ABLE DOCTOR, OR AMERICA SWALLOWING THE BITTER DRAUGHT. [1 May 1774]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xliii. 184. America, a partly-draped female figure, is being held down by Lord Mansfield (r.) in judge's wig and robes, while North, holding her by the throat, pours the contents of a tea-pot down her mouth. America ejects the tea in a stream directed at North's face. From his pocket hangs a paper inscribed Boston Port Bill. Sandwich (l.) kneels, holding America down by an ankle, while he lifts the edge of her draperies and peers beneath them. Behind Mansfield (r.) stands Bute in Scots cap and kilt, holding a drawn sword, its blade inscribed Military Law; pistols are thrust through his belt. Behind America stands Britannia resting one hand on her shield; she averts her face and covers her eyes with her hand. Behind Sandwich (l.) stand two men dressed in the French and Spanish fashions and representing France and Spain or the monarchs of France and Spain; the order of the Golden Fleece hangs from the neck of Spain. They stand close together, pointing towards America with expressions of interest and concern.

In the foreground is a torn document inscribed Boston petition. In the background is the sea; on the horizon and on a minute scale are the spires of a town surrounded by ships, above is engraved, Boston cannonaded.

The print illustrates a report of the debates on the Boston Port Bill: the text of the Bill is given in full because it is 'of vast importance to the mercantile part of the nation and indeed to the whole British Empire', pp. 165-85. The Boston Port Bill became law on 31 Mar. (one of the 'five intolerable acts') passed as a punishment for the 'Boston tea-party' (16 Dec. 1773): the port of Boston was closed and its rights transferred to Salem till compensation should be made for the destruction of the tea. Boston, of course, was not cannonaded, Gage was its military and civil governor and he closed the harbour in accordance with the Act on 1 June, see Nos. 5227, 5228, 5230, 5236. The 'Boston petition' is presumably the petition of Americans in London to the House of Commons against the Boston Port Bill, Parl. Hist., xvii. 1189-92. For other references to the tax on tea see Nos. 5232, 5282, 5490, 5491, 6190. For the 'Tea Party' see Van Tyne, Causes of the War of Independence, 1921, ch. xix.

Reproduced in Bernard Fay's Franklin, 1929, p. 362, but incorrectly dated 1770.

A copy signed P. Revere Sculp. was published in the Royal American Magazine, vol. i (June 1774), Stauffer, No. 2673. Reproduced, Propyläen-Weltgeschichte, ed. W. Goetz, vi. 1931, p. 461, J. T. Adams, Hist. of the American People, 1933, p. 93.

$3\frac{5}{8} \times 5\frac{15}{16}$

5227 THE WHITEHALL PUMP.

[1 May 1774]

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, ii. 168. Lord North pumps water upon the prostrate figure of Britannia while he looks at her through his spy-glass. On the top of the tall pump is a head of George III in profile to the l. adorned with a laurel wreath. Britannia holds her spear in her r. hand, beneath her is her shield; she lies across a Red Indian brave, also prostrate, and holding a knife, who represents America. Beneath them on the ground are a number of documents. Behind North (l.) is a group of ministerialists who are approving spectators. Two judges, each holding a document, appear to be Apsley, the Lord Chancellor, and Mansfield. Behind Mansfield stands Sandwich. Three others are less prominent and cannot be identified. Above their heads is an open window from which look Lord Holland, with a fox's head, and a companion wearing a ribbon who may be intended for Bute. On the r. two men hold out their hands in protest. One is Wilkes; his companion, who wears a long gown and bands, may be intended for Lord Camden.

The accompanying text explains the 'Vision'. North, under Scottish influence, is pumping upon 'that daft unruly body Mistress Britannia . . . with her child America, and all her boasted rattles and gew-gaws such as Magna Charta, Coronation Oaths, Bill of Rights, Charters of Companies and Corporations, Remonstrances, Petitions . . .'. 'All the miscreants and tools of State' rejoice at the sight. Round the head on the pump, though surrounded with fogs, could be read the words,

His brows thick fogs instead of glories grace,
And lambent dulness plays around his face.

The vision was inspired by 'the Dissentions of our Colonies and the Fever of the Mother Country'. It is an attack on the Bills against Massachusetts on account of the Boston Tea Party, see No. 5226, which were discussed between 1 Mar. and 25 Apr. Parl. Hist., xvii. 1163 ff.; see Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, iii. 80 ff. See also Nos. 5228, &c.

$3\frac{15}{16} \times 5\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5228 THE MITRED MINUET.

[1 May 1774]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xliii. 312. Four bishops wearing mitres dance together, each holding the hand of the one opposite him so that four hands cross in the middle. They dance round the Quebec Bill which lies on the floor. Other bishops, not wearing mitres, are seated in a semicircle behind them, watching with approval. On the l. are three figures who appear to be directing the dance: Lord Bute in highland dress plays the bagpipes, next him is Lord North pointing to the dancers, and on North's l. is a minister wearing a ribbon. Above their heads flies the Devil pointing to North with his r. hand, his l. forefinger laid against his nose. The scene is a panelled room.

The explanatory text is a violent attack on the Quebec Act, passed 22 June 1774, from the No-Popery standpoint: the bishops' 'crossing of hands was to show their approbation and countenance of the Roman religion'.

The Quebec Act, though not a punitive measure, was classed with the three acts passed against Massachusetts, the Boston Port Act, the Massachusetts Government Act, the Administration of Justice Act, and with the Quartering Act as the five intolerable Acts, rousing far the most opposition though it was 'dictated by an enlightened liberalism . . . to secure the loyalty of the French Canadians. To these it granted complete religious liberty and the restitution of their peculiar legal and political institutions'. S. E. Morison and H. S. Commager, The Growth of the American Republic, New York, 1930, p. 21. See also R. Coupland, The Quebec Act, 1928; Cavendish, Debates on the Bill for the Government of Quebec, 1889. Chatham on 18 June denounced it in the House of Lords as 'a most cruel, oppressive and odious measure, tearing up justice and every good principle by the roots'. Parl. Hist., xviii. 1402. See also the King's Speech, ibid., 1407. For the Act see also Nos. 5233, 5236, 5282, 5285, 5286. No. 5681 perhaps relates to this Act.

This plate was used in the Hibernian Magazine, iv. 451, Aug. 1774. It was copied by Paul Revere for the Royal American Magazine, October 1774, Stauffer, No. 2688.

$3\frac{11}{16} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5229 THE POLISH PLUMB-CAKE.

[1 Sept. 1774]

ƒ. Lodge sculp.

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, ii. 416. Four monarchs sit round a table on which is a round 'cake' divided into four sections marked Russia, Germany, Prussia, and (smaller than the others) France. In the centre sits the Emperor, crowned, a drawn sword in his hand. On his r. is Catharine of Russia in profile to the r. holding a cleaver. On his l. is Frederick of Prussia, wearing a hat with a cockade; he also holds a drawn sword. In the foreground (l.) sits the French king (who in age more resembles Louis XV than his grandson who succeeded him in May 1774); he holds a knife, and his portion is much smaller than those of the other three. Behind (l.) is the king of Poland weeping, his crown about to fall from his head. On the r. stands a man in a jewelled turban flourishing his sword, probably the Grand Signior. From under the table-cloth appears a demon who points at the king of Prussia. Beneath the design is engraved,

*Thy Kingdom Stanis'l'us, is now at stake,
To four such stomachs, 'tis a mere plumb-cake.*

The accompanying text explains that Frederick 'a King more savage than an Indian', 'lets the Emperor of Germany [sic] and the Empress of Russia go snacks; while he offers the King of France a share to keep him from attacking Germany'. The demon says 'though they have executed his design they shall not long enjoy the plunder!' For the partition of Poland see also Nos. 4957, 4958, 5110, 5124, 5222.

$6\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{5}{16}$ in.

5230 A POLITICAL LESSON.J. Dixon invenit et fecitPublished 7. Sep^r 1774. Printed for John Bowles, at N^o 13 in Cornhill.Pr. 1^s 6^d

Mezzotint. A black horse, rearing violently, has just thrown its rider, whose head has struck a mile-stone and broken it across. The part still standing is inscribed To Boston VI Miles. Behind it (r.) is a sign-post inscribed To Salem. The rider lies on his back, clutching his head with his r. hand, his legs are in the air. He wears a laced coat and waistcoat and gloves, his hat and wig are on the ground. The horse is looking wildly down at its rider. The scene is a narrow country road, with bushes in the foreground and low mountains in the distance.

General Gage, who succeeded Hutchinson as Governor of Massachusetts, removed the legislative assembly from Boston to Salem (May–June 1774), the Port of Boston having been closed under the Boston Port Act. All shipping for Boston was forced to enter by Salem or Marblehead and thence through Cambridge by wagons. The result was to inflame the opposition of the colony to England. Five representatives to a General Congress were elected and the subscribers to a Solemn League and Covenant pledged themselves to suspend all commercial intercourse with Great Britain until the Boston Port Act was repealed; and in a number of ways Gage was defied and insulted. The rider may represent either Gage or Great Britain overcome by the resistance of Massachusetts to the penal measures against the colony, cf. No. 5549.

The manner of this mezzotint is that of the history painter, not of political satire. Reproduced, R. T. Halsey, Boston Port Bill, p. 157.

$12\frac{15}{16} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5231 BOREAS.

[1 Oct. 1774]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine,¹ xi. 276. A freely-drawn caricature of Lord North H.L. in profile to the r. He looks through an eye-glass held in two fingers. In the lower l. corner of the print is a small head inscribed Æolus, its inflated cheeks direct a blast of air against North's back. Beneath is engraved, I Promise to reduce the Americans. The figure of North appears to be copied from No. 4969.

$5\frac{3}{8} \times 3\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5232 A NEW METHOD OF MACARONY MAKING, AS PRACTISED AT BOSTON IN NORTH AMERICA.

Printed for Carington Bowles, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Published 12 Oct^r 1774.

Mezzotint. No. 217 in Bowles's smaller series. Two Bostonians tarring and feathering a customs officer. The victim, completely covered with feathers, kneels on one knee, his hands clasped. A rope is round his neck, its frayed end held by the American on the r. He looks round with a face of anguish to the other American (l.) who holds a large teapot, the spout of which is against the feathered man's r. shoulder. Behind is a gallows with a broken rope, suggesting that the victim has already endured a partial hanging. The man with the teapot wears a large plain hat, the figure 45 written large both on the crown and the upturned brim. The other Bostonian holds a club over his l. shoulder, he wears a large favour in his hat showing that he is one of the Sons of Liberty. Both men look grinning at their victim; both wear striped breeches. Trees form a background.

¹ The only political satire in the Oxford Magazine, vol. xi (1774).

A satire on the treatment given to John Malcom or Malcomb, an unpopular Commissioner of Customs, at Boston, as recorded in the English newspapers shortly before its publication. On 27 Jan. 1774 he had been tarred and feathered, led to the gallows with a rope round his neck, on the way there being forced as a torture to drink enormous quantities of tea. His offence was in attempting to collect Customs duties; it was not connected with the Boston Tea Party. R. T. Halsey, The Boston Port Bill, 1904, pp. 77-82. For his memorial to the Government of Massachusetts begging for relief and redress and his petition to the King for compensation and employment see Hist. MSS. Comm., Dartmouth MSS., i, p. 348, ii, pp. 192, 263.

Wilkes was a national hero in the colonies and '45' a patriotic symbol. 'Liberty Tree' at Boston was reported to be decorated with 'Number 45, Wilkes and liberty'. London Chronicle, 13-16 Aug. 1768.

Reproduced, Social England, ed. Traill, 1904, v, p. 447.

5½ × 4½ in.

A larger version with the same date, not in the British Museum, was published by Bowles as No. 306 in his series of folio mezzotints. The title ends at the word 'Boston', and beneath are the lines,

*For the Custom House Officers landing the Tea,
They Tarr'd him, and Feather'd him just as you see,
And they drench'd him so well both behind and before,
That he begg'd for God's sake they would drench him no more.*

Reproduced R. T. Halsey, op. cit., p. 92.

Another print, a folio line engraving, was issued by Carington Bowles on 2 June 1775 with the same title as No. 5232 and the verses quoted above. Malcomb is being lowered by ropes from the window of his house into a cart, before receiving his 'American suit'. R. T. Halsey, op. cit., 121 n.

Another mezzotint depicting the same incident as No. 5232 probably by P. Dawe, was published by Sayer and Bennett, 31 Oct. 1774 with the title, Plate I. The Bostonians Paying the Excise-man, or Tarring & Feathering. Reproduced R. T. Halsey, op. cit., p. 83 and J. T. Adams, Revolutionary New England, p. 39. Malcomb, on his knees, tarred and feathered, his head pressed backwards, is being forced by five men to drink from a teapot; one of them holds a rope which is round his neck. They are under Liberty Tree (r.) from a branch of which dangles a rope. On its trunk is a placard inscribed Stamp Act, upside down. Behind (l.) is a ship with furled sails from which masked men are emptying tea-chests into the water (the Boston tea-party). Nos. 5241, 5284 belong to the same series.

The treatment of Malcomb is also the subject of a French engraving, John Malcom, by Godefroy in Recueil d'Estampes représentant . . . la Guerre qui a procuré l'Indépendance aux États unis . . . (Print Department). Malcom, 'ce fier maltôtier', is being lowered by ropes from his house into a cart. Collection de Vinck, No. 1164.

5233 [FAME'S REWARDS.]¹*Terry del. et sculp.Engraw'd for the Whimsical Repository. According to Act, October 1st 1774. Pater Noster Row.*

Engraving. In a rotunda whose walls are decorated with Ionic columns and garlands, Fame stands on a high cylindrical pedestal, blowing her trumpet. She is a winged figure, partly draped, in her l. hand is a second trumpet. Beside her stands a boy with butterfly wings, wearing a bow and quiver, in his r. hand he holds a flower. Four other winged boys fly down from the pedestal with gifts for a crowd of suppliants who kneel below. One of them offers to a naval officer a pair of crutches, a wooden leg, and a paper inscribed Half Pay; the officer holds a print of a man-of-war decorated with flags; his ankle is in a sling. A parson is about to receive a bishop's mitre and a paper inscribed Living; his foot rests on a Bible, beneath which is a paper inscribed Protest^t Religion, probably a reference to the Quebec Act, see No. 5228, &c. Behind him a famished-looking man, holding a large volume inscribed Philosophy, is being offered a paper inscribed No literary Property. (In the case of Donaldson v. Beckett, 1774, the House of Lords decided that the Act of 1709 had abolished the perpetual copyright of the common law. See Parl. Hist. xvii, pp. 953, 1077 ff., 1400 ff.; Hume, Letters, 1932, ii. 286-9.) A fashionably-dressed man kneels on Britannia's shield beneath which lies M. Charta, a torn document; across it lies the cap of Liberty on its staff and a paper inscribed General Warrants; he is being offered a fool's cap and a collar or circlet attached to a chain. A man in legal robes is being given a bag of money and an order in the form of a Maltese cross.

In the foreground stands a small blindfolded cupid, holding an arrow and a heart. On the l. stand two spectators: one is evidently Sir John Fielding the magistrate, wearing a gown, his eyes bandaged as he was accustomed to sit at Bow Street, he holds a cross-hilted sword, emblem of Justice; the other is a military officer with a wooden leg. Beneath the design is engraved,

*Plaudits of Fame, tho' Mortals prize!
Fancy's the God they Idolize.*

Cf. No. 5275, also a satire on social injustice.

6 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5234 A TUB TO THE WHALE OR THE RETORT COURTEOUS TO CITY REMONSTRANCES. [n.d. c. 1774]

Sold by Mrs Sledge next Southampton Street Covent Garden & Mr Swan facing Norfolk Street Strand, price Six pence.

Engraving. A freely-drawn representation of the gateway to St. James's Palace. From a window over the gate lean three men who have just thrown out a barrel labelled The Coin Act: in the centre is the king saying: This Coin Act will fully employ them to take of their attention to my immaculate Ministry. On his r. is Bute wearing a Scots cap; he says: Hoot awa ye Scum of the Earth I'll teach ye doctrine of Subordination. On his l. is a judge, evidently Mansfield. A man who holds out a pair of scales is about to enter the palace; he wears a long gown held up by the devil who points at him. Beneath the man with the scales is engraved: twas kind to help little Pinchy to a new Trade. Beneath the devil is engraved: I am always sure of my Friends here. Behind the devil walks a man in a furred alderman's gown holding his hat, he says: I hope my Lord you will secure me for the City again. He must be Thomas Harley, M.P. for the City of London, 1768-74, and the leader of the Court Party in the City. At the general election of 1774 he resigned his seat for the City and unsuccessfully contested the county of Hereford, see No. 4953, &c. Behind (l.) stand three Scotsmen in kilts talking together; one says: let them get a Bank in Air or muckle penny Notes, an allusion to the insolvent position of the Ayr Bank (Douglas Heron and Co.), see Hume, Letters, ed. Greig, 1932, ii. 263, 265, and No. 4961. Another says: this will plague the Loons & humble their pride. In the foreground (l.) a man in macaroni dress is accosting a courtesan, she holds him at arm's length, holding out a pair of scales and saying: You Maccaronys are light Chaps y' Gold may be as light as yourself I'll weigh first. On the r. is a sentry-box before which stands a grenadier at attention. Beside him (r.) is a bearded Jew with a satisfied expression holding money-bags. A dog barks at him.

¹ No title.

One of several satires on the Coin Act, see Nos. 3759, 4534 (1774), 5128, 5158. Pinchy is Christopher Pinchbeck, satirically called the King's Friend, see index; the Coin Act will be profitable to him as a maker of scales. For City Remonstrances see Nos. 4380, 4386, &c. The latest was that of 13 Mar. 1773, Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 180-5; Sharpe, London and the Kingdom, iii. 135-7; Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, ii. 462-5.

$4\frac{3}{16} \times 6\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5235 THE VERY WISE ALDERMEN OF GOTHAM, SCRATCHING FOR A MAYOR. [n.d. c. Oct. 1774]

Engraving. Probably from a magazine.¹ A throng of figures in furred gowns, most of whom have animals' heads, surround a table, on which are open polling books, with triple columns of names. At the further side of the table sits Alderman Bull, with a bull's head, writing with a pen in his cloven hoof. On his r. hand is Wilkes. Behind stands a man with a goat's beard and horns probably intended for Watkin Lewes. Harley as an ape wearing spurred boots enters from the r.

At the election for the mayoralty in Oct. 1774 Wilkes was head of the poll, next being Bull, the actual mayor. These two were therefore returned to the Court of Aldermen, eleven of them voted for Wilkes, while only two, Townsend and Oliver, voted for Bull. Sharpe, London and the Kingdom, iii. 143-4. Cf. Nos. 5129, 5130, 5131.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5236 THE DISSOLUTION OF P—T [Parliament]. [1 Nov. 1774]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xliii. 464. A street scene, in which a stage coach drawn by six horses and laden with passengers inside and out is being driven at full speed from r. to l. They drive past a posting-inn, with an open gateway over which, as a sign, is a head of Wilkes in an oval; beneath it are the words John Wilkes Esq^r Neat Post Chaises. To the postilion on the near leader is attached a label inscribed Galloping Liberty. The coach-door is inscribed For the Corrupted Boroughs. Five passengers (ministerialist candidates) sit inside the coach, fashionably dressed. On the roof sit four men, two flourish clubs; one says: May the Patriots ride uppermost. The large boot or basket attached to the back of the coach holds six passengers; it is inscribed: We are honest though poor, or who would be golted [sic] thus for his Country! The coachman turns round to the passengers saying: I will not overset Ye, if Ye dont overset Yourselfes. On the ground are papers inscribed: Generall Warrants (see No. 4065); Boston Port Bill (see No. 5226); Quebec (see No. 5228, &c.); Incllosures. Bystanders (l. to r.) point and jeer at the coach: A ragged man (l.) sitting on the ground with two wooden legs, one of which is broken off, says: Ah, rot such Members, my Members are better! A ragged woman with two children says: You have Starved me, and my Children. A seated man points at the papers on the ground saying: What a litter they have left behind them. A man (r.) says to his companion: There they go, & the D—I go with them.

¹ From the Sentimental Magazine, Oct. [Nov.] 1773. It relates to the election of 1773 when Bull was chosen by the aldermen, see No. 5129, &c.

The explanation of this 'Vision' is appended to a sarcastic comment on election addresses of individual candidates. The candidates on the roof and in the basket are patriots and the coach was to stop at 'the Wilkes's Head in Brentford'.

Parliament was dissolved suddenly on 30 Sept., about six months before the expiration of its seven years' term, then a very unusual event, see Ann. Reg. 1774, p. 152; Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 375-9. The illegality of General Warrants issued by a Secretary of State had been established by the decisions of Camden (1763-5) arising out of the arrest of Wilkes, and others, for the publication of No. 45 of the North Briton. Throughout the reign of George III, private Bills for the enclosure of common fields, commons, and wastes were exceedingly numerous and very unpopular with cottagers and small farmers, cf. No. 5224. On 20 Oct. 'a vast train of carriages and horses attend Wilkes to Brentford . . .' T. Hutchinson, Diary, i. 267.

$4\frac{1}{16} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5237 THE CUP PRESENTED TO MR. WILKES BY THE CITY OF LONDON IN 1772.

[1 Nov. 1774]

R. Dighton del.

J. June sculp^t.

Engraving. From the Gentleman's Magazine, 1774, p. 457. An ornate two-handled cup with a lid. It is decorated in relief with the City Arms and with a scene representing the assassination of Julius Caesar under which is inscribed:

*May every Tyrant feel
The keen deep Searchings of a Patriots steel.*
Churchill.

The maker's name is round the base of the cup:

Morson & Stephenson fec. Ludgate Hill.

In the background are the arms used by Wilkes but without the motto (Arcui meo non confido), cf. No. 5245.

One of the three cups which had been voted by the Common Council 24 Jan. 1772 to the three City patriots, Wilkes, Crosby, and Oliver for their opposition to the House of Commons over the printing of debates, see Nos. 4850, 4853, &c. Cf. No. 4887.

The cup is described on p. 457. The bas relief 'seems to indicate an idea of the meaning of the dagger or short sword in the City Arms very different from what the Antiquarians have hitherto suggested', namely, either the dagger with which Walworth slew Wat Tyler, or the short sword of St. Paul.

The print is perhaps intended as an election warning against the excesses of the patriots.

$6\frac{1}{16} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5238 THE PARL^{MT} DISSOLVED OR THE DEVIL TURN'D FORTUNE TELLER. [n.d. 1774?]

*Engraved for y^e Whimsical Repository.*¹

Design'd, & Engrav'd by G. Terry, Paternoster Row

Engraving. The room of a fortune-teller. The devil seated and holding a wand has just called up the figure of a Red Indian who stands (l.) on the body of a prostrate soldier, on whose high cap are the letters G.R. The Indian, personifying America, holds up the model of a large square building in his r. hand, the floors of which have given way, so that its occupants, crowds of tiny figures, fall headlong to the floor. In his l. hand is a wand with which he points to the building which symbolizes the parliament. Behind him are clouds. Two ministers (r.) who have come to consult the fortune-teller start back, with arms raised in horror at the sight of the Red Indian. One appears to be intended for Lord North, the other wears a peer's robe. A demon looks out from under a tablecloth, holding the end of a cord which is attached to the ankle of the peer. On the wall is either a picture or a vision of Temple Bar, with three heads on poles, suggesting the fate which awaits the heads of the Government, cf. Nos. 5135, 5661, 5969, &c.

On the table under which the demon crouches is a celestial globe, a skull and bones. The fortune-teller and his clients are within a circle of cabalistic signs. On a shelf above his head are large books, the skeleton of a bird, and four bottles, in one of which is a body hanging from a gallows, in another a serpent-like monster.

The Whimsical Repository prints appear in no other year but 1774, so that this almost certainly relates to the dissolution of parliament on 30 Sept. 1774.

$6\frac{5}{16} \times 9\frac{11}{16}$ in.

5239 AN EMBLEMATICAL PILE

Emblematist Inv. et Sculp.

Publish'd Nov^r 7th 1774 Price 6^d

Engraving. A pile of rotten timber, supporting a centre staff which stands on a cube-shaped stone block. These timber props are lashed together with rope, but are splintered, broken, and worm-eaten. From the broken centre staff hangs a tattered flag inscribed Liberty on which is a damaged cap of liberty. On the stone is an hour-glass, the sands of which are nearly run out, surrounded by a serpent. The cube is inscribed Time Shewith all Things. The supports of the drooping standard of liberty are inscribed

¹ These words partly cut off.

Magna Charta; Patriotism; Law; Liberty of Conscience; Religion (broken in half); Liberty of the Press; Common Hall; Bill of Rights (these last two are in good repair and represent the most radical body of the London Corporation and probably the Bill of Rights Society); Juries; Honesty (hanging by a splinter). From one of the posts hangs a broken pair of scales, emblem of Justice.

On the ground in the foreground is a piece of timber from the pile inscribed Elections; across it lies an axe inscribed Bribery & Corruption. On the ground are also Britannia's broken shield, through a hole in which grows a thistle, emblem of Scottish influence; a torn Map of England, and a fragment on which is engraved a Tudor rose.

In the upper r. corner are clouds from which comes a hand holding a pair of scales, beneath which is engraved 1st Sam^l 2^d Chap: 3^d, Verse. ['Talk no more so exceeding proudly; let not arrogancy come out of your mouth: for the Lord is a God of knowledge, and by him actions are weighed.'] From the hand and scales come rays of light.

Parliament was dissolved on 30 Sept. 1774, and the new parliament met on 29 Nov. Cf. No. 5240.

7 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5240 THE CONSTITUTION OF ENGLAND. [n.d. ? 1774]

Engraving. Three sturdy tree-trunks stand against one another in the form of a tripod, bound by a ribbon inscribed Respublica. The centre one is surmounted by a crown, the others, one by a mitre over which is placed a baron's coronet, the other by a smaller crown which appears to represent the top of a sceptre. From the centre hangs a pair of equally balanced scales, in each scale are three scrolls, inscribed respectively (l.) Religion, Law, Authority and (r.) Liberty, Right, Obedience.

Similar in the character of the design to No. 5239 and possibly intended as a counterblast to it.

5 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5241 THE BOSTONIANS IN DISTRESS.

[Philip Dawe?]

Plate II. London, Printed for R. Sayer, & J. Bennett, Map & Printers, N^o 53 Fleet Street, as the Act directs, 19 Nov^r 1774.

Mezzotint. One of a series, see pp. 169, 196-7, No. 5284. A cage inscribed Boston hangs from a branch of Libert[y] Tree. In it are ten hungry Bostonians being fed with fish by three men standing in a boat, at the side of the peninsula on which the tree stands. The men in the cage are lean with lank hair and of puritanic appearance. Those in the front who have secured fish are thrusting them into their mouths, others with wide open mouths and clasped hands beg to be fed. They crouch forward to take the fish which are thrust between the bars in open boxes at the end of poles. One of the Bostonians stands in the centre with uplifted r. hand, holding out in his l. hand a paper inscribed: They cried unto the Lord in their Trouble & he saved them out of their Distress Psal[m] cvii. 13. He wears a minister's bands, and his expression and open-wide mouth shows that he is making a loud lamentation. On the l. a man who is eating a fish held on the end of a pole has thrust his hand through the bars, holding a large bundle of neatly folded documents inscribed Promises. On the r. two men are fighting for a fish, one holds it tight, the other has seized him by the hair and tries to take it from him.

In the open boat at the foot of the tree are two baskets of fish on one of which is a paper inscribed To — from the Committee of —. Of the three men who stand in the boat holding out the fish, one (l.) wears a round hat, jacket, and striped sailor's trousers, another (c.) wears a round hat, apron, and striped jacket; the third wears a broad hat, dark coat, and loose breeches.

In the distance, behind the tree, on the sea-shore are British soldiers; a file of men with muskets over their shoulders drive off a flock of goats, the regimental band (three drums and two fifes) is playing. Cannons pointed at 'Liberty Tree' are in a semicircle on the r. On the sea are four British men-of-war.

When the Port of Boston was closed (see No. 5230, &c.) many were in distress owing to lack of employment and the expense of conveying merchandise by land from Salem. Gifts of food, &c., were sent from all places on the continent, including a contribution of 'two hundred and seven quintals of codfish' from Marblehead, noted in the English press.

In the summer of 1774 Gage ordered some regiments of foot with artillery to be sent to Boston; they were encamped on the ground between the town and the narrow neck of ground, then called Boston Neck, connecting it with the mainland, and a guard was placed there to prevent desertion. This was magnified into an attempt to cut the communication between Boston and its hinterland and to reduce the town by famine. Stedman, History of the American War, 1794, i. 98. 'Liberty Tree', a rallying point for patriots, was cut down for fuel while the British were blockaded in Boston in the winter of 1775-6.

Knowledge of America is shown by the depiction of the Bostonians as undergoing the punishment given in the Colonies to slaves convicted of capital offences who were thus imprisoned and left to starve to death. The artist's irony seems directed against both sides, the English soldiers who direct their cannon at 'Liberty Tree', while the cage, symbol of slavery and barbarity, hangs on Liberty Tree.

Reproduced R. T. Halsey, The Boston Port Bill, p. 172.

13 x 10 in.

5242 THE COLOSSUS OF THE NORTH; OR THE STRIDING BOREAS. [1 Dec. 1774]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xliii. 520 (folding plate). Lord North strides across a stream which flows from the door of Westminster Hall; floating down the stream is a crowd of members of parliament. North's feet are supported on two blocks inscribed Tyranny and Venality. In his r. hand are three papers inscribed Places; Pensions; Lottery Tickets; in his l. is a flaming torch inscribed America. By the stream on the r. stand two figures: Britannia, with shield and spear, holding out a paper inscribed: Those that Should have been my Preservers have been my Destroyers; and Wilkes (recently elected Lord Mayor) in civic gown and chain. He holds a broom towards the foremost of the floating members and by his hand is a label: I'll stem the Stream.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*See our Colossus strides with Trophies crown'd,
And Monsters in Corruption's Stream abound.*

The plate illustrates 'A vision', headed by a quotation from a letter of Marvell (1665) 'The Parliament was never so embarrassed, beyond recovery. We are all venal cowards except a few.'

The elections of 1774 did not reduce North's majority; the new parliament met on 29 Nov.; Wilkes, returned again for Middlesex, took his seat without opposition.

This plate and the accompanying text appeared in the Hibernian Magazine for Dec. 1774 (1 Jan. 1775). Reproduced, J. T. Adams, Revolutionary New England, 1923, p. 420.

$5\frac{1}{8} \times 6\frac{9}{16}$ in.

5243 THE STA * * * * MAN [Statesman] ON STILTS, OR A PRIME
M * * * * * R [Minister], IN HIS UNDRESS.

Terry del et sculp.

*Engrav'd for y^e Whimsical Repository, according to y^e Act, Dec^r 1.
1774.*

Engraving. A grotesque monster on stilts. It has two heads, one of an ass, the other of a rat; its body and tail resemble those of a hog. A ribbon and star indicate Lord North. Attached to each stilt is half a lottery wheel on which is inscribed (l.) Museum Lott'ry G. 17 . .; (r.) State Lottery R. 74. (The two halves together reading G.R. 1774.) The stilts stand on the prostrate body of Britannia, lying across her shield, and the cap of liberty on its staff. On the ground are also flotsam from a wreck: a barrel, a bale of goods, a wheel, a broken anchor. On the r. appears the gable end of a shored-up but tottering public-house, the broken sign of which is a king holding an orb and sceptre inscribed, GR II. Behind, dismantled ships lie close to the shore, brooms at their mast-head show that they are for sale. Beneath the title is engraved,

*A Lyon for Paws, for a Noddle an Ass;
A Crocodile's Heart, and a duplicate Face;
Voracious as Death, he's docile as a Hog;
Ambitious, yet fawns with the Foot of a Dog.*

The lottery wheel indicates that North's finance depends on lotteries. The 'Museum Lott'ry' is that of James Cox, who obtained a private Bill in 1773 to enable him to dispose of his collection of mechanical and jewelled toys by lottery. It was on show in Spring Gardens, 'Cox's Museum' being one of the sights of the town, cf. No. 5275. This lottery had no relation to national finance.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5244 THE COURT COTILLION,
OR THE PREMIERS NEW PARL * * * * * T JIG.

Terry del. et sculp.

*Engrav'd for the Whimsical Repository, According to y^e Act, Dec^r 1.
1774.*

Engraving. Lord North (l.), plays the fiddle smiling while three men circle round a sign-post surmounted by a crown; its three arms are inscribed America, England, and Scotland; the post is inscribed Politicks for 75. It is supported on the hub of a wheel which is held in the r. hands of the three men, who walk round it, stripped to the waist, each applying a cat-o'-nine-tails to the back of the man in front. They are respectively America, as a Red Indian, with a feathered head-dress and a girdle of feathers, England as a sailor in trousers, and Scotland in a kilt, and with a ferocious expression. Behind stands Britannia (r.) in tears, leaning on her shield and on the staff supporting the cap of liberty, while she points to the three men. Beneath the title is engraved,

*Rouze, Britons, Rouze! behold thy staggering State,
Discord destroys you, Concord makes you great;
While thus at variance, Brother scourges Brother,
Friends disunited must destroy each other.*

6½ × 4½ in.

5245 THE TWO JACKS

Pub^d as the Act Directs 1774.

Engraving. The two Jacks, one (l.) emerging from a jack boot, the other (r.) from a funnel in the neck of a bottle, face each other. The boot, the emblem of Bute, see No. 3860, &c., is decorated with a thistle and a scroll inscribed Nemo me impune Lacessit. The end of the scroll is forked and represents the tail of Jack Major, a winged demon with horns standing in the boot.

Jack Minor, Wilkes, wears his Lord Mayor's gown and chain. His bottle is decorated with the City arms, across his funnel is a scroll inscribed with his motto, Arcui non meo confide [sic]. As the bottle-imp, see Nos. 3022-7, 5275, he is identified with impudent imposture. Bute says to Wilkes: A' Jocky are ye there Lad. Weel Weel Ye'll soon be flat in Y'er G'ued Auld Cause nu, sa i'll e'en bottle ye up, and keep ye till bresk anu 'tull froth & fume on oor side the Question; what says tull't Jock. Wilkes answers: Say, why if I crack there is 500£ p' Ann for Poor Jack (you know) if my bottle holds tight, if that fails me I'll apply to you—you Understand me—I'm sinking going—going farewell.

In the centre between the two Jacks is engraved: Biennial N^{os}

Anno { 1774 } N^o 45
 { 1775 }

The year 1774-5 was that of Wilkes's mayoralty.

Beneath the boot and the bottle, on a minute scale, are three labouring men wearing aprons, they are huzzaing with uplifted arms, two wave their hats. They are inscribed Wa . . . king Dreamers and are numbered 1, 2, and 3. 1 (r.) says: Huzza our Jack for ever, every Pint pot is to hold a Gallon my boys, down with the free booters. 2 (l.) says: Ay and every Quartern loaf is to fill a Bushel, down with the Rents & Taxes my Boys. 3 (c.) says: they shan't Rob & murder us again I warrant me, have at 'em.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*The Gold Chain's won, without the wooden leg:
How long for this, have we been big with egg!
Wise too the Choise pronounc'd & well approv'd
And Jack, by Scotch, & English both, below'd;*

*Religious Railers (mongrels) still Rail on;
 Our Jack on Record Stands, an upright John.
 Britons the joyfull, happy Æra boast,
 In which ye have two Jacks to Rule the Roast.
 One Cooks the Cab. [Cabinet] & one the Sapient City
 We're finely cook'd indeed! 'tis vastly pretty!
 Firm to his int'rest each with Zeal Abides,
 The Secret Motive gain on both their Sides.*

'Gued Auld Cause', the watchword of the republicans under the Protectorate of Cromwell, is an allusion to the republican sympathies of the patriots. The election of Wilkes as Mayor in 1774 after being rejected in 1772 and 1773 by the Court of Aldermen, and his return unopposed for Middlesex in 1774, coincide with the virtual end of his political importance, though his house in 1774-5 was a meeting-place for English, American, and French supporters of the Colonies, see No. 5246. For other Wilkite satires cf. Nos. 4326, 4887, 5103, 5130, 5131.

6 $\frac{7}{16}$ × 8 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. (pl.).

5246 THE FRENCH LAWYER IN LONDON.

Pub^d Decbr 10 1774

Engraving in the manner of a chalk drawing probably by a French artist. A companion print to No. 5247. A man-monster of repulsive appearance, wearing the bands of a lawyer, and a long cloak which trails on the ground. A pair of pistols is stuck through his belt. He has pointed animal's ears, on his head are open pamphlets among which serpents writhe. His feet and hands are the paws of a lion or tiger; he has a bushy tail. In his l. paw he holds by the hair a woman's head and a pen; in his r. (appearing from under his cloak) are scales loaded with coins, a dagger, the hilt of a sword, to which is attached a seal (?). Beneath the design is engraved: The Body Soul & Mind of the Gazetier Cuirassé.

A symbolical portrait of the swindler and blackmailer Charles Theveneau, who called himself Chevalier de Morande. Having fled from France on account of a libel he had written, he arrived in London destitute, and lived on vice followed by blackmail. He published in 1771 an attack on the Court of France called Le Gazetier Cuirassé and followed this up by other scurrilous but well-informed pamphlets on Court scandals in France. In 1774 he had ready for publication Mémoires secrets d'une Femme Publique, i.e. Mme du Barry, compared with which he said the Gazetier Cuirassé was rose-water. The woman's head in the print appears to be that of the du Barry. The French Court made repeated efforts to secure Morande, but failed. In Mar. 1774, Beaumarchais came to London and negotiated the destruction of the whole edition for 32,000 livres and a pension of 4,000 livres, evidently symbolized by the money in the scales. See P. Robiquet, Theveneau de Morande, Paris, 1882. Beaumarchais and Morande at this date used to meet supporters of the American Colonies at the house of Wilkes. Kite, Beaumarchais and American Independence, 1918, ii. p. 56. 8 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5247 THE WICKED IN TRIUMPH

Pub^d Dec^r 20. 1774

Engraving in the manner of a chalk drawing. A companion print to

No. 5246 by the same artist. Two women stand, one in each of two baskets which are fixed pannier-wise across an ass. Each is draped in a sheet and the nearer figure has a rope round her neck. Between their heads is a large open volume, one page inscribed Le Gazetier Cuirassé, the other, Memoire d'une Fille Publique. In front of the book is the head of Medusa, writhing with serpents, two serpents coming from its mouth. On the back of the ass is a wheel probably signifying that Morande, the writer of the two books whose titles are given, deserved to be broken on the wheel. The ass is covered with a voluminous drapery under the saddle, and from its nose come barbed darts. Behind is a gallows, and in the background on the l. a windmill. Beneath the design is inscribed,

If you know the Gazetier, You will know the Ass

An attack on Theveneau de Morande. In 1774 his blackmailing of the French Court had been signally successful, see No. 5246. The head of Medusa in the design is taken from the frontispiece to Le Gazetier Cuirassé; ou Anecdotes Scandaleuses de la Cour de France. (B.M.L. 1195, d. 6 (1).) $8\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{3}{16}$ in.

1774

PERSONAL SATIRES

5248-5260

Series of Tête-à-Tête portraits.

5248 N° XXXIV. PRETTY BETSY G—N [1 Jan. 1774]
N° XXXV. THE NAUTICAL LOVER.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 625. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of Commodore John Byron (1723-86), afterwards Vice-admiral and grandfather of Lord Byron. 'Betsy' was a servant in his household, whom he now entertains in a genteel manner in lodgings.

Ovals $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5249 N° XXXVII. M^{RS} R—N. [Jan. 1774]
N° XXXVIII. THE MACARONI PARSON.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, v. 681. (Supplement.) Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of Mr. D—, a popular preacher, who having been imprisoned in the King's Bench for debt now preaches at C— [Charlotte] Chapel. He is the notorious D^r William Dodd, executed for forgery, 27 June 1777. M^{RS} R—n is the young wife of a rich merchant, whom he visits without exciting the jealousy of his wife or her husband.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5250 N° II. MISS B—Y [Vol. VI]
N° III. LORD LE D—

Publish'd as the Act directs, by A. Hamilton Jun^r near S^t Johns Gate, Feb. 1. 1774.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of Sir Francis Dashwood, notorious as the founder of 'The Franciscans' of Medmenham Abbey, and his mistress. The barony of le Despencer was granted to him on his removal from the Chancellorship of the Exchequer in 1763.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{2}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5251 N° IV MISS S—R. [Vol. VI]
N° V. THE HIBERNIAN DEMOSTHENES.

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Jun^r near S^t John's Gate Mar^h 1. 1774.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. This repeats, or invents, scandals about Burke, including his supposed education at St Omer, which after the Gordon Riots caused him to be termed a Jesuit, in which guise he was often caricatured by Gillray, see No. 6026 &c. Miss S——, his alleged mistress, is 'the daughter of an American Merchant'.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.; $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5252 N° VI. MISS H——TER.

N° VII. SIR C—— B——P.

Published as the Act directs by A Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate April 1. 1774.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 121. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of Sir C—— B——, and Sophia H——r'. An account of the amours of Sir C., an elderly man who has not a seat in parliament 'tho' his rank and fortune entitle him to a representation for a county'.

He is Sir Cecil Bishopp of Parham, Sussex, 6th Bart., M.P. for Penryn 1727-34, for Boroughbridge 1755-68, m. 1726, Anne, 2nd d. of Viscount Falmouth, d. 1775. G.E.C. Complete Baronetage, i. 156.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5253 N° X. M^{RS} G——S.

N° XI. SIR TIMOTHY TALLBOY

London. Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate 1st May 1774.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames; an elderly lady with a minute dog under her arm, in profile to the r., a thin elderly man in a tie-wig in profile to the l. This illustrates 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of 'Long' Sir Thomas Robinson of Rokeby (? 1700-77), who had been Governor of Barbados. M^{RS} G——s is said to be his present mistress, a short stout woman, 'past her bloom'; see No. 5116. Sir Timothy Tallboy is a character in Foote's play The Nabob (first played 1772).

Ovals $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.; $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5254 N° XIII. MISS G——

Vol. VI.

N° XIV. THE MARTIAL ORATOR.

Publish'd as the Act directs, by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate May 1. 1774.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. A flattering account of Colonel Barré, M.P. for W——b [Wycomb]. Miss G. is a Scottish girl whose parents were reduced to poverty by the '45. Barré is said to have found her contemplating suicide and to have made her his mistress.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.; $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5255 N° XVI MRS SW—N
N° XVII BLOOMSBURY DICK

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Jun' near S^t John's Gate
July 1, 1774.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 289. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. Richard Rigby (1722-88) and his alleged mistress. Rigby, as one of the Bedford Whigs and a particular adherent of the Duke of Bedford, is called Bloomsbury Dick, the duke having been called Bloomsbury Jack, see No. 4842. Ovals $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.; $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5256 N° XIX MRS H—K
N° XX THE SUBMISSIVE DUELLIST

*Published as the Act directs by A Hamilton Jun' near S^t Johns Gate
August 1st 1774*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. The 'submissive duellist' is 'Captain S.', so-called from an encounter in Flanders with the notorious fire-eater Fighting Fitzgerald, arising out of the Vauxhall Affray, see No. 5198, &c. He is Captain Scawen, who actually behaved with bravery, see Memoirs of George Robert Fitzgerald Esq., 1786. M^{rs} Horneck, with whom Scawen is said to have eloped to Brussels, is the wife of Captain H. See Gibbon, Private Letters, 1896, i, p. 207.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.; $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5257 N° XXV. MRS E—
N° XXVI LORD V—

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Jun' near S^t John's Gate
Sept' 1. 1774.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of L— V— and M^{rs} E—t'. An account of Arthur Annesley, Viscount Valentia (1744-1816) and of Grace Dalrymple Eliot or Elliott, afterwards known as Dally the Tall, see D.N.B. Her husband, Dr. Eliot, is collecting evidence for a suit of crim. con., but she and Lord V. 'do not now live upon the most agreeable terms'. Early in 1775 there was a rupture and Grace began her career of fashionable demi-rep. H. L. Bleackley, Ladies Frail and Fair, 1909, p. 207. See No. 5321 and index.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5258 N° XXVIII. MRS P—
N° XXIX. LORD A.—

*Publish'd as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Jun' near S^t Johns Gate.
Oct' 1. 1774.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 457. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of George Neville, Lord Abergavenny, and his alleged mistress, the daughter of a City contractor, who became an established demi-rep on her liaison with Lord A.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5259 N° XXXI. MRS M—N

N° XXXII. GENERAL H—

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near S^t Johns Gate
Nov^r I. 1774*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 513. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. He wears a military hat, sash, aiguillettes, and gorget. An account of Edward Harvey, M.P. for Harwich, Adjutant-General and Major-General. His mistress is said to be M^{rs} M—tin, a professed courtesan and adventuress, née P—tt, 'sister to the renowned baronet who presented the Flintshire petition'.

This tête-à-tête appears to be published in order to cast yet more mud at the Perrott family, see accounts of Sir Richard Perrott (d. 1796) under Nos. 4364, 4365, 4399. See also the scandalous Life, Adventures and Amours of Sir R. P. 1770; D.N.B. under Robert Perrot (d. 1550) and Burke's Peerage and Baronetage. The anti-Ministerial Press attacked him violently in 1770 because he presented a loyal address from the County of Flint to the Prince of Wales.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5260 N° XXXIV MRS F—R

N° XXXV LORD C—M

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near S^t John's Gate
Dec^r I. 1774*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 569. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of Lord C—gh—m and M^{rs} F—r'. An account of the amours of Henry, Viscount Conyngham, d. 1781.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

Nine prints from a series issued by Darly continued from No. 5176.

5261 V. 3. 22. SIGNOR GRUNTINELLI · PLAYING ON A NEW INSTRUMENT (CALL'D A SWINETTA).

Pub^d Accor^s to Act Jan^v I. 1774 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. W.L. caricature portrait of a man playing the musette or pastoral oboe with a double pipe and drone resembling bag-pipes. His attitude is that of a man seated on a high stool, but there is no stool and he is chiefly supported by a wooden leg formed of one of the two pipes of his instrument. The bag of the musette, held under his r. arm, is a pig; he holds the animal's hind leg, which forms the second pipe, as if playing on it; in his r. hand he holds its tail. He turns his head in profile to the r. towards an open book of music on a music-stand. He is elderly and wears a curious tie-wig terminating in two corkscrew ringlets.

'Swinetta' appears to be a name invented to suit the travesty of the musette as a pig; the name of the player has probably been similarly altered to 'Gruntinelli'.

5261 A

Reissued (n.d.) with an altered publication line: Printed for Robert Sayer, Fleet Street (in book of Sayer's 'Drolls').

8½ × 6¾ in.

5262 V. 3. 20. A JOURNEY TO LONDON

Pub^d Jan^y 11th 1774 by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. A middle-aged lady (caricatured) riding (l. to r.) preceded by her servant who carries two trunks behind him on his saddle. She wears the riding-habit of the period and a round hat with a feather. She rides with a single rein in her r. hand, in her l. is a whip. The horses are ambling very slowly, both riders are using their whips. Similar in character to No. 5266.

5¾ × 9¾ in.

5263 V. 3. 18. A KNIGHT OF THE SPIT.

Pub^d by M Darly Jan 20 1774

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a naval officer standing in profile to the r. His hair is in a small pig-tail queue; his hat is under his r. arm. In his r. hand is a telescope; in his l. a long cane. He stands in front of a low gun-emburasure behind which is the sea, with ships at anchor; in the distance is the Isle of Wight.

Probably Admiral Thomas Pye, commander-in-chief at Portsmouth 1770-73, knighted during the review at Spithead, 24 June 1773. D.N.B. 8¾ × 6¼ in.

5264 V. 3. 19. A WELCH K—T ON THE LOOK OUT FOR A WIFE.
(BATH) by an Officer of the Guards. [M. Darly?]

Pub^d Jan^y 21. 1774 by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a stout man standing in profile to the r. His r. hand is in his breeches pocket, his l. is thrust into his waistcoat; his hat is under his r. arm.

Identified by M^r Hawkins as Sir Watkin Lewes.

8½ × 6¾ in.

V. 3. 17. BARON FORCHETTA, AFTER A BETT OF FIFTY.

See No. 4651—24 Jan. 1774

[M. Darly, fec.] 'Baron' Neuman.

5265 MY-SELF

[1 Feb. 1774]

Printed for Robert Sayer, N^o 53 Fleet Street.

Engraving. A reissue with a different publication line of a plate published by Darly and dated as above which was No. 10, vol. 3 of the series issued 1772-4. A fashionably-dressed young man, smiling fatuously, walks towards the spectators down a straight grass ride cut through trees. Beneath the title four lines of verse are engraved, beginning,

As I walk'd by my-self, I talk'd to my-self; and thus my-self said to me:
For the same subject differently treated, see No. 4551 (1777).

$7\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ in.

Book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

V. 3. 15. AN ENGLISH MACARONI AT PARIS CHANGEING ENGLISH GUINEAS FOR SILVER. See No. 4650—17 Mar. 1774

5266 V. 3. 11. GEORGE'S DELIGHT OR NECK OR NOTHING.

Pub as the act directs by M Darly 39 Strand Ap^l 1. 1774

Engraving. Two men ride in profile to the r. The one in front is fashionably dressed with a cockaded hat, in his l. hand is a cane. The forelegs of the horse are raised as if galloping, but both hind legs are on the ground. The man behind, who is partly cut off by the margin, wears a round cap and is perhaps the servant of the other. His horse appears to be walking. A wall, above which are trees, is indicated behind the riders. Similar in character to No. 5262.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5267 V. 3. 14. THE CONSULTATION

Pub^d April 27. 1774 by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. A man with the profile of an animal, perhaps a sheep, wearing gown and bands, holds a large tie-wig of the kind worn by judges in his l. hand, the fingers of his r. hand are held out as if in calculation; he looks at himself in an ornately framed oval mirror on the wall with an expression of singular imbecility. An open door in the back wall shows rows of books in a book-case: on its lintel stands a bust. An oval (H.L.) portrait hangs on the l. of the door, it is of a man in wig and bands, probably the subject of the caricature. Two high-backed chairs are the only furniture of the room. Beneath the title is engraved,

*To Wig—or not to Wig
That is the Question.*

$5\frac{7}{8} \times 8\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5268 A NUN OF THE SIXTH CLASS.

Pub^d Oct^r 24 1774 by M Darly Strand.

Engraving. Though without a number it belongs to a series of portraits of prostitutes, see No. 5177. A young woman (H.L.) in profile to the r., very slim and erect. She wears a small flat hat on her elaborately-dressed hair and a cape over her shoulders, in the front of which is a large nosegay.

$5 \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Fairholt's 'Collection for Costume', i. fo. 116.

5269 NOSEE

Pub^d by M Darly 39 Strand Jan 1. 1774.

Engraving. T.Q.L. portrait slightly caricatured, of 'Cervetto', or Giacomo Bassevi the 'cellist (1680-1783), noted for his large nose, playing the 'cello.

He sits looking downwards and to the r. An open book of music, from which he is not reading, is on a stand behind his l. arm.

When he played in the orchestra at Drury Lane the occupants of the gallery used to call 'play up Nosey'. Grove, Musical Dict.

Perhaps adapted from Zoffany's portrait of which there is a mezzotint by Picot published 16 Apr. 1771. Chaloner Smith, iii. 978.

This print was reissued in a book of Darly's caricatures dated 1 Jan. 1776, see No. 5369, but does not appear to belong to a series.

$5\frac{1}{16} \times 4\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5270 THE HARROGATE, MEEK-ARONY [M. Darly?]¹

Pub by M Darly as the Act directs May 14th 1774.

Engraving. Bust portrait (caricature) in an oval of a very corpulent man, his enormously heavy jowl sunk between broad high shoulders. He is almost full face, looking to the r. His wig and features are small by comparison with his chin, neck, and body.

Probably portrait of a man called Meek. It was reissued in a composite volume dated 1 Jan. 1776, see No. 5369, but does not appear to belong to a series.

$3\frac{7}{16} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in.

A MEEK-ARONI HORNPIPE— See No. 4708—24 May 1774

Pub. Darly. W.L. portrait of the subject of No. 5270.

(Catalogued as 'Mack-aroni . . .')

THE WESTMINSTER MACARONI. See No. 4655—3 Nov. 1774

Pub. Darly.

5271 OLD HAMAN THE NORTHAMPTON-LAMP-LIGHTER.
DRAWN FROM LIFE. [1 Jan. 1774]²

I. Read pinx^t T. Roberts Sculp^r North^{ton}

Engraving. A clumsy figure holding a ladder across his l. shoulder; in his r. hand is a lighted candle-lantern. He wears a cloak with a hood drawn over his head, above which is a hat with a brim extending into a flap at the back, his stockings and coat are in holes. From his waist hangs a pair of scissors. On the ground are a broom and a can with a handle and spout, with a hole in its side. On the print is etched,

*His Ability & Agility will make a Man Laugh
As he lights 18 Lamps in an Hour and a half.*

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 10\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5272 [MATTHEW WYLDBORE M.P. FOR PETERBOROUGH.]
Plate 2 [Oct. 1774]

Photographic reproduction of an engraving. A man (l.) from whose hat sprout large stag's horns, leads a large wild boar, by a rope through a ring in its nose. On the boar a woman is seated wearing a cloak and hood; she carries a spaniel in her l. arm. From each side of the branching horns hangs a money-bag, that on the l. inscribed £500, 1768, that on the r. £1000 1774. Beneath the design is engraved, And he arose, and took Jesse, and her Lap-Dog by night and departed unto the Land of Forty-Acres.

¹ With etchings by Darly.

² Written in a contemporary hand.

Wyldbore was M.P. for Peterborough: the money-bags imply that his election cost him £500 in 1768, and £1,000 in 1774. A note attached to the photograph states that 15 Mar. is called Wyldbore day in Peterborough, as Wyldbore (d. 15 Mar. 1781) left a bequest to the bellringers of St. John's Church for a peal of bells on the anniversaries of his death. He bequeathed money to all who voted for him at his election in 1774 who should attend his body to the grave and who would accept it.

$3\frac{3}{4} \times 4\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5273 A ROTATION OFFICE

H.W. [Rowlandson.]

Pub June 8th 1774 by H. Humphry Bond Street.

Acquaint. A London justice of peace seated behind a table in his office, his hands clasped. On his r. and l. are three men holding their hats and canes, who may be either justices or visitors. At the end of the table (l.), sits the justice's clerk writing with his l. hand. On the wall over the presiding justice's head is a placard, Robbery, Murder . . . Beware of Justice.

The Middlesex Quarter Sessions, in order to reform the abuse of the private justice shop kept by trading justices, established Rotation Offices for the different districts of London in imitation of Bow Street, where certain magistrates (one or more at a time) sat in rotation. The best-known was that of Saunders Welch in Litchfield Street, which Dr. Johnson attended all one winter (Boswell, Life of Johnson, iii. 216, iv. 184). The figure wearing glasses, on the justice's l., has a marked resemblance to Johnson. That the Litchfield Street office is depicted is probable: Angelo records a visit paid by himself and Rowlandson to 'an office then in Litchfield Street', to identify a man who had robbed Rowlandson. Reminiscences, ed. 1904, ii. 246-7. The initials H.W. show that the subject was suggested by Henry Wigstead. Grego, Rowlandson, i. 96.

$4\frac{3}{4} \times 7$ in.

5274 THE VILLAGE DOCTOR.

H.W. [Rowlandson.]

Pub^d June 8th by H. Humphry Bond Street

Engraving (coloured and aquatinted impressions). A village doctor's house indicated by the sign of a pestle and mortar over the door, and by the placard, Probe Surgeon and Man Midwife. From a casement window above the door the doctor in night-cap and shirt leans out, shaking his fist at a man who has knocked him up and is standing below, gaping with astonishment at the doctor's anger. The doctor holds his breeches in his r. hand. A wall (l.) with trees and a building behind it and low railings in front, complete the design.

The initials H.W. show that the subject was suggested by Henry Wigstead. Grego, Rowlandson, i. 96-7 (reproduction).

$8\frac{7}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5275 MODERN MOONSHINE, OR THE WONDERS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

Design'd & Engrav'd by G. Terry, Paternoster Row. Engrav'd for the Whimsical Repository Sept^r 1st 1774. Publish'd According to Act of Parliament.

Engraving. A scene on the sea-shore. A hoven cow, that is, a cow dangerously distended by eating green food, is being operated upon by a man who stands on a raised platform and pierces her flank with a pole; in his r. hand is a curved pipe for the injection of smoke. Three country-people and a child gape in astonishment holding up their hands; a fat alderman in a furred gown does the same; from his pocket hangs a paper inscribed, Nine Days he liv'd in Clover. On the r. three doctors or apothecaries are attending an emaciated and seemingly-dead woman (r.), who lies on straw, dressed only in a shift: one puffs smoke from a tobacco-pipe up her nostrils, another applies a pair of bellows, the third listens through an ear-trumpet. It appears that while the cow suffers from a surfeit, the woman dies of starvation. On the ground lies the hat of one of the doctors, in which is a letter, To M^r Blake Plymouth. Three spectators (l.) watch the efforts of the doctors: one, an oriental, wearing a turban and draperies, holds out his hands in astonishment; he appears to represent the wisdom of the East (or the noble savage) confronted with the effects of English civilization. His two companions, fashionably dressed Englishmen, look on unmoved.

Behind the sick woman (r.) is the wall of a building, probably a theatrical booth; along it runs a narrow gallery where Punch is strutting; he points to a placard on which is a representation of the bottle-imp emerging from his bottle, the great hoax of the century, see Nos. 3022-7, 5245. Beneath the bottle is a placard, Subscriptions taken in her^e for reducing the price of provision^s. Other placards on the booth are inscribed, Marybone Gardens Fete Champetre; M^r R—s Letters from y^e Dead, this is behind the dead woman; Hearing Trumpets on a new Construction, behind the doctor with the ear-trumpet; Cox's perpetual motion, or the Elephant & Nabob, an allusion to Cox's Museum, see No. 5243, his jewelled clockwork toys had been destined for an Indian prince; they are described in what Walpole calls 'immortal lines' in Mason's Epistle to Shelburne, see Mason's Satirical Poems, ed. P. Toynbee, 1926, pp. 29, 112, 122, see No. 5243. At this placard an oafish countryman (r.) is gaping while a boy picks his pocket. In the background is the sea; on the beach is a boat raised on stocks but already breaking up; this is inscribed The New Adelphi. The building of the Adelphi had been an unprofitable speculation, partly owing to the financial crisis of 1773, and the Adam brothers obtained a private Act in that year to enable them to dispose of the new buildings by a lottery, which took place in 1774. Across the water on the further side of a bay is a town inscribed A View of Plymouth. A rope extends from a church steeple on the extreme l., behind the spectators, to a distant spire in Plymouth, down this a man is gliding.

A satire on the distresses, high food-prices, and financial failures of 1773-4, with some special application to Plymouth, where possibly 'M^r Blake' and 'M^r R—s' are niggardly parish officers, who have allowed a poor woman to starve to death. Cf. No. 5233, also a satire on social injustice.

$6\frac{5}{16} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5276 THE GALLANT OUTWITTED.

[1 Jan. 1774]

Engraving. Covent Garden Magazine. The interior of a barn. A woman, on the top of piled-up corn, has just overthrown a ladder, from which a fashionably dressed man is falling. A pig runs from behind the ladder.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

THE PAINTER SUBMITTING HIS PICTURE TO THE EXAMINATION OF CONNOISSEURS AND ANTIQUARIANS.

See No. 2008—Jan. 1774

From the Sentimental Magazine, i. 505.

5277 THE COLLEGE BUCK.

[1 Nov. 1774]

Engraving. Hibernian Magazine, iv. 567. A young man, far from sober, supports himself by resting his r. hand on the top of a post; in his l. hand he holds a handkerchief on which is slung a large key. He wears a hat, is plainly but fashionably dressed, wearing bands instead of a cravat. In the background are (r.) buildings of Trinity College, Dublin, on the l. a tavern, with its signboard and dangling bunch of grapes, is partly visible. The plate illustrates 'The College-Buck. A Character' in the form of a monologue, from which it appears that he has left his gown in some house of ill-fame, and that the key is 'a devilish good weapon on a dark night, in a street wrangle or a gutter fray'. For Dublin 'bucks' at this time, see Buck Whaley's Memoirs, 1906, p. 13.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{7}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 6154 k.

5278 THE PANTHEON, A POEM.

London. Printed for J. Williams at N^o 39, Fleet Street. 1774. Price Half-a-Crown.

Engraving. Title-page to a set of scurrilous verses attacking well-known people by name. The interior of the Pantheon with a number of figures: a centaur (r.), ladies fashionably dressed, two men (one with a ribbon and star) with goat's legs, a parson in gown and bands ogling a lady, a group of three men (l.), one with a goat's head, another with a fox's head. The foot of the third rests on a paper inscribed Irish Protest. Among the persons attacked are Count Haslang (H—g), see No. 4834, Lady Grosvenor (G—s—r), and Lady Ligonier (L—g—r).

In the centre of the upper edge of the design is a trophy composed of a scourge and a birch tied with ribbon.

A copy of the book is in the Print Department.

$5\frac{1}{8} \times 5\frac{5}{8}$ in.

Six prints after Bunbury etched and published by J. Bretherton.

5279 MUTUAL ACCUSATION.

Mr Bunbury del.

J^s Bretherton f

Publish'd by Bretherton 3^d January 1774.

Engraving. Two quack doctors (l.) are having a heated altercation in a street or square outside their respective houses. From the corner of a house on the l. hangs a sign, D^r Walker's veritable antiscorbutic Pills. Beware of Impostors. From the house on the r. a sign projects, True antiscorbutic Pills. The doctors wear large wigs and swords, and carry three-cornered hats. One (l.) holds in his hand a medicine-bottle; behind them are two dogs fighting. Their wives (r.) are fighting violently; one (l.) has seized the other by the hair and is kicking her. Behind them (r.) two cats with arched backs are spitting at each other. In the upper part of the print (c.) is a shield with two ducks, and beneath is the motto: Quack Quack Quack. Beneath the design is etched:

*When once you've told & cant recall a Lye
Boldly persist in't or your Fame will die.
Learn this ye Wives, with unrelenting Claws
Or right or wrong, Assert your husbands cause.*

$8\frac{7}{8} \times 11\frac{1}{2}$ in.

THE HOPES OF THE FAMILY . . . See No. 4727—3 Jan. 1774

Also a later version, reduced (coloured impression) etched by Rowlandson, n.d., signed H. Bunbury del.

$4\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{7}{8}$ in.

Another version was published by Darly, 10 June 1772, and reissued in a composite volume dated 1 Jan. 1776, see No. 5369. (In the possession of Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street, 1933.)

[A POSTILLION] See No. 4747—10 Jan. 1774

[AN ITALIAN VETURINO] See No. 4735—10 Jan. 1774

No title: boots, long pigtail queue and a fleur-de-lys badge worn by the postillion show that this is a French post-chaise.

[A FRENCH POSTILLION] See No. 4741—20 Jan. 1774

EVERY SOUS BEGAD! See No. 4720—10 June 1774

Four prints after Collet, published by Sayer and Bennet.

THE MUTUAL EMBRACE. See No. 4613—10 Mar. 1774

Goldar sc.

THE UNLUCKY ATTEMPT. See No. 4614—10 Mar. 1774

Goldar sc.

THE DISCOVERY See No. 4615—10 Mar. 1774

Goldar sc.

THE GUARDS OF THE NIGHT DEFEATED

See No. 4616—1 July 1774

Caldwall sc.

Ten prints from the series of mezzotints published by Carington Bowles.¹

THE LIGHT GUINEA, OR THE BLADE IN THE DUMPS (291)
See No. 4534 [1774]
A satire on the Coin Act, see Nos. 3759, 5128, 5231.

THE HUMOROUS THOUGHTS OF A SCHOOL BOY . . . (294)
See No. 4535 [1774]

FRIAR BALD-PATE'S ABSOLUTION TO HIS FAIR PENITENT.
(297) See No. 3779 [1774]

WELL A DAY! IS THIS MY SON TOM? (298)
See No. 4536 [1774]

After Grimm. Reproduced Paston, Pl. clxxxix.
A smaller version was published on 25 June 1773.

BE NOT AMAZ'D DEAR MOTHER—IT IS INDEED YOUR DAUGHTER ANNE. (299) See No. 4537 [1774]

After Grimm. Reproduced Paston, Pl. cxc, and Social England, ed. Traill, 1904, v. 484 (coloured). Cf. Chaloner Smith, i. p. 2.
A smaller version was published 14 June 1771, see No. 4538.

SPECTATORS AT A PRINT SHOP, IN ST. PAUL'S CHURCH
YARD. (300) See No. 3758 [25 June 1774]

J. R. Smith, see No. 5220. Frankau, pp. 221-2.

DR. GALLIPOT, WITH HIS WIG OF KNOWLEDGE. (301)
See No. 3759 [1774]

A satire on the Coin Act, see Nos. 4534, 5128, etc.

PROVISION FOR THE CONVENT. (304) See No. 3777 [1774]

THE SOLID ENJOYMENT OF BOTTLE AND FRIEND. (305)
See No. 4539 [1774]

THE EXHIBITION OF WILD BEASTS (number cut off)
See No. 4580 [20 Oct. 1774]

Seven similar mezzotints issued by other publishers.

5280 A CALL TO THE UNCONVERTED

Cole fecit

Publish'd April 15, 1774, by W. Humphry, S^t Martin's Lane

Mezzotint. Whitefield preaching to a group of country-people by the roadside. A sign, a lion rampant on a post with the chequers which denote an alehouse, shows that the scene is outside an inn. Whitefield, his squint very pronounced, stands in gown and bands, both arms raised, in the attitude familiar from the mezzotints in print-shop windows, see No. 5220.

¹ Nos. 4535, 3779, 3777, 4539, have the imprint of Bowles and Carver. A political mezzotint, No. 306 in this series, is described on p. 169.

CATALOGUE OF POLITICAL AND PERSONAL SATIRES

Some of his hearers, men and women, clasp their hands in prayer, some kneeling; others grin slyly or scowl. Immediately in front of him an elderly man seated on a mounting-block, is asleep, his head resting on the head of his stick. A woman with three infants is seated in the foreground (l.). A pot-man (l.), his sleeves rolled up, holds out a foaming tankard, either to the preacher or to one of the audience. Behind, in front of the signboard (l.) is a countryman on horseback. Behind Whitefield is the trunk of a large tree, under which the group is collected.

Whitefield left England for America in 1769 and died in 1770.

12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Cheylesmore collection.

FAT AND LEAN . . .

See No. 4776—2 May 1774

Pub. W. Humphrey.

THE ADVENTUROUS MACARONI, OR THE THREE JOLLY BLADES . . .

See No. 4618—29 Aug. 1774

Pub. Sayer and Bennet.

ENGLISH FUNN OR DOCKING THE MACARONI

See No. 4619—14 Sept. 1774

Pub. Sayer and Bennet.

AN EXHIBITION OF WILD BEASTS OR THE MACARONI IN DISTRESS.

See No. 4620—10 Oct. 1774

Pub. Sayer and Bennet.

THE TUILLERIE MACARONIES

See No. 4783—3 Mar. 1774

Pub. F. E. Adams (probably by himself, cf. Chaloner Smith, i. p. 2.)

IS THIS MY DAUGHTER ANN.

See No. 4786—27 June 1774

Pub. S. Sledge. Watson sc. after S. H. Grimm.

1775

POLITICAL SATIRES

5281 THE COUNCIL OF THE RULERS, & THE ELDERS AGAINST THE TRIBE OF Y^E AMERICANITES. [1 Jan. 1775]

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, ii. 640. It illustrates 'The XLVth Chapter of the Convention of the Gothamites'. The scene is intended for the House of Commons. A number of men sit round a table covered with documents; one turns to point at a map on the wall behind (l.) inscribed North America, which is bursting into flames. At the far end of the table the Speaker in his gown has risen from his high-backed chair and calls the members to order. In the foreground (l.) Lord North is slipping bank-notes into the l. hand of a man who stands bowing obsequiously. From North's pocket hangs a paper, List of the King's Friends. On the r. stands Wilkes in his mayoral gown and chain pointing out North to a lawyer in gown and bands who stands on his l., evidently Serjeant Glynn, who with Wilkes had been elected for Middlesex at the general election, see No. 5236. Wilkes holds a document, A Remonstrance against the Proceedings of the Min^r of the Prince. Four men are sitting in the gallery.

The text explains that 'Boreas' 'renewed the oppressions' of the Americans begun by Bute, 'with the lash, the sword and the fire and they were sorely smitten'. He put a 'bloody speech' into the mouth of the king 'and he bribed the Ministers and Nobles' and 'they did unanimously and shamefully vote against the peace and posterity of this new tribe'. For the king's speech of 30 Nov. 1774 see Parl. Hist. xviii. 33 ('you may depend on my firm and steadfast resolution to withstand every attempt to weaken or impair the supreme authority of this legislature over all the dominions of my crown. . .'). The Remonstrance is probably that agreed upon in Common Hall 11 Mar. 1773, reputed to have been drawn up by Wilkes, so that his enemy Townsend, the Mayor, 'would be undone at St James's if he presented it and stoned by the people if he did not'. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 180 f., 182-5. For Bute, as the chief author of measures against the Colonies, see No. 5289, &c.

$5\frac{15}{16} \times 3\frac{15}{16}$ in.

5282 AMERICA IN FLAMES. [1 Jan. 1775]

Woodcut. From the Town and Country Magazine, vi. 659. America, as 'a venerable lady' sits on the topmost of three steps, surrounded by flames. Above her head from among clouds two figures blow at the fire with bellows: Bute (l.), in Highland dress, plies bellows inscribed Quebec Bill; and in the centre Mansfield, in wig and gown, plies bellows inscribed Masachusetts Bay. On his l. sits the Devil (r.), an imp with horns, claws, and bat's wings. Beside America (r.) stands Lord North in profile looking at her through a lorgnette; in his l. hand he holds the Boston Port Bill. Below four patriots are attempting to put out the flames, one with a bucket of water, two with syringes. Down the steps in front rolls a tea-pot spilling its contents.

The text explains the patriots as 'well-known faces . . . often seen in and near the Mansion House and among the members of the society of the Bill of Rights'. Wilkes is indicated by his squint, the man with the bucket has some resemblance to Parson Horne, the others are too rudely drawn for identification. North is 'the ostensible agent of the trio' in the clouds.

The tea-pot is a symbol of the Boston tea-party which had caused the measures here pilloried (except the Quebec Act): the withdrawal of the charter of Massachusetts and the Boston Port Bill, see Nos. 5226, 5227, 5228, 5236, 5285. For other references to the tax on tea and its consequences see Nos. 5226, 5490, 5491, 6190. For Bute as the chief instigator of measures against the Colonies see No. 5289, &c. For the Quebec Act see No. 5228, &c.

This woodcut was used in the Hibernian Magazine, Jan. 1775 [1 Feb. 1775].

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5283 FRONTISPIECE

[1 Feb. 1775]

Lon. Mag. 1775.

Engraving. Allegorical figures representing Peace, America, and Britannia. Peace, a draped figure, stands in the centre poised on clouds; in her r. hand is an olive branch, raised up and pointing towards a small circular temple in the clouds (l.) inscribed Temple of Commerce. In her r. hand she holds the r. wrist of Britannia who stands (r.) with her shield and spear. America, as a Red Indian woman with a feathered head-dress, a sheaf of arrows at her back and holding an unstrung bow, looks towards Peace and Britannia. At her side is a basket from which fruit is pouring. Beneath the design is engraved,

*When fell Debate & civil Wars shall cease,
Commerce shall spread her Sails o'er all the Seas;
England unrivall'd in the liberal Arts,
Shall bear her Genius to remotest Parts,
Take to thy Breast, America again,
Thou may'st defy imperious France & Spain.*

$5\frac{13}{16} \times 4$ in.

B.M.L., 159. n. 7.

5284 THE PATRIOTICK BARBER OF NEW YORK, OR THE CAPTAIN IN THE SUDS. [? Philip Dawe]

Pl. III. London, Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett, No 53 Fleet Street, as the Act directs 14 Feb. 1775.

Mezzotint. One of a series, see pp. 169, 196-7, and No. 5241. The interior of a barber's shop. A customer is in the barber's chair, draped in a sheet, without his wig, one half of his face covered with soap. From the pocket of his coat hangs a paper inscribed Orders of Government. A man standing on the r. hands him a letter inscribed To Capⁿ Crozer; the letter-carrier is raising his hat and grinning. The barber frowns and pushes his customer by the shoulder as if to eject him from his shop; he holds a razor in his l. hand and points to a broken barber's bowl on the ground, from which soapy water is pouring out. On the l. is a door, the lower part closed by a gate; a man standing outside, points to the captain, with a grin. Over the door is the word Barclay, showing that the shop was in Barclay Street, New York.

On a shelf against the back wall at r. angles with the door are two wigblocks with carved faces. On one (l.) is an elaborately curled wig with a queue evidently belonging to the captain, since on it is a laced three-cornered hat with a cockade. At this shelf (r.) sits the barber's assistant dressing a wig, a comb is stuck in his unkempt hair; he looks over his shoulder grinning at the captain's plight, showing a lean and grotesque profile. On the wall above the shelf are pasted up: (l. to r.) The Speech of Lord Chatham; an engraved T.Q.L. portrait of Chatham seated at a table writing, inscribed Pitt (it resembles the engraving by Houston after Hoare of Pitt when Paymaster-General, but unlike the original Pitt holds a pen instead of a letter); an engraved H.L. portrait of Chief Justice Camden in judge's wig and gown, surrounded by a wreath. (None of the engraved portraits in the B.M. collection resembles this.) Camden was popular owing to his part in the repeal of the Stamp Act, and his statue was erected in New York (Van Tyne, Causes of the War of Independence, 1921, 195-6). Next are the Articles of Association; the Association was signed by all members of Congress on 20 Oct. 1774, binding themselves and their constituents to cut off all trade with Great Britain; committees were named to secure signatures and all who refused to sign or who infringed the Articles were declared 'enemies to liberty', ibid. 441-8, cf. No. 5297. Above the portraits and 'Articles' is a row of four wigs of different patterns hanging on the wall. Over these is a shelf on which are wig-boxes inscribed with the names of colonial patriots: Cornelius Low the big; Abraham Livingston; Alexander M^cDugell; John Lamb. On the floor in the foreground are other wig-boxes: Isaac Sears; Bleck Johnno; William Lugg; Antony Griffiths; Francis Van-Dyke; . . . el Broome; Jacobus Vⁿ Zent; Welle Franklin. Beneath the title is engraved,

*Thou Patriot grand, maintain thy Stand,
And whilst thou sav'st Americ's Land,
Preserve the Golden Rule;
Forbid the Captains there to roam,
Half shave them first, then send 'em home,
Objects of ridicule.*

This depicts an incident which was the subject of a 'Card' dated Oct. 3rd [1774] circulated by the Sons of Liberty in New York praising the patriotic conduct of M^r Jacob Vredenburg in refusing to complete the shaving of Captain John Crozer, Commander of the Empress of Russia, a British transport in the river, after he had been 'most fortunately and providentially informed of the identity of the gentleman's person when he had about half finished the job'. All 'Gentlemen of the Razor' were urged to follow this example. The 'card' was printed in English newspapers, e.g. Kentish Gazette, 7 Jan. 1775. The names on the wig-boxes show great knowledge of New York politics, some were well known at the date of the print: Alexander M^c Dougell, 'the American Wilkes', John Lamb, the leader of the New York Radicals, Isaac Sears, the ultra-radical leader of the mechanics (Van Tyne, Causes of the American War of Independence, 270). Antony Griffiths and Francis Van-Dyke were 'Sons of Liberty' who were especially active in the policy of intimidation; Cornelius Low the big is presumably Cornelius P. Low, a member of the Committee of One Hundred appointed to administer local affairs after the battle of Lexington. Abraham Livingston was subsequently a captain in Marinus Willett's 'Regiment of the Line'. Bleck Johnno is identified by Mr. Halsey as John Blagge an active patriot. William Lugg is unknown, Van Zandt, Broome, and Welle or Walter Franklin were influential merchants, the first among the most radical of the Sons of Liberty, the second Captain of the 'Union' Independent Company who drilled on the Common. The last had been active in enforcing Non-Importation after 1765. Halsey, The Boston Port Bill, as pictured by a Contemporary London Cartoonist, New York, Grolier Club, 1904, pp. 217-22. Reproduction, ibid., p. 215.

12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Two other prints in this series, not in the B.M., are here described from photogravure reproductions in the Boston Port Bill by R. T. H. Halsey, pp. 277-317.

THE ALTERNATIVE OF WILLIAMS-BURG. [? Philip Dawe]

Plate IV. London. Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett, No 53 Fleet Street as the Act directs 16 Feb. 1775.

Mezzotint. One of a series, see pp. 169, 197, and Nos. 5241, 5284. Virginian loyalists being forced to sign either the Association or the Resolutions drawn up by the Williamsburg Convention in Aug. 1774. A number of Liberty Men with large clubs are grouped round two casks on the top of which is a plank serving as a table; on this is the paper which the reluctant loyalists are being forced to sign. A man in profile to the r. is in the act of signing, while a truculent-looking cook stands over him with a large knife; the cook has a cockade in his cook's cap and smokes a long pipe. On the l. another loyalist is being dragged towards the gallows by a group of Sons of Liberty with clubs, his hands are clasped in supplication; one points at the gallows, another, who holds the victim by the collar, is about to cut off his hair with a pair of scissors. The gallows (r.) with its swinging sack of feathers and barrel of dripping tar is inscribed A cure for the Refractory. Among the spectators is a scowling woman (r.) in profile to the l., holding up an infant; a little boy clings to her skirts holding a flag inscribed Liberty and wearing a wooden sword and a hat with a cockade. There are also a negro, and a sour-looking minister with lank hair. One of the two barrels is inscribed Tobacco A Present for John Wilkes Esq^r Lord Mayor of London. The papers on it are inscribed The Resolves of the Congress and Non Importation. (The Resolutions of Williamsburg included an undertaking to conform to every resolution of the Continental Congress which should (in future) be consented to by the delegates from Virginia, and one that every exporter of tobacco should be considered an enemy to the community. They were printed in full in the Middlesex Journal of Sept. 17-20, 1774 and reprinted by R. T. H. Halsey, op. cit., pp. 260-9.) Behind, (l.) on a high pedestal inscribed Botetourt is a statue of a man standing, in peer's robes, pointing towards the gallows. The conciliatory policy of Lord Botetourt, the popular Governor of Virginia, 1768-70, was so successful that the Virginian House of Burgesses on his death voted 'by acclamation for a statue by "the best statuary in England" as a lasting and elegant Testimony that this Country will ever pay the most distinguished regard and veneration to governors of Worth and Merit'. It was erected in 1774, and is now standing in Williamsburg.

It appears to illustrate a paragraph in the London Chronicle of 26 Jan. 1774: 'Many Virginians being reluctant to sign [the Association] a gibbet was erected in the capital, Williamsburg, from which was hung a barrel of tar and a barrel of feathers, each inscribed A Cure for the Refractory, which proved very effective in securing signatures.' Virginia and Maryland subscribed tobacco towards the fund for Wilkes initiated by the Bill of Rights Society. D. M. Clark, British Opinion and the War of American Independence, 1930, p. 154. For the Association see Nos. 5284, 5297.

B.M.L. Ac. 4714/14 (p. 277).

A SOCIETY OF PATRIOTIC LADIES AT EDENTON IN NORTH CAROLINA. [? P. Dawe]

Plate V. London, Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett, N^o 53 in Fleet Street as the Act directs 25 March 1775. 377.

Mezzotint. The chairwoman, an ugly, elderly woman, sits holding up a banner at the head of a table (r.) on which is a large document inscribed, We the Ladys of Edenton do hereby Solemnly Engage not to Conform to that Pernicious Custom of Drinking Tea, or that we the aforesaid Ladys will not promote y^e wear of any Manufacture from England untill such time that all Acts which tend to Enslave this our Native Country shall be Repealed. A young woman in a hat bends over the table to sign the paper. Another sits facing her, pen in hand; she is of meretricious appearance, and is being kissed by a young man. Behind stand two women wearing hats, plainly dressed, and of puritanic appearance; one drinks from a large punch-bowl, the other helps her to support the bowl. On the r. is an open door, two ruffianly-looking men stand outside it, one holds out his hat; a lady pours into the hat the contents of a tea-caddy, two other ladies stand by with tea-caddies. On the l. of the chairwoman sits a demure young woman holding a fan; beside her on the ground are tea-caddies which a dog is befouling. The dog licks the face of a doll-like child sitting under the table.

B.M.L. Ac. 4714/14 (p. 317).

5285 THE THISTLE REEL.

[1 Mar. 1775]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xlv. 56. Three men dance round a tall thistle. The stem of the thistle is decorated with a Garter ribbon inscribed Honi soit qui Mal y pense; its flower is surrounded by a glory of light from which issue rays terminating in a circle of black clouds; over it are the words Carduus benedictus. Among the clouds (r.) is seated the Devil playing the bagpipes. The dancers are (l. to r.): Bute in court dress wearing the Garter ribbon, &c., and pointing with one hand to the thistle, with the other to a scroll on the ground inscribed Noli me tangere. North, smiling, looks at the thistle through a lorgnette. Lord Mansfield in judge's wig and gown holds the Quebec Bill, while by his feet is a scroll inscribed Nemo me impune lacessit (the motto of the Order of the Thistle).

The text explains this as 'a vision' seen in the Court Yard of St. James's Palace 'after a long argument at the Cocoa with the putrid Jacobites of that club'. The 'boreal triumvirate dance to the tune of "Over the water to Charley" but flee at the appearance of a ghastly bleeding figure . . . the injured Ghost of poor America', who asserts 'that her country would ruin ours, and France and Spain would profit by the downfall of both'. The guard rush out yelling 'a civil war, a civil war!'

The Government's policy to America is generally attacked in these satires as inspired by Bute and Scottish influence, see No. 5289, &c., a favourite theme also in America. Here the Quebec Bill is singled out for especial condemnation, see Nos. 5228, 5286, &c. For the Cocoa Tree, a Tory club whose origin was a chocolate house formerly a resort of Jacobites, see Gibbon, Misc. Works, 1814, i. 154.

$6\frac{5}{16} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5286 VIRTUAL REPRESENTATION. 1775.

April 1. 1775.

Price 6^d

Engraving. Seven figures on the sea-shore represent the situation in America: four (l.) take the offensive, two (r.) are prepared to defend themselves, while Britannia on the extreme r., blindfolded, is about to rush into a pit inscribed The Pit prepared for others. Each has a number referring to an explanatory note beneath the design giving the words spoken by each character. The two principal antagonists are Bute (1), who aims a blunderbuss at (5), America, a plainly dressed and sturdy man holding a club. Bute, who wears his Garter ribbons, tartan breeches, and a tartan plaid, is One String Jack, saying, Deliver your Property (Rann, 'Sixteen String Jack', was a noted highwayman hanged in 1774). America answers, I will not be Robbed. Behind him and holding his l. hand is (6), an English sailor wearing trousers, who says, I shall be wounded with you. Behind Britannia (7) rushes towards the pit saying, I am blinded. The Speaker of the House of Commons in his wig and robes, holding the mace, stands in the centre pointing at America and saying to Bute, I give you that man's money for my use. Two figures on the l. encourage Bute and the Speaker: A monk (3), kneels on the ground holding out towards Bute a cross and the model of a gibbet saying Te Deum. Behind him, and on the extreme l., stands (2), a figure representing France, wearing bag-wig, solitaire, and feathered hat; he is flourishing his sword and saying, Begar Just so en France. The words spoken by (2) and (3) are bracketed with the word Accomplices.

In the background, on the horizon, are two towns: (8) Quebec (l.) standing on a cliff, its spires and buildings surrounded by a wall, its castle flying the Union flag; (9) Boston, on the sea level, is in flames; (8) is described as The French Roman Catholick Town of Quebec; (9) is The English Protestant Town of Boston.

This contrast is an attack on the Quebec Act and on the punitive measures taken against Massachusetts for the Boston tea-party. The attack on the Quebec Act as the establishment of Roman Catholicism in Canada is further stressed by the figures of the monk and of France, see No. 5228, &c. It is to be noted that the date of the print is before the opening of hostilities at Lexington, 19 Apr. 1775, cf. No. 5287. The words of Bute and the action of the Speaker indicate that America was being taxed for the benefit of England, while the title derides the theory that the colonists, like Englishmen without the franchise, were 'virtually represented' in the House of Commons. See Cambridge Mod. Hist., vii. 193 f. and M. C. Tyler, Literary History of the American Revolution, i. 103-5, 305 ff.

Similar in manner and intention to No. 5287 and probably by the same artist.

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 11\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5287 THE SCOTCH BUTCHERY, BOSTON. 1775.

Pub^d According to Act of Parl^{mt} . . . 1775.

Engraving. Numbers on the plate refer to explanatory notes engraved beneath the design. A symbolical representation of the situation in Massachusetts. Groups of figures stand outside Boston which is being bombarded by ships of war. The directors of the 'Butchery' stand in the r. centre; on the r. is a group of Scottish soldiers, on the l. a group of English soldiers. (1) and (2) are B—[Bute] and M— [Mansfield] standing in consultation, and pointing with satisfaction to the bombarding ships. Bute, wearing his Garter ribbon and star, is dressed as a highland chief in feathered cap, kilt, and plaid, a drawn broadsword in his hand. Mansfield wears a coronet, a judge's wig and robes; he holds books in his l. hand. B— and M— are bracketed together as Super Intendants of the Butchery from the two great Slaughter Houses. Slightly behind these two stand (3) and (4), one wearing a kilt and plaid with the hat and coat of a military officer; he holds a spear in his r. hand, a paper inscribed Pardon 1745 in his l. hand. The other wears a legal wig and gown, in his l. hand is a paper inscribed Solicit[or General]; he points towards the ships, looking anxiously towards Bute and Mansfield. They are Col. F—r and W—n, bracketed together as Deputies to the above [to Bute and Mansfield]. (3) is evidently Simon Fraser (1726–82), eldest son of Lord Lovat, who was pardoned in 1750 for his share in the '45. In 1756 he raised a Highland regiment which fought brilliantly in Canada and was disbanded at the peace. Many of its officers and men joined a regiment raised by Fraser at the outbreak of the American War, the 71st or Fraser Highlanders. Fraser was then a major-general but did not accompany his regiment to America. (4) is Wedderburn, the Solicitor-General, who came to London with Fraser when they were both young men. The soldiers on the r. are (5), described as Scotch Butchers; they are in Highland dress, with lank hair and ruffianly faces, they have muskets with fixed bayonets, one holds a drawn broadsword; their standard is patterned with thistles. They press forward eagerly to obey the orders of Bute. The English soldiers (l.) stand with expressions and gestures of horror, their muskets and a pike on the ground at their feet. They are (6), English Soldiers struck with Horror, & dropping their Arms. The ships, which are bombarding the town at close range, fly flags decorated with a thistle; one has a thistle for a figure-head. They are (7), The English Fleet with Scotch Commanders. In the background is (8), Boston; outside its walls a number of men on a minute scale are fleeing in disorder, many bodies lie on the ground.

From the title, and from the fact that the fugitives appear to be unarmed, they are probably intended for harmless Bostonians killed by the British fleet. If an actual incident is intended, it must be the retreat of the British troops to Boston after Lexington¹ (19 Apr. 1775), though the bombardment may represent that of Charlestown during Bunker Hill.

One of a number of satires ascribing the measures against the Colonies to Bute, see Nos. 5285, 5289, 5328, &c.

7 × 12 $\frac{15}{16}$ in.

5288 THE POLITICAL CARTOON FOR THE YEAR 1775.

[1 May 1775]

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, iii. 209. A two-wheeled open chaise is being driven rapidly towards a chasm (l.), into which the two horses, inscribed Pride and Obstinacy, are about to plunge. The driver, Lord Mansfield, flourishes a whip, on his l. sits the king, his eyes closed, holding a paper inscribed I Glory in the Name of Englishman. Behind the chaise in the place of a footman, stands Bute, a drawn broadsword in his r. hand; he holds out papers inscribed Places, Pensions, and Reversions towards a crowd of spectators. A wheel passes over an open book, Magna Charta, the horses trample on another inscribed Constitution. In the air (l.) a demon flies off with a sack inscribed National Credit. A group of four bishops wearing mitres, and two laymen, one being North, hold out their hands obsequiously towards the chaise; the foremost bishop is eating. The text explains that they are 'feeding on garbage, or picking up white sticks [rods of office], blue or red Rags [ribbons of the Garter or the Bath], &c., &c.' Behind the chaise are a running footman and two men who stretch out their arms as if to check its disastrous course; one is Chatham with crutches and a gouty leg, the other in judge's robes is probably Lord Camden. Beyond the chasm (l.) is a group of Scotsmen, two write at a table, three others stand. The text explains them as 'Scotch clerks—Secretaries—Governors, &c.'. In the background (l.) is the sea; on the horizon is a town in flames inscribed America. In the foreground (r.) is a crowd of men and women of all conditions, including a bearded Jew, and a macaroni holding up a lorgnette who offers a purse to a young woman. A grimacing minister wearing a ribbon faces the crowd offering a money-bag. They represent 'the incorruptible virtue of Modern Electors as practised lately in the immaculate Boroughs of Hindon and Shaftesbury'. George III is described as 'a full grown young man in leading-strings', driven to destruction by his advisers. Cf. No. 5132.

¹ Four plates of Lexington and Concord by Amos Doolittle after Earl were engraved in 1775; in these the figures are drawn with a stiff incompetence which resembles caricature. Reproductions in Jonas Clark's Opening of the War of Independence . . . Boston, 1875. B.M.L. 1851, b. 8.

For the gross corruption at Hindon in 1774 see Oldfield, Representative History of Great Britain, 1816, v. 126 ff. For the Shaftesbury election see No. 5341.

The word cartoon appears to be used ironically in its meaning of a design for a picture as it was used by Leech in 1843 for his caricatures of mural cartoons. The earliest instance in the O.E.D. of its use for a satire is 1863.

$4\frac{3}{16} \times 7\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5289 BUNKERS HILL, OR THE BLESSED EFFECTS OF FAMILY QUARRELS. [c. 1775]

Engraving. Probably from a magazine. America and Britannia are fighting: America (l.), a Red Indian woman with feathered head-dress, has a tomahawk in one hand, a scalping-knife in the other. Britannia (r.) seizes her by the shoulder, her spear raised to strike. Behind America stands Spain, he pierces with his sword the shield of Britannia which lies on the ground; in his l. hand he holds a rope which is round America's shoulders. Behind Britannia stands France, who pulls off her draperies leaving her breast bare, while he pierces her through the heart from the back with his sword. The scene is the sea-shore; in the sea are the masts of sunken ships. Spain strides across two globes on the ground representing the two hemispheres. In the upper part of the design are three figures seated on clouds who point with satisfaction at the scene below: Bute, wearing a Scots cap and tartan waistcoat, puts his l. arm round North's shoulder; on his r. sits Mansfield holding a large book, a demon (l.) clutches at him.

News of the battle of Bunker Hill (17 June) reached London on 25 July.

One of many satires ascribing the American dispute to the influence of Bute, see Nos. 5226, 5228, 5285, 5287, 5328, 5573, 5580, &c., and p. 217. For the attitude of France and Spain see Corwin, French Policy and the American Alliance of 1778, 1916, chapters i-vi.

$5\frac{5}{8} \times 3\frac{9}{16}$ in.

5290 GEORGE WASHINGTON, ESQR.

Done from an Original, Drawn from the life by Alex^r Campbell, of Williamsburgh in Virginia.

Published as the Act directs, 9 Sept^r 1775 by C. Shepherd.

Mezzotint. One of a series of portraits of officers in the American War, some at least being imaginary, and the publication lines perhaps fictitious. Washington in uniform and cocked hat on horseback, a sword in his hand, looking over his r. shoulder to the l. In the background is a battle, infantry with a flag firing point-blank at cavalry. Beneath the title is engraved, General and Commander in Chief of the Continental Army in America.

Washington was appointed C.-in-C. on 23 June. Campbell is unknown as an artist, and was unknown to Washington, who writes, 31 Jan. 1776, 'Mr Campbell whom I never saw to my knowledge, has made a very formidable figure of the Commander-in-Chief, giving him a sufficient portion of terror in his countenance.'

For others of the series, whose political intention is clear, the American officers being heroes, the British unsuccessful or barbarous, see Nos. 5291, 5292-3, 5296, 5331, 5332, 5336-9, 5405, 5406, 5407-8, 5561, 5582, 6034. Copies of most if not all were issued by J. M. Will of Augsburg, see No. 6034.

Chaloner Smith, iv, p. 1717. C. H. Hart, Engraved Portraits of Washington, Grolier Club, 1904, No. 721 and p. viii. Andrews, pp. 55, 90.

$12\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5291 GEORGE WASHINGTON, ESQR.

Mezzotint. Inscription and publication line as in No. 5290, with the addition of London after Shepherd, and of Ioh. Martin Will excud Aug. [Augsburg] Vind. T.Q.L. standing portrait of Washington in uniform facing l. with outstretched r. arm, looking over his l. shoulder to the r. In the background is a battle, cavalry among clouds of smoke.

A copy, probably by Will, see No. 6034, of a plate apparently belonging to the same series as 5290.

C. H. Hart, No. 730 a.

$12\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5292 ISRAEL PUTNAM ESQR

J. Wilkinson^t pinx^t [?'C. Corbutt'.]

Published as the Act directs by C Shepherd 9 Sept^r 1775.

Mezzotint. One of a series, see No. 5290. T.Q.L. standing in uniform his r. elbow leaning on the muzzle of a cannon. In the background (r.)

¹ Perhaps a fictitious name. According to Füssli, Kunstlerlexicon, 1816, p. 5096, he is known only for this portrait, but see Nos. 5294, 5408.

clouds of smoke with a battery of cannon firing. Beneath the title is engraved, Major General of the Connecticut Forces, and Commander in Chief at the Engagement on Buncker's-Hill near Boston, 17 June 1775. Cf. No. 5329. Chaloner Smith, iv. 1716. Andrews, p. 91.

$12\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5292_A

A copy of No. 5292 published in Augsburg having the same inscription with the addition of London after the date and of Ioh. Martin Will excudit Aug. Vind.

5292_B ISRAEL PUTTNAM.

peint par Jean Wilkinson a Boston

se vend à Londres chez Thom. Hart.

A copy of No. 5292, bust only, oval in rectangle. Beneath the title is inscribed Major Général dans les Forteresses de la Province Connecticut, et Cominandant en Chef de l'Expedition a Bunckers-Hill pres de Boston le 17. Juin 1776.

$7\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5293 THE HON^{BLE} JOHN HANCOCK.

[? 'C. Corbutt'.]

London, Published as the Act directs 25 Octo^r 1775 by C. Shepherd.

Mezzotint. One of a series, see No. 5290. Bust portrait in an oval, looking to right, wearing a bag-wig and laced coat. Beneath the title is inscribed, of Boston in New England; President of the American Congress. Done from an Original Picture Painted by Littleford. The artist's name and publication line are perhaps fictitious, cf. Nos. 5292, 5294.

Chaloner Smith, iv, p. 1715. Andrews, pp. 89-90.

$12\frac{3}{8} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5294 JEAN HANCOCK.

peint par Jean Wilkinson a Boston

Se vend a Londres chez Thom. Hart.

Mezzotint. Apparently a copy, though an incorrect one, of No. 5293. Beneath the title is inscribed, President au Congres des XIII Provinces unies d'Amerique né a Boston.

$7\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5295 SIX-PENCE A DAY.

[? W. Humphrey.]

Publish d 26. Oct^r 1775 by W. Humphrey, Gerrard Street, Soho.

Engraving. An anti-recruiting satire, showing the calamities to which a soldier is exposed, and contrasting his lot with that of the working man. A tall emaciated soldier stands in the centre, his fingers interlaced, his expression one of bewildered melancholy; he is knock-kneed, his toes project through his tattered shoes. His wife and children are appealing to him: the woman barefoot and ragged, in an advanced state of pregnancy, with two crying infants in a basket which is tied to her shoulders, holds out her hands towards him. A ragged emaciated boy holds up his hands in supplication. The words The Target are inscribed beneath the soldier's feet. On the extreme r. across a stream a skeleton-like figure dressed in rags is seated on a stone inscribed Famine. He beckons to the soldier with a claw-like finger; at his feet are a skull and cross-bones, and a thistle, to indicate Scottish influence. At his back is a flag-staff and above his head flies a flag inscribed,

COURAGE BOYS!

*If you Gentⁿ Soldiers should die & be damn'd
Your Wives & y^r Infants may live and be cramm'd.*

Vid. subscriptⁿ

Two American soldiers (r.) are firing across the stream point-blank at the English soldier: one fires a musket, the other, torch in hand, a cannon. Across the front of their caps is written Death or Liberty, cf. No. 5329. Behind them is a hill on which is a fort.

On the l. are the representatives of 'the lowest trades': A chairman on the extreme l., stout and well-clad, holds with one hand the pole of a sedan-chair, with the other he points at the soldier. Next him a coachman, even more stout and prosperous, stands holding a whip and a large foaming tankard, inscribed in reverse WH 1775, probably the initials of the artist. Between the coachman and the woman stands a little chimney-sweep, ragged but grinning. He points derisively at the soldier, in his l. hand is a paper inscribed He would be a soldier, cf. No. 5783. On the ground is a paper inscribed,

*England shall exalt her Glories
From her present PATRIOT tories
See what vast Subscriptions fly
To make the unwilling Soldier die*

Above the design is engraved, Exposed to the Horrors of War, Pestilence and Famine, for a Farthing an Hour. Beneath the design (l.) is engraved 3 Shillings a Day, 2 Shillings a Day, 1 Shilling a Day, indicating the wages respectively of the chairman, the coachman, and the sweep. On the r. is engraved Yankees. Fire and Water. Sword and Famine. Below these inscriptions is engraved, This Sketch displays the Hardship a Soldier and his Family endure on the bare Subsistence of Six-pence a Day, while the lowest Trades earn sufficient to enjoy the Comforts of Life.

At this time subscriptions were being raised locally to provide comforts for soldiers and to increase the bounty paid to recruits, cf. Corr. of George III, iii. 257, 263. For the great difficulty of obtaining recruits see E. C. Curtis, The Organization of the British Army in the American Revolution, 1926, chap. iii; Fortescue, Hist. of the British Army, iii. 1902, p. 170 f. For the actual pay of the soldiers, which was complicated by a system of allowances, see Fortescue, ibid., iii. 512 f. One of several anti-recruiting prints, see Nos. 5403, 5471, 5551, 5552.

$8\frac{3}{8} \times 13\frac{11}{16}$ in.

5296 CHARLES LEE, ESQ^R

Thomlinson Pinx^t [? 'Corbutt']

Publish'd as the Act directs, 31 Oct^r 1775, by C. Shepherd.

Mezzotint. One of a series, see No. 5290. A standing T.Q.L. portrait of a handsome and rather stout man in uniform, looking to the l., pointing with the r. hand to the r. Behind (r.) are two cannon and a large flag inscribed An Appeal to Heaven to which Lee is pointing. Beneath the title is inscribed Major General of the Continental-Army in America.

This can have little if any resemblance to Lee who was 'tall and remarkably thin with an ugly face and an aquiline nose of enormous size' (D.N.B.), and is probably, like others of the series, an imaginary portrait. Lee, a British officer, who appears as a colonel on half-pay in the Army List for 1774, was appointed second Major-General of the American army before Boston on 17 June 1775, the day of Bunker Hill. A 'restless, unstable untrustworthy adventurer'. L. C. Hatch, Administration of the American Revolutionary Army, New York, 1904, p. 10. For the flag see No. 5336. See also No. 5404.

Chaloner Smith, iv, p. 1716. Cf. Andrews, p. 91.

$12\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5296 A A copy, probably by Will, inscription as above, with the addition of London after Shepherd and of Ioh. Martin Will excud. Aug. [Augsburg] vind. Thomlinson is spelt Thomlinsen.

5297 THE CONGRESS OR THE NECESSARY POLITICIANS.

Engraving. Two men seated in a 'necessary house'. One (l.) is tearing fragments from Resolution[s] of the [C]ongress; he turns in profile to the l. The other, wearing spectacles, is reading intently a book called Answer to a P[amphlet] entitled Taxation. . . Tir . . . On the wall behind them two prints are stuck up, one a bust portrait of Wilkes as Mayor (partly cut off by the l. margin of the print), the other a caricature of a tarred and feathered man; above this is etched Album vector in Alitem &c., and below, [Por]trait of W— P— Tarr'd & Feather'd 1774.

The Resolutions of Congress, 14 Oct. 1774 and the Association 20 Oct. 1774 were widely printed in the English Press, e.g. London Chronicle, 15–17 Dec. 1774. See S. E. Morison, Sources and documents illustrating the American Revolution, 1929, pp. 118–25. They include a non-importation, non-consumption, and non-exportation association, cf. No. 5284. The book which one of the politicians is reading is evidently 'An Answer to a Pamphlet entitled Taxation no Tyranny, addressed to the Author and to Persons in Power'. The sub-title of S. Johnson's pamphlet, 'Taxation no Tyranny', published in Feb. 1775, is 'An Answer to the Resolutions and Address of the American Congress'. The Congress sat from 5 Sept. to 29 Oct. 1774. For tarring and feathering cf. No. 5232, and p. 169.

$6\frac{9}{16} \times 8\frac{1}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5298 THE CONTRAST.

[c. 1775¹]

Engraving. A pastoral landscape divided by a stream, the sea with ships in the distance. On the l. side a cow, representing the Colonies, is held by four men, two at her head, while the other two hold the tail; a fifth man holds a basin for blood which is pouring from a wound in her neck. Another man lying on the ground holding a shepherd's crook stabs her hind-leg with a knife. On a decayed tree (l.) is perched a crow or raven. A blanket or cloth hung over one of its branches makes a shelter; under this sits a man drinking from a bowl, which another man has just brought from the cow. Behind, a man with an axe is cutting down an apple-tree laden with fruit. On the cow's hindquarter is a large stamp, representing the stamp imposed by the Stamp Act, 1765 (repealed 1766).

¹ Mr. Hawkins has dated the print 1775.

On the other side of the stream (r.) is a contrasting scene: A cow garlanded with flowers, and trampling on a yoke, is being milked by a young woman; children drink milk from bowls. Other children feed the cow with flowers. Brimming milk-pails stand on the ground; a woman whose lap is full of flowers, gives flowers and milk to a child. Five little girls dance in a ring, holding hands. A boy stands in an apple-tree throwing down the fruit to a girl who holds out her apron. On the top branch of the tree two love-birds kiss. The scene is arcadian and in the distance two figures pursue a stag with bow and spear. Beneath the design is engraved Let us not Cut down the Tree to get at the Fruit. Let us Stroke and not Stab the Cow; For her Milk, and not her Blood, can give us real Nourishment and Strength.

An appeal for conciliatory measures towards the Colonies in the interests of trade and the mother country. For other references to the Stamp Act see No. 5487, &c.

$8\frac{11}{16} \times 14\frac{13}{16}$ in.

1775

PERSONAL SATIRES

5299-5311

Series of Tête-à-Tête portraits

5299 N° XXXIV MISS C—

N° XXXV THE POWERFULL PLEADER

Publish'd as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near S^t John's Gate, Jan^y 1775.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 625. Two bust portraits, a lady facing T.Q. to the r., a barrister in wig and gown in profile to the l. holding an eye-glass in r. hand. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or Memoirs of the Powerful Pleader and Miss Lucy C—n'. An account of Dunning (1731-83) and his amours. Unlike most portraits in this series, his is well characterized and resembles later caricatures. Miss C— is identified by H. Bleackley as Charlton.

Ovals, $2\frac{13}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442.

5300 N° XXXVII MISS D—PLE

N° XXXVIII THE PIOUS PREACHER

Publish'd as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near S^t John's Gate Jan^y 20. 1775.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vi. 681 (Supplement). Two bust portraits in oval frames, that on the r. being a profile to the l. of John Wesley. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the Pious Preacher and Miss D—mple'. An account of John Wesley and his supposed relations with Miss D—, his 'fair Proselyte'. Miss D— is the daughter of an 'eminent attorney'.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5301 N° II. M^{RS} N—B—T.

N° III THE HON. CAPT^N H—.

Publish'd as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near S^t John's Gate Feb 1. 1775.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vii. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed, or Memoirs of the hon. Capt. H—y and M^{RS} N—t'. An account of Augustus John Hervey (1724-79) afterwards third earl of Bristol, of Miss Chudleigh (then known as the Duchess of Kingston, see No. 5319, &c.) and of M^{RS} Nesbit, to whom Hervey bequeathed almost all his unsettled property, D.N.B.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5302 N° IV MISS W—MS

N° V PEEPING TOM OF COVENTRY

Publish'd as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate Mar^h 1. 1775.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vii. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of George William, 6th Earl of Coventry (1722-1809) and his marriage to Maria Gunning. Also of Miss Williams, the daughter of a Welsh clergyman, who had been seduced and deserted, and had been found destitute by Coventry.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5303 N° VII MISS M—TH—WS

N° VIII THE E. OF A—M

*Publish'd as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Apr^l 1. 1775.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vii. 121. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of John, 2nd Earl of Ashburnham (1724-1812),¹ and of Miss Matthews, said to have been till recently the mistress of one of the Perreaus whose trial for forgery was pending.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5304 N° X MISS L—Y

N° XI THEATRICUS

*Publish'd as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
May 1. 1775.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vii. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of a member of a noble family with a great fondness for the stage, who was considered at the Bedford as a dramatic critic whose judgements constituted 'the town'. He is the Fitzpatrick who led an opposition to Garrick at the Bedford and in the Press and is the Fizzig of Garrick's Scribleriad. D.N.B., s.v. 'Garrick'. His amours after the death of his wife with Mrs. G— and with Miss L—y, the daughter of a bankrupt tradesman who had been seduced, are described. He appears to be the Hon. Richard Fitzpatrick, brother of the Earl of Upper Ossory and uncle of Fox's friend, Colonel Richard Fitzpatrick. See a family group, in B.M. Catalogue of Engr. Br. Portraits.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5305 N° XIII MISS HARRIET P—L

N° XIV LORD S—

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate,
June 1. 1775.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vii. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames, she looks T.Q. to the r., he T.Q. to the l. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or Memoirs of Lord S——th and Miss Harriet P——ll'. An account of Lord Seaforth (1744-81) and Harriet Powell, a courtesan. She is said to have been the daughter of an apothecary in the Borough, left destitute at his death, and after a succession of protectors entered the establishment of Charlotte H. [Hayes]; but was much superior to her profession. Her liaison with Seaforth appears to have become permanent; they married (in or before 1779) and her death, Dec. 1779, is recorded in the Annual Register as that of Lady Seaforth. Notes and Queries, 10th s. xii, p. 241. See B.M. Catalogue of Engr. Br. Portraits.

¹ H. Bleackley identifies him with the Earl of Ancrum (1737-1815, succeeded as Marquis of Lothian 12 Apr. 1775). A place at Court and an alleged liaison with Peg Woffington (1714?-60) make the older man the more likely subject. He seems also from the text to be a peer of Parliament, which Ancrum was not.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5306 N° XVI SIGNIORA BALL—NT—NI

N° XVII E. OF C——D

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate July 1. 1775.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vii. 289. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of Philip Stanhope (1755-1815), fifth Earl of Chesterfield, who succeeded his godfather in 1773, and his amours while on the grand tour.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5307 N° XIX MAD^{LLE} LE B——N

N° XX L——D S——T

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate. Aug^t 1. 1775.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vii. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames. He wears the ribbon and star of the Thistle. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of Lord Stormont (1727-96) and his amours with Mlle. Le Brun and others.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5308 N° XXII. MISS V—GH—N

N° XXIII. THE AMERICAN HERO

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate. Sep^r 1. 1775

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vii. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of G——l H——e and Miss V——gh——n'. A laudatory account of Sir William Howe (1729-1814) and Miss Charlotte Vaughan, his supposed mistress, the daughter of a poor parson at Denbigh. For Howe see No. 5405, &c.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5309 N° XXV MISS S—TH
N° XXVI M— OF G—

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate.
Oct^r I. 1775.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vii. 457. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the M—s of G—y, and Miss S—th'. An account of Charles Manners (1754-87), styled Marquess of Granby, 1770-9; M.P. for Cambridge 1774-9, Duke of Rutland 1779. His liaison with Miss Smith, the seduced daughter of a Windsor shopkeeper, whom he had known when at Eton, is expected to be temporary should his talked-of marriage take place. See No. 5358.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5310 N° XXVIII MISS LA—LY
N° XXIX D. OF B—

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Nov^r I. 1775.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vii. 513. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the D—e of B—r and Miss L—gl—y'. An account, apparently, of Francis Egerton, third Duke of Bridgewater (1736-1803), which says nothing of the commonly known events of his life. Miss L. is a farmer's daughter who became stage-struck and joined a company of strolling players. The Duke gave her the superintendence of a small farm where he visits her incognito.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5311 N° XXXI. MISS K—T.
N° XXXII. R— H— O—

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate.
Dec^r I. 1775.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vii. 569. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of R— H— O— Esq; and Miss K—n' [sic]. An account of Robert Henley Ongley, M.P. for Bedfordshire, of Old Warden, Bedfordshire, and his mistress, a chamber-milliner.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5312-5318, and numbers from volume IV

Prints published by Darly, of which only 5312 and 4638 appear to belong to series.

5312 A NUN OF THE LAST CLASS

Pub^d by M Darly March 14 1775 Strand.

Engraving. One of a series of portraits of prostitutes, see No. 5177. Bust portrait of a young girl in profile to the r. Her skin is patched. She wears a cap over her hair which falls loosely on her forehead and neck; over her shoulders is a patterned scarf.

$5 \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Fairholt's 'Collection for costume', i, fo. 117.

THE MACARONY SHOE MAKER

[See No. 4638—1 June 1775]

5313 JACK ON A CRUISE A MISSEY IN YE OFFING
MASQUERADE SCENE KENSINGTON GARDENS.

[? After Bunbury]

Pub Jan^v 10 by M Darly 39 Strand 1775

Engraving. Another version of No. 5083. Two figures in back view walk across a grass lawn. The nearer is apparently a woman of vast proportions wearing a hood and cloak; the title indicates that she is a sailor in disguise walking after a young woman. A spaniel barks at the sailor. On the r. are trees, on the l. a line of trees. This differs from No. 5083 in the drawing and position of the figures and in the arrangement of the trees and garden-seat. See also No. 5797.

$8\frac{1}{16} \times 6\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5314 THE BREECHES IN THE FIERA MASCHERETA.

Pub by M Darly 39 Strand 25 April 1775

Engraving. An enormous pair of breeches reaching from the head to the feet of the wearer, and forming his (or her) sole visible garment. A face in profile to the r. appears through an unbuttoned aperture; on the wearer's head is a ducal coronet surmounted by large ostrich-feathers. The tiny high-heeled shoes suggest that the wearer is a woman.

A companion-print to No. 5315, where the wearer of a petticoat appears to be a man. They are perhaps caricatures of a ducal pair where the husband was dominated by an overbearing wife, in which case she would appear to be Jane Maxwell (1740?–1812), wife of the 4th Duke of Gordon. The profile makes this not unlikely.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5315 THE PETTICOAT,

AT THE FIERI MASCHARETA [sic].

Pub^d Apr. 25. 1775 by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. (Coloured impression.) A companion-print to No. 5314. A voluminous petticoat worn over the head as a hood and reaching to the feet of its wearer, whose face, in profile to the l., appears through an aperture. One large gloved hand appears through a slit in the garment. A ducal coronet is on the wearer's head, low-heeled shoes suggest that the wearer is a man. Perhaps a portrait of Alexander, 4th Duke of Gordon (1745–1827); portraits of the Duke show that this is not unlikely.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5316 CORPORAL PERPENDICULAR

Pub^d May 20 1775 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. A H.L. portrait (caricature) in profile to the r. in an oval, of a man wearing a soldier's conical cap, much elongated, on which the letters

G.R. are partly visible. His profile, hair, and figure are almost in vertical straight lines. He wears a coat with military facings and a ruffled shirt.

Reissued in book, dated 1 Jan. 1776, see No. 5369.

$4\frac{5}{8} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5317 THE ABYSSINIAN TRAVELLER.

E. Topham inv^t

Pub by M Darly Dec^r 9. 1775 (39 Strand)

Engraving. A W.L. standing portrait (caricatured) in profile to the r. of James Bruce (1730-94). In his l. hand he holds out an open book, Travels into Abyssinia by . . . His hat is under his r. arm. Beneath the title is etched:

*O Thou whose active search has dar'd explore
Far distant Realms and Climes unknown before;
Thy toils now finishd and thy dangers past,
Spite of Thy self we fix thee here at last.*

Bruce had recently returned to England, where he was at first received with great attention which soon gave way to scepticism and dislike; this led to the postponement of the publication of his travels till 1790.

Reissued in book, dated 1 Jan. 1776, see No. 5369.

$7\frac{1}{16} \times 5\frac{15}{16}$ in.

5318 ECCE HOMO.

Published as the act Directs by Dan. Demoniae. Bethel. 1775. B—b—y¹

Engraving. The window of Matthew Darly's print-shop in the Strand is being violently attacked by a man (William Austin), with the appearance of a maniac. He is shouting Damn your foolish Caricatures. In his r. hand is a cane, on his l. arm is thrust a portfolio in the manner of a shield; it is ornamented by a broken anchor in an oval, round which is inscribed: Life's a Jest and all things show it. I thought so once but now I know it. Papers flutter from the portfolio to the ground: sketches; a paper inscribed M^{rs}s Townshend com^{ts} to M^r A and says he may Dine there; a ground-plan inscribed the Plan for my Museum and (in reversed looking-glass writing) No 103 Oxford Street; a doctor's prescription, Black Hellebore ʒ D^r. Monrow; a paper inscribed Proposals for Opening A Museum of Drawings . . . at 2 Gn^s Each Subs^r 1000 would do (?) & I have got already. Across the window is Ma^t Darly, and in each of three lower rows of panes a print is displayed, the most conspicuous being this print, entitled A Bethlemhite; the print beneath it suggests a chained maniac in Bedlam.

In the street a broken-down coach is slightly sketched, with its wheels twisted or broken off; on it is an anchor like that on the portfolio. In the distance is an equestrian statue, evidently that of Charles II at Charing Cross. A dog watches the onslaught on the window.

Beneath the design is etched: Be it known to all Men, that I — upon Just cause before God and men do Declare & Pronounce War with and against all and every Printshop and Printseller within and without the City of London for reasons hereafter set forth and shall on all occasions act offensively and defensively as opportunity shall offer. Whereas I by the Extream necessity of my circumstances was forced to wreek [sic] my brains to finde out some Scheme thereby to suport myself in that prudent maner I first set of in and having been in the country in order to strengthen my Ideas and to get what was necessary I luckeyley projected one which beyond a doubt must have answered my porpose, which was to open a Museum of Drawings by the best Masters, had it not been for the most malicious wicked and Diabolical combinations consultations and insinuations of that most unfeeling set of Men cald print-sellers so being overwhelmed with disopointments and Poverty takes this despariate method to rebuke their insolence.

¹ The manner is not that of Bunbury.

The suggestion that Austin is a lunatic is stressed by the prescription of 'D^r Munrow', Dr. John Monro being physician of Bethlehem Hospital with a great reputation in the treatment of insanity.

On one impression of this print is written 'William Austen, drawing-master', on the other 'Austen the Drawing Master & print-seller' in contemporary hands. William Austin (1721-1820), like Darly, was an engraver and teacher of drawing, and at one time kept a print-shop in London and published caricatures, see index of artists.

Attributed to Bartolozzi by Calabi, Bartolozzi, 1928, No. 2231.

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5319 THE MARRIED MAID OF HONOUR, OR, THE WIDOW'D WIFE AND HER TWO HUSBANDS.

Publish'd as the Act directs 1 Feb. 1775 by W. Nicoll S^t Pauls Ch. Yard

Engraving. From The Matrimonial Magazine, i. 9, illustrating 'Memoirs of the Married Maid of Honour . . .'. Three bust portraits in oval frames surrounded with elaborate ornament. Above, and slightly larger than the two others, is that of the D—ss of K—, the Duchess of Kingston, so-called. She looks T.Q. to the l., a drapery falling from her head suggests widowhood.

Below are two profile portraits, that on the l. is of a truculent-looking naval officer in profile to the r.: C— H—, he is Augustus John Hervey, then Captain Hervey, who secretly married Elizabeth Chudleigh in 1744; he became 3rd Earl of Bristol 20 Mar. 1775. The other, in profile to the l., wearing a ribbon and star, is D— of K—, Duke of Kingston, who died in 1773, whom Elizabeth Chudleigh had married bigamously in 1769 (having been his mistress for about ten years), after procuring a verdict in the Consistory Court that she was a spinster.

Beneath the design is engraved,

————— And in each hand
A wanton Lover which by turns caress'd her,
With all the freedom of unbounded passion. Otway

At this time an indictment for bigamy was pending, and on 24 May 1775 she appeared in the King's Bench to answer it, the trial taking place in Westminster Hall, 15-22 Apr. 1776, see Nos. 5301, 5362, 5425. For satires on the notorious Miss Chudleigh in 1749 as Iphigenia, see Nos. 3030-3.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{4}$ in. (pl.).

5320 A BATH ADONIS WORSHIPPING THE IDOL OF HIS AFFECTIONS.

[1 Feb. 1775]

Engraved for the Matrimonial Magazine.

Engraving. Matrimonial Magazine, i. 34, illustrating 'the History of Captain S——: or, The Bath Adonis'. A man, richly dressed, leans his r. elbow on a console table, turning his head to look at his reflection in a mirror (l.) in a curved frame. He holds an open snuff-box in his r. hand, his l. is on his hip. He wears a laced coat, an epaulette on the r. shoulder, a flowered waistcoat, and a sword. The legs of the table on which he leans are elaborately carved, the floor is carpeted, the wall papered. An oval picture of Cupid shooting at a reclining figure hangs on the wall. The scene is the pump-room at Bath.

Captain S. is said to have been successively a runaway apprentice, then billiard-marker, actor, fortune hunter, whose wife's fortune enabled him to buy a commission in the army; his deserted wife having died he has gone to Bath to secure another rich wife.

6 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 4 in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5433 m.

5321 THE INDISCRETIONS OF NOBLE BLOOD CURED MEDICINALLY. See pa. 65.Publish'd according to the Act March 1st 1775.

Engraving. Matrimonial Magazine, i. 65, illustrating 'The Loves and Amours of Lord V—— and the gay M^{rs} E——'. A man kneels on one knee kissing the hand of a lady seated on a settee (r.). Her husband, a doctor in a tie-wig, enters through a door unnoticed. The panelled wall, a carved pediment to the door, an oval mirror in a carved frame, &c., suggest a richly-furnished room.

Grace Dalrymple Elliott or Eliot is surprised by her husband Dr. John Elliott (knighted 1776, cr. a baronet 1778), with Lord Valentia (with whom she eloped in 1774). See No. 5257 and index.

6 $\frac{3}{16}$ × 3 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5433 m.

5322 THE H—R—G—N [Harrington] HARAM*Publish'd as the Act directs by W Nicoll St Paul's Church Yard 1 April 1775*

Engraving. From The Matrimonial Magazine, i. 113, illustrating 'The Haram, or the Memoirs of the E—— of H——n', in which the seraglio of Lord Harrington is described. A group of six women, with one man who wears a hat. One is a negress, wearing a feathered turban, another is in pseudo-classical dress, a third is dressed as a country girl, the others are dressed in the fashion of the day. One who is seated is playing a mandoline. The room is ornately decorated, the walls are faced with Corinthian pilasters. On the wall is a picture of an ape riding a goat.

For Harrington see G.E.C. Complete Peerage and No. 5033.

5 $\frac{1}{16}$ × 3 $\frac{3}{16}$ in.5323 THE DUELLIST; OR, THE MODERN MAN OF HONOUR.

[1 May 1775]

Engraved for the Matrimonial Magazine

Engraving. Matrimonial Magazine, i. 185. Portrait of a young man in a swaggering attitude in a park, indicated by trees and a wall. He stands legs apart, hands in his breeches-pockets, a tasselled cane thrust under his l. arm. He wears a sword.

A portrait of Fitzgerald, known as Fighting Fitzgerald, illustrating an article with the same title as that of the print. See Nos. 5198-5200.

$5\frac{3}{8} \times 3\frac{3}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5433 m.

5324 THE JOCKEY STATESMAN AND HIS D—SS.

Engrav'd for the Matrimonial Magazine.

Publish'd as the Act directs by W. Nicoll, St Pauls Church Yard, 1 June 1775.

Engraving. Matrimonial Magazine, i. 234, illustrating 'The History of the Jockey Statesman'. The Duke of Grafton (r.) standing in open country in conversation, or altercation, with his wife (l.). Both are in riding dress, and both hold riding switches, the other hand being raised as if to enforce an argument. Grafton resigned his office of Lord Privy Seal Nov. 1775. His second wife (m. 1769) was Elizabeth, d. of Sir R. Wrottesley, dean of Windsor, by whom he had twelve children; see Nos. 4292, 4634, 4989.

$5\frac{3}{8} \times 3\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5433 m.

5325 SIR TRISTE SHADOW.

[c. 1775]

[Lady Craven.]

Engraving. On the print is written in Miss Banks's hand, 'Lady Craven del.' and 'Edward Roe Yeo Esq^r carrying up the Coventry Address'. A man, riding fast (r. to l.) in profile; behind him on the saddle is a large cylindrical package labelled Coventry address. From his mouth issues a label inscribed,

I'm very much frighted but I shall be Knighted.

A street-scene is indicated by houses on the l. From the window of a house in the foreground looks Peeping Tom.

At this time loyal addresses to the king on the American crisis were pouring in from counties, boroughs, &c. The address from 'the Gentlemen, Clergy, Traders and Principal Inhabitants of the City of Coventry' dated 25 Sept. 1775 was presented to the king by the two members for Coventry, Walter Waring and Edward Roe Yeo. London Gazette, 26-30 Sept. 1775.

Lady Craven (1750-1828, afterwards Margravine of Anspach) in 1786 sent Horace Walpole a drawing of the Castle of Otranto. Letters, xiii. 419-20. $6\frac{1}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5326 AN EMBLEM OF A MODERN MARRIAGE

[Attributed to Gillray.]

Drawn by M H. from a sketch cut with a diamond on a pane of glass.

Publish'd according to act of Parliament June 15, 1775.

Engraving. Two figures stand side by side: a skeleton (l.) wearing a feathered hat, a coat, and sword, a lady (r.) holding a cloak round her, and wearing feathers in her hair. She points with her l. hand to a rectangular tomb, on which is inscribed Requiescas in pace beneath a skull and cross-bones. They are standing on a road which leads to a large country house with a Palladian portico over which is a baron's coronet. In the air a cupid flies away, covering his face with his hand and holding his torch reversed. Beneath the design is etched :

— no smiles for us the God head wears!
His torch inverted & his face in tears!

[From Lord Hervey's Reply to Hammond's Verses to Miss Dashwood.
Dodsley's Collection of Poems, iv. 73-8.]

Grego, Gillray, p. 27.

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 7\frac{7}{16}$ in.

Ten prints from the series of mezzotints published by Carrington Bowles, catalogued in Volumes III and IV.¹

THE MISERIES OF A SINGLE LIFE. (310)

See No. 4540—[c. 1775]

AN UNEXPECTED LEVEE FOR A NEW MARRIED COUPLE.

See No. 4581—2 Jan. 1775

THE WELCH CURATE. (320)

See No. 3784—[1775]

A satire on the rich clergy.

EXTRA DUTY . . . (325)

See No. 3783—[1775]

A satire on monks.

THE CONSPIRATORS. (326)

See No. 3760—[1775]

A satire on the clergy, lawyers, and physicians.

BILLINGSGATE TRIUMPHANT . . . (327)

See No. 4541—[1775]

A PLEASING METHOD OF ROUZING THE DOCTOR—OR A
TYTHE PIG NO BAD SIGHT. (328)

See No. 3785 [1775]

A satire on the clergy, Reproduced, Paston, Pl. clxxxvi.

A TRUE TOWN PICTURE: OR AN OLD HAG OF DRURY PRE-SENTING A CHICKEN TO HIS LORDSHIP. (329)

See No. 3788—[1775]

SEARCH THE WORLD YOU'LL SELDOM SEE—
HANDSOMER FOLKS THAN WE THREE (332)

[P. Dawe]

See No. 4542—20 Oct. 1775

CONFESSION. (333)

See No. 3775—[1775]

A satire on monks.

Similar mezzotint published by Sayer & Bennett.

THE BOTTLE COMPANIONS. (378)

See No. 4622—1 Aug. 1775

¹ Nos. 3784, 4542 have the imprint of Bowles and Carver.

POLITICAL SATIRES

Not in B.M., described from a photogravure reproduction, R. T. Halsey, Boston Port Bill, p. 42,

THE WISE MEN OF GOTHAM AND THEIR GOOSE

Pub^d 16th Feb^y 1776 by W. Humphrey Gerrard Street Soho.

Mezzotint (coloured impression). Ministers and others grouped round a table on which lies a goose which Bute holds down by the neck as he raises his broadsword to kill the bird. Bute (r.), in profile to the l., wears Highland dress and the Garter ribbon; the bird has a small chain round its neck. In the foreground (l.) a fat bishop leans back in an arm-chair watching intently: he is probably Markham, Archbishop of York, see No. 5958, &c. Seven other spectators are poorly characterized: one wearing a ribbon and star leaning over the table may be intended for the king or North but resembles neither. A judge leaning on the bishop's chair may be Mansfield, but his profile is almost concave and has more resemblance to Bathurst. Two others wear legal robes, one is perhaps Wedderburn. A profile head on the extreme l. resembles Sandwich. Germain is probably one of the other two. A tenth man (l.) is walking to the l. holding up a large basket full of eggs. On the ground (l.) is a map of North America which is being befouled by a dog; on the r. are two bags, one inscribed Taxes is disgorging eggs. On the wall which forms a background is a picture of the British lion asleep, flanked by two framed inscriptions on which are verses (30 ll.) which explain the print, beginning,

*In Gotham once the Story goes
A lot of Wise-acres arose . . .*

Their most prized possession was a goose (the colonies),

*A Rara Avis to behold
Who laid each Day an Egg of Gold¹
This made them grow immensely rich
Gave them an Avaritious Itch, . . .*

In order to make the bird lay two eggs instead of one:

*About her Neck they put a chain,
And more their Folly to compleat
They Stampt upon her Wings & Feet
But this had no Effect at all,
Yet made her struggle, flutter, squall,
And do what every Goose would do
That had her liberty in view
When one of more distinguish'd Note
Cry'd D——n her, let us cut her Throat,
They did, but not an Egg was found
But Blood came pouring from y^e Wound.*

¹ Walpole wrote to Mann, 16 June 1779, 'we killed the goose that laid a golden egg a day' referring to trade, not to taxes. Letters, x. 427.

One of a number of satires attributing the measures against the Colonies to Bute, see No. 5289, &c. For other references to the Stamp Act see No. 5487, &c. Cf. No. 5578.

B.M.L., Ac. 4714/14. (p. 43.)

5327 HOPKINS TRIUMPHANT, OR WILKES IN THE DUMPS

[c. Feb. 1776]

Engraving. Probably from a magazine. Street scene, the chairing of Alderman Hopkins elected City Chamberlain Feb. 1776. Hopkins, held aloft in a chair, holds a staff to which are tied three money-bags. The crowd waves hats and sticks; a man holds a flag inscribed Hopkins for ever, down with Wilks & Liberty. In the foreground (l.) Wilkes reclines on the ground supported by a woman holding the cap of Liberty on a staff and a large tankard decorated with the City arms. Wilkes holds a paper inscribed Alass! how unstable the affections of a Mob. A bull in alderman's robes, representing Alderman Bull, kneels at his side. From a window (l.) a woman pours the contents of a jug over the cap of Liberty. A ragged ballad-singer (r.) sings from a broadside.

When the Chamberlainship of the City fell vacant by the death of Sir Stephen Janssen, Wilkes stood for the post and was defeated by Alderman Hopkins. He made a speech accusing the ministers and the Directors of the Bank of having corrupted the electors and announced his intention of standing again in Midsummer, although the post was normally held for life. Wilkes was again defeated at Midsummer 1776, 1777, and 1778, but became Chamberlain in Nov. 1779 on Hopkins's death. Ann. Reg. 1776, 121; Sharpe, London and the Kingdom, iii. 163-4. For Hopkins see No. 5398.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{11}{16}$ in.

5328 THE STATE BLACKSMITHS FORGING FETTERS FOR THE AMERICANS

Published according to Act of Parliament 1st March 1776.

Engraving. The interior of a blacksmith's forge. At the anvil stands Mansfield, in judge's robes, forging the links of a chain. A number of ministers stand round: Lord North in the foreground (l.), holding up his lorgnette; in his r. hand is An Act for Prohibiting all Trade. Lord Sandwich stands by North, holding a hammer in one hand, an anchor in the other, apparently intending to break this emblem of the navy. Behind them stands Bute, working the bellows of the forge, looking over his shoulder at North while he works. Through a window on the l. appears the head of the king who is smiling fatuously.

Lord North brought in the Bill for prohibiting all intercourse with America and for the seizure of American shipping on 20 Nov. 1775 (16 George III. c. 5). It met with great opposition. Ann. Reg. 1776, 109 ff.; Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 495; Parl. Hist. xviii. 992 ff., 1056-1106; Autobiography of Grafton, ed. Anson, pp. 275 ff. One of many satires making Bute the instigator of measures against the Americans, see No. 5289, &c.

$6\frac{9}{16} \times 4$ in.

✓ 5329 THE YANKIE DOODLES INTRENCHMENTS NEAR BOSTON 1776

Publish'd as the Act Directs

Engraving. Behind a well-made trench, fronted with palisades, appear the heads of its defenders; words issue from their mouths in long labels. One man stands on the top of the trench, his cap is inscribed Death or Liberty, his coat and stockings are ragged, and he stands as if shivering with cold, his bayoneted musket tucked under his arm and pointing downwards; he says I swear its plaguy Cold Jonathan; I don't think They'll Attack us, Now You. The other men, whose heads and shoulders only appear above the trench, say (l. to r.): I dont feel bold today (the speaker is dressed as a minister, with flat hat, lank hair, and bands). His neighbour says, I fear they'll Shoot Again; a man wearing a Death or Liberty hat says,

*How, Borgoine & Clinton let us keep a good Sqint on for if they come here
they'll warm us I fear*

Another man wearing a Death or Liberty cap says

*blast their Eyes
We'll have no Excise*

Another minister of puritanic appearance says,

*Tis Old Olivers Cause
No Monarchy nor Laws*

He holds a flag on which is a tree, inscribed Liberty, surmounted by a fool's cap and flanked by two gibbets labelled The Fruit. Another man wearing a Death or Liberty cap, says, I fear Our Gen^l is Still a Labourer in Vain. The last man is in military uniform with epaulettes and a gorget; one hand is on a small cannon in an embrasure, the other holds a bottle which stands on a thick book, presumably a Bible; he says The Spirit moves us in Sun—dry places &c. Yet I fear the Lord is not With us.

Beneath the design is etched,

*Behold the Yankies in there ditch's
Whose Conscience gives such griping twitch's
They'r ready to Be S—t their Brech's. Yankie Doodle do.
Next see the Hypocritic parson
Who thay all wish to turn an A—s on Altho' the Devil keps the farce on. Yankie &c.
See Putnam that Commands in Chief Sir
Who looks & Labours like a thief sir
To get them daily Bread & Beef sir. Yankie &c.
Their Congress now is quite disjoint'd
Since Gibbits sis for them appointed
For fighting gainst y^e Lords Annointed. Yankie, doodle*

The artist appears to have been ignorant of Washington's appointment, 15 June 1775, as commander-in-chief. He took over the command of the troops round Boston on 3 July 1775, superseding not Israel Putnam (appointed fourth major-general June 1775) but Artemas Ward. Boston was evacuated by Howe on 17 Mar. 1776. Cf. No. 5292.

For the New England pine-tree flag, used before the stars and stripes, see No. 5336.

One of the few satires hostile to the Americans, cf. Nos. 5401, 6288.
8 × 9 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5330 BUNKERS HILL OR AMERICA'S HEAD DRESS

[1 Mar. 1776¹]

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5335. A lady (T.Q.L.) in profile to the r. with the enormous coiffure of 1776-7 grotesquely exaggerated. Her hands are in a muff. Her inverted pyramid of hair supports three quasi-circular redoubts surrounded by cannon on which troops are fighting. On each is a flag large out of all proportion to the soldiers. There are also a train of artillery, and a number of tents. All the men in the redoubts are dressed as British soldiers but are firing point-blank at each other; their three flags are decorated respectively with an ape, with two women holding darts of lightning, and with a goose.

Evidently intended to satirize the fighting at Bunker Hill, 17 June 1775. For similar satires on hair-dressing see No. 5378, apparently a parody of this print.

8 $\frac{3}{16}$ × 6 $\frac{11}{16}$ in.

5331 COLONEL ARNOLD.

[? 'Corbutt'.]

London, Published as the Act directs, 26 March 1776, by Tho^s Hart.

Mezzotint. One of a series, see No. 5290. T.Q.L. standing portrait of an officer in uniform, pointing to l. with his r. hand and looking over his l. shoulder to the r. A town with scattered buildings and several spires is in the background (l.), perhaps intended for the outskirts of Quebec. Beneath the title is engraved, Who Commanded the Provincial Troops sent against Quebec, through the Wilderness of Canada, and was wounded in Storming that City, under General Montgomery.

Benedict Arnold (1741-1801) was wounded in the assault on Quebec, 31 Dec. 1775, when Montgomery was killed. He figures later in English caricature as an arch-traitor, see No. 6173. See No. 5408, a copy, issued in connexion with Burgoyne's surrender at Saratoga.

Chaloner Smith, iv, pp. 1714-15. Andrews, p. 89.

12 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 9 $\frac{15}{16}$ in.

5331 A

A copy, probably by J. M. Will, see No. 6034, having the same inscription, except that London is after Hart and with the addition of Ioh. Martin Will excudit Aug [Augsburg] vind.

12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5332 DAVID WOOSTER, ESQ^R

[? 'Corbutt'.]

London, Published as the Act directs 26. March 1776, by Tho^s Hart.

Mezzotint. One of a series, see No. 5290. T.Q.L. portrait of a military officer between two cannon looking to the l.; his l. hand rests on the breech of a cannon, in his r. is a long spear. In the background is a tent (l.) and a stone fortification (r.) with cannon. Beneath the title is engraved, Commander in Chief of the Provincial Army against Quebec.

¹ So dated in a contemporary hand.

After the assault on Quebec 31 Dec. 1775, by Montgomery and Arnold at which Montgomery was killed, the city was besieged with declining hopes of success, until 6 May 1776, when the Americans were routed by Carleton.

Chaloner Smith, iv. 1717. Andrews. p. 92.

$12\frac{3}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5332 A

Copy, probably by J. M. Will, see No. 6034, having the same inscription, except that London is after Hart, with the addition of Ioh. Martin Will excud. Aug. [Augsburg] Vind.

$12\frac{5}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5333 THE BLESSED EFFECTS OF VENALITY.

Lon. Mag. Pub^d as y^e Act directs, May 1, 1776.

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xlv. 171. A man half-seated on a three-legged stool which stands on the topmost of three steps, strikes with an axe at its legs; these are inscribed respectively Commons (from which a large piece has been chopped), Lords, and Privy Council. Behind him is a curtain decorated with the royal arms. In the foreground are four figures: Britannia, with her shield, seated and asleep, the staff on which is the cap of liberty about to drop from her hand; a Dutchman standing with his hands in his breeches pocket; a cloaked figure, representing Spain, points out the man with the axe to France, a man dressed as a French fop.

The man with the axe may be either North or George III, but the royal arms suggest the king. The axe stands for bribery. The plate illustrates an article 'On Venality and Corruption', whose thesis is that the contest with America is supported as an opportunity for bribery and corruption and leads to the aggrandizement of Spain, France, and Holland.

$4\frac{3}{16} \times 6\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5334 THE PARRICIDE. A SKETCH OF MODERN PATRIOTISM
[1 May 1776]

Engrav'd for the Westminster Magazine.

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, iv. 216. Britannia, held down by two men, is about to be stabbed by America, in the guise of a Red Indian woman with a head-dress of feathers, holding a tomahawk in one hand, a dagger in the other. Britannia is also being clawed by a lion, which advances under the guidance of a judge who holds reins attached to the animal's jaws. Behind the judge (presumably Camden) stands Chatham supported on crutches. Wilkes in his civic gown stands between America and Britannia, directing the attack. Grafton, who had recently joined the Opposition, holds her by one arm, a man in a civic gown and chain holds her by the other; he is probably Alderman Hayley, Wilkes's brother-in-law, M.P. for the City, who was sheriff 1775-6. Among the other patriots is a fox, representing Charles Fox. Britannia's shield, trampled on by America, and her broken spear lie on the ground. In the centre of the foreground is an oval medallion on which is a pelican piercing her breast for her young. A partly-draped man, probably representing Discord or Faction, stands (l.) brandishing a flaming torch in each hand; his hair is composed of serpents.

This illustrates 'Reflections on the Declarations of the General Congress' pp. 216-19, and, more particularly, a quotation from a pamphlet, 'The Rights of Great Britain Asserted against the Claims of America', which is an attack on English 'patriots': 'With an effrontery without example in any other age or nation, these men assume the name of Patriots, yet lay the honour, dignity and reputation of their Country under the feet of her rebellious subjects. With a peculiar refinement on Parricide, they bind the hands of the Mother, while they plant a dagger in those of the Daughter, to stab her to the heart. . . .' This shows a complete reversal in the attitude of the Westminster Magazine, see No. 5288. The first appearance in this catalogue of Fox as a patriot, cf. No. 5113.

One of the few satires which attack the Opposition. Cf. Nos. 5103, 5644, 5650, 5665, 5829, 5836. Cf. also Nos. 5832, 5833.

$3\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5335 NODDLE-ISLAND · OR HOW · ARE WE DECIEVED.

J. S. sc.

Pub^d May 12. 1776 by M Darly strand

Engraving (coloured impression). A companion design to No. 5330. A lady (T.Q.L.) on whose grotesquely extended coiffure military operations are proceeding. She stands in profile to the l. holding a fan. At the top of her pyramid of hair soldiers fire cannon from a rectangular fort (l.) which appears to be American at other soldiers firing cannon from an adjacent mound (r.) composed of ringlets of hair. Two immense flags flying from the fort bear, one a crocodile, the other a cross-bow and arrows; the flags of their opponents, the English, are decorated one with an ass, the other with a fool's cap and bells. Below this combat are tents and two men with a cannon. On the lower rolls of hair are red-coats marching in single file, followed by a baggage waggon. Lower down again, red-coats in boats are rowing towards two ships in full sail.

This evidently satirizes the evacuation of Boston by Howe, 17 Mar. 1776. There were many protests against the misleading account given in the Gazette, see London Chronicle, 7-9 May 1776. Walpole wrote 'nobody was deceived', Last Journals, 1910, i. 540. The 'How' in the title is a pun on the name of the commander-in-chief, see No. 5405, &c.

$8\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5336 COMMODORE HOPKINS,

[? J. M. Will, after a plate by 'Corbutt'.]

Publish'd as the Act directs 22. Aug^t 1776. by Tho^s Hart London. Joh. Martin Will excudit Aug. [Augsburg] Vind.

Mezzotint. Copy from one of a series, see No. 5290. T.Q.L. portrait of a naval officer standing apparently on the deck of a vessel; he holds a drawn sabre in his r. hand, looking to the l. and pointing with his l. hand to the r. where there is a ship in full sail displaying a large flag on which is the design of a conventional tree inscribed Liberty Tree An appeal to God.

Behind on the l. is another ship displaying an enormous striped flag with a rattlesnake coiled to strike and the words Dont tread upon me. Clouds of smoke suggest a naval engagement. Beneath the title is inscribed Commander in Chief of the American Fleet.

Esek Hopkins, an ex-sea captain and privateer in the war of 1756-63, was appointed by Congress, 22 Dec. 1775, commander-in-chief of the new navy, consisting of eight small ships hastily altered for war. In June 1776 he was censured by Congress for lack of success, in Dec. 1776 his fleet was blockaded in Narragansett Bay by the British fleet, in Mar. 1777 he was suspended and in Jan. 1778 dismissed the service. Dict. Am. Biog.

The two flags depicted were used for the American navy at the beginning of the war until superseded by that of the thirteen stripes resolved upon by Congress, 14 June 1777. The New England pine-tree flag, a flag with a white ground, a tree (Liberty Tree) in the middle with a coiled rattlesnake at its foot and the motto 'Appeal to Heaven', was used on the floating batteries about Boston in the autumn of 1775 and was six months later prescribed by the Provincial Congress for the Massachusetts navy. The other flag, that of the Continental Navy, was hoisted for the first time by Lieut. Paul Jones on Hopkins's flag-ship in the autumn of 1775. G. W. Allen, Naval History of the American Revolution, 1913, i. 64-5, 92-3. See No. 5973, &c. Similar in manner to Nos. 5405, 5406, signed Corbutt.

Plate from which this is a copy is described by Chaloner Smith, iv. 1715-16, Andrews, p. 90.

12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5337 MAJOR GENERAL JOHN SULLIVAN,

Publish'd as the Act directs 22 Aug^t 1776 by Tho^s Hart London.

Joh. Martin Will excudit Aug. [Augsburg] Vind.

Mezzotint. Copy from one of a series, see No. 5290. T.Q.L. standing portrait of a military officer, looking to the r. In his r. hand is a long spear, his l. is on his hip. The background is a tree-trunk (l.) and foliage. Beneath the title is engraved, A distinguish'd Officer in the Continental Army.

Sullivan conducted the evacuation of Canada up the Richelieu River in the summer of 1776.

An Augsburg copy of a plate which is listed by Chaloner Smith, iv, p. 1717. Andrews, p. 91.

12 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5338 JEAN SULIVAN

[c. 1776]

peint par Alexander Camphel [sic] a Williambourg en Virginie. Se vend a Londres chez Thom. Hart.

Mezzotint. H.L. portrait in an oval within a rectangle apparently copied from the original of No. 5337. Probably a companion print to No. 5292 A. 7 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5339 MAJOR ROBERT ROGERS,

Publish'd as the Act directs Oct^r 1. 1776, by Tho^s Hart London. Joh.

Martin Will excudit Aug [Augsburg] vind.

[c. 1776]

Mezzotint. Copy from one of a series, see No. 5290. Standing portrait, T.Q.L. of a fierce-looking military officer with fringed and beaded trappings to his uniform of Red Indian workmanship. He holds a musket against his l. shoulder. Behind, among foliage, are three Indian braves (r.), one holding a tomahawk, another a knife. Beneath the title is inscribed, Commander in Chief of the Indians in the Back Settlements of America.

Published at this date, the print was clearly intended to suggest that Rogers was leading scalping-parties against Americans, see No. 5470, &c. Rogers, an American frontiersman, had been a commander of Rangers against Indians and French in the Seven Years War, had taken part in the suppression of Pontiac's Rebellion, 1763, and from 1765-8 had been commander of troops at Mackinac, a frontier post. After being charged with mutiny and embezzlement (1769) he came to England, was restored to half-pay, went to America in 1775 hoping for employment which he eventually obtained from Howe in August 1776, with the rank of lieutenant-col. His sole service in America was as a recruiting officer of American loyalists; his only active service was in command of an outpost on Howe's east flank where he was surprised and crushingly defeated by Col. Haslett on 21 Oct. 1776. Biography of Rogers by Allan Nevins, in his edition of Ponteach, Chicago, 1914. His association with Indians was well known in England from his published Journals, 1765, and his tragedy, Ponteach; or the Savages of North America, 1766, a sympathetic account of the Indian character. It is here evidently exploited for political purposes.

An Augsburg copy of a plate which is listed by Chaloner Smith, iv. 1717. Andrews, p. 91.

$12\frac{5}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5340 NEWS FROM AMERICA, OR THE PATRIOTS IN THE DUMPS. [1 Dec 1776]

London Magazine. Nov. 1776.

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xlv. 599. On a platform of three steps stand North and Mansfield; North, smiling, holds up a dispatch beginning My Lord and signed Howe, the intermediate text being illegible. Behind them (r.), and on a lower step, stand Bute and George III. On the ground (l.) is a group of patriots who make gestures of distress, Wilkes being the most prominent. A seated and disreputable-looking woman holding the cap of Liberty is weeping. On the r. stand two ministers in conference, pointing with amusement and scorn at the patriots; one, Sandwich (r.), holds his finger to his nose, from his pocket hangs a paper inscribed List of the Navy; the other is probably intended for Germain. In the background is the sea, with ships of war, some in full sail, others sinking.

This illustrates an article intended to counteract the effect of the news of the action on Long Island and the capture of New York, 'the friends of Ministry thinking every thing gained, the friends of America every thing lost', whereas it should be regarded as a fallacious and temporary success, 'the beginning of sorrows'. Howe's dispatch of 3 Sept. 1776, reporting the landing on Long Island, was published in the Gazette of 10 Oct. Fox wrote to Rockingham, 13 Oct. 1776, of 'the terrible news from Long Island'. Memorials and Corr. i. 145. Cf. No. 5923, a more realistic representation of patriots reading the news of a British success.

$6\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5341 THE SHAFTESBURY ELECTION OR THE HUMOURS OF PUNCH. [n.d. c. 1776]

Mezzotint. A design in compartments showing the malpractices at the Shaftesbury election of 1774 which became notorious owing to the petition of the defeated candidate, the subsequent proceedings in the House of Commons, and actions at law 1775-6. Three compartments in the upper part of the print show interiors labelled Punch's Room (l.), Secretaries Room, and Agents Room (r.), shown as three adjacent rooms, visible by the removal of the fourth wall. The interior of the rooms is revealed by Truth, a naked woman on the extreme r. who holds up an enormous curtain which would screen all the rooms if it fell. Underneath these compartments are scenes taking place in the street outside and below these rooms. A broad gangway crowded with voters leads from the street-level to the central room.

In Punch's Room, a man dressed as Punch with a large hump and wearing a peaked hat and jack-boots stands on a stool putting a packet through a small opening in the partition dividing this room from the centre or Secretaries Room. Behind him a stout man stands by a round table, apparently making up the packets for Punch; he holds a paper in both hands, and says, this Note for 68 will make 3 votes. On the table are papers, a money-bag, and two piles of coins. At a rectangular table on the other side of the room (r.) a man is seated, pouring out wine from a bottle; another man stands opposite him, holding a wine-glass and saying, They swallow Pills well. At the back of the room are two wheelbarrows filled with money-bags, other money-bags lie on the floor. The room is quite bare except for tables, stool, and chair. The ceiling is raftered, there is a window in the l. wall, and two hats hang on the wall.

In the next room, a man stands on a chair facing the l. wall and takes the packet which Punch is handing to him. Four birds, each with a coin (?) in its claws, appear to have just flown through the opening which is immediately above a padlocked door of communication. Behind him stands another elector, his hat in both hands, looking up at the opening. Two other men stand by, one holding a long staff. Two men sit at a round table; one with a large hump is writing; the other is in conversation with two men, one holding a paper, the other, holding his hat, appears to be making a request. Two hats hang on the wall. On the back wall hangs a large framed picture over which is inscribed We'll purchase Europe. It represents an Indian scene: a corpulent man sits on a canopied howdah on an elephant; he is crowned and holds a sceptre; money-bags are piled on both sides of the howdah; a mahout sits on the animal's neck. The elephant appears to be picking up money-bags from the ground with its trunk; an Indian in a turban who lies across these bags is being beaten and kicked by a European.

In the third room, two men sit writing at a round table, one points to three supplicants, saying Begone you Rogues you'll vote for Mort' [Mortimer]. Of the three men whom he addresses, two stand hat in hand, the third hurries away putting on his hat and saying Nothing for honest men. Another disappointed voter stands between the two men at the table, his hands clasped.

The lower part of the print represents the street below the three rooms. On the l. is a procession (l. to r.) escorting Punch; in front walks a man carrying a flag inscribed Punch & Rupees for ever. He is followed by six men with marrow-bones and cleavers, which they are striking together to produce the traditional election noise. All wear election favours in their hats, the men with the marrow-bones have aprons twisted round their waists and are probably butchers. Immediately behind them is Punch on horseback, with an immense hump on both back and chest, a conical hat and a frill round his neck. His face is covered by a net and he is saying 20 Guin[ees] for two Voices & one round Oath well swallowed. He is accompanied and followed by a number of electors who wave their hats. In the centre is a sloping platform leading up to the 'Secretaries Room'. A boy with a long staff stands on the r. saying, None but Voters come in. A crowd of men stand upon it in conversation. In the centre is a woman who says My three tenants shall have more than 60. A hunch-backed man on the l. says, I shall discover their Schemes.

On the r. are steps giving access to the r. side of the gangway. A balustrade divides the open front of the Agents' room from the street, and is continued down the r. side of the gangway and by the side of the steps. Two men are mounting the steps; in the road below two men, hat in hand, are in conversation with a third, who appears to be the candidate; he grasps one of them by the hand, placing his hand on his shoulder.

On the back of the print is pasted a press cutting from the London Chronicle (1776) 'A Card with the Figure of PUNCH holding a Paper with the under-written Lines, was lately sent to the present Mayor of S—y.

With empty bags, and without noise or drum,
 In woful plight, behold, I'm once more come,
 Humbly to crave your Worship's kind protection,
 From threat'ning evils of the last Election:
 In justice guard me from your folly past,
 If 'tis your first, I trust, 'twill be your last:
 Though I was PUNCH, behind the Scene convey'd,
 You, and your Friends the magic wire play'd.'

Your's,

PUNCH.

At the election of Sir Thomas Rumbold and Sir Francis Sykes, the two ministerial candidates for Shaftesbury in 1774, several thousand pounds were distributed to the voters at the rate of 20 guineas a man. The mayor and aldermen were entrusted with the distribution and they devised a scheme by which a man disguised as Punch delivered guineas in parcels to electors through a hole in the door. The electors were then taken to another room in the house where 'Punch's Secretary' required him to sign notes for the money received made payable to an imaginary character, 'Glenbucket'. The defeated candidate, Hans Mortimer, petitioned against the return on the ground of gross and notorious bribery by the members and their agents. Two witnesses swore that they had seen Punch through the hole in the door, and knew him to be Matthews, an alderman of the town. Witnesses also proved that voters who had taken the 'bribery oath' at the poll had taken Punch's money.

The House of Commons resolved, 14 Feb. 1776, that Sykes, Rumbold, and six members of the corporation of Shaftesbury should be prosecuted for subornation of perjury; a bill was brought in for disfranchizing Shaftesbury. These proceedings were eventually shelved, but while they were pending Mortimer brought actions on 2 George III. c. 24 against Sykes for twenty-six acts of bribery, obtaining a verdict for twenty-two penalties amounting to £11,000. Oldfield, Representative History of Great Britain, 1816, iii. 396 ff.

This case, like that of Hindon, see No. 5288, was notorious in 1776; see Walpole, Last Journals, 1920, i. 545-6, 562 (May-June 1776) (though the places were not more corrupt than other rotten boroughs, Oldfield, iii. 405), partly because in both cases the candidates were nabobs. Sir Thomas Rumbold succeeded Pigot as Governor of Madras and was enormously wealthy. See Nos. 5344, 6169.

$10\frac{11}{16} \times 18\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5342 THE CATCH SINGERS.

[n.d. 1776?]

Engraving. Four men singing and drinking at a small rectangular table. Each holds up a wine-glass in his r. hand, while he clutches a money-bag in his l. At the head of the table (r.) sits Lord North in profile to the l.; he sings, They'l do no More then we. Ha, Ha, He. His money-bag is inscribed Treasury £100000. On his r. sits a man whose bag is labelled 000001 Minden showing that he is Lord George Germain who became Secretary of State for the Colonies, 10 Nov. 1775. He sings, With their Hearts so Strong and Bold, and is clinking glasses with the neighbour on his r., who sings When Merrily we Shall see. The latter's bag is inscribed 100000 Navy and he is identified by Mr. Hawkins as Lord Howe, then a vice-admiral, who was appointed commander-in-chief in North America in Feb. 1776. He has, however, a certain resemblance to Lord Sandwich, First Lord of the Admiralty, who was the 'soul' of the actual Catch Club. Charles Butler, Reminiscences, 1822, i. 74, see No. 5668, &c. Standing in profile to the r. is a man wearing military uniform, high boots, and a long pig-tail queue; his bag is 100000 Army, and he sings Ha, Ha, He, We have Fill'd our Bags with Gold. He is Sir William Howe, Lord Howe's brother, who was then in command of the troops in America, having succeeded Gage in Oct. 1775. On the wall is a map of America, reversed, the Atlantic Ocean being on the west of the continent. Germain was repeatedly satirized for his conduct at Minden (see Nos. 3680-7) in prints, as in the House of Commons. For the Howes, see No. 5399, &c.

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{5}{16}$ in.

5343 SPECTATUM ADMISSI, RISUM TENEATIS, AMICI?

[n.d. 1776?]

Engraving. A man dressed half as a military officer, half as a bishop, stands with a drawn sword in his r. hand, on his l. arm is a round shield inscribed Thirty Nine Articles, with a standard on which is a coat of arms. He wears half a cockaded hat, half a mitre. His r. side is dressed in a military coat with epaulette, on his r. leg is a spurred top-boot. He wears a gorget round his neck ornamented with the head of Medusa or Discord, with snaky locks. His l. side is draped with a black gown and on his l. leg is a dark stocking and buckled shoe. Two labels issue from his head, both on the military side, inscribed In hoc signo vincimus and Woe to thee Boston Sword go through the Land.

The escutcheon on the flag is a cross counter-imbattled; dexter chief, a crown and a mitre; dexter base, crossed swords; sinister chief, a mantle; sinister base, crossed keys. The supporters are, dexter, a seven-headed beast, traditionally representing the Church of Rome, cf. Nos. 378, 5534; sinister, a lady fashionably dressed and with her hair in an inverted pyramid surmounted by feathers, cf. No. 5370, &c. The motto is Le Diable defend le tort, and the crest is a mitre supporting a dragon holding a skull.

In the foreground (l.) is a drum inscribed spirit stirring with a fife and a pair of kettle-drums. On the r. a large organ is partly visible inscribed soul inspiring. Behind the soldier-bishop is a cannon inscribed Alliance between Church and State; from its muzzle issues a label inscribed, Ecclesiastical Cannon. Behind is the sea with ships of war and a coast-town probably intended for Boston. The title is from Horace, Art of Poetry, 5.

This indicates the opposition to episcopacy in the Colonies which was an important factor in the growing antagonism to England before the war (Van Tyne, Causes of the War of Independence, 1921, chap. xiii, see also No. 4227) and was also vocal in England especially in the City of London, the Quebec Act in particular being denounced as a popish measure, see No. 5228, &c. The bishops were attacked for their support of the American war. Like several others, this satire is perhaps directed against Archbishop Markham of York, see No. 5400, &c. The date is probably before news reached England of the evacuation of Boston, see No. 5335.

Cf. No. 2635 (1745), a similar satire on Herring, Archbishop of York. $6\frac{5}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{8}$ in.

1776

PERSONAL SATIRES

5344-5356

Series of Tête-à-tête portraits.

5344 N° XXXIV. MISS K—GHL—Y.

N° XXXV. THE SHAFTESBURY NABOB.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Jan. 1. 1775. [sic. i.e. 1776]*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine. vii. 625. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .' An account of one of the members for Shaftesbury, both nabobs, whose bribery was the subject of an inquiry by a Select Committee of the House of Commons in 1775 leading to an order for the prosecution of both members, see No. 5341. This appears to be intended for Sir Thomas Rumbold, since the other member, Sykes, is the subject of another Tête-à-Tête, see No. 5351. The canard that he began life as a shoe-black at White's is not mentioned: a merchant's counting-house led to a writership in the East India Company.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5345 N° XXXVII THE IRRESISTIBLE MRS S—NS

N° XXXVIII THE CALEDONIAN ORATOR

*Published as the Act directs by A Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Jan. 16. 1776.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vii. 705 (Supplement). Two bust portraits in oval frames, one (r.) of a man in clerical gown and bands, illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of a popular dissenting preacher in a London chapel, an alleged adventurer from Scotland, and of a young widow.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5346 N° II THE ELOPED CLARA

N° III THE COMBUSTIBLE LOVER

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Feb. 1. 1776.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the son of an 'eminent grocer' of London and of his amours, notably with Clara, a young actress at Drury Lane. Identified by H. Bleackley as Miles Peter Andrews and Anne Brown, afterwards Mrs. Cargill. Notes and Queries 10th series, iv. 343.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5347 N° IV CLARA H—D

N° V P— M— ESQR

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near S^t Johns Gate
Mar. I. 1776.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of Philip Medows (1708-81), deputy ranger of Richmond Park, and of Clara Hayward (who had played Calista in the 'Fair Penitent' in Foote's company). H. Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, pp. 208, 210.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5348 N° VII LADY PYEBALD

N° VIII THE R—G—TE AMOROSO

*Publish'd as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near S^t John's Gate
Apr. I. 1776.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 121. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of Lady Weymouth, wife of Hugh Boscawen, 2nd Viscount (see No. 4460, where he is called Lord Pyebald from the colour of his horses). She is here alleged to have been a milliner who induced Weymouth to marry her by representing that she was on the point of death. Her supposed lover is a young man from R—g—te in a counting-house in the City, with social ambitions, whom she is said to pay for his attentions.

Lady Weymouth (m. 1736) was Hannah Catherine Maria, widow of Richard Russel and daughter of Thomas Smith of Worplesdon, Surrey; she died 23 Nov. 1786 aged 79.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5349 N° X. SIGNIORA G—

N° XI LORD B—

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near S^t John's Gate
May I. 1776.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of Lord B—u, and Signiora G—b—lli'. An account of the amours of Sir Edward Hussey Montagu, cr. Baron Beaulieu 28 April 1762, Earl of Beaulieu 8 July 1784, d. 1802. See Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1894, i. 124 and note. The lady is the opera singer Gabrielli, see Walpole, Letters, ix. 291-2.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5446 b.

5350 N° XIII ELFRIDA.

N° XIV KITELY.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near S^t John's Gate
June I. 1776.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames, the man in pseudo-seventeenth-century dress. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Mrs. Hartley, the original Elfrida in Mason's Elfrida, Covent Garden, Nov. 1772, and of the actor who played Edgar in the same performance. This was in fact Bensley, but 'Kiteley' (in Every Man in his Humour) is William, known as Gentleman Smith (?1730-1819), who married the sister of Lord Sandwich. Mrs. Hartley was the heroine of the Vauxhall Affray, see No. 5198; see also B.M. Catalogue of Engr. Br. Portraits.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5351 N° XVI. MISS R—D

N° XVII THE DISAPPOINTED NABOB.

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near S^t John's Gate July 1. 1776.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 289. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the amours of Francis Sykes, ex-M.P. for Shaftesbury, see No. 5341.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5352 N° XIX MRS A—ST—D

N° XX SIR MATTHEW MITE

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near S^t Johns Gate Aug^t 1. 1776.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. An account of General Richard Smith, usually believed to be the Sir Matthew Mite of Foote's comedy The Nabob, though Foote denied it, and of Mrs. Armistead (afterwards the wife of C. J. Fox), here called 'that celebrated Thais . . . who for some time has been the reigning toast in that line upon the haut ton'.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5353 N° XXII. THE VAUXHALL SYREN

N° XXIII. COUNT DE B—

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near S^t John's Gate Sep. 1. 1776.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. De B., a foreign minister representing 'one of the greatest monarchs in Europe' at the Court of St. James, appears from the Royal Kalendar to be Count de Belgioioso, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of 'Germany and Hungary' [sic]. The lady is a singer, trained by a doctor in music [Dr. Arne], who has been singing nightly at Vauxhall during the season of 1776. She is identified by H. Bleackley as Charlotte Brent. She married Thomas Pinto, 1766, see D.N.B.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5354 N° XXVIII. MRS B—N° XXIX. CAPT^N BOBADIL.*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Jun^r near S^t John's Gate.
Oct^r 1st 1776.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 457. Two bust portraits on one plate; the man dressed as Bobadil in pseudo-Elizabethan hat and cloak. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed: or Memoirs of Capt. Bobadil and Mrs. B—ll—my.' An account of the actor Henry Woodward 1717-77, and of the actress George Anne Bellamy (1727?-88).

One of Woodward's best parts was Captain Bobadil, and it is said that Garrick revived Every Man in his Humour in 1751 in order to employ him to the best advantage. Theatrical Dict.

Ovals, $2\frac{1}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5355 N° XXVIII. MISS G—

N° XXIX. THE NOBLE CRICKETER.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Jun^r near S^t John's Gate
Nov^r 1. 1776.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 513. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed: . . .'. An account of the third Duke of Dorset (1745-99) and his amours. Miss G—m, the daughter of a Sussex farmer who had been seduced and deserted, is said to be his mistress.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{2}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5356 N° XXXI MISS M—T—N

N° XXXII THE HIBERNIAN PATRIOT.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Jun^r near S^t John's Gate
Dec^r 1. 1776.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 569. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed: . . .'. An account of the amours of the son of one whose 'loyalty and patriotism' had 'raised him to the first rank in Ireland', identified by H. Bleackley as Robert, 2nd Duke of Leinster (1749-1804), and of Miss M—, who told him she was the illegitimate daughter of an Irish Lord Lieutenant. He wears the conventional Elizabethan costume of the eighteenth century.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5357 A SALLY FROM TOMS.Pub: 22 Feb^y 1776, by W. Humphrey, Gerrard Street Soho.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of an obese and elderly man standing in profile to the r. He is plainly dressed in an old-fashioned manner except for a large nosegay in his coat and wears a wide broad-brimmed hat. His hands are behind his back and he holds a roll of papers inscribed Annuitys. Beneath is etched A real character.

He is identified by Mr. Hawkins as 'Mr. Thomas a Bank Director', and is presumably Thomas of Hankey, Thomas and Co., 7 Fenchurch Street.

The title suggests that he is an habitué of Tom's Coffee House, that is, either Tom's in Birchin Lane, Cornhill, or the more fashionable Tom's in Russell Street, Covent Garden, see Gent. Mag., 1841, ii. 265 ff.

$9\frac{3}{4} \times 7$ in.

5358 [THE WEDDING OF THE MARQUIS OF GRANBY.]¹

[1 Apr. 1776]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xlv. 96. Beneath the design is engraved, To the most Noble the Marquis of Granby, and his fair Marchioness, this Plate is humbly inscribed by their most devoted Servant The Editor. An allegorical scene. A draped female is led to a circular altar (r.) by Cupid, her hand is taken by Hercules. Truth holds up her mirror; three other female figures accompany the lady. A priest and attendants stand behind the altar. Minerva (l.) attacks a prostrate figure who is holding up a torch and a serpent. This is explained as 'Beauty and Modesty accompanied by the Goddess of Truth, Cupid and the Graces, invited by Virtue in the form of Hercules to sacrifice at the altar of Hymen, whilst Minerva, Goddess of Wisdom, destroys the evil Daemon of Envy and Discord'.

Charles, styled Marquis of Granby, 1770-9, afterwards 4th Duke of Rutland, married, 26 Dec. 1775, Mary Isabella, daughter of the Duke of Beaufort. See Walpole, Letters, ix. 226, 291, 313. Cf. No. 5309.

$4\frac{3}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5359 PRO BONO PUBLICO AND HIS LADY; REAL CHARACTERS.

[? J. Mortimer.]

Pub^d 27 Aug^t 1776, by W. Humphrey, Gerrard St^h Soho.

Engraving. W.L. portraits of a man and woman standing arm in arm, both in riding dress. He is tall and thin, with a black patch over his l. eye; his r. sleeve hangs empty. She is very stout, wearing a feathered hat, a coat and waistcoat over a plain skirt; in her l. hand is a whip.

The manner resembles that of No. 5362.

$8\frac{1}{8} \times 6\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5360 I. CALCULATOR ESQ:^R ÆTAT 24, THE CELEBRATED CONJUROR.

This Plate is Humbly Inscribed to all Keepers of Lottery Offices. By their Hum^{ble} Serv^t A.B.

Publish'd as the Act Directs, Aug^t 30th 1776, by AB. London.

Aquatint. Design in an oval. Behind a table sits a conjuror, wearing a conical hat and a dressing-gown. He points with his wand at a lottery wheel, from which look two boys, wearing paper crowns. He is saying, Eo, Meo, and Arco, stick close my Boys, and let me have all the Capital Prizes, in my Calculation. One of the boys holds out a ticket to him. On the table in front of the conjuror, are books, one open, showing two pages of figures, 10,000, 20,000 . . . [&c. &c.]; two volumes inscribed Calculations, and Conjurations and two other books, one being The Life of Duncan Campbell,

¹ No title.

Deaf & Dumb Fortune Teller. A letter is addressed To Mr. Williams, Conjuror, Old Bailey. In the background is a second lottery wheel.

A satirical portrait of John Molesworth who published calculations upon lottery numbers, the title probably suggested by that of a portrait of Molesworth standing by a lottery wheel, entitled, 'John Molesworth Esq^r: Ætat 24, the Celebrated Calculator', see B.M. Cat. Engr. Br. Portraits.

In November 1775 a man bribed one of the Christ's Hospital boys who was to draw the lottery to secrete a ticket and draw it from the wheel. Ashton, History of English Lotteries, 1893, 81-5. Molesworth's calculations are here pilloried as equally fraudulent; in October 1776 the question whether his calculations were or were not an imposition on the public was decided in his favour at a debate of the Robin Hood Society (see No. 4860, &c.), London Chronicle, Oct. 22-4, 1776. There is a trade card in the Banks collection (D.2. 2762) representing the 'Curious Wheels . . . used by Mr. Molesworth in proving his Calculations'. Duncan Campbell (d. 1730) was a Scottish fortune-teller and charlatan. His life was written by Defoe.

8¼ × 6½ in.

5361—FROM THE HAYMARKETT

P. L. de Loutherbourg Fecit.

London, Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett N^o 53 Fleet Street, as the Act directs 26 Dec^r 1776.

Engraving (coloured impression). W.L. portrait (caricature) of a man in profile to the r. standing with his head and shoulders thrown back, his elbows crooked. He holds his hat in his l. hand. He wears an exaggerated toupet-wig with a large club, a bulky cravat, short frogged coat, and a sword.

Described by Angelo as the caricature of 'a signor, a celebrated performer at the Italian Opera House', one of four plates on the same sheet, the others being "From Warwick Lane", 'a well-known M.D., the last remaining of the old school'; "From Oxford", 'a fat fellow of Brazen-nose College'; "From Soho", 'a certain well-known lady abbess' (cf. No. 5181). Reminiscences 1904, i. 334.

He is probably Delpini, see D.N.B., whose portrait he somewhat resembles and whose prominence in connexion with the Haymarket is attested by the Probationary Odes.

5¾ × 4¼ in.

5362 IPHIGENIA'S LATE PROCESSION FROM KINGSTON TO BRISTOL.—BY CHUDLEIGH MEADOWS. [n.d. 1776]

[J. Mortimer.]

Engraving. Seven figures walk from l. to r. First is the (so-called) Duchess of Kingston, short and stout. She is saying By God and, and holds out her hands with a gesture of affirmation. Behind her walk three young women, her 'maids of honour', who are tall and slim in contrast with their mistress. One carries a large square bottle inscribed cordial. All four ladies are dressed alike in the fashion of the day with low bodices and high coiffures decorated with feathers and flowers. Next comes a fat clergyman, his mouth open as of shouting. He is followed by the physician wearing a big-wig and sword. Last walks the apothecary, lean and bent, also wearing a sword, and carrying an enormous and ornately decorated syringe which rests on his r shoulder. Beneath the design is engraved,

 —Then the Duchess was brought into Court attended by her Chaplain, Physician, Apothecary, and three Maids of Honor. Morning Post. May 16: 1776.

Elizabeth Chudleigh, known as the Duchess of Kingston, was tried for bigamy before the peers in Westminster Hall from 15 to 22 Apr. 1776. She was still remembered for her scanty dress as Iphigenia at a masked ball in 1749, see Nos. 3030-3. The words she is speaking represent her oath in the Ecclesiastical Court in 1769 that she was unmarried. The title implies that the recent sentence in Westminster Hall transformed her from Duchess of Kingston to Countess of Bristol, by her secret marriage to Augustus Hervey, see Nos. 5301, 5319, who had recently succeeded. 'Meadows' in the title indicates the Medows, who, as nephews of the late Duke of Kingston, were concerned in the case as claimants of the Duke's estates. At the trial she was dressed as a widow followed by 'four virgins in white', see H. More, Life and Corr., by W. Roberts, i. 81-3. See also Walpole, Letters, ix. 345-56; Letters of the First Earl of Malmesbury, i. 343; Hist. MSS. Comm., Carlisle MSS., 1897, pp. 271, 310, 313. See also No. 5425.

$9\frac{13}{16} \times 13\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5363 [GEORGE COLMAN.]

[1776]

Engraving. Frontispiece from 'The Spleen or the Offspring of Folly . . . dedicated to George Colman Esq. author of The Spleen . . .'. Colman, dressed half as a lawyer, half as Harlequin, runs forward, holding out in his l. hand a newsboy's horn inscribed London Packet. In his r. hand is a book, Viner Abrid[gem]ent. Flying behind him is a figure wearing Folly's cap and bells on the top of which is perched Minerva's owl. On the ground is an infant being suckled by a cat, while Spleen, an elderly hag, nude with dishevelled hair, stands behind. Beneath her is inscribed (a misquotation from Canto II of 'The Spleen'),

[Her] favorite cat should wean her kitten
 And suckle little Master.

Canto 1st.

Beneath Colman is etched another misquotation,

Mark but that look of his
 That half a smile, that half a grin,
 That speak the Eunuch-Soul within His feeble-featured Phiz!

Canto 2^d.

In the foreground (r.) a drum, a mask, a flag, half a broken lyre, and a broken trumpet inscribed Flockton lie grouped together.

'The Spleen' is an attack on Colman for his play 'The Spleen or Islington Spa', a farce produced 7 Mar. 1776 at Drury Lane by Garrick; it purports to be written by 'Rubrick' in revenge for the character of Rubrick in Colman's play. Colman is supposed to be the offspring of Wit and Folly suckled by Spleen who consigned him to a cat. He is represented as half-lawyer, half-player because he had practised at the bar. He was supposed to trumpet his fame in the London Packet.

$8\frac{7}{8} \times 7$ in.

5364 THE THEATRICAL DISPUTE, OR THE PARSON BAITED

[n.d. c. Oct. 1776]

Engraving. The stage of a theatre showing boxes l. and r. On the l. a group of men fight with fists and sticks. A manager (centre), hat in hand, attempts to address the audience. On the r. a man in clerical gown and bands holds up an open book inscribed Blackamoor [washed white]. A dog tears at his gown; sticks and apples lie on the ground and are falling from above.

Parson Bate's comic opera, The Blackamoor washed white, was produced at Drury Lane in Oct. 1776. It was greeted with uproar and after two nights of disturbance there was an organized riot on the third night. On the fourth Garrick had to promise that the play should be withdrawn. Baker, Biog. Dram. 1812. ii. 59-60. For Bate see index.

$4\frac{5}{16} \times 6$ in.

5365 LORD DIMPLE & HIS MAN, IN THE COAL PIT.

[1 Feb. 1776]

Engraving. From the Oxford Magazine, xiii. 418. The interior of a coal mine, supported by timber props. Two men, elaborately dressed and much alarmed, tied back to back, are being lowered by a rope down a shaft. The miners, holding picks and shovels, watch the descent with amusement.

$6\frac{11}{16} \times 4$ in.

5366 [TWO DESERTERS.][Daniel Astle fecit, late Capⁿ in the 46th Reg^t now not out of the Army.]¹

Feb. 12, 1776.

Engraving on a printed handbill. Portrait heads of two deserters. Beneath them is printed 'The above heads have a strong Resemblance of the underneath Deserters, the largest of which is Baker, and the other Sheenes.' The characterization is that of caricature, the larger figure in the centre of the plate has a villainous expression, both are in profile to the r. Behind the head of Baker is a pike (l.). A representation of a stolen watch hangs from a nail over the head of Sheenes (r.). In the background (l.) is a gibbet from which a body dangles. The handbill is headed A Robbery and Desertion. The men are described and rewards offered. They had deserted from a recruiting party of the 46th Foot at Manchester. The bill is signed Dan^t Astle.

The collector's note states, 'Immediately after the Robbery and Desertion, Captain Astle etch'd these two Portraits from memory, and had them distributed about as handbills, and the resemblance being so very striking they were taken up the next day, a great distance from the regiment.'

$3\frac{7}{16} \times 4\frac{1}{8}$ in.

'Honorary Engravers', i. 214.

5367 [MATT DARLY]¹

[c. 1776?]

Engraving. Matthew Darly the engraver and publisher of prints stands beside an ass. He faces T.Q. to the r., his head in profile to the r. He is elderly and corpulent, his gouty r. leg is swathed. He partly supports himself by a short stick on which he rests his r. hand, his other stick is under his r. arm, it being his custom to use two walking sticks, see No. 4632. In his l. hand he holds a large scroll inscribed The Political Designer of Pots Pans and Pipkins. The ass, which stands behind him, is urinating and braying, the words we are Professors of Design issuing from his mouth.

¹ MS. note on the print.

Darby called himself P.O.A.G.B. or Painter of Ornaments to the Academy of Great Britain, see No. 4632. He was noted both as caricaturist and as an engraver of architectural designs, ornament, and of plates for the great cabinet-makers, Chippendale and others. He published a medallion profile head of himself on 1 Jan. 1775 inscribed M. Darby P.O.A.G.B. which shows that this print is a good portrait. For Darby see Nos. 3844, 4632, 4701, &c.

$4\frac{7}{8} \times 3\frac{15}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5368 PARK—CHARACTER.

Pub. Nov^r 24. 1776 by M Darby 39 Strand

Engraving. Standing W.L. profile portrait of a man in an oval enclosed in a rectangle. He walks from l. to r. his head thrown back, his stomach projecting. He wears spectacles, a looped hat, a large tie-wig, and holds a tasselled cane. Probably a caricature of a doctor.

$4\frac{15}{16} \times 3\frac{11}{16}$ in.

5369 DARLY'S . COMIC—PRINTS . OF CHARACTERS . CARICATURES . MACARONIES &c. PRICE . $\frac{1}{4}$. $\frac{3}{4}$.0

DEDICATED TO D. GARRICK. ESQ.

Pub^d by Mary Darby, Jan^y 1. 1776, according to Act of Parl^t (39 Strand)

Engraved title-page. The lettering of the title is in an oval, the dedication in a circle beneath the oval, both being enclosed by a continuous border of ornament. The border is surrounded by scrolls of conventional ornament; from the two lowest scrolls, on each side of the dedication, hang two medallion bust portraits of Garrick, one (l.) in profile to the l., the other (r.) in profile to the r. These resemble the decoration of the Society of the School of Garrick worn by Charles Bannister in a H.L. mezzotint portrait.

This title-page was used for composite volumes of caricatures bound in boards which include prints not only before but after 1776. It may have been originally issued in connexion with one or more of the series of folio prints issued by Darby, possibly to subscribers to the very numerous series which appeared in at least two volumes between 1776 and 1778 and perhaps in 1779, see Nos. 5370-6, 5429-51, 5513-22, 5599-5602. The contents of these volumes vary, some contain all six series of 'Macaronies' published 1771-3, see Nos. 4913, 4986, 5149, &c., three plates being printed on one page.¹ They also include prints published between 1766 and 1779 belonging to a number of different series, and in three sizes, the plates being printed one, two, or three on a page.

The plates included in the composite volume appear to have Matthew ¹ As in the volume exhibited by Mr. Dyson Perrins at the Burlington Fine Arts Club, 1932.

Darby's imprint with two exceptions, No. 5860, which has no publication line, and The Repository or Tatter'd Sale, a print of Tattersall's, published, perhaps etched, by Mary Darby, 1 Jan. 1777.¹ Mary Darby etched a portrait of Garrick as Abel Drugger (B.M. Cat. of Engr. British Portraits), and the dedication may indicate a personal compliment from her to Garrick. She also published No. 4752. For Mary Darby see her portrait, No. 4692.

13 $\frac{13}{16}$ × 9 $\frac{13}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5370-5376

Prints belonging to the very numerous series published by Darby apparently in two volumes 1776-8, see No. 5369. There were several political satires in this series, see Nos. 5397, 5400, 5473-5, 5482, 5483.

5370 9 THE PREPOSTEROUS HEAD DRESS, OR THE FEATHER LADY.

[M. Darby?]

Pub. by M Darby. 39 Strand March 20. 1776.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions).² A lady seated at a dressing-table in profile to the l. A hairdresser, fashionably dressed, stands (r.) on a stool arranging the tall ostrich feathers in her hair, which is an enormous inverted pyramid decorated with feathers, lace, fruit, and carrots. A lady's maid, elaborately dressed, with her hair in the fashionable pyramid, stands by the table (l.) facing her mistress and holding out a basket full of apples, carrots, &c. Feathers and circular toilet-boxes for cosmetics lie on the dressing-table.

The looking-glass and dressing-table are draped. The wall which forms a background is ornamented with mouldings. Two H.L. portraits hang on the wall. A carpet with a large arabesque pattern covers the floor.

The fashion for an inverted pyramid of hair, somewhat heart-shaped, and decorated with long ostrich feathers and other ornaments, was much caricatured in 1776. This use of ostrich feathers is said to have been introduced by the Duchess of Devonshire, to whom Lord Stormont presented a long feather on returning from Paris in 1774. (Fairholt, Costume in England, 1896, i. 395 n.) Lady Louisa Stuart wrote in her old age of 'the outrageous zeal manifested against the first introduction of ostrich feathers as a headdress. This fashion was not attacked as fantastic or unbecoming or inconvenient or expensive, but as seriously wrong or immoral. The unfortunate feathers were insulted mobbed burned almost pelted . . .'. Selections . . ., ed. J. A. Home, 1899, p. 187. They were the subject of a pamphlet, A Letter to the Duchess of Devonshire, 1777. See also H. More, Life and Corr., by W. Roberts, 1834, i. 65.

See also Nos. 5330, 5335, 5371-81, 5383-8, 5393-5, 5396, 5427, 5429, 5430, 5436, 5439-42, 5444, 5447-51, 5452, 5454, 5456, 5459-62, 5466, 5467, 5515, 5517. Nos. 4546, 4547 also belong to 1776, and No. 4550 to 1777.

¹ An impression from the collection of Mr. Minto Wilson was exhibited at the Burlington Fine Arts Club, 1932. It is included in a volume belonging (1933) to Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street.

² Only the uncoloured impression is numbered.

The broad pyramid of 1776-7 differs from the erection of 1770-1 or 1772 which was elongated with a narrow apex, see Nos. 4628 (p. 46), 4630.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xxi.

$12\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5371 THE EXTRAVAGANZA. OR THE MOUNTAIN HEAD DRESS

OF 1776.

[M. Darly?]

Pub by M Darly April 10. 1776.

Engraving. An enormous triangular mass of hair, attached to the head of a lady (full face) whose head and shoulders appear at the bottom of the print. The broad upper edge of the pyramid is decorated in the centre with a jewelled ornament from which spring ears of corn. The hair is adorned with long ostrich feathers, sprays of flowers, on one of which sits a bird, carrots, bunches of grapes, and other fruit. The central mound of hair is surrounded by symmetrical curls or ringlets.

One of many satires on extravagant hair dressing, see No. 5370, &c.

$12\frac{3}{8} \times 9$ in.

5372 ³² THE CITY ROUT.

Pub^d acco^s to Act by M Darly 39 Strand May 20. 1776.

Engraving. A satire on City manners. Persons standing in conversation at a party. The principal figures are two elaborately dressed ladies of plebeian, elderly, and unattractive appearance who face each other; one holds a card, the other a fan. Their hair is awkwardly dressed in the enormous mounds then fashionable, see No. 5370, &c. On the l. a short, fat, and awkward footman brings in a tray on which is a triple stand of jelly-glasses, a foaming tankard of beer, &c. The other guests are men; one wears a furred alderman's gown. In the centre of the back wall is a picture of a man with a distraught expression dressed as a seaman or working man, who is being devoured by two lions, one on each side. Above his head are the letters S.P.Q.L. On the back of the print a note in a contemporary hand explains this as 'Senatus populusque Londoniensis the Aldermen and Commoners of London'. On the r. wall is visible the lower part of a W.L. portrait of a man in a furred livery gown.

In the manner of R. St. G. Mansergh.

$8\frac{1}{2} \times 13\frac{7}{16}$ in.

5373 THE VIS . A . VIS . BISECTED. OR THE LADIES COOP.

[M. Darly?]

Pub by M Darly May 25, 1776.

Engraving (coloured impression). The interior of a closed carriage made visible by being bisected longitudinally. In it two young ladies of pleasing appearance sit face to face in profile, apparently on the floor, or on very low seats, to make room for their monstrous mounds of hair. These are decorated with feathers, flowers, vegetables, &c. as in No. 5370. One (r.) holds a paper inscribed Pantheon 3^d Subscription, the other holds a fan. The roof of the carriage is ornamented with two ducal coronets.

A vis-à-vis was a narrow coach in which only two persons could sit facing each other, being 'seldom used by any other but persons of high character or fashion', and 'usually finished in a superior manner than what the generality of carriages are'. Felton, Treatise on Carriages, 1795, p. 65. Cf. No. 5416.

One of many satires on monstrous hair-dressing, it is perhaps intended for the Duchess of Devonshire, cf. No. 5370.

Reproduced, Fuchs, Die Karikatur der Europäischen Völker, p. 278. C. E. Jensen, Karikatur-album, 1906, i. p. 163.

$8\frac{9}{16} \times 12\frac{15}{16}$ in.

5374 5. A SCOTCH REEL.

Pub. by M Darly. 39 Strand, July 11, 1776.

Engraving. Two couples dancing a reel. The ladies wear the monstrous feathered coiffures then fashionable, see No. 5370, &c. The man on the l. is short, ungainly, and very fat, he walks rather than dances. The other man dances with energy, one arm raised. All wear gloves.

$8\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5375 PHAETON OR MODERN FEMALE TASTE

Pub. by M Darly 39 Strand Nov: 6 1776.

Engraving. A lady driving (r. to l.) in a high phaeton which is poised on very high springs. The two prancing ponies are very small relatively to the lady and the carriage. Her hair is extravagantly dressed in the manner of contemporary caricature. Perched on her mound of hair is a hat trimmed with ribbons and enormous ostrich feathers. The phaeton has a folding hood, which if raised would be very far from covering the lady's coiffure. The side panel of the carriage is ornamented with a ducal coronet, and the motto SWIFT. She is driving over turf; in the distance are trees.

Compare the prologue to Colman's comedy, The Suicide (Haymarket, 1778):

'Tis now the reigning taste with belle and beau
 . . . Their art and skill in coachmanship to shew:
 A female Phaeton all danger mocks,
 Half-coat, half-petticoat she mounts the box. . . .'

Gent. Mag., 1778, 382.

Cf. No. 5936.

The feathers and the coronet suggest the Duchess of Devonshire, see Nos. 5370, 5373. See also No. 5394. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. cxxii.

$8\frac{9}{16} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5376 MISS .SHUTTLE-COCK.

R. S. [Monogram, i.e. 'Richard Sneer']¹

Pub^d by M Darly Dec^r 6 1776 (39) Strand.

Engraving (coloured impression). A game of shuttlecock between two men who face each other, standing at opposite sides of the design, each with a raised battledore. One (l.) is short, obese, and of clerical appearance;

¹ It is possible that R. S., or 'Dicky Sneer', denotes R. B. Sheridan. A comparison with portraits of Sheridan shows that this is not unlikely. The signature may denote either the subject or the artist, or possibly both.

the other is slim with a long pigtail queue. High in the air between them is their shuttlecock, a lady with the enormous head-dress decorated with the long ostrich feathers of contemporary caricature; her skirts fly up. Beneath the design is etched

*Ladie[s] likes [sic] Shuttle-Cocks are now array'd,
The tail is Cork'd and feather'd is the head.*

Cf. the lines in Garrick's prologue to Sheridan's Trip to Scarborough first played 24 Feb. 1777, perhaps suggested by this print:

Ladies may smile—are they not in the plot?
The bounds of nature have not they forgot?
Were they design'd to be, when put together,
Made up, like shuttlecocks, of cork and feather?

This print is shown in No. 5435, Doleful Dicky Sneer in the Dumps, from which it seems that the slim man is intended for 'Richard Sneer'. No. 5430 belongs to the same set, by the same artist.

One of a number of satires, 1776-7, on the prevailing fashion for 'cork-rumps', see No. 5381, &c., and for monstrous feathered head-dresses, see No. 5370, &c. See especially No. 5383. The cork rump was accompanied by excessive tightlacing, see No. 5444, &c.

8 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 13 in.

5377 CUPID'S TOWER.

[M. Darly?]

Pub^d March 1. 1776 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. A lady (H.L.) in profile to the l. with an enormous pyramid of hair in the fashion of the day. On the broad summit of the pyramid lies a miniature cupid fitting an arrow to his bow and about to aim in the direction in which the lady is looking. She wears the fashionable 'full-dress' of the period. Beneath is etched,

*Fair tresses Man's imperial race ensnare,
And beauty draws us with a single hair.*

One of many satires on monstrous head-dresses, see No. 5370, &c. Others of a similar kind are Nos. 5330, 5335, 5378-80, 5384, 5441, 5442, 5448, 5449.

7 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 5 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5378 BUNTERS HILL OR MAY DAY.

Pub^d according to Act of Parl^t May 1. 1776. by J. Lockington Shug Lane

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5379. A woman (H.L.) in profile to the r. on whose enormous erection of hair are depicted a number of scenes illustrating low-life on May-day in London. On the summit is a galloping pig with two small pigs. Below are two pairs of street-sellers (?), one offers drink to a woman; the other, an old woman smoking a pipe, offers a tray of fruit or cakes to a woman and child. Below is a fruit or vegetable cart drawn by two asses or horses, tandem, their heads decorated with branches. In the lowest section of the coiffure is a jack-in-the-green surrounded by chimney-sweeps and bystanders. The woman's face is patched.

Bunter was 'a cant word for a woman who picks up rags about the street; and used by way of contempt for any low vulgar woman', O.E.D. The pigs probably represent the animals which routed about the garbage-heaps where these women did their work.

Probably a parody of No. 5330 (Bunkers Hill). For similar designs see No. 5377, &c.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5379 RURAL MASQUERADE DEDICATED TO THE REGATTAITES.

Pub^d accor^s to Act of Parl^t July 9 1776 by J. Lockington Shug Lane Golden Squ^e.

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5378. On an enormous erection of hair are depicted a masquerade and regatta. In the upper division of the coiffure a number of persons in masquerade dress are walking in a garden decorated by lanterns which surround the flower-beds and outline an archway; behind is a rotunda. In the lower division are a number of boats and barges, the central boat flying the Union flag. The hair is attached to the head of a H.L. figure with the body of a woman, but with a grotesque face and beard, perhaps intended for Father Thames or Neptune.

This evidently represents the first regatta held in England, 23 June 1775, which took place partly on the Thames, partly at Ranelagh, where a temple of Neptune was erected. See Ann. Reg. 1775, pp. 132 and 216-18.

The chief regatta of 1776 was on 22 Aug., at Richmond, for the Prince of Wales's birthday. London Chronicle, 22-4 Aug.

$5\frac{9}{16} \times 7\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5380 BETTY THE COOK MAIDS HEAD DREST.

London. Pub. 13th June 1776 by W. Humphrey Gerrard Street, Soho.

Price one Shill^s

Engraving. An enormous heart-shaped pyramid of hair extends from the head (full-face) of a young woman. On the centre of the top rests a kitchen fireplace with a joint of meat roasting at a spit; on the chimney-piece sits a monkey in a fool's cap looking at itself in a hand-mirror. Below the fireplace is a large circular cheese from which a wedge has been cut in which are three mice. Under the cheese, and draped across the hair, is a ribbon, decorated with household utensils: a mop, fire-irons, broom, gridiron, and ladle. A dog with puppies barks at a spitting cat with kittens. Round the cheese are vegetables: cauliflower, cabbage, asparagus, potatoes, &c. Beneath the title is etched,

*The Taste at present all may see,
But none can tell what is to be,
Who knows when Fashions whims are spread,
But each may wear this Kitchen Head.
The Noddle that so vastly swells,
May wear a Fool's cap, hung with Bells.*

One of many satires in 1776 on extravagant hair-dressing, see No. 5370, &c.

$13 \times 9\frac{1}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5381 THE CORK RUMP OR CHLOE'S CUSHION.Pub^d Nov^r 19, 1776, by J. Walker N^o 13, Parliament St^e

Aquatint. Perhaps a companion print to No. 5382. W.L. figure of a young woman standing in profile to r. and looking to the front. Her hair is in the enormous pyramid of caricature, on its apex is pinned a frilled cap with long streamers of lace and ribbon. The back of her skirt projects below the waist, and on the projection sits a poodle wearing a bow of ribbon. In her r. hand she holds a spray of moss rose-buds. She wears an apron and a skirt which shows her ankles.

The 'cork rump', a cork support which extended the dress at the back in the manner of the 'bustle' of the nineteenth century but also encircled the hips, was the subject of many caricatures, 1776-7, see Nos. 5376, 5383, 5403, 5429, 5430, 5439, 5458, 5460.

A print with a similar title was published by Darly in 1777, see No. 5429. $6\frac{3}{8} \times 4\frac{13}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5382 THE COLD RUMP OR TASTE ALAMODE*Pub^d Dec^r 10. 1776.*

Aquatint. Perhaps a companion print to No. 5381. A man warming his back at a fire, which is seen through his wide-apart legs; his heels are against the low fender. His hands are behind his back, holding out his coat-tails. His head is turned in profile to the l., looking over his r. shoulder. He wears a toupet wig with a plaited queue, an elaborate cravat, and a short waistcoat; a bunch of seals hangs from his fob, cf. No. 5443.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 4\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5383 THE CORK-RUMP THE SUPPORT OF LIFE.[n.d. c. 1776¹]

Engraving. A lake on which a boating accident has just occurred, the overturned boat partly visible on the extreme r. The central figure is that of a young lady seated serenely in the water supported by her voluminous petticoats and the concealed cork beneath them. Her hair is dressed in an enormous inverted pyramid, its summit decorated with feathers, flowers, and lappets of lace, which dangle to her shoulders; on her lap she holds a small dog. Two swans (l.) hiss at her.

In the foreground the head of a man and of an elderly woman, both shrieking, rise above the water, their arms extended; a tasselled cane hangs from the man's wrist. A pair of woman's feet in high-heeled shoes waves above the water. These three, unsupported by cork, seem about to drown. Two men hang limply over the keel of the overturned boat. Beneath the title is engraved,

*You smil'd when like a Shuttle-cock I flew,
The scene is chang'd, and mine's the Triumph now—
Despair ye Clods, behold the distant Shore,
And for Cork-Rumps in vain the Gods implore!*

This is perhaps a comment on No. 5376, where the lady is used as a shuttle-cock. See also No. 5381, &c.

$7\frac{1}{4} \times 11\frac{5}{8}$ in.

¹ Publication line probably cut off.

5384 THE LADY'S MAID, OR TOILET HEAD-DRESS

[n.d. c. 1776¹]

Engraving (coloured impression). A young woman (H.L.) with her hair in a much exaggerated inverted pyramid which fills the greater part of the design and is the support for a dressing-table, draped with muslin festoons. On it are an oval mirror, a pair of tapers in candlesticks, two vases of flowers, a pincushion, toilet articles, a pair of buckles, rings, a necklace, &c., two books, a pen.

One of a number of similar satires, see Nos. 5330, 5335, 5371, 5377-80, 5442, 5448, 5449. For extravagant hairdressing see No. 5370, &c.
8 × 5¹³/₁₆ in.

5385 [FRONTISPIECE TO ANSTEY'S ELECTION BALL, 1776.]

C. W. Bampfylde 28 March 1776.

Engraving. From The Election Ball, 3rd ed., Bath, 1776. A bedroom. A lady in stays and petticoat (Madge Inkle) seated at a dressing-table, decorating her hair with long cock's feathers. Her stout elderly husband (r.), leaning on a walking-stick, looks on in surprise. A maidservant (l.) is about to leave the room, holding a cock, from which all the tail-feathers have been plucked. A cat watches the cock, holding up one paw. A lady's dress hangs over a chair; shoes, cock's feathers, and a paper inscribed Election Ball lie on the floor. In the background is the tester of a bed with curtains. A H.L. portrait on the wall is inscribed S' Sim: Blunderhead. Beneath the design is engraved:

Humano Capiti — ☞c., — — ☞c.

Jungere si velit, et varias inducere plumas—

Spectatum admissi risum teneatis Amici?

Horat: de Art: Poet:

A note to the lines illustrated (p. 35):

'The Editor is sensible how very far Mr. INKLE's Description must fall short of the inimitable Design of the Frontispiece, which however he cannot value more as a masterly performance, than as a kind token of Approbation and Regard from his worthy and ingenious friend COPLESTONE WARRE BAMPFYLDE, Esq. of Hestercombe in Somersetshire.'

See No. 5386 for another illustration of this subject. One of many satires on the monstrous hair-dressing of 1776, see No. 5370, &c.
8 × 6⁵/₁₆ in.

5386-5390

Five illustrations to Anstey's Election Ball designed by C. W. Bampfylde and etched by William Hassel, published at Bath in an Epistola Poetica Familiaris, addressed by Anstey to Bampfylde. (Copy in Print Department.)

5386 [MARGERY INKLE DRESSING HER HAIR.]

C.W.B. del. W.H. sc. Pub. by C. Anstey 30 Dec. 1776. as the Act directs.

Engraving. Margery in stays and petticoat seated before her dressing-table

¹ Miss Banks has written on the back, 'bought 1785', but it is clearly earlier.

holds the monstrous erection on her head. Her father, Inkle, seated on a chair (r.), watches in astonishment. A maid stands by an open door (l.) holding the cock which has been robbed of its tail-feathers, some of which lie on the ground, others adorn Margery's head-dress. A cat miaows at the cock. See also No. 5385.

$4\frac{5}{16} \times 4\frac{1}{8}$ in. (Inset on p. 27.)

5387 [MARGERY ENTERING THE SEDAN CHAIR]

C.W.B. del. W.H. sc. Pub. 30 Dec. 1776 by C. Anstey as the Act directs.

Engraving. Margery crouches in the open sedan chair, (r.) one chairman raises the roof to accommodate the feathered head-dress, the other points to the chair, looking, hat in hand, to Inkle who stands (l.) supported on his stick.

$3\frac{3}{4} \times 4$ in. (Below the text, p. 28).

5388 [THE PROGRESS OF THE SEDAN.]

C.W.B. del. W.H. sc. Pub. 30 Dec. 1776 by C. Anstey as the Act directs Engraving. Two chairmen carry (r. to l.) the sedan chair. Margery in a crouching position is seen through the window. Old Inkle hobbles beside her (r.) supported on two sticks.

$3\frac{5}{16} \times 4\frac{3}{16}$ in. (Inset on p. 29.)

5389 [INKLE ASSURES LORD PERRIWINKLE OF HIS INTEREST AT THE NEXT ELECTION.]

C.W.B. del. W.H. sc. Pub. 30 Dec. 1776 by C. Anstey as the Act directs.

Engraving. Lord Perriwinkle stands, his r. hand inserted in his waistcoat, listening with a calculating frown to Inkle who leans towards him, speaking into his l. ear.

$3\frac{15}{16} \times 3\frac{1}{8}$ in. (Below the text, p. 31.)

5390 [INKLE AND LORD PERRIWINKLE TAKE LEAVE OF EACH OTHER.]

C.W.B. del. W.H. sc. Pub. 30 Dec. 1776 by C. Anstey as the Act directs.

Engraving. Inkle (l.) and Lord Perriwinkle (r.) take each other's hands, bowing very low; Inkle rests his l. hand on his stick, which supports him; the other, his hat under his arm, holds his l. hand to his breast.

$3\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ in. (Below the text, p. 32.)

5391 THE COCK-PIT.

Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett, N^o 53 Fleet Street, as the Act directs, July 20, 1776

Engraving. Two cocks fighting in a cock-pit. Behind them eight spectators, probably portraits, sit and stand. A man in riding-dress is having an altercation with the well-dressed man on his r. On their r. is a working man in an apron. Behind the circular pit and the surrounding circle for spectators is a straight brick wall with timber beams. On this is a burlesqued version of the royal arms. Probably suggested by Hogarth's print, see No. 3706.

$5\frac{7}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{8}$ in.

Six prints from the series of mezzotints published by Carington Bowles.

ALL SORTS. (337) See No. 4543—[c. 1776]

J. R. Smith del. et sc.

THE YOUNG WANTON. (340) See No. 4544—[1776]

[? J. R. Smith¹]

A BAGNIGGE WELLS SCENE, OR NO RESISTING TEMPTATION.

(341) See No. 4545—[1776]

SLEIGHT OF HAND BY A MONKEY—OR THE LADY'S HEAD UNLOADED. (344) See No. 4546—25 Oct^r. 1776

A satire on hair-dressing, see No. 5370, &c.

BOB BLUNT IN AMAZE, OR FEMALE FASHIONABLE FOLLIES.

(345) A satire on hair-dressing. See No. 4547—[1776]

5392 346. DIOGENES LOOKING FOR AN HONEST MAN.

Printed for Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in St Paul's Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, 1776.]

Mezzotint. Diogenes, a bearded elderly man wearing nondescript draperies and carrying a lantern, walks (l. to r.) with a stick. He is followed by a dog. A young man and woman (l.) point at him with derision; a boy (r.), holding to a tree, looks round at him with amusement. In the background is a piece of water with trees, and on its farther side, a house. On the l. a dove-cote is partly visible, one bird flies from it.

$13 \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

Ten similar mezzotints issued by other publishers.

5393 397. AGE AND FOLLY, OR THE BEAUTIES.

[Philip Dawe.]

London, Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett, N^o 53, Fleet Street; as the Act directs, 1 Feb. 1776.

Mezzotint. An aged and repulsively ugly couple walk under trees, both dressed in a grotesque exaggeration of the fashion of the day. The man (l.) ogles the lady, whose pointed chin he holds, she smiles at him. He has a wig with an enormous looped-up macaroni club; a comb stuck into the top of his head shows that he is a barber, and, except that Frenchmen in caricature are seldom fat, the three-cornered hat with a tuft of feathers at each corner suggests that he is French. He wears a sword and a large nosegay. From his fob hangs a chatelaine or group of chains ending in a heart, the model of a small animal, a thimble, &c.

¹ Similar in manner to other prints by Smith of courtesans illustrating verses from Proverbs, see Frankau, pp. 99, 125, and Nos. 5823, 5824.

The lady has a grotesque witch-like profile; her face is patched; she holds a fan, and wears a large earring, and a large nosegay. Her enormous pyramid of hair is decorated with ostrich feathers, ribbons, &c. In the feathers is a bird's nest with young birds gaping for food which is being brought them by a bird which flies towards them. She resembles the old woman in No. 5466 by the same artist.

Behind on the r. two simply-dressed young women wearing hats hold up their hands in amazement at the grotesque couple.

Beneath the title is engraved,

*Search Court and City, Town and Country round,
Two such Beauties scarce are to be found.*

For other satires on the monstrous hair-dressing of 1776-7 see No. 5370, &c.

13 × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5394 THE NEW FASHIONED PHAETON SIC ITUR AD ASTRA.

[P. Dawe?]

London, Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett, N^o 53 Fleet Street, as the Act directs, 22^d Feb^y 1776.

Mezzotint. A phaeton and pair stands outside a town house. The body of the carriage, which is carved and decorated, has been raised above the wheels on an expanding trellis-work so that it is on the level of the first-floor windows. A gentleman who holds the reins in his l. hand leans forward to assist into the carriage a lady who is stepping through the window and over the low iron railing of the balcony. He wears a small hat, a looped macaroni club, laced coat, and top-boots. She is elaborately dressed in the height of the fashion with a vast pyramid of hair decorated with enormous ostrich feathers. On the ground below a man and woman (l.) stand gazing up at them; the woman holds a child in her arms, an older boy stands beside her, pointing up and waving his hat. In the doorway of the house (r.) a man and woman stand, looking up open-mouthed, the woman holding up a hand in astonishment.

The house has large sash-windows, those on the first floor have oval balconies with wrought-iron balustrades. The façade is ornamented by vertical strips of carving in low relief between the windows.

For phaetons see Nos. 5375, 5761, and for other satires on hair-dressing, No. 5370, &c. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. cxxiv.

13 × 9 $\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5395 A HINT TO THE LADIES TO TAKE CARE OF THEIR HEADS.

[P. Dawe?]

London, Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett N^o 53 Fleet Street, as the Act directs 28th March 1776.

Mezzotint. The interior of the rotunda at the Pantheon. A lady stands in the centre, the feathers (taller than the wearer) in her grotesquely high coiffure of hair having caught fire from the hanging candelabra. A maid-servant directs a jet of water to the blaze from the nozzle of a large pencil-shaped fire extinguisher, which she holds in both hands. A man holds up in both hands a long narrow board marked in lengths of feet with which he appears to be measuring the height of the head-dress. A lady and a gentleman sit on a sofa (r.), each with a hand held up in surprise. On the l. are two ladies, seated, with a man standing behind them, bending forward as he looks through his lorgnette. The ladies are dressed in the fashion of the day, with long ear-rings, and large nosegays tucked into their low-cut bodices. On a scaffolding (r.) stand two workmen who are wielding mallets with great energy. In a gallery high up under the dome, fronted by a balustrade, are musicians (l.) partly obscured by the towering feathers, two violinists being visible.

For other satires on the monstrous hairdressing of 1776 see No. 5370, &c. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xxii; A. S. Turberville, Men and Manners of the Eighteenth Century, 1926, p. 100.

12 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{16}$ in.

THE CONNOISSEUR AND TIRED BOY. See No. 4621—15 May 1776
[P. Dawe] Pub. Sayer and Bennett. Cf. Chaloner Smith, i. p. 158.
Mezzotint.

RIDICULOUS TASTE.

See No. 4629—10 June 1776

Pub. Sayer and Bennett

A satire on hair-dressing, a reduced version of No. 4628 (1771).

SAL DAB GIVING MONSIEUR A RECIEPT IN FULL. (389)See No. 4623¹—29 May 1776

Pub. Sayer and Bennett.

A reduced version was issued 1 Apr. 1777.

5396 CAN YOU FORBEAR LAUGHING.

[P. Dawe?]

London Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett N^o 53 Fleet Street, as the Act directs 14 June 1776.

Mezzotint. A lady stands at her dressing-table (r.), her hair in an enormous pyramid decorated with feathers torn from a peacock, an ostrich and a cock. A young girl wearing a hat holds the peacock by a wing; another wearing a cap tugs hard at one of its tail feathers (which are very unlike peacock's feathers). An ostrich (l.), which has lost most of its tail feathers, is about to pluck out those which ornament the lady's hair. A cock stands in the foreground (r.), having lost almost all its tail feathers, many of which lie on the floor. A black boy wearing a turban stands on his mistress's r., handing feathers from a number which he holds in his l. hand. The lady, who faces T.Q. to the r., is elaborately dressed in the fashion of the day. Her pyramid of hair is decorated with lappets of lace and festoons of jewels as well as with feathers. She wears large ear-rings, a necklace with a cross, her bodice is cut very low, and her elbow sleeves have lace ruffles. A pannelled wall forms the background.

¹ Incorrectly dated 1766.

One of a number of satires on the hair-dressing of 1776-7, see No. 5370, &c.

12 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 10 in.

THE CONTINENCE OF A METHODIST PARSON . . .

See No. 4610—10 June 1776

After Collet.

Pub. Sayer and Bennett.

A smaller version (reversed) of No. 4609 (1773).

THE SPORTING LADY.

See No. 4624—1 Oct. 1776

Pub. Sayer and Bennett. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. cxvii.

A LOVELY YOUTH AND A CHARMING MAID, . . .

See No. 4777—29 May 1776

Pub. W. Humphrey.

POLITICAL SATIRES

5397 19. V. 2. POOR OLD ENGLAND ENDEAVOURING TO RECLAIM HER WICKED AMERICAN CHILDREN.Pub Apr 1 1777 by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. England, as an elderly, emaciated man, with a wooden leg and crutch, stands on one side of water inscribed The Atlantic Ocean. He wears a wide-brimmed hat; at his feet is Britannia's shield. In his l. hand is a scourge with which he threatens five Americans on the other side. Four of them have hooks through their noses attached to cords which England is pulling. Nevertheless, one turns his back and looks round jeering; another is firing a miniature cannon held in both hands. The fifth shouts and points, waving his hat. Beneath the title is etched And therefore is England maimed & forc'd to go with a Staff. shakespeare. One of the few political satires in Darly's series, see Nos. 5369, 5370, &c.

7 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 12 $\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5397 A An apparently earlier state without numbers and the words 'The Atlantic Ocean'. It is, however, dated Sep^r 1. 1777.

The American who turns his back bares his person indecently; this has been altered in No. 5397.

5398 USURY BRIDLED OR HOPPY-KIKKI HALL, IN AN UPROAR.Publish'd 1st April 1777.

Engraving. Hopkins, the City Chamberlain, seated in an armchair (r.) outside a small one-storied building symbolizing the Chamberlain's office. He holds a document inscribed 16 $\frac{1}{2}$ Pr Ct, saying, It's a fair price. Beside him (l.) is an open box inscribed City Chest, full of money-bags. The building behind him is decorated with the City Arms, and flies a flag inscribed Honesty Rewarded. A small projection from the main building immediately above Hopkins's head is inscribed Mortgages Annuities Bonds in Judgement. Colat^s. Securities.

He appears unconscious of a lawyer (l.) wearing a gown who advances towards him, holding by a chain a monster with the body of a dog and three human heads, two of which, and perhaps the third which is partly concealed, have bearded Jewish profiles. The lawyer holds a rolled document inscribed Bill to Pre[vent Usury]; he is saying, If I can't extirpate ye, I'll bridle you. Over his head flies Fame holding out a wreath and palm branch. The three heads of the monster are saying, How cursedly the Lawyer pulls; Damn this Bill I can't keep my Horse and my Whore now, and May our holy Phrophet Moses Confound 'em. In one paw is a rolled document inscribed To the Clerk of the City Till, in the other, Mortgage on the Green horn Estates.

The Bill held by the lawyer appears to represent that 'for regulating the grants of life annuities and for the better protection of infants against such grants' (17 George III, c. 26). See abstract of the Act, Ann. Reg. 1777, p. 259. According to Walpole the Act was occasioned by a usurious bargain made by Hopkins for a loan to Sir John St. Aubyn (see No. 5414) in his minority, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 36-7. He was commonly called Vulture Hopkins, the noted usurer, City Biography, 1800, p. 136. As Chamberlain, he was responsible for the City Chest, which contained funds deposited for annuities for City orphans. Hopkins was Wilkes's rival, see No. 5327. He was four times a Director of the Bank of England (1765-79); M.P. for Great Bedwin 1771-4. A. B. Beaven, Aldermen of London, ii. 135.

7½ × 8⅞ in. (pl.).

5399 THE CONFERENCE BETWEEN THE BROTHERS HOW TO GET RICH.

Publish'd by W. Williams Fleet Street as the Act directs Oct: 10, 1777

Engraving. Two men of identical appearance, one (l.) dressed as a military officer, the other (r.) as a naval officer, sit opposite each other, one on each side of a round table. Between them, behind the table, stands the devil, a hand pointing at each brother. He says How How continue the War. He addresses Admiral Lord Howe and General Sir William Howe, who were then making a joint attack on Philadelphia. Admiral Howe (r.) says, Brother How poor we are How shall we get Rich; the other answers, I don't know How How we can. In the background, seen through an open door, are four ships of war at anchor; they are lying off an encampment of tents. In front of these is a plantation of cabbages, by which is a man with a cabbage cart, calling Cabbages Ho . . . w.

During September and most of October 1777 no news arrived from either of the Howes. According to Walpole 'the nation from impatience of news, grew much dissatisfied, and the Howes were infinitely abused and accused of thinking of nothing but their vast profits'. Last Journals, 1910, ii. 45. The cabbages probably indicate the alleged perquisites taken by the Howes, since cabbage was the name for pilfered pieces of stuff appropriated by tailors, the verb to cabbage meaning to pilfer. O.E.D., cf. No. 5805.

The word How in the title and on the design is larger than the rest of the script to indicate the pun on the name of the brothers. This satire combines an attack on the Howes for dishonesty and inactivity with the suggestion that advice to continue the war comes from the devil.

See also Nos. 5405, 5406, 5472.

8½ × 12½ in.

5400 GENERAL SANGUINAIRE. MARK-HAM;¹

Pub Oct 28. 177 [sic] by M Darly 120 New Bond street & 39 Strand

Engraving. Archbishop Markham, dressed partly as a bishop, partly as a soldier. He wears a mitre decorated with a skull and cross-bones; his surplice is kilted up to show boots and breeches; his lawn sleeves appear through a sleeveless military tunic. Round his neck, below his bands, is a gorget inscribed Ectype. On his r. arm is an oval shield, on which is a figure of the Devil holding a spear inscribed Prototype.

¹ Margin cut off, but 38 v. 2 in a book of Darly's caricatures in the possession of Mr. W. T. Spencer (1933). See Nos. 5369, 5370, &c.

In his l. hand he holds up a sword, inscribed York's Sermons. Slung across his back is a cannon, inscribed Cannon Law. His crozier lies on the ground and his r. foot stands upon an open Bible inscribed Biblia Sacra. John Cap. 10 V. 1. After the title is etched:

*whom Patriarch Noah cursed,
O Slave to Sem & Japheth.
O may on his Head vengeance burst,
and push his Bones in Tophet,
Pollutes the Lawn with human Gore
What Devil can do more.*

Markham was translated to York in June 1777. He was much attacked for his attitude to the war, notably in the House of Lords, 30 May 1777, by Grafton, Shelburne, and others for a sermon contrary to the spirit of the Revolution. Parl. Hist. xix, pp. 326-51 (sermon quoted, pp. 348-50 n.); Walpole, Last Journals, ii. 29-30. Walpole calls him 'Archbishop Turpin', 10 June 1777, Letters, x. 59. See also Nos. 5343, 5492, 5631.

11 × 8 $\frac{15}{16}$ in.

5401 THE FLIGHT OF THE CONGRESS.

Publish'd Novr 20 1777 by W^m Hitchcock, N^o 5 Birch Lane.

Engraving. Animals in a wooded landscape with a mountainous background. Howe, as a lion, chasing (l. to r.) the American leaders in the shape of different animals. The scene is in front of a wooded mound in which is a cave inscribed Cave of Rebellion. Resolv'd, nem: con never to run away. On the mound grows 'Liberty Tree', a tree inscribed Liberty; a squirrel sits on a branch scattering papers, inscribed Paper Currency, '30 dollars', '100 dollars', &c. An opossum is climbing up the trunk. A roaring lion advances into the picture, his breath inscribed How; one paw is on a squared sheet of paper, inscribed Philadelphia, Delawar . . . The animals he chases are: an ass with a lion's skin on its back, inscribed, I. Hancock Pres; a tiger, Laurens; an armadillo, Washington; two foxes with collars round their necks, inscribed respectively Adams and [A]dam[s], evidently intended for John and Samuel Adams; a pig or wild boar is Putnam; a wolf is Lee; a stag whose collar is inscribed V . . . D. (?Francis Van Dyke, a New York patriot); a puma and a badger (?) without names. In the air (l.) an eagle clutches in beak and claws a rattlesnake inscribed Independence; and (r.) an owl flies away holding a paper, inscribed Louis Baboon a Paris. In the background (l.) is sketched a ship in full sail.

Beneath the design verses are engraved:

*Impatient of Imperial sway,
The Wild Beasts of America,
In Congress met, disclaim'd allegiance.
And to the Ass profess'd obedience,
With such New Leader; feeling bold,
No wonder they disdained the Old.
Resolving roundly, one and all,
In the good cause, to stand or fall,
Then herding, underneath the Tree,
Of Treason, alias Liberty;
They boast the Baboon King's alliance,
And at their own, hurl mad defiance.*

*Their foul revolt, their Monarch hears,
And strait upon the plain appears,
Aloud the British Lion roars,
Aloft the German Eagle soars;
When, Lo! 'midst broken Oaths and curses,
The Rebel rout at once disperses.*

This represents the occupation of Philadelphia by Howe in Sept. 1777 after the victory of Brandywine. In November there were reports in England of great successes over Washington which were not confirmed, Howe failing to bring him to a general action. In the meantime the surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga, 17 Oct. (see No. 5470), had disastrously altered the situation, but news of this did not reach London till 2 Dec. (see No. 5408). The owl flying to Louis XVI probably represents Benjamin Franklin's mission to France, where he arrived at the end of 1776. The 'baboon king' is the king of France, 'Lewis Baboon' of Arbuthnot's Law is a Bottomless Pit, 1712, but the alliance was not decided on until Dec. 1777 and not signed until 6 Feb. 1778. Lafayette had sailed for America in Apr. 1777 without the formal consent of the French Government. The rattlesnake was an emblem of the colonies and was on the earliest naval flag of the Americans, see Nos. 5336, 5973, &c. One of the few satires hostile to the Americans, cf. Nos. 5329, 5482, 5704, 5853, 6288.

Reproduced, Propylaen-Weltgeschichte, ed. W. Goetz, vi. 481; S. G. Fisher, True History of the American Revolution, 1902, p. 346.

$7\frac{15}{16} \times 13\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5401 A. An earlier impression in which a blank has been left for the day of the month in the publication line. The owl with its document inscribed Louis Baboon a Paris is omitted, as are the words Lee, Putnam, and V...D on the wolf, boar, and stag. The background differs in several details, the plate having been reworked and strengthened for the later impression. In place of the ship is a group of trees.

5402 THE TAKEING OF MISS MUD I'LAND. [c. Dec. 1777]

Sold by W Humphrey 227 Strand London.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A rough plan of the Delaware river below the mouth of the Schuylkill which is shown as a quasi-rectangular piece of water. In its centre is a pentagonal fort-shaped island, inscribed Mud Islnd. Across this straddles a woman astride a cannon which she is firing at the British ship Isis, while her l. hand fires a miniature cannon. Her hair is dressed over a broad cushion, cf. No. 5370, &c.; on it are two cannon and two flags, one the striped American flag with a serpent, see No. 5336, &c., the other the Union flag. On each side of the Isis are the Roebuck (l.) and the Somerset (r.), the latter in flames. In front of the Isis the topsails of the Eagle appear. Above Mud Island is the Vigilant, firing a broadside. Chevaux de Frize are marked in the river, above and below Mud Island.

This appears to illustrate Lord Howe's dispatch of 25 Oct., published 2 Dec. 1777 in an Extraordinary Gazette; see also Ann. Reg. 1777, p. 134 ff.; Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 79. In the attack on the strongly fortified Mud, or Fort, Island the Isis and the Merlin were destroyed. The Eagle was Howe's flagship, see No. 5472. Mud Island was taken on 15 Nov., the news reaching London 19 Dec. Its capture opened the navigation of the Delaware; Howe marched after Washington, but failing to draw him into an engagement, withdrew to winter quarters at Philadelphia, cf. No. 5472.

$8\frac{15}{16} \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5403 HEAD QUARTER'S.

[c. 1777]

Engraving. Probably from a book. A recruiting soldier beats a kettle-drum which is placed on the projecting 'cork-rump' (see No. 5381, &c.) of a lady who stands in profile to the r., her hands in an enormous muff. Her head-dress is similar to that of Bunker's Hill and Noddle Island, see Nos. 5330, 5335: on the summit are battlements, from which project cannon surmounted by a British flag; round the erection are files of soldiers, cannon project from the loop of hair beside the face. She stands by a signpost in the form of a gibbet. It points To . Trenton; from the hand of the signpost dangles a noose of rope. A small recruiting placard is pasted on the gibbet-post, headed by the figure of a soldier and G R III., and inscribed, All gentlemen Volunteers that are able and willing to serve his M . . . y let them report to the 3 flying shit pots, &c. In the background is the gable-end of an inn (the recruiting headquarters) in the door of which stands a soldier beating a drum, another soldier stands by him with upraised cane. Some one is pouring liquid from an upper window on to his head. The royal arms and the word Head-quarters are over the door, a British flag flies from a pole. In the distance (r.) is a minute figure hanging from a gallows.

The words To Trenton indicate that this is a gibe at Washington's capture of Trenton (27 Dec. 1776) with its garrison of Hessians. One of several anti-recruiting prints, see No. 5295, &c.

$5\frac{5}{8} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5404 CHARLES LEE, ESQUIER.

[c. 1777]

peint par Thomlinsen a Nouvelle Yorck

Se vend a Londres chez Thom. Hart.

Mezzotint. H.L. portrait in an oval copied from No. 5296. The flag is very prominent and is inscribed, An | une | Appeal | Appellation | To au | Heaven | Ciel. Beneath the title is engraved *Major Général d'Armee des XIII Provinces unies d'Amerique Prisonier de Guerre, fait par les Anglois.*¹ Lee was taken prisoner by a scouting party on 13 Dec. 1776, he was then second-in-command to Washington. He was at length exchanged and rejoined Washington at Valley Forge in May 1778.

$7\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5405 THE HON^{BLE} SR W^M HOWE.

Corbutt Delint^t et fecit. [? R. Purcell]

London: Publish'd as the Act directs, 10th Novr 1777 by John Morris, Rathbone Place.

Mezzotint. One of a series, see No. 5290; a companion print to No. 5406.

¹ It is against the practice of this series to depict unsuccessful American generals. Possibly the plate was engraved before news of the capture.

T.Q.L. portrait of a military officer facing front, looking to r. His r. elbow resting on masonry; a stone fortification on r. with cannon. He wears a ribbon and star. Beneath the title is engraved, Knight of the Bath, & Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Forces in America.

At this time the Howes were much blamed both in England and by American Loyalists for forbearing to attack the enemy, it was alleged for political motives, both being strong Whigs, and also for desiring the prolongation of the war for financial reasons. See Detail and Conduct of the American War . . ., 3rd ed., 1780 (B.M.L. 1447, d. 23). See also Nos. 5399, 5406, 5472, 5548[2]. Sir W. Howe sent home his resignation in Oct. 1777 and embarked for England in Sept. 1778.

Chaloner Smith, iv, p. 1716. Reproduced, R. Hughes, Washington, 1762-1777, 1927, p. 274.

13 × 9½ in.

5405 A. A copy, probably by Will, dated 10. May, 1778 but inscribed as above except delin in place of Delin^t et fecit and the addition of Se vend chez J. M. Will à Augsburg. Andrews, p. 90.

5406 THE RIGHT HON^{BLE} RICHARD LORD HOWE.

Corbutt delin^t et fecit. [? R. Purcell.]

London: Publish'd as the Act directs, 10th Nov^r 1777, by John Morris, Rathbone Place.

Mezzotint. One of a series, see No. 5290; a companion print to No. 5405. T.Q.L. portrait of a naval officer standing in profile to the l. but looking to front, a sword in his r. hand, l. hand pointing to l. He appears to be on the deck of a ship. In the background l. is a ship in action, with the sails of another ship. Beneath the title is engraved Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Fleets in America.

For the attacks on the brothers Howe at this time for inactivity see No. 5405, &c.

For a reissue or copy of this plate, published 11 June 1794 by Laurie & Whittle, see Chaloner Smith, iv, p. 1733.

13¾ × 9⅞ in.

5406 A. A copy, probably by Will, dated 10 Nov 1778 but inscribed as above except for Corbutt delin in place of delin^t et fecit, and the addition of Se vend chez J. M. Will à Augsburg.

5407 BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

Dessiné par C. N. Cochin Chevalier de l'Ordre du Roi, en 1777

Joh. Martin Will excudit Aug. Vind.

Mezzotint. Apparently belongs to a series, see No. 5290, though unlike some others in the series it is engraved from a portrait. Franklin, T.Q.L., stands at a table directed to the r., holding a letter in his r. hand. His l. rests on the table on which are writing materials. He wears his well-known fur cap, spectacles, a plain coat with fur cuffs. The table is of an ornate French design, with marble top. Behind his head is a curtain. Beneath the title is engraved Né à Boston, dans la nouvelle Angleterre le 17. Janvier 1706.

It appears to be after a bust portrait by Cochin which was often engraved.

The three chief heroes of the American Revolution, especially in France, were Franklin, Washington, and Lafayette, their portraits being used as propaganda. Those of Franklin were especially numerous, cf. No. 5691.

13 × 9 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5408 GENERAL ARNOLD

[c. Dec. 1777]

peint par Wilckenson a Boston

Se vend a Londres chez Thom. Hart.

Mezzotint. H.L. portrait in an oval copied from No. 5331. Beneath the title is engraved, Qui avec le General Gates aidoit de environer le General Lieutenant Bourgoyne, que toute l'Armee se rendit Prisoniere, et l'obligea de mettre bas les Armes.

At the two battles at Saratoga which caused the surrender of Burgoyne (Oct. 1777) Arnold took the most conspicuous part though nominally under Gates, see No. 5469.

8 × 6 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

1777

PERSONAL SATIRES

5409-5421

Series of Tête-à-Tête Portraits

5409 N° XXXIV. MADAME GILB—T.

N° XXXV. THE KIND KEEPER.

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate, Jan. I. 1777.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 625. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of an Irish peer, who had been a Commissioner of the Treasury and Postmaster-General. He is William, 2nd earl of Bessborough (1704-93). See Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1894, ii. 138, 270-1, 280. His mistress is described as the widow of a French hairdresser.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5410 N° XXXVII
N° XXXVIII THE POLITICAL PLATONIC LOVERS.

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton. Junr near St John's Gate, Jan. 10. 1777

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, viii. 681. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the Political and Platonic Lovers'. An account of Mrs. Catherine Macaulay and of Dr. Wilson, that of the latter being continued from the point at which it was left in the Tête-à-Tête of Jan. 1772, see No. 4972. The house at Bath with its bust of Alfred which he presented to her is described, see No. 5598.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5411 N° II. THALIA
N° III. MALAGRIDA

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate Feb^y I. 1777.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed: . . .'. The portrait of Lord Shelburne (Malagrída) is a link between satirical portraits of circa 1771 (see No. 4917) in which he is represented with a thin face and melancholy expression, and the caricatures of 1782 and later in which his face is round and slyly jovial.

Thalia is Mrs. Abington (1737-1815), to whom Malagrída is said to allow £50 a week, a chariot and horses, with no interruption to her profession or restrictions on her visitors of both sexes.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5412 N° IV. LADY T—

N° V. C— L— S—H

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Jun' near St' John's Gate
Mar. 1. 1777.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Charles Loraine Smith¹ and of Lady Tyrconnel, daughter of the Marquess of Granby, who is here said to have formed a liaison with S. after a rupture due to her husband's unjust suspicions.

She was divorced Oct. 1777 for crim. con. with C. L. Smith, with whom she had eloped 13 July 1776, and married 28 Oct. 1777 Philip Anstruther. G.E.C., Complete Peerage.

Ovals, $2\frac{7}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5413 N° VII. MISS CHARLOTTE S—R

N° VIII THE D— OF D—

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Jun' near St' John's Gate,
April 1. 1777.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 121. Two bust portraits in oval frames, the lady's hair elaborately dressed. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of William, 5th Duke of Devonshire (1748-1811), who is here said to have remained faithful to his mistress, Miss Sp—r, a milliner and the seduced daughter of a curate, who is no longer young, in spite of his marriage [1774] to 'an universal toast, still in her teens'. For Charlotte Spencer see H. Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, 1909, pp. 209-10.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5414 N° X. MADAME LE F—

N° XI. THE COZENED MINOR.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Jun' near St' John's Gate
May 1. 1777.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the Cozened Minor and Madame Le F—re'. An account of a young Cornish baronet, who began a career of debauchery and extravagance while at Westminster School, and is now (aged 19) making the grand tour. He has formed a liaison at Geneva with the English wife of a Swiss watchmaker, whom he had known in London before her marriage.

Sir John Saint Aubyn, 1758-1839, who succeeded his father in 1772. G.E.C., Complete Baronetage, iv. 53. A 'certain transaction' is mentioned 'that has lately made so much noise, and will probably be the cause of a still greater uproar upon Midsummer day'. This is a reference to a usurious loan by Hopkins, the City Chamberlain, see No. 5398.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

¹ Described as the heir of a Northumberland baronet, evidently Sir W. Loraine of Kirkharle, 4th Bart., a cousin of Smith; his son and heir was born in 1779. In the Act of divorce he appears as Charles Smith Esq. of Enderby, Leicestershire. B.M.L. 216. 1. 3/62. See index of artists.

5415 N° XIII. MRS L—M

N° XIV. THE AMOROUS JUSTICE.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
June 1. 1777.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed: or, Memoirs of the Amorous Justice and M^{rs} L—m'. The Justice was 'designed for divinity' and educated at Oxford but obtained a commission in Burgoyne's regiment, retired on an inherited fortune, becoming a judge 'about four years ago'. He is Justice Addington of Bow Street; see The Farington Diary, i. 173-4. She is Mrs. Lessingham, who had passed as the wife of Derrick. John Taylor, Records of my Life, 1832, i, pp. 5-10. For Addington see No. 6120.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5416 N° XVI. VIS À VIS T—D

N° XVII. THE E— OF C—

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
July 1. 1777*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 289. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed: or, Memoirs of the E— of C— and vis-à-vis T—d'. An account of the amours of Lord C., having no particulars by which he can be identified with certainty. Miss T—d is a young courtesan of humble origin whose chief ambition is to own a fashionable carriage called a vis-à-vis. This Lord C. has satisfied.

For Agnes Townshend see H. Bleackley, Ladies Frail and Fair, 1909, p. 282, and cf. No. 5936. For the vis-à-vis see No. 5373.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5417 N° XIX THE HIBERNIAN THAIS.

N° XX CAPTN TOPER

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Aug^t 1. 1777.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed...'. An account of a man so notorious for his gallantry and dissipation 'that his portrait will be immediately recognized'. It is of a good-looking man facing T.Q. to the l. with an aquiline nose. He is in 'a constant state of intoxication', with a 'natural disposition for riot and confusion'. Identified by H. Bleackley as Captain Roper. He is alluded to in vol. xv, p. 122 (1783) as Captain R—r, who had died at Antwerp, after being continually drunk for the last six years of his life. Thais is Miss F—m, who, on the eve of her marriage in Ireland, eloped to England with a captain who deserted her, after which, having nearly starved as a strolling actress, she became a London courtesan.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5418 N° XXII. MISS D—N.

N° XXIII. LE COMTE DES LUNETTES.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Sep^r I. 1777.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed: . . .'. An account of the Earl of Peterborough (1710-79), the name in the title given to him because he invariably wears spectacles. His mistress is a Miss Dawson, whom he had persuaded to leave the house of an old lady to whom she was acting as a companion.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.; $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5419 N° XXV. MRS W—NT—R

N° XXVI. THE E. OF H—H

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Oct^r I. 1777.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 457. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed: . . .'. An account of Lord Hillsborough (1718-93), afterwards Marquis of Downshire, alluding to the Royal Society Club, the account of which is in striking contrast to Sir A. Geikie's documented history of the Club. He is said to have 'filled several high offices with dignity and general applause'. Mrs. W. is the widow of a lieutenant in the Marines.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.; $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5420 N° XXVIII. THE WANTON WIDOW.

N° XXIX. THE COMPLYING COLONEL.

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate, Nov^r I. 1777.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 513. Two bust portraits. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed: . . .'. An account of the amours of a Colonel C. in the Guards and of the widow of 'Lord A.H.', once a great beauty but ravaged by small-pox.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5421 N° XXXI MISS C—T—R.

N° XXXII THE SPORTING ROVER.

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate, Dec^r I. 1777.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 569. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed or Memoirs of the Sporting Rover and Miss C—r—r'. The man is son of an old Mr. P—n, who was well known on the turf, said to have been introduced to Charles Churchill by Lloyd. Identified by H. Bleackley as Thomas Panton. His amours and those of Miss Carter, a courtesan, are described. For Panton see Jockey Club, 1792, pp. 91-2.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5422 THE SENATORIAL CONTRAST.

Pub^d 27th Jan^y 1777 by J. Jones Gerrard Street Soho.

Engraving. A burly Roman senator and a small, thin, knock-kneed Englishman face each other. Over one is etched The Roman Senator; over the other, The British Senator. The Roman (l.) in profile to the r., wearing armour and a voluminous cloak, stands in front of a pillar with his l. foot on a raised step; he holds out his hands as if in surprise at the appearance of the Englishman. The Briton stands upon a square stool, his toes turned in; he looks at the Roman through a lorgnette, with an expression of dismay; his l. hand is raised in astonishment. His dishevelled hair is in a short queue and he is dressed in the fashion of the day. On the ground at his feet are cards, dice, a dice-box; another dice-box is on the stool. He has just dropped the Knave of Clubs which falls to the ground. Behind him two game-cocks are fighting. In the distance the horizon is inscribed Surry Hills, indicating that he is M.P. for Surrey.

He is James Scawen,¹ of Carshalton, Surrey, and Maidwell, Northamptonshire, whose gaming debts were notorious, see No. 5423.

He was son of the nephew and heir of Sir William Scawen, a very rich merchant and great supporter of William III. Several estates in Surrey were sold by him (1774) or by his trustees (c. 1781), including one to Robert Mackreth (1774), of White's (Bob), notorious as a money-lender (whose nomination for the borough of Castle Rising in 1774 so scandalized Wolpole). Brayley, History of Surrey, iv. 66-7, 194, 226.

$5\frac{7}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5423 THE PROFLIGATES LEVEE, OR THE KNIGHT'S INTERVIEW WITH ISRAEL THE JEW & TOMMY BLOODSUCKER.

[n.d. c. Jan. 1777]

Engraving. A small thin man stands between two much larger men, who hold documents showing that they are money-lenders. He is James Scawen, M.P. for Surrey, see No. 5422. His thin legs are knock-kneed, his toes turn inwards. He looks towards the money-lender on his l. and points with his l. hand at a paper held up by the latter, whose beard and hooked nose show that he is a Jew. The Jew (r.) wears a bag-wig, laced coat and waistcoat; the paper he holds out is inscribed, Mortgage on the Surry Northamp[ton] Estates D^o on the Cornwall D^o on the . . . D^o . . . Behind the Jew's back is an open window, within which sits a woman of forbidding appearance with a Jewish profile, who appears deeply interested in the interview.

A large obese man (l.) stands in profile to the r., wearing a wide-brimmed looped hat, plain clothes, and a nosegay. In his l. hand is a larger document than that held by the Jew; in his r. hand is a large eyeglass. His document is inscribed, Annuity's gran^d to Tho: Bloodsuc^r. An. 100, D^o 20, D^o 150, D^o 75 D^o 100, D^o 120, D^o 25, D^o 100, D^o 150. Behind him a cat stands on its hind legs, while behind the Jew a dog does the same. At Scawen's feet are dice-boxes, dice, and cards.

$7\frac{1}{8} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ in.

¹ Miss Banks has written 'Mr. Scawen' on the print.

5424 THE DIABOLIAD.

[1 Apr. 1777]

Lond. Mag. March 1777

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xlvi. 152. Illustration to The Diaboliad, a satirical poem by William Combe published anonymously in 1777. The Devil grown old is about to appoint a successor to reign in Hell. He rises from his throne (l.) and is about to surrender his crown and sceptre to an elderly man who mounts the steps on which the throne is placed. Five disappointed competitors stand behind the successful candidate, who is Lord Irnham. The others are young men; two approach together, one with a blank face on which is inscribed Whitlow; he holds in his hand a book or MS. inscribed Simiramis and wears a military gorget round his neck. Of the next couple, one holds a horseshoe in his l. hand, a pen marked A in his r.; from his coat-pocket projects a letter to Miss Hunter, under his l. arm is a riding-whip; he is in riding-dress. He is described in the poem as a peer and rough rider, who assumed the authorship of a book 'by A[ngeloni]¹ writ'. Last comes Volpone, Charles Fox, with a fox's head, holding out dice. He is fashionably dressed, his coat having very large buttons, see No. 5432. He is dismissed by the Devil, to bait,

With mastiff zeal—a Minister of State.

One of the other competitors is a young peer who combines vice with eloquence in the House of Lords [Lyttelton].

Behind, among clouds of smoke, stands a weeping man in chains. Demons and imps ('dragons and monsters') fly about. One, partly visible on the l. of the print, crouches by the Devil's throne, writing on a scroll; he wears spectacles. In the distance on the r. angels escort a figure through an opening in the roof of the cave; demons hold up a net between them and the competitors. Beneath the print is engraved, To reign is worth ambition, tho' in Hell! Milton.

According to Walpole (Jan. 1778) Combe was brutally virulent against Lord Beauchamp and others, 'particularly Lord Irnham'. Last Journals, 1910, ii. 95-6. Other persons attacked are Lord Hertford, Mr. Ayscough (Lyttelton's cousin), Lord Pembroke, Fitzpatrick (but as one whom in time the Devil will lose), and Selwyn for his supposed fondness for attending executions; Selwyn to Lord Carlisle, Feb. 1777, Carlisle MSS., Hist. MSS. Comm., 1897, p. 320.

3 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 6 $\frac{5}{16}$ in.5424_A THE DIABOLIAD.

Almost identical with No. 5424 but in reverse and without Lond. Mag. . . . imprint.

5425 THE DIABO-LADY.

[1 May 1777]

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xlvi. 208. Illustration to The Diabo-lady, a satire by 'Belphegor', probably Combe, which rapidly followed The Diaboliad, see No. 5424, to which this is a companion print by the same artist. The new sovereign of Hell, Lord Irnham, decides to choose a wife and sends his emissaries to 'Court, Cornelys' and the ¹ In the poem this is A—, but Angeloni is given in a quotation from it in the London Magazine.

Coterie' (see No. 4847, &c.). He is depicted descending from his throne (r.) and leading up to it the successful candidate. Behind her (l.) are five disappointed aspirants: a fat and angry woman holds a paper inscribed Road from Kingston to Bristol showing that she is the so-called Duchess of Kingston, see No. 5362. She is unsuccessful because she lacked the vice of hypocrisy. Next her (r.) is a lady dressed half soberly in black, and half more elaborately, one half being inscribed Widow, the other half Bride. Behind appear (l. to r.) a lady in riding-dress holding out a paper Count[ress] and the Stable Boy, showing that she is Lady Ligonier, see No. 4801; another holds out a paper inscribed Bible Oath, a lady who appears from the poem to have been acquitted for her first adultery on 'a Bible-Oath'. A woman holds up a paper on which is a gallows and the word Pereau's, showing that she is the notorious Mrs. Rudd, the mistress and instigator of one of the two Perreaus who were hanged for forgery, but who was herself acquitted.

In the background is a crowd of disappointed candidates, dismissed because 'your Green-Room Dolls are kitchen Maids in Hell'. Imps fly about, some holding torches. Lord Irnham is fashionably dressed with horns, asses's ears, and cloven hoofs; the end of his queue is barbed. Beneath the design are five lines from Paradise Lost beginning,

O fairest of Creation, last and best Of all God's works . . .

$3\frac{11}{16} \times 6\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5426 PHILOSOPHICAL JUDGMENT DECR I. 1777

Engraving with roulette. A meeting of the Royal Society, the president in the chair and raised above the level of the other members. Members of the Council sit on his r. and l. behind a long table. Except for a clergyman on the president's r. all the Council appear to be asleep or yawning. The backs of the heads of members of the Society appear in the foreground; they seem to be lifting up their hands in astonishment at the proceedings of the Council. The president, who wears a hat, holds in his r. hand a MS., Short on Grinding; in his l. the Copley medal. On the table is a mace, and papers inscribed, Nat^l History; Anatomy; Nat. Philo[sophy]. On the wall above the President's head is a bust of a man with the full wig of Queen Anne's reign. On each side of it is a picture: (l.) Midas with long ass's ears judging between Apollo and Marsyas; above it is written Aures Asininas habet Rex Midas, and beneath Veluti in Speculum. On the r. is a picture of the president with ass's ears, seated at the head of a table holding up a medal with sleeping members on each side of him; above it is written Redivivus 1777 Dormiente Consilio, and beneath, Et in Arcadia Ego. On the upper part of the design is etched in large letters Nil Admirari.

Sir John Pringle was president of the Society 1772-8, making six annual discourses on the value of the investigations rewarded by the Copley medal. James Short (1710-68), optician, a member of the Royal Society, deposited with the Society a sealed paper to be read publicly after his death, describing a method of working object-lenses to a truly spherical form. For the Royal Society see also No. 2477 (1743).

$7 \times 7\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5427 MADEMOISELLE DE BEAUMONT OR THE CHEVALIER D'EON. [1 Oct. 1777]London Magazine Sep' 1777

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xlv. 443. D'Eon (W.L.) dressed half as a woman, half as a man. On his r. side he wears a lady's full dress, his hair in the fashionable inverted pyramid decorated by a feather; he holds a fan in his gloved hand. On his l. side he is dressed in a coat with military facings to which is appended the cross of St. Louis. He wears a sword and his l. hand is on his hip, his hat under his arm. Beneath the title is engraved, Female Minister Plenipo. Capt. of Dragoons, &c. &c.

This illustrates 'Memoirs of Mademoiselle D'Eon de Beaumont . . .', pp. 443-6, occasioned by the recent decision (2 July 1777) in the King's Bench that one Hayes who had wagered that d'Eon was a woman, to be paid when he could prove it, had won his bet. The jury thus settled (incorrectly) the long dispute and many wagers on D'Eon's sex, see No. 4865, &c.

 $7\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in.5428 THE POACHER.G. L. S (Monogram)

Engraving. W.L. caricature portrait of a man walking in profile to the l. His hair falls on his neck, but the top of his head is nearly bald. He is roughly dressed, wearing a coat with a cape, and a neckcloth. In his r. hand is a walking-stick, in his l. a hat. Beneath the title is engraved

—————Mactat
 —————Sub rupe leones.

On the print is written 'well known at Oxford' and in another hand, 'Sold by J. Seago, High Street St Giles's London Pub. 1777'.

 $7\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5429-5451

Prints from Darly's series continued from No. 5376. See No. 5369.

5429 1 CHLOE'S CUSHION OR THE CORK RUMP.¹*Pub. Jan'y 1. 1777 by M Darly 39 Strand*

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions, the latter only being numbered). A lady dressed in a grotesque caricature of the prevailing fashion walking (l. to r.) by the side of a lake. Her petticoats project behind her in an ascending curve, on which lies a King Charles spaniel. Her hair is dressed in a mountainous inverted pyramid, the apex represented by her head; it is flanked by side-curls and surmounted by interlaced ribbons from which hang streamers of ribbon and lace.

One of a number of satires, 1776-7, on monstrous hairdressing, see No. 5370, &c., and the 'cork rump', see No. 5381, &c.

 $13\frac{5}{16} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ in.

¹ Only the uncoloured impression is numbered. This is the first plate in two of three volumes with the title-page of 1 Jan. 1776 (see No. 5369) which have been examined, one belonging to Mr. Dyson Perrins, the others to Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street.

5430 THE BACK-SIDE OF A FRONT ROW.R. S. (Monogram) ['Richard Sneer'¹]Pub^d by M Darly Jan^y 1. 1777

Engraving. The back view of a number of persons seated on a low bench, caricaturing the dress of the period, especially the high-dressed hair, see No. 5370, &c., and inflated appearance due to 'cork rumps', see No. 5381, &c., which was combined with very tight lacing, see No. 5444, &c.

The persons are (l. to r.): a man with a clerical wig, his head turned in profile to the r.; a small child dressed like a woman with pinched waist, and cap trimmed with flowers and lace; a thin woman looking at her neighbour on the r., she has a monstrous erection of hair decorated with lace and flowers, pinched waist and inflated skirt; a fat woman, looking to the l., similarly but more plainly dressed; a man with a long pigtail queue, who is perhaps 'Richard Sneer'; he turns to his neighbour on the r., his hand at the back of her waist; a woman with a rectangular variation of the prevailing head-dress and elaborately braided hair; she is rather smaller than the other women and appears to be intended for a young girl. At the r. end of the bench sits a woman looking to the l. whose head-dress is even more high and elaborate than that of the others.

These persons, as well as the print itself, appear in No. 5435. No. 5376 also belongs to the same set.

$8\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5431 [MODERN HONOUR]²*Pub^d Feb^y 1. 1777 by M Darly. 39 Strand*

Engraving (coloured impression). Two men face each other with pistols, their seconds stand behind them. The duellist on the l. kneels on one knee, his r. arm outstretched, his pistol in his l. hand, the barrel pointing upwards as if to ward off his opponent's shot; his l. elbow rests on his knee. His second stands with his arms folded. The other has just fired his pistol which is aimed directly at his antagonist. His second, with a pistol in his l. hand, is shouting with his r. arm raised. They are in open country; hills are indicated in the distance.

$8\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{11}{16}$ in.

5432 BUCKLES AND BUTTONS

I'M THE THING. DEM—ME.

Pub. by M Darly Feb. 7. 1777

Engraving (coloured impression). A man, wearing a large nosegay and holding in his l. hand a thin tasselled cane, dressed to show the prevailing fashion for large metal buttons, and large shoe buckles. The brim of his round hat is looped up at both sides by bands held by a large button on the crown; the buttons on his coat are enormous. His waistcoat has also a double row of small buttons. His rectangular shoe-buckles curve across the instep, almost reaching the sole of the shoe.

¹ Possibly R. B. Sheridan, see No. 5376 n.

² The title has been cut off and is supplied from a book of Darly's caricatures in the possession (1932) of Mr. W. T. Spencer.

A cutting from the Morning Post, 14 Jan. 1777, is pasted on the print: 'The macaronies of a certain class are under peculiar circumstances of distress, occasioned by the fashion now so prevalent, of wearing enormous shoe-buckles, and we are well assured, that the manufactory of plated ware was never known to be in so flourishing a condition.'

These buckles were called Artois buckles, it was the fashion to wear them of silver, and of a weight of from three to eleven ounces. Morning Post, 26 May, 1777. See also Nos. 5437, 5443, 5446, 5452, 5454, 5462. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xxv.

$12\frac{1}{8} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5432 A Another version in reverse, same size figure, smaller plate (clipped), same title, no publication line.

5433 THE BURTHENS OF PLENTY.

H. (or N.) R.

J. T. [?]

[Pub]^d by M Darly Feb^y 24 1777 39 Strand.

Engraving. An enormously fat man walks (l. to r.) towards an eating-house followed by a lean and ragged man bent with the weight of a basket laden with food which he carries on his head and shoulders. The fat man is walking with a wheelbarrow, which he uses to support his enormously projecting stomach; the barrow is partly supported by straps which go over his shoulders and across his stomach. He mops his forehead with his l. hand. He wears a tie-wig, a laced coat and waistcoat, and is evidently intended for a rich and vulgar citizen. His porter is dressed in rags, with bare legs and toes projecting through his shoes; he carries one wine-bottle in his r. hand, two more under his r. arm; his basket, supported on a large pad or cushion, contains a turtle, a hare, two snipe, a haunch of venison(?), and three bottles. The fat man is about to enter a door over which is a sign, Good eating & cool rooms. This hangs from a projecting beam with pulleys; from it three barrels are also hung as a sign. Over the door is inscribed Wines. Behind the ragged man is a row of tenement houses, whose nature is indicated by the nearest one. A ladder leads down to its cellar over the door of which is written Dinners & shirt wash'd for 2 pence. Above the first-floor window is a large notice, Shafe & Cut hear; from it projects a barber's pole. Above the second-floor window is I. Nabbem Taylor.

The theme of a fat man supporting his own stomach on a wheelbarrow is an old one; it is that of a German caricature of a 'weinschlauch', a wood engraving of 1510, reproduced B. Lynch, A History of Caricature, 1926, Pl. vi; also of Luther (followed by Katarina von Bora), reproduced Ashbee, Caricature, 1928, p. 40; of a French caricature of General Galas, c. 1635, illustrated in Wright's History of Caricature and Grottesque, 1865, p. 356.

$8\frac{1}{4} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5434 THE OLD MAIDS MORNING VISIT OR THE CALASH LADY'S [sic]

Pub^d M Darly 39 Strand Mar^h II. 1777.

Engraving. A very fat and a very thin woman face one another, both wearing the hoods supported with hoops of cane or whalebone known as calashes, from their likeness to the folding hoods of carriages called by the same name (O.E.D.). The fat woman (l.) leans back in an armchair, one foot supported on a stool; her calash is like an almost spherical barrel. Her vis-à-vis sits upright, holding a fan, on a stool with folding legs; her calash is angular, showing its ribs; she wears a very skimpy skirt with a fullness at the back indicating a 'cork rump', see No. 5381, &c. On the floor by the fat woman is a large trimmed bonnet, in which is a cat with kittens, one kitten prances at some distance. By the thin woman is a flat ribbon-trimmed hat, across which a dog is walking. No other furniture is visible, except a hanging lamp with one beak, suspended from the wall. On the wall are four framed pictures, two of birds, one of some feline animal, one cut off by the l. margin.

The calash is said to have been introduced by the Duchess of Bedford in 1765, Fairholt, Costume, 1896, ii. 292. See also Nos. 5450, 5527, 5532, 6100.

8½ × 12½ in.

5435 DOLEFULL DICKY SNEER IN THE DUMPS, OR THE LADY'S REVENGE.

R Sneer

Sukey Spightfull fec^t

Pub by M Darly Ap. 1. 1777

Engraving. A slim young man, fashionably dressed, sits at a table (r.), a pencil in his l. hand, holding in his r. hand a print 'Miss Shuttle cock' (see No. 5376) reversed; the monogram R.S. is conspicuous, thus showing that he is 'Richard Sneer'.¹ On the wall above his head are two framed prints: one, The Back-Side of a front Row (see No. 5430), reversed and showing five persons only; in the other, four ladies holding the four corners of a blanket toss a slim man, evidently 'Richard Sneer'; beneath it is inscribed Lex Talio[ni]s. Behind the artist, who is unconscious of their approach, three women and a man advance towards him dragging a blanket; they are characters from The Back-Side of a front Row: the elderly man advances into the picture from the l., then come the three elderly women, the one in the centre shakes her fist at the unconscious artist; all smile. They intend to punish him for his caricatures by tossing him in a blanket. Beneath the design is etched, Heus bone, tu palles? pers [sic].
8½ × 12¾ in.

5436 I. V. 2. THE OPTIC CURLS, OR THE OBLIGEING HEAD DRESS.

MD [Darly.]

Pub by M Darly 39 Strand April 1. 1777

Engraving. The occupants of a box at a theatre. A lady with an enormous inverted pyramid of hair decorated with the usual ringlets sits in front. The ringlets have eye-pieces at the back and are completely cylindrical; two men who sit behind her look through the two lower ringlets as if they were the fashionable single eyeglass. The lady herself looks through an eyeglass. On her pyramid of hair is an erection of rucked and interlaced ribbons, trimmed with sprays of flowers and surmounted by ostrich-feathers. Part of another box at right angles to this one is visible on the l.; in it a man, in profile to the l., looks through an eye-glass. An ornamental chandelier with candles is suspended between the boxes.

¹ Possibly R. B. Sheridan, see No. 5376.

One of a number of satires, 1776-7, on extravagant hairdressing, see No. 5370, &c. The same subject was treated by another artist, see No. 5462. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xxiv.

$12\frac{1}{4} \times 8\frac{5}{8}$ in.

There is a chalk-drawing by James Roberts in the Print Department, 'Head Dress of Ladies 1777', of a lady's head in profile to the l. with an enormous pyramid of hair surmounted by ostrich-feathers from which fall lappets of lace and ribbon. The height is perhaps scarcely exaggerated.

5437 30. V. 2. SR WILLIAM WADDLE.

MD [Darly.]

Pub^d April 1. 1777 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. Portrait (caricature) of a very fat man, with short legs and a thick neck. Behind him is a lake or river. He stands, legs apart, holding in his r. hand a tall cane. He wears the exaggerated buttons and shoe-buckles which became a subject of caricature in 1777, see No. 5432, &c. One button trims the front of his small hat, four decorate (and almost cover) the front of his coat, two are on his coat-sleeve. The collar of his coat appears to be black. Beneath the print is pasted a cutting from the Morning Post, 14 Apr. 1777: 'A correspondent remarks, the present ton of Gentlemen wearing black collars to all colour'd cloaths, looks as if Taste were dead, and all the fashionable part of mankind were in mourning for it.' Perhaps a caricature of Sir Watkin Lewes.

$8\frac{9}{16} \times 12\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5438 25. V. 2. A MARCH OF THE TRAIN BANDS.

E. Topham. del.

MD [Darly]

Pub^d April 10. 1777 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. Seven members of the City Militia, much caricatured, march (l. to r.) in profile. First, the drummer, short and enormously stout, beating his drum; next a lean and stooping officer looking on the ground, his drawn sword in his l. hand. Then come two pairs of men carrying, at different angles, muskets with bayonets; they wear military uniform and gaiters, but are shambling along in a very unsoldierly manner. Last comes a hunchback, holding a spear in his l. hand and marching with vigour. Two birds fly over their heads.

8×13 in.

5439 22. V. 2. LONG CORKS OR THE BOTTLE COMPANIONS

MD [Darly.]

Pub. by M Darly April 11 1777 Strand near York Buildings

Engraving. Two extravagantly dressed women face each other, each seated on, or rather supported by, an enormous cork which projects from the neck of a bottle. Both are elderly, one (l.) enormously fat, the other very thin. Both wear the grotesque pyramids of hair, flanked by ringlets like large sausages and surmounted by ostrich-feathers, so much caricatured since 1776, see No. 5370, &c. Their skirts are skimpy in front, showing the contour of their legs, but project in great panniers at the back. Both are gloved and hold fans. The cork and bottle of the fat woman is correspondingly broader than that of her thin vis-à-vis. This is a satire on the fashions of the day, especially the 'cork-rumps' which appear to have temporarily replaced hoops as a support to skirts and draperies, see No. 5381, &c.

$12\frac{3}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5440 THE LADIES CONTRIVANCE OR THE CAPITAL CONCEIT
MD [Darly.]

Miss Bath Inv^t

Pub^d April 30 1777 by M Darly. 39. Strand.

Engraving (a coloured impression). Two sedan chairs pass one another, going in opposite directions. In the nearer, proceeding from l. to r., sits a lady, whose enormous head-dress surmounted by feathers projects far above the top of the chair; the roof has been made to slide up on rods fixed at the corners, and is thus supported at a height above the top of the sedan. Through the window of the other sedan the head of a man is seen; the roof of the chair is in its normal position, but rods at the corners show that it can be raised if necessary. The chairs are private ones, elegantly shaped and decorated, a tassel hanging from each corner of the roof. The chairmen are in livery, wearing coats with coloured facings.

For other satires on hairdressing see No. 5370, &c.

$8\frac{1}{4} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5441 A SPEEDY & EFFECTUAL PREPARATION FOR THE NEXT WORLD.

Mathina [or Mattina] Darly Sc.

Pub May 1. 1777 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving (coloured impression). A lady sits, in profile to the r., at a dressing-table; she is dipping a brush into a pot marked Rouge, other toilet implements and a looking-glass are on the table. Her hair is in a grotesquely caricatured erection, with side curls, intended to ridicule the fashions of the day, cf. No. 5370, &c.; on the top of it is a hearse drawn by six horses; it is decorated with enormous ostrich-feathers. Similar feathers adorn the heads of the horses. The lady is of commanding appearance with an aquiline profile, she wears a morning gown.

Behind her back is a rectangular table at which (l.) stands a skeleton, both of whose hands are on an hour-glass standing on the table; its sands have run into the lower glass, and have even been spilt on the table. On the table is a knife. The base of the skeleton's spine is transfixed by a large arrow.

On the wall behind the lady's dressing-table is a portrait bust of a clergyman, in profile to the r.

On the back of the print Miss Banks has written, 'Mrs Macauley. Dr. Wilson's picture'. Mrs. Catherine Macauley (1731-91), the historian and radical, was then living in the house of Dr. Thomas Wilson (a non-resident London rector) in Bath, where she had just received six odes from her admirers on her birthday, 2 Apr. 1777. Her practice of painting her face was well known, Dr. Johnson saying it was better she should 'redden her own cheeks' than 'blacken other people's characters'. In 1778 she married as her second husband William Graham aged 21, and quarrelled with Dr. Wilson. See Nos. 5410, 5598.

For similar satires on hairdressing see No. 5370, &c.

$8\frac{3}{8} \times 12\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5442 15. V. 2. THE FLOWER GARDEN.

MD [Darly.]

Pub by M Darly May 1 1777 where may be had Bath Caricatures

Engraving. A companion print to Nos. 5448, 5449. The H.L. figure of a woman in profile to the r. is the foundation of an enormous erection of hair on the top of which is a pear-shaped flower-garden, surrounded by a hedge, in which is a stile. At the lower edge (r.) a gardener stands raking the gravel which surrounds a number of formal flower-beds. At the upper end (l.) is a circular temple, surmounted by a figure of Mercury. The rest of the hair is decorated with sprays of flowers.

One of many similar satires on the fashionable pyramids of hair, see No. 5378, &c.;

$12\frac{1}{4} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5443 21. V. 2. A. NAMBIE-PAMBIE. IN THE TIP OF THE MODE.

Pub^d June 1. 1777 by M Darly 39 Strand. where may be had 500 comic subjects. &c &c.

Engraving. A man standing full face, r. hand held out, his l. on a thin tasselled cane. He wears a three-cornered hat trimmed with a button and tasselled cord; a coat tight at the waist and then cut away to show a short striped waistcoat from which hang two bunches of seals and trinkets. His coat has a black collar over a broad shawl-shaped collar, is decorated with large buttons and shows lace ruffles. His legs are thick, his shoes clumsy with the large rectangular 'Artois' buckles which, like large metal buttons, had recently become fashionable and a subject of satire, see no. 5432, &c. For black collars see No. 5437. Beneath the title is etched in three columns:

*With Buckle large & buttons too,
Behold the Puppy strutt
With Irish legs, & collar black,
Also a tight braced Gut,
Besides the hat of Prussian form,
With tassels dangling down,
Of Monkies good Lord like to this,
When shall we Rid the town.
View follys picture as it stands,
This present Seventy-seven;
For so much folly never was,
As now is under heaven.*

Although the large buckles and buttons were a very short-lived fashion, this satire appears to indicate the beginning of the fashion for tight coats and short waistcoats with bunches of seals hanging from the fobs which is associated with the Prince Regent. See also No. 5382.

$8\frac{7}{8} \times 8\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5444 BATH STAYS OR THE LADY'S STEEL SHAPES.

MD [Darly.]

Pub by M Darly. June 4. 1777. Strand

Engraving. The interior of a blacksmith's smithy. On the anvil is a portion of a pair of stays, at which two smiths strike with hammers, one (l.) holding the stays by pincers. A third man (r.) is measuring a lady round the chest with a tape; she stands very upright in profile to the right, and wears a deeply pointed bodice over an underskirt projecting at the back in the fashionable manner; the upper part of her dress hangs on the wall behind her. She holds a closed fan in both hands, her hair is in a monstrous inverted pyramid, flanked by great curls and surmounted by feathers, see No. 5370, &c. Sections of a pair of steel corsets and the tools of a smithy lie on the floor. Pincers and horse-shoes hang on the wall. The forge with its fire is on the l. On a shelf on the wall are bottles and covered jars, one marked alose.

A satire on the tight-lacing which was accentuated when 'cork rumps' became fashionable. See No. 5381, &c. See also Nos. 5452, 5464, 4552 (1777).

Walpole writes, 28 Mar. 1777, 'There has been a young gentlewoman overturned and terribly bruised by her vulcanian stays. They now wear a steel busk down their middle and a rail of the same metal across their breasts.' Letters, x. 31.

$8\frac{1}{2} \times 13$ in.

5445 42. V. 2. DEEP ONES

MD [Darly.]

Pub. by M Darly 39 Strand June 17. 1777.

Engraving. Seven profile heads (caricature) similar in character to Hats and Wigs, see Nos. 5169, 5170. Three are enclosed in ovals.

All are evidently portraits: one of a very old man with closed eyes, one of a military officer, one of a bucolic-looking man wearing his own hair, possibly intended for Lord Surrey, afterwards Duke of Norfolk, one of a fat parson, one of a dissenting minister with lank hair and bands, one of a plebeian-looking man wearing the large buttons of the moment (see No. 5432, &c.), one of a military officer, his hair in a pigtail queue, and one of a man wearing a bag-wig.

$9\frac{1}{2} \times 13\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5446 31 MODERN SHEILDS OR THE VIRTUE OF STEEL BUTTONS

MD. [Darly.]

Pub. by M Darly 39 Strand June 26. 1777

Engraving. A burlesqued duelling scene. Two elderly men confront one another; one holds a sword in his l. hand; his r. arm is raised so that the enormous button on his sleeve acts as a shield; the buttons on his coat are about the size of dinner-plates; his coat has a black collar and his shoes have large buckles, called Artois buckles, see No. 5432, &c. His opponent (r.) holds out a pistol in his r. hand, his l. is held up as if to protect his face. He is dressed in an old-fashioned manner, with broad-brimmed hat, tie-wig, a long laced coat and waistcoat with wide cuffs, high-quartered shoes with small buckles. They are in a grass field, with trees on the horizon.

$8\frac{13}{16} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5447 14. V. 2. DIVINE LOVE

[M Darly?]

Pub M Darly 39 Strand June 26 1777.

Engraving. A courtesan sits on the knee of a fat clergyman, probably a bishop, in a black gown. She is dressed in the fashion of the day, her pyramid of hair is decorated with feathers, flowers and enormous curls; her waist is very constricted. The carpet and the decoration of the wall are important parts of the design and suggest wealth and luxury. The wall is decorated with lines of moulding. In the centre, above the woman's head, is a decoration composed of a mitre, a heart, an arrow, &c. On each side of it are two large framed landscapes, partly cut off by the margins of the print. The carpet has an elaborate arabesque pattern. This is one of a number of satires on the clergy.

$12\frac{3}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5448 FRUIT STALL.¹

MD [Darly] Bath f.

Pub by M Darly July 11 1777. N^o 39 Strand

Engraving. A companion print to Nos. 5442, 5449. The head of a woman in profile to the r. is the foundation of a monstrous inverted pyramid of hair, decorated with the wares of a fruiterer. On the top a basket of peaches and a large pineapple with its leaves. Down the side of the pyramid, where curls were worn, are large gourds of different shapes. The hair is further ornamented by two tall pottles of strawberries, bunches of grapes, pears growing on branches, a basket of plums, a basket of raspberries (?), and other fruit. For similar satires on the fashionable pyramids of hair see Nos. 5378, &c.

$12\frac{3}{4} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5449 16. V. 2. THE GREEN STALL.

MD [Darly.] Bath

Pub. by M Darly. 39 Strand July 11 1777

Engraving. A companion print to Nos. 5442, 5448. The head of a young woman in profile to the l. is the foundation of a monstrous inverted pyramid of hair decorated with vegetables, carrots preponderating. On ¹ This impression is without a number, it is V. 2, 17 in a book in the possession (1933) of Mr. Spencer of New Oxford Street.

the top are heaped a large bundle of asparagus, a set of scales in one bowl of which are potatoes, a bunch of herbs (taking the place of the ostrich feathers of fashion), a cabbage, turnips, &c. Large carrots take the place of the large curls then worn flanking the coiffure; three bunches of carrots are the main decoration of the surface of the hair, on which are also a cabbage and clusters of leaves (or lettuces). Trails of pea-pods hang from the top of the head-dress after the manner of the lace lappets and ribbons then worn.

$12\frac{1}{4} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5450 20. V. 2. THE TON AT GREENWICH.

A LA FESTOON DANS LE PARK A GREENWICH

Pub by M Darly N^o 39 Strand Aug 11. 1777.

Engraving. A woman walking (l. to r.) on a path in Greenwich Park followed by a man, probably a servant, carrying a huge umbrella under his arm. She wears one of the enormous hoods called calashes, from their resemblance to the folding hoods of carriages (see No. 5434, &c.) which the monstrous hair-dressing of the period had brought into fashion. In her r. hand she holds the strings of her hood, in the l. a tall stick with a crook. She has the compressed waist with a skirt projecting at the back then fashionable (see Nos. 5381, 5444, &c.), a quilted apron, ankle-length petticoat, her over-dress being looped-up for convenience in walking, and high-heeled shoes. Behind are grass and trees and Greenwich Observatory on its hill (r.). Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xxviii.

$11\frac{3}{4} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5451 MISS HEDGEHOG.

Hen Ibb. fecit.

Pub^d Sep^r 9. 1777 by M Darly Strand.

Engraving. A short fat woman stands full face. Her dress bristles with detail, and her pyramid of hair instead of being smooth, as was usual, is closely frizzed. Her wide hooped petticoat shows her ankles. She wears gloves with tight bracelets and holds a closed fan in her l. hand.

$11\frac{13}{16} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5452 TIGHT LACING.

R S

J. H.

Pub^d 5 Mar^h 1777 by W. Humphrey Gervard Street Soho who has great variety of humorous Prints Price One Shilling.

Engraving. Two elderly and ugly women in a bedroom. One, who appears to be the mistress, clings with both hands to the post of a four-post bed, leaning backwards while her maid exerts all her strength to lace her stays. The maid holds a poker in both hands, the stay-lace has been twisted round it; one foot is placed on the projecting skirt of her mistress, which is extended by a 'cork rump', see No. 5381, &c.; she leans back in order to pull the harder. The lady's hair is dressed in the prevailing fashion of caricature, trimmed with feathers, lace, flowers, &c. She wears a large pocket over her under-petticoat. On the wall are two H.L.

portraits which appear to be caricatures of costume: one (l.), contemporary, showing a woman with a compressed waist, a man with enormous buttons, see No. 5432, &c.; the other (r.) perhaps Elizabethan. See also No. 5444, &c.

Similar in manner to Nos. 4778, 5453.

$7\frac{11}{16} \times 11$ in.

5453 OLD MAIDS AT QUADRILLE.

R. S. [Monogram.]

J. H.

Pub^d 5 April 1777 by W. Humphrey, Gerrard Street, Soho. who has a great variety of humorous Prints.

Engraving. Four women seated at a square card-table. The three whose faces are visible are old and ugly; the fourth, in back view, seated on a stool, appears to be a young woman. The woman on the l. has put down her cards on the table, to take a handful of snuff from a rectangular box. Two small dogs bark at each other. Two small pictures or prints hang on the wall. The room and the players have a poverty-stricken appearance. Above the design is engraved Sans prendre vole. Similar in manner to Nos. 4778, 5452.

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 11\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5454 STEEL BUTTONS COUP DE BOUTON

W. H. [Humphrey] f.

Pub^d 29 April, 1777, by W. Humphrey, Gerrard Street, Soho.

Engraving. A man (l.) and woman (r.), dressed in the height of the fashion, meet one another, walking in a park indicated by two trees. Rays of light spread from the large buttons on the man's coat and strike the face of the lady, who falls back dazzled, lifting her arms as if to ward off the blaze. The buttons appear to be of cut-steel or silver with incised lines and a beaded edge, see No. 5432, &c. He wears a sword and carries a tasselled cane under his l. arm. His shoes have large Artois buckles. The lady wears the enormous pyramid of hair decorated with curls then fashionable, see No. 5370, &c.; on its summit is an erection of ribbons, feathers, &c., which appears to be a hat. She holds a fan and wears a nosegay. Her dress has the tight waist, and inflated draperies over a comparatively narrow petticoat supported by a 'cork rump', see Nos. 5381, 5444, &c. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xxvi.

$12\frac{5}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5455 A FOX-HUNTING BREAKFAST

J. H. R. S.

Pub^d 5th May 1777, by W. Humphrey, Gerrard Street, Soho.

Engraving (coloured impression). Three men sit at a rectangular table, on which stand two lighted candles and a medley of breakfast things: a coffee-pot, tea-pot, wine-bottle, &c. One stretches and yawns; one, drinking wine, is dressed as a huntsman; another, drinking coffee, is having his hair dressed by a servant who stands behind him. A fourth man stands by the table. A very stout man (r.) sits back in a chair pulling on a top-boot, his other boot lies beside him. A clock against the wall points to 5.15. A dog lies asleep in the foreground. Beneath the design is engraved:

*The Man that will not leave his bed
For sport so blithe & bonny,
We'll swear he hates fatigue & dirt,
And call him Macaroni.*

*We'll wonder at his want of Taste,
Since nothing so bewitches,
As living all the winter long in Boots & Leather Breeches.*

8 $\frac{11}{16}$ × 13 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

[A SATIRE ON AMATEUR MUSICAL PERFORMANCES]

J. H. R. S.

See No. 4778—9 May 1777.

Pub. W. Humphrey.

An illustration to Anstey's Bath Guide. Similar in manner to Nos. 5452, 5453.

5456 THE FARMER'S DAUGHTER'S RETURN FROM LONDON.

W H [Humphrey].

Published 14 June 1777 by W Humphry Gerrard Street Soho.

Engraving. The interior of a farm-house kitchen. A young woman, fashionably dressed, has just entered by a door (l.) through which trees are visible. Her enormous head-dress has caught in a rack above the door and its feathers, flowers and ribbons are about to be torn off as she runs with outstretched arms towards the farmer, who rises from his chair by the fire and starts back in amazement. His wife, seated behind him, holds up her hands in astonishment; a child at her knee looks round in alarm. A boy, standing by the door, holds up his hands and gapes. A dog barks at her; a cat has jumped on to a bin which stands under the window and is miaowing at her. On the r. is a large fire in an open fireplace, above it a pot hangs from a chain; a spit projects from the fireplace. Hams and black puddings hang from the roof. See No. 5370, &c.

8 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5457 DEATH AND THE DOCTOR.¹

W. H. [Humphrey] inv^t et fec^t.

Pub. Oct^r 29. 1777, by W. Humphrey.

Engraving. A fat doctor, wearing a large tie-wig, stands, his arms and legs wide-stretched, between a skeleton, representing Death, and his patient who is seen behind, unconscious of the conflict. Death (r.), in a threatening attitude, holds up a sheaf of arrows, some of which he has already hurled; they are labelled Consumption; Palsy; Gout; Dropsy; Scurvy; Venereal; Fever; Stone; Apoplexy; Suicide (written in reverse). The doctor, with an expression of grim determination, holds outstretched a sheaf of remedies, some of which he has already hurled at Death. In his l. hand he holds out his cane. These remedies are papers inscribed For the Dropsy . . . ; For the Gout; Sovereign Remedy; Anodyne; Styptic; Solvent; Mercurials; Essence; Anti Venereal Drops; Tincture for (in reverse); Opeates; Balsams; some of the words are followed by the signs used in prescriptions. Behind (l.), seen through an opening in the wall, is the patient, a woman, fully dressed and wearing a cap, seated at a round table, her head resting on her hand, in her l. hand she holds a cup. On the table are medicine-bottles. Behind her is a bed with curtains hanging from a tester.

¹ The same subject differently treated was etched by Rowlandson (1782), coloured reproduction Fuchs, Die Karikatur der europäischen Völker, i. 56.

After the title is engraved "Touch my Patient if you dare".

$8\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5458 MONSIEUR LE QUE LADIES CORK CUTTER FROM PARIS WHOLESALE, RETAIL, & FOR EXPORTATION.

J. L.

Pub^d according to Act of Parl^t March 7. 1777, by J. Lockington, Shug Lane, Golden Square.

Engraving. The interior of a shop where the dress-supports known as 'cork rumps', see No. 5381, &c., are made and sold. Two women (r.) sit at a counter, each finishing with a knife an almost complete cork rump. On the front of the counter is inscribed Money for old Corks. Cork rumps of different sizes are on shelves on the wall behind them.

A woman with a camel-shaped hump behind her waist stands on tip-toe to see the effect in a mirror behind her (l.) which reflects her figure (not a back view, but as seen by the spectator). She appears to be looking at a second mirror which is not shown in the design.

In the middle of the back wall, and in the centre of the print, an arched doorway is inscribed FITTING ROOM; the door, the upper part of glass, is wide open, showing a boy or very small man fitting a lady with a cork rump. He is dressed as a Frenchman with a toupet-wig with a very long queue and is evidently 'Monsieur Le Que'.

Very incorrectly drawn, apparently by an amateur.

$7\frac{1}{4} \times 10\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5459 PROPORTION

W. Smith inv. del. et sc.

Pub^d According to Act of Parl^t Aug. 11 1777 by J. Lockington, Shug Lane Golden Square London.

Engraving. A figure divided vertically from the top of the head to the feet, one half (l.) being dressed as a lady, the other as a man, to show how enormously a woman whose hair was fashionably dressed over-topped a man. The lady's head-dress is the inverted pyramid of the period; on its broad summit rests an arrangement of lace and flowers but no feathers. The masculine half of the figure is dressed without exaggeration. Cf. No. 5370, &c.

$7\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5460 THIS IS SOMETHING NEW.

Pub^d Accor^s to Act of Par^t Sept^r 1 1777 by J. Lockington Shug Lane Golden Square Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A lady walking in profile to the l., her hair in a gigantic pyramid, protects the erection by an enormous umbrella on a very long stick. Her draped over-skirt projects at the back in mountainous folds. On these is seated a foppishly dressed man taking shelter under the projection of her hair; he leans forward, holding his hat in his r. hand. He is in profile to the r., back to back with the lady. A simple countryman (l.), whose hat has fallen to the ground, gapes at the pair in amazement. A fashionably dressed man on the r. leers and points at them. One of many satires on hairdressing, see No. 5370, &c., and the dress support called a 'cork rump', see No. 5381, &c.

11¼ × 8½ in.

5461 PYRAMIDS, DISCOVER'D AT BATH, ANNO DOMINI 1777.

Published According to Act Sept. 25, 1777 by I. Lockington Shug Lane Golden Square.

Engraving. Figures (H.L.) of three women, their hair dressed in caricature versions of the enormous pyramids of hair then fashionable. The centre figure, full face, is the smallest but her pyramid of hair is the highest of the three. The other two woman are in profile, facing towards the centre. Poised on their heads are lace caps trimmed with flowers and dangling lappets. Beneath the title is engraved:

N.B. Fairer than the Egyptian, but not so lasting.

For other satires on this fashion see No. 5370, &c. Apparently by the same artist as Nos. 5378, 5379.

8¾ × 7¾ in.

462 A NEW OPERA GLASS FOR THE YEAR 1777.

Publish'd April 2^d 1777. by S. Sledge Henrietta Street Covent Garden.

Engraving. Two seated figures (H.L.) apparently in an opera-box. A fat lady (l.) whose pyramid of hair is flanked with the enormous cylindrical curls then fashionable and surmounted with flowers and feathers, looks in profile to the l. smiling broadly. Her dress is cut low and she wears a necklace of beads or pearls from which hangs a cross. Her companion (r.) sits on the lady's l., looking through one of her curls which he holds in his r. hand; his l. eye is closed. On his coat are visible two of the enormous metal buttons then a subject of caricature, see No. 5431, &c. Beneath the title is engraved:

*Behold how Jemmy treats the Fair,
And makes a Telescope of Hair
How will this suit high headed Lasses,
If curls are turn'd to Optic Glasses.*

See No. 5436, for the same subject by Darly. For satires on this type of hair-dressing see No. 5370, &c.

6½ × 6¾ in.

5463 ENGLISH BARBER, CARRYING HOME A COMMON COUNCILMAN'S WIG.P. S. fecitLondon, Printed for R. Sayer, and J. Bennett, N^o 53 Fleet Street, as the Act directs June the 5th 1777

Engraving. A barber has just left his house, the open door of which is seen on the r. He carries in his r. hand a large curled wig with a small queue tied with a ribbon bow. In his l. hand is an implement for curling hair; under his l. arm is a barber's basin; a pair of scissors projects from his coat pocket. He is neatly and plainly dressed, with a broad-brimmed hat. A dog prances at his side. Round the corner of his house (l.) appears a thin foppishly dressed Frenchman, probably a hairdresser, wearing a bag-wig and solitaire; he points at the barber saying Se de difference between de Aingleesh Barber & mineself, Ha! Ha! de Aingleesh Bougre. From the barber's door projects a striped pole, from which hangs a board inscribed, Shave for a Penny. Above the door is inscribed, Bleeding and Teeth drawn and Money for live hear. Inside the door two wigs are suspended.

 $7\frac{3}{16} \times 4\frac{15}{16}$ in.5464 TIGHT LACING, OR THE COBLER'S WIFE IN THE FASHION.Publish'd Nov^r 4th 1777 by W^m Hitchcock, N^o 5 Birchin Lane Price 1^s

Engraving. The interior of a cobbler's work-room. The cobbler has seized his wife by the arm and is about to beat her with a strap. Her stays are partly laced, the end of the lace is twisted round a hammer. Her hair is dressed in the fashionable pyramid, surmounted by a meagre ostrich-feather, lace, &c. She wears a quilted petticoat and high-heeled shoes. On the r. is a cobbler's bench with tools; lasts and tools are in a rack on the wall; a wicker cage in which is a bird hangs from a hook. A print of a leg of mutton and turnips is pinned to the wall. Under the cracked casement window (l.) is a wooden chair. Beneath the title is engraved:

*The Hoity head & Toighty waist,
As now they're all the ton,
Ma'am Nell the cobbler's wife, in taste
By none will be outdone,*

*But, ah! when set aloft her cap,
Her Boddice while she's bracing,
Jobson comes in, &, with his strap
Gives her, a good tight lacing.*

For tight-lacing see No. 5444, &c., and for hairdressing No. 5370, &c.
 $7\frac{3}{8} \times 10\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5465 THE DEATH OF ROCHESTER.

[Oct. 1777]

W. H. fecit [?William Humphrey.]

Engraving. This design has been attributed to Gillray. Rochester (1647-80) reclines in a large arm-chair, his legs outstretched, listening to the ministrations of an elderly clergyman, who sits by his side (l.), a large open

Bible on his knee, his head is thrown back, his mouth open as if declaiming. The Bible is open at a page headed XIX.C. Genesis. On the r. of the design are the draperies of a bed. At the head of the bed, on the extreme r. a large coat of arms is partly visible, with an earl's coronet, the supporter on the l. being a very rampant lion. Rochester wears a night-cap and a loose gown which falls back to show knee-breeches. The parson is in cassock, gown, and bands, his wig is of the kind worn by the clergy c. 1777. He is toothless except for two fang-like upper teeth.

The edifying end of Rochester, wit and libertine, was made familiar by Burnet's Some Passages of the Life and Death of Rochester, 1680, often reprinted in the eighteenth century. The parson should be Burnet (1643-1715), though a much older man is depicted, perhaps a caricature of a living divine.

Grego, Gillray, p. 27.

8 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

Five Prints after Bunbury etched by J. Bretherton.

NEWMARKET. A SHOT AT A PIGEON. See No. 4719—1 Mar. 1777

NEWMARKET. A SHOT AT A HAWK. See No. 4717—n.d. c. 1777
A companion print to No. 4719.

DAMN BUCHEPHALUS! See No. 4730—n.d. c. 1777

DAMN MAMBRINO! See No. 4731—n.d. c. 1777

POT FAIR. CAMBRIDGE. See No. 4729—25 June 1777

Nine prints from the series of mezzotints issued by Carington Bowles.¹

THE HONEY-MOON. (351) See No. 4548—[1777]

SIX WEEKS AFTER MARRIAGE. (352) See No. 4549—25 June 1777

THE FEATHER'D FAIR IN A FRIGHT. (357) See No. 4550—[1777]

See also No. 5621.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xxiii.

MY-SELF. (359) See No. 4551—[1777]

TIGHT-LACING . . . (362) See No. 4552—[1777]

See also No. 5444, &c.

¹ No. 4552 has the imprint of Bowles and Carver.

- BACHELOR'S FARE . . . (365) See No. 4553 [10 Nov. 1777]
 Reproduced with date, A. L. Simon, Bottlescrew Days, 1926, p. 20.¹
- THE AMOROUS THIEF . . . (366) See No. 4554—10 Nov. 1777
 Dated impression in the possession of Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street, 1932.
- FATHER PAUL IN HIS CUPS . . . (367) No. 3781—[1777]
 An illustration to Sheridan's Duenna, first played Covent Garden, 1775.
 A reduced version (273), published 10 Nov. 1777, see Catalogue, iv,
 p. 758.
- FATHER PAUL DISTURBED . . . (368) No. 3782—10 Nov. 1777
 (Another impression, dated and not coloured.)
 Illustration to The Duenna.

Four similar mezzotints issued by other publishers.

5466 A NEW FASHION'D HEAD DRESS FOR YOUNG MISSES OF THREE SCORE AND TEN.

Philip Dawe invent et fecit.

Published as the Act directs. 8 May 1777. Printed for John Bowles, No 13 in Cornhill.

Mezzotint. The interior of a luxuriously furnished lady's dressing-room. An old woman sits before the dressing-table, smiling at her reflection in the mirror, while two hair-dressers lift on to her head a monstrous wig, decorated with a nosegay of flowers, ribbons, large ostrich-feathers, and flanked with curls. She has a grotesque and witch-like profile, frontal baldness, and short, lank hair. She is elaborately dressed in the fashion of the day, wearing large pendent ear-rings, voluminous lace ruffles to her elbow-sleeves and a lace-trimmed apron over a much-trimmed dress. She clasps to her breast a King Charles dog. The two hair-dressers are evidently French, both are grinning; one (l.) wears a toupet-wig, with a large black bag and solitaire cravat; he is about to place the front of the wig on the lady's forehead. The other (r.) supports the back of the wig and is partly concealed by it; his toupet-wig has a very long pigtail queue.

The wall is hung with paper or brocade above a plain dado; a patterned carpet with a fringe covers the floor. A window on the l. is festooned with a heavy fringed curtain. The dressing-table in front of the window, with an oval mirror, is elaborately draped with embroidered muslin; on it are toilet jars, &c. For satires on this type of hairdressing see No. 5370, &c.

12 $\frac{13}{16}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

¹ Another reproduction in C. N. Robinson, The British Tar in Fact and Fiction, p. 280, is dated 1781, and appears to be from a line engraving of the same picture. Eight lines of verse show that it was issued in connexion with Rodney's victory of 1781.

5467 A HINT TO THE HUSBANDS, OR THE DRESSER, PROPERLY DRESSED.

[? P. Dawe.]

London Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett, N^o 53 Fleet Street, as the Act directs 25 Jan^y 1777.

Mezzotint. A lady sits at her dressing-table, while a hair-dresser attends to her elaborate coiffure. She turns round in astonishment towards her husband (r.), who has entered from an open door and threatens the hair-dresser with uplifted riding-whip and clenched fist. He is in riding-dress. A maidservant enters behind him, smiling insolently, her l. hand on her hip, her r. held up, the first two fingers extended. The lady's hair is dressed in the elaborate fashion of the period, a pyramid with curls, decorated with pearls, and an enormous head-dress of feathers. She wears a lace-trimmed wrapper over her low-cut dress. In her r. hand is a brush or pencil for the complexion; the other is outstretched in alarm. The hair-dresser, who wears an enormous toupet wig, with side-curls and large looped club, is smoothing her hair with a comb. On the wall are two family portraits: a man with a beard (H.L.) and a lady (T.Q.L.) wearing a ruff. The floor is of boards without a carpet. For satires on this type of hairdressing see No. 5370, &c.

13 × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.5468 JEWS RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS.London, Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett, Map & Printsellers, N^o 53, Fleet Street; as the Act directs, 11th Oct^r 1777.

Mezzotint. Two Jews seated at an oblong cloth-covered table, one of whom is receiving coin, notes, watches, &c. from a highwayman who stands on the opposite side of the table (r.). Two other Jews (l.) stand behind the chair of the man receiving the booty. The highwayman, whose features are Jewish, is in fashionable riding-dress; the butt of a pistol protrudes from a coat-pocket, in his r. hand is a watch and seals, in his l. a glove and riding-whip. In the foreground is a dog.

Immediately behind the figures is a large screen, four leaves of which are visible, elaborately decorated with birds and foliage. This, as well as the dress of all but one of the men, suggests that the Jews are wealthy. The print is in the manner of genre rather than of caricature.

12 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

There is another issue having the same publication-line, with the title A Scene in Duke's Place (not in B.M.). A reduced version was published 27 May 1778 (not in B.M.).

THE RETURN FROM SCOTLAND, OR THREE WEEKS AFTER MARRIAGE.

See No. 4625—5 Dec. 1777

Pub. Sayer and Bennett.

POLITICAL SATIRES

1778

5469 HORATIO GATES ESQR.

[? 'C. Corbutt'.]

London: Publish'd as the Act directs, 2nd Jan^y 1778, by John Morris.

Mezzotint. One of a series, see No. 5290. T.Q.L. portrait of a man in general's uniform standing under heavy drapery, probably that of a tent. He looks to the l., r. hand on hip, his l. resting on a document which lies on a small camp-table; it is inscribed Arti[cles] of Convention between Gen^l Gates & Gen^l Burgoyne. Beside it is a letter addressed Gen. Gates. Behind (l.) are two tents, one flying a large striped American flag; near them is a cannon.

News of Burgoyne's surrender reached London on 2 Dec. 1777. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 80, 85. Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, iii. 501. The disaster was debated in the Commons on 3 Dec. Parl. Hist. xix. 532 ff. See also No. 5408. For Saratoga see No. 5470, &c.

Chaloner Smith, iv. 1715.

12 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5469^A A copy having the same inscription, except that the date is 10 May 1778, with the addition of Se vend chez J. M. Will à Augsbourg.

5470 N^o I. THE CLOSET. Price. 1^s.

Bute Inv^t. Germaine Ex^t. Mansfield Sculp.

Publish'd as the Act directs Jan^y 28th 1778. by I. Williams No. 39 Fleet Street.

Aquatint. A print in several compartments. In an inset rectangle in the r. upper corner is George III's 'Closet': the king seated at a table with his secret advisers around him. On his r. sits Bute, his l. hand on the king's shoulder. The Devil clutches the back of Bute's chair, and speaks into his ear through a trumpet; beneath the chair is a head, writhing with serpents, probably representing Discord. Bute says, Be Bloody, Bold, and Resolute, be Firm—fear nothing. The king looks round him, his profile is malevolent, stupid and gross; he says, Sic Volo—I am Firm. hem! who's afraid? eh! On his left sits Lord Mansfield, in his hand is a scroll, inscribed, A Code of Laws for America; he is saying Kill them or they will Kill you. Next comes Lord George Germain holding out a paper, Instructions to Generals Howe, Burgoyne, &c. He says, Tho Nature's Germens tumble all together, Evⁿ till Destruction Sicken. On the table are two papers, one inscribed I have closeted S^r James the Cartouch Box Maker; the other is addressed to My Lord Mayor of London. Both appear directed against the Lord Mayor, Sir James Esdaile,¹ a strong supporter of the Court.

Below this rectangle are isolated figures: A man stands, blowing out his brains with a pistol; he says, Amende Honorable for using General Warrants; at his feet lies dying a man in the wig and robes of the Lord Chancellor; he says I was Yorke-shire but honest, but curse the Closet. He is Charles Yorke, whose remorse at accepting the Chancellorship under pressure from the king in his closet conducted to his sudden death in 1770, widely but wrongly believed to be due to suicide. The standing figure appears also to be intended for Yorke, who as Attorney General had advised that the committal of Wilkes for the libel in No. 45 of the North Briton was legal. On the l. is a man dressed as a fool in cap and bells; he is running forward, in his r. hand are smoking firebrands, in his l., arrows. He says, I am firm too, in Folly, and is not this precious Foolery, my masters. Beneath him is engraved The Fool casteth Firebrands, Arrows & Death, and sayeth Am not I in Sport? On the r. is a headless figure in long robes, holding his head in his l. arm, and holding out An h^{ble} Address from the Loyal Town of Manchester to Cha[erased] Geo: the III with lives & Fort. Murray Sec. The first of the loyal addresses of the autumn of 1775 came from Manchester, see Nos. 5325, 5471. It ended: '... We are ready to support, with our Lives [and] Fortunes, such Measures as your Majesty shall think necessary for the Punishment of Rebellion in any part of your dominions. ...' London Gazette, 12-16 Sept. The erasure implies a parallel with the loyal addresses to Charles II on his dissolution of the Oxford Parliament in 1681. See Eng. Hist. Rev. 1930, xlv. p. 552 ff., and cf. Parl. Hist. xix. 620 (22 Jan. 1778).

¹ On Michaelmas Day 1778 Esdaile was censured by the Livery for refusing to put to the vote the thanks of the Livery to the members for the city for their consistent opposition to the ministry. Ann. Reg., 1778, p. 204.

In the centre of the print are a number of ships: at the top, three ships in full sail are labelled Quebec Hoy, probably an allusion to the very unpopular Quebec Act, see No. 5228, &c., and cf. No. 5286. Below, a small ship labelled Boston hoy is followed by a larger ship in full sail, labelled Weymouth Packet wth 20,000 in Doll^{rs}. This probably indicates one of the successes of the American privateers against British shipping. Below is a large ship at anchor, with furled sails, from which a boat rows to shore; she is labelled Chelsea Hoy. Below again, men are being helped ashore from a boat, some have already landed; they are crippled, without arms, with crutches, with a wooden leg, &c., indicating that the fate of the English soldiers is to be maimed Chelsea pensioners. Below again is a small triangular gallows, from which hang three figures.

On the l. side of the print, in four divisions, are episodes from the war in America. In the uppermost section, Indians are using scalping knives and tomahawks on prostrate and supplicating persons; in the centre, a young woman M^cRae, kneeling and about to be killed by an Indian, says O horrid! is this the Marriage Ceremony. She is Jane M^cCrea, whose murder horrified both England and America. She was a loyalist and was being escorted by two Indians to her betrothed who was serving with the British forces, but she was killed by one of the escort.¹ For its effect on opinion see Van Tyne, The War of Independence, 1929, pp. 398, 403. Behind (r.) a church and some houses inscribed Esopus are in flames. The village of Esopus was burnt, after Clinton's successful campaign up the North River in October 1777, by General Vaughan, who having been fired on as he entered the place, burned it with its stores and provisions. See the comment on this in the Ann. Reg. 1777, p. 175*. See also No. 5574.

Below in the next compartment more Indian atrocities are depicted.

¹ There is some uncertainty as to this, see Belcher, First American Civil War, 1911, ii. 295-6.

A group of Indians sit round a naked man, bristling with darts, who is being roasted on a spit over a fire. An Indian, standing under a tree-trunk inscribed The Cedars (l.), holds up a skull; on the r. an Indian with a tomahawk holds up a scalped and bleeding head; other figures sit round the fire, one gnaws a bone.

The Cedars (on the Rapids of the St. Lawrence) was the name given to an incident in the American expedition against Canada in 1776. A small American post was surprised by a party of regulars, Canadians and Mohawks, and captured without resistance. Arnold went out from Montreal to attack the captors, but to prevent the Indians from murdering the prisoners, he consented to a compromise for an exchange. Harper's Encyclopedia of United States History. This satire is thus a gross calumny. It was perhaps suggested by Brackenridge's propagandist Death of General Montgomery at the Siege of Quebec, 1777, in which the writer apologizes in a note for some ferocious words put into the mouth of Carleton: 'I find my conscience pretty much at ease in this matter . . . I have conversed with those who saw the scalps warm from the heads of our countrymen. I have had the relation from their mouths who beheld the fires lighted up, and heard . . . the horrid shrieks and gloomy howlings of the savage tribes in the execution of the poor captives who, according to the threat of Carleton, were burned on an island in the river St. Lawrence after our unfortunate surrender at the Cedars.' Quoted by M. C. Tyler, Literary History of the American Revolution, ii. 223. Carleton's humanity to the Americans in the Canadian campaign is well known.

Under this is Burgoyne marching at the head of his men who are without arms, their hands tied. He says, I have led my Rag-o-muffians where they have been Peppered. He is dressed not in military uniform, but in slashed doublet and cavalier's boots, in his hand is a broadsword whose blade is jagged and worn, inscribed Physical Impossibility. His round shield is inscribed Scale of Talents; under each arm is a large book, Maid of the Oaks and Bon Ton &c., and the Devot^d Legions, a Poem. At his feet is the word Proclamations. On a hill in the distance is a serried rank of soldiers, on a minute scale, before them stands an officer holding a spear and a large striped American flag; they are Gates, see No. 5469, and his Americans, to whom Burgoyne surrendered at Saratoga on 17 Oct. 1777.

Burgoyne's dress, &c., appears intended to represent him as a theatrical mountebank; his play 'Maid of the Oaks' was acted in 1774 ('Bon Ton', 1775, is by Garrick). He issued a bombastic proclamation before taking the field in May 1777 which was much ridiculed. For contemporary opinion on the campaign see Van Tyne, War of Independence, 1929, 436-40. Many of the Opposition in England rejoiced at the catastrophe.

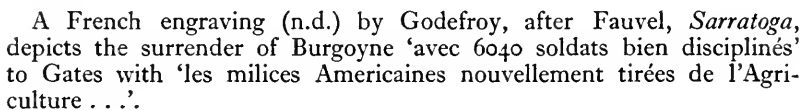

The lowest compartment shows Scottish soldiers and foreign mercenaries in flight, dying and dead. In the foreground (r.) a Highland officer is dying; he says, How hard O Frazer is thy Lot! Was it for this I sought the Court and Danced? He is Simon Fraser (not to be confused with Simon Fraser of No. 5287); he was a brigadier under Burgoyne, and was mortally wounded on 7 Oct. 1777. A fleeing Scottish soldier looks round saying, Hoot awa Lads, ken ye not that one Arnold is hard at our heels. All the soldiers have thrown away their arms, one of three Hessians in jack-boots says, De Devil vil ave mine Maitre, de Carcas Bucher.

Down the l. margin beside the two last designs is inscribed the word Saratoga. The supposed artists' names are arranged so that Bute inv^d is under the fleeing Scottish soldiers, Germaine ex^d under the gallows.

Beside Mansfield Sculp (under the headless figure holding the Manchester Address) is an axe.

A satire which ascribes tyranny, failure, and savage atrocities to the influence of Bute, Mansfield, and Germain, and to the obstinacy of the king. For Germain's responsibility for failure see Fortescue, Hist. of the British Army, iii. 242; G. H. Guttridge, 'Lord George Germain in office', American Hist. Rev. Oct. 1927. Chatham, on 2 Dec. 1777, called the Americans 'Whigs in principle and heroes in conduct' whose affection had been lost 'by employing mercenary Germans to butcher them; by spiriting up savages in America to scalp them with a tomahawk' (Parl. Hist. xix. 477). For the employment of Indians see Hist. MSS. Comm. Dartmouth MSS. ii. 1895, pp. xii, 344-5, 447.¹ For allegations of Indian atrocities see also Nos. 5339, 5473, 5631, 6024. For Saratoga see also Nos. 5469, 5490, 5548[2], 5857. For 'the Closet' see No. 5638.

8 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 14 in.

A French engraving (n.d.) by Godefroy, after Fauvel, Sarratoga, depicts the surrender of Burgoyne 'avec 6040 soldats bien disciplinés' to Gates with 'les milices Americaines nouvellement tirées de l'Agriculture . . .'.

Beneath is engraved a 'Précis' of the campaign with a note on Indian soldiers in Burgoyne's army: 'Leurs affreux services refusés par les Américains, furent sollicités par le ministère britannique, qui convint de prix pour chaque chevelure d'infortunés colons qu'ils apporteraient, mais amis comme ennemis devenaient leurs [sic] proie. Le meurtre surtout de la jeune et belle Miss—Mac—Rea remplit tous les cœurs d'horreur . . . elle fut massacrée par ces sauvages le jour de son mariage avec un officier anglais de l'armée de Burgoine'.

No. 4 in Recueil d'Estampes représentant . . . la Guerre qui a procuré l'Indépendance aux Etats unis de l'Amérique. (Print Department.) Collection de Vinck, No. 1167.

5471 AN EXACT REPRESENTATION OF THE MANCHESTER RECRUITS (ALIAS POOR DISTRESS'D WEAVERS) BEFORE THEIR EQUIPMENT À LA MILITAIRE.

Pub. feb. 14; 1778. by a Non Subscriber.

Price 6^d.

Engraving. Eight men stand in a row, holding muskets in a variety of ways. Their clothes are ragged, and they are thin and hungry-looking.

At the beginning of 1778 places and individuals agreed to raise regiments at their own expense; Manchester began (Dec. 1777) by offering to raise a thousand men. Sergeants of the Guard were sent to Manchester to form the levies. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 85, 89-90. The legality of raising regiments without the previous consent of parliament soon became an issue between the Government and the Opposition. Ibid. 93 ff. Fortescue, History of the British Army, iii. 245, 246. For the attitude of Manchester to the war cf. No. 5470.

One of a number of anti-recruiting satires, see No. 5295, &c.

4 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 8 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

¹ Dartmouth wrote to Gage, 2 Aug. 1775: 'The steps which you say the rebels have taken for calling in the assistance of the Indians leave no room to hesitate upon the propriety of your pursuing the same measure.' Cf. a letter of Col. Ethan Allen, 24 May 1775, asking Indians for aid against the king's troops. Ibid., p. 310.

5472 A PICTURESQUE VIEW OF THE STATE OF THE NATION
FOR FEBRUARY 1778.

1 Mar. 1778

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, vi. 66. A cow representing the commerce of Great Britain stands passively on the sea-shore while an American with a feathered cap saws off her horns; one horn lies on the ground. A Dutchman milks the cow, looking over his shoulder with a grin. France, a foppishly-dressed Frenchman, and Spain, a don in slashed doublet and cloak, hold bowls of milk. In the foreground (r.) lies the British lion asleep, unconscious of a pug-dog which stands on his back, befouling him. Behind the lion stands a plainly-dressed Englishman clasping his hands in despair.

In the background across the sea is a town inscribed Philadelphia; in front of it, on the shore, two men on a minute scale (General and Admiral Howe) are seated at a table. Both are asleep, a punch-bowl is on the table, on the ground beside them are wine-bottles and a barrel. Beside them, laid up on dry land, is a man-of-war inscribed Eagle (Howe's flag-ship).

The explanation (p. 64):

I. The commerce of Great Britain, represented in the figure of a Milch-Cow.

II. The American Congress sawing off her horns, which are her natural strength and defence: one being already gone, the other just a-going.

III. The jolly, plump Dutchman milking the poor tame Cow with great glee.

IV and V. The Frenchman and Spaniard, each catching at their respective shares of the produce, and running away with bowls brimming full, laughing to one another at their success.

VI. The good ship Eagle laid up, and moved at some distance from Philadelphia, without sails or guns, . . . all the rest of the fleet invisible, nobody knows where.

VII. The two Brothers napping it, one against the other, in the City of Philadelphia, out of sight of fleet and army.

VIII. The British Lion lying on the ground fast asleep, so that a pug-dog tramples upon him, as on a lifeless log: he seems to see nothing, hear nothing, and feel nothing.

IX. A Free Englishman in mourning standing by him, wringing his hands, casting up his eyes in despondency and despair, but unable to rouse the Lion to correct all these invaders of his Royal Prerogative, and his subjects' property.'

These paragraphs are followed by an attack on the Conciliatory Propositions, see No. 5473, &c., as 'proof of the above'. There are no numbers on the plate.

This print was copied for circulation in America with the title A Picturesque View of the State of Great Britain for 1778. Taken from an English Copy. Beneath the plate in two columns is the explanation quoted textually from the Westminster Magazine but omitting the paragraph on the Conciliatory Propositions. Reproduced, S. G. Fisher, True History of the American Revolution, 1902, p. 358. This copy may have been the immediate origin of a series of Dutch and French copies (1780) which it closely resembles, see Nos. 5726, 5726 A, B, and C, 5727. It was also copied in America as A Picturesque View of the State of Great Britain for 1780, attributed to Paul Revere, in which the word New York has been substituted for Philadelphia (evacuated June 1778), see Stauffer, No. 2692.

These copies and No. 5859, a sequel to them, show how well the print illustrated the motives and hopes of France in the war, as also its value as enemy propaganda. Much was said in France of the capture of the trade of the colonies, but the real motive of Vergennes was rather the destruction of English trade (on Mercantilist principles) and so the enfeeblement of England, and the damaging of her prestige. See E. S. Corwin, French Policy and the American Alliance of 1778, 1916, pp. 14 f., 49 f. For Holland as a profiteering neutral see Nos. 5557, &c. For the Howe brothers see Nos. 5399, 5405, &c.

Part of the design resembles and is perhaps imitated from No. 2665, The Benefit of Neutrality (1745).

$3\frac{3}{8} \times 6\frac{3}{4}$ in.

A French satire on a similar theme is No. 1209, Collection de Vinck:
DÉDIÉ AUX MILORDS DE L'AMIRAUTÉ ANGLAISE PAR UN
MEMBRE DU CONGRÈS AMÉRICAIN,

'Dessiné d'après nature à Boston par Corbut en 1778 et gravé à Philadelphie par Va de bon cœur'

Numbers on the plate refer to an explanatory description in French. An English Admiral with wings and with the claws of a vulture for hands and feet is tied to a tree while the American Congress cuts the claws on his feet. A Spaniard holds one of the wings while a Frenchman cuts it off to prevent his flight. Another Frenchman carries off packets of tobacco, while an Englishman in despair breaks his pipes. A fat Dutchman collects feathers from the other wing of the eagle, while his companion trades under the nose of England. Beneath the explanation is inscribed:

*Tel qu'un âpre Vautour dévorant l'Amérique
Anglais, impunément tu crus la mettre à sac:
Mais pour la bien venger d'un traitement inique
Il ne l'y [sic] reste pas une once de Tabac.*

Probably a satire on the evacuation of Philadelphia, June 1778. For 'Corbut' cf. Nos. 5405, 5406.

Van Stolk, No. 4289.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 10\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5473 THE COMMISSIONERS.

M Darly

Pub^d April 1. 1778 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). The five commissioners (r.) recently nominated to negotiate peace with the colonies, kneel one behind the other at the feet of America, who sits (l.) on a pile of barrels and bales looking away from the Commissioners at a cap of liberty which she holds on a staff. She is a partly draped woman wearing a crown of feathers; her head is irradiated, and above it is suspended a laurel wreath. The bales and barrels on which she sits are inscribed Tobacco for Germany; Rice for France; Tobacco for France; Tobacco for Holland; America 1778; Indico for Spain; Indico for the Mediterranean Ports, V.R. (Monogram.), cf. Nos. 5472, 5859, &c. The Commissioners are headed by Lord Howe in naval dress; he says, We have block'd up your ports, obstructed your trade, with the hope of starving ye, & contrary to the Law of Nations compell'd your sons to war against their Bretheren. Behind him is General Sir William Howe, wearing the red ribbon of the Bath; he says We have ravaged your Lands, burnt your Towns, and caus'd your captive Heroes to perish, by Cold, pestilence & famine. Next is Lord Carlisle wearing the green ribbon of the Thistle; he says We have profaned your places of Divine worship, derided your virtue and piety, and scoff'd at that spirit which has brought us thus on our knees before ye. He is foppishly dressed and appears deeply interested in his snuff-box, cf. No. 5474. Behind him is William Eden (afterwards Lord Auckland) with a pen behind his ear; he says, We have Ravish'd, Scalp'd, and murder'd your People, even from Tender infancy to decrepid age, altho Supplicating for Mercy, cf. No. 5470, &c. Last comes Commodore George Johnstone, known as Governor Johnstone, in naval dress; he is saying, For all which material services, we the Commissioners from the most pious & best of sovereigns, doubt not your cordial duty & affection towards us, or willingness to submit yourselves again to receive the same, whenever we have power to bestow it on ye. The five swords of the Commissioners lie in a pile on the ground beside Carlisle.

The words of the speakers are in long labels, numbered, as are the five Commissioners, to show by whom they are spoken.

The Howes refused to act under Lord Carlisle; the other three Commissioners sailed for America on 21 Apr., arriving on 5 June. This satire anticipates even their Commission, which did not pass the Seal till 13 April. For the concessions offered and their reception see Cambridge Hist. of the Br. Empire, i. 765-7. The instructions to the Commissioners are printed in full in S. E. Morison, Sources and Documents of the American Revolution, 186-203. They yielded all the original points at issue, stipulating only for the maintenance of political union. Ann. Reg. 1778, 315-32. The concessions would probably have been accepted if they had not been just anticipated by the French alliance. S. E. Morison, Growth of the American Republic, 1930, p. 96. For the dismay which the announcement of 'Lord North's Conciliatory Propositions' caused in Parliament see Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 110 ff. Parl. Hist. xix. 762 ff., 19 and 23 Feb. See also Nos. 5474, 5475, 5476, 5487, 6229.

Probably belongs to the same series as No. 5370, &c.

$8\frac{1}{4} \times 12\frac{7}{16}$ in.

5474 THE COMMISSIONER'S INTERVIEW WITH CONGRESS.

Pub^d by M Darly 39 Strand April 1 1778.

Engraving. Three members of Congress (r.) face the three Commissioners for the discussion of peace. Between the two parties and rather behind them stands a Scot in highland dress with an expression of alarm, probably intended for Lord Bute. The Congressmen wear long gowns with fur cuffs and caps similar to the 'death or liberty' caps worn by the Yankees in the trenches in No. 5329. By their gestures and expressions they appear to be dictating terms to the Englishmen. Lord Carlisle, who is foppishly dressed, his hat under his arm, is taking a pinch of snuff and holding out his snuff-box to the foremost Congressman with an expression of alarm. Behind him Eden clasps his hands to his breast with a deprecatory gesture. Governor Johnstone, a reputed duellist, clenches his fists with a pugnacious expression. The Congressmen stand under two palm-trees.

This appears to illustrate a speech of the Duke of Richmond on the American Conciliatory Bills on 9 Mar. 1778. After stating that one of the Governors in America had offended members of Congress by making exception to their wearing woollen caps in council: 'How inadequate therefore must this embassy be, where a noble lord [Carlisle] bred up in all the softness and polish that European manners make fashionable to rank—I say, how inadequate must such a meeting be amongst men in woollen night-caps!' Parl. Hist. xix. 867. It should be noted that concessions to America, like severe measures, are attributed to Bute, cf. 'An Ode addressed to the Scotch Junto and their American Commission . . .', 1778.

For the Commissioners see also Nos. 5473, 5475, 5476, 5487.

Probably belongs to the same series as No. 5370, &c.

8½ × 12¾ in.

V. 2. [BRITANNIA TO AMERICA.]¹

Pub^d by M Darly May 6 1778 Strand.

Engraving. 'Hieroglyphic letter' or rebus in which words are represented by small etched objects, those in the title being on a larger scale: Britannia (l.) sits in profile to the r. holding out an olive branch.

(Britannia) (toe) Amer(eye)ca. My (deer) Daughter I (can) (knot) (bee) hold w(eye)thout (grate) pa(eye)n (ewer) (head) strong (back)(ward) ness (toe) ret(urn) (toe) (ewer) duty in (knot) op(PosY)ng (awl) the good (eye) long (eye) ntended for (ewer) (sole) Hap(pin)ness & (bee) ing told t(hat) (yew) have g(eye)v'n (toe) a (? circular object) & (doublefaced) (Frenchman) (eye) have sent (yew) 5 over (? over above wise) (men) the (grate) est of all my (child) ren (toe) put (yew) (toe) r(eye)ghs & (Hope) (yew) w(eye)ll l(eye)s(ten) (toe) them & m(eye)nd w(hat) they say (toe) (yew) they have (eye) nstr(yew)ct(eye)ons [instructions] (toe) g(eye)ve (yew) t(hose) th(eye)ngs yew (form) erly required so (bee) a good (girl) d(eye)scharge (ewer) (soldiers) & (ships) of war & (doe) (knot) re(bell) ag(eye)nst (ewer) (moth) er rely upon me & (doe) (knot) (? a carved bracket) t toe t(hat) French R(ass)c(awl) sh(awl) tell (yew) IC [I see] he w(ants) toe b(ring) on an enm(eye)ty (toe) (awl) (a snake with its tail in its mouth ? union) (bee) tween (yew) & (eye) (butt) l(eye)s(ten) (knot) (toe) h(eye)m (awl) the (world) takes (knot) ice of h(eye)s (doubleface) I'll send h(eye)m such Messa(g's) from my (grate) (gun) s as s([h]awl) make [sic] h(eye)s (heart) repent & know t(hat) (I) good or (eye) ll t(urn) mer(eye)ts a(knot)her. NB let (knot) 8o [? hate] take 2 much hold on (ewer) (heart).

I am (ewer) fr(eye)nd & (Moth) er.

A satire on the mission of the Commissioners entrusted with North's Conciliatory Propositions, see No. 5473, &c. The Government had been attacked by Burke (16 Mar. 1778) for appointing commissioners after the Americans 'had been acknowledged an independent state by France' (Parl. Hist. xix. 909). The treaty between France and the Americans was signed on 6 Feb. 1778; on 13 Mar. the French Ambassador informed Weymouth of the treaty. See No. 5475, the answer to this letter.

13¾ × 9¾ in. (pl.).

¹ Not in B.M., transcribed from a copy in the possession (1933) of Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street, where it is the first plate in a volume of Darly's caricatures, the title-page being a dedication to Garrick, see No. 5369. It belongs to the same series as Nos. 5370, 5429, &c.

5475 [AMERICA TO HER MISTAKEN MOTHER.]

[Pub. by M Darly May 11 1778 Strand.]¹

Engraving. A 'hieroglyphic letter' or rebus in answer to the foregoing. America (l.), as a Red Indian woman, seated and leaning to the l.; she holds a flag with thirteen vertical stripes in her l. hand, in her r. she holds out a fleur-de-lys. Beside her is an oval shield on which are thirteen stars.

(America) (toe) her (Miss)taken (Moth)er. (Yew) s(eye)lly (old woman) t(hat) (yew) have sent a (lure) (toe) us is very (plane) (toe) draw our at(ten)-t(eye)on from our re(awl) (eye)ntrests (butt) *we are deter*m(eye)n'd (toe) ab(eye)de by our own ways of th(eye)nk(eye)ng (Ewer) [your] 5 (child)ren (yew) have sent (toe) us sh(awl) (bee) treated as V(eye)s(eye)tors, & safely sent home aga(eye)n (yew) may [? carved bracket]t them & adm(eye)re them, (butt) (yew) must (knot) (X)pect I of (ewer) (puppet)s w(eye)ll (comb) [come] home (toe) (yew) as sweet as (yew) sent h(eye)m, twas cruel toe send so pretty a (man) so many 1000 miles & (toe) have the fat(eye)gue of reting back after (spike?)(eye)ng h(eye)s (coat) & d(eye)rt(eye)ng [dirting] t[hose] red (heel) (shoes) (eye)f (yew) are w(eyes) follow (ewer) own ad(vice) (yew) gave (toe) me take home ewer (ships) sold(eye)(ears) [soldiers] guard (well) (ewer) own tr(eye)fl(eye)(ling?) [a fish]. & leave me (toe) my self as (eye) am at age (toe) know my own (eye)ntrests. w(eye)thout (ewer) (fool)(eye)sh ad(vice) & know t(hat) (eye) sh(awl) (awl)ways regard (yew) & my Brothers as relat(eye)ons (butt) (knot) as fr(eye)nds.

(Eye) (am) (ewer) (grate)ly (eye)njured

Daughter Amer(eye)k.

America turns away from 'her mistaken mother' holding a fleur-de-lys symbolizing the French alliance. The 'pretty man' with the 'red heel shoes' is Lord Carlisle, said by the Duke of Richmond to be unsuited to treat with the homely Americans, see No. 5474. A scurrilous poem, 'An Ode addressed to the Scotch Junto and their American Commission . . .', 1778, has a line 'C—rl——le's vermilion'd Heels'. B.M.L. 643, k. 14/1.

13 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. pl.

Mr. Hawkins describes a print, published by Darly, 177 [sic].

THE LION MUZZLED OR NORTH TRIUMPHANT

Lord North, holding a sword and olive-branch, is seated upon the back of the British lion, which is lying down muzzled. This must be a satire on the Conciliatory Propositions.

A French satire on the Conciliatory Propositions is No. 1215, Collection de Vinck:

THE OLIVE REJECT^D OR THE YANKEES REVENGE

[After June 1778]

Pub^{ds} as the Act directs may 4 1778.

'Lord Burthe',² probably North, seated on an ass, which tries to cross the ¹ This publication line has been erased in the Museum impression and replaced by Published 12th May, 1794 by Laurie & Whittle, N 53, Fleet Street. It is supplied from an impression in a book of Darly's caricatures in the possession (1933) of Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street, see foregoing entry.

² He is explained by F. L. Bruel as 'Lord Burke . . . l'un des principaux partisans ocean in order to return to England. On his head is a crown and olive branch; from his pocket protrudes a paper inscribed Conciatory [Conciliatory] Bill. Beneath the publication line is inscribed 'le Lord Burthe couronné sur un Ane. Infortunex Anglois, à quoi vos Bills Conciliatoire [sic] ont-ils servis? 1. Le représentant de la Grande Bretagne pressé de fuir l'Amérique . . . ne pouvant regagner l'Angleterre qu'à la nage, sa Flotte étant dispersé ou deffaite. . . . 2. plusieurs Américains faisant trêve à leur modération naturelle que leurs ennemis ont gratuitement qualifiés de poltronerie, chassent honteusement l'agent qui sous un voile honete vouloit ébranler leur liberté en semant la division parmi eux. 3. Un Anglois faisant partie du petit nombre de ceux qu'on souffre encor en Amérique fait les plus [sic] pour y retenir l'Amiral. 4. Un François représentant son Pays digne soutien et allié du plus beau de l'Univers s'empresse de couper le foible lien dont vainement l'Anglois vouloit se servir.

The evident allusion (in 2) to Johnstone's attempt to open a private correspondence with members of Congress (June–July 1778), urging them to overthrow the French treaty, shows that the print is ante-dated in the fictitious publication line.

$6\frac{13}{16} \times 11\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5476 A TETE A TETE BETWEEN THE PREMIER & JNO HANCOCK ESQR [c. 1778]

Engraving. Publication line probably cut off. North and John Hancock, the first president of the Congress, stand in a conventional American landscape. North (l.) turns his head in profile to the r. towards Hancock, who faces him, holding out a handful of carrots while his r. hand is on the hilt of his partly-drawn sword. North wearing the insignia of the Garter points to the ground, his l. hand holding his sword by the scabbard. A spaniel licks his feet. Hancock wears a fur-trimmed belted tunic and fur-trimmed leggings showing bare knees, his hair falls loosely down his shoulders. A puma (r.) paws the ground behind him. On North's r. is a sculptured head (? of George III) on a pedestal. There is a landscape background of trees and hills; on the r. are two palm trees. Beneath the design is inscribed:

*Hancock and N—th, Suppos'd to meet,
And thus, the first, his thoughts repeat,
Let some, like Spaniels, own thy plan,
In me, behold a different Man
Who ee'r he'd call thy House his Home,
Wou'd with the mountain Tyger, roam,
Live on the Roots, pluck'd from the Earth,
From whence Himself, like Thee, had Birth.*

This appears to represent the refusal of Congress to accept North's Conciliatory Propositions, see No. 5473, &c. For the backwoods appearance of Hancock (a wealthy Boston merchant) cf. No. 5474.

$7\frac{11}{16} \times 10\frac{3}{16}$ in.

de conciliation, et l'adversaire de Pitt'. North seems more probable, though the artist has perhaps confused the two: Burke's famous speech on Conciliation was on 6 Mar. 1775; he spoke disparagingly of the mission of the Commissioners. Parl. Hist. xix. 778.

5477 THE ENGLISHMAN IN PARIS

[c. 1777-8]

Sold by C. Sheppard, Lambeth Hill, Doctors Commons.

Engraving (coloured impression). Three people seated at a round dinner-table. A fourth, an Englishman wearing a hat, stands up gnawing a large bird which he has seized from a dish which a servant (l.) has just brought in. A Frenchman seated at the table wearing an enormous toupet wig from which hangs a grotesquely elaborate queue, holds up his hands in protest; a second Frenchman, sitting with his hands on his knees, looks on in amusement. A lady on the far side of the table, wearing an enormous cap on her pyramid of hair, is drinking wine as she watches the Englishman. On the wall are two pictures: two prize-fighters fighting (l.), and a monk standing outside a church (r.). Beneath the design is engraved:

*An American goose came hot from the spit
Egad says the Englishman I'll have a bit
His jaws he applies with wond'rous speed
To devour the viands on which others shou'd feed.
Fie, fie, Mons' La Anglois [sic] cries the frenchman;—forbear,
Why the limbs of your brother thus furiously tear?
Think you we'll tamely look on and starve?
No, no Mons' Anglois, we wait for to carve.*

This appears intended to represent the attitude of France towards the American war before the signing of the Treaty on 6 Feb. 1778. See Ann. Reg. 1778, 37-8.

8½ × 13¼ in.

5478 WILLIAM PITT [sic]

[c. 1778]

Engraving. A French print. Chatham, supported on crutches, stands behind a balustrade, his r. hand held out in the manner of an orator. On each side of him is a seated figure, turning towards him, each wearing the ribbon of an order. Beneath the design is engraved Il faut déclarer la guerre a la France.

This appears to be a French artist's representation of Chatham's last speech in the House of Lords on 7 Apr. 1778 to oppose the Duke of Richmond's advocacy of peace with America before war was declared with France: 'shall this great kingdom now fall prostrate before the House of Bourbon?' (Parl. Hist. xix. 1022 ff.; Von Ruville, Chatham, iii, p. 340 f.) England and France were already virtually at war: Stormont had been recalled from Paris on the announcement (13 Mar.) of the French Treaty with America. For the dread inspired by Chatham in France, c. 1775-8, see Doniol, Hist. de la participation de la France à l'établissement des États-Unis, i. 60-4; Corwin, French Policy and the American Alliance, 1916, p. 142.

6¼ × 3¼ in.

5479 THE STATE OF THE NATION.

Pub^d June 24. 1778.

price 1^s 6^d.

Mezzotint. Fourteen single figures, in two rows one above the other, each seated in a little compartment representing a latrine. The upper row are all men, the lower all women. All wear hats. Almost all are in attitudes expressive of alarm, discomfort, or resignation. Names are written beneath each in an old hand, showing that all are in fact caricatures of men. They are (l. to r.): upper row—'L^d B.' [Barrington?] his face concealed by his hat; 'L^d M.' [Mansfield] with the face of an aged man; 'L. N.' [Lord North] scarcely recognizable; 'L. G. G.' [Lord George Germain]; 'Mr. Rigby'; 'L^d S.' [Sandwich?], his head concealed by his hat. 'L^d Land', turning up his eyes sanctimoniously [Shelburne?].

The lower row of women: 'Co^l Bare' [Barré], his head almost concealed by his hat; 'Mr Sawb.' [Sawbridge], the City patriot, his head leaning on his hand with a very melancholy expression; 'L^d Car.' [Carlisle?], a young woman of pleasing appearance, with an untroubled expression; 'S. F. N.' [Sir Fletcher Norton]; 'M^r W.' [Wilkes], recognizable by his squint; 'D. R.' [Duke of Richmond?]; 'Mr. Johnson', with a certain resemblance to Dr. Johnson.

General attacks on the Government were made by moving for a committee on the State of the Nation; see motions by Fox and the Duke of Richmond (accepted by North) 2 Dec. 1777, followed by debates in committee, 2, 11, 16, 19 Feb. 1778. Chatham's last speech 7 Apr. 1778 was in a debate on the Duke of Richmond's motion for an address to the king upon the State of the Nation. Parl. Hist. xix, pp. 472 ff., 513 ff., 672 ff., 718 ff., 745 ff., 1012 ff.

There are other versions of this design, see Nos. 5480, 5481; it appears on the wall in No. 5633 and also in a pen drawing by Rowlandson, The School of Eloquence, in the collection of Mr. Oppé, exhibited Burlington Fine Arts Club, 1931-2. It is mentioned in No. 6199.

$7\frac{15}{16} \times 13$ in.; each compartment approximately $3\frac{1}{2} \times 1\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5480 THE STATE OF THE NATION. [2] [n.d. perhaps 1783]
Sold by W: Holland N^o 50 Oxford St^r Price 1^s.

Engraving (partly mezzotinted). Another version (reversed), and drawn more freely, of No. 5479. Beneath each figure is engraved an exclamation. These are, upper row (l. to r.): O my back! ['L^d Land'?], Good Luck! [Lord Sandwich]; What a Stench! [Rigby]; Curse the French! [Germain]; I'm quite gone! [Lord North]; Damn the Don! [Lord Mansfield]; We're all aground! [Lord Barrington]. Lower row (l. to r.): How I'm bound! [D^r Johnson]; I'm quite sick! [Duke of Richmond]; It's a Spanish Trick! [Wilkes]; It's [sic] all in vain! [Fletcher Norton]; What a Strain! [Lord Carlisle]; Fine Fun! [Sawbridge]; I've just done! [Col. Barré].

Beneath the design is engraved:

*In a certain Great House that there is in this Land,
 When a motion is made on your Feet you must stand,
 But in this little House it is quite the reverse,
 When a motion is made you must sit on your . . .*

$7\frac{11}{16} \times 13$; each compartment, upper row approximately $3\frac{5}{16} \times 1\frac{3}{4}$; lower row approximately $3\frac{7}{16} \times 1\frac{3}{4}$.

5480 A An earlier state, without the words beneath the figures and without publication line.

5481 THE STATE OF THE NATION [3]

Pub^d by H. Humphrey, S^t James's Street

[n.d.]

Engraving. Another version of No. 5480 freely drawn in outline, with certain alterations in the hats, suggesting a publication some years later than 1778, perhaps 1784 or 1786. Words as in No. 5480. The first figure, saying O my Back!, wears a high-crowned hat instead of a three-cornered hat, and top-boots instead of shoes. The man saying Damn the Don wears a high-crowned hat instead of a low-crowned one.

Three of the women in the lower row wear hats with higher crowns, those of the third and fifth being Welsh in shape.

The design and the words below the design are enclosed by a marginal line, this measurement being $9\frac{3}{8} \times 13\frac{1}{4}$ in.

The size of the compartments is approximately the same as in No. 5480.

No. 1220 in the Collection de Vinck: Etat de la Nation Angloise with the comic publication line, A Londres à la taverne du vent, is presumably a French copy of No. 5479, 5480, or 5481.

5482 V. 2. 69. A VIEW IN AMERICA IN 1778

MD [Darly] sc.

Pub^d by M Darly Aug^t 1. 1778

Engraving. A negro lies prone in the foreground (r.); he has been wounded by a cannon-ball; cannon-balls of various sizes lie on the ground near him. A man wearing a military overcoat with a sash stands over him; he points with his three-cornered hat towards the negro, while he turns to a man standing on his r. whose dress resembles that of the members of Congress in No. 5474 with the addition of a large feathered hat and sword; the Congressman is smoking a short pipe with a large covered bowl. Behind the negro stands an American soldier, with a feathered hat, who smiles and points towards three Death or Liberty men, one of whom turns his back, the other two look down with closed eyes and expressions of deep misery. Their clothes are ragged; one, who is very short, wears a cap inscribed Death or Liberty and a powder-horn inscribed Liberty or Death. In the background behind a palisade is a rectangular enclosure, with a flag inscribed U S. Behind the enclosure is a ruined fortification, from which cannon are being fired by one man only. Four or five men are visible behind the palisade.

Perhaps a satire on the indifference of Congress to the sufferings of American soldiers, and on the attitude to negro slavery in America, illustrating Dr. Johnson's familiar gibe.

One of the same series as No. 5370, &c. Probably from a sketch by an amateur, perhaps Mansergh.

$8\frac{7}{8} \times 12\frac{9}{16}$ in.

5483 A HESSIAN GRENADEIR

MD sc.

Pub by M Darly 39 Strand Aug 1. 1778.

Engraving (coloured impression). A soldier stands at attention in profile to the l. holding his musket with fixed bayonet. A long pigtail hangs from short, shaggy hair. He wears a pointed cap tilted over his eyes, military coat, and jack-boots. On his back is a variety of objects, including a flask, a pouch, a leg of mutton, and (?) a turkey.

The Hessians were incorrigible plunderers of friend and foe in America. Probably belongs to the same series as No. 5482, but the numbered margin has been cut off.

$9\frac{3}{16} \times 6\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5484 MONSIEUR SNEAKING GALLANTLY INTO BREST'S
SCULKING-HOLE AFTER RECEIVING A PRELIMINARY SALU-TATION OF BRITISH JACK TAR THE 27 OF JULY 1778

[n.d. c. Aug. 1778]

Publ: as the Act directs by W. Richardson N^o 68 High Holborn.

Engraving. An English sailor wielding a cat-o'-nine-tails chases a French sailor into the wide jaws of a dragon or sea-monster; they symbolize the British and French fleets. The French sailor, whose jacket is decorated with fleur-de-lys, carries a man-of-war on his head; he shrieks in alarm, his hands outstretched. His trousers are undone and he puffs a blast at his pursuer resembling the smoke which comes from the ships' guns. Both men are running on the surface of the sea; within the jaws of the monster is a fleet; guns are firing towards a single British ship on the l. which returns the fire. The jaws of the monster are inscribed Grand Monarque.

The battle of Ushant, the first naval engagement of the war with France, was indecisive, for though the advantage was with the British, the French made good their escape to Brest, see No. 5626. It resulted in the court-martials of Keppel and Palliser, see Nos. 5536-8, and gave rise to many satires, see Nos. 5486, 5570, 5992, &c.

$5\frac{3}{16} \times 7\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5485 AN EXTRAORDINARY GAZETTE OR THE DISAPPOINTED POLITICIANS

[? 1778]

P^r 6^d

Engraving, partly mezzotinted. A number of men sit and stand round a table in some coffee-house or club, smoking, reading, and drinking. A man in spectacles reads in the Gazette a dispatch signed Clin[ton]; another looks over his shoulder with an expression of satisfaction. A military officer tears a paper to pieces in disgust, on it is a row of ciphers. On the edge of the table is a paper inscribed Gazzette extro^v 1710. We have gain'd a battle & hav[e] the French General in my coach. Marlborough. (Apparently an allusion to Blenheim 1704.)

On the wall (l.) is a large map: Map of America belonging to the English in 1762 when Pitt was prime minister. In the centre is A Map of America belonging to the English in 1778; only a fragment in the north is left, filled with writhing serpents. On the r. is a picture, The Mountain in Labour; from the bottom of a mound a mouse emerges, crowds of men throw up their arms making gestures of astonishment. Under the map of America in 1778 is a play-bill: At the Theatre Royal S^t James'es. A Play of All in the Wrong, Obstant by M^r King. . . . which will be [followed by] a Farce of the subject[ion] . . . America.

This appears to represent the Gazette Extraordinary of 24 Aug. 1778 which contained Clinton's dispatch of 6 July, relating his encounter with Washington and Lafayette on 28 June at Freehold or Monmouth on the retreat after his evacuation of Philadelphia. Both Clinton and the Americans represented the affair as a victory, see Gazette, loc. cit., and Ann. Reg. 1778, p. 225*. All in the Wrong was a popular comedy by Murphy, first played in 1761; Thomas King the actor (1730-1805) was in 1778 at the height of his fame, though here George III is clearly indicated.

4 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 6 in.

5486 [EMBLEMATICAL PRINT ADAPTED TO THE TIMES.]

[1 Sept. 1778]

London Magazine: August. 1778

Engraving. From the London Magazine, xlvii. 339. In the foreground Neptune and Britannia (r.) are seated on the sea-shore in conversation. Neptune points with his trident and Britannia with a finger at a young man with lank hair, seated on a rock (l.); who holds a large striped American flag, a cock stands on his shoulder crowing. In the distance the British fleet is in line of battle among clouds of smoke; above flies Fame blowing her trumpet and holding a British flag. The design is surrounded by a conventional frame of garlands, palm-branches, &c. The accompanying text explains that this represents Neptune consoling Britannia and deriding America. The Gallic cock crowing on the shoulder of an American represents the 'unnatural' alliance of America with France. The British fleet is represented as triumphant because 'the event of the action was more beneficial than many victories'.

For the battle of Ushant, 27 July 1778, see Nos. 5484, 5626. The London Magazine had been strongly pro-American, this print illustrates the change produced by the French alliance.

3 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 6 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5487 THE CURIOUS ZEBRA.

London. Printed for G. Johnson as the Act directs 3 Sep^r 1778, and Sold at all the Printshops in London & Westminster.

Engraving. A zebra, on whose stripes are engraved the names of the thirteen colonies, is being treated in various ways by four men. A man standing behind it is about to put on its back a saddle inscribed Stamp Act. This is George Grenville; he says, I say, Saddle the Beast She will be able to bear great burdens for plac—n [placemen] & Pens—rs [Pensioners]. Lord North (l.) holds the animal by a halter, saying My name is Boreas the First I hold the Reins, and will never quit them till the Beast is Subdued (cf. No. 5231). Two men (r.) hold the animal by the tail: one, whose coat, decorated with fleur-de-lys, shows that he represents France, is saying You are doing un grand Sottise, and Begar I will avail myself of it. Dis Zebra Vill look very pretty in my Menagerie. The other, dressed as an English military officer, says, My name is Fabius the Second, & the Rudder is my Hand. Pull Devil—Pull Baker, but She'll Stand upon her legs at last. This is evidently Washington (a second Fabius Cunctator), and he is so identified in a contemporary hand. Behind Lord North stand three men, who represent the three Commissioners sent to treat with the Americans, see No. 5473, &c. The central figure, probably Lord Carlisle, holds in his hands objects intended for a wisp of hay and a sieve of oats; he says, ¹ The title has been supplied from 'Directions to the Bookbinder'.

I imagined the Animal wou'd have accepted our Hay & Oates; the man on his l., probably Eden, says Our Offers are Rejected no terms but Independence. The third, Governor Johnstone, older and more burly than the other two, says, I thought they wou'd have received us more Friendly, but now give over all hopes. Behind the figures is the sea with a small town on the farther side of a bay. After the title is engraved, alive from America! walk in Gem'men and Ladies, walk in.

The bias of the print is clearly shown by the allusion to the Stamp Act, passed in 1765 and repealed in 1766, without having been put in execution, intended to raise money towards the expenses of the defence and administration of the colonies. For other references to the Stamp Act (usually attributed to Bute) see Nos. 4118, 4119, 4124, 4125, 4130, 4140, 4141, 4142, 4143, 4298, 4842, 5298, 5490, 5491, 6190, 6291, and p. 216.

Collection de Vinck, No. 1216.

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 10\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5488 THE CITY IN AN UPROAR—OR THE RE-TAKING OF UMBRAGE—BY SIR TONY CANDLESTICK KNT

Price 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ ^d

Published as the Act directs Sept^r 29th 1778

Engraving. A satire on Irish Volunteers. A burlesque representation of volunteers from an Irish city, whose buildings are seen on the horizon (l.); on the r. are hills. An allusion to 'the Poddle Hole' shows that it is Dublin. Small companies of civic soldiers march from l. to r. The leading party, probably the Dublin Corporation, wear long civic gowns, their leader carries a long staff and a candlestick held upside down. Labels issue from the mouths of the three foremost: the man with the candlestick, probably the Mayor, says What Billy is it Nothing; the next man, who wears bands, and is perhaps the Recorder of the City, says Thus I am lead about for 500 p. y^r; the third carries a large key, and says, I am Done wth the Keys of y^e City. These three are followed by twelve or thirteen obese men in gowns, probably the aldermen; they carry standards on which words are engraved evidently indicating their occupations: Jallap; Adze; Titlepage; Teatub; Grape; Grogram; Starch; Figg; Taplash. In front of this party (r.), but looking away from it, stands a man in armour with an oval shield inscribed The only Apprais^s Office; he carries a flag on which are two castles.

The next party appears to be a company of beggars; they are nearly all maimed, with crutches, &c. Their leader is a well-dressed man carrying a spear, he says, I Live & I'll die by my Beggars. They carry a large ragged flag on which is a horse or ass drawing a two-wheeled cart, within which is a man (or woman); on it is inscribed 3400 to Support me. With the party is a woman carrying an infant. The last beggar, waving his crutch, cries Hey for Channell Row.

The next party (six persons) appears to consist of surgeons and apothecaries. On their standard is a pestle and mortar. The last man carries an axe. Their leader, holding a spear, looks over his shoulder towards his followers, saying Tis we support the Gallows.

The next (and last) party (l.) appears to be a company of watchmen or police. Their leader carries a halberd and says Ay Bro^r & y^e Gallows Supports us. This company of five carry halberds, and each has a lantern slung from his shoulders. Their standard is supported on a halberd to which is attached a watchman's lantern and is inscribed, Col B . . . n for ever Huzza.

In the distance, between this party and the city, is a gallows on a minute scale, from it hangs a man inscribed Rat; spectators stand round. Near it walks a man with broadsides, shouting The last speech of I do-no-who.

In the foreground on the extreme r. is a tree. In front of it sits an ape, goat, or satyr playing a set of bagpipes; he says A sure a Sett was never Seen so Justly formed to Guard our City. Two men wearing hats and long gowns, each holding a sword, recline against the roots of the tree; one holds a paper inscribed The House Scheme, and is saying I stop'd at Corke for w^t I am now. Between them and the Mayor's party runs a small boy on a minute scale, he carries a paper and cries, The whole Order. In the foreground, and extending to the roots of the tree, is a piece of water on which are two boats, full of men and rowed by two pair of oars, the rowers apparently facing the bows, where in each boat a man holds an anchor. One boat (r.) has a large flag inscribed The Geography, on the top of the flag-staff is a spinning-wheel. The man with the anchor says Send D^r G——d to the Adm^t he's Seasick. The other boat has a flag inscribed The Salmon. The man with the anchor says, Shall y^e Pavers be Landed; a passenger carries a pickaxe.

On the shore are various camp-followers, &c. Two men stand together, their backs to the parties of volunteers; one holds a staff surmounted by a ball and cross, saying, Darby Smoke our S——ffs; the other says I do so.

Near them is a small tilt-wagon, drawn by two horses, a carter walking beside them, the wagon has a flag inscribed Custard &c &c. Behind it walks a woman with a child on her back holding up newspapers for sale; she is calling High barny Jour^t, and her paper is inscribed Hiber[nian] Journal; behind her walks a small boy who points at the marching watchmen.

Beneath the design is engraved, *The Mayor of Bantam, hearing y^t our perfidious Enemies the French, had taken Umbrage from his Majesty, calls in the aid of his Ally, Ben, King of the Beggars, who takes the Field with his Hussars, attended by Gen^t Gallipot with the D——t S——t Militia, & Justice Bed-post at the head of S^t A——s Watch, while Adm^t Spinning Wheel, on board y^e Geography, commands a fleet of Observation on the Poddle Hole.*¹

*While grim S^r Tony, that sagacious Blade,
With Fury marches to attack a Shade;
Behold him follow'd by a Num'rous Train,
Coeval Some, in a sad Lack of — Brain
Oh! happy City, blest with such a Head,
At once so Valorous and so well bred;
That none, for parts & penetration quick,
Can vie wth our well Polish'd Candlestick.*

This appears to be a satire on the Irish Volunteers of Dublin. The volunteer movement began in Belfast in 1778, through fears of a French invasion, and spread rapidly, soon becoming political, see No. 5572.

6½ × 12¼ in.

¹ Cf. J. Isaacson, The Choice, . . . in Foundling Hospital for Wit, 1772, p. 137. A note explains that "The Poddle (more properly perhaps the Puddle) is one of the great common-sewers of the city of Dublin, . . .".

5489 GRACE BEFORE MEAT OR A PEEP AT LORD PETER'S.[? Gillray¹.]

[n.d. 1778]

Sold by W. Humphrey, N° 227 Strand.

Engraving. Twelve persons seated round a circular table, their hands in various attitudes of prayer, their heads bent. In the centre, under a canopy, decorated with the royal arms, sit the king and queen. A man on the king's r. is intended for Lord Petre; a lady on the queen's l. for Lady Petre. A tall emaciated monk who stands on the l. on a low stool is saying grace. Two footmen stand behind. On the wall (r.) is a crucifix and (l.) the picture of a saint with a halo. On the table are plates, knives, and various dishes including a sucking-pig and a pie. The guests, especially those facing the king and queen whose backs are turned to the spectators, are caricatured, the king and queen are not.

This represents the visit paid by the king and queen to Lord Petre at Thorndon, Essex, 19-21 Oct. 1778, while visiting Warley Camp. This was a recognition of the Catholic Relief Act of 1778, which was unopposed and passed almost unnoticed, though it was to lead to the Gordon Riots. It is the earliest in date of a number of anti-Catholic satires which heralded the Gordon Riots, see No. 5534, &c., and especially No. 5670. The print does much less than justice to the magnificence of the entertainment provided by Lord Petre, see the extracts from his journal in M. D. Petre's The Ninth Lord Petre, 1928, pp. 38 ff.

Grego, Gillray, p. 28. Wright and Evans, No. 368.

9 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5489 A Another impression with the publication line

Publish'd Nov^r 5. 1778. by Pat^h Gahagan Oxford Road.

Date and name are probably intended to stress the no-Popery propaganda of the satire. 'Oxford Road' is probably an attack on the high-church sympathies of the Oxford clergy, see No. 5492, an attack on clergy who 'have learned their Exercises at the Loyal Schools at Oxford'.

5490 THE TEA-TAX-TEMPEST, OR THE ANGLO-AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

*Angewitter entstanden durch die Auflage auf den Thee in Amerika.
Orage causé par l'Impôt sur le Thé en Amérique. 1778.*

[Carl Guttenberg of Nuremburg.]

Engraving. An adaptation, in reverse, of The Oracle by John Dixon, see No. 5225. Time, with a magic-lantern, throws upon a curtain an allegorical representation of revolution in America. He points this out to four female figures personifying the four quarters of the world.² Dixon's Britannia, Hibernia, and Scotia have been transformed into Europe, Asia, and Africa. Europe and Asia sit side by side, Asia's arm on Europe's shoulder. Asia, a fair woman, holds on her lap a censer, from which pour clouds of incense. Europe wears a plumed helmet, and has a spear and a shield on which is a horse; both wear pseudo-classical draperies. Africa, a negress wearing a turban, stands behind Europe gazing in horror at the vision. This group is on the r. On the l. sits America exactly as in Dixon's mezzotint. On the bale of goods behind her are the letters C. G., and beneath them 4 F.; on the bale on which she sits is an inverted M. The letters C. G. are the initials of the artist.¹

¹ Attributed to Gillray; its manner has some resemblance to etchings after Mortimer, see No. 5362.

² See J. H. Hyde, 'L'Iconographie des quatre parties du monde dans les tapisseries'; Gazette des Beaux-Arts, Paris, 1924, pp. 253 ff.

Time also is copied from Dixon; his magic lantern throws a circle of light on a heavy curtain. In the centre of the vision is a tea-pot (resembling a coffee-pot) placed over a fire in which stamped documents are blazing. A cock, the emblem of France, is blowing at the fire with bellows.² The contents of the tea-pot are exploding, and a serpent and the cap of liberty on its staff are being shot from it into the air, surrounded by rays of light and clouds of smoke. This represents the consequences of the Stamp Act and the tax on tea. For the snake emblem on the American flag see No. 5336, &c. Beneath the clouds of smoke under the fire a prostrate lion is partly visible, and below, a flag with three leopards, representing the British royal standard, torn, its staff broken. By it lies part of a map, showing the English Channel, inscribed Detroits . . . and the head of a spiked club. On the l. three beasts of prey are fighting. They appear to be a lion, a bear, and a puma or lioness. Within the circle on the r. American soldiers are advancing with a striped flag on which is a serpent. Before them advances an allegorical figure of America resembling the woman watching the vision; her upstretched hand appears about to grasp the cap and staff of liberty which is shooting up from the exploding tea-pot. Behind her is a mounted officer with a drawn sword followed by soldiers with fixed bayonets. The muzzles of two cannon are also visible, with a man holding a cannon ball. On the l., British soldiers are fleeing in disorder, the heads of the rearmost men being under a yoke. A storm with darts of lightning rages over their heads.

The heavily festooned curtain shows pillars, and on the wall (r.) is a picture or tapestry of two nude men fighting, one lies prostrate.

In the centre of the lower margin are two medallions: one (l.) is inscribed Auto da fe and Holland. 1560; it represents a man tied to the stake, while a monk, holding up a crucifix, holds a torch to the pile. On the r. is Wilhelm Tell, Switzerland. 1296. Tell aims with a cross-bow at the apple on his son's head, while Gessler on horseback points at the child. Between the medallions is part of an oak-tree. The medallion representing Holland is supported (l.) by the Dutch lion holding in his paw a sheaf of seven arrows representing the United Provinces. Hercules with his club (r.) supports the medallion of Switzerland.

The example of Holland and Switzerland in their contest with tyrants is depicted as emblematic of the revolt of the Colonies against England. See No. 6199, an English adaptation of this design where the allusions are made explicit by words spoken by Time. See also No. 5491. For other references to the tax on tea see Nos. 5226, 5282, 5491, 5850, 5859. For the Stamp Act see No. 5487, &c. For Saratoga see No. 6470, &c.

13 × 17 in.

¹ Nagler, Die Monogrammisten, ii. 27.

² Impressions with the cock are rare, as the engraver was compelled to remove this emblem. Portalis et Béraldi, Graveurs du 18^{me} Siècle, 1881, ii. 363.

5491 ORAGE CAUSÉ PAR L'IMPÔT SUR LE THÉ EN AMÉRIQUE.

[n.d.]

Engraving. A reduced version in reverse of No. 5490. Beneath the title is engraved:

Le Temps fait voir avec sa Lanterne Magique, aux quatre parties du Monde, que cet Orage que les Anglois ont excité, les foudroye eux-mêmes, et va donner à l'Amérique les moyens de se saisir du bonnet de la Liberté.

5¼ × 6⅞ in.

5492 REVIEW OF THE YORK REGIMENT.

[n.d., c. 1778, perhaps 1777]

P. Canon del^t

T. Parson Sc^t

Engraving. A bishop in lawn sleeves and mitre holds out his hands towards a troop of soldiers who advance through a gothic doorway (l.), over which is inscribed Gate to Preferment. He turns round to speak to Britannia (r.), who leans against a pedestal inscribed Constitution; she holds her shield and a long staff, and wears a cap of liberty. The bishop, Markham, Archbishop of York, says to her, Madam a noble Corps, True and Staunch Friends to the Cause, have learned their Exercises at the Loyal Schools at Oxford. Britannia answers, This Gate is not y^e Door to your Master's Sheepfold, he that entereth not by y^e Door is a thief & robber I will not trust you, you would ruin my Constitution & tear my Cap. Behind Britannia appear the head and shoulders of a man who appears to carry a musket on his back, perhaps an Irish Volunteer, he says to her, Dear Madam Tory's & Jacobites were never Friends to the Brunswick Line remember ye Years 15 & 45.

The soldiers wear clerical bands and low-brimmed hats and carry muskets with fixed bayonets; on their banner is a mitre; their leader holds a crozier; he is saying Please you Madam, for Mitres, Deaneries and Prebendarys we will wade thro' an Ocean of Yanky Blood. The heads and shoulders of a number of parsons, similarly dressed, who are rushing uphill towards the Gate to Preferment to join the 'York Regiment', appear between the troop and the archbishop.

In the foreground (r.) two soldiers are talking together; one says, Tom who the Devil will trust these Fellows who are neither true to God nor Man, for every one is a Deserter from the Prince of Life. The other answers, Let them alone, they are but hirelings if I was King I would hang them all. On the horizon are churches or cathedrals falling into ruin.

The names of the artists are probably a punning allusion to the supposed activities of the Church of England in support of the war. Markham was attacked in the House of Lords by Grafton, Shelburne, and others, 30 May 1777, for a sermon contrary to the spirit of the Revolution (of 1689). Parl. Hist. xix. 326-51. (Sermon quoted, pp. 348-50 n.) Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 29-30, 86-8.

See also Nos. 5343, 5400.

6¼ × 10⅞ in.

5493 [A COAT OF ARMS FOR JOHN WESLEY.]

[1778]

Engraving. Frontispiece from 'Perfection; a poetical Epistle, calmly addressed to the greatest Hypocrite in England', an attack on Wesley for his 'Calm Address to our American Colonies', 1775.

A fantastic escutcheon whose supporters are, dexter, a wolf wearing the fleece of a sheep, and sinister, a fox. Objects on the shield have letters referring to notes beneath the design giving references to the verses. Above a chevron are (dexter chief) a, an open book inscribed Forms and Lies and Book of Common Prayer; b, a key. Middle chief, a money bag inscribed 40 Guis. Sinister chief, d, a mouse-trap and a crozier. Below the chevron: Middle base, the façade of a building with a pediment inscribed I.W. [John Wesley] surmounted by a cupola having a weathercock pointing to N, that is, to Lord North. It flies two flags, one inscribed Calm Address. p. 21, the other Perfection. At the centre base of an ornamental border to the escutcheon is the head of Wesley, wearing bands, his mouth open. Beneath it is a ribbon inscribed, My . Son . get . Money.

The wolf, the dexter supporter (l.), wears a fleece inscribed I.W., he excretes a blast inscribed c, New Light 40 Articles. The reference is to:

if Ministers but nod,
Make earthly Kings co-equal with thy God .
To other rules of Faith add this of thine
And tack one Item more to Thirty-nine.

He stands on three superimposed slabs, inscribed Impostor Detected. Letters. Contributions to the Stock. Evans. I.W. detected. The fox (r.) excretes News from America; he stands on three slabs inscribed Subscriptions | to the Temple. Rowland Hill, p. 17.

The crest is a mitre inscribed Erasmus, with e, a dagger and the motto Good Will towards Men.

Since Wesley's 'Calm Address to our American Colonies', an unacknowledged abridgement of Johnson's 'Taxation No Tyranny' sold at a penny and achieving a great circulation, Wesley had been the target of virulent abuse which reached a climax of scurrility in 1778. See Tyerman, Life and Times of Wesley, iii. 261 ff. It was followed by 'A Calm Address to the Inhabitants of England', 1778. 'A wolf in Sheep's clothing or an old Jesuit unmasked . . .' was published in 1775. The mitre is an allusion to the allegations of Toplady and Rowland Hill, that Wesley had asked Erasmus, bishop of Arcadia in Crete, to consecrate him bishop and had been refused. The dagger is supposed to indicate the effect of the Calm Address: 'And massacre Mankind with CALM ADDRESS.'

The slabs supporting the wolf and fox are inscribed with the names of attacks on Wesley: the chief attack on the 'Calm Address' had been by Caleb Evans, a Baptist minister and a 'patriot' in 'A Letter to the Rev. Mr John Wesley occasioned by his "Calm Address"'. Rowland Hill's pamphlet of abuse was 'Imposture detected . . .' 1777.

The weathercock pointing to the north indicates that Wesley has sold himself to the Ministry. Wesley's New Chapel in the City Road, opened in 1778, was built by subscriptions. The key on the escutcheon represents 'the Keys of Hell', because of Wesley's alleged fulminations against non-Methodists. The mouse-trap is 'Priestcraft's Trap'.

This print and Nos. 5494-6, 5576, are all frontispieces to scurrilous pamphlets in verse by the same writer, all published by J. Bew, Paternoster Row. 'Perfection' is attributed to W. Combe by J. C. Hotten in his introduction to D' Syntax [1868], p. xli.

$7\frac{7}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5494 TOOTHLESS, HE DRAWS THE TEETH OF ALL HIS FLOCKS. [1778]

Engraving. Frontispiece from 'Sketches for Tabernacle-Frames', another scurrilous attack on Wesley by the author of 'Perfection . . .', see Nos. 5493, 5495, 5496, 5576. Wesley (l.) as 'Reynard' with a fox's head, wearing an M.A. gown with clerical bands, bends forward to extract the teeth of a working man (r.) with an ass's head, who kneels before him. Wesley rests a cloven hoof on a pile of four books; inscribed Locke, Sidney, Magna Charta, and Acherly's Constitut^s; he wears a collar inscribed North. Acherley's constitutional treatises ('The Britannic Constitution', 1727, &c.) expressed an extreme form of the social contract theory of Locke and others. Beside him is a table (l.) on which are two open books transfixed by a dagger, across which is a scroll inscribed Dispatch for America; one book is Impostor detected by R. Hill, the other Political Sophistry detected by Evans. For these pamphlets see No. 5493.

The working man, dressed like a blacksmith, opens his ass's jaws for Wesley's ministrations; in one hand is a bottle inscribed Prim. Phys., in the other a pamphlet, A Calm Address (see No. 5493); from his pocket protrudes a volume of Hymns.

Behind Wesley (l.) is a book-case, its pediment ornamented by a mitre, in allusion to Wesley's alleged desire for consecration, see No. 5493. Its three shelves of books are inscribed Primitive Physick; Political Pamphlets; and Prayers, Sermons, Hymns. Wesley's 'Primitive Physick, or an easy and natural Method of curing most Diseases' went through many editions from 1747; it was first noticed and attacked by the medical profession in 1776 in a pamphlet by Dr. W. Hawes, an eminent physician, as 'calculated to do essential injury to the health of those persons who may place confidence in it'. On the back wall are two framed H.L. portraits: Jacobus II and Lucy Cooper, the latter inscribed Converted June 24 at 1 O'Clock in the Morning. According to the Explanation which has been cut off the impression, the pictures show him to be a Jacobite and 'an old lecher'. Lucy was 'a Lady still remembered in Covent Garden', 'Perfection', p. 14 n.

The allusions in this satire largely repeat those of No. 5496, though their political animus is more pronounced. Wesley is depicted as 'a physical, a political and a Religious Quack', 'The Love Feast', p. 13 n. See No. 5496. His influence with the common people is alleged to have softened their animosity to the Government, an anticipation, though with a more limited application, of the conclusions of Lecky and Halévy.

$7\frac{3}{8} \times 7\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5495 WISE AS SERPENTS

1778

Engraving. Frontispiece from 'The Temple of Imposture', 1778, one of a number of scurrilous pamphlets in verse attacking John Wesley by the same author, see Nos. 5493, 5494, 5496, 5576. A large serpent, holding a bird in its mouth, encircles a number of objects indicating various phases of religious imposture (so called). The serpent, which represents Wesley, is inscribed The subtlest beast of the field (a). This is annotated below the design: (a) NB some Hyper-Critics say it was not originally written Field but Moorfields. Within the space enclosed by the serpent are (l.) a sealed letter inscribed Aldeberts Letter, and a Gridiron, inscribed Mahomet's Gridiron; beneath a scroll inscribed Old Light at Mecca is an open book,

Koran. Above a scroll inscribed New Light in Moorfields are three books: Bedlam Hymns; Druid Hymns; Ignat; Loyola Monita Secreta, and a bottle inscribed Gin in whose neck is a lighted candle. Dividing the Koran from these objects is a short curved sword of the pattern worn by macaronies c. 1771-3 (see No. 5030) inscribed, Calm Address of Both. Beneath the serpent is a scroll inscribed Wise as Serpents. Below the design is engraved:

*Thus modern Arts on Ancient Plans improve,
A Bedlam-Serpent swallows Mecca's Dove.*

In the list (p. 31) Wesley is denounced as 'Of all Impostors since the Flood the worst'.

The Foundry, Moorfields, was from 1740 to 1778 Wesley's chief place of preaching and the head-quarters of Methodism in London. Its proximity to Bethlehem Hospital (Bedlam), combined with the hysteria which sometimes attacked his converts, was a common occasion of raillery.

For similar, though less scurrilous, attacks on Wesley see Nos. 1785, 2425, by Hogarth (1762).

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 4\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5496 REYNARDO'S CONSECRATION BY THE GODDESS MURCIA. [1778]

Engraving. Frontispiece to The Love-Feast, 1778; one of a number of scurrilous pamphlets in verse by the same writer against John Wesley, see Nos. 5493-5495, 5576. Wesley with a fox's head and a collar inscribed North, dressed as in No. 5494, kneels at the feet of Murcia or Venus (I.), a half-nude woman seated on a throne under a curtained canopy; she is about to place a mitre on his head. Her throne is decorated by a blind-folded cupid holding a cornucopia. A cloven hoof projects from Wesley's gown. A disappointed candidate for the bishopric, dressed in gown and bands, holds up his hands, in one of which is his wig. Another disappointed candidate slinks out of a door (r.), though which a boy enters with his hat in his hand, holding out a paper inscribed Wanted an Advowson. The scene is the interior of a Georgian church or chapel, with a gallery supported on columns. On the r. is a double-decked pulpit. Two chandeliers hang from the roof, one inscribed Gift of Miss Lucy Cooper (see No. 5494), the other, Gift of Alderman Gripus. Beneath the design is engraved:

*Thine be the Diocese of all Moorfields
Romano wav'd his Wig, & cry'd, Huzza!
Simonio disappointed stalk'd away.*

Murcia has selected three competitors for the diocese of Moorfields, where the Foundry was the Methodist head-quarters until Nov. 1778, see No. 5495. 'Romano' (William Romaine, 1714-95), 'Simonio' (Dr. Madan, 1726-90), and 'Reynardo', Wesley, all preach a sermon before her, she chooses Reynardo:

Like other B . . . ps [Bishops] gorge the golden Bait,
Amphibious Expletives of Church and State
Strange, Gothic, feudal, self-erected things;
Lord Priests, anointed Ayes and Noes for k . . . gs

The Love-Feast, p. 44.

The intention of this satire, like others by the same writer, is largely political: Wesley wears North's collar:

He who on Canting lays so great a Stress,

Cou'd drink hot Blood, yet write a Calm Address; p. 33 (see No. 5493). Madan had been accused of simony in 1767-8 in connexion with the living of Aldwinckle, to which on his recommendation Thomas Haweis had been presented, see also No. 4470. Romaine was a calvinist of the Church of England, and a great revivalist preacher. The attack on episcopacy should also be noted, cf. No. 5492, &c.

$7\frac{9}{16} \times 7\frac{3}{16}$ in.

Mr. Hawkins describes another frontispiece to a similar satire on Wesley by the same writer:

INSPIRATION, ELECTION, PERFECTION

A frontispiece to 'Fanatic Saints; or Bedlamites inspired,' 1778.

(a) A bottle of gin, with a glass, labelled Inspiration.

(b) A pillory and a gallows, labelled Election.

(c) A satyr's head with clerical bands labelled Perfection.

Wesley and other Methodist preachers are charged in the poem with availing themselves of their character for sanctity to seduce their converts and turn their chapels into brothels.

1778

PERSONAL SATIRES

5497-5509

Series of Tête-à-Tête portraits.

5497 N° XXXIV. MISS D—LE.

N° XXXV THE WHIMSICAL LOVER.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Jan^y 1. 1778.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 625. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the amours of 'a professed voluptuary'. He is George James, Earl of Cholmondeley (1749-1827), see G. E. C., Complete Peerage. See No. 5911. Miss D. is the seduced and deserted daughter of a Surrey farmer.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$; $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5498 N° XXXVII. THE PIOUS MRS LEERWELL.

N° XXXVIII. THE PREDESTINED PARSON.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Jan. 17. 1778.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, ix. 675 (Supplement). Two bust portraits, the man in clerical gown and bands. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of T—y, a popular calvinistic preacher, evidently Toplady (1740-78). Mrs. L. is the widow of a rich tradesman.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5499 N° I. THE PERSUASIVE HOUSEKEEPER.

N° II. THE HEARTY ALDERMAN.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Feb. 1. 1778.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête Annexed; . . .'. Scandal about an alderman and his housekeeper. They are identified by H. Bleackley as Alderman John Hart, see City Biography, p. 61, and Hannah Hickman.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5500 N° IV. MISS C—LM—N.

N° V. THE ARTFUL LOVER.

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St Johns Gate, March 1. 1778

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Lord V— and Miss C—n, the daughter of an officer killed in the Seven Years' War. He is conjecturally identified by H. Bleackley as Lord Villiers.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$; $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5501 N° VII. MISS SP—C—R.

N° VIII. THE PLIANT PREMIER.

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate, April 1st 1778.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 121. Two bust portraits in oval frames. One (r.) that of Lord North, facing T.Q. to the l. wearing his ribbon and star. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. The account of North as minister is favourable on the whole. He is said to visit Miss S., one of the most beautiful 'demi-reps' with a villa at Blackheath. For Charlotte Spencer see H. Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, pp. 209-10.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5502 N° X. MISS L—N

N° XI. THE MARTIAL LOVER.

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate May 1. 1778

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Viscount Petersham, 1753-1829 (Earl of Harrington, 1779), Lieut.-Col. of the 3rd Foot Guards and A.D.C. to Burgoyne in 1777. G.E.C., Complete Peerage. He is said to have established Miss L—n, the destitute orphan of a doctor, as his mistress.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5503 N° XIII. MRS P—T

N° XIV. THE CAUTIOUS COMMANDER.

Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate June 1. 1778.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames. The man wears armour with a ribbon and star. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the Cautious Commander and Mrs Pr—tt'. An account of Lord Amherst (1717-97). He is said to have relieved the necessities of Mrs. P., the wife of a half-pay lieutenant, from charitable motives, to have fallen in love with her and to have procured the husband a captain's commission on condition that he gave up all claim to her.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5504 N° XVI. MISS SP—KS.

N° XVII. ADMIRAL STERNPOST.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate July 1. 1778.*Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 289. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. Account of an admiral who distinguished himself in the war of the Austrian Succession and the Seven Years' War. Perhaps Lord Hawke (1705-81). His supposed mistress is a Miss Sparks.Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5505 N° XIX. THE PAPHIAN VOTARY.

N° XX THE SUCCESSFUL GALLANT.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate, July [sic. i.e. Aug.] 1. 1778.*Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of 'M^r B—d', William Bird, and of his amours with Harriet Lambe, Lady Archer, and Grace Dalrymple Elliott; and of Anne, daughter of Lord Bute, wife of Hugh Lord Percy. Percy had begun a suit for divorce in May 1778 which was obtained in March 1779. H. Walpole, Letters, x. 232.Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442.

5506 N° XXII MISS S—TT

N° XXIII THE BRILLIANT BARONET.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate. Sept 1. 1778.*Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Sir Michael le Fleming, of Rydal, Westmorland, who is said to 'give the ton in dress and equipage' and of his gallantries. Miss (or Mrs.) Scott is said to be the daughter of a clergyman, who had eloped with a recruiting officer, had been deserted, and had become a courtesan.Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$; $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5507 N° XXV. LA FEMME SANS SOUCI.

N° XXVI. THE LICENTIOUS LOVER.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate Oct 1. 1778.*Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 457. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the amours of a man of fortune whose extravagance has compelled him to sell 'his choice collection of paintings at B.'. The lady is the divorced Lady Grosvenor, 'sans souci' being an allusion to the villa of the Duke of Cumberland near Potsdam, cf. No. 4844, &c.Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5508 N° XXVIII. MISS B—S

N° XXIX. THE LIBERTINE LAD.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Novr I. 1778.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 513. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the extravagance and dissipation of Sir John Lade (1759-1838), nephew and ward of Thrale, now chiefly remembered for the prophetic verses written by Johnson on his coming of age. Boswell, Life, iv. 413. He married a woman of the town in 1789 and was a friend of the Prince of Wales. See G.E.C., Complete Baronetage, v. 109-10; Hayward, Life of Mrs Piozzi, i. 69. As the driver of a phaeton he is here said to rival Lord Molesworth. Miss B—s is a milliner's apprentice whose acquaintance Sir John made by the purchase of ruffles.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5509 N° XXXI. MISS C—LE.

N° XXXII. THE ADMIRABLE ADVOCATE.

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate
Decr I. 1778.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 569. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Alexander Wedderburn (1733-1805), afterwards Lord Loughborough. Miss C. is the daughter of a rich citizen who had been drugged and seduced by a peer.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5510 A SCHOOL OF ATHENS*T. O [Thomas Orde] invt & del^t J^s Bretherton f 3^d Jan^y 1778*

Engraving. A satire on Cambridge. The interior of a large room showing two sash windows, through one of which (l.) is seen part of the south side of the Senate House, through the other, the tower of St. Mary's Church, both drawn with topographical accuracy. Between the two windows is a niche in which is a statue of Athene holding her shield; in her outstretched l. hand is held out a laurel wreath towards some men beneath her who have entered from a door on the r. Her owl sits beside her on the stump of a tree. Beneath the title is etched, dedicated to the illustrious Inheritress of her fame in Professors of Arts & Sciences. the University of Cambridge O Matre pulchra Filia pulchrior! Immediately below Athene, and concealing the lower part of her draperies a man stands on a high rostrum covered with a cloth. He wears a furred academic gown and bands, and holds out a rolled document in his r. hand. Immediately below the rostrum a man, not in academic dress, is seated at a table writing. He is in profile to the r. looking towards four men who have entered from the r. through an open door, apparently 'professors of Arts and Sciences', whose names he is recording. The foremost of these is a dancing-master who stands holding a bow in his r. hand, a kit or small fiddle in his l. Next is a rough-looking elderly man wearing a round hat and long coat. The other two are middle-aged, one holding his hat and a cane and accompanied by a dog. On the l., and behind the chair of the man writing, are two other 'professors': a fencing-master, wearing a fencing-jacket, stands in back view, turning his head in profile to the r., his l. arm raised, holding his foil horizontally. Behind him stands a thin man wearing a hat, one hand in his waistcoat pocket, the other thrust in his waistcoat.

All the figures are probably portraits. The man on the rostrum resembles the later portrait of William Cooke, D.D., Provost of King's College from 1772. The room is evidently in the old Provost's Lodge, probably that shown at the east end of the Chapel in fig. 55, Willis and Clark, Architectural Hist. of Cambridge, 1886, i. 548. Cf. Bunbury's satire on Cambridge, No. 4729 (1777), where Athene's owl is flying away from the town.

18 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 24 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

B.M.L. K. 8 (100).

5511 A GROSS ADJUTANT.

Coxheath fecit [? Bunbury.]

Pub^d Nov 10. 1778 by M Darly Strand.

Engraving. (Coloured impression.) An enormously fat and short man dressed as a military officer rides a white horse in profile to the l. His seat is grotesque. Beneath the title is etched Saddle White SURRE[Y] for the Field to morrow. King Rich^d 3^d.

The militia camp at Coxheath near Maidstone was formed in 1778 as part of the defences against France and as a centre for recruits.

Probably a caricature of Captain Grose (1731?–91), captain and adjutant of the Surrey militia from 1778 till his death. For Grose see No. 4577, &c.; for Coxheath No. 5523, &c. See also No. 5787.

5511 A Re-issued (n.d.) with an altered publication line: Printed for Robert Sayer, N^o 53, Fleet Street. In book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

7 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5512 [CHEVALIÈRE D'EON.]¹

[1778]

Engraving. Frontispiece from 'An Epistle from Mademoiselle D'Eon to the Right Honourable L——d M——d [Mansfield] . . . on his Determination in regard to her Sex. 1778' (B.M.L. 11631. g. 31/12). Two figures stand joined together back to back, each with one leg only: d'Eon as a man is in profile to the l., wearing a military hat, holding out a large sabre in his r. hand, his leg in a spurred jack-boot. D'Eon as a woman is in profile to the r. dressed in the fashion of the day, wearing a large feathered hat, and holding a fan. Each face has a large circular patch on the cheek. Beneath the design is engraved:

*Hail! Thou Production most uncommon, Woman half-man and man half-Woman!
vid: Epistle.*

For Mansfield's decision in the King's Bench that D'Eon was a woman, see No. 5427.

7 × 5 $\frac{3}{16}$ in. (pl.).

¹ Written on the print in an old hand.

5513-5522

Prints from Darly's series, continued from No. 5451.

5513 43. V. 2. THE LAST DROP.Pub. by M Darly Jan^y 19. 1778 Strand.

Engraving. A lady seated in profile to the r. by a small rectangular table drinks from a wine-glass; on the table is a bottle labelled Brandy. Her hair is in the grotesque pyramid then fashionable, decorated with ostrich feathers and large curls. She appears unconscious of a skeleton which stands beside her, threatening her with an arrow held in its raised l. arm. On the wall behind the figures are two W.L. portraits; one of a man, full-face, standing by a tree, holding a spear; he is dressed as a cavalier, wearing a feathered cap and short cloak; the other is of a stout man of plebeian appearance, in profile to the r., holding up a foaming pot of beer and a smoking pipe. Cf. No. 5172.

12 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.5514 45. V. 2. LADY PELLICE, AND MR MUFF.H. J. (Monogram.). . . M Darly . . . Strand Jan^y 20. 1778.¹

Engraving. A man and woman in conversation. The lady (l.) stands in profile to the r., the man stands facing to the front, but turns his head towards her. The hands of both are in a muff, that of the man being the larger. She wears the high-dressed hair with large side curls then fashionable, but decorated only with a ribbon. She wears a hooded cloak with a border of fur, below which appears her dress. The man's wig has side curls which resemble those worn by the lady.

12 × 8 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.5515 V. 2. 60. SETTling THE ODD TRICK.M. M.Pub. by M Darly N^o 39 Strand Feb. 26. 1778

Engraving. Four ladies sit at a square card-table; their cards have been thrown down face-upwards. The two who sit in profile to l. and to r. are quarrelling violently; one (r.) points at her vis-à-vis in anger; the other (l.) has seized a candlestick and is about to hurl it at her partner, the lighted candle falls to the ground behind her shoulder; both are elderly harridans. Between them on the farther side of the table the player appears amused; of her partner only the back is visible. The enormous pyramids of hair elaborately decorated in different ways play an important part in the design, as does the carpet, which is of an elaborate acanthus scroll design. The card-players sit in upright chairs with carved backs. On the wall is an oval mirror, on each side of which is a landscape. The dresses show the fashions of the day, the hair-dressing much caricatured, cf. No. 5370, &c.

Copy by F. W. Fairholt in Wright, Caricature History of the Georges, 1868, p. 256.

12 $\frac{5}{16}$ × 9 in.

¹ This line is scarcely legible; Miss Banks has written on the print '1777 or near that time'.

5516 V. 2. 62. THE IMPUDENT HAIR DRESSER DETECTED OR THE FRIZUER REWARDED*Pub. by M Darly N^o 39 Strand March 11. 1778.*

Engraving. The interior of a well-furnished room. A plainly dressed man, wearing a hat, threatens a hairdresser with his fist and a shovel taken from the fireplace; he is being restrained by a neatly dressed maid-servant. A lady (r.) seated in an arm-chair watches the scene complacently. The hairdresser looks towards a dog (l.) which is biting his leg. In his hand is a tress of long false hair, a pair of curling-tongs is pushed through the button-holes of his coat, in his hair or wig are stuck hairpins and a comb. The lady's hair is dressed in fashionable pyramid decorated with feathers, lace, and large curls. Over the chimney-piece, partly visible on the r., is a portrait of a lady in Elizabethan dress. The high, panelled door (l.) has a carved lintel. An elaborately patterned carpet covers the floor. Similar in manner to No. 5522. For satires on hair-dressing see No. 5370, &c.

12 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{16}$ in.5517 THE VILLAGE BARBER.H. J.Pub^d M Darly 39 Strand. June 1. 1778

Engraving. A barber is dressing the hair of a woman seated in profile to the r. An enormous heart-shaped cushion has been fixed on her head, and the barber, standing on tip-toe, is fixing to it a tress of false hair. The woman's own hair hangs loosely over her shoulders and forehead; in her hand is another piece of false hair. A woman wearing a cap and apron holds a mirror. On a round table are a number of curls and hair-pins. Wigs hanging on the wall and a barber's block indicate a barber's shop. On a shelf is a book inscribed Rev^d M^r Spintext, implying that the barber is also a minister or local preacher; he is neatly dressed and wears a check apron. In the wall is a small lattice-window; a vase of flowers stands on the sill. For satires on hair-dressing see No. 5370, &c.

12 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 8 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.5518 V. 2. 68. MISS^s DUMPLIN DUCKTAIL AND TITTUP RETURN'D FROM WATERING.Pub by M Darly N^o 33 Strand July 13. 1778.

Engraving. Three women (caricatured) walking in profile to the r. beside the sea or a lake. Their head-dresses are caricatures of the prevailing fashion. The foremost walks with a closed parasol on a long stick like a shepherdess's crook; in her r. hand is a small bag or basket. Her hair is in a pyramid, with curls, on it is a lace cap with lappets, and a flat hat trimmed with ribbons and feathers. She is followed by a very thin woman, whose pyramid is decorated with more curls but with a smaller cap and hat, she holds a closed fan; behind walks a short stout woman with a frizzed wig bound by a ribbon. The dresses show the prevailing fashion for skirts, straight in front, puffed out at the back and showing the ankles.

Miss Tittup, a character in Garrick's Bon Ton, was played by Eliza

Farren, 1777, D.N.B. The tall thin lady is perhaps intended for Miss Farren; there is a certain resemblance to later caricatures by Gillray. For hair-dressing see No. 5370, &c.

$8\frac{5}{16} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5519 V. 2. 70. THE METHODIST TAYLOR CAUGHT IN ADULTERY [? 1778]

Engraving. Another version in reverse of No. 4248, pub. Sayer, 21 July 1768. It appears to belong to Darly's series, but is without publication line.

$8\frac{5}{16} \times 12\frac{11}{16}$ in.

5520 THE TALLE-HO PARSON GOING IN TO COVER

Pub by M Darly Oct^r 18. 1778. 39 Stra[nd.]¹

Engraving. A clergyman in hat, bands, and gown, under which appear spurred boots, walks between two watchmen, each with a lantern and staff. The three walk arm-in-arm in profile to the l., the watchmen supporting the parson, towards a door, the upper part of which is formed of open bars, through which appear the heads and shoulders of men and women, evidently the entrance to the parish 'cage' or lock-up. Outside it is a whipping-post and stocks, the post inscribed Winning Post.

$8\frac{3}{8} \times 12$ in.

5521 V. 2. 76. MISS. BUM—BARDINI.

H. J. fec.

Nov^r 5. 1778. M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. The back view of a short stout woman who stands in front of an oval mirror in which her face is reflected. She wears a cap with lappets and a flowered dress. The mirror is hung above a marble-topped console; on each side of it hangs a portrait of a lady. A carpet with a bold design covers the floor.

$12\frac{3}{8} \times 8\frac{9}{16}$ in.

5522 JOSEPH AND HIS MISTRESS [c. 1778]

Engraving. Margins have been cut off, but this appears to belong to the series published by Darly. A fashionably dressed woman seated on an upholstered settee attempts to pull towards her a footman who resists her with an expression of distress. The scene is one corner of a lofty room with panelled walls and a painted ceiling, probably domed. A decanter of wine and two glasses are on a circular table (l.). A dog barks at the man. An elaborately patterned carpet covers the floor. The lady is fashionably dressed and of meretricious appearance.

'The salacious Lady Harrington' is written on the mount of the print. She was the subject of many lampoons and satires, see No. 4903. Apparently based on Fielding's Joseph Andrews. Similar in manner to No. 5516.

$12 \times 8\frac{7}{8}$ in.

¹ Margin cut off.

[A SATIRE ON SCOTCH MILITARY PERSONS.]

See No. 4779—1 Jan. 1778

Mr R. S. inv^t W. H [Humphrey] fec. Pub. W. Humphrey.An illustration to Anstey's Bath Guide (Lady Pandora MacScurvy and General Sulphur).5523 A TRIP TO COCKS HEATH.I. M. Inv. [? J. Mortimer].W. H. Fe. [? Humphrey]Pub. Oct. 28. 1778 by W. Humphrey.

Engraving. A crowd of visitors, chiefly women of disreputable appearance, making their way (r. to l.) towards the camp at Coxheath, near Maidstone. The foremost is a courtesan wearing a military hat and coat carried on the shoulders of an officer; she points to the camp with a spear; a dog barks at her. Next, a woman leads by the arm a fat, elderly and amorous officer, of very unmilitary appearance, who holds his sword in his hand. Two elderly women, evidently brothel-keepers, are conspicuous; one holding crutches is being pushed in a wheel-barrow by a decrepit old man. Facing the crowd (l.) are three cannon, inscribed 9 P.; 9 Pounder and G.R. 12 Pounder, the last is being inspected by three women. In the background (l.) a cannon is being fired, and men are being drilled beside a group of tents. Behind the walkers (r.) three women are driving rapidly in a two-wheeled chair drawn by two horses towards the camp.

The first of many satires on the militia-camps formed in 1778 in connexion with recruiting and as part of the defences of the country. Coxheath was visited by the king on 3 Nov., great crowds assembling. London Chronicle, 3-5 Nov. 1778. 'Camp News' was a considerable item in the newspapers and 'the Camp' by Tickell, an entertainment, was produced at Drury Lane, 15 Oct. 1778, and was very popular for two seasons, its chief feature being a realistic representation of Coxheath Camp by Louthembourg. For camps see Nos. 3752, 4563, 4760, 5525, 5600-2, 5620, 5773, 5775, 5778, 5794, 5950, 5953, 6156.

Attributed to Gillray (Grego, Gillray, p. 27), but perhaps after a drawing by Mortimer. Similar in manner to Nos. 5524, 5609.

 $9\frac{1}{4} \times 13\frac{7}{16}$ in.5524 SQUIRE THOMAS JUST ARRIV'D.Publish'd Nov^r 18th 1778 by W. Humphrey.

Engraving. Street scene; a fat man, plainly dressed and wearing riding-boots, is being dragged into a brothel by three fashionably dressed courtesans. One kisses him, one pulls, the third pushes him towards an open door (l.) over which is a projecting sign, a calf's head in a dish inscribed The Old Calfs Head, Lodgings for Single Men by S^b Fleecem. The door lintel is inscribed Kind & Tender Usage. The man holds out his hands in protest with an expression of dismay. A dwarfish ragged girl (r.) appears to be picking his pocket. A fat old procuress (l.) looks on laughing. A small dog (l.) and the overturned equipment of a shoe-black (r.) add to the confusion. In the background two men are in conversation, one smoking. After the title is engraved, Touch me not! I'm still a Maid.

Attributed to Gillray (Grego, Gillray, p. 27); evidently by the same artist as No. 5523.

 $12\frac{5}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5525 THE WARLEY HEROES OR THE LIGHT INFANTRY ON FULL MARCH. [c. 1778]London, Publish'd & Sold by W. Humphrey.

Engraving. Two couples of very obese soldiers march in profile to the r. behind their equally obese leader. All carry muskets without bayonets and are dressed alike in plumed hats, coats with military facings and epaulettes, ruffled shirts and half-boots; their leader wears a sash.

The two camps on Warley Common, Essex, and Coxheath, Kent, were much visited by the civilian population, and these visits and the militia were a popular subject of satire, see No. 5523, &c. George III stayed with Lord Petre, see No. 5489, when visiting Warley Camp in Oct. 1778. The camp is described, with an engraving of 'General Parker exercising the Army', in the Westminster Magazine, 1779, p. 377.

8 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 13 in.5526 A NEW ACADEMY FOR ACCOMPLISHMENTSPublished as the Act directs May 7th 1778, by Mrs Humphrey, St Martins Lane.*

Engraving. A lady, seated (l.), watches through a lorgnette two small dogs dancing on their hind legs, while a foppishly dressed man, evidently a French dancing-master (r.), plays the fiddle. One dog is a grotesquely clipped poodle, the other appears to be a King Charles. A cockatoo watches from a perch. The lady is fashionably dressed and wears a hat trimmed with feathers. The room is indicated by a looped-up curtain and an ornate mirror with candle sconces hung on the wall by a bow of ribbon.

12 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.5527 DRAWN BY MISS CALASH 1778.Pub: as the Act directs. Oct' 14 by W. Richardson N^o 68 High Holborn*

Engraving. Lady, standing in profile to the l., has drawn up, by a cord attached to a pulley, an enormous calash hood extending from above her high-dressed hair to her waist. She is fashionably dressed. For the calash see No. 5434, &c.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xxvii.

12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 7 $\frac{1}{8}$ in. (pl.).5528 LAUGH & GROW FAT.

[W. Austin.]

Published as y^e act Directs November. 1778

Engraving. One well-dressed man is being thrashed by another to the amusement of the bystanders. The victim is running away with clasped hands and an expression of rage, his hat and cane are on the ground; his enemy (r.) raises his cane to strike. A woman (r.) of grotesque appearance, probably a fish-wife, grins and points at the fray; on her head is a large basket in which are a dog and a child who waves his hat in delight. Behind her appears the profile of an elderly man wearing spectacles. On the l. is another group of spectators: a milk-girl, carrying pails attached to a yoke on her shoulders; a fat man stands behind her, his hands on her shoulders. A third man is faintly indicated behind them. In front is a little chimney-sweep's boy, holding up his brush and shovel, with him is a ragged boy wearing the large tie-wig which was worn by sweeps on May Day. A dog is barking. In a scroll on the upper part of the design is etched: Ha Ha Ha I Can't help Laughing, No No nor You For Every Body Laughs at Worstead Stockings Mi . . .¹, y^e Acknowledged Coward What! retreat at Noon Day & Suffer him Self to be Cane^d thus in y^e heart of y^e City of London O Terrible! a Merchant too & a Patriot A disgrace to y^e Names ha ha ha he he he keep it Up My Dear Boy keep it up [word erased] Dedicat^d to Every Soul that has a Spark of Fire in him in College or Out by their Humble Servant Brother Bamboo. P.S. If this Modest Patriot return y^e Complement y^e Public will be favo^d with a Companion to this Print. A coward O dreadful buy & stick it up for y^e joke sake. Price only 1 shilling.

9 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 15 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5529 BLANK THE TAYLOR

E. Martin inv^t

J. F. Martin Sculp

publish^d Decem^r the 8. 1778

Engraving (stipple). The interior of a squalid room. A tailor seated cross-legged on a table, scissors and iron beside him, threading a needle, a garment on his lap. Under the table, on a low plank bed a burly infant, too large for its bed, is asleep. A flight of stairs (r.) leads directly from the room, showing that it is a garret. Two women of low type leer into the room through an open doorway, one of whom, seated on the stairs, holds a glass, indicating gin. The tailor, though ragged, is of a more refined type. Garments hang on a line across the room. A fire burns in the grate; tea-things and half a loaf are on a stool.

7 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5530 [COURT OF EQUITY OR A CONVIVIAL CITY MEETING ✓

Rob^t Dighton Pinxit Rob^t Laurie Fecit

Publish^d Novr 1st 1778 by John Smith Cheapside London.]¹

Mezzotint. Proof before letters. The interior of a club room at the Globe in Fleet Street, showing the l. and back walls. Along the walls are oblong tables, behind which most of fifteen guests are seated. The chairman (l.) is seated in an ornate chair between two windows, the chair ornamented with a coat of arms which is repeated in a frame above his head: above a chevron is a punch-bowl with bottle and glass, below, a pair of scales. The motto, which enlaces two cornucopias, is Mirth with Justice. Five other framed coats of arms, probably those of similar clubs, and an ornate candle sconce decorate the back wall.

The persons are well-characterized portraits. The chairman is 'Hurford, the Guildhall orator' (William Hurford, Deputy of Castlebaynard Ward). On his r., and on the extreme l. are Wright, distiller in Fleet Street, and Hamilton, clerk to William Woodfall, printer, holding the Morning Chronicle. Opposite the latter sits Smith the printseller. On the chairman's l. are (l. to r.), Lamb, silversmith in Fetter Lane; Clark, sausage maker; Stephenson, an attorney; Clark, a bricklayer in Shoe Lane; Russell, a broker of Harp-Alley; Good, the auctioneer; Thorn; Dighton, the artist, on the extreme r. In the foreground (r.) by a small table sits Dighton's father; between the two Dightons is a man reading the Morning Post. In front of him and facing the chairman stands Towse of Vauxhall, speaking, pipe in his l. hand, r. hand thrust in his waistcoat. Pipes, glasses, pots, papers of tobacco, and a punch-bowl are on the tables. Tom Thorpe, of the Globe Tavern, advances in the middle of the room, carrying a punch-bowl.

¹ The inscription is taken, as are the names, from Chaloner Smith. On the B.M. impression is written in a contemporary hand, 'Court of Equity or Convivial City Meeting Published as the Act directs by J. Smith Cheapside 1779.'

For the convivial tavern-clubs of the period see Brasbridge, Fruits of Experience, 1824, pp. 33 ff. He enumerates habitués of the Globe Tavern in Fleet Street who include Archibald Hamilton the printer 'with a mind fit for a Lord Chancellor', and William Woodfall. Thorpe, a Deputy Alderman, keeper of the Globe, was 'too convivial and too liberal to make it anything but a losing concern'. Reproduced, A. E. Richardson, Georgian England, 1931, p. 22.

Chaloner Smith, ii, p. 803.

$12\frac{1}{16} \times 15\frac{7}{8}$ in.

A TOUR TO FOREIGN PARTS.

See No. 4732—11 Mar. 1778

J. Bretherton after Bunbury.

5531 THE BLACK AND WHITE SCUFFLE, OR BARBER AND CHIMNEY-SWEEPER AT FISTY-CUFFS. 221.

Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map and Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard London. Published as the Act directs, 1 Jan. 1778.

Engraving. Street scene. A barber (l.) and a chimney-sweep are fighting; the barber's dress is spotted with black from the sweep's blows, that of the sweep is marked with white spots caused by hair powder. A girl with a basket of lemons slung round her neck stands behind the barber holding out half a lemon; a dog is biting his leg. Two of the sweep's climbing boys are enjoying the scene; one, seated on the ground (l.), is putting on a large wig which has been taken from an open box inscribed Alderman Sapsull. A baker (r.) with a large basket of loaves on his shoulders looks on in amusement. A man and woman from a neighbouring tavern also watch the fight with amusement, the man holds a wine bottle, and holds out a glass to the combatants. On the tavern wall is inscribed Punch in Large Quantities and Hollands Gin and Roman Purl. Its sign is a bull's head, beneath which is the name Ben Boniface. A chequered board by the door indicated that ale is sold. No. 221 of a series.

$7\frac{1}{4} \times 10\frac{7}{8}$ in.

Nine prints from the series of mezzotints published by Carington Bowles.¹

MISS WICKET AND MISS TRIGGER. (370)

After Collet.

See No. 4555—1 Jan. 1778

Reproduced Paston, Pl. cviii.

A reduced copy (276) 1 Jan. 1778.

¹ Nos. 4557, 4561 have the imprint of Bowles and Carver.

5532 A MORNING VISIT—OR THE FASHIONABLE DRESSES
FOR THE YEAR 1777. (373)

Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Publish'd as the Act directs, 1 Jan. 1778.

Mezzotint. A lady advances into a breakfast parlour wearing an enormous calash or hood drawn over her pyramid of hair, on which is a cap of muslin and lace. She wears a short cloak over her dress, and carries a cylindrical reticule ornamented with bows in her l. hand. She holds out her hand towards her hostess (l.), who runs forward to meet her holding out both hands. Behind and between them is a young man seated on a settee, holding a gun and wearing a three-cornered hat and top-boots; he looks at the visitor's head-dress. Behind (r.), a maid-servant carrying a round tray with tea-things follows the visitor into the room. The hostess wears a hat tilted forwards over her high-dressed hair, showing clusters of large curls. At the back of the hat is a large bunch of feathers. She stands between a small rectangular table, on her r., and the fireplace, where a kettle is boiling. The room is panelled; a candle-sconce and mirror hangs on the wall. For the calash hood see No. 5434, &c.

Reproduced, M. C. Salaman, The Old Engravers of England, 1906, p. 174, with the title, The Spruce Sportsman: or Beauty the best shot (1780). 13 × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

THE MANCHESTER HERO . . . (381) See No. 4556—[1778]

After Collet.

A satire on the battalion raised voluntarily by Manchester on the news of Saratoga, see No. 5470.

ABELARD AND ELOISA. (382) See No. 4557—[1778]

THE PRETTY BAR MAID. (384) See No. 4558—[1778]

After Collet.

Reproduced, A. L. Simon, Bottlescrew Days, 1926, p. 38.

THE SAILOR'S PRESENT—OR, THE JEALOUS CLOWN. (385)
See No. 4559—[1778]

After Collet.

THE PROVERB REVERS'D . . . (386) See No. 4560 [1778]

After Collet.

THE FEMALE FOX HUNTER. (387) See No. 4561—[1778]

After Collet.

AN OFFICER IN THE LIGHT INFANTRY, DRIVEN BY HIS LADY
TO COX-HEATH (391) See No. 4562—[1778]

After Collet. A reduced version (284) is No. 4563.

A satire on the militia, see No. 5523, &c.

Four similar mezzotints issued by other publishers.

5533 THE LOVELY SACARISSA, DRESSING FOR THE PANTHEON.

[P. Dawe?]

Publish'd Feby 24, 1778

Mezzotint. A stout, ugly, and elderly woman holds in her l. hand a barber's block, with a carved head in profile, on which is an elaborate pyramidal wig with ringlets. This she is covering with powder or flour from a dredger. Her hair is short and scanty; on her head is a very large black patch, two smaller ones are on her temple. She is dressed in undergarments, showing stays, and frilled petticoat over which is worn a pocket. Her dress, the bodice of which is almost cylindrical from its stiffening whalebone, is on a stool behind her. Her back is turned to the casement window (r.) through which look two grinning old women, wearing frilled muslin caps. Over the window, and over the wall on its l., is a heavily festooned curtain. Sacarissa stands facing a low rectangular table (l.), on which are a bottle and wine-glass, a candle (?) in a triangular shade, which is falling over, having apparently been knocked by the wig, patches, a comb, a paper, &c. Behind on the wall, in deep shadow, is a picture of a dome inscribed The Pantheon. Beneath the title is engraved, She Blooms in the Winter of her Days, like the Glastonbury Thorn.

The design appears to be based on that of No. 4647, Lady Drudger going to Ranelagh, 1772.

12 $\frac{11}{16}$ × 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

FATHER PAUL IN HIS CUPS, OR THE PRIVATE DEVOTION OF A CONVENT. See No. 4626—25 Apr. 1778

Pub. Sayer and Bennett.

A satire on monks. Eight lines from Sheridan's Duenna (first played 1775) engraved beneath the design.

A mezzotint of the same subject was issued by Carington Bowles 10 Nov. 1777, see No. 3782. Also a reduced version with the same date, see under No. 4626.

THE SLIP, OR MISS, WILLING TO BE IN THE TON.

See No. 4631—[c. 1778]

No publication line; a reduced version was published by Sayer and Bennett, 10 Aug. 1778. It appears to have been re-issued by Laurie and Whittle, who include it in their Catalogue, 1795, with the word 'fashion' substituted for ton.

THE UNWILLING BRIDEGROOM . . . See No. 4780—15 May 1778

Pub. W. Humphrey.

POLITICAL SATIRES

5534 SAWNEY'S DEFENCE AGAINST THE BEAST, WHORE,
POPE, AND DEVIL &c. &c.

Pub. as the Act directs 1 Ap. 1779

Engraving. An attack on the Catholic Relief Act of 1778. Symbolical figures are divided by the River Tweed. On the l. stands a Scottish soldier in Highland dress, in his cap is a thistle. His drawn sword is in his r. hand; he holds a shield inscribed Begone Judas, and a spear to which is attached a Union flag, inscribed, See Articles Union Claim of Rights Protestant Succession. He is saying, A Protestant Church & King I'll defend and For shame Brother John arise. Above his head is a symbolical figure inscribed The Church as in Rev. XII: a winged woman appearing from behind a sun sending out rays, beneath her feet is a crescent moon in which is a profile head. Two other figures stand on the Scottish side of the river: a man wearing a long gown and bands holds out a document inscribed Popesh Bill, he says, It's quite harmless now Sawney. A 'popish' bishop wearing a mitre surmounted by a cross stands behind him, slipping into his hand a money-bag inscribed 140,000, and saying No Faith keep' with Heritiek. A mountainous horizon indicates Scotland.

On the other side of the Tweed (r.) the forces of Rome are triumphant. Jⁿ Bull lies prostrate on his back, his hands shackled; a seven-headed monster on which rides a woman holding out a chalice tramples on him. John Bull is saying, Take care brother Sawney he took the advantage of me. The seven heads of the 'Beast of Rome' are saying, Fetter Sawney; Fire & Faggot; Burn your Bibles; We sit in the Place of God; To give pardon for broken Oaths; Monks Friar^s Jesuits fill the land, and (this head turning towards the woman on the monster's back), Madam Sawney has taken the Alarm. The woman, who is the 'Whore of Babylon', is dressed in the fashion of the day to represent a courtesan; she says, Lead on my Lord; by her chalice is engraved, Purgatory; works of Supererogation; Transubstantiation; Indulgencies. A man wearing a ribbon and star holds the beast by a scarf round its neck; in his r. hand he holds out towards Sawney a pair of shackles like those worn by John Bull. He tramples on a tattered flag inscribed Union which lies on the ground, its staff beneath John. He is saying, That hot headed Scot will spoil my Plot.

Behind kneels the Pope, in profile to the r., wearing his triple crown, keys and a cross hang from his girdle. He says I absolve The [sic] from the breach of thy Oath, showing that the man holding the Beast is the king, the words being an allusion to his coronation oath, of which so much was to be heard in relation to Catholic Relief.¹ A flying demon points down at the king, over whose head he holds a crown, saying Haman was but a Fool to Him.

¹ Cf. An Heroic Epistle to an Unfortunate Monarch, 1779 (an imitation of Mason), ll. 195-8:

Proceed, great Sir! and, breaking all restraint,
Embrace the scarlet whore, and be a Saint.
Sworn to maintain th' establish'd Church advance
The cross of Rome, the miracles of France. . . .

The proposal to pass a Bill to extend the provisions of the Catholic Relief Act of May 1778 to Scotland led to organized and violent rioting in Edinburgh, 1 Feb., and in Glasgow on 3 Feb. 1779, see Nos. 5548[9], 5643. The rioters were pacified by a proclamation from the Provost and magistrates that the obnoxious Bill was 'totally laid aside'. London Chronicle, 6-9 Feb. 1779.

One of a number of satires, directed against the Catholic Relief Act, which accompanied the active propagandist efforts of the Protestant Association in pamphlets and in the newspapers, see Nos. 5489, 5548, 5643, 5669, 5670, 5671, 5672, 5679, 5680, 5681, 5694, 5702, 5840, 5841. Cf. also Nos. 5633, 5638, 5649, 5667. John Bull is invited to imitate Sawney and obtain the withdrawal of Catholic Relief by direct action, cf. also No. 5540. The 'Beast' and the 'Whore' are in the tradition of a long series of No-Popery satires founded on the curious interpretation of Revelation, xvii. 1-6, see, e.g., No. 378 (1643), 5702, 5712, and cf. Blake's water-colour of the Whore of Babylon, 1809, in the Print Department (reproduced, Figgis). 6¼ × 12¼ in.

5535 THE SINKING FUND.

London. Publish'd as the Act directs 9th April 1779 by Robert Wilkin-son, at N^o 58 in Cornhill.

Engraving. The interior of a pawnbroker's shop. Behind a counter (l.) an old man wearing a cap and spectacles is bargaining with a customer over a watch. On the wall above his head is inscribed Money lent by Judas Gripe. The customer, a well-dressed man, leans on the counter. Next him is a young woman holding a garment which she intends to pawn. Behind her a man standing on tip-toe reaches over her head to offer the pawnbroker a wig. An elderly and ragged woman is counting the coins she has received. A man (r.) in profile to the r. has just taken the buckles off his shoes, his l. foot raised on a stool. Behind the figures and against the wall at r. angles to the counter is a large cupboard, the upper part fronted with panes of glass; behind this are many pawned articles including a number of watches, books, a violin, a sword, jugs, bowls, a barber's bowl, a hat. Inside the counter, which is hollow, are rolls of material.

A satire on the poverty and distress caused by the war and taxation, cf. No. 5548 [12].

8½ × 11½ in.

5536 A FRONTISPEICE TO ADMIRAL KEPPELS TRYAL

Drawn by Capⁿ Bailly of the Porcupine Engraved by Christian Vincent. Portsmouth Publish'd April 12 1779 & Sold at the Printing Office N. 3 Walker Court Berwick Street Soho London.

Engraving. Six medallions arranged in three pairs:

[1.] (l.) The figure of Fame blowing her trumpet and holding out a laurel wreath; she flies over a number of ships in full sail. Round the medallion is inscribed Great is the Truth and it shall prevail. Beneath the design, Admiral Keppel Honorably Aquited From A False and Malicious Accusation By A Court Martial And His Claim To Victory Established Feb^r 11th MDCCCLIX [sic].

[2.] (r.) A winged female figure holds a wreath over a bust portrait of Keppel. An Ensign flag inscribed Vice of the Blue is held downwards concealing her feet. Round the medallion is inscribed Hon. Augustus Keppel. Beneath the design is etched:

*See Victory is Not Compleat
The Vice has Crippled Both her Feet.*

[3.] (l.) A thin man in the dress of a naval officer holds out his hand as if confirming an assertion; round his neck is slung a large book inscribed Log. Round the medallion is Sir H—s [Hugh's] Privy Councillor; beneath the design is 'Be So Good To Explain What you Mean By A Rumour You Never Heard Off'. P. 47.

Beneath this medallion is etched, within a border:

*Pox On This Log Tis Such a Clog
On A Free Swearer's Conscience
Twill Make him Stare Swear and Forswear
And Spout Ridiculous Nonsense*

[4.] (r.) Another thin naval officer holding out a broken sword (?) in his r. hand; in his l. are pages of a book, inscribed Log Book. Behind him the buildings of a town are faintly indicated, inscribed Coventry. Round the medallion is Sir H— Himself. Under the design is, 'We Only Waited Sir Hugh Pallisers Coming-Down to Re-Attack The French' p. 142.

Beneath the medallion is etched, within a border:

*With Marling Spike I Knot and Splice
With Log Book Vampt Up Wondrous Nice
With H—ds [Hoods] Orations And Advice
Keppel Die And Triumph Vice*

[5.] (l.) A naval officer is violently kicking a book inscribed Log Book Formidable; three leaves have fallen from it. Round the medallion is I Hold A Ships Log Book Sacred and They Kick Them About the Orlop. Beneath the design is inscribed 'How Came Those Three Leaves Cut Out of This Book From the xxv To The xxviii'. Page. 70.

[6.] (r.) A naval officer standing between two chairs. He leans on the back of one (l.) inscribed Formidable; his l. hand is on his forehead as if perplexed. The other chair (r.) is inscribed Fox. Round the medallion is Fox Cheerd The Formidable First. Beneath the design is 'Being On The Forecastle Can You Say There Was No Cheer From The Poop or Quarter Deck of The Formidable' p. 78.

This illustrates the proceedings at the court martial (7 Jan.—11 Feb. 1779) on Keppel for the action off Ushant, 27 July 1778, on the application of Sir Hugh Palliser, his Vice-Admiral, here accused of preventing Keppel from achieving a complete victory. The quotations (not always textually accurate) are taken from the folio Proceedings at Large of the Court-Martial . . . published by Almon. In No. 3 Palliser's 'Privy Councillor' is Captain Alexander Hood, captain of the Robuste, in whose Log Book alterations had been made after it was known that it would be produced at the court martial. 'The Rumour' in question was that Keppel was to be tried. No. 4 relates to Rear-admiral Campbell's evidence on the failure of Palliser to obey the signal, so preventing any further attack on the French. No. 5 relates to the evidence that three leaves for the days between 25 and 28 July were cut out of the Log Book of the Formidable, Palliser's ship; Bazely, the captain on the Formidable, being asked to explain, answered 'I do not know, so help me God—I hold a ship's log book sacred'; adding that 'they kick them [a ship's rough log book] about the orlop'. No. 6 relates to evidence on communications between the Fox frigate and the Formidable.

The result of the court martial was a triumph for Keppel, the charge against him being pronounced 'malicious and ill-founded', and in popular opinion was a virtual conviction of Palliser, whose conduct was believed to be due to the influence of Sandwich. The London mob attacked the Admiralty, burnt Palliser in effigy and gutted his house.

The artist's name is perhaps an allusion to Captain Baillie of Greenwich Hospital and his exposure of Sandwich, see No. 5548 [4], [5]. He can hardly be Captain William Baillie, the well-known amateur engraver. The Porcupine appears in the Navy List of 1779 as a 16-gun sloop commanded by Captain Finch; in 1780 as a 6th rate (24 guns) commanded by the Hon. H. S. Conway.

The size of the plate and the page-references suggest that it was designed for Almon's Trial (B.M.L., 1890, d. 13). For the battle see Nos. 5484, 5486, 5626; for the court martial see T. Hutchinson, Diary and Letters, ii, 1886, pp. 242-3, 299; Walpole, Letters, x, pp. 350, 352, 359, 360, 362, 366, 377-83, 385-7, and Nos. 5537, 5538, 5548 [3], and for the blame incurred by Keppel Nos. 5570, 5626, 5650, 5658, 5992, &c. See also Mason's Ode to the Naval Officers of Great Britain, 1779. For the use of the log-book incident for electioneering see No. 5998. Cf. also No. 5999. 14×8 in.; medallions, 3 $\frac{5}{8}$ in. diam.

5537 [THE FATE OF PALLISER AND SANDWICH.] [1779]

Engraving. Title apparently cut off. A ship's-boat (c.) rowed by three sailors, they look exultingly at a gallows (r.) from which hang Sir Hugh Palliser and Sandwich. The coxswain and the man in the bows wave their hats. The boat flies a flag inscribed Keppel for Ever, surrounded by the words, mergas profundo pulchrior evenit. From the sea rises a Triton (l.) wearing a wreath, blowing his horn, and pointing to the gallows. This is in the form of a cross, from the l. end of the cross-piece, inscribed S^r H. Kn^t, Palliser hangs by a chain; from his shackled ankles hangs his Log Book; from his neck hang labels inscribed, 5 Lies (an allusion to his five charges against Keppel) and Formidable (the name of his ship). An arrow pierces him inscribed, Honours tendrest part. From the r. arm of the cross, inscribed Twitcher, hangs Sandwich; his shackled ankles are weighted by a book or block inscribed £400,000 Sunk. A label inscribed Essay on Woman is attached to his shoulders, a wine-glass appears to be stuck into the lapel of his coat, a cross hangs from a girdle round his waist, probably an allusion to the orgies of the brotherhood of Medmenham Abbey. A cross-piece on the top of the gallows is inscribed, Exitus acta probat; at the bottom is the date 1779. At its foot, under Sandwich, sits a courtesan holding a handkerchief to her eyes, above her is written Alass poor Kitty.

Above the boat, Lord North sits on a pile of clouds, holding in one hand his eye-glass, in the other a large book, the Art of Financing. The devil behind him, pointing to the gallows, says in his ear The Gibbet has got their Bodies my Boy their Hearts & Souls are mine.

Beneath the design is engraved:

They reign'd a while but 'twas not long Before from world to world they swung

*As they had turn'd from side to side
And as the Villains liv'd they dy'd.
Hudibras*

Keppel's court martial, see No. 5536, showed that in the action off Ushant, 27 July 1778, Palliser, his Vice-Admiral, had not obeyed Keppel's signal and that the log-book of his ship, the Formidable, had been altered. It was supposed that the political antagonism of Sandwich to Keppel was responsible for Palliser's inactivity. Palliser was tried by court martial, 12 Apr.–5 May 1779, and acquitted, though found 'reprehensible in not having acquainted the Admiral . . . of his distress . . .'. Sandwich's great unpopularity dated from the part taken by him in producing a copy of the Essay on Woman to furnish ground for action against Wilkes in the House of Lords; see No. 4066, &c. It was given fresh impetus by the court martial on Keppel. For Palliser see also No. 5705. For North's financial difficulties and expedients see Nos. 5243, 5541, 5542, 5543, 5548 [1], 5578, 5703, 5964, &c.

4 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 3 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5538 SAUNDERS' GHOST.

[c. 1779]

Engraving, beneath which verses are printed in two columns. Sir Hugh Palliser (r.) sits at a round table; a horned demon with its arm round his neck holds up a large scroll inscribed Five Charges against Keppel. On each side of him sits a man or demon paying out money on to the table: one is clothed in drapery covered with fleur-de-lys to imply that Palliser was in the pay of France at the Battle of Ushant. On the l. Britannia points out the scene to a companion who holds up his hands in horror. He wears a ribbon on which is inscribed, Sir Cha. Saund. She says to him, Was it for this you gave 5000£, alluding to a legacy of £5,000 left by Saunders (d. 1775) to Keppel. The verses Saunders Ghost, A Song to the Tune of "Welcome, Welcome, brother Debtor" are an imitation of Glover's 'Admiral Hosier's Ghost'. They begin,

"Haste thee! Saunders, England calls thee,
"Awhile these blest abodes resign;
"Treach'rous friends and foes conspiring
"Threat my darling son and thine.

That is, threaten Keppel, at this time very popular owing to the court martial on charges made by Palliser who was regarded as the tool of Sandwich. See Nos. 5536, 5537.

4 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. (pl.). Broadside, 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 8 in.

5539 SAWNEY IN THE BOG-HOUSE.

Publish'd 4th June 1779 by Mrs Holt N^o III Oxford Street London.

Engraving. (Coloured and uncoloured impressions.) A satire on the Scots; an imitation but not a copy of the satire with the same title, No. 2678, c. 1745, repeated in 1762, see No. 3988, which according to Angelo was by George Bickham. A Scot in Highland dress and wearing a feathered cap is seated in a latrine, his legs thrust down two holes in the board. He grasps in his l. hand a rolled document inscribed Act for [esta]blishing Popery. Behind him a stone wall is indicated on which is etched (l.) a thistle growing out of a reversed crown, inscribed Nemo me impune lacessit. On the r. and over Sawney's head is engraved:

*'Tis a bra' bonny seat, o' my saul, Sawney cries,
I never beheld sic before with me Eyes,
Such a place in aw' Scotland I never could meet,
For the High and the Low ease themselves in the Street.*

The thistle and the crown express the common accusation that the Scots were Jacobites. The 'Act for establishing Popery' is the Catholic Relief Act, against which there were deliberately instigated and serious riots in Edinburgh and Glasgow in Feb. 1779, see Nos. 5534, 5548, 5678. $12\frac{1}{2} \times 9$ in.

5540 THE BIRTH-DAY ODE.*

[c. June 1779]

As it was performed before his M——, on the 4th of June, By the Royal Band.

Engraving on a printed broadside. Three musicians and four vocalists perform the 'Birth-Day Ode'. The musicians read from a large book open on a table on the r., the score on the r. page; on the l., the Distresses of the Nation an Ode perform'd in honour of his Majesty's Birth Day. The centre figure, seated, plays with great vigour on a pair of kettle-drums; at his feet is a paper, inscribed To the Blessed Memory of Miss Ray. On his r. stands a violinist, Lord North; behind Sandwich is a flute-player, Lord George Germain, Secretary of State for the Colonies. Behind (l.) four men sing from a book which they hold open; the most prominent are a bishop (l.) holding a crozier, wearing on a medallion the arms of the City of London; and the singer on his r. who wears a furred civic gown, bands, and tie-wig. Beneath the design is etched First Viol: by L^d N[orth] Hautboy L^d: G. G[ermain] Kettle Drum L^d S[andwich] the Vocal parts by the B^p of L[ondon] & L^d M[ayor] &c. &c.

Beneath the plate is printed the Birth Day Ode in two columns:

I. STROPHE

*Now Caesar sits on Throne sublime
To snuff the Laureat's drousy Rhime
And take his annual Sleep in state,
To please the Slaves that round him wait;
Swift from the starry Courts above,
Descend some Dream, (for Dreams descend from Jove)
And to the Monarch's mental Ear
The wonders of his Reign declare:
While a grateful People's Voice,
Shall in choral Peals rejoice,
And to the Nations round proclaim,
CAESAR, VIRTUE, and WISDOM are the same.*

* 'As several spurious copies of the Birth-Day Ode have made their appearance in the News-papers, that the Public may be no longer deceived, they are here presented with the genuine Ode, as it was actually performed on the 4th of June.' [Original note.]

A bitterly ironical account of the achievements of the reign follows:

I. ANTISTROPHE

*And hark, the spectre speaks! — G——e
Attend, and N——h, and all your pliant Train,
To YOU her Blessings Britain owes
And yours the high Applause approving Heaven bestows.*

I. EPODE

*Hark, he sings the Caribb-War!
Brightest ray of Britain's Fame!*

II. STROPHE

*'Beyond the vast Atlantic Main
'What Myriads bless thy gracious Reign;
'To Jove their Prayers ascend, for thee,
'The Father of their Liberty!
'For thee their Prayers . . . Ah! why that Groan?
'Why trembles mighty CAESAR on his throne?'*

III. ANTISTROPHE

*'Hibernia, Britain's Sister-Isle,
'With equal Freedom soon shall smile;
'Taught by thy prudent Sway to know
'No Blessing rivals thee below.—
'And lo! (their worth in Luxury drown'd)
'While Caledonia's Chieftains kiss the Ground,
'Her humble Sons, an untam'd Race,
'Instinctive feel the Fire of Grace;*

II. EPODE

*'Gallia, hide thy recreant Head,
'Vain thy Arms, thy Craft as vain;
'Spight of the Snares, by treachery spread,
'Britain preserves [sic] her Empire o'er the Main!
'But ah how long!—in awful Gloom
'The Fates involve Britannia's Doom—
'Yet, ye who Courted CAESAR, hear!
'Perchance the Hour is nigh—Pursue
'Your Schemes, perchance 'tis fix'd that you
'The glorious wreath shall wear:
'His worth's the same in Jove's impartial Eyes,
'Who saves a sinking Empire or destroys.'*

FULL CHORUS

*Yes—we will our Schemes pursue,
We will the Wreath of Glory wear;
His Worth's the same in Jove's impartial Eyes,
Who saves a sinking Empire, or destroys.*

The date is probably that of the king's birthday (4 June 1779): it is evidently after the assassination of Martha Ray, Lord Sandwich's mistress, on 7 Apr. 1779, and probably before the rupture of relations with Spain on 16 June 1779. Lord Sandwich appears to have been a performer on the kettle-drums, Town and Country Magazine, xv. 9. The Lord Mayor, 1778-9, was Samuel Plumbe, very unpopular in the City as a Ministerialist, and reputed a miser, see No. 5617. Lowth, the Bishop of London, though a Privy Councillor, was not an active politician, but the bench of bishops was unpopular for its attitude to America, cf. Nos. 5492, 5553. The 'Caribb War' was an expedition against the Caribs of St. Vincent in 1772 which was denounced by the Opposition on 10, 12, and 15 Feb. 1773 as 'the extravagance of despatching 2,500 against 700 poor savages' (Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, i. 173-5). See also Parl. Hist. xviii. 722 ff. B. Edwards, History of the West Indies, 1793, i. 402-3. Cf. No. 5675. The No-Popery riots in Scotland, Feb. 1779, by Caledonia's 'humbler sons' are approved, as in No. 5534, &c. The drawing is good, and resembles that of Nos. 5573, 5577.

$5\frac{1}{16} \times 7\frac{7}{8}$ in. Broadside, $17\frac{1}{2} \times 10\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5541 BRITAIN'S STATE PILOT FOUNDERING ON TAXATION ROCK.

Stuart pinx^t Yanky fec^t

Published according to act of Parliament. June 23^d 1779, for J. Almon, in Piccadilly, London.

Engraving. A bear, with the face, ribbon, and star of Lord North, negligently holds the tiller of a boat which is foundering and driving upon rocks (r.). On the stern is a picture of Britannia seated with her spear and shield. On the top of the mast is a large thistle which is the centre of a broad streak of lightning and a black cloud; the sail is being blown from the boat. From the shore (l.) two figures point with scorn at the wreck: Spain wearing a cloak and ruff, and with the face of some bird, and France, dressed in the French fashion with feathered hat and bag-wig, and with the legs and feet of an ape. On the edge of the water squats a large frog smoking a long pipe.

Beneath the design is engraved, in continuation of the title, To the great Amusement of Lewis Baboon, Don Strut, & Nic Frog.

These names for France, Spain, and Holland are taken from Arbuthnot's celebrated pamphlet, Law is a Bottomless Pit; or the History of John Bull, 1712. A printed sheet pasted on the back of the print explains 'The hint of this print was borrowed from Gay's Fable of the Bear in a Boat'. The fable is printed at length. North is thus 'the self-deemed Machiavel at large' whose conceit and folly bring disaster. The names of the artists and the thistle indicate that disaster was planned by Bute and effected by Americans. For attacks on North's budgets see No. 5537, &c. One of many representations of the United Provinces as an unfriendly and complacent neutral, see No. 5557, &c.

$9\frac{1}{16} \times 12\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5542 AN HIROGLYPHIC [sic] EPISTLE FROM THE (DEVIL) TO LORD N . . . TH.

[23 June 1779]

Dublin printed for Will^m Allen N^o 88 Dame Street

A rebus, an engraved text in which words are represented by small etched objects. The letter is headed by etchings of the devil (l.), one of whose legs is a three-pronged fork, addressing an oval bust portrait of Lord North, headed Lord N . . . TH. The words enclosed in brackets are those which are represented by objects.

My D(ear) Ld

(Ewer) Pol—cal Con(duck)t h(ass) (knot) only made a (grate) Noise upon (ear)th (butt) has set (awl) Hell in an upr(oar). T(hare)s hardly a S(tête)(man) in the (plai)ce, and we have a good (man)y of them, but (looks) upon it (ass) uni(form). The o(pen)ing of (ewer) (last) Budget w(ass) in m(eye) o(pinion) a (mast)erstroke indeed (witch) (yew) may easily (mask) over with the Old Phrase Pro Bono Publico. No (body) (can) stig(mat)ize (ewer) L—d(ship) as a griping (minister) nor (can) any (i.) say (yew)ve in this Point laid a t(axe) on the Bowels of the Poor. T(hare) are sever(awl) Articles m(eye) L—d in the Way of Eating (witch) might illustrate (ewer) Good Will (toe) the public, the quant(eye)ty of Meat (witch) is Consumed by the Common (people) Is the Occasion of t(hat) scorbutic or Scurvy Di(sword)er (witch) affects the English Constitution. T(hare)(4) an Xcise laid upon flesh of (awl) sorts would (bee) the best (ant)iscorbutic in the Whole Materia Medica and (ass) (ewer) L—d(ship) is (knot) very (car)nally Inclined (Eye) (don)t doubt (butt) (yew) will shortly b(ring) such a (bill) in(toe) Parlia(men)t. (Fish) and F(owl) (2) my L—d are of a very viscid Nat(ewer) and are apt to enrich the Blood of such (ass) ought (toe) (bee) kept low, a T(axe) on these Sorts of Food Would in (Time) p(rope)rly dilute & thin the Corpore(awl) (deuce)s [juices] and the Common (people) would (knot) t(hen) (bee) (awl) (toe) (gate) (hare) [altogether] so (saw)cy (ass) (toe) oppose the Measures of t(hare) (ministers) and per(suns) in power (awl)so a Smart dut(eye) on Bread (mill)k Sm(awl) Beer, (Water) &c. For wh(eye) should the Vulgar have any Thing (toe) Eat (butt) Grass Without paying Tri(boot).

(Ewer) Constant Friend & Ally

BELZEBUB.

Pandemonim [sic] June 23th 1779.

This is interesting as a direct appeal to the poorer classes in Dublin, cf. No. 5572. It has no relation to facts: in making a surcharge of 5 per cent. on the excise North exempted beer, soap, candles, and leather, in the interests of the poorer consumers. Parl. Hist. xx. 166, 1 Mar. 1779. Attacks on budgets in English prints, however exaggerated, have always some foundation.

See the answer, No. 5543.

14 $\frac{1}{16}$ × 10 $\frac{5}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5543 AN HIEROGLYPHIC EPISTLE FROM L—D N—H TO (THE DEVIL) IN ANSWER TO THAT FROM PANDEMONIUM.

[9 July 1779]

Dublin printed by W Allen Dame Street

A rebus, an engraved text in which words are represented by small etched objects. The letter is headed by etchings of Lord North and the Devil as in No. 5542, to which this is the answer, but reversed. The Devil holds a letter.

(Grate), Po(tent) and Respec(table) (Monarch),

(Ewer) H(eye)nesis's [sic] E(pistol) came Safe (toe) (hand), (eye) Have S(hew)n it (toe) (awl) m(eye) Friends on (ear)th, w(hoe) (R) glad (toe) (hare) t(hat) T(hare) Is so good an Under(stand)ing (bee)tween us, & t(hat) (eye) am (lick)ely (toe) (bee) (ass) (grate) a (favour)ite (bee)low (d) (eye) am (hare), you (C), (grate) Mon(ark), (Eye) am so (well) v(ears)d [versed] in the (R)ts of In(C)n(yew)a(tie)on [insinuation] and (diss?)im(yew)la(tie)on. t(hat) (eye) (can) De(sieve) any (man). (eye) (hope) (eye) may (bee) a(bell) (toe) p(rock)(ewer) [procure] (posts) and (places) in (ewer) (inn)fern(awl) (cow)rt for my faithfull F(rein)ds w(hoe) have So (M)(eye)ntly Distin- quish t(hare)selves b(eye) t(hare) attach(men)t (toe) t(hare) (King), witness My d(eye)abo(lick)(awl) F(rein)d, S'r H(yew) [Palliser], w(hoe) has act(yew) (awl)ly (sole)(lick)cited [solicited] me (awl) Ready for t(hat) purpose, and (eye) (can) (ass)(ewer) [assure] (yew) t(hat) he h(ass) (talons) [talents] (toe) XEQ^{ue} any Of (ewer) H(eye)ness Most Hellish (Comma)nds, He h(ass) gulld the Malcon(tents) by a pre(ten)ded Try(awl), (Eye) am proud (yew) aprove of my T(axe)s, (Witch) (eye) (hope) will shortly re(duce) the (people) in 2 (toe)t(awl) [total] Subjec(tie)on, & we Sh(awl) (C) the Day w(hen) the Freeborn English(men) sh(awl) (knot) dare (toe) rep(eye)ne, butt Groan in Secret (bee)neath the G(awl)ing halter

(Eye) have the Honour (toe) (bee), (ewer) most Devoted Serz(ant)

London July 9 1779.

A reduced copy of the bust portrait of North in the heading follows the signature.

For Palliser see Nos. 5536-8.

14¼ × 10⅞ in. (pl.).

5544 THE PATRIOT.

[? before 10 July 1779]

Mezzotint. Bust portrait of George III looking in profile to the r. He wears a turban decorated with a jewelled crescent and aigrette, a furred robe over an embroidered tunic. The dress and the ironical title are intended to show that the king is acting the part of an oriental tyrant. The sign of the Turk's Head in No. 5645 is taken from this design. Compare also the allusion in No. 5574, to 'Sultan ——' who is bringing ruin on the nation, and see also Nos. 5549, 5635. Perhaps a copy of No. 5545 or No. 5546.

5½ × 4½ in.

5545 ECCE HOMO.

Mezzotint. Copy (?) of No. 5544.

5½ × 4½ in.

5546 BEHOLD THE MAN

London Printed & Publish'd as the Act directs, 10 Nov^r 1779.

Mezzotint. (Coloured impression.) Copy (?) of No. 5544. See B.M. Cat. Br. Engraved Portraits.

Chaloner Smith, iv, p. 1757, mentions an impression of this or No. 5547 in the catalogue of Laurie and Whittle.

5¾ × 4 in.

5547 BEHOLD THE MAN [2]

Pub^d as the Act directs July 10th 1779. by I. Hawkins Strand, London.
Mezzotint. Copy (in reverse) of No. 5544 or 5545. An etching copied from this was published in 1784 in the Intrepid Magazine.

5 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 3 $\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5548 THE POLITICAL RAREE-SHOW: OR A PICTURE OF PARTIES AND POLITICS, DURING AND AT THE CLOSE OF THE LAST SESSION OF PARLIAMENT. JUNE 1779.

For the Westminster Magazine. June 1779.

Published 1st of July 1779 by Fielding & Walker, Pater-Noster-Row
Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, vii. 282 (folding plate). Twelve views seen in a peep-show, the views being arranged in four rows; the outside of the box or booth is seen on the l., a boy looks through a round hole, the showman points, saying to him, There you shall see. His words are given at length in the accompanying text.

[1] The Distressed Financier.

Lord North, seated at a round table, on which are books, papers, and money-bags, turns to look through his glass at three men (l.), whose beards, noses, and long coats show that they are Jews. One holds an empty money-bag; another, whose coat is ragged, holds out a document. A clerk or secretary at North's elbow tries to draw his attention to a figure (r.) offering a money-bag, who is bearded like a Jew, but has a long snout and the legs and horns of a goat or satyr. Papers on the table are inscribed Spanish Manifesto and Ways and Means 1780. The Raree-Showman (in the accompanying text) says ' . . . Vat is most curious, is, dat my Lord Slumber is broad awake, and dat he is already contriving an excuse for borrowing de moneys at ten per cent'. Cf. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 244, who says that 8 per cent. was demanded. For the Spanish Manifesto, presented by the Spanish Ambassador 16 June 1779, declaring that Spain had taken the part of France, see Ann. Reg. 1779, pp. 162-4, 359. This was followed by a declaration of the king of Spain, published at Madrid, on 28 June, ibid., 367-86.

[2] The Generals in America doing nothing, or worse than nothing.

A man asleep in a chair in front of an open tent (r.), one foot is on a table on which are playing-cards and a punch-bowl. On the ground are wine bottles and a paper To Sir W^m Howe. Behind (l.), English soldiers, their arms thrown down, are kneeling to American soldiers in close rank, whose commander holds the striped American flag. Burgoyne, the English general, kneels, holding down the British flag. On the horizon is a line of huts or tents, inscribed Saratoga Camp. See for Howe, No. 5405, &c., for Saratoga, Nos. 5469, 5470, 5857.

[3] Proving that they have done every thing.

The interior of the House of Commons; the Speaker in his chair, behind a table; members on either side of it, some rising to speak. Lord North (r.) with his arms folded, appears asleep. Behind him a member says The Southern Expedition is ——. A member holds out a paper inscribed Admiral's Trials at Portsmouth. Sir Hugh Palliser having demanded a court martial on Keppel, see No. 5536, &c., on Keppel's acquittal, resigned his offices and his seat in Parliament, and demanded to be tried himself, his court martial taking place at Portsmouth on 12 Apr. and following days. A member in a military coat and pigtail queue holds out a paper I move an Enquiry into. This is evidently Sir William Howe, who demanded and obtained a committee of the whole House to inquire into the conduct of the war, undertaking to prove (22 Apr.) that 'he had not been deficient in consultation or execution . . . ' London Chronicle, 22-4 Apr. 1779. Parl. Hist. xx. 675 ff. A member wearing a plumed helmet is saying, Justice! Justice! G. G—e [Germain] is —. Burgoyne defended himself in Parliament against the attacks made on him, accusing Germain of failing to support him. See London Chronicle, 20-2 May 1779, and Detail and Conduct of the American War . . . 1780. B.M.L., 1447. d. 23. The plumed helmet appears to be intended to indicate Burgoyne's theatrical character and pompous proclamations, see No. 5470.

[4] Jemmy Twitcher Overseer of y^e Poor of Greenwich.

Lord Sandwich (l.), holding up a cane in one hand, faces a deputation of Greenwich pensioners, most of whom are maimed, some being supported on crutches. Their leader, hat in hand, offers Sandwich a paper inscribed To restore Cap^t Bailley; another says, My Shirts are too Short; a third, wearing his hat, says D—n your Beef and Beer. Behind them is the river, on its farther bank Greenwich Hospital is in flames. A man-of-war without sails is seen behind Sandwich.

The showman explains that Jemmy Twitcher is 'beating dem for complaining', while a ship is in the river instead of at sea. Westminster Mag., loc. cit. Captain Thomas Baillie, Lieutenant-Governor of Greenwich Hospital, was dismissed by Sandwich for publishing in March 1778 The Case of the Royal Hospital for Seamen at Greenwich, showing great abuses in its administration and management, and implicating Sandwich directly and indirectly. Part of the Hospital was destroyed by fire on 2 Jan. 1779.

[5] The Duke of Richmond turned Linen-Draper.

The duke, a yard-measure in his hand, is measuring a sheet or cloth, held out for him by an assistant. Two men, one wearing the ribbon of an order, watch him, seated on a bench (l.). A man (r.) holds up a shirt, looking at Sandwich, who clasps his hands in dismay.

This represents the attempts of Richmond in the House of Lords (16 Feb.—7 June) to secure redress for Captain Baillie, maintaining that his allegations had been established. (Baillie, at the instigation of Sandwich, had been sued for libel by officers of the Hospital, but had won his case.) It had been established (inter alia) that 'the pensioners had been exceedingly defrauded in the length of their shirts' and in 'the quantity of their sheets'. (Richmond in the House of Lords, 7 June 1779) London Chronicle, 5-9 June 1779. See also Ann. Reg. 1779, pp. 159-61. Parl. Hist. xx. 475 ff.

[6] The Opposition Pudding-makers.

A number of men are engaged in stirring the contents of a large dish on a table. One empties into it the contents of a keg, two stand over it, each holding a spoon, another (r.) advances with a large sack on his shoulders, another (l.) brings a basket of flowers. Two others, one with a ribbon and star, watch the proceedings. There, says the showman, are 'M^r Burke wid the flowers of oratory, and de Millers Rockingham, Shelburne, &c. wid de flour to make de pudding'.

[7] Cha. Ja Tod abusing y^e national Gamblers.

Four men seated at a gaming-table. The most prominent is Fox (l.) with a fox's head; he holds a dice-box in his r. hand, under his arm is a paper inscribed Resolves agaist Ld. North; from his pocket protrude papers inscribed, Speech aga^t S^r H. Palliser and Motions agst Lord Sandwich. The showman says 'Dere you see Cha. Ja. Tod abusing de national Gamblers, and dere you see him all night at de gaming-table'. Westminster Mag., loc. cit. On 19 Feb. 1779 Fox moved the dismissal of Palliser from the Navy and on 19 Apr. the removal of Lord Sandwich from the Admiralty. Parl. Hist. xx, pp. 144 ff., 372 ff.

[8] The Jerseymen treating y^e French with Gunpowder tea.

Three ships flying the French flag are sailing away from a fort (l.), flying the Union flag, from which guns are being fired. A number of ship's boats are attempting to regain the ships, some are foundering. On the horizon are five ships in full sail.

Jersey was attacked on 1 May 1779 by a small French expedition; an attempted landing was beaten off by the troops on the island and the Jersey militia. London Gazette, 4-8 May; Walpole, Letters, x. 407-8, 412.

[9] The Scotch Presbyterians pulling down the Papists Houses.

Three men, wearing flat Scots caps, attack a house (r.) with pick-axe, fire-brand, &c. On the l. is a bonfire by which are a book, a crucifix, medals; men and women crowd round it to throw their booty on the flames; one man holds a cloth or curtain, another a figure of the Virgin.

This represents with considerable accuracy the No-Popery riots in Scotland in Feb. 1779. See No. 5534.

[10] The English Papists laughing at y^e Protestants.

Four priests and two monks seated and standing round a circular table. A priest holds a document, Plan for a Cathedral Sch. at Wolverhampton; another says We will make them good Catholics.

The Catholic Relief Act of May 1778 had been passed without opposition and almost without notice, but a proposal to extend its provisions to Scotland provoked riots and was followed by a progressively increasing No-Popery propaganda which led to the Gordon Riots, see No. 5534, &c.

[11] A Picture of Irish Resolution.

Hibernia lies on the ground (l.), as if fainting, her harp beside her; she is supported by two men. Two others stand behind, one of whom, wearing the ribbon of an order, says, No Manufacture will I wear, but those of Ireland. Beside Hibernia is a low table on which is spread out a large document: Resolution of Citizens of Dublin not to wear English Manufacture. Two men stand over it holding pens; one says, Tho' we differ in religion, we will unite for our Country. The other answers, In that we all Solemnly agree. On the farther side of a river (r.) is Dublin, church towers and buildings surrounded by trees. The showman says, 'de Irish resolving not to trade wid de English, while de English have resolved not to let de Irish have any trade at all'. West. Mag., loc. cit.

A great meeting at Dublin in April 1779 adopted a non-importation resolution, pledging all present to abstain from buying British goods which could be made in Ireland; all Ireland followed Dublin. Cf. Walpole, Letters, x. 408, 9 May 1779. The measures for removing the restrictions on Irish trade proposed in Parliament were defeated by pressure from English and Scottish industrial and commercial districts. Ann. Reg. 1779, pp. 123-8. See No. 5572.

[12] Inside View of the Long Room at y^e Custom House.

Clerks seated at desks in a long room under a row of large sash windows, through which are seen the masts of ships. A woman (r.) lies in a fainting condition against a bale of goods. A man stands behind her clasping his hands in distress and saying Alas, poor Commerce, she's almost dead. A man standing by, says Let her die and be d—d, since she can't fill our bellies. One of the clerks, leaning on his desk says A good Stomach with nothing to eat is very bad.

The famous 'Long Room' instead of being filled with people doing business is almost empty. Cf. the print of the Long Room by Rowlandson and Pugin, in the Microcosm of London, 1808, i. 218. Cf. also Nos. 5535, 5574.

8 × 13 in.

5549 THE HORSE AMERICA, THROWING HIS MASTER.

[Pub^d as the Act directs, Aug. 1, 1779 by W^m White, Angel Court, Westminster].¹

Engraving. A horse snorting violently, its head down and hind legs in the air; his rider, George III, has lost his seat and is about to fall head downwards. In his hand is a scourge to each lash of which is attached either a sword, sabre, bayonet, scalping-knife, or axe; he wears the ribbon and star of the Garter. Behind (r.), a French officer walks (r. to l.) towards the horse, carrying a large fleur-de-lys flag over his r. shoulder. Cf. No. 5230, and see Nos. 5544-7, 5574.

6 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 10 $\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5550 A BAITE. FOR THE DEVIL.

[Macnally?²]

Plate 3 of every thing Humorous (Tria Juncta in Uno.) Ridiculous, & Satyrical.

Pub^d Aug^t 12th by W Richardson No 68 High Holborn.

Engraving. Three figures, whose necks are tied together by a rope, represent three aspects of Parson Bate, afterwards Bate Dudley. He stands full face, in clerical gown and bands, but with the wig of a man of fashion. His r. foot stands on a Holy Bible which the devil is placing for him, his l. is on a box, with a slit for letters inscribed Morning Post Letter-Box. On his r. leg is a spurred top-boot in the latest fashion, on his l. foot a buckled shoe. He wears a sword and in his belt are two pistols. Bate, who stands in profile to the l., wears a legal wig and bands and holds a bundle of papers inscribed Brief, while in his l. hand is a dice-box. On the dice-box are the letters J. and II, perhaps the artist's signature. The Bate in profile to the l. wears a feathered cap inscribed Mor[ning] Pos[t]; he is blowing a trumpet and holding out a sheaf of the Morning Pos[t] for sale.

¹ Written on the print, the margin with the publication line having been cut off.

² A pencil note on the print attributes design and verses to Macnally (1752-1820), whose career curiously resembled that of the allegations here made against Bate. He was barrister, duellist, editor of the Public Ledger, writer of comedies and farces; a professed Irish patriot, but actually in Government pay.

On the ground at his feet are cards, dice, and papers inscribed, Rival Candidates, A Comic Opera; Flitch of Bacon; Black a moor wash'd w[hite]. The rope round Bate's three necks appears to be held by the devil who is stooping down to adjust the Bible. Beneath the design is engraved:

*A Various Compound is this Rev'rend Divine.
In Speaking a Pedant, with Satire Malign.
A Canonical Buck, Vociferous Bully.
A Duellist, Boxer, Gambler, & Cully.
A Student at Law, Collector of News.
A Preacher in Churches, an Actor in Stews.
If Vices like these, Recommend to the Great.
Then who is so fit for a Bishop as B—e.
A Government Runner, of Falsehood a Vender.
Staunch Friend, to the Devil, the Pope, & Pretender.
A Managers parasite, Opera Writer.
News paper Editor, Pamphlet Indicter.
An Olla Padrina [sic] foul Mixture of Parts.
Is this Harlequin Parson Master of Arts.
If many Vocations can make a Man great
Then who is so fit for a Bishop as B—e.*

The central Bate is the parson and duellist, see No. 5198, &c.; the Bate facing l. is Bate as a barrister; the letters LL.D. are sometimes given after his name. The Bate facing r. is dressed as one of the body of men sent out with caps and trumpets to advertise the Morning Post (of which he was editor) to Walpole's indignation, see Letters, ix. 439–40, 13 Nov. 1776, a dress which he had worn at a masquerade, see No. 5200; 'The Rival Candidates' was a popular comic opera by Bate, played at Drury Lane, 1775; 'The Flitch of Bacon' was a ballad opera played at the Haymarket in 1778. 'The Blackamoor Wash'd White' was hooted off the stage in 1776, see No. 5364. His position as 'Government runner' is confirmed by North's statement of expenditure made to the king in April 1782: For a pension of £200 and 'hopes of preferment' an arrangement was made through Garrick that 'he should keep a Newspaper [the Morning Post] open for all writings in favour of Government'; he proved 'a very constant, diligent, zealous and able, though perhaps too warm a writer on the part of Government'. The pension ceased and in 1781 he was paid £3,250 towards the purchase of a living. Corr. of George III, v. 471. 'This sum 'to that worthless man M^r Bate' the king disallowed, since he had been ignorant of the transaction, 5 May 1782, ibid., vi. 7. (By this time Bate in the Morning Herald was supporting the party of the Prince of Wales.) See also Nos. 5666, 5676.

10 $\frac{11}{16}$ × 7 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5551 THE MASTER OF THE ASSES, OR THE WESTMINSTER LOYAL VOLUNTEERS A MEWS—ING THEMSELVES.

Pub Aug^t 24. 1779 by Darly.

Engraving (coloured impression). A party of six recruits in civilian dress, except for their cockaded hats, march (l. to r.) carrying muskets, they are nearly all elderly. An officer in uniform, carrying a cane, walks beside them. The rear is brought up by an old soldier with swathed gouty legs, walking with a crutch and a stick.

The background, a long low building of one story, with attic windows, represents part of the King's Mews near Charing Cross.

An anti-recruiting satire. The Westminster Volunteers was the name given derisively to the 85th Regiment raised by Lord Harrington and Lord Chesterfield in London in 1778-9, Curtis, British Army in the American Revolution, 1926, pp. 68, 74. Cf. Walpole, Letters, x. 451. The regiments raised by individuals and by towns (e.g. Manchester, see No. 5471) were known as 'Loyalty Regiments', see No. 5552. For the danger of invasion see No. 5554. For other anti-recruiting prints see No. 5295, &c.

7¼ × 13¼ in.

5552 THE TERROR OF FRANCE, OR THE WESTMINSTER VOLUNTEERS. 1779.

Published According to Act of Parliament, August 26. 1779.

Engraving. Four couples of men of unsoldierly appearance, carrying muskets with fixed bayonets, march from r. to l. Some are dwarfish; their leader marches in front. A beadle (l.) with a raised stick is driving back a crowd of amused spectators who seem to be obstructing the line of march; he more particularly threatens two men who have fallen down. The foremost of the crowd are a little chimney-sweep and a badged fireman holding a pick-axe. Beneath the design is etched:

*Can we Invasions dread, when Volunteers
Like these, propose to Fight the Gay Monsieurs?
Certainly No! such Taylors, Cobblers, Bakers, Always must Conquer; led by Engine Makers.*

An anti-recruiting satire, the 'Westminster Volunteers' being the 85th Regiment, see No. 5551. The regiment was sent to Jamaica, and the greater part of it was lost in the wreck of Rodney's prizes, homeward bound in 1783. H. M. Chichester, Records of the British Army, 1902, p. 647.

When this print was published England was seriously threatened with invasion, the combined French and Spanish Fleet being in the Channel, see No. 5554. For the indifference with which this 'imminent danger' was regarded see T. Hutchinson, Diary and Letters, ii, 1886, pp. 279, 291.

6¾ × 12½ in.

5553 THE CHURCH MILITANT.

[Gillray.]

Publish'd 5th Sept^r 1779, by W. Humphrey.

Engraving. A procession of bishops and clergy march from l. to r. headed by a prelate, evidently Archbishop Markham, on a prancing horse, holding a drawn sword. After him walk two boy choristers chanting from an open music book held between them. One sings O Lord our God, Arise, the other, Scatter our Enemies. Next come three bishops: a lean ascetic who carries their standard, between two who are stout and gross. On the standard, which is attached to a crozier, is To Arms O Israel, and a mitre between two crossed croziers. The prelate on the standard-bearer's l. sings, Give us good Beef in Store, the other, who carries a musket on his shoulder, sings When that 's gone, send us more. Behind them a fat bishop sings And the Key of the Cellar Door, while the cleric next him, who wears an academic gown and cap, sings That we may drink. Behind, the mitres of more bishops are visible, and a man in academic cap and gown, who sings, From Labour & Industry—Good Lord deliver us.

One of many satires on the 'higher clergy'; cf. Nos. 4236, 5492. Their attitude to the war had been much attacked by the Opposition. See Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 29, and Markham was especially denounced for his belligerency, see Nos. 5343, 5400, 5492. Two of the bishops are identified by Wright and Evans as probably Cornwallis, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Butler of Oxford.

Another impression, aquatinted, and also an impression without date. Grego, Gillray, p. 29. Wright and Evans, No. 5.

8 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 13 in.

5554 A DANCE BY THE VIRTUE OF BRITISH OAK.

Publish'd as the act directs Sept' the 1779 [sic.]

Engraving. A British sailor (r.) is threatening a Frenchman with an oak club; a Spaniard (l.), a dagger in his hand, has been thrown to the ground. The sailor wears a cockaded hat, a coat with facings, striped trousers, and a cutlass; he tramples on the Frenchman's hat. The Frenchman, a petit maître, is shouting in alarm; his broken sword is on the ground; he wears a high toupet wig with a large black bag, his parasol has fallen to the ground. The Spaniard wears a feathered hat and slashed breeches. Behind the English sailor appears (r.) the muzzle of a cannon; in front of it is a pyramid of cannon-balls, beneath which is etched The most radical Cure for French Perfidy & Spanish Arrogance. Beneath the design is inscribed:

*Let others barter Servile Faith for Gold
My Courage is not to be bought or Sold
The French & Spaniards I unmov'd shall face
Their Steps like a Briton bravely trace.*

From August to September 1779 the allied French and Spanish fleets were in the Channel, and England was in serious danger of invasion, 30,000 French troops having been collected between Havre and St. Malo. Admiral Hardy was in command of the fleet; he managed to slip past the allied fleet and reach Spithead, whereupon the French and some of the Spaniards retired to Brest, the other Spaniards returning to blockade Gibraltar, see Nos. 5551, 5552, 5614.

The first in the Catalogue of the patriotic prints which were the result of the war with France and Spain; it is to be noted that America is not mentioned. See also Nos. 5555, 5556.

8 × 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5555 LES HEROS FRANCOISES.

MONSEIG^R LE DUC DE CHARTRES, & LE COMTE D'ORVILLIERS.

Publish'd, as the Act directs Sep' 28. 1779 P^e 6^d del ad Vitam.

Engraving. Caricature portraits with large heads of d'Orvilliers the admiral, and the duc de Chartres, nominally in supreme command, of the French fleet which, combined with the Spanish fleet under Cordova, was in the Channel from 14 Aug. to 14 Sept. 1779, threatening England with invasion. Beneath the title is engraved:

The King of France with Twenty Thousand Men, Came down the Hill—and then went up Again.

The combined fleet did nothing but sail in the Channel, retiring to Brest when Sir Charles Hardy reached Spithead; see No. 5554. For the Duc de Chartres and the engagement, see Britsch, La Jeunesse de Philippe-Egalité, 1926, pp. 282 ff.

10 × 7 $\frac{1}{4}$ in. (pl.).

Another impression, coloured and undated (27 July 1778 has been incorrectly added by Mr. Hawkins). A publisher's inscription has been erased, but 68 High Holborn, the address of W. Richardson, remains legible. Over this has been engraved Sold by W. Humphrey, N^o 227 Strand.

5556 [ENGLAND FRANCE AND SPAIN] [n.d. ? September 1779]

Engraving. A British soldier (l.) threatens with his bayonet two men personifying France and Spain who kneel in supplication before him. The soldier says Damn your Lanthorn Jaw'd Frog Faces! What Business have you here. France, whose foppish clothes are in holes, says Ah Monsieur Anglois Pardoner Moi Me Renounce de Americans to the Devil. His feathered hat and musket lie on the ground. Behind him kneels Spain, wearing a cloak, his high-crowned feathered hat is on the ground. He holds out a money-bag inscribed Dollars saying, Pecavi Signior Ingliero! Pecavi! I Renounce de France for ever. The British soldier is about twice the size of the other two. In the background British soldiers in close rank are firing from the shore at ship's boats flying the fleur-de-lys flag; the boats are foundering.

Apparently a patriotic rendering of the doings of the combined French and Spanish fleets in the Channel Aug.–Sept. 1779. See Nos. 5554, 5555. 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 8 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5557 THE EUROPEAN DILIGENCE.

Pub^d according to Act of Parliament Oct^r 5 1779

Engraving. A Dutchman (r.) wheels a wheelbarrow over the prostrate body of Britannia. In the barrow are (l. to r.): a Frenchman, who leans out to pierce Britannia to the heart with a sword; she is saying Ah Cruil Neighbours thus to assist Rebellious Children; he says O Madame 'tis de fine Politique; America, a woman with a feathered head-dress, sits on the Frenchman's l., she says, My Good & Great Ally Strike Home. Next comes a man partly concealed by his cloak and hat, to whom his neighbour, Spain, says Now Brother of Portugal join the Confedaracy and Agrandize our Family. The Dutchman, a boorish fellow smoking a pipe, is saying What's Treaties to Gelt; he is treading on a paper inscribed A Memorial presented by Sr J. Yorke to their High Mightinesses. On the side of his barrow is a placard, De Jonge Johar^e Petronella Cornelius Dirk Vander Meulen for Eustatia. On the l. of the print a tall Russian soldier with a fur-trimmed hat, standing behind Britannia, threatens the Dutchman with his bayoneted musket, saying, My Mistress is determin'd to Chastise Y^r Hogen Mogen for y^r Ingratitude & Duplicity & Oblidge You to Assist that Power that first Assisted You.

In spite of three treaties of alliance between England and the United Provinces, Dutch merchants were carrying on an immense trade with her enemies, and the Dutch island of St. Eustatius was the centre of a vast traffic in military and other stores for the Americans. Dutch papers were freely given to American privateers. Fortescue, Hist. of the Br. Army, iii. 260; Hist. MSS. Comm., Stopford-Sackville MSS., ii. 1910, pp. 196, 202 f., 279, 293-5. Sir Joseph Yorke, British Minister at The Hague, presented a series of memorials protesting against the views of the strong pro-French party, to 'their High Mightinesses' (Hogen Mogen) the States General. See Ann. Reg. 1779, pp. 422, 425, 428; F. P. Renaut, Les Provinces-Unies et la Guerre d'Amérique, i, 1924, chap. vii; J. F. Jameson, 'St Eustatius in the American Revolution', Am. Hist. Review, viii, pp. 683 ff.

At this time there were hopes of an alliance with Russia, see Malmesbury, Diaries and Correspondence, 1844, i. 237 ff.; Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, iv. 470-1. French and Prussian influence, however, prevailed and Catharine issued the Declaration of Armed Neutrality, Mar. 1780. See Nos. 5713-16, 5718-19, 5724, 5730, &c. For Holland as an unfriendly neutral, see Nos. 5472, 5541, 5568, 5571, 5579, 5624, 5636, 5654, 5663, 5664, 5667, 5726, 5727, 5728. For Dutch prints referring to profitable trade in contraband see Nos. 5712, 5716, 5724. For St. Eustatius see Nos. 5837, 5838, 5839, 5842, 5923, 6051. For the attitude to Dutch neutrality in other wars cf. Nos. 2416 (1739), 3697, 3698, 3704 (1759).

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5558 POLITICAL WHISPER.

Old Sly pinx^t

Young Edger sc.

London, Printed & Published as the Act directs, Oct^r 20. 1779. by W. Hinton Copper plate Printer, N^o 12. Corner of Bell Yard, Grace Church Street, Books, Maps, Prints & Stationary; Engraving and Printing in general.

Two men, much caricatured, with large heads, in consultation. Both are fashionably dressed, and wear hats; one (l.), standing full face, wears spurred boots, the other, standing in profile to the l., wears buckled shoes.

Perhaps an allusion to the incessant negotiations and intrigues which were going on for Cabinet reconstruction, see Corr. of George III, iv. 475-9, 7-8 Nov. 1779, &c.

$7\frac{3}{4} \times 7$ in.

5559 CAPT PAUL JONES,

London. Pub^d Oct. 22, 1779, by Tho^s Macklin, N^o 1. Lincolns Inn Fields.

Engraving. Design in an oval. Jones, W.L., standing on the deck of a ship in action, looking to r., a large sword in his r. hand, l. hand on hip. He is dressed as a sailor in short wide trousers, and wearing a round hat with an erect feather; a pistol is in his belt. Beneath the title is engraved, From an Original Drawing taken from the Life, on board the Serapis.

For the action between Jones, in the Bonhomme Richard, and Pearson in the Serapis, Sept. 1779, see G. W. Allen, Naval History of the American Revolution, 1913, ii. 456 ff.

Probably the earliest of a number of portraits of Jones, published in England, France, and Germany, see Nos. 5560-5. For the great importance attached to Jones's exploit as a blow to English prestige, see No. 5715. Cf. also Nos. 5568, 5582.

$8\frac{1}{4} \times 6\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5560 CAP. PAUL JONES

Engraving. Oval bust portrait, copied from No. 5559, hand on a staff instead of a sword. The oval is in a frame inset in a conventional border with a ship, anchor, &c. Beneath the title is engraved, From an original Drawing taken from the Lise [sic] on Board the Serapis. Probably French. $5\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ in.; oval, $2\frac{7}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5561 JOHN PAUL IONES,

1779

[?R. Brookshaw sc.¹]

Mezzotint. Apparently one of a series, see No. 5290. Standing portrait T.Q.L. of a man in naval officer's uniform looking to r. holding a telescope; his l. hand on the fluke of an anchor. In the background are rocks (l.) and the sea (r.). Beneath the title is engraved Commander of a Squadron in the Service of the Thirteen United States of North America, 1779. This style is tendencious as the Articles of Confederation did not go into effect until they were ratified by all the states in 1781. The squadron consisted of five vessels, one being American, the others French, all under the American flag but sailing under French orders, Aug. 1779. Probably published after the encounter of the Serapis with the Bonhomme Richard and the Alliance under Jones, 23 Sept. 1779. See No. 5559, &c.

Chaloner Smith, iv. 1735. C. E. Russell, ii, p. 464.

$12\frac{3}{8} \times 10$ in.

5561A A copy having the same inscription with the addition

Joh. Lorenz Rugendas Sculpsit et excudit Aug. [Augsburg] Vind.

5562 CAPT: PAUL JONES

London, Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett N^o 53 Fleet Street, as the Act directs 28 Oct^r 1779.

Mezzotint. Similar to No. 5561 but holding out a pistol with raised trigger. Beneath the title is inscribed, Commander of a Squadron of Ships in the American & French Service.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 4\frac{7}{16}$ in.

5563 JOHN PAUL IONES,

[c. 1779]

Dessiné par C. F. Notté se vende chez F. M. Will. à Augsbourg

Mezzotint. Perhaps one of a series, see No. 5290. T.Q.L. standing on board a ship in action behind a splintered bulwark, sword in r. hand; l. hand on one of five pistols in his belt. Not in naval uniform, but dressed as a sailor. Background of smoke and rigging. Beneath the title is engraved, Commodore au Service des Etats-Unis de l'Amérique, tel qu'il était dans le combat du 22 7^{bre} 1779, contre le Cap^t Pearson, son vaisseau le bon homme Richard montait 40 canons, la frégate Anglaise le Serapis 32, avait l'avantage du calibre et de la légèreté; le Commodore saisit l'instant ou le Beaupré de l'ennemi passa pres de son Artimon, il attache ces 2 mats, et combattant bord à bord s'empara du Serapis. L'action dura 2 h. et $\frac{1}{2}$ le bon homme Richard coula 36 h. après. See No. 5559, &c.

¹ From about 1773, Brookshaw was working in Paris, and from 1779 in Brussels and Amsterdam.

$12\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5564 PAUL JONES.

[c. 1779]

O. I. Notte pinx^t

Printed for R. Wilkinson at N^o 58 Cornhill.

Mezzotint. Reduced copy of No. 5563.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5565 JOHN PAUL JONES.

Dessiné par C: J. Notté Gravé par Carl Guttenberg. a Paris chez Guttenberg rue St Hyacinthe . . .

Engraving. Another version of No. 5563 within a border. Inscription as No. 5563.

Guttenberg was apparently not domiciled in Paris until 1780, Thieme Becker.

$7\frac{3}{8} \times 6$ in.; border, $10\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5566 PAUL JONES SHOOTING A SAILOR WHO HAD ATTEMPTED TO STRIKE HIS COLOURS IN AN ENGAGEMENT.

[c. 1779]

[411] From the Original Picture by John Collet, in the possession of Carington Bowles.

[Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in St Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased].]

Mezzotint. The deck of a ship in action. Jones fires a pistol point-blank at a sailor (l.) who stands under the striped American flag, one hand raised towards a rope. Other sailors stand round, two wounded men lie on the deck. Jones rests one foot on the body of a dead man, a cutlass is under his l. arm, four pistols are stuck in his belt. Probably the incident during the encounter of the Bon Homme Richard with the Serapis, when a gunner shouted for quarter till Jones knocked him down with the butt of a pistol.

In the manner of history rather than satire, and tending to the glorification of Jones, see No. 5559, &c.

One of Bowles's series of mezzotints.

$12\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

Also a coloured impression in 'Caricatures', B.M.L., Tab. 524, i, p. 7, from which the publication line has been supplied.

5567 THE . FAMILY . COMPACT

Publish'd Nov^r 1. 1779 whether by Act or Order is not Material Provided it Sells

Engraving. The kings of France and Spain clasp hands; between them, and holding them together, a hand on each, is the Devil. Spain (l.) stands in profile to the r., wearing a feathered hat, cape, and slashed doublet. Round his neck is a Maltese cross, perhaps intended for the order of the St. Esprit. France, in profile to the l., is dressed as French petit-maitre, and wears a ribbon and star. The Devil has widespread bat's wings, a quasi-human head and body, a barbed tail, and cloven feet. He wears the triple crown of the papacy, and clerical bands; round his neck are hung the same order as that worn by Spain and the order of the Golden Fleece. The three stand on a map or bird's-eye view of the Northern American colonies, inscribed (l. to r.): Pensylvania; Virginia; [Conne]cticut; Philadelphia; [New] Jer[s]ey; N. York; [Can]ada; Massic [sic].

Spain had joined France against England owing to the Bourbon Family Compact and her desire to regain Gibraltar. See Camb. Hist. of Foreign Policy, 1922, p. 134. Corwin, French Policy and the American Alliance, 1916, Chaps. viii and ix. F. P. Renaut, Le Pacte de Famille et l'Amerique, Paris, 1922, p. 255 ff.

6 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 9 in.

5568 THE POLITICAL SEE-SAW OR MINHIR NIC FROG TURN'D BALANCE MASTER

Tim Tear foul fecit

*Publish'd as y Act Direts for y Proprietor — by W. Wells N^o 132
Fleet Street Nov^r y 6 1779 Price one Shilling*

Engraving. Holland, a fat Dutchman, stands upon the centre of a see-saw, straddling across a heap of money-bags. In his r. hand he holds a torn and ragged document, inscribed That y Dutch Deliver into y Hands of English Paul Jones. [signed] York. His l. hand, the palm curved as if to receive money, is held out towards a lean and foppish Frenchman kneeling on one knee on the see-saw. The Frenchman holds in his r. hand a purse; in his l. he holds up an oval portrait-head or medallion inscribed P. Jones; his hat is under his arm, his hair is in an enormous pig-tail queue, and his fur muff lies beside him. The Dutchman is saying:

*I never was in Such a Scrpe [sic] before in all my Life
I must be for neither & Yet for both—
For they do but Ask and I may Chuse
Whether to Grant them or Refuse
For 'tis their beter Parts their Riches
That my enamoured Heart bewitches
Let me yor Fortunes but possess
Then Settle Your matters how your Please Hudibrass.*

The money-bags at his feet are inscribed Guineas, Dublons, Dollars, Luidors. The Frenchman is saying:

*Assit [sic] me but this once I now implore
And I shall Trouble Thee no more.*

—Hudibrass—

Behind the Frenchman stands Spain as a Spanish don in feathered hat, cloak, and slashed breeches; in his r. hand is a scourge; in his l. a Manefesto To y Court of London. He says:

*Ah me, What Perils do Environ
The Man that Meddles with could Iron.
Hudibrass.*

Behind him, and at the extreme r. and upper end of the see-saw, sits America as an American Indian, wearing a head-dress of feathers, his hands clasped round his knees. He holds a large scroll on which is inscribed:

*Tho we with black & blues are fudgeld
Or as y Vulgar Say—are Cudgeld
He thats valliant and Dares Fight
Tho Drubd can loose no Honour by t*

This is continued on a flag which he holds:

*Yet am I loath my days to Curtail
If I thought my Wounds not mortal
Or that we had time enough as Yet
To make an Honourable retreat—
Hudibrass*

On the l. and lower end of the see-saw sits England, wearing a feathered hat, pseudo-classical drapery with an ornamental breastplate or gorget, decorated with a head writhing with serpents, probably symbolizing discord or faction. In his r. hand is a scroll, Magna Charta, under his arm is an oval shield bearing the royal arms. He holds a cap inscribed libertas on a staff, the upper end of which broadens into a gnarled club, inscribed Hart of Oak. He is saying:

*Perpend my Words O Minheer Nic
That if thou wilt not Give a categorical Answer—I shall Teach you to Feel y weight of my Displeasure—
For Danger from his Life Accrew
Or Honour from his Death to You
Twere Policy and Honour too
To say as You Resolve to do.*

By his side is a paper inscribed *To ye
Immortal Memory of Capt Falmer—An Heroic Epistle.*

The see-saw and the figures on it recede in perspective, the lower and l. end being nearer the spectator so that the figures diminish progressively in size from England to America who is on a quite small scale.

Beneath the design is etched:

This Plate representing our Critical Situation with y Dutch is Humbly Inscribed to every True Briton who has y Wellfare of his Country at Heart.

Twenty-six lines of Hudibrastic verse follow, beginning:

*For Now y Field is not far off
Where we must give y World a Proof
Of Deeds not Words & such as Sute
Another manner of Dispute
A Controversy that affords
Actions for Arguments, not Words.*

The plate represents in general the diplomatic situation in which England was endeavouring through Sir Joseph Yorke, the British Minister at The Hague, to counter the pro-French party in the States General. The Dutch had infringed their treaties with England by allowing Paul Jones to remain in the Texel with his prizes after his encounter with the Serapis, see Nos. 5559-66. He was received in Holland as a hero. Yorke presented a memorial to the States General requesting the delivering up of the prizes, 29 Oct. 1779. After being allowed to refit his ships Jones was at last ordered to depart with the first favourable wind and sailed 29 Dec. 1779. Ann. Reg. 1779, 429 ff.; G. W. Allen, Naval History of the American Revolution, 1913, ii. 481 ff.; F. Edler, Dutch Republic and American Revolution, 1911, pp. 62 ff. For the Spanish Manifesto, of 28 June 1779, 'declaring the motives which have induced his Catholic Majesty to act hostilely against England' see Ann. Reg. 1779, pp. 567-86. For the attitude of Holland before the declaration of war in Dec. 1780 see No. 5557, &c., and the Dutch prints, Nos. 5712-31. Apparently by the same artist as Nos. 5648, 5709.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 11\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5569 A PRIVY COUNCIL.

Published Nov^r 24 1779 by M. S. Dareny Opposite to the Kings Head Strand.

Engraving. A number of animals sit or stand round a small rectangular table. At one end (r.) sits an ass, one foreleg on the table, the other extended, its mouth open as if braying; it wears an ermine cloak to show that it is intended for George III. Behind the ass, and whispering into his ear is a figure wearing a flat Scots cap and tartan plaid, with the wings and claws of a bird of prey. He evidently represents Bute, or Scottish influence, supposed to be embodied in Mansfield, Wedderburn and Dundas. On the ass's r. hand a bear, wearing a ribbon, is asleep, his head bent down, his fore-paws crossed on the table. This is Lord North, also depicted as a bear in No. 5541. On his r. are a boar, a bull, and a goat, the last probably intended for Lord Sandwich. Behind the bear are a blood-hound, an ape wearing bands, and some feline animal whose head only is visible. In the foreground (l.) a muzzled mastiff lies asleep, his collar inscribed Joⁿ Bull. On the wall hangs a map: a deep ravine or river divides America from England; the Channel is also marked.

$7\frac{1}{4} \times 9\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5570 WHO 'S IN FAULT? (NOBODY) A VIEW OFF USHANT

Pub^d Dec^r 1st 1779 by W^m Humphreys N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. A portrait of Admiral Keppel without a body. He stands on the sea-shore pointing to a naval engagement (r.) indicated by ships' masts seen through clouds of smoke. In his r. hand is a cutlass. His legs are joined to his shoulders, so that he has no body.¹ He wears the hat of a naval officer. Beneath the title is engraved The Anatomists will have it that it can have no Heart having no Body—but the Naturalists think if it has a Heart, it must lay in its Breeches.

¹ This idea appears to date from a caricature of 1600, see Buss, English Graphic Satire, 1874, pp. 46-7.

Keppel became a popular hero after the Court Martial, see No. 5536, found, 11 Feb. 1779, that he had behaved as 'a judicious brave and experienced officer'. Palliser, too (see No. 5537), was acquitted on 5 May, so that the failure to pursue the French and bring them to decisive action after the engagement of 27 July 1778 off Ushant, see No. 5484, &c., was the fault of 'Nobody'. He became unpopular after he was brought into rivalry with Rodney, see No. 5992, &c. The nickname of Admiral Lee Shore was used because he had given the proximity of a lee-shore as a reason for caution in the action off Ushant, see No. 5658.

Also a coloured impression in 'Caricatures', iv, p. 93. B.M.L., Tab. 524. $8\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5571 THE LAST STAKE.

Design'd by Stuart. Murray Delin^t Junto fec^t

Publish'd according to act. Dec^r 6. 1779 for J. Almon in Piccadilly London.

Engraving. On the further side of a stream, inscribed Rubicon—Flu—, a bull representing John Bull is being baited. On his back sits Lord North in profile to the l., very obese and asleep; at his back is a large square pack, inscribed Taxes. The bull is held by a rope which is twisted round a post inscribed The Last Stake, the end being held by a Scotsman in Highland dress intended for Bute, and by a man in judge's wig and robes, evidently Mansfield. Two other members of 'the Junto' are goading the bull on, one with a pole, the other with a club. The bull is being attacked by France with a sword, and Spain with a spear. France wears a coat, hat and bag-wig of French fashion, Spain wears a slashed doublet, ruff and cloak. In front of an inn-door (l.) behind them stands George III, watching the struggle complacently, his hands in his pockets. Above the door the signboard, on which is a crown, is falling off, and hangs from one hook only. From a window a woman's arm empties a chamber-pot on to the king's head. In the foreground, on the nearer side of the 'Rubicon' a Dutchman (r.) stands facing the wall of a building, urinating on a paper inscribed British Memorial.

The names of the artists indicate that the plight of the country is due to the designs of Bute (Stuart), carried on by Mansfield (Murray) and executed by the Junto. For the various memorials presented to the States General by the British Minister at The Hague see No. 5568, &c., and Ann. Reg. 1779, 1780. See also No. 5557, &c.

$8\frac{3}{4} \times 12\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5572 INISH NA GEBRAUGH.¹

Owen Roe Oneele sculp^t

Publish'd as the Act directs Dec^r 21st 1779, by Owen Roe Oneele.

Engraving. An Irishman, wearing a hat, short coat, and breeches, a shillelagh in his r. hand, points with his l. to a pile of munitions of war on his r. Behind him are ships at anchor against a quay, their sails furled; in front (r.) are bales, a barrel, rolls of material, &c., labelled For Exportation and Success to the Trade of Ireland. He is saying Arrah, sure they Wont gives us a Free Trade, Nabocklesh [never mind it]. A cannon on a gun-carriage, to which he points, is inscribed O Lord open thou our Lips and our Mouth shall shew forth thy Praise; round its mouth is inscribed, A short Money Bill, a free Trade, or else. With the gun-carriage are bayoneted muskets, a drum and cannon-balls. Above it floats a large flag, bearing a crowned Irish harp inscribed, Crom a Boo, the motto of several Irish families including the Fitzgeralds. Behind are fortifications.

¹ Anois nó gó brách, Now or Never.

This represents the Irish Volunteer movement and the demand for a removal of the restrictions on Irish trade. See Nos. 5548 [11], 5653, and Ann. Reg. 1779, pp. 123-8. On William III's birthday, 4 Nov. 1779, the Dublin Volunteers paraded round his monument on College Green which was hung with significant inscriptions; two cannon bore the labels 'Free Trade—or this'. Lecky, Hist. of England, iv. 1890, p. 598.

The attribution to Owen Roe O'Neill (d. 1649) is significant, and at variance with the character of the Volunteer movement, since he typifies the trained soldier who fights for the independence of his country, and for the resistance of Celtic Ireland to England. S. R. Gardiner in D.N.B. Letters [on Irish politics] were issued as a pamphlet in 1779 by one Pollock under the pseudonym of Owen Roe O'Nial, Lecky, op. cit. Cf. Nos. 5542, 5543 for propaganda apparently intended to rouse the Dublin populace against the English Government. Cf. also Nos. 5548 [11], 5573, 5653, 5659, 5667. For the Dublin Volunteers see also No. 5488.

10 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5573 THE BOTCHING TAYLOR CUTTING HIS CLOTH TO COVER A BUTTON.

John Simpson Aqua forti

Publish'd by James Tomlinson Oxford Street Decr 27th 1779

Engraving. The interior of a tailor's workroom. George III sits cross-legged on the table or tailor's shop-board, a strip of material across his knees, which he is about to cut with his shears. Part of the cloth is inscribed Ireland, part Great Britain, a very small piece is Hanover. Beside the king (r.) sits Bute in Highland dress, his r. arm is round the king's shoulders, and he points to the cloth, directing the king, who looks towards him with an expression of distress, to cut it between Ireland and Great Britain; on the table between them is a button. Lord North (l.) stands on the king's r.; in his r. hand is a length of cloth which has already been cut off, inscribed North America; pieces inscribed West Indies and Africa lie on the ground at his feet. In his l. hand he clutches the piece inscribed Ireland which the king is about to cut off. Behind and between North and the king stands Mansfield, wearing judge's robes, with a dismayed expression. His r. hand is on North's r. shoulder, his l. clasps the hand which Bute has placed on the king's r. shoulder. Behind North (l.) stand two men. One (Sandwich) holds a document inscribed, A Scheme for ruining the Navy; the other is probably Germain.

Behind the table (r.) the Pope, wearing his triple crown, embraces a Scotsman, wearing a kilt and a bonnet with a white cockade, a powder horn and flask hanging from his waist, who is evidently Charles Edward the Pretender; they watch the king with intense interest. Beneath the table lie strips of cloth inscribed, Bill of Rights (torn), Magna Charta (frayed), Memorials, Pe[t]itions, Intelligence, Expresses, Memorials, Remonstrances, Dispatches, Petition from Jamaica, Account of the distress'd situation of Ireland. The shadow under the table over the pieces of cloth is inscribed Taylor's Hell.

On the wall are hung broadsides, a tailor's goose, a picture, and, spiked on a file, a large bunch of papers labelled Addresses. The broadsides (l. to r.) are [1] The Highland Laddie, a favourite Court Air, proper to be Sung in all Churches. At the bottom is a jack-boot in a circle, the familiar emblem for Bute, see No. 3860 (1762), &c. [2] Dr Cromwell's effectual and only remedy for the Kings-evil. This is headed by two crossed axes in a circle, a gibe which verges on treason. [3] The Button-Maker's Downfall or Ruin to Old England to the tune of Britons strike Home. George III was much ridiculed c. 1770 for indulging in the hobby of button-making, see Nos. 4380 (1770), 4417 (1771), 4883, 5711, and p. 494. [4] Taxation No Tyranny A New Song as Sung at the Theatre Royal the Words by Jocky Stewart, an allusion in general to the supposed arbitrary policy instigated by Bute, and in particular to Dr. Johnson's famous pamphlet. The picture is entitled Flight into Egypt. The king, astride an ass, holds before him an infant (round whose head is a halo); the Queen sits behind him. Behind walks a procession of the royal children, little girls and youths. A sign-post points to Hanover. This satire illustrates the persistent belief in the influence of Bute.¹ For Ireland see No. 5572, &c.

The drawing is skilful and expressive and resembles in manner that of Nos. 5540, 5577. The signature and publisher's name are probably fictitious.

9 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 11 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5574 MR TRADE & FAMILY OR THE STATE OF YE NATION

St—t, B—rn—d, & Co Orig^t G—rm—e, N—h & Co Exec^t

Publish'd by Virtue of Parliament not this day in particular—Dec. 1779

Engraving. A family of beggars standing in a row; the man (l.), his clothes in rags, holds out his hat; on his coat pocket, turned inside out and in holes, is the word useless; he says, I was once a Capital Dealer but thro' y^e Obstnacy of ONE MAN & y^e Villainy of many More—am reduced to Beggary. His wife, an infant in her arms, is a ballad singer; she holds a broadside and sings, Oh I wish that y^e Wars were all over. The little girl next her sings, were all over; her arm is round her younger brother's neck, he sings, all over, while an infant on his l. clad only in a ragged shirt, echoes over. This last child holds by a string a toy-horse on wheels, on which sits a figure of the king wearing his crown and Garter ribbon. On the r. is the side of a building on which is a rectangular sun-dial, inscribed Dum spectes Fugio. In front of it is a tree-stump with bare branches on which sit two owls. They say Long live SULTAN—as long as He lives, We shall never want Ruin'd Towns & Villages—Vid. SPEC. From a branch hangs a kite by its tail, inscribed in y^e Reign of y^e best of Princes. On the l. is a row of three houses of diminishing size, all To Let. (There were in 1779 'no less than 1,104 empty houses within the City of London'. Macpherson, Annals of Commerce, iii. 649.)

¹ In 1778 there had been a recrudescence of the attacks on Bute, owing to an attempt by Sir James Wright and Dr. Addington, Chatham's physician, to bring about an alliance between Bute and Chatham. Bute re-asserted his determination to take no part in political affairs. He wrote to his son, Nov. 1778, 'The policy of Sir James Wright has, as you will see in the Papers, opened the mouth of Hydra malice and venom against me afresh. . . .' A Prime Minister and his Son, ed. the Hon. Mrs. Stuart Wortley, 1925, pp. 122, 141. See also von Ruville, Chatham, iii, p. 333.

In the middle distance is a hunting scene: the king wearing his crown followed by another rider holding a club, chases a stag with three dogs. On the horizon, on the farther side of a stretch of water, two towns are seen in flames; one, l., is inscribed Norfolk, the other, r., is Æsopus. Norfolk, Virginia, was bombarded 1 Jan. 1776 by Lord Dunmore the Governor and afterwards burnt by the Americans to prevent Dunmore's establishing himself there. Æsopus was burnt by General Vaughan, Oct. 1777, see No. 5470.

Beneath the design is engraved: To his Excell^y Gen^l Washington. Pat. Pat^{re}. This Plate is humbly Address'd by His Obedient Serv^t Tho^s Tradeless

*Oh Wash'gton is there not some Chosen Curse
Some Hidden Thunder; in the stores of Heav'n,
Red with uncommon Wrath, to BLAST those MEN,
Who owe their Greatness to their Country's RUIN
Addis^s Cato.*

Above the design are the words Veluti in Speculum (which then ornamented the proscenium of the theatre). The supposed artists' names indicate that the war and the distresses of the country are due to the designs of 'Stuart' (Bute), which have been carried out by Germain, North and Co., and (presumably) to Sir Francis Bernard, Governor of Massachusetts (1760-9), who gave great offence to the colonists. For the phrase 'State of the Nation' cf. No. 5479. For distress caused by the war cf. Nos. 5535, 5548 [12], 5667. The king is now regarded as a tyrant—'Sultan', through whose obstinacy the country is in distress, cf. Nos. 5544-7.

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5575 A NEW MODE OF SETTLING THE AFFAIRS OF THE NATION, OR TRYING THE FORCE OF GOVERNMENT POWDER.

*Pub^d Dec^r 11th 1779.*¹

Engraving (coloured impression). A representation of the duel in Hyde Park, 29 Nov. 1779, between William Adam, M.P. for Gatton, and Charles Fox. Adam (l.), in Highland dress but wearing spurred boots, takes deliberate aim, his pistol supported on his l. arm. Fox (r.) holds his pistol pointing upwards, his hat is in his l. hand. He says, I have a breast that like an ample Shield can take in all & verge enough for more. His second points at Adam. Adam's second stands behind him, in apparent unconcern, a number of pistols are stuck through his belt. At Adam's feet lie a broadside, The Fox Hunter A New Song and a letter addressed For Mr Adam . . . from North. On the letter has been added in faint water-colour, Of the Fox bring me his Brush so doing . . . y^r W^t [this shall be your Warrant]. Between Fox and his second lies a paper, inscribed yours &c. Eden. The background is an avenue of trees.

The duel arose out of a remark in Fox's speech on the address which was resented by Adam, who demanded a public disavowal in the newspapers. It caused great political heat since it was represented as an attempt by a Scot and Ministerialist to get rid of Fox. Adam's second was Major

¹ The rest of the publication line is cut off.

Humberston, Col. Richard Fitzpatrick acted for Fox. See Ann. Reg. 1779, p. 235, 1780, pp. 56, 152. Walpole, Letters, xi. 67-8, 72-4. Fox said Adam would have killed him had he used any but Government powder. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 221 n. See also No. 5625.

$9\frac{1}{16} \times 12\frac{7}{8}$ in. (clipped).

5576 AN ASS IN THE GREEK PALLIUM TEACHING¹ [1779]

Jas Green Sculp Oxon

Engraving. Frontispiece to 'Fanatical Conversion; or, 'Methodism Displayed', verses attacking John Wesley. A design in an oval frame supported upon objects which rest on a carved bracket. Within the oval an ass on its hind legs (r.) draped in a cloak, addresses two women, one seated on a bench of pseudo-classical pattern, the other standing. They wear classical draperies and are in profile to the l. The frame rests upon a birch rod and books, one inscribed Priscian, another Lycophron. Beside them lie a flat clerical hat with a curved brim, bunches of poppies and a scroll. The title is engraved on a bow which decorates the top of the oval.

The ass is Wesley addressing two converts. The verses, illustrated with citations from Wesley's 'Fanatical Journals', purport to unravel 'the delusive Craft of that well-inscribed System of pious Sorcery which turns Lions into Lambs, called, in Derision, Methodism'. A scurrilous pamphlet in verse, published by Bew, like Nos. 5493-6 by the same author.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

B.M.L., 840. l. 33/2.

5577 DR ÆOLUS TROPE, [c. 1779] PERFORMING A SIMILE, IN COACH-MAKERS HALL

Engraving. An orator, bending forward and gesticulating, his r. arm raised, his l. holding a cane. His audience, seated on benches to his r. and l. or standing behind, listen with expressions varying from astonished admiration to amusement.

Beneath the title is etched, 'The Ministry Sir, is like a Thief in the Cellar eating his master's bowels.' See 3^d Doctor's Speech Sept^r 16: 79.

The speaker is possibly Dr. Richard Price, he has a certain resemblance to the later portrait of the doctor, but is not wearing clerical dress. Many political meetings were held in Coachmakers' Hall. The manner resembles that of Nos. 5540, 5573.

$7 \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5578 ANTICIPATION.

A NEW MODE OF RAISING SUPPLIES, BY S^r BOREAS
BLUBBER, OR WAYS & MEANS, FOR 1780.

Engraving. Lord North (r.), in profile to the l., points a pistol at two men who are squatting down, holding up their coat-tails. He is trying to force them to evacuate supplies and says, I'll drain both Jew & Gentile. One is a fat Englishman, saying We are quite exhausted my Lord. The other, a bearded Jew wearing a hat, says, Will you give Twenty p^r Cent. Two coins and an empty purse inscribed Vacuum lie on the ground. Beside North is a sheet of paper inscribed Annihilation of Empire by L^d N—h. Behind North (r.) hangs a map, America, the country indicated by a few lines. Behind the other two (l.) hangs a picture, The goose & Golden Eggs: a man and woman have cut open a goose which lies on a table in front of a cottage, they hold up their hands in astonishment at finding it empty of eggs. Cf. p. 216.

¹ This plate was the frontispiece to The Rod by H. Layng, 1754, B.M.L. 11630. f. 32; see No. 3283.

One of many satires on North's budgets, cf. No. 5703. See also Nos. 4968, 5541, 5542, 5637, 5703, 5964, &c. For 20 per cent. cf. Nos. 4926, 5012.

8 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 13 in.

5579 THE PRESENT STATE OF GREAT BRITAIN. [?1779]

ƒ. Phillips Fecit

Pub^d by W. Humphrey, N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. Great Britain or John Bull (c.) stands half-asleep, his arms folded, holding a staff on which is the cap of liberty (the word Liberty inscribed on it in large letters). America (r.), a Red Indian with a head-dress of feathers, is about to take the cap from its staff. A Scotsman, his arm behind John Bull's neck, holds the staff of liberty with his l. hand which rests on John's shoulder, while he looks ferociously towards a lean figure personifying France (l.) whom he has seized by the cravat. The Scot wears full Highland dress with a dirk and sporran, his cap is ornamented with a thistle and covered with ostrich-feathers. France threatens the Scot with his fists; he is lean with a cadaverous face, his hair in a high toupet with an enormously long, tightly-bound queue which is decorated with a fleur-de-lys. John Bull is in quasi-military dress with cockaded hat, epaulettes and a sash. On the ground kneels a stout Dutchman wearing a steeple-crowned hat, his nose suggesting addiction to brandy. He draws a netted purse from John Bull's pocket.

The apparently favourable representation of Scotland is exceptional; it may indicate the much greater activity of recruiting in Scotland than in England, and the number of Scottish regiments raised for the war. For similar satires on Holland see No. 5557, &c.

10 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 15 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5580 BY HIS MAJESTYS ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE NEW INVENTED METHOD OF PUNISHING STATE
CRIMINALS. [? 1779]

Engraving. Britannia, her shield hanging from her shoulders, is about to be torn in pieces by three horses, who are being violently assailed by their riders with scourges and huge spurs. She lies at the centre of cross-roads, one (l.) inscribed To America; up this gallops a horse inscribed Tyranny, to which Britannia's r. ankle is bound. Her wrists are tied by ropes to the horses Venality and Ignorance, which are galloping (r.) on the roads To Spain and To France respectively. Her l. ankle is attached to a post inscribed Court Influence which is grasped by a stout seated man wearing a riband, evidently Lord North, though his head is hidden by his arms. He sits on the fourth road, that of Despotism. The three horses are ridden by men ferociously using huge spurs; two flourish knotted scourges, the third a spiked club.

Behind Britannia is a large rectangular pedestal or altar decorated with a chain, and with the inscription Great is our Lord, and Great is his Power: Yea, and his Wisdom is infinite. From this watches George III, smiling vacuously, with a watchman's rattle in one hand, a model of a cock, apparently standing on a pair of breeches, in the other. This is perhaps an allusion to the king as a 'botching taylor', see No. 5573. He lies supported on his elbows, across him strides a Scotsman in a kilt, evidently Bute, his arms outstretched, holding in each hand a whip with two long lashes, with which he urges on the horses below. He wears a large thistle. A long ladder leans against the side of the pedestal. Above the road leading To America a winged figure is flying away, carrying the cap of Liberty on a staff.

The date is probably after the declaration of war by Spain in June 1779. Mason ended his Epistle to Dr Shebbeare, 1777, with the words:

Till mock'd and jaded with the puppet-play,
 Old England's genius turns with scorn away,
 Ascends his sacred bark, the sails unfurl'd,
 And steers his state to the wide western world:
 High on the helm majestic Freedom stands,
 In act of cold contempt she waves her hands,
 Take, slaves, she cries, the realms that I disown,
 Renounce your birthright, and destroy my throne.

Cf. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 101-2.

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 10\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5581 Ô QU'EL D'ESTAIN.

[c. 1779]

Engraving. A French satire. Design in a circle inset in an oblong. Within the circle, on the border of which the title is inscribed, a tiger or puma is being attacked by a lion, a serpent and a cock. The cock, which is about the same size as the lion, is taking the most active part, being on the tiger's back, and biting furiously. Beneath the fight is engraved, Tu la [sic] voulu. In the corners of the oblong are the heads of the four animals; in the upper r. corner the cock, La France; in the upper l. corner the lion, L'Espagne; in the lower l. corner the serpent, L'Amerique, in the lower r. corner the tiger, L'Angleterre, looking up with a despairing expression. Beneath the design is engraved Du Sein de la tyrannie naquit l'Independence. M. A. Voltaire.

The punning title indicates the one success (in an inglorious command) of d'Estaing (for Destin), the taking of Granada, 4 July 1779, of which there is a print in the Print Department called La Valeur Récompensée. It is evidently after the rupture of relations with Spain 16 June 1779, and probably before news of the failure of d'Estaing before Savannah Oct. 1779, after which he was superseded by de Grasse, see No. 5627. For a Dutch allusion to the capture see No. 5719. See also B. Edwards, History of the West Indies, 1793, i. 376 f., and cf. Walpole, Letters, xi. 101. The print illustrates the importance attached by France to the destruction of Anglo-American commerce, as well as of English prestige and sea power. See also Nos. 5472, 5726, 5727, 5859, &c.

Collection de Vinck, No. 1175. (For other French prints on this subject see ibid., Nos. 1172, 1173, 1174-9. Of these, No. 1176, LE DESTIN MOLESTANT LES ANGLOIS is noteworthy. D'Estaing presents a palm to America, as a Red Indian holding the staff and cap of Liberty. Fame publishes to the Universe the exploits of the French hero who leads a bear and two foxes chained and muzzled, representing the peoples of Great Britain. America is enthroned on bales of goods and casks inscribed Ris pour la France; Indigo pour le Repos de la Mer; Mediteranée; Tabac pour la Hollande; Tabac pour la Russie; Tabac pour la France 1780; Indigo pour la France; Tabac pour l'Allemagne. Cf. No. 5473.)

$8\frac{5}{16} \times 12\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5582 GEORGE THE III^D KING OF GREAT BRITAIN &. &.

[? 1779]

Se vend chez J. M. Will a Augsbourg.

Mezzotint. Apparently one of a series, see No. 5290. George III. T.Q.L. leaning against a pillar (l.) looking to r. In his r. hand is a small telescope (?); he frowns, his l. hand is extended as if in argument or protestation. In the background (r.), behind a parapet, is an engagement between two ships at close range. Beneath the title is engraved, not in Gothic script, Geb. 4 Jun. 1738 . . . [&c., &c.].

Perhaps intended to represent the king's supposed dismay at the capture of the Serapis by Paul Jones, see Nos. 5559-5565 (the encounter was watched from the cliffs of Scarborough).

For the great importance given to this exploit as a blow to the prestige of England see No. 5715.

$13 \times 9\frac{7}{16}$ in.

1779

PERSONAL SATIRES

5583—5595

Series of tête-à-tête portraits.

- 5583 N° XXXIV. MADAME DE B—G
N° XXXV. THE SKILFUL NEGOCIATOR

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St Johns Gate
Jan^y 1. 1779.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 625. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of 'Count M—n', minister of the King of Prussia. He is the Comte de Maltzan, Minister Plenipotentiary of Prussia. Mme de B is the distressed widow of a French marchand de drap, who has come to England hoping to earn a living by teaching.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

- 5584 N° XXXVII. THE ARTFUL MISTRESS.
N° XXXVIII. THE PRIEST OF NATURE

*Published as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr near St Johns Gate
Jan^y 20. 1779.*

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 675 (Supplement). Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. The man, in profile to the l., is handsome with an aquiline nose and wears a fashionable wig with a clerical gown and bands. He is said to have been the son of a collier in Wales, educated by a benevolent clergyman. He is a wit and an author, was a friend of Sterne, has visited Voltaire at Ferney, when he styled himself the Priest of Nature, and has a chapel in Marylebone, said to be lucrative. The lady is Mrs. M., wife of a clergyman in Soho Square.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

- 5585 N° II. THE CAPRICIOUS MARCHIONESS.
N° III. THE BOISTEROUS LOVER

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate Feb. 1. 1779.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xi. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the daughter of the Earl of H. [Holderness] and of her lover. She is Amelia, Baroness Darcy and Baroness Conyers, wife of the Marquis of Carmarthen, afterwards 5th Duke of Leeds. He is Captain John Byron, son of Admiral Byron. They married 9 June 1779 after her divorce in May 1779 by Carmarthen.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5586 N° IV. THE FAIR VIRGINIAN.

N° V. THE DEVOTED GENERAL.

Published by A. Hamilton Junr St Johns Gate March 1. 1779.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xi. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of General Burgoyne. The lady is the widow of a loyalist Virginian planter, who had been imprisoned in Ticonderoga by the Americans, released on the capture of Ticonderoga. She is said to have accompanied him to England after Saratoga.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442.

5587 N° VII. MRS A—ST—D.

N° VIII. LORD CHAMPÊTRE.

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate April 1. 1779.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xi. 121. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of Lord Champêtre, and the celebrated Mrs A—mst—d'. An account of Edward, 12th Earl of Derby (1752-1834), so called from the fête given on his marriage 23 June 1774 with Elizabeth, d. of the Duke of Hamilton, and of Mrs. Armstead who afterwards married C. J. Fox. She is here said to be the daughter of a shoemaker, who turned methodist and became bankrupt, on which she became a courtesan. She was Elizabeth Bridget Cane, 1750-1842.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5588 N° X. THE LOVELY EMILY.

N° XI. THE MILITARY SECRETARY.

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate May 1. 1779.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, x. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Charles Jenkinson (1727-1808), afterwards Earl of Liverpool, recently appointed Secretary at War. The frequent inaccuracy of biographical detail in this series is illustrated by the statement that his father was 'in the mercantile line' but unfortunate in trade, and the son 'commenced stockbroker'. Jenkinson was third son of Sir Charles Jenkinson, Bart., colonel of the Royal Horse Guards Blue. Emily Roberts is said to have been removed by him from a brothel to a private lodging.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5589 N° XIII. THE CAPTIVATING LAIS.

N° XIV. THE FAVOURITE OF THE FAIR.

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St Johns Gate June 1. 1779.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xi. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the Duke of Ancaster, identified from the part he is said to have taken in the riots on the acquittal of Keppel. He died in July of this year, of scarlet fever, and was to have married Lady Horatia Waldegrave (not mentioned here). Walpole, Last Journals, ii. 248 and n. Letters, x, p. 542. The lady is a courtesan, Miss St——y, whom he is alleged to have met at a masquerade at the Pantheon.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5590 N° XVI. MRS S——L

N° XVII. THE NOBLE RETALIATER.

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate July 1. 1779.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xi. 289. Two bust portraits in one frame illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Lord Tyrconnel (1750–1805), who having divorced his wife, see No. 5412, went to Ireland and the Continent. After returning he was sued by Mr. S—— for crim. con. with his wife, Lady Elizabeth B. now Mrs. S. [sic] in Trin. Term, 1778.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5591 N° XIX. MRS P——T.

N° XX. THE MANILLA HERO

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate August 1. 1779.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xi. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the Manilla Hero, and M^{rs} P—tts'. An account of Sir William Draper (1721–87), praising his courage and ability in the controversy with Junius.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5592 N° XXII THE AMIABLE LAURA

N° XXIII THE MODERN APELLES

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate Sep 1. 1779.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xi. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Sir Joshua Reynolds. Laura is Miss J——gs [Jennings], the mistress of Lord F., who commissioned a portrait of her from Reynolds, and left her on account of his jealousy of Reynolds, whose mistress she is thereupon alleged to have become.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5593 N° XXV. MADAME VANB——N.

N° XXVI. THE EXPERIENCED AMBASSADOR

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate Oct 1779 [sic].

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xi. 457. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Sir Joseph Yorke (1724–92), afterwards Baron Dover, see No. 5568. Mme V. is the widow of a rich merchant of Amsterdam.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5594 N° XXVIII. THE CYPRIAN VOTARY.

N° XXIX. THE UNIVERSAL GALLANT.

Published by A. Hamilton Jun^r near St John's Gate, Nov^r 1. 1779.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xi. 513. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. They illustrate an account of the amours of Mr. Med—t, identified by H. Bleackley as Medlicott. Thomas Hutchins Medlycot was M.P. for Milbourn-Port, 1780-1, being part owner of the Borough. See Oldfield, Representative History, iv. 488. See also Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, pp. 67-9. She is a courtesan who passes as Miss Sm—th.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5595 N° XXXI. MRS W—R.

N° XXXII. LORD L—.

Published by A. Hamilton Jun^r near St John's Gate Dec^r 1. 1779.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xi. 569. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Lord Loudoun (1705-82). Mrs. W—r is the widowed daughter of a curate, whom he is said to have engaged as housekeeper, 'to have the sole command of his house'. She is Kitty Walker. G.E.C., Complete Peerage.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5596 A TIP TOP—ADJUTANT.Pub^d Feb. 11. 1779 by H Humphrey N° 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured impression). A man in riding-dress walking in profile from r. to l., a riding switch in his l. hand. A portrait of Edward Topham (1751-1820), captain and adjutant in the first regiment of horse-guards. He brought his regiment to a high state of efficiency, for which he was thanked by the king and figured in print shops as a 'tip-Top-Adjutant'. He was noted for his original style of dress and the care and elegance of his manners. His dress with breeches and sleeves moulding the figure anticipates the fashions generally associated with a considerably later date. He was much caricatured later by Gillray and Rowlandson. Topham was an amateur caricaturist, see index of artists.

8 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{16}$ in.5597 [EMANUEL HENDRICKS.]R. Dighton Pinx^t R Laurie Sculp^tPrinted for Jⁿ Smith Cheapside June 25, 1779.

Mezzotint. Design in an oval frame. H.L. portrait of a man seated behind a table wearing a hat. He holds in his r. hand a large frothing pot of porter which rests on the table, looking at the spectator, his l. hand extended. On the table is a newspaper, Daily A[dvertiser], pipes, and a paper of tobacco. On the wall above his head the lower part of a framed picture of an ass is visible.

Portrait of a tailor in Cursitor Street, died c. 1787, celebrated for being able to empty a pot of porter at a draught.

Chaloner Smith, ii. 806.

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 6\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5598 THE AUSPICIOUS MARRIAGE!¹

[1 Jan. 1779]

TH (Monogram)

Woodcut. From the Town and Country Magazine, x. 623. A woman, fashionably dressed, is being led to the altar of Hymen by a youth. The altar is decorated with a mask and chains. Hymen, who stands on the altar, draws a veil over her face, holding her torch downwards. On the ground is a sleeping cupid. Behind the bride is a house, inscribed Alfred House; on the ground at her feet are books, the cap and staff of Liberty (which she is treading under foot), an inkpot and pen.

This symbolizes the marriage of Mrs. Catherine Macaulay, aged 57, with William Graham, aged 21, the younger brother of James Graham the quack doctor. Alfred House (2 Alfred Street, Bath) had been presented to her by Dr. Thomas Wilson; on her marriage he wished to eject her from it. She is here represented as throwing aside her historical writings and her patriotic zeal for an unnatural marriage. For Mrs. Macaulay and Dr. Wilson see Nos. 5410, 5441. See also the Westminster Magazine, vi. 59, Feb. 1778, for an article on her History illustrated by a W.L. portrait.

$4\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5599–5602, though without numbers, appear to continue the series published by Darly 1776–8, see No. 5369.

5599 A BOND AND JUDGEMENT.

Pub^d acc^s to Act Feb^y 20, 1779 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. Sir John Fielding conducting an examination at Bow Street. On the l. sits Fielding on the bench, which is raised and divided from the room by a low partition. He wears a hat and, according to his custom, has a bandage across his eyes. Over his head hangs a pair of equally balanced scales, emblem of Justice. Behind Sir John and standing on his r. is a man wearing a medallion inscribed G.R. On Fielding's l. sits an interested spectator, holding his hat and cane. On the opposite side of the room (r.), behind the bar and standing on a raised platform, are two wretched-looking prisoners, their legs shackled. Behind them (r.) a constable, or perhaps a third prisoner, is partly visible. In front of Fielding sits a clerk writing at a small table; either he or the man standing behind Sir John must be Bond. A man stands beside him, holding up in his r. hand two pistols, with his l. he points to the prisoners. On the floor are house-breaking tools: a pick or hammer, a club, and a bunch of keys. Behind him stands a woman with a ragged apron, holding a handkerchief to her face, which is concealed by her hat. Next her stands a man with a patch over one eye; a third man reads a book, perhaps administering an oath to one of the other two who are probably witnesses. Behind them, at right angles to the bench, is a crowd of spectators divided from the room by a barrier.

Fielding's examinations at Bow Street were one of the sights of the town. Cf. Somerville, My Own Life and Times. For Bond see No. 6120.

$8\frac{3}{8} \times 13\frac{1}{8}$ in.

¹ The title has been cut off, it is supplied from the magazine.

5600 THE THREE GRACES OF COX-HEATH.¹*Pub^d acc^s to act Mar 4th 1779 by Darly 39 Strand.*

Engraving. Three ladies, wearing military coats with epaulettes, cravats, and frilled waistcoats. Their hats are looped and cockaded, with tassels hanging from them; each carries a long riding switch. The one in the centre is very stout, the other two who stand in profile looking towards her are slim. Circular tents fill the background.

They are probably the duchesses of Gordon, Devonshire and Grafton, who with other wives of commanding officers were presented to the king when he visited Coxheath Camp on 3 Nov. 1778. London Chronicle, 3-5 Nov. 1778; see also No. 5601. One of many satires on the camp at Coxheath, see No. 5523, &c.

In a volume in the Banks Collection ('English Costume 1760-1817', fo. 24) there is an engraving with the title, The Military Dutchess with a distant view of the Camp; it is a tall and elegant lady wearing a quasi-military dress resembling that of the satire, except for the hat which is large and feathered as in No. 5601.

8 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5601 THE COXHEATH RACE FOR £100, NO CROSSING NOR JOSTLING, WON BY MISS TITTUP AG^t TUMBLING JENNY.Pub: by Darly 39 Strand, 29 of Oct^r 1779.

Engraving (coloured impression). Three ladies ride from r. to l.; all are dressed in large cockaded hats with ostrich feathers, and military coats. The foremost, holding up a large riding switch, turns round to look at the two behind her. The next horse is falling on his knees, his somewhat stout rider has lost her seat and her stirrups and is about to fall head-first, her hat and riding switch are on the ground. The last rider appears to be holding back her horse. Two dogs run beside the horses.

They are perhaps intended for the 'Three Graces of Coxheath', see No. 5600, in which case 'Tumbling Jenny' would be Jane Maxwell, Duchess of Gordon ('Jenny of Monteith'). For satires on Coxheath Camp see No. 5523, &c. 'Miss Tittup' is a character in Garrick's Bon Ton (1775), cf. No. 5518.

8 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 13 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5602 A VISIT TO THE CAMP.Pub^d by M Darly 39 Strand Nov^r 25 1779

Engraving (a coloured impression). Three elderly couples, much caricatured, walk arm in arm, one after the other from l. to r. through one of the camps (Coxheath or Warley) which were then so much visited. A smartly dressed soldier, wearing epaulettes, points out the way. The women are dressed in the fashion of the day, one wearing a large calash-hood, see No. 5434, &c. The foremost man affects a military bearing and walks as if marching. In the background are tents, beside them stands a woman with a military air.

One of many satires on militia camps, see No. 5523, &c.

8 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{16}$ in.

¹ There is a plate, v. 2. 78 in Darly's series, dated 5 Nov. 1778, called 'The Graces of Coxheath', depicting an ungainly officer executing a goose-step. In the collection of Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street (1933).

5602^A Another impression, from which Darly's etched publication line has been erased, and an engraved imprint added:

Pub^d Nov^r 23^d [sic] 1779 by H Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street.

5603 PRATTLE THE POLITICAL APOTECARY.

[? Gillray.]

Pub by M Darly 39 Strand Aug^t 12. 1779.

Engraving. Caricature portrait of a man standing in profile to the r. He holds his hat awkwardly in his r. hand, his l. is thrust into his waistcoat, his toes are much turned out. He wears a thin pigtail queue. From his pocket hangs some object resembling a syringe. Beneath the title is etched, Beg your pardon my Dear Sir—had it from my Lud Fiddle faddle, nothing to do but cut 'em off pass the Susquhanna and proceed to Boston possess himself of Crown point then—Philadelphia, and South Carolina woud have fallen of course—& a communication opend with the Northern Army—as easily as I'd open a Vein.

On the back of another impression has been written 'M^r Atkinson, Apothecary, Pall Mall'. This figure (reversed) appears in No. 5614. In the manner of Gillray's Bombardinian, see Nos. 5606–8.

$6\frac{15}{16} \times 5\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5603^A Another impression (coloured) from which Darly's imprint has been stopped out, with the publication line,

Pub^d by H Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street.

5604 THE WHORE'S LAST SHIFT.¹

[Gillray.]

Publish'd Feb^y 9th 1779. by W. Humphrey.

Engraving (coloured impression). A woman stands in a sordid and poverty-stricken room. She is naked except for her shoes and ragged stockings, and is washing a garment, her 'last shift', in a broken chamber-pot supported on a broken chair. Another garment is in a broken basin on the floor; her hat and outer-garments also lie on the floor. Beside them are two pill-boxes and a paper inscribed Leakes famous Pills. Her hair is elaborately dressed in a pyramid, decorated with feathers, flowers, and ribbons. The low bed has tattered coverings. A casement window (l.) is open, showing the roof of a neighbouring house; on the sill a cat miaows. A broadside ballad is pinned to the window recess: The comforts of Single Life. An Old Song. On the wall is a torn print, Ariadne Forsaken. The plaster has peeled off the wall in patches, showing bricks.

Grego, Gillray, p. 28.

$13 \times 9\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5605 PADDY ON HORSE-BACK

[Gillray.]

Publish'd March 4th 1779. by W. Humphrey.

Engraving. An Irishman seated on a bull which is galloping across open country towards London, seen in the distance on the r., St. Paul's being visible. He wears a short jacket and ragged knee-breeches, his legs and feet are bare. His hair is dishevelled and he is urging on the bull with his hat, which is raised in his l. hand. He sits facing the animal's tail, which he holds in his l. hand. From his saddle-bag appear books: S^t Pat . . . and New System of Fortune Hunting; a paper hangs out of it inscribed with a list of ladies with fortunes, beginning Lady Mary Rotten Rump S^t James Square 30,000£. A sack inscribed Potatoes is tied to the bull in front of the saddle. A milestone shows that it is IIII Miles from [London].

¹ On the plate is written (not in a contemporary hand) portrait of Lady Worsley. Cf. Nos. 6105–12.

It was an old gibe that Irishmen came to London to make their fortunes by marriage. This attack on the Irish may be connected with the proposals for removing restrictions from Irish trade which were so much opposed by English merchants, cf. Nos. 5548, 5572.

Grego, Gillray, pp. 28-9; Wright and Evans, p. 1.

8 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5606 BUMBARDINIAN.¹

CONFERRING UPON STATE AFFAIRS WITH ONE IN OFFICE. [? 1779]

[Gillray.]

Pub^d by Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving (a coloured impression). A tall thin man, much caricatured, in general's uniform, his hat held stiffly under his l. arm, his head and shoulders thrown back with a self-important air, his toes turned out grotesquely. He wears the order of the Thistle. A short stout man (l.) looks up at him, his l. thumb held to his nose, his r. hand on his hip, his legs and feet in a curiously contorted position. They are Sir R. Hamilton, Bart., Lt.-General 1777, died 10 Aug. 1786, and Sir Grey Cooper, Secretary to the Treasury. Two dogs, one with a bone, are near them. Behind (r.) the end of a small house appears, the door inscribed Bombardinium 40. A man and woman are about to enter it, he carries a cradle, she has bundles inscribed Childbed Linen.

On a mound in the background is a small circular temple, its dome surmounted by a star on which a figure of Fame holding a wreath and a trumpet is grotesquely poised. Under the dome is a circular altar, on which stands a partly naked figure, visible from the waist downwards. Before this two figures on a minute scale, one representing Hamilton, the other Cooper, are kneeling. Near the temple a man is tipping on to the grass the contents of a small cart led by a horse. Beneath the title is engraved, Important blanks in Nature's Mighty roll. Churchill.

A satire on the self-importance of General Hamilton (who had not the order of the Thistle), and on some scandal. Apparently an earlier version of Bombardinian, see No. 5608. See also No. 5607.

11 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

¹ The O.E.D. gives Bumbard, bumble bee, drone, and, fig., a droning person, a driveller.

5607 BOMBARDINIAN.

IMPORTANT BLANKS IN NATURES MIGHTY ROLL;

[Gillray.]

Pub. by M Darly 39 Strand Sep^r 19. 1779

Engraving (a coloured impression). Sir R. Hamilton stands as in No. 5606 but reversed. Behind him a path leads across grass to the temple, which is larger; the two kneeling figures are reversed. The figure of Fame is absent. Probably an earlier version of No. 5606. See also No. 5608.

10 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.5608 BOMBARDINIAN.

CONFERRING UPON STATE AFFAIRS WITH ONE IN OFFICE. [? 1779]

[Gillray.]

Sold at N^o 227 Strand [W. Humphrey]

Engraving. Another and probably later version of No. 5606; the two men have labels coming from their mouths containing words, and are more correctly drawn. The house on the r. is a more important building and its door has a plate inscribed Lieut: Gen^l Bombardi . . N^o 40. Grey Cooper stands at a different angle, showing more than his profile, his forefinger is laid against his cheek. He is saying Then—My Led and I—his Ledship introduced the Affair you and I know of. Sir R. Hamilton (Bombardinian) answers Hum—Aye—Mum. The same quotation from Churchill is engraved under the title. An inscription etched in the lower r. corner has been obliterated, the last words seem to resemble ŷ. Sayers.

Grego, Gillray, p. 43, ascribes the print, and the contemporary scandal which led to it, to 'the early part of 1782', but since No. 5607 was published in 1779 this print probably belongs to the same year. See also No. 5606. 12 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5609 THE LIBERTY OF THE SUBJECT.

[Gillray]

Publish'd Oct^r 15th 1779, by W. Humphrey, N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. A press-gang at work in a London street, at the end of which appears the dome of St. Paul's. A sailor (c.) strides towards the spectator, a club in his r. hand, dragging along a lean tailor, who holds up his hands in dismay. An infuriated woman (l.) has seized the sailor by his hair and the r. ear while she pummels him with her knee. Another sailor behind has seized her wrist and raises a club to strike her. A third sailor (r.) holds the tailor by the l. arm. A naval officer (r.) walks beside the party with a drawn cutlass. Behind are other sailors. A woman (l.) wearing stays or 'jumps' raises a mop in both hands to smite a sailor; an infant clutches her petticoats. A group of spectators (l.) includes a woman carrying a baby. A dog barks at the fray.

Resembles the manner of Nos. 5523, 5524, and is possibly after Mortimer.

Grego, Gillray, p. 29.

9 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5610 IMPLEMENTS FOR SADDLING AN ESTATE—A PEICE OF STILL LIFE—ADDRESS'D TO THE JOCKY CLUB

[Gillray.]

Pub^d by W. Humphrey 6 Dec^r 1779 N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. A saddle (l.), a jockey-cap, a riding-whip, and a covered vase or cup, fluted, with a square base (r.). It is encircled with a plain band on which is drawn a horse-race, one horse and the hind-quarters of the one in front being visible. On the wall behind is The Gamblers Coat of arms: on an escutcheon are dice, a pair of legs from the knee downwards, playing cards, a pair of crossed pistols, and three billiard-balls. Behind the shield are crossed billiard-cues. A dice box serves as crest. On the wall on each side of the coat of arms is a placard: (l.) A Sweepstakes 3000 G^{ns} each . . . and (r.) Eclipse 30 Mares 50 g^{ns} a Mare. Beneath the title is engraved, The Painter has drawn these implements with some degree of Success, but they are very seldom Successful to any body but a Painter, the Cap is made of so happy a size as to fit any Blockhead, it is Turfically call'd a Cap of Knowledge, but Economically, a fool's Cap.

Grego, Gillray, p. 29.

7 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 13 in.5611 POLITENESS.J. N. fecit et Inv^t 1779. [? Gillray.]Publish'd 8th Dec^r 1779.

Engraving, partly mezzotinted. John Bull (l.) and a Frenchman (r.) sit on two chairs; each scowls over his shoulder at the other. The Englishman is stout and plainly dressed, his hair is short and without powder, he wears top-boots. In his r. hand he holds a foaming tankard which rests on his knee; in his l. is a gnarled stick. The Frenchman is thin, wears a pig-tail queue, ruffled shirt and laced waistcoat. He clutches in both hands a bowl in which is a spoon, evidently the soup-meagre of English caricature. Each man has a dog under his chair, and the beasts snarl at each other. The English dog is some sort of mastiff; his collar is inscribed T. Crus[ty]; the French dog is of greyhound type. Over John Bull's head is engraved You be D—m'd; over the Frenchman's, Vous etes une Bete.

An early representation, the first in the collection, of the typical John Bull, cf. No. 5860. See also No. 5790.

Apparently an earlier version of No. 5612. Cf. the signature of No. 5616, in which Gillray may have been using J. Nixon's initials, as he afterwards did those of James Sayers.

6 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 8 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.5612 POLITENESS.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d by H. Humphrey, St^t James Street¹

[n.d.]

Engraving. A more elaborate version of No. 5611 drawn with more freedom. A joint of beef hangs on the wall behind John Bull; a bundle of frogs behind the Frenchman. The Frenchman holds an open snuff-box instead of a bowl of soup; a laced hat is under his arm; he wears a bag-wig. John Bull's tankard is inscribed John Bull the Buttock of Beef . . .

¹ Another publication line has been obliterated: Pub^d by J. A. . . . N^o . . . Castle Street London . . . is just legible.

Beneath the design is etched:

*With Porter Roast Beef & Plumb Pudding well cram'd,
Jack English declares that Mons' may be D——d.
The Soup Meagre Frenchman such Language dont suit,
So he Grins Indignation & calls him a Brute.*

Cf. No. 5790. Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830.

6½ × 9¾ in.

5613 A MEETING OF CITY POLITICIAN'S.

Plate 2. of every thing humorous, ridiculous, and satyirical. Published July 30th 1779 by W. Richardson N^o 68 High Holborn.

Engraving. Men seated round a table, drinking, smoking, and reading newspapers. On the r. an artisan, wearing a flat cap and apron, drinks from a tankard while he reads The Morning Post. Next him a man in back view reads The Daily Adver[tiser], a monkey sitting on his shoulder, pulls the string-like queue of his ill-made wig. Next (l.), an elderly man in an arm-chair, wearing spectacles and a cap, holds up his hand as if to demand attention; he reads The London Chronicle, on which is inscribed It is reputed that nixt [sic] sessions of Parliament, there will be a tax laid upon horn'd Cattle; his neighbours listen to the news with expressions of consternation. The farther side of the table is crowded; one man reads The Evening Post, another the London Gazette, on which is inscribed Extract of a Letter from America. Beneath the design is engraved:

*With staring Eye, & Open Ear,
Each Cobling, Horned, City seer,
Swallow's down Politics with Beer.
Neglects his Family & Calling.
To enter into Party Brawling.
Gets Drunk & Swears—the Nation's falling.*

The absorption of tradesmen and artisans in politics to the neglect of their business was a common eighteenth-century theme, see No. 5074, &c.

7½ × 11¼ in.

5614 APOTHECARIES—TAYLORS, &c. CONQUERING FRANCE AND SPAIN.

[? Gillray.]

Publish'd Sept 29th 1779. by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. A scene of disorder; men sitting and standing round a circular table; they are smoking, gesticulating and drinking. A very fat man, seated on the farther side of the table, wearing a hat and smoking, his hands folded, says, we want men of Activity. His neighbour, also smoking, adds To destroy all their Looms. The next man (l.), clenching his fists, says, Blood & Guts, what are we all about—our Armys are grazing in Idleness, like a Flock of Sheep till they die of the Rot—I'd send them to Slaughter all the Cattle on the Enemy's Coast & make the Papist Scoundrells keep a long Lent of it. A man (r.) holding up a foaming tankard, says Old England will never be conquer'd while we can Brew such Drink as this. A barber, a comb stuck in his hair, an implement for curling hair protruding from his pocket, leans back in his chair, saying, We're all in the Suds—I could shew them a way to lower their French Toupees. On his r. stands the figure of 'Prattle' (Atkinson of Pall Mall), as in No. 5603 but in reverse. He is saying, Beg your Pardon my D^r Sir, meant no Offence my D^r M^r Tallow—too much Love & Respect—your Perfectly in the Right—of the same Opinion of my Led & I—they'll never Invade us as you say & my Lud Chatter observed to me the other Night at Lady Carbuncles. He is addressing a stout man standing on the l. of the table, who flourishes a stick in his r. hand while with a blow from his fist he overturns a punch-bowl, having upset a tankard, a lemon, and a number of wineglasses which are falling to the ground. He says Dont Talk to me of your Dukes & your Lords, I'm a True Born Englishman, & dont care for Nobody not I—they dare not invade us—Damme they dare not—you Glisten Pipe, you pitiful Plaister Spreader You— A dog barks at him. A thin and rather ragged-looking man on his r., his hands in his breeches pockets, says Invade us—Damme, what can Soup Meager do against Beef & Plumb Pudding; a pair of scissors projecting from his coat-pocket shows that he is a tailor; his stockings are ungartered and his shoes are unbuckled. On the extreme l. an elderly man with a tie-wig and wearing a hat and pince-nez, sits in a chair reading a newspaper; he holds up a hand in dismay saying, All's lost. Behind stands a waiter, his napkin under his arm, saying D^r Prattle says right—I'll go over to the Opposition and never drink another Pot with my Lords Footman. Hats are hung up on the wall, and a bracket-clock shows that it is one o'clock.

At this time the French and Spanish fleet in the Channel had recently threatened invasion, see No. 5554, &c. Cf. Nos. 5074, 5086, &c.

Resembles the manner of Gillray in Nos. 5606-8.

9 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5615 CITY BLOCKHEADS.

[1 Oct. 1779]

Woodcut. From the Town and Country Magazine, xi. 453. Illustration to a dialogue called The Battle of the Old Bailey. Aldermen are guzzling round a dinner-table, at the head of which is the Lord Mayor. The City arms are on the wall behind him. One of the aldermen (Plomer) has risen and aims a blow at the Lord Mayor (Plumbe), but is himself seized by another alderman.

This represents an affray which took place at the Old Bailey after dinner, when the glass was going round and the judges were present, see Public Advertiser, 18 Sept. 1779, and No. 5616.

3 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 4 in.

5616 THE MAGISTERIAL BRUISERS.

J. N. fecit 1779. [? Gillray.]

Publish'd Oct 5th 1779 by W. Humphrey.

Engraving. A more elaborate representation of the affray depicted in No. 5615. The scene is a room in the Old Bailey after a dinner during the Sessions. Two combatants, wearing civic gowns, one the Lord Mayor, on the ground in front of a long dinner-table are being pulled apart. One (r.) has seized his opponent's wig and is kicking him under the chin, the other (l.), the Mayor, has seized his neck-cloth. A judge in wig and gown (r.) holds the arm of the combatant on the r. and attempts to separate them. Behind them stands an alderman resembling Wilkes, holding up his hands in horror. On the far side of the table sit two judges, one drinking wine quite unconcerned, and a third man. An alderman with a gouty leg supported on sticks stands on the r. The Lord Mayor's chair at the head of the table is empty.

On each side of two deeply-recessed windows is an arched alcove, one (l.) with a statue of Justice, blindfolded, with a hood and scales; the other (r.) is Liberty, holding the cap of liberty on a staff. The cloth has been removed from the table, and on it are dishes of fruit, wine-bottles and wine-glasses. A chair (l.) has been overturned, fruit and broken china lie on the floor. Several ranks of wine-bottles stand in clusters behind the head of the table.

Beneath the design is etched:

*Two Wealthy Dons, at an Old Bailey Feast,
In City Pride and Honors, not the Least,
Some time ago, so rumour spread about
Differing in thoughts, Pell Mell, they both fell out,
DROSS the Lord Mayor, was first to raise the Flame,
And thus addresses MANGO, by his Name,
"If sixpence is to be had in any Place,
We're sure to see your Crabbed Sower Face,
For Gold has so wrap'd up thy Flinty Soul,
To get a Guinea you would reach the Pole,"*
MANGO at this with Indignation burns,
And at My Lord the Compliment returns,
"Thy Years (Old Gouty Dross) and shallow Sense,
Shields from my wrath thy matchless Impudence,
Yet, for thy Equal, search the City round,
So Base, so mean a Wretch, there can't be found."
Words brought on Words, when each with Passion glows,
And now from Fool and Knave, they fall to Blows
The Attack was fierce, till Friends did Intervene,
And put a Stop to this alarming Scene.

MORAL.

*The Men who Fight in Broughton's Way
May live to Fight another Day
But he who is in a Duel slain
He'll never rise to fight again.*

The affray, said to be 'occasioned by a dispute about a few pence on . . . a pot-house reckoning', and (presumably) this print are mentioned in City Biography, 1800, p. 24. The Lord Mayor was Samuel Plumbe, his antagonist William Plomer. Plumbe was a reputed miser, see No. 5617. In the manner of Gillray, for the signature J.N. cf. No. 5611.

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5617 MAGISTERIAL ECONOMY.

[c. 1779]

[? J. Nixon.]¹

Engraving. A reception at the Mansion House; a clock on the wall shows that it is twelve, the guests are hurrying away because the servants are extinguishing the candles. In the foreground (l.) two elderly bedizened women and two men are playing cards; they are unconscious that a stout man with a chain round his neck, apparently the Mayor himself, is directing a footman to blow out the candles on the table with a pair of bellows. The bellows are marked P., probably indicating Samuel Plumbe. Two other footmen are extinguishing candles, one with a pair of bellows, another with an extinguisher on a long rod. A group of three departing guests (r.), look over their shoulders in annoyance. Through a wide doorway is seen an inner room in which there is a procession of departing guests, led by the musicians carrying their instruments. From a gallery at the back of this room two other footmen are putting out candles. The large wall clock is over this gallery. On the wall behind the card-players are two H.L. portraits, one of Sr Richard Whittington wearing an eighteenth-century wig, and resting his hand on a cat which stands on a table; the other of a lady wearing a ruff, probably intended for Dame Whittington. Beneath verses are engraved, beginning,

A frugal Lord Mayor siez'd with Kindness one Day, Gave a Rout to the Town in a general way,

and ending,

*All Joy now extinguish'd they betook to their Coaches,
Each loading his Lordship with bitter Reproaches,
If ye knew his kind meaning ye Maidens & Wives,
His Friendship you'd pray for, the rest of your Lives,
He consider'd Late Hours destructive of Health,
A blessing to Mortals superior to Wealth,
As this was his Motive, Pray Railers be Dumb
For this Generous Good Soul is at least worth a Plumb.*

The last word indicates Plumbe (Mayor, 1778-9), brother-in-law of Johnson's friend Thrale. This story is related in City Biography, 1800, p. 135, as an instance of his avarice. He used 'the long-tubed fumigating bellows of his gardener to blow out the candles in the ball-room at the Mansion-house'. See also Nos. 5615, 5616.

8½ × 12½ in.

5618 [THE MIDNIGHT MAGISTRATE²]Publish'd by Fielding & Walker, Decr I. 1779.

Engraving. From the Westminster Magazine, vii. 593 (folding plate). An adaptation, reversed and altered, of No. 3275, The Midnight Magistrate, or the Humours of a Watch House, after E. Heemskirke. A satire on 'hireling constables', that is, on constables who were paid as substitutes for parishioners who were bound to serve annually without pay. The interior of a watch-house, where the constable of the night sits in an armchair, wearing a hat and holding a long staff. Watchmen are bringing in persons arrested during the night, others sit or stand about; some are smoking. All the figures have the heads of apes. A watchman bringing in a young woman shows the constable his broken lantern. He is followed by a watchman bringing in a well-dressed young man. Other watchmen, with a woman wearing an apron, are seen through a large open doorway; behind them are buildings and the tower of Westminster Abbey. On the top of the door, which opens inwards, sits a large owl. A large fire blazes. The room is lit by a lantern hung from the roof and two large candles. Large flagons of drink are in evidence. Verses (eighteen lines) are engraved beneath the design, whose tenor is that the young woman is used by the constable as a decoy, the man is charged (falsely) with having assaulted the watch and broken the lantern. The constable acts as if he were a magistrate: At Night M^r Constable, great as Sir John (that is, Sir John Fielding, see No. 5599), and discharges the young man, ordering him to

¹ On the print is written in a contemporary hand 'Nixon fecit', it has some resemblance to his manner.

² The title has been cut off, but is supplied from the Westminster Magazine. The design is said to be 'taken from a slight painting of Heemskirk Junior, but here altered, adapted, and highly finished by that promising young artist, M. Moreland junior', the print being engraved from his painting.

*Give the Man half a Crown for a Lanthorn & Plaister,
And somewhat for Drinking & then good Night Master.
Thus one Cull acquitted, Confederate Whore
Is Dispatch'd with a Charge to Decoy in some more.*

5619 STILL LIFE: A' L'HOLLANDOIS.

Published as the Act directs Feb^y 1. 1779

Engraving (coloured impression). On the floor of a room are six pieces of blue Delft china in the shape of men and women. Descriptions are etched beneath the design, headed Scene Delft. Dramatis Personae, the first (l.) being, Mynheer Van Vase of an Ancient Etruscan Family long since broken to pieces by y^e vile Visigoths in deep love with Miss Cruet but discarded by her. On the walls are pictures in the Dutch manner, two portraits, a still life and a landscape, and in the back wall is a casement window. Across the ceiling is etched, Collateral branch of the Heidelberg Family.

7 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 14 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

Five prints after Bunbury.

COURIER ANGLOIS No. 4736—3 May 1779

J. Bretherton fec.

COURIER FRANCOIS¹ No. 4737 [n.d.]

J. Bretherton fec.

COXHEATH HO! No. 4760—3 July 1779

J. Bretherton fec.

One of many satires on Coxheath and other militia camps, see No. 5523, &c.

A VISIT TO THE CAMP. No. 4765—1 Dec. 1779

Watson and Dickinson (stipple).

See No. 5523, &c.

¹ Another version was published by Darly, 1 July 1771, and re-issued in his book dated 1 Jan. 1776, see No. 5369.

5620 A VISIT TO THE CAMP.

[? 1779]

H Bunbury Esq. Del.

Engraving (coloured impression). Another version, in reverse, of No. 4765. It is a narrower design, with less sky and slightly less ground. Part of the dog (l.) has been cut off.

$8\frac{3}{16} \times 12\frac{7}{16}$ in.

5621 THE FEATHER'D FAIR IN A FRIGHT.

RESTORE THE BORROWED PLUMES.

From the Original Picture by John Collet, in the possession of Carington Bowles. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles at N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Publish'd as the Act directs, 24 June 1779.

Engraving. For a mezzotint from the same picture see No. 4550 (1777). It satirizes the fashion of wearing long erect ostrich feathers on the summit of a grotesquely high and elaborately-dressed coiffure. See No. 5370, &c.

Beneath the print are twelve lines of verse, beginning

*Two Lasses who wou'd like their Mistresses shine,
On their Heads clap'd some Feathers, to make them look fine:*

$18\frac{1}{4} \times 14$ in.

Nine prints from the series of mezzotints published by Carington Bowles.

SPRING. (392)

See No. 4564—[? 1 Jan. 1779]

After Collet.

SUMMER. (393)

See No. 4565—1 Jan. 1779

After Collet.

Another impression in The Sunday Ramble, B.M.L., 578, i. 10.

AUTUMN. (394)

See No. 4566—1 Jan. 1779

After Collet.

WINTER. (395)

See No. 4567—1 Jan. 1779

After Collet.

Also another impression, uncoloured.

DISCIPLINE OF A NUNNERY. (396)

See No. 3776 [1779]

PAULO PURGANTI AND HIS WIFE . . . (399)

See No. 4568 [1779]

KITTY COAXER DRIVING LORD DUPE, TOWARDS ROTTEN
ROW. (400)

See No. 4569 [1779]

After Collet.

5622 AN ACTRESS AT HER TOILET, OR MISS BRAZEN JUST BREECHT. (403)

From the Original Picture by John Collet, in the possession of Carington Bowles.

Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse N^o 69 in St Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, 1779].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). The interior of a well-furnished dressing-room. A young woman stands in the centre, arms akimbo, putting on a pair of breeches and looking towards the mirror which stands on a dressing-table (r.) in which a small monkey is also looking. A maid-servant (l.) stoops to fasten the buttons at the r. knee. A poodle, partly shaved, barks at the actress; it stands on a play bill inscribed and the Part of Cap^t Macheath by Miss . A pair of top-boots lies on the floor. On a stool (r.) is a sword, a pair of stays, and a paper inscribed To be seen a most surprising Hermaphrodite.

Perhaps Mrs. Farrel who played Macheath in the Beggar's Opera at Covent Garden, Oct. 1777, Genest, vi. 15.

12 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{15}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., Tab. 524, 'Caricatures', i, p. 207.

THE CHURCH MILITANT. (408)

See No. 3752 [15 Sept. 1779]

After Collet.

Camp scene—the chaplain conducting a service, see No. 5523, &c.

POLITICAL SATIRES

5623 THE BRITISH TAR AT OMOA.

Pub^d Jan^y 1. 1780 by W. H. Strand.

Engraving. The storming of the fort of Omoa in the Bay of Honduras by British sea and land forces on 16 Oct. 1779. A British sailor has just entered the fortifications from a ladder (l.) up which two soldiers with fixed bayonets are climbing. He holds a cutlass in each hand, offering one to a Spanish officer who is unarmed and incompletely dressed, wearing a night-cap, one leg being bare, and his stocking ungartered. The sailor says Damn your Eyes, Don, take your Choice!; the Spaniard answers Ah Misericordia Segnor Inglese! me beg to be excused. In the foreground British troops with fixed bayonets advance towards Spaniards who flee in disorder, holding up their hands in alarm. The Spanish flag has been hauled down, and is under the feet of the British sailor; above it flies the Union Jack. A British ship (l.) is firing at the fort.

This incident attracted great attention at the beginning of 1780. An English sailor, having scrambled over the wall, a cutlass in each hand, met a Spanish officer just roused from sleep who had forgotten his sword; the sailor therefore gave him one of his cutlasses, saying 'he scorned any advantage; you are now upon a footing with me'. Ann. Reg. 1780, p. 214. See also Walpole, Letters, xi. 79-80, and No. 5624.

Has some resemblance to the manner of Gillray.

9 × 13 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5624 JOHN BULL TRIUMPHANT.

[Gillray.]

Publish'd Jan^y 4th 1780. by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A bull, snorting ferociously, has tossed a Spaniard high in the air, a shower of coins falls from his pockets. The bull is attempting to charge a Frenchman and an American (r.), the latter being an Indian brave, holding a spear and wearing a girdle and head-dress of feathers; they shrink back in alarm, the American sheltering behind the Frenchman. But the bull is checked by a Scot in Highland dress, who holds its tail saying, Luton, a—Ho (Luton being one of the estates of Bute). Bute's waist is held by North, who says Bushey Park, a Ho (North lived at Bushey Park, Lady North being the Ranger of the Park), and North's by Lord Mansfield saying Caen Wood a Ho (Caen (or Ken) wood being the estate bought by Mansfield from Bute. Cf. No. 4885). In the foreground (l.) a Dutchman sits grinning on a cask inscribed Hollands Gin; he is about to light his pipe with a burning paper on which is inscribed ? TM, presumably representing the memorials of Yorke, see No. 5568. Beneath the design is engraved:

*The Bull see enrag'd has the Spaniard engag'd,
And gave him a Terrible Toss,
As he mounts up on high, the Dollars see fly,
To make the bold Britton rejoice,*

*The Yankee & Monsieur, at this look quite queer,
For they see that his Strength will prevail,
If they'd give him his way, and not with foul play,
Still tug the poor Beast by the Tail.*

The 'terrible toss' is the capture of Omoa, see No. 5623, when the value of the prizes in the harbour was estimated at 3,000,000 dollars. Stedman, American War, 1794, ii. 173. Rodney's more important successes in the Mediterranean were on 8 and 16 Jan.; his first dispatches did not reach London till 11 Feb.

Bute and Mansfield are usually represented as inflaming England against America, cf. No. 5287. One of many satires in which Holland appears as a neutral profiting by the war, regardless of treaties, see No. 5557, &c.

Grego, Gillray, pp. 29-30.

Van Stolk, No. 4303.

8 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 13 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5625 "AND ADAM HAD POWER OVER ALL THE BEASTS OF THE EARTH" Gen^s.

[Gillray?]

Publish'd Jan^y 9th 1780. by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. A burlesque representation of the duel between William Adam and C. J. Fox on 29 Nov. 1779. Adam (r.) dressed as a Highland chieftain, in tartan, with a very short kilt, a target on his l. arm, fires a pistol at Fox, who holds out both his arms and leans back as if wounded, his pistol falling to the ground. Fox has a fox's head and a brush. Adam's second, a fat man (Humberston), stands full face with clasped hands, not watching the contest. That of Fox (l.), who is thin (Fitzgerald), holds up his hands in alarm and appears about to intervene.

For this duel see No. 5575 and cf. a lampoon by 'A.B': Paradise Regain'd; or the Battle of Adam and the Fox. An heroick Poem. (B.M.L. 163, m. 21.)

The duel between Lord Shelburne and Fullarton, on 22 Mar. 1780, was attributed to the same motive and increased the unpopularity of the Government, see No. 5659.

6 × 9 $\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5626 THE ENGAGEMENT BETWEEN D'ORVILLIERS & K—P—L
Pub^d Jan^y 12th 1780. by T. Low.

Engraving. D'Orvilliers (l.) and Keppel (r.) bending down, their backs turned to each others, bombard each other with excrement, that of D'Orvilliers going over Keppel's head. The French admiral's sword and the English admiral's cutlass lie on the ground. Behind is the sea, with men-of-war firing, one flying the British flag. Beneath the design is engraved:

*Don't you think my good Friends this a comical Farce is,
To see two Great Admirals fight with their A——,
Mons^r Squirts Soup-meagre across K—p—ls back,
But he in return gives a far harder Smack.
What a Smoak & a Stink! & yet neither prevails
For how can it be? when they both turn their Tails.*

Price 6d.

This represents the engagement off Ushant, 27 July 1778, when the two fleets passed on opposite tacks; the British, firing at the hulls, inflicted heavy damages, the French firing at the masts crippled their enemy's power of movement, but having the power to attack, they did not use it. Mahan, Influence of Sea Power, p. 351. Keppel failed to close with the French and the French fleet regained Brest. See Nos. 5484, 5486 for the engagement and Nos. 5536, 5537, 5570 for the resulting court martials on Keppel and Palliser. Keppel, after being a national hero at the time of his court martial, became unpopular after Rodney's victory and recall in 1782, see No. 5992, &c.

$5\frac{13}{16} \times 10\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5627 THE FRENCH SEIZURE ON THE COAST OF SUSSEX.

[T. Colley?]

Pub^d by Tho^s Colley Clare Market London Jan^y 18. 1780.

Engraving. Six French sailors attempt to drag a bull towards the sea-shore off which lies a ship flying the French flag. Four of them tug at the animal's tail, the other two at a rope round its neck. A French officer in the attitude of a fencer holds his sword to the bull's nose. In the foreground a sailor drags a stoutly-resisting sheep by a rope held over his shoulder while an officer pierces frogs with his sword. All have long pigtail queues, and the officers are foppishly dressed in the French manner.

$5\frac{5}{8} \times 8\frac{7}{8}$ in.

Another impression (Colley's publication line partly erased):

Pub: Jan. 18. 1780. E. Hedges N^o 92 Under the Royal Exchange Cornhill

5628 DON BARCELLO, VAN TRUMP, & MONSIEUR DE CRICKEY, COMBIN'D TOGETHER

[T. Colley?]

Pub: Jan^y 23. 1780 by E. Hedges.

Engraving. Figures, much burlesqued, representing Spain, Holland, and France, stand back to back, their necks surrounded by a rope, one end of which is being pulled by a British sailor in trousers (l.), the other by a British sailor wearing the petticoat then worn by sailors. One sailor (l.) says D—n me Jack how the Dutchman Grins. The other says Ah Monsieur You have got your Neck in a halter. The Spaniard, in profile to the l., and the Frenchman in profile to the r., are crying for mercy, their hands raised in supplication. The stout Dutchman, full face (centre), has an expression of intense melancholy and holds up his hands deprecatingly; a pipe is thrust in his cap.

Holland was not yet at war with England but a number of Dutch ships laden with naval stores for the French were brought by Captain Fielding to Spithead on 2 Jan. 1780. The Dutch admiral, van Bylandt, who was giving them protection, refused to allow a search for contraband, shots were exchanged, and some of the ships brought to Portsmouth, Bylandt accompanying them. Other ships escaped to French ports. This roused great indignation in Holland, see Nos. 5712, 5719. Don Barcelo was a Spanish admiral whose capture of two Dutch ships in Nov. 1779 led to the Armed Neutrality. F. P. Renaut, Les Provinces-Unies et la Guerre . . ., 1924, pp. 294 ff.

 $5\frac{13}{16} \times 9\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5629 BRITANNIA PROTECTED FROM THE TERRORS OF AN INVASION

Published Jan^y 26 1780 by Jas Dareny opposite the King's-head in the Strand.

Engraving. Britannia (l.) sits on a raised seat with her shield and spear. At her feet stand two women, one, a stout fish-wife with her arms akimbo, wearing a cloak, hat, and apron, a knife at her waist, her fish beside her; the other, lean and elderly with a face of fury, her fists clenched, a pair of scissors and a pin-cushion hang from her waist. Both are shouting defiance at three figures (r.) representing Spain, France, and America who, on the other side of a narrow stream inscribed English Chanel, are fleeing in alarm. America (r.), with a feathered head-dress, carries the striped American flag. France and Spain hold each a drawn sword. Darts of lightning reach the fugitives from the mouth of the lean virago. Beneath the design is etched, "A loud-crying Woman & a Scold shall be sought out to drive away the Enemies." Cf. No. 5552.

$8 \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5630 GOLDEN . RULES . OF FREDERICK . K . OF PRUSSIA.

Publish'd as the Act Directs For the Proprietor by W Humphrey Jan^y 29 1780 N^o 227 Strand or N^o 18 New Bond S^t

Engraving. The double-headed Hohenzollern eagle clutches in its claws a ribbon on which is inscribed The Glorious Discharge of Arnold the Miller. In the centre of the body is a circle, containing the initials F R [Frederick Rex], surmounted by a crown. Framing this design is a garland of oak-leaves, olive-leaves, &c., intertwined with a ribbon on which is inscribed, Take away the Wicked from y^e Presence of y^e King and his Throne shall be exalted; No respect of Persons; May the name of Justice never be violated by Acts of injustice or Oppression; in the Presence of Justice all should be equal w^{ith}er [sic] Prince or Peasant; To bring all Law Suits to a speedy conclusion. To the garland are attached medallions which hang in the two lower corners of the print containing miniature figures: r., Perseus in Roman armour holding a spear and a shield with Medusa's head, (l.) Justice holding scales and uplifted sword. The design has a background of horizontal lines.

An implied censure on political and social conditions in England, cf. No. 4388 (1771).

$5 \times 5\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5631 THE ALLIES.—PAR NOBILE FRATRÛM!¹

Indignatio fecit

Pub^d as the Act directs Feb^y 3, 1780 by I. Almon, Piccadilly.

Engraving. George III sharing a cannibal feast with an Indian chief.

¹ Cf. 'A Merry Song about Murder' (on George III), quoted from the London Courant, 25 Mar. 1780, by Walpole as an instance of the horrid length to which 'party will carry men'. Last Journals, 1910, ii. 264.

Under a palm-tree (l.) are three American Indians; one, standing, holds the dismembered body of an infant, so that its blood pours into a cup formed of a skull held by a kneeling Indian (l.). The third (r.), whose feathers and bracelets show that he is a chief, sits on the ground holding a tomahawk in one hand, a long bone which he is gnawing in the other. On his l., and in the centre of the design, sits George III on the ground, gnawing the other end of the Indian's bone, while he holds a smoking bowl made of a skull. He is wearing the ribbon and star of the Garter. On the ground in front are the head and limbs of an infant, and a dog vomiting. On the king's l. is a flag-staff, surmounted by a cross, from it hangs a ragged flag on which is inscribed GEO . . . E the T[hird] by the Grace of . . . of . . . King [Def]ender of the Faith &c. Beneath it, a Holy Bible stands upside down.

Two figures hasten towards the feast from the r. A very fat bishop wearing a mitre holds in his r. hand a crozier, in the l. a paper inscribed Form of Prayer 4th Feb^{ry} General Fast. He is saying That thy Ways may be known upon Earth, thy saving Health among all Nations. Behind him is a sailor carrying on his head a packing-case inscribed Scalping Knives, Crucifixes, Tomahawks, Presents to Indians 96,000; he says, D——n my dear Eyes, but we are hellish good Christians. Beneath the design is engraved, Qui facit per alium, facit per se. Princ. Leg. Ang. In the upper r. corner of the print is engraved on a scroll, The Party of Savages¹ went out with Orders not to spare Man, Woman, or Child. To this cruel Mandate even some of the Savages made an Objection, respecting the butchering the Women & Children; but they were told the Children would make Soldiers, & the Women would keep up the Stock. Remembrancer, Vol. 8. p. 77. This is a quotation from 'A Narrative of the capture and treatment of John Dodge, by the English at Detroit', printed in Almon's propagandist annual publication, 1779. (It is an extract from 'The Narrative . . .', written by Dodge and published at Philadelphia in 1779. M. C. Tyler, The Literary History of the American Revolution.)

The print appears to derive also from Burke's speech on 6 Feb. 1778 when Barré said 'with many invectives against the Bishops, that it ought to be posted up in every church under their proclamation for the fast . . .'. Walpole, Last Journals, ii. 105. Ann. Reg. 1778, p. 110. Parl. Hist. xix. 594 ff.

In the Declaration of Independence the king was accused of having 'endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers the merciless Indian savages. . .'. Franklin's faked Supplement to the Boston Independent Chronicle printed at his private press at Passy (1782) published letters purporting to be from Indians and British officers, which accompanied bundles of scalps of men, women, and children to be sent to George III in expectation of reward. In the same paper was a letter by Franklin purporting to be from Paul Jones (1781) to Sir Joseph Yorke in which the king is accused (inter alia) of engaging 'savages to murder their [his people's] defenceless farmers, women and children'. L. S. Livingston, Franklin and his Press at Passy, New York, Grolier Club, 1914, pp. 58 ff. For Indian atrocities see also No. 5470, &c. The bishop is probably Markham, archbishop of York, see No. 5400, &c.

Reproduced, S. G. Fisher, True History of the American Revolution, 1902, p. 380.

8½ × 14 in.

¹ The original here adds 'under Le Mote'.

5632 MINISTERIAL PURGATIONS, OR STATE GRIPINGS.

Published Feby 9th 1780 & Sold at N^o 132 Fleet Street.

Engraving. A design in six approximately equal compartments (numbered) in two rows, in each of which is a figure seated in a latrine, words issuing from his mouth in a label:

1. (The central compartment of the upper row.) Lord North, his hand to his forehead, with an expression of alarm, says,

*The People I've Tax'd till with rage now they burn
And they've Curst my poor guts, now I find in return.*

He wears his Garter ribbon and star and resembles the king.

2. (l.) Lord Mansfield in judge's wig and gown, says,
*I wish Doctor Stewart was here once again,
His Pills I am Sure would relieve all my Pain.*

'Dr. Stewart' is Bute. On the ground is an open book, one page inscribed Millier, the other Mansfeild.

3. (r.) Lord Sandwich (Jemmy Twitcher), his hands clasped, is saying,
*O! my Guts! what a Twitcher!—in life I've no Ray
For my Soul to Old-nick is now Fleeting away.*

An allusion to the murder of Sandwich's mistress, Martha Ray, by Hickman in 1779, see No. 5540, &c. For 'twitcher' cf. No. 4877. By his side is an open book inscribed Pleasures of Love.

4. (Lower row, l.) Lord George Germain, his arms folded, his sword broken, the hilt hanging on the wall, the blade on the ground, is saying,

*My Purgin' at Minden I'd almost forgot,
But this Griping—has tied all my Gutts in a knot.*

For Minden see Nos. 3680-7, &c.

5. (Centre.) The Devil, smiling, and turning to the r. to address 6, says,

Come Parson for thou! art my best Child of all, Assist, or your Brothers, will purge till they fall.

6. (r.) Parson Bate in clerical gown and bands, the Morning Post on the ground beside him, says,

*I'm Grip'd 'till I'm ready to give up the Ghost,
Yet I'll Strain! all I can in the fam'd Morning Post.*

For Bate as ministerial journalist see No. 5550, &c.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*To see such Great Men! their faces thus screw,
Is a terrible Sight:—if the Picture is true;
For it wants, you'll allow, but a small penetration,
To find out that these, are the Heads of the Nation,
But we guess who has Serv'd them this D—n'd stinking trick
When amongst them you see their adviser Old-nick;
O! who but must Pitty the case of Great Britain
When its Ministers purge thus,—that must be beshitten.*

Cf. Nos. 5479-81.

8½ × 12¼ in.

5633 THE COUNCIL

Published as y^e Act Directs for y^e Proprietor by W Humphrey Feby 9 1780 N 227 Strand or N^o 18 Bond Street.

Engraving. Three men seated in a latrine: North (centre), Mansfield (l.) in judge's wig and gown, and Sandwich (r.), Boreas, Caen Wood (Mansfield's house near Hampstead), and Jemmy Twitcher being inscribed over their respective heads. North looks with an expression of satisfaction at Mansfield; in his r. hand is a large torn paper inscribed National Debt 206,000 000 00 60 000^l. for Razors, Jews Harps (probably implying that the Jews were making large profits in taking up loans and were shaving their beards on becoming wealthy). In his l. hand is a fragment of paper inscribed Improvements in Bushy 1780, implying that he is drawing on the Exchequer for improvements to his own house. Under his feet is a large torn paper inscribed Protestant Association Lord G . . . Gordon President. North refused (5 Jan. 1780) a request from Lord George Gordon that he (North) should present the petition of the Protestant Association for repeal of the Catholic Relief Act (presented 2 June by Gordon with disastrous consequences). de Castro, Gordon Riots, p. 15.

Mansfield turns round to tear fragments from Magna Chart[a] which is pasted on the wall behind him. Sandwich, with an expression of exultation, is tearing an ensign flag, implying that he is playing havoc with the Navy. Under his foot is a torn paper, Petition . . . County of Huntingdon. (Walpole writes, 'Sussex, Hertfordshire, Cheshire, Devonshire, and even Lord Sandwich's favoured Huntingdonshire voted to hold meetings in the manner of Yorkshire,' Last Journals, 1910, ii. 265.)

Pasted on the wall are three prints: The State of the Nation, a free but fairly correct version of No. 5479, in ten compartments instead of fourteen; Poor Old England, the single figure of a man standing full face, not identical with No. 6200 or with a print of the same title published in 1784. The Family of y^e Wrong Heads; a stout man stands full face, his r. arm round a cupid, his l. round (?) a man. This is over the head of Sandwich. There is also on the wall a paper inscribed:

*Neglecting faithful Worth for Fawning Slaves;
Whose Councils weak & Wicked, easy rous'd
To Paltry Schemes of Absolute Command,
To seek their Splendour in their sure Disgrace,
And in a broken ruin'd Peoples Wealth:
When such o'ercast the State, no Bond of Love,
No Heart, no Soul, no Unity, no Nerve,
Combines the loose disjointed Publick, lost
To Fame abroad, to Happiness at Home.*

Vide Thompson, Liberty Book y 4.

For the Association movement see No. 5638, &c. For a similar association of the Protestant Petition with County Petitions see Nos. 5638, 5649, 5680, 5687.

$8\frac{3}{8} \times 13\frac{1}{16}$ in.

Another impression, n.d., with the title

5633_A THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

Pub^d by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

5634 THE POLITICAL MOON

OR THE PRESENT STATE OF THE MAJORITY AS THEY APPEAR EVERY WHERE.

[? Gillray.]

Publish'd as the Act directs Feby 10. 1780.

Engraving. A design in three circles within a larger circle which is covered with a shading of zigzag lines. In each inset circle is the figure of a man. Above, a man walks rapidly from l. to r., a large stick under his arm, his face half-concealed in a blanket or covering worn as a cloak. His dishevelled hair is full of straw and he looks suspiciously over his r. shoulder. Beneath the circle is engraved the word Mad.

In the lower (r.) circle a man in profile to the r. leans back in a chair asleep, his head sunk on his breast. Beneath the circle is engraved Asleep.

On the r. of this is a circle in which a man walks staggering and bent, his head a featureless blank. Beneath is engraved Drunk.

Diameter, $9\frac{1}{2}$ in.; inset circles, 4 in.

5635 THE STATE TINKERS.

[Gillray.]

Publish'd Feby 10th 1780. by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. Three men with mallet, hammer, and chisel are breaking an enormous bowl which is already much damaged, cracked, and patched. The bowl is supported on its end by a block (l.) on which stand two of the tinkers. On the ground (r.) kneels Lord North, working on the interior of the bowl with a hammer and chisel. On the ground beside him is a paper inscribed L^d North. Behind the bowl (l.), and about to strike it with a large mallet, a man dressed as an artisan stands on a block; a paper in his pocket is inscribed L^d Sandwich and pasted on the wall behind his head is a List of the Navy. Next him, wielding a hammer and chisel, is a man dressed as a military officer; the Plan of Minden on the wall behind his head shows that he is Lord George Germain. Behind North, his hands raised in pleased surprise, stands George III, wearing a feathered turban surmounted by a crown, probably intended to indicate that he is behaving like an oriental despot, see Nos. 5544-7. Over his shoulder looks Bute in tartan, also smiling, his r. hand raised, as if admonishing the king. Beneath the title is engraved:

*The National Kettle, which once was a good one,
For boiling of Mutton, of Beef, & of Pudding,
By the fault of the Cook, was quite out of repair,
When the Tinkers were sent for,—Behold them & Stare.
The Master he thinks, they are wonderful Clever,
And cries out in raptures, 'tis done! now or never!
Yet sneering the Tinkers their old Trade pursue,
In stopping of one Hole—they're sure to make Two.*

$10\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5636 THE BULL ROASTED; OR THE POLITICAL COOKS SERVING THEIR CUSTOMERS.

Publish'd as the Act directs Feb^y 12, 1780, by I. Harris, Sweetings Alley, Cornhill, London.

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5640. A large bull transfix'd on a spit roasts before a fire (l.) over which hangs a large covered pot. Beside the animal sits George III (l.) wearing a ribbon, in his r. hand he holds the end of the spit, in the l. a handkerchief, saying Turning the Spit, has made me Sweat; by George. Sandwich holds a large spoon to baste it, saying, Not quite so fat as he was formerly. Bute, in tartan, stands behind the bull, saying, Twas a Noble Beast; Jemmy Twitcher. On the r. is a dinner table, behind which sit figures representing France, America, and Spain. France is saying A bit of the Brown for Louis. America, a Red Indian woman, with a feathered head-dress, her knife raised to her mouth, her l. hand in her plate clutching a fork, is saying, A Dish of Buttock for Congress. Spain, in cloak and feathered hat, says Some of the Flank for Don Diego. On the ground in front of the table sits a Dutchman eating with a spoon out of a bowl; he says I've got a Dish of Memorial Broth, an allusion to the succession of memorials presented by Sir Joseph Yorke to the States General on breaches of their treaties with England, see Nos. 5568, 5571, &c. Lord North is bringing a dish from the fire to the table, saying I'll serve you all my good Friends as fast as possible. Beneath the design is engraved:

*Behold the poor Bull! once Britania's chief boast,
Is kill'd by State Cooks, and laid down for a Roast!
While his Master, who should all his Honours maintain,
Turns the Spit tho' he should such an Office disdain.*

*Monsieur licks his gills at a bit of the Brown,
And the other two wish for to gobble him down,
But may ill digestion attend on the treat,
And the Cooks every one soon be roasted, & Eat.*

7 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 12 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5637 THE CONTRAST OR SACK & BUDGET.

Publish'd as the Act directs, Feb^y 12. 1780 by J. Harris, Sweetings Alley, Cornhill.

Engraving. Two standing figures: Lord North (l.) and Jeffery Dunstan (r.). North, a substantial sack over his l. shoulder, inscribed Budget, his r. hand in his breeches pocket, is calling Tory rory Gold. The other, copied from a print published by I. Whitehead, 15 Nov. 1779, holds an empty sack over his shoulder, inscribed Sack, and is calling Whigs Whigs Brass; he wears a coat over a torn shirt and his ungartered stockings are falling down his legs. Beneath the design is engraved:

*How different the Figures which here you behold!
The one asks for BRASS and the other for GOLD.
Each are droll Fellows, 'tis known in their Station,
And each of Some Service 'tis hop'd—to the Nation.*

Dunstan's chief occupation was buying old wigs, his droll way of crying

'old wigs' always attracted a crowd in the London streets. He was elected Mayor of Garratt in 1785, D.N.B.

One of many satires on North's budgets, see Nos. 5578, 5703, &c. 7 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{1}{4}$ in. (pl.).

5638 ASSOCIATION, OR PUBLIC VIRTUE DISPLAYED IN A CONTRASTED VIEW.

J.S. inv:

Published as the Act directs 15 Feb^y 1780 London Printed for Dan^t Wilson at N^o 20 Portugal Street Lincolns Inn Price 1^s

Engraving. Several scenes combined in one design. The Associations of various counties to present petitions and form committees to demand reforms are represented in the upper r. portion of the plate: A procession of men walks (r. to l.), their leader holding a standard with the arms of the county inscribed County of York 30 Decr 1779 (the date of the meeting at which it was agreed to present a petition and prepare a plan for an Association to secure reform). He holds a paper inscribed Petition and says, Virtue & Fortitude shall Guide us. Representatives of the other petitioning and associating counties follow, with the appropriate dates on labels issuing from their mouths: Middlesex 7 Jan; Chester 13 Jan; Hertford Jan 17; Cumberland 20 Jan; Huntingdon, Surrey Sussex Dorset 21 Jan ('Huntingdon' being in large letters, cf. No. 5633), Essex & Bedford 24 Jan; Gloucester, Somerset & Wilts 26 Jan; Norfolk 29 Jan; Brecon Feb 9. The last man carries an ensign flag on which is inscribed London Newcastle upon Tyne Bristol Westminster &c. &c. &c. Beneath the procession is engraved Immortal Gods! What Honor waits the men who save their Country from impending Ruin. The leader is probably intended for Sir George Savile.

On the l. George III is seated in his closet; a young man stands before him addressing, not the king, but an imaginary audience, saying, The only Patriot His Power is too Confined. This is perhaps intended for Lord George Gordon's private interview with the king on 27 Jan. 1780; several satires associate the Protestant Petition with the county petitions, see Nos. 5633, 5649, 5680. Outside the door of the royal closet and facing the petitioners is a monster with wings and three heads, breathing fire.

In the lower r. part of the print Britannia sits on a ruinous stone pedestal which is being further undermined by a female figure with a forked tail and the legs of a satyr; she is applying a lever to its base saying, And shall not I, Corruption is my name, Undermine the British Constitution. Lord North attacks the pedestal with a pickaxe, saying, I will assist you Sister in the same Design. Bute, in Highland dress with the Garter ribbon and star, flourishes a broadsword, while he takes from Britannia the staff and cap of Liberty; he says, Away wi ye to the Deel Where is your Liberty now. Britannia, holding her shield and Magna Carta, says to the marching petitioners above her head, Tis you alone my Friends who can revive my Drooping Hopes & save me from Distruction. Behind Britannia (l.) and in a glory of rays stands a man inscribed Chatham with outstretched arms, saying O Cleanse Yon Augean Stable. He points towards the design beneath the king's closet. This represents the House of Commons (l.); the Speaker in his chair, members seated on each side of a table. It is seen through two pillars, up one (r.) climbs an alligator, round the other is a serpent with a branch of apples in its mouth. Above is inscribed Ruled by Powerful Influence. A procession of members walks (l. to r.) from the House up a path leading to the door of the king's closet above. They carry scrolls inscribed 25 000; 5000; £40,000; 15,000 £10,000, £50 000. One says, Secure in the Enjoyment of Places Pensions & Emoluments of Office we fear not the Clamour of Yorkshire Clodpoles; another says, God help the Rich the Poor can beg. Their leader carries an Address of Thanks. Beneath this gang of ministerialists a mythological figure leaning against an anchor and a gushing water-conduit (? Neptune) says,

*Is there not some Chosen Curses,
Some Hidden Thunder in the Stores of Heaven
Red with Uncommon Wrath to Blast the Men
Who build their Greatness on their Country's Ruin*

A man stands in the foreground holding out a scroll inscribed,

*List of Grievances
Public Credit—Weakened Nation
Debt Increasing Fresh Taxes
Accumulating Trade & Commer[ce]
Expiring Independance cast down & the Public Treasure Wasted in Corrupting the Morals of the People.* He is saying, No New Taxes but a Retrenchment of Public Expences.

The county associations and petitions began with a great meeting at York on 30 Dec. 1779. See C. Wyvill, Political Papers, 6v., 1794-1802. Smelt, L., Account of . . . the Meeting at York . . . 1780. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 260-1, 263 ff. Adolphus, Hist. of England, 1841, iii. 93 ff. Fitzmaurice, Shelburne, 1912, ii. 46 ff. Veitch, Genesis of Parliamentary Reform, 1913, chap. III. On 8 Feb. Shelburne's motion for a committee of both Houses, excluding all pensioners and place-men, to inquire into the expenditure of public money, was rejected, and Sir George Savile presented the Yorkshire petition in the House of Commons. Cf. also the debate of 8 May 1781, Parl. Hist. xxii. 138 ff. and Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 442 f. For Gordon in the closet see Walpole, Letters, xi. 135. For the county petitions and the Association movement see also Nos. 5633, 5640, 5645, 5649, 5657, 5665, 5668, 5675, 5693, 5829, 5958. For the evil influence of the king's closet see No. 5470.

8½ × 13 11⁄16 in.

5639 WHELPS TAUGHT TO READ BY AN ORATOR FROM THE NORTH.

Pub^ll acco^s to act. Feby 17. 1780 by D. Long.

Engraving. A dog with a human face intended for that of George III, wearing a crown and the ribbon and star of the Garter, sits on a bench; on his collar is inscribed Honi so . . . qui . . . [Honi soit qui mal y pense]. Lord North stands by, patting him and holding by its handle a horn-book on which is the alphabet. He is looking round at a bystander on the r. On the l. stands Charles Fox, obese, with a fox's head, pointing at the dog. Behind the dog's bench are Bute in tartan and a man dressed as a military officer (? Lord George Germain) who points at the dog, grins and looks at Fox.

This appears to be a reversion to the idea prevalent before 1778 that the king was his ministers' tool, cf. No. 5288.

$7\frac{3}{8} \times 10\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5640 THE BULL OVER-DROVE: OR THE DRIVERS IN DANGER.

London Publish'd as the Act directs Feby 21, 1780, by I. Harris, Sweetings Alley Cornhill.

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5636. A bull (c.) tramples on the prostrate body of a drover holding a long spiked staff, whose words, O! I'm as dead as Miss Ray (cf. Nos. 5540, 5632), show that he is intended for Sandwich. The bull is kicking violently towards the other drovers, the foremost of whom, Lord North, leaning back, with a large rent in his waistcoat, says, He has Kick'd the Treasury of my Guts out. Behind him is another minister, Lord George Germain, wearing a ribbon (incorrectly), he says This is worse than the Battle of Minden (see No. 3680, &c.). Behind (l.), spectators, a sailor and three other men, wave their hats, shouting Huzza.

In front of the bull (r.) are figures representing France, America (as a Red Indian), and Spain. France says By Gar, my friend America I must leave you, dis Bull vil play le Diable. America says, I fear Monsieur I shall get little by your Friendship. Spain says, I wish I was safe out of his way, he beats the Bulls of Spain. For British naval successes, 1779-80, see Nos. 5623, 5624, 5642, 5646, 5647, 5648, 5658. Beneath the design is engraved:

*The State Drovers to madness, had drove the poor Bull,
Their Goads and their Tethers no longer can rule,
He Snorts Kicks and Tramples among the curst rout,
Who fall by his Fury or Stagger about.*

*O! may all such Drovers thus meet with their Fate,
Who Hamper, and Gall so, the Bull of the State,
May his Terror, thus fill them with fear, and dismay,
While the People all Cheerfully Cry out, Huzza!*

The activities of the associated counties, see No. 5638, &c., were so hostile to the Government that Walpole considered that civil war was imminent unless the king dismissed the Ministry and called upon the Opposition. Last Journals, 1910, ii. 275 (24 Feb. 1780). See No. 5644, perhaps intended as an answer to this print, and No. 5645.

Reissued, 21 Feb. 1782.

$7\frac{7}{8} \times 12\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5641 GEORGE WASHINGTON, COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF YE ARMIES OF YE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Engrav'd by W. Sharp from an Original Picture

London. Publish'd according to Act of Parliament Feby 22^d 1780.

Engraving. Frontispiece to A Poetical Epistle to his excellency George Washington Esq. . . [as in title] from an Inhabitant of the State of Maryland. Annapolis Printed 1779: London Reprinted for C. Dilly . . . J. Almon, . . . [&c.]. Bust portrait directed to l. of Washington in uniform, in an oval frame, within a rectangle. The frame is surmounted by the rattlesnake emblem with the cap of Liberty, on which rays are directed. Below it are a striped flag on l., a flag with stars on r., cannons and cannon-balls, with branches of palm and olive. Above is inscribed Dont tread on me, the motto on the flag of the continental navy until superseded by the stars and stripes.

The verses are a violent attack on 'proud Britain', e.g.,

What tho' to glut her unrelenting ire,
Of German tyrants German slaves she hire (p. 8).

The pamphlet was sold to raise money for 'American prisoners now suffering confinement in the gaols of England', cf. No. 5853.

The many portraits of Washington¹ published in London during the war emphasize the fact that he was regarded by the Whigs as a national leader, Washington's army being called 'our army' in the House of Commons, see Onslow's speech, 15 Mar. 1782 and No. 6065, and cf. Chatham, 2 Dec. 1777: 'our bretheren in America, Whigs in principle and heroes in conduct'. Parl. Hist. xix. 477. Cf. also No. 5340. The term 'United States' had as yet no legal significance even in America, as the Articles of Confederation were not ratified by all the states until 1781. For the snake emblem see No. 5336, &c. C. H. Hart, Catalogue of Engraved Portraits of Washington, No. 92.

6¼ × 4⅞ in.

B.M.L. 11630. b. 1/12.

This plate was used, date and publication line as above,² as a frontispiece to 'The Constitutions of the Several Independent States of America . . . Rev. William Jackson', 1783, with a dedication to the Duke of Portland.

B.M.L. 1197. f. 22.

A copy by Brunton was used as a frontispiece to another London reprint of the 'Poetical Epistle' published by Bennett Wheeler, 1781. C. H. Hart, No. 93. Not in B.M.L.

5642 THE 3 KINGS.

WHO PAYS THE RECKONING, OR DON DIEGO IN THE DUMPS.

Published as the Act directs Feby 26. 1780 by W Richardson, N^o 68 High Holborn.

Engraving. The kings of England, France, and Spain stand or sit by a table on which is a punch-bowl, wine-bottles, and glasses. Behind the table is a four-leaved screen. A waiter with the bill in his hand, a napkin under his arm, says to George III, who is standing beside the table (l.), Who pays the Reckoning. He answers, O! the French king Pays for me. France, wearing a coat patterned with fleur-de-lys, points to the king of Spain on his l. saying, The King of Spain Pays for all. Spain, seated, in cloak and feathered hat, says D——n the Family Compact. Cf. No. 5567. For the recent victories of England over Spain see Nos. 5623, 5624, 5646, &c. Cf. Walpole to Mann, 3 Mar. 1780, on Rodney's success, 'It secures Gibraltar, eases your Mediterranean a little, and must vex the Spaniards and their Monarch, not satisfied before with his cousin of Bourbon'. Letters, xi. 134. See also F. P. Renault, La Pacte de Famille et l'Amérique, 1922, pp. 305 ff. Cf. No. 5664.

¹ e.g. the mezzotint by Valentine Green after Trumbull published in 1781.

² C. H. Hart lists a copy No. 92 a, where the publication line is altered to Feby 22^d 1783. by J. Stockdale.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 7\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5643 THE TIMES

Publish'd as the Act directs by T.M.C. Feby 26 1780

Engraving. The Pope enthroned on a raised circular dais of three steps inscribed respectively Superstition, Ignorance, and Absolute Power; he wears his triple crown, holds a crosier and a document inscribed no faith to be keep with Heritick[s]. Two keys hang from his waist, and serpents writhe under his feet. Two sceptres lie across one another at his feet. Three sovereigns wearing crowns and ermine robes sit by him, their seats on the ground besides his dais: On his l. the King of Spain holding a circular shield on which is a globe representing the world; his crown terminates in a fool's cap, very inapplicable to Charles III,¹ but see the libel on the king of Spain quoted in Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1845, iv. 169, 372-5. On the Pope's r. sits the king of France, his fleur-de-lys shield at his feet, holding a paper inscribed Grande Alliance. Behind him is the Emperor, his sceptre ornamented with the Hapsburg eagle. Between these two appears the monster with seven heads (six visible) which denotes the 'Beast', its fore-paws resting on a large book, Bible. On the ground in front of the Pope are documents inscribed, Articles of the Catholic Faith and a list of Pardons murder . . . 10, Adultry 9, Robbery 8 Beating a Priest 12. Behind (r.), a martyr is being burned at the stake, a pikeman and monks standing by, one holding a cross in front of the victim; beneath is inscribed Popish cruelty.

In the foreground (r.), George III, a drawn sword, point upwards, against his shoulder, receives a deputation of Protestant petitioners: two ministers in gowns and clerical wigs kneel at his feet, one holding a paper inscribed Address, the other saying These Persecutions must be always remembered by Protestants, he points to a Scotsman, partly visible on the extreme r., with a drawn broadsword, who is saying The Deel a ane o' that Popish Crew shall come this way. He wears Highland dress and a large thistle decorates his cap. Above his head appear the ends of three bayoneted muskets inscribed 150,000. He represents either Lord George Gordon, or Scotland, where the riots had prevented the passing of a Catholic Relief Act, see No. 5534, &c. Behind these figures is a sign-post inscribed the Way to Scotland, on it is a sign-board: the Pope mounted on a beast, the Devil seated by him, confronted by a prancing unicorn. Next the signpost (r.) is an obelisk inscribed Gun Powder Plot; Massacre of the Protestants in Ireland; Fire of London 1666; Burning of Craumer, Bradford &c. &c. Behind the king stand two courtiers, one wearing a star. At their feet lies Magna Charta torn, and the cap of Liberty which a dog is befouling.

In the foreground on the l. a Dutchman sits on two boxes, he is smoking a pipe and reading a paper inscribed Instructions Mynheer van. . . The upper box is inscribed For the use of y^e Catholics in Ireland, the lower one AT and a mark 4 . Beside him is another box, inscribed, For y^e Propagating y^e Holy Catholic Faith in Great Britain AD. 40. Behind are three monks, one of whom holds up the Host, three people kneel before it.

¹ Cf. No. 5717.

The scene is a market-place or public square; on the l. is a row of houses in which the nearest and largest building is inscribed Monastery. Behind the burning martyr, and forming the centre of the background, is a public building with a pillared portico, surmounted by a pediment on which are the royal arms. It has a tower with a hexagonal belfry and cupola, surmounted by a cross.

A manifestation of the very active propaganda of the Protestant Association which was going on under Lord George Gordon against the Catholic Relief Act. Wesley had written to the Press in support of the Protestant Association, see No. 5685. See No. 5534, &c.

8 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 11 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5644 OPPOSITION DEFEATED published as the act directs 27 Febr^y 1780 by W. Macintosh

Engraving. Perhaps intended as an answer to No. 5640. North rides on a bull which has been damaging prominent members of the Opposition. In front of the bull stands Charles Fox, with a fox's head, a large rent in his l. sleeve, saying, Here end the hopes of me and the Jews. He is supporting on his shoulders a young man, probably the Prince of Wales, who holds up both hands, saying Borias thou hast blasted all my attempts at the Crown. From North's mouth a blast of air is directed towards a signboard, on which is a royal crown, blowing it sideways so that it is out of reach of the young man on Fox's shoulders. Astride the pole on which the board hangs sits a sailor, waving his hat and saying D—n my eyes Huza Boreas and John Bull have don for them. The bull is kicking violently; under him lie three prostrate figures, representing France, his coat decorated with fleur-de-lys, Spain, in slashed doublet, and America, holding in his hand a flag on which is the number 13, for the thirteen colonies. A man with a bow from which he has just shot an arrow, falls backwards, having first received a fatal kick from the bull's hind leg; he is saying I die d[amnatio]n stares me in the face. He sinks back into the arms of two men in clerical gowns; one says, Dam—n is a Jest, the soul is not immortal; the other says, natural moral religious and civil liberty authorizes the murder of a minister thou hast nought to fear. The devil standing beside them says, Trusty servants support my faithful Malagrida, showing that the wounded man is Lord Shelburne. His two supporters are evidently Dr. Richard Price and Dr. Priestley, friends of Shelburne and of each other. Price's 'Observations on Civil Liberty . . .', 1776 had encouraged the American Declaration of Independence. Both men were Unitarians, and Priestley called himself a materialist. A one-eyed dog, his collar inscribed Poliph[emus] stands by, saying then my Jewel its all over I should have worried him if you had got him down. On the l. is a group walking or running from l. to r.: the foremost, looking through a lorgnette, says Arrah make haste or we shall not be in at the Death; from his pocket projects a paper inscribed Junius; evidently Burke, believed by many of his contemporaries to be the author of the Letters of Junius. He holds a rope attached to the nose of the man behind him, probably Lord Rockingham, who is saying Teague and ambition will be my downfall; he is about to stumble across a block inscribed Stumbling Blo[ck] of Ambition. Behind is partly visible an aged and emaciated woman, partly naked, perhaps representing Famine, she appears to be urging on Burke with a stick, probably an allusion to his 'Plan of Economical Reform', see No. 5657. A man running forward and blowing a horn inscribed Horn of Rebellion is faintly sketched.

At this time the activities of County Associations and Committees for reform and a change of the Government were giving rise to fears of civil war, see Nos. 5638, 5640, &c.

The first allusion in the Catalogue to the association of the Prince of Wales with Fox and the Opposition, cf. No. 5700.

One of the few satires attacking the Opposition, cf. Nos. 5334, 5650, 5665, 5829.

7¼ × 12¼ in.

5645 THE BULL BROKE LOOSE

[? After Viscount Townshend.]

Pub^l 1st of March 1780 by J. Kearly Stafford S^t Old Bond S^t & E. Hedg under the Roy^l Exchange, Engraving. A bull, snorting violently, has broken the rope by which he was attached to a post and is charging Lord North who flees before him, throwing towards the bull a paper inscribed A Committee of Accounts; in his other hand is a paper inscribed Pro[te]st. The bull has trampled over torn papers inscribed Hertfordshire Pr[o]test, Hunt[ingdon Prot]est; Prot[est]; his collar is inscribed Grievances. North's flight is impeded by a heap of cylindrical rolled documents, inscribed Taxes, Unfunded Debt, National Debt, Extraordinaries, Pension List, Civil List, Indian Paents [? Patents], Exch[equer] Bills, Treasury Contracts, Navy Debt, Private Contracts, Sinecure Places. Facing North on the r. are France, holding out his sword in the attitude of a fencer, America as a Red Indian holding a scalping knife, Spain holding out a spear. Behind them a Dutchman (Holland) watches with an expression of satisfaction. The bull is being urged on by four leaders of the Opposition (l.) who run (l. to r.) holding documents inscribed Petition. One says Extraordinaries; another, who resembles the Duke of Richmond, says K——s Civil List; a third (Burke?), Extravagant Emoluments, Places & Pensions; the last, Huzza the Majority of two.

In the background on the r. is a view of the southern part of Buckingham House; outside its palisade stands the signboard of an inn on which is a head of George III (taken from the mezzotint published as Ecce Homo or The Patriot, see Nos. 5544-7), beneath the head is etched Turks Head. In front of the house George III confers with Mansfield, who holds a paper inscribed, The good ship Obstinacy bound for Hanover. Behind the king, and stooping so that his head is concealed, is a Scotsman (Bute) in a kilt. Between this group and the bull stands a man holding a Circular Letter to the Irish Association. He is saying Factionous Libellous & unconstitutional. From his pocket hangs a paper inscribed Speech on the Address. He is Lord Hillsborough, see his speech on the Address 25 Nov. 1779. Parl. Hist. xx. 1045, &c. (appointed Secretary of State for the Northern Department on that day). During the debate the Duke of Richmond ridiculed Hillsborough and reminded the House of his 'celebrated circular letter written in 1768 wherein he pledged not only his own word, but that of his sovereign and the British legislature, that no more taxes would be laid on the people of America for the purpose of raising a revenue', ibid., p. 1077.

Beneath the design is etched:

*Here, as in a glass you see
The Scene that is, or soon, will be:
The BULL, long prick'd in back & side,
Breaks from the stake, to which he's tied
He plunges, darts, and springs around,
Now tears PROTESTS, and now the ground,
You see him rage, you hear him roar,
And rush on BOREAS just before:*

*Dismal and horrid is HIS plight,
While GRIEVANCES oppose his flight:
Piled are the Bills with which he racks us
And see—he stumbles over taxes:
As Dogs are hushed to peace with sops,
A COMMITTEE of ACCOUNTS he drops:*

*Anxious, since vain is all protest,
To grant a part to save the rest:
But even this cannot give breath
To one within TWO VOTES of death:
In vain LORD CIRCULAR scolds and squalls,
And 'factious, libellous, illegal' bawls:
While in his famous Speech we trace
The terms on which he took his place.
And by his Letter, see him Cherish
The Associations of the Irish.
The TURKS-HEAD Tavern stands behind
Where grouped in harmony we find,
The guilty two, and tutored one
By whom this bustle &c. &c. &c.*

A comment on the important debates of Feb. 1780. On 8 Feb. Sir George Savile presented the Yorkshire petition, see No. 5638, making a speech which Walpole feared portended civil war. (Letters, xi, p. 130.) On 11 Feb. Burke made his great speech on Economical Reform, and on 21 Feb. Savile's motion for a list of all places and pensions paid by the Crown was defeated by two votes only. On 14 Feb. North received favourably Burke's proposal for a Committee of Accounts. The protests trampled on by the bull are those made by certain counties against the petitions of Yorkshire and the other associated counties. See Parl. Hist. xx. 1318 ff., xxi. 1 ff. Ann. Reg. 1780, pp. 85 ff. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 270 ff. For the county petitions see No. 5638, &c. Here George III, though depicted as an obstinate despot is yet the tool of Bute and Mansfield. Perhaps intended as an answer to No. 5643. Resembles the manner of Viscount Townshend.

9 × 12 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5646 THE TRIUMPHANT BRITONS.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d March 8th 1780. by H. Humphrey New Bond Street

Aquatint. A bayonet charge of British soldiers (r.) against Spaniards and Frenchmen (l.). The Spaniards, wearing feathered hats, are fleeing unarmed. A thin Frenchman dressed as a petit-maitre staggers back in alarm, his arms outstretched, one hand on the shoulder of an equally terrified Spaniard. A Spaniard in cloak and slashed doublet has fallen to the ground and tries to shelter behind the Frenchman; coins apparently from his pockets lie on the ground beside him. The British advancing with bayonets are led by an officer who holds a sword raised to strike; a soldier holds a British flag. For English successes over France and Spain, 1779–80, see Nos. 5623, 5624, 5647, 5648, 5652, 5658, 5710.

Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830.

Grego, Gillray, p. 30.

8 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5647 BRITANIA AND HER DAUGHTER.

Publish'd as the Act directs March 8th 1780, by I. Mills N^o 1. Ratcliff Row near the French Hospital Old Street.

Engraving, a song engraved beneath it in two columns. Britannia, dressed as a Roman soldier, advances with shield and raised spear towards figures representing Spain, America, and France. She says, Daughter return to your duty, and let me punish those empty Boasters; those base Villains, who keep you from your Alegiance, and desturb our Quiet. America, wearing a feathered head-dress and pseudo-classical draperies, holds a knife in her r. hand, a tomahawk in her l. She says, Mother if you would punish those Villains, who forced me from my Alegiance, and desturb our quiet, you must find them at home: those Gentlemen are my Allies, we are now Arm'd and seek your Life. Spain, on America's r., holds a shield and a raised sword; he says, Signiora Britania, I'll take care your Daughter shall be true to me, I'll make her wear a Spanish Padlock. France, on America's l., with a drawn sword and shield with fleur-de-lys, says, Sacra Dieu! I vlll have your Daughter vether you vlll let me or no; and vat you tink besides, By Gar, I vlll make you my Servant, to wait upon us, you shall Roast your own Bull for our Wedding Dinner.

Beneath is engraved:

A Song

*Miss America North, so News-paper records;
With her Mother Britania, one day had some words,
When behold Monsieur Louis, advanc'd a new whim,
That she should leave her Mother for to live with him.
Derry Down,*

*The Damsel consented but quickly found out
That her Paramour was not sufficiently stout;
Besides he was poor, and she wanted fine things,
So he sent to Don Carlos for Cash and Gold-rings
Derry Down,*

*Says Monsieur to the Don, if you take my advice,
Then you of young Miss may come in for a slice;
The Don being am'rous was easy brought o're,
And he Cuddled, and Kiss'd, as Monsieur did before.
Derry Down,*

*Britania beheld her with tears in her eyes,
O! Daughter return to your duty she cries,
But she replies no I'm a Woman full grown,
And long for to keep a good house of my own;
Derry Down,*

*If you'd used me kind when I was in your power,
I then had lived with you at this very hour,
But now on my Lovers so much do I doat,
That we're Arm'd and I'll help 'em to cut your old throat.
Derry Down,*

*Then with Hatchet, and Scalping-knife Miss did advance,
On one side of her Spain, on the other side France;
Britania thus threatned, does all three oppose,
And how it will end the Lord above knows;
Derry Down,*

Britania of late sent out one of her sons,
Who has given Don Carlos, a thump o' the Munns,
Knock'd out Five of his Teeth, all double ones too,
And keeps 'em to help Old Britania to chew.
Derry Down.*

*Now for the Old Lady let all of us pray,
May Monsieur, and the Don, for their perfidy pay,
May young Miss, return to her duty agen,
And may Britons be true in despite of Base Men.
Derry Down.*

Rodney, after capturing a Spanish squadron on 8 Jan. and relieving Gibraltar, defeated and captured another Spanish squadron off Cape St. Vincent on 16 Jan.; Rodney's second dispatch was published in a Gazette Extraordinary of 29 Feb. 1780. Spain was never an ally of America, being unwilling to recognize a revolt of colonies.

A naively conceived and drawn satire apparently by the same artist as Nos. 5636, 5640. For Rodney's victories see Nos. 5648, 5658, 5780. 6 $\frac{7}{16}$ × 9 in.; pl. 13 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5648 RODNEY'S TRIUMPH

*Published for y Proprietor by W Humphrey as y Act directs March 10
1780 N^o 227 Strand or N^o 18 New Bond St*

Engraving. Rodney (l.) prancing over the emblems of France and Spain (fleur-de-lys and cross), a cudgel inscribed Oak in his r. hand. He resembles the Dutchman of contemporary satire more than an English admiral, and is obese, being dressed as a sailor in a plain coat or waistcoat and a short petticoat.¹ He says,

*My Name is S^t G. Rodney
Bibbaty Bobody Binn O
Did I not Drub you well at Sea
With my little Club of Oak. O.*

* Rodney [Original note].

¹ He is grotesquely unlike Rodney's portraits and his description as elegant, with 'something that approached to delicacy and effeminacy in his figure'. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, i. 223.

Facing him, in profile to the l., stands Spain, in cloak and slashed doublet, being violently sick, one hand held to his head; he says, O I am very Sick This Damd Rodney will doo for me. Behind him stands France, wearing a cloak trimmed with fleur-de-lys. His knees are knocking together, and with a face of consternation he says, Begar me never feel a my knees go so Nicky Naky Nicky Nacky in a . . . la my Life before as a me do at pre sant. Behind the figures is a small tree. Beneath the design is etched:

*To fight against Britons y^e task is in vain,
For Triumphant we ride still Lord of y^e Main,
Success to Brave Rodney whose Valor renown
Now Frightens y^e French & Sicken the Don.*

See Nos. 5645, 5647, 5658. Apparently by the same artist as Nos. 5568, 5709.

$4\frac{7}{8} \times 6\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5649 THE ENGLISH LION DISMEMBER'D

OR THE VOICE OF THE PUBLIC FOR AN ENQUIRY INTO THE PUBLIC EXPENDITURE.

[? T. Colley.]

Pub: by E. Hedges No 2, under the Royal Exchange Cornhill March 12th, 1780.

Engraving. Lord North (l.), with a sack over his shoulder inscribed Budget, drags by a chain a large lion. The lion's r. fore-paw, inscribed America, has been cut off, and his leg is bleeding. With the lion walk America, France, and Spain. America, a Red Indian with a head-dress and kilt of feathers, holds out a tomahawk in his l. hand; in his other hand is the staff supporting the cap of liberty; he says, This Limb belongs to me in Spite of Fate. France holds out a sword in his l. hand, his r. is on the lion's head; he says, Either by Policy or Force I must Obtain some limb or Other. Spain, standing by France, says I am afraid I shall lose all my Dollers & get Nothing. Behind the lion (r.) three men advance with a flag inscribed Associations, two of them with drawn swords; they point towards North; one says, Let our Associations Stop that lump of Iniquity from Ruining our Country; the next says, One limb is lost Already by his Infernal tricks. The third says, Give us an Account how you Spend our money. North is saying, D—n these Associations they will put a Stop to my Proceedings at last. He is walking over documents inscribed York; Middlesex; Petitions, and Protestant Petition (the monster petition for the repeal of the Catholic Relief Act to which Lord George Gordon was then collecting signatures). In the foreground a large thistle is growing, emblematic of the evil influence of Scotland; near it appears part of some striped material, perhaps the American flag, but with many more than thirteen stripes.

For the Associations and Petitions see No. 5638, &c. For the Protestant Petition see No. 5534, &c., and Nos. 5633, 5680.

An imitation of No. 3547 (1756), The English Lion dismembered or the Voice of the Public for an enquiry into the loss of Minorca . . .

$7\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5650 PATRIOTIC SOUP FOR POOR OLD ENGLAND

Pub^d March 16th 1780 by T. Cornell Printseller Bruton Street.

Engraving. A large pot stands over a fire on the ground, a number of men stand round it, some throwing ingredients for the soup into it. A man (r.) holds a torch to the bottom of the pot saying I'll sett the whole in a blaze; another (l.) feeds the fire with folded documents inscribed . . . esq. Bonds, saying A new way to pay old Debts. His squint and Mephistophelian wig indicate Wilkes. Behind him an obese man looks on with his arms folded and his breeches' pockets hanging out empty; he says, I cannot do that but I'll vote to burn the Owners. He is probably Charles Fox. A sailor wearing striped trousers hurries away from the pot, into which he is excreting, saying Heavens a Lee Shore I'd rather face. He is evidently intended for Keppel, known as Admiral Lee Shore (see No. 5992, &c.) after the action off Ushant of 27 July 1778 (cf. No. 5626, &c.), who after his court martial (see No. 5536) had protested against serving under Sandwich as First Lord and had been ordered to strike his flag. Next him a man holding a large basket puts a potato into the pot, saying, G—d fire me now if I've a Potatoe left. He may be Burke (or Barré). Next sits Louis XVI facing the pot; he wears a crown and a coat covered with fleur-de-lys; with one hand he points to the sailor, with the other he holds up a frog, saying, Dis an dat make ver good Soup. On his l. stands a man with turnips (?) under his arm saying, A very good strengthener—but will it cure. . . The next man holds a cow's heel over the pot saying by Jasus nothing makes better Mutton Broth than a good Cow heel. He is perhaps Barré (or Burke). The Duke of Richmond with a ribbon and star comes up with a coal-scuttle saying and I'll find Coals. He was the grantee of a duty on coals (granted by Charles II to his grandfather, son of the Duchess of Portsmouth). This was the notorious 'Richmond Shilling' denounced in Paine's Rights of Man. A woman runs forward from the r., her sleeves turned up and wearing an apron and ragged petticoat; she says, Stop Thief the son of a W—e has stole my Coals. On the extreme l. is a grotesque monster or devil, with horns and a barbed tail, at his feet, in profile to the l. kneels a bishop, his hands raised in prayer, saying, We are gathered together in thy name. On the extreme r. a spectator looks from a doorway, pointing at the scene and saying Sing tantararara Rogues all Rogues all.

Probably an attack on the County Associations and Petitions, see No. 5638, &c., and the adoption of Fox, 2 Feb. 1780, as candidate for Westminster, to counteract which the Court party is said to have distributed bills on the dearness of coals, due to the 'Richmond Shilling'. Fitzmaurice, Shelburne, 1912, ii. 47. Richmond was the advocate of manhood suffrage and annual parliaments, see Parl. Hist. xxi. 686 ff. One of the few satires on the Opposition, see No. 5334, &c.

8 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 14 in.

5651 [LORD NORTH AS AN AUCTIONEER.]

London. Published March 17th 1780 by E. Hedges No 2 under the Piazza's Royal Exchange Cornhill.

Engraving. Lord North as an auctioneer stands on a rostrum holding up a hammer in his r. hand, in his l. is a sheaf of papers inscribed: Crown Lands; A Plan of Economy for striking off Unmerited Pensions; York Patition [sic] &c; Bill. Round his forehead is a bandage inscribed Taxes; he is saying Just a going Just a going. He is irradiated with light. A crowd of men stand below looking up at him, their heads and shoulders being visible. A bishop in mitre and lawn sleeves, cf. No. 5553, &c., holds up his r. hand, his arm round the shoulder of a man wearing a three-corned hat and his own hair, perhaps intended for Wesley, see No. 5493, &c., to whom he says, from the Prayers of the upright we alone hope for Prosperity. The other answers, Verily verily it doth not become Us to Meddle with your Church or State affairs. A man of fashion wearing a bag-wig looks up at North through an eye-glass. Next him is Lord Sandwich, holding the model of a ship under his arm. On the extreme r. is a judge, a book inscribed Law under his arm. Behind these is a crowd of faces; labels coming from some of their mouths are inscribed: This is an alarming Crisis that must be decided by one fatal Blow to the Redress of one or Ruin to the other; If these Plans are not Prevented from taken [sic] Place we shall lose both Places & Pensions; This is not a Consumation devoutly to be Wished; Is a Public Service to be knock'd down att the Price of accomodating a few Individuals?; If this Lot is knock'd down the People will sweat under the load of Taxes they must bear.

Beneath the design is etched:

*He with Hammer in hand can opposing withstand
And knock down Patitions [sic] at nought tho they rail & they bawl
He can answer them all
And put them & thair Plans to the Route
For of those Ther's enough
Who are Ready to puff
When ever he needs their Support
If he dont tip the wink
they know well where ther's chink
Or the dream of some Place Sir at Court.*

*He gives Places tis sure
And perhaps to procure
Him intrest to carry the Day then how vain the attempt of Patriots to exempt
Us from Taxes whilst he has the Sway.*

A satire in support of the County Petitions and Burke's plan of economical reform, see Nos. 5638, 5645, &c.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5652 THE GAME AT FOOT-BALL.

Pub by M Darly Mar^h 17. [? 1780] by M Darly [sic] 39 Strand

Engraving. A sailor (l.) has just kicked a Spanish don whom he holds by the hair; he looks towards another sailor, who faces him on the r., and says, Damme Jack lets have a game of football. The Spaniard wears a cloak, slashed doublet, and spurred boots, his feet are higher than his head; from his pockets drop coins. His broken sword falls to the ground. The other sailor (r.) stands with his arms folded, saying, With all my heart, kick him up Tom. Probably a representation of Rodney's important naval victories of 8 Jan. and 16 Jan. 1780, leading to the relief of Gibraltar, when valuable prizes were taken. See Nos. 5646-8, &c.

$6\frac{5}{16} \times 9\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5653 SUITERS TO HIBERNIA ON HER HAVING A FREE TRADE.

Publish'd March 18, 1780 by I. Mills, N^o 1. Ratcliff Row London.

Engraving. Hibernia (l.) seated under a tree receives advances from four men representing France, Spain, Holland, and Portugal. She holds a spear, and a shield on which is the Irish harp. At her side is a large roll inscribed Irish Linnen and a corded bale or packing case. The tree is inscribed *Shelaley*¹ and a branch over Hibernia's head is encircled with a wreath inscribed Shamroke. She says, I was once the Wife of John Bull, but now I've a License to trade for myself, my Ports are free for all Mankind to enter. Lord North looks from behind the trunk of the tree, saying, Had it not been for the Disturbance in America you should never have had a free trade I'm as far North as any of you. France approaches, hat in hand, his r. hand outstretched, saying I have no wear de Shirt since Fielding take de Holland vich Mynheer sent me, I'm forced to make shift vith de Ruffle, if you will let me into your Port for to get a bit of Linnen, I vill give you de French P—x, vich is all I shall have left ven de var is over. (It was a common gibe among the English populace that Frenchmen wore ruffles without shirts.) Spain, wearing a feathered hat, cloak, and slashed doublet, says Let me enter your Port I'll give you plenty of Spanish Gold for your Linnen, tho' if Rodney comes to see me often I shall have none left. Holland, wearing a high-crowned hat and smoking a pipe, says I want a piece of Linnen to send to America, she wants a new Shift but can't come for it least she should catch cold, if you'll let me enter your Port I'll give you a Dutch Herring and a glass of Hollands after it to keep it from rising in your Stomach. Portugal, dressed like Spain, except that his doublet is not slashed, says I keep a Vineyard in Portugall, if you'll let me into your Port, I'll supply you with Wine at a cheap rate for your Linnen, if you'll drink none from France or Spain.

Bills for removing the restrictions on Irish trade were passed in Dec. 1779, see No. 5572. The trade between Holland and France which was impeded by the British Navy was that in naval stores, sail-cloth being an important item, cf. Nos. 5628, 5724, &c.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{9}{16}$ in.

5654 FOR OR AGAINST IS EQUALLY ALIKE.

Pub by M Darly Mar 27th 1780 39 Strand.

Engraving. A Dutchman stands full-face, his r. hand on his bulging breeches pocket, his l. forefinger to his lips. He says Let them fight I'll sack the chink. He stands on the sea-shore; at his feet are a box inscribed Dollors and a bale of goods. On the horizon an English and a French man-of-war are blowing each other to pieces, both ships appear to be sinking in clouds of smoke.

¹ An obsolete form of shillelagh, the term for a cudgel deriving from 'a wood of that name [in County Wicklow] famous for its oaks'. Grose, Dict. Vulg. Tongue, 1785, cited O.E.D.

Holland was using her neutrality to make large profits out of the war, especially in carrying naval stores, see No. 5557, &c. She is usually represented as anti-British, cf. No. 5628, &c.

$4\frac{5}{8} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5655 A SCENE IN LEADENHALL STREET,
HUMBLY INSCRIBED TO SIR GEORGE WOMBWELL
BARONET, BY THE ENGRAVER

Publish'd as the Act directs this 29th March 1780.

Engraving. Two men stand on a large rectangular pedestal: Sir G. Wombwell (l.) is urinating and is supported by his companion (r.) and by a pillar, almost broken through, on which he rests his r. arm; in his r. hand is a label inscribed My situation begins to alarm me. He is saying on this Ground I stand, the other says I was afraid your Insolence would bring you to this. Under their feet, and hanging over the front of the pedestal, are papers; on one is a design of four ships, their sails lowered and flying British flags. Wombwell is befouling them. Over the ships is inscribed An Avowed Opposition. Wombwell's supporter stands on a paper inscribed Admiralty, showing that he is Sandwich. The pillar supporting Wombwell is composed of three blocks inscribed respectively, Twice Chairman, Zeal, and Integrity, the last nearly broken away. On the ground stands a square pillar composed of five blocks of stone which is breaking into three pieces. The stones are inscribed For Bye-laws; For Project of Building Ships in India; For Supporting the Propositions of the Court of Directors; For Rudeness & insolence in Office; For the Injured Lord Pigot.

Sir George Wombwell (d. Nov. 1780) was twice Chairman of the East India Company. He had opposed in the House of Commons (16 Apr. 1779) a resolution of Admiral Pigot for inquiring into the deposition and imprisonment of his brother, Lord Pigot, Governor of Madras in 1776, who had died in captivity May 1777. Pigot's resolutions were adopted and led to the trial of those responsible for the imprisonment, Stratton, Brooke, Floyer, and Mackay, members of the Madras Council. This print appears to be a comment on the trial (Dec. 1779) and sentence (10 Feb. 1780), and on the commanding influence of Sandwich over the East India Company (see Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, i. 403-5). Wombwell, M.P. for Huntingdon, a borough dependent on Lord Sandwich, was a supporter of the Ministry. The East India House was in Leadenhall Street, cf. No. 6276, &c.

10 × 8 in. (pl.).

5656 VAMP IN TRIUMPH.

[1 Apr. 1780.]

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 128. A man standing in the pillory; from his coat pocket hangs a newspaper with the caption A Cowant. It illustrates a dialogue 'Vamp in triumph; or the Pillory properly filled. Being the Sequel of a Dialogue between Vamp and Squib, his news-collector.' The man stands on a raised circular platform, his head and hands in the pillory. A circle of grinning men surrounds him, some of them with the decorated staves which show that they are constables. The illustration is described as 'an emblematical etching, and a striking likeness, suitable to the Subject'. The dialogue is strongly hostile to the Opposition journalists. Vamp's 'daring pamphlets' have been highly profitable to him; he says,

'Why, if I thought I could raise the sale of my paper five hundred, I would abuse Charles Fox as much as I now do Lord North'. For the libellous character of the London Courant see No. 5631 n.

$5\frac{7}{16} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5657 [ASSOCIATION MEETING AT YORK.]¹

London. Publish'd as the Act directs, April 6th 1780 by Rob^t Laurie.

N^o 17. Rosomonds Row Clerkenwell.

Price 2^s

Mezzotint. A representation, partly allegorical, of the meeting of the Association at York on 30 Dec. 1779 when the petition of the county was agreed to and a committee of sixty-one appointed. Men sit and stand in ranks on each side of a large table strewn with documents; though on a small scale, many appear to be portraits. On a raised dais at the back of the room three women sit behind a smaller table, each with a document, one holds an olive branch. They are identified by Mr. Hawkins, evidently from a contemporary key to the print, as Civil Union, Moderation, and Harmony influencing the conduct of the meeting. Athene, with her spear, an owl on her helmet, holds out to them a scroll inscribed Constitution Liberty Peace Economy, the primary objects of the meeting. The chairman [Christopher Wyvill] holds in his hand a paper inscribed York Dec^r 30th 1779. On the table are books: C^t Kal 1779, C^t Kal 1780, i.e. the Court or 'Royal Kalendar' giving lists of office-holders and place-holders; Hist. of England,² Bacon, Lydney [sic. i.e. Sydney], Newton, Lock. Documents are inscribed Partiat Cont^s M.S. & A.; Unmeri[ted] Pentio[us], Sinecures; Magna Charter; Bill of Rights; Navy Extra[ordinaries]; Army Extr.; Board of Trade; Board of Works; Customs Q^{ys} N.B. x; Ordnance Q^{ys} N.B. xx.

Four female figures approach the table on the l.: Hope, with rope and anchor, points to Magna Charter. Election holds out a paper inscribed Short Par[liaments], Equal Rep[resentation] Ballot; Public Virtue, with a spear, holds a paper Chai[ham] Cam[den]; Liberty, with the cap of liberty on a staff, holds out Hab. Cor. Attachm. Inform. ex officio, i.e. Habeas Corpus, Attachment, Information ex Officio (criminal proceedings by Information without the intervention of a grand jury being regarded as infringements of liberty). At their feet is a satyr chained to the ground, representing Corruption vainly struggling to regain his ascendancy. A man holds a large book and a paper inscribed $\pounds 10,000,000$; at his feet is a pelican. Behind, on the extreme l., is a female figure in a dress patterned with fleur-de-lys; she is the demon of discord and is fleeing away. On the r. other allegorical figures approach the table: Commerce, a man with a stork standing on his arm, holds out a paper, Exports Protection Dispatch. Manufacture, a woman holding out an implement for carding wool; the Landed Interest, a woman with a sheaf of corn, holding out a paper inscribed Taxes. Public Credit is an old woman crowned with a wreath holding a paper inscribed Nekar. (The reforms of Necker in France had been extravagantly extolled by the Opposition in Parliament.) In front of these figures are a stag lying down, a cock running to the r. signifying 'the just disappointment of french perfidy', and the tail feathers of a peacock, expressing the humiliated condition of Spain. In the foreground is the British Lion, he is being unchained by a sailor and a soldier.

¹ The title has probably been cut off.

² Probably that of Mrs. Macaulay.

³ Presumably 'partial contracts'.

The design is surrounded by a garland, the lower part of oak leaves, the upper part of olive. In the centre below the design is a trophy of the royal arms, flags, drums, cannon, an anchor and other munitions of war. In the centre above the design are the arms of the city of York supported by two cornucopias. Below this is a picture of Britannia and America embracing. On the l. are the arms of Edwin Lascelles,¹ on the r. those of Sir George Savile, the two members for Yorkshire, the latter having presented the Yorkshire petition to the House of Commons, see No. 5638.

The print is also an approving comment on Burke's great speech of 11 Feb. 1780 on his 'Plan of Economical Reform' in which he made a panegyric on the finance of Necker and urged the abolition of (inter alia) the Board of Works, Board of Trade, and Board of Ordnance. Parl. Hist. xxi. 1-74. See also Nos. 5644, 5645, 5662.

For the Yorkshire Association see No. 5638, &c.

8½ × 11½ in.

5658 AN HERIOGLYPHYCAL EPISTLE FROM (BRITANNIA) (TOE) ADMIRAL (RODNEY)

Pub^d April 4th 1780 by W Richardson N^o 68 High Holborn.

A rebus. An engraved text in which the words in brackets are represented by small objects. It is headed by a figure of Britannia and a portrait head of Rodney which form part of the title.

*To (yew) my Darling Child (eye) Deign (toe) Wr(eye)te
Who Dar'd the Haughty Span(eye)sh Dons (toe) Fight
The Cause l(eye)ke others (yew) did (knot) (bee)tray
Who faintly Fought (hand) (awl)most Ran away
L(eye)ke a Bold (man) U us'd (Britannia's) Power
(Hand) Scorn'd t(hat) Dreaded C(eye)rcumstance—LEE SHORE
Close on their Coast (yew) d(eye)d Attack the Foe.
(Hand) Gave their (ships) a (toe)tal Overthrow.
Aga(eye)n the (flag) of (Hen)gland was un(fur)l'd.
My Thunders roar'd (toe) Awe the Subject (world)
The Prince (bee)held with Rapture (hand) Surpr(eye)se.
Wh(eye)le the true Hero, Sp(ark)l'd (eye)n his (eyes)
To (yew) the (wreath) of vic(toe)ry (eye) Send Thy Countrys Guard(eye)an (hand) m(eye) trusty Fr(eye)end
Go on Brave (Rod)NEY in th(eye) Bold (car)eer
(Hand) let th(eye) Vengeance, Burst on False (Mounseer)
Then lost Ameri(k) no m(oar) shall Roam
(Butt) find w(eye)th me true (Grate)ness is (hat) Home
Pe(ace) shall aga(eye)n her Olive (branch) expand (Hand) Smiling (plenty) (crown) the Happy L(hand) Brittania.*

For Rodney's victories see Nos. 5646, 5647, 5648, 5710. 'Lee Shore' is an allusion to Keppel nicknamed Admiral Lee Shore, who defended his conduct at the Battle of Ushant by the plea (inter alia) that he was off a lee shore, cf. Nos. 5673, 5992, &c. The line is literally true of Rodney's action on 16 Jan. 1780 'regardless of a blowy night, lee shore and dangerous shoals', Mahan, Influence of Sea Power, 1890, p. 404.

¹ Lascelles was a supporter of the Court, and through the efforts of Wyvill and Mason, the chief organizers of the Yorkshire Association, a large sum was raised in Sept. 1780 to oppose his re-election. Walpole, Letters, xi. 280.

The letter illustrates the habitual misuse of the aspirate by the humbler classes, 'and' being represented by a hand, 'at' by a hat; see No. 5677, a very similar letter.

11 × 5 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5659 PREROGATIVES DEFEAT OR LIBERTIES TRIUMPH

Publisd [sic] Aprill 20. 1780 by E. Darchery St J's Street.

Engraving. Bute (l.) and Lord North (r.) lie on the ground, their heads close together, and are trampled on by Dunning who steps from the shoulders of North to those of Bute, assisted by Fox who takes his hand and rests one knee on Bute's back. Bute is in Highland dress and wears his Garter ribbon. Dunning is saying, I'll trample on Corruptions favorite Minions; Fox says, Influence of the Masked Battery of Tyranny. Dunning is being attacked from behind by another Scot in Highland dress, who has a ferocious aspect and raises his sword to strike, his l. hand resting on his enemy's shoulder. He says, Dom his Phiz I'll cut his Weezen.

The scene is watched by America and Ireland who stand together on the l. America, wearing a feathered head-dress and a belt of feathers, says, Now we will treat with them. Ireland is a young man dressed as an Irish volunteer and holding a bayoneted musket whose butt rests on the ground. His hat is decorated with a harp. He says, We are Loyal but we will be Free.

A representation of Dunning's famous resolution on the influence of the Crown, moved 6 Apr. 1780; it also illustrates the first defeat of the Government in the House of Commons 13-14 Feb., when the clause for abolishing the Board of Trade, see No. 5657, was carried by 207 to 199. It anticipates (by almost two years) a change of ministry and subsequent peace with America.

The Scot who attacks Dunning is probably William Fullarton, who had attacked Shelburne in the House of Commons for the latter's denunciation of his appointment to the command of a regiment raised by himself. Fullarton challenged Shelburne, and the duel, 22 Mar. 1780, was compared with that of Fox and Adam, see Nos. 5575, 5625, as an attempt by the Ministry to get rid of an Opposition leader. Ann. Reg., 1780, pp. 148-53, 202-4. Fitzmaurice, Shelburne, 1912, ii. 52 ff. For Ireland see No. 5572, &c.

9 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 11 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5660 THE HUMBLE PETITION OF (TEMPLE BAR) TO SOME OF THE (HEADS) OF THE NATION.

Published April 16th 1780, by W. Wells N^o 132 opposite Salisbury Court, Fleet Street.

A rebus; an engraved text in which the words in brackets are represented by small objects. Etchings of Temple Bar and portrait heads of Lord George Germain, Lord Sandwich, and Lord North form part of the title. On Temple Bar are three spikes, ready for the heads of the three ministers.

May it Please ye,

'Tis very (well) (key)noun [known] (bee)y Some People al(hive)
Some Honors (eye) had from the (ear) Forty f(hive),
When (oar) my (bee)road (gate) Re(bell) (heads) did ap(pear)
(Yew) sure cant forget Fletch(ear) ('Town)ley (hand) L(ear), (Butt) (Time) has A(lass) (awl) my Honors de(key)'d.
My (spikes) (hare) (awl) (bear) (toe) the (world) now d(eye)splay'd, (Knot) a (tray)tor is (hang)'d my sad loss to re(pear)
Tho' enough now (die)serve it (eye) vow (hand) (die) clare:
(Toe) (yew) who preside (hat) the (head) of the Nat(eye)on
(Eye) send this (pea)tition for some Consolat(eye)on,
Let my (ornament)s once again r(eye)se (toe) the Sight
T'will fill (awl) the (people) with Joy (hand) del(eye)ight;
Lord (Boar)as [Boreas], Tw(eye)tcher (hand) Min(den) (will) do,
(Eye)f once they were placed (inn) a (capitol) (view)!
(Eye)f this yew (comb)ply w(eye)th no more I(hive) (toe) say
(Butt) t(hat) eye (inn) duty Bound ever (will) Pray.
 (Temple Bar)

One of several appeals for the execution of members of the Ministry, based doubtless on attacks made in the House of Commons by Fox and others. See No. 5661, and cf. Nos. 5964, 5969, 6046. The Jacobites Towneley and Fletcher were executed at Kennington 30 July 1746, see No. 2799; theirs were the last heads exposed on Temple Bar. 'Lear' is perhaps Alexander Leith, a Jacobite executed on 28 Nov. 1746.

12 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5661 THE HEADS OF THE NATION IN A RIGHT SITUATION.

Pub. by M Darly (39) Strand, May, 1. 1780.

Engraving. A view of Temple Bar, with three heads on spikes. The heads are being pelted with stones, dead dogs, &c., by a crowd of men, women, and children. A market-woman smoking a pipe kneels before her basket, and is about to use its contents as missiles. Another woman says This is a sight I have long wish[ed] to see. A boy holds a stone in one hand, a dead dog or cat in the other. A man waves his hat, crying, Steer to the North, indicating that one of the victims is Lord North; another says, There goes for Germany (Lord George Germain). The third is evidently Lord Sandwich. Another man says This is a happy day for England. A man waves his wig in delight. Small figures hurling missiles are seen through the centre arch; passers-by appear through the two side arches. On the upper part of the masonry of the arch is sketched a figure of Justice, seated on clouds, her scales in one hand, a spear in the other. The statues of two kings in the alcoves show that this is the west side of Temple Bar. On Temple Bar are placards: Lecture upon Heads, a punning allusion to the popular 'Lecture' of George Alexander Stevens; A Cure for a Distress[ed] nation and 1745, in allusion to the heads on Temple Bar after the Jacobite rebellion. See No. 5660, &c.

8 $\frac{3}{16}$ × 12 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5662 A VIEU OF PLYMOUTH

Pub^d by M Darly (39) Strand, May 4th 1780, acc^s to Act.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A raree-show man (r.)

is exhibiting his peep-show, in a box inscribed A View of Plymouth, to Lord Amherst, in profile to the r., who stoops down, his hands on his knees, to look through one of the two round holes. The showman says, There you see Cannons without Carriages and Carriages without Cannons. There you see Generals without Orders there you see &c. &c. The show-box is supported on trestles. Amherst is in general's uniform, wearing the ribbon of the Bath. Behind him, partly cut off by the l. margin of the print, stands a Grenadier at attention, holding a musket; he watches the general with a grin. Beneath the design is engraved:

Col Mushrooms Comp^{is} to Lord Am—t recommends this cheap but Satisfactory mode of viewing distant Garrisons hopes his Lordship has received the Golden Pippins a few of them are for his Secretary.

Amherst was Lieutenant-General of the Ordnance, and acted as Commander-in-Chief, being adviser to the Government on the American War. The print probably echoes Burke's attack on the Board of Ordnance in his speech on Economical Reform, Parl. Hist. xxi. 38-9, as well as the recriminations after Saratoga, ibid., xx. 675 ff. In the debate of 25 Nov. 1779 the defenceless state of Plymouth was denounced by the Opposition, and Fox asked if, except for 'an invisible cabinet influence', there could have been 'in one place cannon without balls, and in another balls without cannon'. Ibid., xx. 1120; see also pp. 1150-1 ff. Cf. No. 5657. Perhaps one of a series, see No. 5682, &c.

5½ × 6½ in.

5662 A Another impression with the imprint,

Pub^d by H Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street.

5663 DUTCH GRATITUDE DISPLAY'D.

Pub^d accor^s to Act 4 May 1780.

Engraving. A design in two groups, one (l.) representing the past, the other (r.) the present. A Dutchman personifying the Dutch Republic, threatened by Spain (l.) kneels, hat in hand, before a military officer representing England, imploring help. He says, the poor distracted States of Holland. The Englishman answers, I am your Friend Mynheer I'll help you up & beat your foes. A Spaniard stands (l.) behind the Dutchman's back, his sword raised to strike, his l. fist clenched, saying, I am determined Mynheer you shall never rise more. On the r. is another group of figures representing Holland, England, America, France, and Spain: A Dutchman on the extreme r., smoking a pipe, his hands in his breeches pocket, scowls at an English officer, saying, I am now y^e high & Mighty. (The States General of the United Provinces were addressed as Hogen Mogen, 'High Mightinesses'.) The Englishman, a drawn sword in his hand, says to him Now is y^e time to pay y^e debt of Gratitude. America, an Indian holding a tomahawk, says to France, pointing to England, It shall never have my Colonies again. France, a French military officer with a drawn sword, wearing spurred jack-boots, points to England, saying, begar me will have half his Possessions. Spain, in cloak and feathered hat, also with a drawn sword, stands behind France saying Don Diego has vow'd the downfall of England. Beneath the design verses are engraved:

*See Holland oppress'd by his old Spanish Foe,
To England with cap in hand kneels very low,*

*The Free-hearted Britton, dispels all its care,
And raises it up from the brink of Dispair.*

*But when three spitefull foes old England beset,
The Dutchman refuses to pay a Just debt;
With his hands in his pockets he says he'll stand Neuter,
And England his Friend may be D——d for the Future.*

An allusion to the treaties of alliance to which Sir Joseph Yorke at the Hague so unsuccessfully appealed. The first scene (l.) represents the United Provinces at the time of the wars of William III and Anne, or? temp. Elizabeth, the other (r.) the situation in 1780.

One of many satires on the attitude of the Dutch Republic before the declaration of war, see No. 5557, &c. For opinion in Holland, see No. 5712, &c.

4½ × 10 in.

5664 LEWIS BABOON ABOUT TO TEACH NIC FROG THE LOUVRE [n.d. 1780]

Sold by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving (coloured impression). A stout man with seven heads, representing 'Nic Frog' or Holland (r.), each head symbolizing one of the seven United Provinces, receiving overtures from 'Lewis Baboon' (France), a slim foppish man with a simian profile, who clasps Nic's r. hand in both of his, saying, Come Mynheer, and I will teach you to dance the Lowvre, and my Brother Don Pedro, the Findango. One of the seven heads (smoking a pipe) answers Yaw, Yaw Mynheer Lewis, but who pays the Piper, I'm afraid of the Ducaten; while another head (with a Jewish profile), facing in the opposite direction, says Quick Quick Mynheer, Yonder comes John Bull, who with his Hornpipe will spoil your Ball I'm afraid. Spain (l.) turns his back on the couple, saying Not I Brother Lewis I am wearied to Death with dancing to your cursed French Music. Behind, the Devil in the form of a satyr is playing a pipe as he walks from r. to l. The central and largest of Holland's seven heads has a tub on it in place of a hat; round his shoulder is slung a chain of small fish, head to tail; from this hangs a small cask. In his l. hand is a stick inscribed Russia. Behind is the sea, with a vessel at anchor, flying the British flag, a ship's boat is pulling to the shore. Beneath the design is engraved:

*Ornamented with Butter Fish Cheese does appear
The Monster seven headed whose name is Mynheer
Tho' he's heavy in bottom the Baboon of France
Invites him along with Don Pedro to Dance
The Don turns his back for some Reasons of State
Which tis thought he receiv'd from the English of late
Old Nic he keeps piping in hopes to please all,
Yet all are afraid lest John Bull spoil their Ball*

The cudgel marked Russia is an emblem of the Declaration of Armed Neutrality by Russia, 26 Feb./9 Mar. 1780, which was a surprise to England, cf. No. 5557. The 'reasons of state' are an allusion to Rodney's victories over the Spaniards in Jan. 1780, see No. 5646, &c. The names are taken from Arbuthnot's famous pamphlet, 'Law is a bottomless Pit, or the History of John Bull', 1712. For other satires on the attitude of Holland before the declaration of war in Dec. 1780, see No. 5557, &c. Cf. also No. 5712, a pro-English Dutch print, in which France is trying 'to bring Holland gradually to the dance with England', and No. 5825. For the attitude of Spain cf. No. 5642.

8 × 12½ in.

5665 A PETITIONING, REMONSTRATING, REFORMING, REPUBLICAN.

R. S. (Monogram).

Pub^d acc^d to Act May 8, 1780 by M Darly (39) Strand.

Engraving. The 'Republican', out at elbows, his stockings in holes, squats over an inverted crown, an inverted mitre in front of him, using these as chamber-pots. He supports himself by the staff of liberty, on which is a cap inscribed Liberty (deleted), Rebellion. Its drooping peak terminates in the bell of a fool's cap. Beneath the design is engraved:

YOUR PETITIONER SHEWETH,

*That he Humbly wishes to Reduce y^e Church to Gospel Order
By Rapine Sacrilige & Murther
To make Presbyty [sic] supream
& Kings themselves submit to him
& not content all this to do
He must have Wealth & Honor too
Or else with Blood & desolation
He'll tear it out of the Heart of the nation.*

A satire on the methods and aims of the Associations which had made petitions for reform, and formed committees of correspondence, see No. 5638, &c. These were regarded by many Whigs as going too far, both in their demands and their methods, which followed those adopted in America where delegates from Committees of Correspondence had constituted the Continental Congress. Cf. Walpole, Letters, xi, p. 130. Ann. Reg., 1780, pp. 87-8. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii, pp. 442-8. For the Association movement see No. 5638, &c. One of the few satires attacking the Opposition, cf. No. 5334, &c.

6 13/16 × 7 1/16 in.

5666 THE BALANCE OF POWER.

Publish'd 8 May 1780 by W. Renigald.

Engraving. The beam of a pair of scales supported on a post, from each end of which, instead of a scale, dangles a man as if from a gibbet. On the centre of the beam is perched an owl wearing a ribbon and star, inscribed Center of Gravity. On the lighter side (l.) hangs a man over whose eyes a fool's cap has been drawn, through which protrude ass's ears. In his r. hand is a Plan for enlarging Newgate, in his l. a copy of the General Advertiser. On the r. hangs a man in parson's gown and bands, his eyes covered by a turban-shaped cap; in his l. hand is a copy of the Morning Post, in his r. a newsboy's horn, from which issues a blast inscribed Blast ye, directed against the other body hanging from the gibbet. On his breast is a playing-card, the knave of clubs. Over his head are falling a castle, two churches, and two mitres. He is Bate, editor of the Morning Post, noted as a bruiser, see No. 5550, &c. On the ground stand two figures pointing to the gibbet: Justice (l.) leans on her sword, holding her scales, above her head is engraved:

*Grave wisdom takes the centre of the Beam,
And leaves to Knave & Fool, the wide extream.*

The owl perhaps represents North, often accused of unseemly levity, and his attitude towards Ministerial journalists. The Devil (r.) stands holding a coffin on which is a skull and cross-bones surmounting a freely sketched inscription suggesting the words Here lies P[arson] B[ate] and two reversed mitres. He points grinning to Bate; above his head is inscribed, Here I wait; To take my B—.

Bate's companion is perhaps William Cooke, who started the General Advertiser in Nov. 1776. Bourne, English Newspapers, i. 233, 249. The Duke of Richmond had recently instituted proceedings against Bate for offensive 'Queries' published in the Morning Post of 25 Feb. 1780, virtually accusing him of treason, Gent. Mag., 1780, pp. 247-8; Ann. Reg., 1780, p. 216, for which Bate was afterwards imprisoned. See Nos. 5550, 5676, 6162, &c.

6 × 13¼ in.

5667 ARGUS.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d May 15th 1780 by W. Renegal.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). George III, wearing a crown and ermine-trimmed robe is seated in an arm-chair asleep. The tassels of his girdle are thistles, indicative of Scottish influence. Round his neck is a chain from which hangs a cross, indicating the Romanizing tendencies of which he was accused at this time, see No. 5534, &c. His crown is being taken from his head by a judge in wig and ermine-trimmed robes, evidently Mansfield. Over the king's shoulder looks a Scot in Highland dress, evidently Bute, holding the sceptre which he has taken from the king's hand. He leans towards Mansfield saying What shall be done with it? Mansfield answers, Wear it Your sel my Leard. On the king's l. a man stands who holds in both hands the other side of the crown, he says, No troth I se carry it to Charly & hel not part with it again Mon! He is dressed an English gentleman, though his language indicates that he is a Scottish Jacobite; he is perhaps intended for some unpopular Scot, perhaps Wedderburn, then attorney-general. Behind the king's chair America, wearing a feathered head-dress, watches the scene; he says We in America have no Crown to Fight for or Loose.

In the foreground (r.) sits Britannia asleep, her head resting on her hand; by her side lies the British lion, also asleep and chained to the ground. At her feet are two maps, one of Great Britain (torn) lies on one of America. On the l. stands a man in rags with bare legs and dishevelled hair, clasping his hands together and saying I have let them quietly strip me of every Thing; he appears to represent the British commercial community. An Irishman next him, a harp under his arm, walks away saying I le take Care of Myself & Family. The background to these figures is a hedge; behind it on the r. is a Dutchman (the United Provinces) helping himself to the contents of two hives.

For Ireland see No. 5572, &c. For Holland as a profiteering neutral see No. 5557, &c. For commercial distress see No. 5574, &c.

Grego, Gillray, p. 30. Van Stolk, No. 4304.

$9\frac{3}{8} \times 13\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5668 CHATHAM'S GHOST, OR A PEEP INTO FUTURITY.

CHE SARA, SARA,

Published as the Act directs May 16, 1780 by W. Wells N^o 132 opposite Salisbury Court Fleet Street. London.

Engraving. George III (l.), seated in a chair, is being shown by the ghost of Chatham a procession of figures walking towards a pit (r.) inscribed Chaos. Chatham wears pseudo-classical draperies, a tie-wig crowned with a laurel wreath, and is surrounded by a glory of rays. He holds up a circular glass to the king, who looks through it with an expression of alarm. On the back of the king's chair is a crown surmounted by a weathercock which points to the South, probably to indicate that North's power is over, cf. No. 5659. Under his feet are torn county petitions, and an open book, Lock on Government. The petitions are those of York, Westminster, Middlesex, Hampshire, Surrey. There is also the design of the façade of a building inscribed, The Elevation of [a] Baby House. The leaders of the procession, who are on the brink of the pit, are the kings of France and Spain. A devil (r.) with wings, horns, and a long barbed tail, points into the pit. Behind the two kings come North and Sandwich. North holds a rolled document inscribed Taxes. Under his arm is a large money-bag with a gaping hole in it, by which is an open book or paper inscribed New Way to pay old Debts, A Farce by Boreas (Massinger's comedy had recently been revived at Drury Lane). On his r. Sandwich walks with his arms folded, a paper under his arm is inscribed Catches & Glee's M^r Arne (Arne (1710-78), the musical composer, is generally styled D^r; Sandwich was 'the soul of the Catch Club', see No. 5342). From his pocket protrude papers, one inscribed Greenwich Hospital, in allusion to the scandal caused by Captain Baillie's exposure of abuses there, see No. 5548. The other is inscribed Love & Madness; this is the title of a series of fictitious letters recently published purporting to be the correspondence of Hackman and Martha Ray, Sandwich's mistress, see No. 5540, &c., but really by Herbert Croft. See Walpole, Letters, xi. 139-40, 13 Mar. 1780. Behind come Mansfield, in judge's wig and robes, and Bute in Highland dress, both with expressions of despair; they are being hurried along by a man with the face of a fiend who has seized Mansfield by the arm and Bute by the shoulders. Beside them walks a Dutchman, his hands in his breeches pockets, being propelled from behind by a devil, significant of the unpopularity of the Dutch Republic, see No. 5557, &c. For the Association Movement see Nos. 5638, 5665, &c.

$13\frac{3}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5669 THE ROYAL ASS

York Sculptsit.

Stewart del^t

Pub acc^s to act May 20. 1780. by M Darly (39) Strand.

Engraving. An ass, wearing a crown, is being led by a man who has the legs and tail of a devil, towards a dome and two steeples intended for St. Peter's and inscribed Rome. The man, evidently Bute, is dressed partly in tartan, and is saying This is my Ass & I'll lead it where I please. Behind, a bishop wearing a mitre and a long gown, flourishes a birch-rod and points at the animal's hind-quarters, saying, Lead on my Lord I'll drive the beast along. This is Markham, the unpopular Archbishop of York (see No. 5553, &c.). His birch-rod indicates that he had been head master of Westminster School; he was also (1771-6) preceptor to the Prince of Wales and his brother. Two little boys, one wearing the ribbon of an order, stand by Markham and point at the ass; one says to the other Where are they driving Papa too [sic].

This is evidently inspired by the propaganda of Lord George Gordon and the Protestant Association, it being one of their tenets that in giving his assent to the Catholic Relief Act of 1778 the king had broken his coronation oath; see No. 5534, &c. The artists' names imply that the 'popish' policy of the king was inspired by Bute and furthered by Markham. For Bute and Rome cf. No. 4841.

Similar in character and design to No. 5670. Cf. the crowned ass in No. 6007.

$5\frac{5}{8} \times 8\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5670 FATHER PETERS LEADING HIS MANGY WHELP TO BE TOUCHED FOR THE EVIL. [n.d. c. May 1780]

Pub by M Darly N^o 159 Fleet Street.

Engraving. A monk walks through a ford leading a dog with a crown on its head: 'Father Peters' leading George III to Rome. The monk says He cocks his Tail yet. He is going towards a wayside cross (r.), above which are rocks, on which is seated the Pope, holding out a cross towards the travellers and saying Hold out my Sons to the End & I'll give you a Crown of Glory. Behind him is a dome surmounted by a cross indicating St. Peter's. On the other side of the pool (l.) there are also rocks, on them stands a sheep (?) and in the distance, by the sea-shore, are two small churches of rural appearance; off the shore are three dismantled ships with brooms at their mast-heads to show that they are for sale, the scene being inscribed Little Britain.

Edmund Petre or 'Father Peters', the confessor of James II (see Nos. 1156, 1177, 1235, 1236, &c.), was the subject of abiding hatred by the London mob, and had been regularly burnt in effigy until the end of Anne's reign. But the allusion is probably intended in part at least for Lord Petre, regarded as the head of the Catholic community in England, see No. 5489. One of many satires reflecting the aims and propaganda of the Protestant Association, see No. 5534, &c.

Similar in character and design to No. 5669.

$5\frac{11}{16} \times 9\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5671 THE INVISIBLE JUNTO,
DEDICATED TO THE TRULY HONORABLE LORD G.
GORDON, [n.d. c. May 1780]

Pub. by M Darly N^o 159 Fleet Street.

Engraving. A hand coming from a cloud holds a pair of scales. The r. scale, which appears to rest on the ground, contains two books, H. Bible and Sidney on G.[overnment], surmounted by the Cap of Liberty. On the l. scale stands George III, his hands on his hips, his crown beside him, his ears project at r. angles, and he is called K. Menassah; on a rock (l.) is inscribed II Kings Ch. xxi, Dan^l Chap. iv. (the former an account of King Manasseh's reign, his wickedness and idolatry, the latter of Nebuchadnezzar's dream). A label over the scale, which issues from the hand in the clouds, is inscribed Mene Mene Tekel Uphasin. The four ropes which support this scale are continued below it and disappear into the ground, the points of contact are inscribed pull North, pull Bute, pull Mansfield, pull Devil, indicating that these four have secret influence over the king, but that their combined powers are easily outweighed by the H. Bible, &c. Behind the centre of the scales is an irregular stone pinnacle, from the l. of which a hand emerges pointing towards the king; the pinnacle is inscribed, And he filled the Land with Blood. In the upper r. corner of the print is an eye looking from a cloud, inscribed He that formed the Eye shall he not see us. Below it is a large two-storied palace on a raised terrace, supported by a stone wall, over which is inscribed, And Sodomites were in the Land. Beneath the title is engraved:

*Though Knaves & Fools combine how light the Scale,
But Truth & Liberty shall still prevail.*

The dedication shows that this is the propaganda of the Protestant Association, not of the Opposition which (individuals excepted) regarded Lord George Gordon and his No Popery campaign with contempt. See No. 5534, &c.

$4\frac{5}{8} \times 8\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5672 THE PROTESTANT ASSOCIATION,

OR THE SCOTCH ST^T GEORGE AND THE DRAGON.

[n.d. c. May 1780]

Engraving. A Scot on horseback in Highland dress fights a dragon in the mouth of a cave. The Scot (l.), on a prancing horse, holds a round shield on his l. arm and threatens the dragon with his drawn broadsword. The dragon wears the triple crown of the Papacy, his fore-paws are on an open book, Holy Bible; he breathes out flames saying et Tu Brute, probably in allusion to the fact that Lord George Gordon, 'the Scotch St^t George' and President of the Protestant Association, belonged to a family which until the death of his grandfather in 1728 had been Catholic. On the horizon, seen through the mouth of the cave, is the sea, in front of it a town is indicated with a castle on a rocky hill, perhaps intended for Edinburgh, and signifying the riots in Edinburgh against a Catholic Relief Act in 1779.

One of a number of satires published in the interests of the Protestant Association and Lord George Gordon, see No. 5534, &c. For Gordon as the Protestant Hero, see also Nos. 5694, 5840, 5841.

$7\frac{1}{8} \times 10\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5673 THE APPOINTMENT OF Y^E BRAVE ADML^L RODNEY & JEMMY TWITCHER IN Y^E DUMPS.

Baldrey fecit

Publish'd as y^e Act directs May 25th 1780 by P. Mitchell North Audley St Gros^r Sq^r & Sold by J. Harris, Sweetings Alley Cornhill.

Engraving. George III stands in profile to the l., Rodney (l.) kneeling, kisses his hand; in the king's l. hand is a rolled document inscribed Instructions, he says, Rodney do all in Your Power for the honour of my Crown & the Good of y^e Nation. Rodney answers May it please your Majesty I will never fear a Lee Shore but Conquer or Die.

Behind the king on the r. stands Sandwich, full-face, looking down with an expression of disgust, saying, I would recommend S^r Hugh P . . . r [Palliser]. Two walls of the room are visible; in the back wall is a door, on its l. a picture of ships. A window (l.) is partly visible on the other wall, next it is a W.L. portrait of Queen Charlotte, the frame surmounted by a crown.

Rodney and Sandwich were on very bad terms, and though the former had been promoted admiral in Jan. 1779, it was not till the end of 1779 that he was given a command, when no other officer of repute would accept office under the Government. Even then it was believed that it was given only at the direct desire of the king. For Palliser, Sandwich's protégé, see index. For the allusion to Lee Shore see Nos. 5658, 5992, &c.

7 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 10 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5674 THE CONTRAST.

[T. Colley?]

Pub^d Accor^s to Act May 27th 1780 by T. Colley, N^o 88 Strand.

Engraving. An enormously fat English naval officer (l.) and a very lean French one, face one another. Beneath the former is inscribed England, beneath the latter, France. England wears a laced hat, the cockade at the back, a coat with facings and epaulettes, buckled shoes. France wears a feathered hat, a long pigtail queue, ruffled shirt, a cross hanging from his shirt-front, a fleur-de-lys on his shoulder; his spindle legs are in spurred jack-boots. He says, We beat you every battle. England answers, you Lie.

Perhaps an allusion to the indecisive action between Rodney and de Guichen on 17 Apr. 1780 in the West Indies. Cf. No. 5695.

A note by Mr. Hawkins states that this was reissued by Holland.

9 × 12 $\frac{11}{16}$ in.

5675 THE R—Y—L HUNT OR THE PETITIONERS ANSWER'D

Pub acc^s to act June 4. 1780 by M Darly 39 Strand

Engraving. George III riding Britannia, who is on hands and knees, and accompanied by ministerial dogs with human faces, their names on their collars, proceeding from the House of Venality (l.), towards a phalanx of petitioners (r.) standing behind the cylindrical rolls of the county petitions; these surround the Temple of Patriotism. The king holds Britannia by the hair and pierces her breast with a spear; he says, Cease Mortals, Cease your prayers I'll have my will. Tho' half my Empire lost I am Sovr'g'n still. Britannia says, Thare [sic] thus he gores me to the heart Himself unconscious of the Smart. The dogs are barking menacingly at Liberty who sits on a mound holding her cap on a staff; she says, holding out her l. arm towards the petitioners, O Save me Save me. A dog (North) wearing a ribbon and star, with Boreas (in reversed looking-glass script) on his collar, says, I'll gnaw the Strumpets liver. Mansfield, a dog whose collar is inscribed Caen Wood (cf. No. 4885), says I'll be round upon her with as much speed as if it were to take a fee, but I am afraid these dam'd Petitions will save her.

Germain, a dog with Minden on his collar, turns his back on Liberty and is addressed by Woolsack (lord Thurlow) who says, Hey day Minden dont be ashamed dont give up the Chase by turning tail. 'Minden' answers, No No I am not asham'd its only a way that I have got always to turn my tail when I fight (an allusion to the battle of Minden (see Nos. 3680-7). Caribb says Bow vow vow vow. This Phrenzy of Public virtue must be [word erased] down. This is probably Lord Hillsborough, regarded as responsible for the expedition against the Caribs of the Island of St. Vincent which had been the subject of bitter complaint in parliament, see No. 5540. The last dog Twitchee or Sandwich, is very lean and walks on three legs. He wears a ribbon and star (though actually he had no order), an ensign flag is thrust through his ribbon, and by his side is a broken anchor, indicating his bad management of the Navy. He says,

*Condemn me not for being last
The Dog unskill'd and lame cannot go so fast.*

The petition-rolls (r.) are inscribed (l. to r.) Herts, Bucks, Hants, Der[by], Wilts, Kent, Deven [sic], Essex, Cambridg^e, Nottingh^m, Middlesex, Sussex, Surry, York, Westmin^r, Petition of City of London. The petitioners are massed in front of and beside the Temple of Patriotism; they say The Constitution will aid us in our Protection. To the l. of the petitioners is a tree in full leaf, its trunk inscribed The sound will flourish. The roof of the temple is decorated by statues or figures, comic in effect and perhaps in intention, of Wisdom (Athene with a spear), Hope, Perseverance, Fortitude, Faith. Above it, in clouds, is a coat of arms held up by an angel who says, Behold their arms. On the escutcheon is Justice holding scales, the supporters are cylindrical documents: Bill of Rights (script reversed) and Magna Charta. The crest is a dove, or possibly a hawk. The motto, our cause is just.

On the other side (l.) is another circular building, House of Venality, similar in construction to the Temple of Patriotism. Over the centre doorway is written Placemen, over the l. door Contraitors [sic], over the r. Pensioners. The figures on the roof are Folly, Cruelty, Despair, Ignorance, Oppression. By it is the decayed stump of a tree inscribed The Saps corrupted.

On a hill behind stands Bute, in Highland dress, with his arm round the shoulders of the devil, they both point to the dogs who are baiting Liberty. The devil says Dear Sawney I am indeted to you for this sport. Bute answers Ay Belzy you may say that our nation has been very active for you.

For county petitions, associations, and committees of correspondence see No. 5638, &c. It is to be noted that the date of the print is the king's birthday.

8 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5676 POLITICAL STAG HUNT OR THE M—L [MINISTERIAL] HOUNDS IN FULL CRY. [n.d. c. 1780]

ƒ. Slapbang fec.

Pub^d by W. Humphrey, N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. A huntsman (l.), mounted on a horse snorting flames which are inscribed Faction, preceded by the 'ministerial hounds', chases a stag, inscribed Constitution. The huntsman is Bate, afterwards Bate Dudley, representing the Ministerial Press. He is dressed like the body of news-vendors with drums and trumpets to advertise the Morning Post seen by Walpole in Nov. 1776 (see No. 5550), and is blowing a trumpet. His cap is inscribed Post, round his shoulders is slung a bundle inscribed Materials for Post, made up of Satire, Malice, Scandal, Falsehood. From his pocket hangs a paper, The Art of Lying made Easy by B. He leaps a fence inscribed Bounds of Discretion. The hounds are taking a circular course as the stag has doubled back and is advancing towards a ravine, a signpost pointing To the Vale of Oblivion. The stag says I shall fall like Lucifer never to Hope again. The two foremost hounds have human faces; the first (North) says We shall soon be in at the Death—She can go no further, N . . . h. The next, inscribed Twitcher (Lord Sandwich), says I have long had her Destruction at Heart & the sooner the better. The third (Lord G. Germain) says, I run almost as fast now as I did at Minden (cf. No. 5675). Next is a dog with a judge's wig (Mansfield) saying, She will find no Covert near Caen Wood (cf. No. 4885). A dog inscribed L. S. says I am the sort to go Thro Thick & Thin; perhaps intended for Lord Stormont, Secretary of State, and Mansfield's nephew, or possibly for Lovel Stanhope, who was appointed Comptroller of the Board of Green Cloth in September 1780. A dog with the face of a demon,¹ probably representing the Devil as in No. 5675, says, I allways was firm to the cause. The next dog is inscribed Log and is saying I stick at Nothing. This is evidently Sir Hugh Palliser, whose log-book was found at his court martial to have been altered, see Nos. 5536, 5537. The last dog says I am Adam'd Good Dog but y^e last Fox Hunt Had like to be Death of me. He is William Adam, whose duel with Fox on 29 Nov. 1779 roused much bitterness against the ministry, see Nos. 5575, 5625. The scene is a wooded hill and the going is rough. Behind Bate on the l. is the partly ruined Templum Libertatis overgrown with shrubs and shored up by timbers inscribed Richmond, Barre, Camden, Burke & Fox, Wilks.

Beneath the design is etched:

*Hungry Dogs the old Proverbs say
Eat dirty Pudding, when in their way
So Will these Dogs as oft we are told
Catch at any thing which looks like Gold.
Or bears the least Aspect of doing
Good for themselves tho their Country ruin.
Tis little Rogues submit to fate
Whilst y^e Great enjoy y^e World in State.*

Bate was prosecuted by the Duke of Richmond for some libellous Queries published in the Morning Post of 25 Feb. 1780; on 1 Nov. 1780 he started the Morning Herald, an anti-ministerialist paper, supporting the party of the Prince of Wales. Lord North admitted that his advocacy of the ministry in the Morning Post was 'perhaps too warm', see Nos. 5550, 5666. 8 × 13¼ in.

5677 AN HERIOGLYPHYCAL [sic] ADDRESS FROM (NEPTUNE) (TOE) PRINCE (WILLIAM).

Pub^d as the Act directs June 10th 1780 by W Richardson, N^o 68 High Holborn.

A rebus, an engraved letter in which the words in brackets are represented by small objects. Neptune (l.) with his trident and a bust portrait of Prince ¹ Mr. Hawkins has written 'Jer. Dyson' on this dog, but he died in 1776.

William (afterwards William IV) in a circle draped with a flag (r.) form part of the title.

*From my (coral) (crown) (throne) deck'd with Spars (awl) around.
 The God of Old Ocean now r(eye)ses Profound.
 Yes (Neptune) rejoices (thigh) Tr(eye)um(pea)h (toe) See.
 My (child) (eye) ado(pea)t thee m(eye) Darl(eye)ng thou shall't (bee)
 (Britannia) La(men)t(head) the Loss of her (sons)
 Her Court's st(eye)ll (eye)nsult(head) by (Frenchmen) (hand) Dons
 Till (Rodney) w(eye)th thee Launch'd (yew)r hearts on the Main.
 T(hen) t(hen) rev(eye)vd (hand) app(ear)'d once again
 (Eye) (saw) a fair Stem, from the true Roy(awl) (bee)lood.
 (Bee)id Danger def(eye)ance (hand) r(eye)de on the Flood
 (Eye) C(awl)'d out my (Tritons) (toe) s(hound) [sound] out Success
 The Ne(rye)(adze) [Nercids] (hand) Sea Gods (awl) jo(eye)n'd me to Bless.
 (Toe) st(eye)ll my (grate) Em(pea)ire (hand) this tell (toe) thee
 Young Will(eye)(ham) sh(awl) (bee) my (vice)Roy of the Sea
 Go on No(bee)le (yew)th (hand) on (Neptune) De(pen)d
 (Toe) (thigh) Count(rye) (thigh) Father, (hand) thee, (eye)'m a Friend
 The (sons) of Old Engl(hand) sh(awl) never (bee) (slaves)
 Wh(eye)le (Neptune) (bee)ids W(eye)ll(eye)(ham) (pea)res(eye)de on the Waves Neptune.*

Prince William, the king's third son, aged 14, was serving as a midshipman with Rodney. On 8 Mar. 1780 he appeared at Court having brought with him Spanish colours taken in Rodney's naval victories in Jan. 1780. Letters of the First Earl of Malmesbury, i. 453. London Chronicle, 9-11 Mar. 1780. For Rodney's victories see Nos. 5646-8, 5658, 5710.

11 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5678 ECCLESIASTICAL, AND, POLITICAL, STATE OF THE NATION.

[? Gillray.]

Published June 2^d 1780 by W. Humphrey Printseller Strand London.

Engraving. George III guides (l. to r.) a plough which is drawn by a snorting bull; he is blindfolded and wears a crown and the garter ribbon; from his pocket hangs a fragment of Magna Charta. Lord North rides on the bull, urging him forward with a whip, attached to his shoulders is a knapsack or bundle inscribed Ways & Means. Another man goads the bull with a spear. A Scot in highland dress, probably Gordon, tugs violently at the bull's harness, trying to pull it back; two other men who have been tugging at the bull have fallen to the ground and the wig of one has fallen off. The bull is advancing towards the River Tweed (r.), on the farther side of which are a large thistle and some fir trees on a hill. This shows that Scotland has not as yet been ploughed up for the emissaries of the Pope, see No. 5534. In the foreground (l.) lies a sleeping bishop, his head on his hand, holding a crozier, and leaning on a book and a Map of Bishoprick. Behind him and the king a Jesuit, a Catholic priest, and a monk are sowing in the ground which has been already ploughed. Above their heads the Pope is seated on clouds which are supported by a swarm of demons and imps. He wears his triple crown, a royal crown is suspended over his head; in his r. hand is a crozier to which are attached keys, in his l. hand is a sheaf of thunderbolts. At his side is an inverted cornucopia, pouring out documents inscribed Absolutions, Persecutions, Releases from Purgatory, Pardons for Money, Excommunications, Curses on Heriticks, Indulgences, Bulls, Confessions. Truth, an almost nude female figure, stands upon clouds (r.) surrounded by a glory of rays; on her breast is a face surrounded by rays. She holds up a large scroll inscribed 40000 English Protestants massacred in Ireland 1641 Protestants burnt at Smithfield in the reign of Queen Mary. Gunpowder Plot or an attempt to blow up the Parliament House Protestants massacred at Paris, in the Vallies of Piedmont. Tortures of the Inquisition. Beneath the design are the dedication and explanation:

To the Respectable Association of Protestants & to every Worthy supporter of both Church & State this Plate is Dedicated by their Humble Ser^{vt} the Publisher.

Explanation.

The State Husbandmen Plowing up the glebe of the Constitution, whilst the Popish Emissaries take the Advantage of the supineness of the Established Church who is fast asleep in the Vineyard where its grand Adversary the Pope, and all his host of Devils, are permitted to Sow the Seeds of their Pernicious Doctrine: Opposition attempts to stop their Progress, but the band of Unanimity is broke, & they have fallen off. Truth descends, showing a Scroll of Melancholy proofs of popish cruelty, Soliciting the Aid of her Friends, to vanquish the Inveterate Enemy, who threatens the Ruin of thair Religion, thair Posterity & thair much injured Country.

This suggestion that the Opposition was in any way concerned in Lord George Gordon's attempt to obtain the repeal of the Catholic Relief Act is of course unfounded, although the Protestant Petition was associated with the County petitions (see No. 5638, &c.) in several satires (see No. 5633, &c.), and the propaganda of the Protestant Association was combined with attacks on the Government, see No. 5671, but after the riots the equally unfounded accusation was made that the Government had fostered the agitation in order to discredit the Opposition and petitioners in general, see No. 5687.

This print appears to have been prepared to coincide with the great meeting of the Protestant Association in St. George's Fields and the march to Westminster (2 June) which gave rise to the Gordon Riots. It resembles the early manner of Gillray. Reproduced, De Castro, Gordon Riots, 1926, p. 12.

$8\frac{5}{8} \times 12\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5679 NO POPERY OR NEWGATE REFORMER.

[Gillray.]

Publish'd as the Act Directs, June 9th 1780 by I. Catch of St Giles's.

Engraving. The H.L. figure of a ruffianly man, shouting Down with the Bank and raising in both hands a stick or bar. In his hat is a ribbon favour inscribed No Popery. On the r. and behind is the façade of Newgate in flames. Beneath the title is engraved:

*Tho' He says he's a Protestant, look at the Print,
The Face and the Bludgeon will give you a hint,*

*Religion he cries, in hopes to deceive,
While his practice is only to burn and to thieve.*

'I. Catch' probably means Jack Ketch or the hangman; and, oddly enough, Dennis, the official hangman, was tried as a rioter and convicted, but afterwards reprieved, cf. No. 5734.

For the anxiety of the Protestant Association to escape responsibility for the riots cf. No. 5841. For the riots see Nos. 5682-90, 5722, 5723, 5725, 5728, 5734, 5841, 5844.

Grego, Gillray, p. 31. Reproduced, De Castro, Gordon Riots, p. 104.
9 × 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

A print entitled REAL CHARACTER Pub. Accord to Act. June 18th 80, in the possession of Henry Carrington Esq., is reproduced, De Castro, Gordon Riots, p. 138. A ruffian, flourishing a bludgeon, and a ragged hat with a favour in it, shouts, No Pope No K— No Ministry [sic] Dam my Eyes. In the background is a building, probably Newgate, in flames and attacked by a group of rioters.

5680 A PRIEST AT HIS PRIVATE DEVOTION.

Protestant Sculpt^r

Published as the Act directs June 10th 1780 for the Proprietor, & Sold at N^o 1321 Fleet Street.¹

Engraving. George III in monk's robes and with a large tonsure kneels, in profile to the r., before an altar in an attitude of prayer. His r. leg emerges from his robe showing knee-breeches and clocked stocking. On the altar is a crucifix; on the wall behind it, within a circle surrounded by rays, is Ecce Homo. On the end of the altar-cloth The Holy Catholic Faith is inscribed in a similar circle. On the wall on each side of the crucifix is a bust portrait; one of Sandwich inscribed Twitche (l.), and the other of North inscribed Boreas (r.). Two walls of the room or closet are visible; in the back wall is an open door leading to a latrine; on its floor are papers inscribed: Protestant Petitions for necessary uses, Middles[ex] Petiti[o]n, Surrey Petition. For a similar association of the Protestant Petition with the County petitions see Nos. 5633, 5638, 5649. Over the latrine door is a bust-portrait of a pope wearing his triple crown. On the wall beside the door is a large print, torn and unframed, of Martin Luther. It is interesting to note the date of publication: immediately after the riots which had raged 2-7 June, the first day on which the shops ventured to open, and the day of Lord George Gordon's arrest. For similar attacks on George III see Nos. 5534, 5669, 5670.

12 $\frac{5}{16}$ × 9 in.

Another impression from which the publication line has been cut off; 'Priest' has been erased and 'Great Man' written in its place, in ink.

5681 EVERY MAN IN HIS OWN HUMOUR.

[n.d. 1779, 1780, or perhaps 1774]²

Engraving. The Pope seated on a chair raised on three semicircular steps. In his r. hand is a tall triple cross; on his head, in place of his triple crown, is a head-dress resembling three inverted flower-pots, one inside the other. His l. hand is stretched out to bless a man (l.) who kneels at his feet to kiss his toe. Another man (r.) kneels behind the Pope and is about to kiss him. A large looped curtain over the Pope is an important part of the design. On the l. part of the façade of a building decorated with Ionic pilasters is visible. Beneath the design is engraved:

¹ 132 Fleet Street was the address of W. Wells.

² Publication line perhaps cut off.

*A certain Knight brimfull of hope,
Knight of the Shire also;
To gain the Papists pleas'd the Pope,
And humbly kiss'd his Toe.*

*Poh, cried his Colleague in a pother,
That's but a simple Farce;
And that he may outdo his Brother
He's gon to kiss his A—se.*

This piece of No-Popery propaganda probably relates to the Catholic Relief Act (18 Geo. III, c. 60) and is one of many propagandist prints, see No. 5534, &c., in which case 'a certain knight' is Sir George Savile, Bart., M.P. for Yorkshire. Alternatively it may relate to the Quebec Act of 1774 which was violently opposed by the Opposition and especially by the City of London as 'the establishment of Popery', see No. 5228, &c. The Bill was introduced from the Lords into the Commons, where it was advocated by North; 'Nobody', Walpole writes, 'would venture to own himself the parent,' Last Journals, 1910, i. 353. Archibald Edmonstone, with Bamber Gascoyne, was teller for the Bill on its second reading, 18 May 1774, and two days later was made a baronet.

8 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 7 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5682 L—D AM—T [AMHERST] ON DUTY, 10

Pub acc^s to act June 12. 1780 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Lord Amherst in profile to the r. in general's uniform rides a prancing horse, holding up a large sword, dripping with the blood of two geese, one of which lies dead beside him, the other staggers, with its neck slashed. Beneath the design is engraved:

*If I had Power,
Id kill 20 in an Hour.*

Behind, red-coats on horses with drawn swords are indicated among clouds of smoke. Behind and on the l. a large square house is on fire, flames coming from the windows.

Lord Amherst was in command of the troops acting against the rioters. There were attempts to raise fears that the use of the military and the camps formed in London were part of a design by the Court to establish a military despotism, see No. 5687, &c. For the Gordon Riots see No. 5679, &c.

The number 10 on all three impressions suggests that it belongs to a series; it is similar in character to Nos. 5662, 5683, 5690.

7 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 5 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5682 A Another impression (not coloured) with no title.

5682 B Another impression (coloured) with the publication line, Pub^d by H Humphrey, N^o 18 New Bond Street. [n.d.], Darly's imprint having been erased or stopped out.

5683 ASS UPON ASS.

[n.d. June 1780]

Pub by H Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Str^t

Engraving. Lord Amherst in uniform in profile to the l. riding an ass from whose head a large crown has just fallen. The animal (representing the king) wears a large collar inscribed Honi Soi[t]; its fore-feet are planted on a large Protestant Petition; its side is being gashed by its rider's spur, so that a stream of blood pours on to the petition. Round its near fore-leg writhes a fanged serpent inscribed Gordon. Amherst's hat is falling off, in his r. hand he holds a sword with an irregular blade inscribed Rebellion. A mitre is suspended (or falling) above the ass's head.

The suggestion seems to be that the riots are being used as a pretext to damage Protestantism and establish military power, see No. 5687, &c. For no-poperly satires see No. 5534, &c. For the riots see No. 5679, &c.

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 5\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5684 THE BURNING & PLUNDERING OF NEWGATE & SETTING THE FELONS AT LIBERTY BY THE MOB.

Published 1st July 1780 by Fielding & Walker, Pater-Noster-Row.

Engraving. The mob outside Newgate. Among the most prominent figures are those of a ragged young woman of dissolute appearance, who holds up her plunder, a picture in one hand, a purse in the other; a man waving a scroll inscribed No Popery, a young man in irons doing the same. Men in irons, released from the prison, are being welcomed by friends or bystanders. Flames pour from the central windows of the prison and the bonfire of the governor's furniture is seen behind the mob. There are many bludgeons and one No Popery banner. For the burning of Newgate (on 6 June) see also Nos. 5686, 5844. See also No. 5679, &c.

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 8$ in.

Crace Collection, xxvii. 55.

5685 FANATACISM REVIVED

[n.d. c. June 1780]

P. Carey Inv^t & Sculp^t

Engraving. An imaginary scene during the Gordon riots. On the r. a partly-destroyed building is in flames. In the foreground (c.) a man in the gown and bands of a minister, evidently intended for John Wesley, holds out his arms as if preaching. Two men wearing 'No Popery' cockades are drinking, apparently from the chalices of a plundered chapel. On the r. a working man holds up a large paper inscribed, June 7 The Protestant Association. The R^t Hon^{ble} Lord George Gordon Pres^t in the Cha[ir] Res. . . . A woman holding a baby sits on the ground. Behind, a man holds a torch to the burning building.

On the l. a man kneeling, fires point-blank with a pistol at a dog which has been tied to a post and sits on its hind-legs with a cross in its fore-paws. A large open book, its pages torn, is on the ground. Behind, men are carrying off plunder, one has a dish or tray, another a candle-stick. On the wall behind them is a placard inscribed Now publishing and to be had at M^r Thomsons a new Pamp^t entitled England in Blood. This was the title of an inflammatory pamphlet advertised to appear during the riots, for which one W. Moore¹ was arrested and committed to prison by Wilkes. See De Castro, Gordon Riots, pp. 77-8, 191, and Nos. 5829, 5844. Beneath the design is engraved:

*Religious strife is rais'd to Life,
By canting whining John;
No Popery he loud doth cry,
To the deluded throng.*

John Wesley wrote to the Public Advertiser a letter dated 21 Jan. 1780, approving of the Protestant Association and denouncing all concessions to the Church of Rome, which had great effect, see Tyer, Life and Times of Wesley, iii, pp. 318 ff. This was reprinted in other papers, see London Chronicle, 5-8 Feb., and Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 269.

The only print in the Catalogue directed against the Protestant Association and its propaganda, for which see No. 5534, &c. But cf. the gibe at Gordon in No. 6256. For the riots see No. 5679, &c.

$7\frac{3}{8} \times 12\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5686 THE DEVASTATIONS OCCASIONED BY THE RIOTERS OF LONDON FIRING THE NEW GOAL OF NEWGATE, AND BURNING MR. AKERMAN'S FURNITURE, &c. JUNE 6. 1780.

[c. June 1780]²

Hamilton delin.

Thornton sculp.

London, Published by Alex^r Hogg at the Kings Arms N^o 16 Paternoster Row.

Engraving. Rioters in front of Newgate, the southern part of its façade in flames. In the foreground is a large bonfire on which a table and other pieces of furniture are being thrust and flung. Men wave hats, bludgeons, hatchets, and pick-axes. A man capers, holding up a stick in one hand, the keys of Newgate in the other. On the r. is a flag inscribed No-Popery. Dense clouds of smoke and the flames of the bonfire obscure the southern part of the building, the rest is brilliantly lit. The design is surrounded by a border representing a carved frame, with medallions, garlands, &c. On it is inscribed All the Prisoners to the amount of 300 were released this Night.

For the burning of Newgate see also Nos. 5684, 5844.

Reproduced, S. G. Fisher, Struggle for American Independence, 1908, ii. 276.

$7\frac{3}{8} \times 11\frac{5}{8}$ in.

Grace Collection, xxvii. 54.

5687 READ, MARK, LEARN & INWARDLY DIGEST.

Publish'd according to Act July 13, 1780 for J. Almon in Piccadilly, London.

Engraving. George III speaking to Lord Amherst, who wears general's uniform and holds a bull (John Bull) by one horn. They are T.Q.L. figures, ¹ Probably the W. Moore of 22 Fleet Street who published The Whisperer, 17 Feb. 1770-7 Dec. 1771, a violent attack on North's Government. W. Plomer, Dict. of Printers and Booksellers, 1726-1775, 1932.

² A plate from E. Barnard's History of England, published in parts and completed c. 1791.

the legs of the men and the bull being cut off by the margin of the design. Amherst, in profile to the r., very thin, holds out in his l. hand to the king a paper on which are crossed sabres inscribed A plan for taming A Bull. The king says, I hear You made a fine Disposition You You You soon tame'd the Bull (a burlesque of George III's manner of conversation). Amherst answers, Yes Sir and now is Your time to make this Bull so tame as to bend like a Camel to recieve his Burden. The bull says, Dont Reckon without Your Host. George III is holding a document, [Pe]titions the Groom of the Stool (cf. No. 5680, &c.). A minister or courtier standing behind him (r.) holds petitions from the Scum of the Earth.¹ His profile suggests Lord Sandwich. An outstretched arm, the hand holding a spying-glass, appears, its owner cut off by the r. edge of the print; on the sleeve is a large fleur-de-lys. On the l., behind the bull, a citizen is in conversation with a soldier holding a musket, with its bayonet thrust through The Humble petition. In the background burning houses and a crowd are indicated. Beneath the design is etched:

A Dialogue

Citizen—Now Soldier if I & my Neighbours were all of us to get Guns we should have no Occasion for you Red Coats Among us should we?

Soldier—No to be sure you would not.

Cit—Then we could from our Windows shoot Rioters or defend our Liberties and the British Constitution if need were?

Sol—You Fool, have you found that out at last. A Word to the Wise.

The attempts (after the suppression of the riots) of the citizens of London to arm themselves, as well as their resentment at the presence of troops in the city, caused considerable trouble, but were dealt with tactfully and successfully by the Government, by Amherst, and by Colonel Twisleton who was in command of the Guards in the city, see Ann. Reg., 1780, pp. 266–71.

This attitude towards the troops was supported by Lord Shelburne and some others of the Opposition, see Parl. History, xvi. 671, 691, 726 ff. It was the opinion of some of the Opposition that the riots had been encouraged by the Government for political ends: 'the deepest schemers for absolute power long for insurrection'. Walpole, Letters, xi. 281, 24 Sept. 1780. See also Nos. 5682, 5683, 5689, 5690, 6006. For the riots see No. 5679, &c.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5688 THE MAYOR OF L—N ON THE THRONE OF EASE

Pub by M Darly (39) Strand acc^s to act July 14. 1780.

Engraving. Lord Mayor Kennett seated in a latrine. A footman, in a laced coat with tags on his shoulder, enters from the l., holding his hat and saying My Lord the Guards are now arriv'd. The mayor clutches papers in each hand, those in his l. hand are inscribed Riot Act. He is saying, The Mob has frighten'd me so, that they've give me the Gripes. His hat, inscribed Kennett, is on the seat beside him. On the wall behind are papers covered with meaningless scratches, one inscribed Maps of London, implying that ¹ Burke had called the Middlesex magistrates the 'scum of the earth', 8 May 1780, in a debate on calling out the military to suppress riots. Parl. Hist. xxi. 592.

London is reduced to ruins. Two prints, one of a cottage, the other of a tree, are on the r. and l. walls. Beneath the design is engraved:

*The Riots so frighten'd the Mayor,
And where's the Wondor when it,
Was so critical an affair,
His lordship could not—Kennett.*

When Catholic chapels, &c. were being destroyed in Moorfields on Sunday, 4 June, the Lord Mayor refused to give orders (as Justice of the Peace) to the Guards to act, showed manifest signs of fear, and in other ways behaved scandalously. For this he was reprimanded by the Privy Council, see No. 5689. See also Nos. 5690, 5692, 5866.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 6 $\frac{5}{16}$ in.

5689 A VIEW OF THE COCKPIT,
WITH THE REPRIMANDED MAGISTRATE IN DISGRACE.

Tho's Tagg Sculpt'

Published according to Act of Parliament, July 14, 1780.

Engraving, beneath which two songs are printed in three columns. The Lord Mayor, Brackley Kennett, wearing his gown, hurries along Whitehall covering his face with his hands. His head is surrounded with a cloud of smoke, a winged imp above his head blows at him, another puffs at him with a pair of bellows. The Recorder (James Adair), wearing a grotesque mask (l.), squirts at him with a large syringe; a satyr (r.) rushes towards him with a scourge raised to strike. Behind the Recorder (l.) stands a group of four aldermen in their furred gowns, one holds a paper inscribed had he exerted his Authority he would have saved much Bloodshed, another holds a paper inscribed and would prevented [sic] the Army from being our Masters. On the r. is a group of spectators: a little boy, holding out History of the Riot in Moorfields & who were the calm Spectators, points at the Mayor; the others are a chimney-sweep and his boy, a woman, and a man wearing the favour of the Protestant Association in his hat. Behind is the Whitehall front of the Treasury building known as the Cock Pit with a sentry-box; a sentry on duty is walking from l. to r. Beneath is printed:

Song I. The Words by R. Rusted. Tune—The Vicar and Moses [cf. No. 6130]; Song II the Words by O——N——. To the Scots Tune of,

*Ye took your Packs upon your Backs;
You would na stay, you ran away.*

One verse of Song I:

*At length forc'd to wait on a Council of State,
For his Wisdom display'd in Moorfields,
Where the strange city tool, well known for a F——,
Got kick'd out of doors, neck and heels.
Fol de rol &c.*

The Lord Mayor was summoned before the Privy Council on 9 June. Evidence was given of his refusal to order the Guards to interfere with the rioters in Moorfields on 4 June and other delinquencies. He was reprimanded and the Attorney-General was ordered to report on what proceedings should be taken against him. Privy Council Register, P.R.O. On 10 Mar. 1781 he was tried before Lord Mansfield, found guilty of neglect of duty and fined.

For the cowardice of the Lord Mayor see Nos. 5688, 5866. For the contention that the Government was attempting to establish a military despotism, see No. 5687, &c. For the riots see No. 5679, &c.

$6\frac{11}{16} \times 10\frac{1}{16}$ in. Broadsheet, $17\frac{7}{16} \times 10\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5690 THE MAYOR RETURNING THANKS TO L^D AM—T, AT THE SAME TIME HAD THE HONOUR TO KISS AN ASS.

[c. July 1780]

Pub: by H Humphrey, N^o 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving. Lord Amherst (l.), in uniform, stands in profile to the l., his r. hand on a post inscribed 10,000 £. His breeches are lowered, and he holds up his coat-tails in his l. hand. The Lord Mayor (Kennett, see Nos. 5688, 5689) kneels behind him; he holds his hat in his hand, and wears a large bag-wig and sword. Behind him stands an obese alderman in a furred gown; he holds his hat in his r. hand, a long staff in his l.

While the troops remained on duty in the city after the riots Amherst, in spite of a dispute with the Corporation over the arming of civilians as a defensive force (see No. 5687), managed to remain on good terms with the city. He wrote on 29 July to the Secretary of State's office to say that to continue the troops in the city for another week would endanger 'the harmony that has subsisted to this moment'. State Papers Domestic, George III, 21. On 24 July a Common Council resolved 'That the Thanks of this Court be given to the Officers and Privates who have done duty in this City, for their exemplary Conduct and strict Attention to Military Discipline during the late alarming Riots'. On 28 July the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council went to St. James's with an address of thanks to the king for his care in restoring order by the use of armed force. London Gazette, 25-9 July.

Perhaps the £10,000 indicates the cost to the city of feeding the troops. This was said to be £100 a day, and on 18 July a Court of Aldermen decided that the allowance should cease from 22 July. Ann. Reg., 1780, p. 224. See also No. 5687, &c. Similar in character to Nos. 5662, 5682, 5683, and perhaps belongs to a series which was issued both by Darly and Humphrey.

$4\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5691 BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

N.L.G.D.L.C.A.D.L. del. et Sculp.

A Paris chez Bligny Lancier du Roi, M^d dEstampes, Peintre, Doreur et Vitrier, Cour du Manege aux Thuilleries [July 1780]

Engraving. Emblematical portrait of Franklin. Diogenes (l.) supports a bust portrait of Franklin in a carved oval frame, the portrait being that by Van Loo, wearing a fur-trimmed robe over a loose shirt. Diogenes holds out his lantern; he supports the portrait on a stone block inscribed Stupete gentes! Reperit vivum Diogenes. Behind him is a spear on whose point is a Phrygian cap of liberty. In front of Diogenes and the portrait are carrots and a cabbage, symbols of frugality, a staff, a broken yoke, emblem of the power of England in America, an eagle from whose claws spring thunderbolts over a map of Ameriq. Septent. A bird which has been tethered by a cord flies away, symbolizing liberty. Beneath the title is engraved Ministre plenipotentiaire a la cour de France pour la Republique des Provinces unies de l'Amérique Septentrionale, and Né a Boston le 17 Janvier 1706.

For the influence and popularity of Franklin in France as philosopher, sage, and minister, see B. Faÿ, The Revolutionary Spirit in France and America, 1928, pp. 83 ff. See also Nos. 5407, 5704. Reproduced Faÿ, Franklin, 1912, p. 512.

10½ × 8 in.

5692 THE FEAST OF THE GODS.

An explanatory Key may be had with this Print.

Published according to Act of Parliament, by G. Kearsly, at N^o 46, in Fleet Street, London July 18th 1780.

Engraving. All the figures are numbered, but the key being missing interpretation is impossible. A feast, the tables supported on clouds, below which is the sea with ships and a coast-line. At a high table raised above two others at right angles to it, sit a man smoking a pipe, and a woman fast asleep. He resembles the Lord Mayor, Brackley Kennett. At one table (l.) sit seven men, three having the appearance of mechanics. One is Wilkes, holding a key; a military officer with a wooden leg sits with his arm round the shoulders of a young woman. A ruffianly-looking man holding irons or fetters appears to be picking the pocket of his neighbour. On the table are punch-bowls, wine-bottles, glasses, and a tankard. At the other table (r.) sit three women singing from two musical scores inscribed Once the Gods. An elderly man seated opposite to them plays the violin, his score inscribed Violino primo. Two men are asleep. The man at the head of the table listens with pleased attention. A fourth woman (r.) caresses a dog. Punch-bowls, &c., are on the table. Two servants (l.) lift a barrel; wine-bottles stand on the ground. In the foreground (l.) a man lies asleep, an overturned tankard beside him. He is perhaps dreaming of the scene above the clouds.

Perhaps a satire on some civic entertainment, possibly to the troops quartered in the city, given by Brackley Kennett, who had become notorious by his conduct during the Gordon Riots, see Nos. 5688, 5689, 5690.

9¾ × 15¼ in.

5693 POLITICAL REFORMATION.

[1 Aug. 1780]

Engraving. From the Universal Magazine, July 1780 (frontispiece). A man raises his hands to beat off a swarm of hornets from his head. He stands near a tree by which is a covered shelf on which are three bee-hives. His cane projects from a hollow in the tree showing how the hornet's nest has been stirred up. From his pocket hangs a paper, Reduction of Placemen and Pensioners. A dog lies on the ground. Beneath the design is engraved:

*As in the hollow of a rotten Oak,
So in the rotten hollows of the State;
A nest of plund'ring hornets to provoke,
Calls thousands forth to urge their venom'd hate,
Tis hard the honey of industrious Bees,
Should fatten drones, in pensions and in fees!*

A reference to the County Associations and petitions and to Burke's plan of economical reform, see Nos. 5638, 5657, &c.

$5\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5694 LORD GEORGE GORDON,

Drawn from the Life by R. Bran.

London. Published as the Act directs, Aug^t 4, 1780; by John Harris, Sweetings Alley, Cornhill—

Engraving. Gordon stands full face, pointing with his cane to a roll inscribed Protestant Petition, which shows signatures in two columns, another roll lies beside it. His r. foot rests on a book inscribed Popery. He is plainly dressed, lank hair falling on his neck; in his l. hand, which is gloved, he holds out his hat and his other glove. Behind him is the point of intersection of the five roads which crossed in St. George's Fields, beside which are drawn up in close order members of the Protestant Association as they are supposed to have met before marching to Westminster on 2 June, but with a complete and military regularity which is very different from fact. Letters refer to explanations below the print. A circle (l.) inscribed B is the London Division; two concentric circles, D, are the Scotch Division (r.). Behind (l.) is a large tent, and a semicircle of petitioners A which represents the Southwark Division. Opposite them (r.) and drawn up facing two roads is C, the Westminster Division. Beneath the title is engraved, President of the Protestant Association.

For Gordon as the Protestant Hero see also Nos. 5672, 5840, 5841. Cf. also the Dutch prints on the Gordon Riots, 5722, 5723 (an English copy of 5722), 5725, 5728, 5734.

$12\frac{3}{8} \times 8\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5695 NATIONAL DISCOURSE.

M. M. fecit. [Gillray?]

Publish'd Aug^t 9th 1780 by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. A British and a French sailor addressing one another. The British sailor stands full-face, a club in his r. hand, his l. hand on his hip. He wears a crowned hat, a handkerchief knotted round his neck, and wide, knee-length trousers. He scowls threateningly. The Frenchman, very thin, stands facing him, in profile to the l.; he grins, saying Ha! Ha! we beata You: the Englishman answers you Lie. The Frenchman wears a feathered hat, ruffled shirt, long trousers, and a cutlass. His hair is in a very long pigtail queue, tied with a bow of ribbon. In the background a naval battle is indicated by ships and clouds of smoke slightly sketched. Cf. No. 5674.

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 9$ in.

5696 [SAMUEL HOUSE¹]

T.R. [Rowlandson.]

J. J.

[Pub^d According to Act Sept 1 1780 by J Jones at N^o 103 Wardour Street Soho]¹

Engraving. A stout publican with a completely bald head stands outside his house, legs astride, a tankard with an open lid in the r. hand, a long pipe in the other. He faces T.Q. to the r. On the tankard is a monogram, S. H. Behind him is a large barrel, on which is scrawled No Pope, a relic or reminder of the Gordon Riots. Two windows of the house are visible; in one (r.) two men are sitting, one smoking a long pipe. From the other (l.) a man leans to vomit. On a seat under the window (r.) a man sits smoking a pipe and holding a tankard. A bird-cage hangs on the wall.

¹ Written on the print in a contemporary hand.

A portrait of Sam House, the Wardour Street publican and politician. He was a well-known character and always dressed in the same way, as he is here depicted: no wig, no coat, a black waistcoat with sleeves, clean linen never buttoned at the collar, breeches always open at the knee, fine silk stockings or bare legs, and neat black slippers. Life & Political opinions of the late Sam House [1785], the frontispiece to which is an etched portrait of House by Rowlandson. (B.M.L. 1419. b. 13.) See also Gent. Mag., 1785, p. 326.

On the print is written in a contemporary hand 'the first man who jumped off Westminster Bridge. He was a wellknown partisan of M^r Charles Fox in Westminster'.

House was much caricatured in prints of the Westminster election of 1784. He kept open house for Fox during elections. He is said to have 'commenced politician' in 1763 in support of Wilkes and liberty, and to have been much distressed at the coalition between North and Fox. He was a bird-fancier, op. cit. See No. 5697 and index.

Grego, Rowlandson, i. 98-9.

$8\frac{1}{16} \times 7\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5697 SR SAMUEL HOUSE.

Pub^d According to Act Sep^t y^e 18th 1780 by T Rowlandson & J Jones at N^o 103 Wardour Street Engraving. A copy of No. 5696 in which the curiously ill-drawn leg of the man sitting with a pipe and tankard has been corrected. On the barrel, instead of No Pope is inscribed Fox for Ever Huzza. It seems to have been issued as an election print, see No. 5699, &c.

Grego, Rowlandson, i. 98-9.

$8\frac{9}{16} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5698 THE F—X [FOX] AND H—D [HOUND] OR RIVAL CANDIDATES. HUMBLY ADDRESS'D TO THE WORTHY ELECTORS OF W—R.

Pub^d as the Act directs Sep^t 18. 1780.

Engraving. Fox (l.), obese, with a fox's head, stands holding out a paper inscribed On the Freedom of Elections. Lord Lincoln, the court-candidate for Westminster, stands facing him with the head of a dog, holding out a paper, Services done in America. He is very thin and wears top-boots.

An electioneering print, see No. 5699, &c.

$6\frac{5}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5699 WESTMINSTER ELECTION, 1780.

E—g inv:

Publish'd as the Act directs Sept^r 25, 1780. by P. Mitchell North Audley St^r Gros^r Sq^r & J. Harris, Sweathing Alley, Cornhill.

Engraving. The three candidates stand under the portico of St. Paul's, Covent Garden. Immediately below them is a long table behind which the poll-clerks are sitting with their books; in front is the mob. The clock in the pediment shows that it is 2.30. Fox stands in the centre holding out an open book inscribed Magna Charta. Britannia sits beside him, holding a fox on her knee, while with her l. hand she holds up a paper inscribed, Let Britania's Friends be Britons Choice. On the l. stands Neptune with his trident and Admiral Rodney, a sword in one hand, in the other a scroll inscribed: 5298 The Spanish Fleet totally defeated off Gibraltar Jan^y 16 1780. On the r. stands Lord Lincoln (son of the Duke of Newcastle), a sword in his r. hand, in his l. a scroll inscribed, 4257 Votes purchas'd. I brought the news from America of the taking of Charles Town. (Lincoln, A.D.C. to Sir Henry Clinton, arrived in London 15 June 1780 with a dispatch on the capture of Charlestown. Extraordinary Gazette, 15 June 1780.) Over Lincoln's head flies the devil inscribed A, referring to a note below the title: A Devil looking over Lin—n. A voter stands by the polling table, taking the oath against bribery, his hand on a book which one of the clerks holds out to him. Another clerk holds up a paper, We must guard against bribery.

In the foreground is a band of Fox's supporters, among whom are butchers in their aprons playing on marrow-bones and cleavers, a man with a fiddle, another with a horn. They wear fox's tails in their hats and carry papers on one of which is inscribed 200 Plumpers . . Liberty & Freedom. The hat of the man who carries it is decorated with a fox's head and a large brush and a notice, Volunteers Fox. On the l. is a man with a placard: The Hon^{ble} Mr F's Friends presents comp^s to Lord L— & his modest abettors and desires to know why Justice H— should interfere (probably Justice Hyde, reputed a trading-justice). A man holds up a long pole on which is a stuffed fox placarded, 4878 Reynard for ever. Beside it on the r. is a barrel, a kneeling man drinks from a spigot, a small boy catches beer in his hat, others stand round with pots. A man stands on the top of a barrel singing a song; he holds the ballad: Ye free born Electors of Westminster City Derry Down. . . . On the r. a woman is selling fox's tails; a purchaser fixes one in his hat. On the l. are two men with Lincoln on their hats; baskets of apples are being overturned, a woman lies on the ground. A dead dog or cat flies through the air. A Jew is conspicuous; a man stands on a box beating a gong.

Behind the foreground figures is a dense crowd; hats are being waved in the air, a man on horseback (r.) and a coach (l.) try to make their way through the mob. On each side of the church is a large house at the windows of which are spectators. One doorway (l.) is inscribed Procter, probably an allusion to the Middlesex election of Dec. 1768 when bludgeon men were said to have been hired by Sir William Beauchamp Procter, the Court candidate and opponent of Wilkes, see Nos. 4223, 4224.

Parliament was dissolved on 1 Sept. The Westminster poll lasted from 7 to 22 Sept. Admiral Young was proxy for Rodney, who was at sea; the votes being 4,878 for Fox, 5,298 for Rodney, 4,257 for Lincoln. On the 23rd Fox was chaired and 'carried to St. James's Gate to insult the Court',

Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 330. See also Nos. 5697, 5698. Lincoln demanded a scrutiny and the poll-book was published in Nov. (B.M.L. 100, k. 45.)

An earlier state is in the Crace collection.

10½ × 15¹³/₁₆ in.

5700 THE STABLE VOTERS OF BEER LANE WINDSOR,¹

Pub acc^s to act, Oct. 9 1780 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. Three stalls in a stable; in one (l.) is a pony, in the other two are horses, the names of the animals are inscribed over the mangers: PONEY, LIBERTY, and MONTAGU. They are the three candidates for the borough of Windsor: Penniston Powney, Admiral Keppel, and John Montagu, son of Lord Beaulieu, the two last being the members in the last parliament. In the rack over 'Poney's' head (l.) lies a thin man saying I'll serve Poney, Lord North bed me. In Keppel's stall (c.) a man in military dress lies face downwards in front of the animal saying I'm hearty in the cause I'll stick at nothing; in front of this stall a riding-whip and a hat with a cockade lie on the ground. These two are identified by Miss Banks as Colonel Conway (l.) and Colonel Egerton, supporters of Powney against Keppel. A man in a long robe and wearing a tie-wig enters the stable from the r.; he holds up a forefinger, saying, Come Colonels damn Liberty lets go poll for the poney's started. He is perhaps one of the Windsor Corporation. Beneath the design is engraved:

*Poll C—way & Eger—n twice if youre able,
No votes are so Valid as those that are stable.
When y^e S—n's [Sovereign's] a mule & the Premier an Ass,
A Poney for Senator surely may pass,
And Stables are Houses & Dwellings of course,
When two of the Voters are two of the Horse.*

The Windsor election attracted great attention from the personal canvassing of the king against Keppel, which began in Apr. 1780, before a general election had been decided on. Hist. MSS. Comm., Abergavenny Papers, 1887, pp. 29, 30. Porritt, The Unreformed House of Commons, i. 415. For Conway's support of Powney see Life and Letters of Lady Sarah Lennox, 1901, i. 303-4. The 'Prince of Wales took great part for Keppel, and would not speak to Colonel Egerton who voted against him', Walpole, Last Journals, cf. No. 5644. Conway was M.P. for Orford, Egerton, Lt.-Governor of the Scilly Is. See Nos. 5701, 5708.

7½ × 12⁷/₈ in.

5701 HARRY THE FATHER TO SR HARRY THE SON OR THE WINSOR BREWER.

Pub acc^s to act Oct^r 15 . . 1780 by M Darly 39 Strand.

Engraving. A man holds up his hands in horror at the sight of the ghost of his father, a slightly draped figure (r.) standing on a cloud and surrounded by rays of light. They are standing outside a house the centre of which has a plain pediment; probably the Windsor brewer's house. The ghost says Remember your promises on my death bed and be true to Keppel. The son drops from his outstretched hand labels inscribed, Promises of Preference, Patents of Knighthood, Brewer to his Majesty, Poney's engagement. Beneath the title is engraved:

¹ No. 5723, dated 29 Sept. 1780, is catalogued next 5722, a Dutch print, one being a copy of the other.

*O O my Son Harry since on my death bed,
And all that when dying unto thee I said,
Could not have the power to keep the [sic] true blue,
To Hell thou may'st go & give Satan his due.*

For the Windsor election see Nos. 5700, 5708.

$7 \times 6\frac{9}{16}$ in.

5702 THE WHORE OF BABYLON'S CARAVAN. WITH A CARGO OF POPIISH BLESSINGS.

Pub^d as the Act directs Oct^r 17th 1780, by W Richardson, N^o 68 High Holborn.

Engraving. Two monks, tandem, drag (r. to l.) a small wooden cart, driven by a woman, who sits on a cask inscribed Holy Water, her legs hanging down in front of the cart. She holds reins in one hand, whip in the other, and wears on her high-dressed hair a conical triple head-dress, surmounted by a cross, representing the triple crown of the Papacy. Her dress is cut low. She says I will make the Hereticks repent calling me Whore of Babylon. The monks say, I perceive our Holy Flame break out Already, and, Brother, we seem to Move pretty Fast. On the side of the cart are crossed keys inscribed S^t Peter's Keys. Inside it are a gibbet, a wheel (for purposes of torture), a barrel of Combustibles, a chest of Indulgences, a cask of Holy Water, an axe, and birch rods. Chains hang from the back of the cart.

On the l. is a group of three: a bishop, a soldier holding a bayoneted musket (his uniform resembles that of the Irish Volunteers), and a citizen holding a tasselled cane. The bishop says, The Purity of the Protestant Religion, will Confound the Arts and Errors, of the Church of Rome. The soldier says, We must upon them, with Spirit. The citizen says, They have got too much Footing Already. In the foreground (l.) is the British lion, asleep. Beneath the design is engraved:

*With a load of Destruction, here Babylon's Queen, Triumphant, a driving to England, is Seen.
Chains, Combustibles, Rods, with Gibbets & Racks.
Declare her Religion, besides Whips, & Axe.*

*Yet I hope, tho' the Lion appears fast Asleep,
An Eye o'er our Church some good People will keep
That the Bald pated, Bare footed Bigots may see,
Our Worship is pure, & our Country is Free.*

Perhaps an attempt to throw the responsibility for the Gordon Riots on 'emissaries of the Papists', see No. 5841. For 'the Whore' see No. 5534.

The cart of the 'Whore' is copied, in reverse, from No. 5712, the fleur-de-lis being replaced by crossed keys, or, possibly, this print was the earlier design. A similar cargo is drawn in a sledge (as in No. 5713) in Hogarth's The Invasion, Plate I, see No. 3446.

$5\frac{3}{8} \times 10\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5703 THE OLD PACKHORSE BRITAIN, LOADED . OR WAYS & MEANS FOR 1781.

Pub^d as the Act directs Oct^r 24th 1780 by C. Jones Brewer street Golden square.

Engraving. A heavily-laden pack-horse is being driven (r. to l.) by Lord North who walks behind it, holding a whip, with an expression of anxiety. In his l. hand is a rolled document inscribed Extra[ordi]naries; from his pocket protrude papers inscribed, Ways & Means for 1781, Sinking Fund. A large pack on the horse's back is inscribed Budget, a smaller one, Taxes. The horse is in blinkers. A signpost (r.) points To London (l.), and to Bushey Park (r.), North's country house.

One of many satires on North's budgets, see No. 5578, &c.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 10\frac{7}{16}$ in.

5704 B. FRANKLIN, L.L.D. F.R.S.

[1 Nov. 1780]

Pollard sculp.

Engraving. Political Magazine, i. 631. A head of Franklin in profile to the r., drawn to simulate low relief against a dark background within an oval. Beneath the oval is a rectangular view of the American war: a body of American soldiers (r.), in close order with two flags, faces, and appears to be parleying with, a smaller force of British soldiers also with a flag. All carry muskets with fixed bayonets. In the foreground (r.), reclining under trees is a nude woman, with two infants, who watches the encounter. In the background is the sea, with two ships. The design is engraved with delicacy on a minute scale. The portrait and the view of America are set in a rectangle decorated with engraved lines.

The plate illustrates a very hostile account of Franklin as 'the author and encourager of American rebellion'. See Nos. 5407, 5691. One of the few prints hostile to the Americans, see No. 5401, &c.

$5\frac{7}{8} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 3557 v.

5705 NAVAL TRIUMPH OR FAVORS CONFER'D.

[Rowlandson]

London. Printed for J. Harris, N^o 3, Sweetings Alley, Cornhill, Nov^r 13. 1780.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A naval officer wearing a ribbon and star is mounted on the back of an old naval pensioner, with a wooden leg and a blind eye who is supported on crutches. He gives his r. hand to another officer who is dancing along by his side, his r. hand on his hip. The old pensioner says,

*To what a Condition alas! am I brought,
Who so many Battles so bravely have fought*

The scene is outside the gates of Greenwich Hospital. A pensioner lies in the road, in front of the triumphant pair, leaning against a post or milestone (r.). He says,

*Alas! what a Scene to each Son of the wave,
Who in Thunder & Fire have always been brave.*

Immediately behind the old pensioner who is being used as a beast of burden walks a man with a surly expression, beating a drum. Behind him (1.) three pensioners supported on crutches and sticks, walk away turning their backs on the procession. One looks over his shoulder, saying,

*Is this the reward for services past,
While — with Honor & profits are grac'd.*

In the background buildings of the Hospital are freely sketched. Beneath the design is engraved:

*The shake of the hand, with such Goodness & grace,
Shews who is in Favour & who is in place,
At Greenwich the poor Invalids will proclaim
What at present we do not think proper to name.*

This appears to be a satire on the extremely unpopular appointment by Sandwich of Sir Hugh Palliser as Governor of Greenwich Hospital in July 1780: abuses in Greenwich Hospital had been brought home to Sandwich, see No. 5548, and Palliser was regarded as the instrument by which the Ministry had attacked Keppel, see Nos. 5536, 5537. Fox made a violent speech on 1 Nov. on the appointment: 'There could', he said, 'be only one of the King's servants [Sandwich], so abandoned, and so lost to all sensibility and honour, as to have dared to advise any such measure as the giving the governorship of Greenwich Hospital to that object of universal detestation, Sir Hugh Palliser. . . .' C. J. Fox, Speeches, 1815, i. 287. Ann. Reg., 1781, p. 156. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, i. 261-3; cf. also ibid., ii. 65. See also Nos. 5707, 5999.

Grego, Rowlandson, i. 99.¹

8 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 13 in.

5706 COUNT DE ROCHAMBEAU
FRENCH GENERAL OF THE LAND FORCES IN AMERICA
REVIEWING THE FRENCH TROOPS

[T. Colley.]

Pub by T. Colley Nov. 25. 1780 Strand

Engraving. A burlesque of Rochambeau's army. The French general stands on the r. holding a tall spear in his r. hand, the head of which is a fleur-de-lys; his l. hand is on his hip. He wears a feathered hat and an enormously long pigtail queue. He and all his men wear extravagantly large shirt frills. Facing him is a rank of three soldiers standing at attention with bayoneted muskets; then an officer holding a fleur-de-lys flag; then another rank of three privates. The privates' knapsacks have the appearance of enormous muffs.

For Rochambeau's army, intended to be 8,000, but actually only 5,500, which arrived off Rhode Island 11 July 1780, see J. B. Perkins, France in the American Revolution, pp. 400 ff.; J. J. Jusserand, With Americans of past and present days, 1916, pp. 1 ff. Reproduced Drepperd, Early American Prints, p. 204.

8 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 13 in.

¹ His explanation of the print as the triumphal procession of Keppel seems quite erroneous.

5707 THE STATE DUNCES

[W. P. Carey?]

Pub^d for the Proprietor by W Humphrey N^o 227 Strand Dec 2 1780
Price 1^s

Engraving. Britannia (r.) seated, with her shield and spear, on a raised dais; she is addressing George III, who supports on his back Lord North, who is being flogged by Charles Fox. Britannia, holding up her r. hand, says, My Dominion diminish'd my Blood spilt my Treasure exhausted my People burdend with Taxes my Colonies Revolted Deserted by my Allies my Flag insulted and now no longer Mistress of the Ocean and shall the abettors go Unpunished? forbid it Justice. The king, who wears long robes, bends forward, holding North by the wrists. He says, For supporting them in their Design's thus am I obliged to carry them through condign Punishment. Under his feet is a document, Petition of the People. Fox, raising his knotted scourge above his head, says, Was I to give as many lashes as he has made blunders in the State I should not be done these three hours by G——d. North says, D——n Patriotism for its stripes I dont like to bear. Four onlookers (members of the Opposition) stand behind North and Fox; one (l.) somewhat resembling the Duke of Richmond says, When you are tired F——x let me have a spell; another says, This is all Pro bono Publicoo therefore its hoped our Labour will not be in vain. On the l. is a group of five men: Sandwich (c.) stands full-face biting his thumbs, his knees knocking together; a member of the Opposition holds him by the arm and shoulder, saying Thou shalt not fly from the Wrath to come for it will be your turn Next. Sandwich is saying, D—— the Minority for they are always taking me to task to drub me for Something or Other. From his coat pocket extends a label inscribed Merit Rewarded or S^r H——h [Hugh] at Greenwich a New Song the Burden

*“Tis my Maxim still I say,
 To favour him that Runs away.”*

Under Sandwich's feet is a paper inscribed Britannia Rules the Waves. On the l. stands Lord George Germain biting his nails and saying At Minden my Exploits will will [sic] be handed down to Posterity as will my feats ever since. Under his arm is a paper The Hum Gazett[e] or Extraordinary bad News from America. A man standing by him says, My L——d you may take the Dutchmans Comfort “Tis well its no worse.”

In the foreground (l.) is a cock looking at itself in a looking-glass; beneath it is etched:

The Cock who can see and not feel for the Elf } British Who at home and abroad is fighting itself. } Breed

In the back ground is Westminster Hall.

Beneath the design is inscribed:

*Let Britons behold, and glory to See,
 The Min——y flogg'd as they ought well to be
 For those evils Britannia is heard to relate,
 Is the cause of thair numerous blunders in State,
 For which those behind who stand biting their nails
 Will shortly be hoisted and get the nine Tails.*

On 13 Nov. 1780 Fox had pledged himself to move for the dismissal of Sandwich and for 'bringing him to condign punishment' for the appointment of Palliser to Greenwich Hospital and for shameful neglect of the Navy. Ann. Reg., 1781, p. 156. See No. 5705.

Resembles the manner of W. P. Carey.

$8\frac{3}{16} \times 13$ in.

5708 OLD ENGLAND, OR AN ELECTION IN THE YEAR 1580.
GREAT BRITAIN, OR AN ELECTION IN THE YEAR 1780.

Surrey Sculptsit

Windsor delin^t

Published as the Act directs Dec^r 12 1780 for J. Stockdale N^o 181 Piccadilly. G. Kearsley, N^o 46, Fleet Street, and E. Hedges. Royal Exchange.

Engraving. A design in two compartments: The l. (1580) depicts The Freeholders of a County requesting an Old Englishman to become their Representative. A man stands (l.), with his hat under his arm, holding out a deprecating hand towards a deputation advancing towards him all bowing, hat in hand; it consists of three men, with the head of a fourth appearing from the r. All are dressed in quasi-Elizabethan dress; the 'Old Englishman', as appears from his profile, is intended for Keppel, who on being defeated at Windsor had been offered election by Surrey and Sussex, and had chosen, and been returned by, the former (Walpole, Last Journals, ii. 330) in spite of a contribution of £4,000 from the Treasury to the support of his opponent, Onslow. Corr. of George III, v. 466. This is indicated by the names of the supposed artists.

On the r. (1780) is depicted A modern fine Gentleman bribing the Electors of a Borough to make him their Representative. The electors (l.) are represented as tradesmen, receiving the offers of the candidate (r.), who advances towards them with a mincing gait, holding a purse in his l. hand, and coins in the r. He is dressed in the extreme of foppishness and smiles ingratiatingly. Behind him stands the king, partly cut off by the r. edge of the print. His l. hand is on the candidate's shoulder and he holds up towards the electors notes inscribed 50£; 50. Of the five electors, one is a butcher (l.) with a steel hanging from his belt, another is a tailor, with scissors and a yard-measure. A third holds what appears to be the beam of a pair of scales; he is being addressed by a bearded Jew. All are of repulsive appearance. The candidate is Powney.

George III canvassed actively against Keppel from Apr. 1780. On learning of Powney's intended candidature he wrote 'I shall in consequence get my tradesmen to appear for him'. Porritt, The Unreformed House of Commons, i. 415. For the Windsor election see Nos. 5700, 5701.

An advertisement of this print, 'in a few days will be published', from the General Advertiser, 2 Dec. 1780, is pasted on the back.

$8\frac{7}{16} \times 12\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5709 THE THING IN A NASTY SITUATION. [? c. 1780]

Publish^d by Some Body in y^e Character of No. Body one of y^e Minority^t

Engraving. Six figures stand in an extended circle playing a game of hand-ball with Lord North, who is in the air, his round body and globe-shaped head representing a ball. He is wearing his garter ribbon and star and says I am in a Nasty Situation. I almost wish I was no-Thing. Strips inscribed Bribery and Taxes decorate his stockings; the privy purse is falling from him, as is a paper inscribed How to Diminish Public Money by Private Contract. The players wear large muff-shaped gloves with which to strike the ball. Three stand in the foreground: Wilkes (l.), with a violent squint, is saying I will have 46 Strokes at him; a man in gown and bands (possibly Parson Horne, afterwards Horne Tooke) is saying O he will be a Nice Bone for y^e Divil to pick; Charles Fox (r.), in the form of a fox, is saying Keep it up my Boys. In the middle distance are two small figures: one (l.) says There he goes Neck or Nothing; the other [Burke] says This is sublime & Beautiful. The sixth player in the distance is very small and not characterized. Beneath the design is etched:

^t Etched within the design, as if in a shadow cast by Fox.

*I Hope you're Pleas'd with this Game at Hand Ball
Which seems to Prognosticate SOMEBODYS fall
Ah may it be Banded about—— and so forth
To shew we Can beat all the Games of the NORTH.*

Fox had on some occasion called Lord North 'that thing'. (Note by Mr. Hawkins.) Perhaps an allusion to the loan of 1781, see Nos. 5834, 5835. Hand Ball was played especially in the south of Scotland. O.E.D.

Apparently by the same artist as Nos. 5568, 5648.

5½ × 7 in.

5710 THE GENEROUS JACK TARS, OR FEASTING AFTER FIGHTING. [? c. 1780]

Engraving. Figures seated and standing round an oval table covered with a cloth, on which is a sirloin, a plum pudding, and a foaming tankard of beer. Four sailors act as hosts to Spain and France; Holland sits aloof in the foreground (l.) clutching a bottle and saying I have got a bottle of Hollands but I will keep to my self. A sailor sits at the centre of the farther side of the table, holding a large money-bag and saying I dont care a Fig now for here is a bag of spanish dollars. On his l. sits a woman who says, I am glad of it honest Jack for thou art a jovial fellow. On his r. sits Spain, in feathered hat and slashed doublet, saying to another sailor who offers him a slice of beef, Signior English, I like your beef better than your bullets. This sailor stands in front of the table, holding out a slice of meat on a fork and saying, Here Don Diego is a taste of our English roast Beef.

France stands at the r. end of the table, between two sailors, who invite him to partake of a large round spotted pudding. He says, By gar I dont like it tho it be be [sic] better then de frogs & soup Meager. One of the sailors (r.) holds his arm saying, Take it take it Monsieur you may not have another offer. The other (l.) beckons to him, saying, Here Monsieur is fine plumb pudding of the best spanish plumbs.

On the wall is a framed picture of a naval battle, inscribed View of Admiral Rodney beating ye Spanish fleet. Beneath the design is engraved:

*The Don & Monsieur our Jack Tars having beat,
And taking them Prisoners yet give them a treat,
Of the best Fruit of Spain a plumb Pudding is made,
And a Sirloin of English Roast Beef is display'd
Monsieur does not like it, because not his own,
But the Don licks his gills at a bit of the Brown.*

Probably after Rodney's defeat of the Spanish squadron under Langara, 16 Jan. 1780, when Langara's flagship was taken and Gibraltar relieved. See No. 5648, &c.

6 × 10 in.

5711 LE PROCÈS DES TROIS ROIS.

[1780]

John Phileps Pinx

William Jones. Schulp: [sic]

Engraving. Frontispiece (folding plate) to 'Le Procès des Trois Rois Louis XVI. de France-Bourbon, Charles III. d'Espagne-Bourbon et George III. d'Hanovre, fabricant de Boutons [see No. 5573, &c.], Plaidé au Tribunal des Puissances-Européennes'. This has the imprint of 'George Carenaught', London, but was published in Paris.¹ The names of the artists are evidently fictitious.

The sovereigns of Europe are ranged in three tiers on each side of the President, the Sultan of Turkey, Abdul Hamid, who sits cross-legged on a raised dais under a canopy, at the foot of which is a long table at each end of which a man is writing. The three kings stand before the table looking up at the president. Each stands between his two 'avocats' and each wears a long ermine-trimmed robe, his crown and sceptre on the ground at his feet. George III (l.) stands between Bute and North, there is little or no attempt at characterization except that North is stout. The 'avocats' of Louis XVI are Maurepas and Choiseul, of Charles III, d'Aranda and Florida Blanca. On the r. of the president on the highest tier sit seven sovereigns, including 'Mhemet Empereur de Maroc'. On his l. sit Maria Theresa, Catharine of Russia, and Maria of Portugal. Below sit nine sovereigns to the r. of the president and eight on his l. They include five Electors. Below, on the level of the floor sit eight 'Représentans des Républiques', and the Pope with two cardinals on the extreme l. Corsica is represented by Paoli and America by Benjamin Franklin.

The names are supplied from the text, which is an elaborate satire on the political situation and on the monarchs of Europe. The sentence of the court is (inter alia) that George III be placed on an ass facing its tail, and that America has gained independence, provided the English be driven from the New World. A notice from the fictitious publisher attributes delay in publication to the Gordon Riots.

8 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 15 in.

Copy in Print Department.

5712-5734

A set of Dutch prints (with some French and English copies), reflecting opinion and propaganda of various parties in the United Provinces between the seizure of Van Bylandt's convoy, 1 Jan. 1780,² and the English declaration of war on 20 Dec. 1780. Those with an asterisk are bound together in a book lettered Caricatures on American History, which includes explanatory pamphlets issued with the prints. Without the explanations printed beneath the plates, or accompanying them, the prints would be unintelligible. Other Dutch prints are Nos. 5839, 5959, 6292. See also No. 5825, &c.

¹ A Dutch translation (n.d.) was published at Ostend. It has no plate.

² Nos. 5721, 5726 would appear to be earlier, but are included in No. 5728 as prints of 1780.

5712 DEN DOOR LIST EN GEWELD AANGEVALLEN LEEUW.*

[THE LION ATTACKED BY CUNNING AND FORCE.]

[1780]

Engraving. Similar in arrangement to No. 5714; figures isolated and in groups are arranged over a sketch-map, or bird's-eye view, showing, very incorrectly, the coast from Brest (l.) to Amster[dam] (r.), with the Channel and Portsmouth in the upper part of the design. The towns are indicated by buildings, the figures have numbers referring to an Explanation printed beneath the plate (which is here translated), 'showing what each person is supposed to say' and serving as a continuation to the 'Letter of Cato-Batavus'. Off Portsmouth the names Byland and Fielding are engraved, indicating the encounter of 1 Jan. 1780, see No. 5628, &c. Opposite Brest is engraved Hollandsche Schepen met Scheeps materialen, indicating 'the arrival of Dutch naval stores'.

On the extreme r., near Amsterdam, are two men, one gesticulating, the other, behind him, is smiling. They are (1) 'some well-known merchants calling out with great passion "Restitution, Satisfaction, unlimited convoy". Yet one of these, turning round, says smiling, "We have meanwhile already won some little capital, but however it is good to complain, in order to embitter people's minds, although the English pay for what falls into their hands, and a war with England, the greatest of our allies, would probably harm us, and our possessions in the East would be endangered"'. The Stadtholder (2), wearing a sword and holding his hat and a cane, turns his head in profile to the r. towards the merchants; he is 'His Highness pointing out to the merchants the lion . . . "See Sirs what is happening, this have I long foreseen, and for that reason although without success, have I tried to put the Republic in a state of defence. We are lost if we let ourselves be deluded by passion and cunning! Yet I shall at last be obliged to let the ship drift"'.'

Between (1) and (2) stands (3), Sir Joseph Yorke, wearing a ribbon and star, and holding out his l. hand towards the merchants: 'The English Ambassador, shrugging his shoulders, says, "I am sorry about the incident, but I tried to avoid it and warned you resolutely. It is hard on an ally to see the enemy supplied with everything by force of arms while the help due to us is refused. Yet the die is cast, and things will probably not remain as they are"'.'

Immediately under the Stadtholder's feet is the Dutch lion, holding in his r. fore-paw the sheaf of seven arrows symbolizing the seven United Provinces which are bound by a ribbon symbolizing the bond of union. The French Ambassador (4), his coat dotted with fleur-de-lys, holds his hat before the animal's eyes, while (5) a well-dressed man stoops forward to take one of the arrows: 'The French Ambassador full of compliments, strokes the lion with one hand, and with the other holds a hat before his eyes, saying, "All will go well if I can only keep the Lion blind and bring the Dutch gradually to the dance with England [cf. No. 5664]. Oh what a fine part shall we play, when we have added to our land-power the dominion of the sea"'. (5), an 'ex-Jesuit, following the Society's grand rule, divida & impera, loosens the bond of union, and has already pulled out one of the seven arrows, saying, "That goes well, when, disguised as a Patriot, I shall succeed in taking unnoticed some arrows from the Lion, and then might the Pope indeed restore our order, if the Dutch, who are less easy to beguile than our good Spaniards, do not smell a rat before our work is completed!'" Near (4) is a small serpent with a forked tongue. Near (5) are some papers inscribed III. Art. Goed Patri . . . and Certificat.

Behind the lion (6), a Spaniard (r.) in slashed doublet threatens him with a spear, saying 'Who knows if once again now we shall bring our old Beggars to their knees? Yet first must Neighbour France have accomplished his crafty business for we are now of one family, though this has not been exactly to our advantage [cf. No. 5642]. But when we have once got Gibraltar back, then shall we be able to dictate the law finely to the other Powers. Meanwhile we have made a beginning and have given the Dutch some pinches.' He is perhaps La Herreria, the Spanish Minister at the Hague.

A plainly-dressed man wearing a hat holds a pen in his r. hand, his l. arm is outstretched. He is (7) 'A Minister of State looking with pain on the blinded lion'. He says, 'Oh Heavens, where will all this end for the beloved Fatherland! Yet I cannot do more than truly make known my discoveries.' A man stands in back-view, r. arm outstretched, looking towards the Channel. He is (8) another Minister of State, looking at the convoy being taken to Portsmouth and saying 'That's bad. Although we have given the English some grounds for complaint. Is it possible to remain friends with two contending parties? What is to be done now? For by force of black-magic and to the joy of some of our windy poets, all our light frigates are turned into three-deckers, where shall we find sailors to man them! The Northern Powers themselves are in want of sailors. Meanwhile we are on the hook and must pay the reckoning, at which France will laugh heartily!'

A monk (9) drags (l. to r.) a little cart containing emblems of 'Popery', probably the original of the cart in No. 5702, but decorated with fleur-de-lis; the monk, dragging a sledge in place of a cart, appears in No. 5713. Its contents are a gallows, a wheel, an axe, faggots, tar-barrels, an iron-bound chest, and shackles. In front sits a courtesan holding in her hand a high-feathered head-dress; she represents the 'Whore of Babylon' or the Church of Rome, cf. No. 5534. The monk is 'joyfully journeying to Holland on the rumour of a breach between England and the Republic'. He says, 'our object is reached thanks to our pretended tolerance now that we have set the Dutch at variance with their old ally, and the heretics have been brought into a scramble, a game in which we should indeed again become masters, and to which purpose I bring good provisions!'

In the upper r. corner, close to 'Amsterdam', two men stand in conversation. They are A, a naval commissary from 'Fr——k [France] in Amst[er]dam] looking for certificates to help the sailor'. He is fashionably dressed and holds out a paper to B, a Dutch skipper in bulky trousers, who is dancing with rage, saying, 'if this piece of paper should be found on me by the English, then they will make a prize of my ship and cargo, in place of paying for the one and giving me back the other as they have done till now'.

On the paper is a watermark with a portrait of the Stadtholder, William V, on horseback, with the words, P. W. de Vyfde.

Propaganda of the pro-English party of the Stadtholder which was opposed by the 'Patriots' of the Dutch cities and especially of Amsterdam, where French influence was potent. It is answered by No. 5719, where its 'author' is said to be 'Cato-Batavus', who is alleged to be influenced by his investments in British securities, cf. also No. 5718. The prophecy voiced by one of the (pro-English) Dutch merchants proved well-founded, see

No. 6292 and cf. Nos. 5827, 5830. 'Unlimited convoy', of which much is said in this series, was the revival by the Republic of a claim put forward by Sweden in the middle of the seventeenth century that ships under convoy could not be searched without insult to the national flag. Lecky, Hist. of England, iv, 1890, p. 160 f. See also No. 5724. For the activities of the French Ambassador, La Vauguyon, see F. P. Renault, Les Provinces-Unies et La Guerre d'Amérique, Paris, 1924, pp. 154 ff.

A reduced copy is No. 1 in No. 5728. Van Stolk, No. 4313, where it is described as a copy of a similar plate without the two figures A and B, the explanation being in French. Muller, No. 4362 c.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 14\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5713 DE ONTWAAKTE LEEUW*

[1780]

[THE LION AWAKENED.]

Engraving. A sequel to No. 5712. The print is elucidated by numbers referring to a printed explanation pasted on the print. A number of figures stand on the sea-shore. The central figure is that of Catharine of Russia (2), her crown poised on her high-dressed hair. She holds in her outstretched hands a ribbon, the r. end of which is in the l. fore-paw of (1) the Dutch lion, who snarls angrily towards the French ambassador, who is posturing, hat in hand, on the extreme r. of the design. In the lion's r. fore-paw is the sheaf of seven arrows symbolizing the United Provinces. Two figures on Catharine's r. hold the l. end of the ribbon: they are (3) and (4), and represent the kings of Sweden and Denmark. A man has just fallen to the ground in front of the Empress and the lion, he is (5) de Puyen, ex-Jesuit. On the r. behind the lion, the Stadtholder (8) and the English ambassador, Sir Joseph Yorke (7), are having an interview. Yorke (r.), contorted with rage, stamps and clenches his fist; the Stadtholder, hand on hip, points disapprovingly towards him. Behind and to the r. of the empress stands a Spaniard (9) pointing at the French ambassador.

On the extreme l. a ragged, bare-footed monk (10) drags off rapidly a wheeled sledge on which sits the 'Whore of Babylon' as in No. 5712, but her cart is reduced to a sledge, piled with the same contents.

In the foreground, in front of this group, are piled emblems of sea-power and commerce: a trident, a gushing culvert, a caduceus, &c. Along the horizon are ships in full sail: on the l. is inscribed Calis, on the r. Dolver [Dover].

The explanation translated:

1. Depicts the Dutch lion, showing his teeth at all who by trick or force attack him. Neither trick nor force shall break the bond of unity [binding together the United Provinces].

2. A Russian lady wearing an imperial crown, unable any longer to endure the injustice inflicted on the lion, invites him to a bond of friendship, for that purpose bringing with her two Northern Princes [Nos. 3 and 4] who likewise hold fast to the bond of friendship. Thus is the Lion again given courage to oppose the proud tyrant.

5. The ex-Jesuit, de Puyen, seeing the lion's awakened countenance, falls to the ground in terror—'Ignatius! Ignatius! what have I done! The lion is awake, my dismay is very great! Oh, we have now no more hope that the good Pope will restore our Order'.

6. The French Ambassador, having succeeded in dazzling the Lion by his flattery and compliments, is ashamed that his cajolery is now being discovered, and as the lion is looking at him with an angry countenance, he withdraws shamefacedly: 'It is best that I make off and rouse the Lion no further, otherwise things might go badly.'

7. The English Ambassador, in a fury of rage at the refusal to help in the concluding of an alliance, says, 'Is that the reward of friendship, an alliance concluded to our hurt, and to leave us, who are your allies, in misery and without help.'

8. His Highness, in a stately attitude, says to the English Ambassador: 'Who is the cause of the whole misfortune? had you not acted thus arbitrarily and masterfully, things would not have come to this extremity, you are yourself the cause of your misfortune, therefore do not venture any more to the verge of ruin, or you will be threatened with complete disaster.'

9. A Spaniard turns sadly away, calling to his friend, the French ambassador, 'It is all over Brother, the Lion has too many friends, we cannot get to Holland so easily.' [He is perhaps La Herreria, the Spanish Minister.]

10. Shows a monk, seeing the lion awakened, and fearing that the baggage he brings with him will be ill received, draws it away, calling on all saints and holy things to come to his help, and cursing the burden with which he is laden. 'What shall I do now, all my labour is lost. I thought I should be allowed to sell my small wares in Holland, but the cursed Protestants saw on my arrival that my little lady was painted and my money was stamped with [French] lilies. I see clearly that if I and my wares are not out of harm's way in good time, my freight will prevent my return.'

'Finally, in the distance, is a combined fleet which protects the commerce of the Lion, who keeps a watchful eye on all who try to hinder it. Henceforth the convoys will not be so easily taken.'

A print on the Armed Neutrality, one of several much over-rating the assistance which Holland might expect to derive from it. It assumes that resistance to England's claim to seize enemy goods in neutral ships, and her interpretation of contraband as including naval stores, could be combined with an independent or even hostile attitude to France and Spain. See Mahan, Influence of Sea Power, 1890, p. 405 f. See also No. 5714, &c. For the suppression of the Jesuits see No. 5222.

A reduced copy is No. 2 in No. 5728. With the print is a pamphlet, 'Nadere Verklaaring van de . . . ontwaakte Leeuw', which amplifies the explanation printed beneath the plate.

Van Stolk, No. 4314. Muller, No. 4363.

6½ × 11¹³/₁₆ in.

5714 DE MOEDIGE EN WAAKZAME LEEUW*

[THE BRAVE AND WATCHFUL LION]

1780.

Engraving, with a printed explanation below it in two columns. Similar in arrangement to No. 5712. A number of figures, stiff and ill-drawn and poorly grouped; their identity is indicated by numbers. The upper part of the print depicts topographically the English Channel; on the south side, on the extreme r. is Amsterdam, represented by a harbour in which are ships at anchor, and a town conventionally indicated by buildings surrounding a church. The Hague, Haage, is similarly indicated some way to the l., and on the extreme l. is Brest, with ships at anchor off the coast. At the top of the print in the centre is Portsmouth, a fleet of ships within and outside the harbour is inscribed Fielding; following it, and on the l. is another fleet, inscribed Byland.

The Russian ambassador (1) gives a paper inscribed Memorial Declaratie to (9) a Dutch minister of state. To the r. of this couple (3) the Stadtholder, his head turned in profile to the r., his hat in his hand, holds out his l. hand towards three men (2) who face him, hat in hand. He is receiving 'some well-known Dutch merchants' 'in a very friendly way'.

In the foreground (l.) is the Dutch lion (4) very rampant, trampling under foot two documents, Tractaaten van Commerce, and Traktaaten van Alliantie. In front of him and on the extreme l. stands (5) Sir Joseph Yorke, British Ambassador at The Hague, holding out a chain with a padlock at one end. Beside the lion, his r. hand resting on the animal's back, is (6) the French ambassador, his coat decorated with fleur-de-lys. Behind the lion's outstretched tail stands (7) a Spaniard, holding open a large pair of shears; he is perhaps Herreria, the Spanish Minister.

Behind the Spaniard and to the r. stands (8) a Dutch minister of state, wearing a hat, a pen behind his ear, his hands clasped, watching the lion.

The explanation translated:

1. Prince Galitzin, Envoy Extraordinary of Her Majesty of all the Russias, handing over a Memorial to the First Minister of State of the Republic, wherein her Majesty makes known her declaration made at the Courts of Versailles, Madrid, and London, and the Republic is invited to make common cause with Russia for the protection of Commerce: 'Your high mightinesses will easily understand the necessity for hastening this resolution, concerning matters so important and advantageous for all mankind, wherefore the signatory requests that a speedy answer may be given.'

2. Some well-known merchants speaking to His Highness: 'Our ships have long been exposed to the attacks and plunder of war-making powers, to the great disadvantage of the trade of the inhabitants, while we are not in a position to resist it by force of arms. Now is our opportunity to be respected by England, Spain, and France, if we do not refuse the invitation of the illustrious Empress of all the Russias. We therefore beg very humbly and earnestly that your Excellency will be pleased to support by your authority and wise counsel the just and beneficent proposal of her Imperial Majesty, so that henceforth our commerce may be carried on safely and unhindered.'

3. H.H. saying to the merchants in a very friendly manner: 'Your request is very just, I have always made the greatest efforts to maintain the Republic and make her commerce secure. Therefore I have already urged that we should increase our sea and land forces and put ourselves in a state of defence against our too-powerful neighbours, before we declare ourselves. Still, since the illustrious Empress of all the Russias will now take the same course as ourselves, I shall use all my powers to support her proposal in the States, to restrain by strong measures the wanton presumption of our seeming friends.'

4. The Dutch lion, standing with his hind-paws on the Treaties of Alliance and Commerce between the Republic and England, Spain, and France, and one of his fore-paws lifted, says: 'I have always supported treaties as inviolate and thought that each Power must consider them as sacred; I trusted that I was perfectly safe. Still I perceive it to be clear that there is neither trust nor uprightness among the nations, I shall therefore make use of all my powers to punish those who by trickery or force insult or injure.'

5. The English Ambassador holds shackles in his hands, to throw over the lion and prevent his being in a position to defend himself, yet he notices that the lion has raised one of his fore-paws to punish him for his audacity, whereupon he retreats, saying, 'I thought I had already made the lion so tame that he would put up with anything from me, but I am mistaken, I see that he begins to be angry. For we have more than once found to our shame that the Dutch lion can revenge himself, when he is too much teased, I shall therefore try to respect him and avoid him.'

6. The French Ambassador, his hat in his r. hand, and pushing the lion gently with the other, says, 'How brave is the Lion, I fear however that he relies too much on his security and trusts too much to his treaties with England and will allow himself to be ensnared by this Power. This however does not please me now, although at other times I am accustomed to break my word very lightly, and to violate treaties. I shall therefore disturb him in his tranquillity for this touches my own advantage; nevertheless I shall pose as friendly, lest suspicion is raised and it is taken amiss.'

7. A Spaniard with a great pair of shears in his hand intends to cut short the lion's mane, yet hearing the lion begin to roar, he springs back: 'I thought I could at least make myself master of some of his mane, so that the loss I suffer through England might be somewhat made good, but I see that this is not the case. The lion is vigilant, and is angry. I shall therefore try to keep him as a friend so as not to have any more enemies, for alas! one alone can do me harm enough.'

8. A minister of state, his pen behind his ear and rubbing his hands, says: 'What a fortunate change in affairs. I thought that the beloved Fatherland was in a dangerous situation through the superiority of our neighbours and because we were not sufficiently armed, but now the Russian Empress will join her power to ours, and Sweden and Denmark will probably enter the alliance, my fear vanishes and gives place to pleasant sensations, also I shall now at last receive some more rest.'

9. Another minister of State, taking the memorial from the Russian Ambassador, with a delighted expression and bowing in a friendly manner: 'I have supported the English party with all my might, so long as it was at all possible. I thought that the safest way to protect the Republic from danger, but I see now that England is a faithless ally, who under the appearance of friendship tries to destroy our trade, and further demanded more help from us than we were pledged to give, and embroiled us in war. This necessitates my leaving my own party, but I knew not how best to behave in that matter. But thank the Empress of Russia, who saves me from this difficulty, through her friendly offer to uphold neutrality with us. Now I shall easily explain myself to the Convoys, so far as the treaties allow, and I shall not again permit myself to be frightened by the threats of England.'

A print on the Armed Neutrality similar in its attitude to No. 5713. Though such high hopes were entertained in Holland of the Neutrality (which Catharine told Harris ought to be considered an Armed Nullity, Malmesbury, Diaries, i. 355, 431; see also i. 385), the United Provinces did not decide to adhere to it until November, the Stadtholder's party holding out for a guarantee by Russia of Dutch possessions in the East and West Indies. Fitzmaurice, Life of Shelburne, 1912, ii. 78. Prince Galitzin, the pro-French Russian Minister at The Hague, urged the Dutch to act against England, Malmesbury, op. cit., i. 295. See also Nos. 5664, 5713, 5715, 5716, 5718, 5719, 5724, 5730, 5732, 5733, 5850, and for the attitude of England to the United Provinces, No. 5557, &c.

On the paper is a watermark of the Stadtholder on horseback with the letters P. W. de V. (not identical with that on No. 5712).

A reduced copy is No. 3 in No. 5728.

Van Stolk, No. 4315. Muller, No. 4364.

$6\frac{5}{8} \times 14\frac{7}{16}$ in.

5715 LOON NA. WERK 1780*

[A DUE REWARD 1780]

1780.

de piris is 8 stuivoen [pence].

Mezzotint. The figures have numbers which refer to an explanation engraved beneath the design. A large dog muzzled and chained to a low round post is being maltreated by figures representing England's enemies. He is (1) 'an English dog chained to a round neutral stake'. A Dutchman (2) holds his tail and pinches it with a pair of pincers, he is giving him 'a pinch in the tail before being bitten by him in the leg'. Behind him is a crowned woman (Catharine of Russia) holding up a caduceus (as the protectress of commerce) in her l. hand, a sword in her r.; behind her stand two men, representing Sweden and Denmark. They are (3) 'The Neutrality at the head of which is a crowned Princess nobly protecting free trade', and assisting Holland. A lean Frenchman (4) in back view, wearing a bag-wig, raises a parasol to beat the dog, looking towards the Dutchman; he is 'beating the dog to encourage the Dutchman and showing him his friends'. A Spaniard (5) raises a large tasselled cane to beat the dog, his l. hand is on the shoulder of (6) an American, in quasi-military uniform, holding a knotted scourge in each hand. 'The Spaniard deftly strikes the cur with his cane and the American joins heartily in beating this pest of humanity on his impudent muzzle.'

In the background (1.) a crowned woman stripped to the waist is tied by her wrists to a gallows, she is being flogged by a man dressed as a naval officer who holds a birch in each hand. She is 'the proud Queen of the Sea being lashed by Paul Jones'. Jones, when he took refuge in the Texel after his fight with Pearson (see Nos. 5559-66, 5582), was treated as a hero by the Dutch. Van Loon, Fall of the Dutch Republic, p. 237.

The misunderstanding of the international situation common in these Dutch prints appears in the association of Spain and America, since Spain, though an ally of France, was not an ally of America and had no desire to help rebellious colonies. For the Armed Neutrality see No. 5714, &c.

A reduced copy is No. 4 in No. 5728.

Van Stolk, No. 4316. Muller, No. 4365.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5716 DE MAN IN 'T HEMBD, OF DE GEFNUIKTE HOOGMOED.*

[THE MAN IN THE SHIRT OR PRIDE BROUGHT LOW.]

Engraving. The figures are numbered, referring to a short printed explanation beneath the plate. A man (1), England, dressed only in a shirt, with an expression of horrified rage, is being held by two men, (4) and (5), representing Denmark and Sweden. France (7) stands behind him about to place a fool's cap on his head. Russia (r.) (3), a stalwart man wearing a fur cap and long gown, is about to strike him with a large club. A plainly dressed man (2), America, runs off to the l. with his clothes, looking back with a smile. Holland, as a Dutchman (6), kneels on the ground fixing shackles to the ankles of the Man in the Shirt.

The scene is the sea-shore. Small vessels (1.) (8) have boards on the top of their bare masts; behind them are ships in full sail (9). A man (10) clenches his fist at the sight of the vessels. In the foreground lie torn documents (11).

The explanation, translated:

(1), 'A man in a shirt in a great rage; (2), an American, who carries away his money and clothes laughing; (3), a Russian threatening to strike him; (4) and (5) hold each an arm; (6), a Dutchman who puts chains on him; (8), some dismantled privateers; (9), a fleet of merchant ships sailing undisturbed; (10), a man who sees this, stamping his feet; (11), some torn-up treaties.'

With this print is an Uitlegging (interpretation), in verse, which is confused and contradictory. 'Each explains it in his own way and I in mine.' Holland (6) is 'The trade spoiler, the most cunning of all'. Russia is 'The strongest of the six who passes for arbiter'.

One of a number of prints on the Armed Neutrality, see No. 5714, &c. It also shows how potent was the idea that England was to be despoiled of her commerce, see Nos. 5726, 5727.

A reduced copy is No. 7 in No. 5728.

Van Stolk, No. 4317. Muller, No. 4366 a.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 7\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5716 A An earlier state in outline, but having numbers and the printed Verklaring.

5717 [VI DE EERSTE ECONOMISCHE PLAAT.*]

[EEN JONGEN RYKEN HOLLANDER]

[1780]

[THE FIRST ECONOMIC PRINT. A RICH YOUNG DUTCHMAN.]

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5720. The 'rich young Dutchman', who is the subject of the print, appears in it in two different situations. He sits (r.) on his open money-chest, which is supported on four low wooden wheels, and filled with money-bags, holding a paper in his hand and pointing contemptuously to the r., where another Dutchman stands by a booth of Dutch wares. He pays no attention to an Englishman (r.), 'Meester John altyd op en te kort' (Master John always short of cash), who takes one of his money-bags and points with his l. hand towards a temple falling to ruin in the distance. The Dutchman carelessly allows the money-chest to be dragged to the l. by Folly in cap and bells, by a Frenchman, and by two richly dressed women, one of meretricious appearance with loose hair, the other with a haughty expression and hair dressed in an enormous pyramid. A third man, wearing a high toupet-wig, turns his back on the money-chest as he drinks from a large bottle.

On the l. of this group the 'rich young Dutchman' appears again standing passively with a pleased expression while he is decked out in French garments: a little boy wearing a bag-wig hands him a high toupet-wig with a long queue, a man helps him to put on a coat, and on the l. a Frenchman bows low before him holding a feathered hat. Another Frenchman standing behind holds out a sword.

Behind this group is a booth of English goods with a placard: Engelsche kraam, in front of it is a draped platform on which stand the English salesman (l.) and his assistant (r.), the latter dressed like the zany who accompanied mountebanks and quack-doctors. The salesman holds out a roll of figured material and points to the r.; he appears to be addressing the spectators. His assistant hands a pile of crockery to a man (r.) who holds out his hands to receive it. The shelves of the booth are stacked with crockery, &c., while textiles hang from projecting poles.

On the extreme l. is a solid and lofty stone gateway or triumphal arch. Over the arch is carved a fool's head, with cap and bells; festoons of bells from the cap decorate the façade. Four men, partly visible, blow trumpets and horns from the summit of the arch.

In the foreground (l.) a stall or booth of French wares is partly visible in front of the arch. Its penthouse roof has a placard inscribed Modes de Paris. Elaborately trimmed hats and ribbons hang from a cord. Beneath it, beside a chest, stands a man dressed in the French manner holding out his hands persuasively towards the 'rich young Dutchman' as if to recommend his wares. He appears from the explanation to be Charles III of Spain (allied to France by the Family Compact). At his feet is a pile of feathered hats, &c., and a monkey who holds out a feathered hat towards the Dutchman. Through the archway is seen a formal garden with clipped hedges and a fountain in the distance. In alcoves in the hedges two couples are making love. Two men are fighting with swords. At two tables parties of men and women dressed in the French fashion are feasting. A couple advance towards the tables through the archway. These figures are on a minute scale.

In the foreground on the extreme r., a pendant to the 'Modes de Paris', is a Dutch booth with a placard inscribed Hollandsche Waaren. By it stands the plainly dressed Dutch salesman at whom the 'rich young Dutchman' with the money-chest is pointing disdainfully. His wares are all solid and plain: corded bales, rolls of textiles, a pile of plain round hats. Under the roof of the booth stands an enormous chest; stockings, gloves, and garments hang from a line.

In the distance (r.) is the sea, two ships in full sail are fighting. On the shore is a circular temple (the temple of the state), its roof supported by tottering pillars which a crowd of men on a minute scale are pulling down (? or shoring up).

The print, though clearly a plea for economic self-sufficiency, would be unintelligible without the printed explanation here translated:

"This print depicts a rich young Dutchman, sitting on his well-stocked money-chest, pointing contemptuously to the products of industry and craftsmanship of his nation, while he allows a large part of his treasure to be taken by Master John, always short of cash, and lets himself be dragged by Luxury, Delight, Wantonness, Drunkenness, and Folly. Further, he stands in front of an English booth, where they were working busily at the delivery of yellow and green pottery, knives, combs, &c. He was greeted in a very friendly way by Jean Poli [the Frenchman]; meanwhile he was being busily decked out in a laced coat and a wig with red powder, feathered hat, and sword, all offered à la Henri Quatre. Thus fitted out, he is called to and winked at by Charles 'always foolish' [Charles III of Spain],¹ who will show him through the open gate the manners of the great world, such as banquets, card-playing, duelling, and make him thoroughly acquainted with these things. From above the gate trumpets sound and other sounds of music are heard. On the right in the distance is seen a building, falling to ruin through carelessness; on the open sea is a ship taken by a hostile friend.'

¹ For this inapt description of Charles III cf. No. 5643.

This ship probably represents the Dutch convoy of naval stores taken by Captain Fielding, see No. 5628, &c.

The money-bag stolen by 'Master John' probably represents the Dutch investments in British funds which checked the war fever in Holland among the investors, see Nos. 5718, 5719, 5720, 5724. 280,000,000 florins were said to be invested in England in 1780. Blok, Geschiedenis van het Nederlandsche volk, vi. 439.

A reduced copy is No. 6 in No. 5728; the first title is taken from the pamphlet which accompanies No. 5728.

Van Stolk, No. 4318. Muller, No. 4367.

8 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 14 in.

5718 DE TYD GEEFT VERANDERING.*

[TIME BRINGS CHANGES]

Engraving. Figures on the sea-shore, on ships, and in the clouds symbolize the relations between Holland, England, France, and Russia. They have numbers referring to a printed explanation in two columns beneath the print which gives the words spoken, here translated. In the foreground (1.) the Dutch lion (1) is about to rise. An Englishman (2) stoops over him with a bit and bridle. The lion holds in his paw a sheaf of seven arrows representing the provinces of the United Netherlands. The lion says, 'What will they do to me, shall I keep quiet thus, under every sort of pressure; where are my old sea-heroes, my Witts, Brakels, Ruyters, and Tromps?' The Englishman says, 'Keep still my beast, then everything will go well, we can no longer dictate the law to America, our work there was bungled, we shall now make the Netherlands dance to our piping. Should we not force them? Oh yes, they will help us, we demand it, in a masterful tone. We, the English, speak and our word is law.'

A second Englishman (3) stands by, holding open a chest full of money-bags, and addressing (4) 'a covetous Dutch capitalist', who stands in a 'despairing attitude', that is, scratching his forehead in perplexity. (3) says, 'Will you refuse to help us? No, you are pledged to give us aid, we are masters on the sea, we are monarchs! and we possess your gold, take care, take care to please us, we are cock of the walk. Will you contradict a Briton? His pride would not endure that!' The disconsolate Dutchman says, 'Ah if our valuable treasure were not in England. What shall I do if we become involved in war with England? My gold will go! Then I must sell my goods and dismiss my servants. Oh, how unfortunate I am. High interest and good security have allured me, I see it now, but alas too late!'

Next him stands (5) an 'old Dutch hero', in seventeenth-century armour, holding 'the hat of liberty on the spear of freedom'; he puts his r. hand on the shoulder of (4), and with the l. points up to the clouds (r.) where sit (9) Tromp and de Ruyter. He says, 'Where is the courage of old, money-grubbing Dutchman? Is that faithful dealing with our Fatherland, that you for big profits give our money to that nation which had the law dictated to them by those laurelled heroes who show themselves there; had you used our gold for our Fatherland, and for the production of praiseworthy manufactures, arts, and armaments, then you would see our Fatherland flourish in spite of foreigners! Then you would see the Cromwellian yoke lifted from our necks by men of worth.'

Next (r.) stands (6), a Frenchman 'in an Henri IV costume', with a large box slung from his shoulders inscribed Mode de Paris and slaapkruid voor der Hollanders (dope for Dutchmen). In his r. hand he holds up a fashionable French wig, or head-dress, in the other a placard inscribed, Amsterdam en omme Haag se vrinden (Friends at Amsterdam and The Hague). He says, 'To show my compliments and friendship, mixed with soft but sharp threats, and then my letter of safe-conduct! I shall shine in these fashion-loving Netherlands who are now echoing my opinion that however much one may flatter Dame Economy, she yet lacks that charm and attractiveness possessed by our Madame La Mode.'

On the extreme (l.), behind the Englishman bridling the lion, is the prow of a small vessel in which stands (7) an Englishman, holding up a British flag. Immediately behind the three Netherlanders (3), (4), and (5) is the poop of a war-ship. On it are two men, one (8) dressed as a naval officer is hauling down a flag with three stripes. The Englishman with the British flag says to him, 'Strike I say! Will you defend yourselves against us? You must see every thing in the proper light. Have you shot at the sloop, and that to defend the honour of your flag? That you shall indeed smart for, you shall fear our complaints! We will break our treaties with you, merely from pride, however much we also groan under the burdens of the war, we are Britons.' The naval officer answers, 'I will strike the flag, in spite of my own courage and all noble Dutchmen. My orders, my orders I have followed, and I shall in time show that Holland still has heroes.'

Two men in seventeenth-century dress, sitting among clouds in the upper r. corner of the print, are (9) Tromp and de Ruyter. They say, 'Alas, dear Fatherland! Where is your old heroism? Where is the glory of your free flag which we, with our wealth and blood, defended? You still have friends, show that no Dutchman will let himself be wronged, famous Fatherland, consider the State.'

The two admirals are being addressed by (10), who stands, hat in hand, on the poop of the ship, partly concealed by a flag with three stripes, which was that of the Stadtholder (F. P. Renaut, Les Provinces-Unis et la Guerre d'Amérique, 1924, p. 144). He is 'a famous member of the Fatherland', evidently the Stadtholder, cf. No. 5714, and says, 'We deal with the affair, according to our abilities at this time in which we live, oh true heroes of our Fatherland! Changes will occur, and something will happen in spite of those who hate us. We will no longer allow ourselves to be bullied, but will show ourselves not afraid of brutal demands or windy threats.' William V, hereditary head of the Navy, was completely ineffective. He was pro-English by family tradition and as a grandson of George II.

In the background (r.) are three ships (11), 'an English ship bringing in some Dutch merchant-ships. Look, it goes well, it is altogether ours, who will hinder us? We act in an arbitrary manner, and care for nothing.'

In the upper l. corner of the print, immediately over the Englishman holding the British flag, a crowned woman leans out from clouds, holding a paper in her r. hand, a sheaf of thunderbolts in the other. She is Catharine II, saying 'Long enough, presumptuous B . . . [Britain] and complaisant F . . . [France]. A great law-giver will change your opinions by the lightning of her face and statesmanship. Come, free Netherlands, see a protector in the greatest lady of Europe.'

One of a number of Dutch satires on English arrogance shown by the capture of Dutch shipping, see Nos. 5628, 5712, &c., and on the Armed Neutrality, see No. 5714, &c. For the 'Cromwellian yoke', cf. Nos. 5719, 5729, &c. For this curious combination of hostility to England and to her enemy France, see No. 5717, also a plea for economic self-sufficiency. For Dutch investments in English Government and other securities, see Nos. 5717, 5719, 5720, 5724. Higher interest in England was a great attraction to Dutch capital; the Republic could raise loans at 2½ per cent. Van Loon, Fall of the Dutch Republic, p. 269.

A reduced copy is No. 7 in No. 5728.

Van Stolk, No. 4319. Muller, No. 4368.

13⅜ × 8½ in.

5719 DEN BRITSEN LEOPARD TOT REDEN GEBRACHT.*
[THE BRITISH LEOPARD BROUGHT TO REASON]

Engraving. An answer to No. 5712. The figures have numbers which refer to a printed explanation pasted below the print, giving the words supposed to be spoken. In the lower half of the design a 'pro-English Dutchman' (1) stands (1.) facing and addressing (2) the British leopard, and (3) the Dutch lion, behind whom stand a row of persons representing the powers of Europe, &c. In the upper part of the design are (1.) Portsm.[outh], represented by a coast-line and group of buildings. Off the coast is the word Byland, representing the convoy taken to Portsmouth by Fielding, see No. 5628, &c. Lisbon is represented by a similar group of buildings, situated east (on r.) of Portsmouth. Two crowned columns represent Dutch overseas possessions (the same symbol was used in English satires, cf. No. 5961), with the words Berbic., Curac., S^t Eust., K. Bon Esp. Three isolated figures (13-15) fill the remaining upper part of the print (r.).

The pro-English Dutchman (1) is 'Cato Batavus', author of the print, 'The lion attacked by cunning and force' (No. 5712). He stands (1.) in profile to the r., arms outstretched, papers protruding from his coat pocket: 'English bank notes to show that the money which he draws from that Court, and the capital that he has in the bank of London is to induce him to sacrifice his country to a foreign power which is injuring her.' He points to the Dutch 'établissements' [the two columns] and seems to say 'the English have been, are, and will be our best allies, we are in their debt; the trade with which they furnish us makes us prosperous, it is even for our good that they capture our ships, which are destined for France, they know better than we, that we harm ourselves by trading with France. Do you not see, that should we be headstrong enough to neglect our interests which they understand better than our blind rulers, they will take away the Cape of Good Hope, Surinam, St. Eustatius, Curaçoa, de Molukken &c., and all our merchant ships? They suppose that we have reason to complain of the English, but the English might rightly complain of us, who have the audacity to desire the independence of our colonies.' He faces two snarling beasts: the British leopard (2), looking round at the Dutch lion, whom he strikes with his paw. 'He sees with fury that the Dutch lion is getting up after he had thrown him down, yet he sees in the distance a crowned woman [Catharine II] and this holds him in awe.'

The Dutch lion (3) is a heraldic-looking beast holding in his l. fore-paw a trident. 'He is not yet recovered from his fall, yet he is in a fit state to defend himself, whenever the leopard attacks him again.'

Behind the leopard and the lion stands (4) an Englishman, one hand on the lion's head, the other on his trident, from which a chain ascends to Lisbon. (Portugal, England's ally, at first refused to join the Armed Neutrality but eventually did so.) He 'takes Neptune's trident from the Dutch lion, yet flatters him, in order to bind him to the same fetters with which he holds Portugal in chains'. It is as if he were saying 'to give the Dutch the illusion that our interests are the same, we have cleverly managed that they have invested a great part of their money in our funds. Although we cannot withhold payment from them, without losing our credit, which is our only support, yet nevertheless we shall continually make them fear our bankruptcy in order to hold them to our interests. In order the better to show them that their interests are ours, we have taken from them their sceptre of the seas, New York, Pouleron, Sillebar,¹ &c. and our Navigation Act has transferred into our hands much of their trade. To bring them the better under our yoke we shall, by our persistency, make them afraid of the Papacy and the tyranny of the House of Bourbon, thus we shall gradually make them believe that we are the sovereign of the seas, that we keep them all blockaded, and at the same time are in all corners of the world, on land as well as at sea, that nothing is so much to be feared as a universal monarchy.' Between him and the next figure (5) is a placard inscribed Nieuw York Pouleron Acte Navig [Navigation Act] Sillebar.

Next stands (5) a Dutch merchant holding up a paper inscribed with a list of names: Falst., Duyv., Chat., Dov., Nieuwp., Van Gal., Ruit., Trom., Everts, and pointing to the figures in the upper part of the print (France, Spain, and America); these are 'the names that are so terrible to the English'. Chat. indicates the burning of the ships at Chatham in 1667, Jan van Galen, de Ruyter, Tromp, and Everts are Dutch admirals. The significance of the other words is obscure; the English beat the Dutch off Nieuwport, June 1653. He seems to say to the pro-Dutch Englishman, 'you contend that France and Spain are decadent and that intolerance and tyranny and the Universal Monarchy will rise up anew. How is it that they have been able to take Grenada, S^t Vincent, Domingo, Florida, &c. from the English? How is it that they have the reckless policy, for tyrants, of supporting the independence of America? You say that the English will soon take away our over-seas possessions, how comes it that they let all theirs be taken from them? . . .'

Next stands (6) Catharine II, in profile to the l., a sceptre in her r. hand, her l. resting on an anchor. She stands just within a circle or hoop in which stand four other persons (7-10). In the centre is an imperial crown, resting on an escutcheon inscribed Hansee, showing that the Hanse towns had adhered to the Armed Neutrality. The Empress, 'disturbed at the arrogance (despotismus) of the English, wishes to restore the freedom of the seas by an alliance between the neutral powers'. At sight of her the Dutch lion has raised his head. On her alliance he already counts.

(7) and (8) are insignificant-looking men representing the kings of Sweden and Denmark. (9) is the king of Prussia in military uniform and jack-boots. (10) is a woman holding up the hat of Liberty on a staff, in her

¹ New York (New Amsterdam) was captured by the English in 1669; 'Pouleron', i.e. Polaron or Pulo Run, one of the Banda Islands, is an indication of the Dutch preoccupation with Cromwell, see No. 5732, &c. Run was disputed between the English and Dutch between 1620 and 1667. At the peace of 1654 Cromwell forced the Dutch to restore it; it was taken again in 1664 and kept at the peace of Breda. It changed hands, 1796-1814, being finally restored to the Dutch in 1814. 'Sillebar' is obscure.

l. hand are the seven arrows symbolizing the United Provinces. She is 'the United Provinces depicted as the Dutch Maid'.

The English Ambassador [Sir Joseph Yorke] (11) stands just outside the circle, holding it with his l. hand, in his r. is a knife with which he is about 'to cut to pieces the bond which joins the allied powers'. Next him stands (11) the French ambassador, his coat patterned with fleur-de-lys, restraining him from cutting the bond. This 'shows the absurd stupidity of the author of the Awakened Lion and of those who have not realized that this alliance is to the great advantage of France and was perhaps the fruit of her statecraft'.

In the upper part of the design, next the two pillars representing the Dutch colonial possessions, stands (13) the king of Spain, holding a sword pointing to the word Florida 'which he has captured from the English'. Next him is (14) the king of France, his sword pointing to the words Granada, St Vincent, Dominique, 'the places won from England'; in his l. hand he holds a hat, 'the hat of freedom', over the head of (15) N. America. America is a young woman seated on a bale of goods, beside which the muzzle of a cannon is visible. In her r. hand is a sheaf of thirteen arrows (like the seven of the United Provinces), in her l. a cross-hilted sword, the point of which rests on a yoke which lies beneath her feet, symbolizing the yoke of England.

War propaganda directed against the contentions that war with England would mean loss of Dutch colonial possessions, see No. 5712, and of Dutch investments in English securities, see Nos. 5717, 5718, 5720, 5724. One of a number of prints greatly over-estimating the benefits to Holland of the Armed Neutrality, see Nos. 5713-16, 5718, 5720, 5724, &c. It is unlike Nos. 5713-18, also anti-British, in being pro-French. For other prints showing the rancour left by the Dutch wars of the seventeenth century see Nos. 5718, 5729, 5730, 5731, 5732, 5733.

The Dutch colonial possession of Berbice (in Guiana) was taken in 1781 by English privateers, but was retaken by the French in 1782. Curaçao, a Dutch trading-post in the West Indies, escaped capture. The Cape of Good Hope was saved from Commodore Johnstone by Suffren, see Nos. 5960, 6048.

For St. Eustatius see No. 5557, &c. For the capture of Granada by the French see No. 5581.

A reduced copy is No. 8 in No. 5728.

Van Stolk, No. 4321. Muller, No. 4369.

8 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{5}{16}$ in.

5720 [EERWARDIGEN NEDERLANDER WORTHY DUTCH-MAN]*

[IX DE TWEEDE OECONOMISCHE PLAAT.]

Engraving. A sequel to No. 5717. A scene on the sea-shore, similar to that of No. 5717, but without booths or archway; the temple on the r. is somewhat nearer, larger, and in better repair. The central figure is again a Dutchman with a money chest, but he is 'a worthy Dutchman' and an older man, standing over his chest, which is not on wheels. On the r. is a group of Dutch working-men; on the l. a group of obsequious foreigners. The Dutchman empties a money-bag into the outstretched apron of an artisan; two others walk off towards the r., satisfied, carrying money, one a peasant with a spade, the other a man with a mallet. He looks con-temptuously towards the group on the l., his r. arm outstretched in a gesture of negation. A Frenchman bows low before him holding his feathered hat; an Englishman holds a paper inscribed obligatie while he points to himself, in allusion to the treaties between England and Holland. Between the Englishman and the Frenchman, a plainly-dressed man with outstretched hands bows towards the Dutchman; he probably represents America. Behind them a Spaniard in feathered hat, cloak, and ruff holds up a paper inscribed Murcia.

A group on the l. stands by a large chest inscribed Oeconomische Brillen [economic glasses]; on it is a stand on which are displayed many pairs of spectacles or rather pince-nez. Here a man, clasping his hands in a fervour of gratitude, is being fitted by the same 'worthy Dutchman' with glasses, a third man wearing glasses stands behind him. Between this group and the group of obsequious foreigners stands a man turning to the l. and clasping his hands in a gesture of despair.

In the middle distance (r.) a figure, with helmet, spear, and sword, resembling Britannia, but probably an allegorical figure, perhaps of Victory, is leading a number of men, the foremost of whom, whose hand she holds, wears a feathered hat and bag-wig. The others are more plainly dressed; they walk from l. to r.

On the extreme r. is a circular temple supported on pillars, as in No. 5717; all the pillars but one are now upright, and that one is being moved into position by a number of tiny figures; a crowd in the distance watches their efforts. In the temple is a figure holding a hat upon a staff as an emblem of liberty.

Immediately above the temple are clouds, on which sit and stand six allegorical figures from whom rays of light radiate. They hold various emblems: one has a book, Biblia, another a lamp. They appear to represent Piety, Truth, Love, Faith, and Steadfastness.

In the foreground (r.) a lion (Holland) advances towards a lean and cringing dog (England) on whose back stands a cock (France) (cf. No. 5581).

In the background is a fleet of ships in full sail, each flying a flag with three stripes, that of the Stadtholder. Over them flies Mercury, representing commerce.

The explanation, here translated, is printed on a separate slip:

'This picture shows a worthy Dutchman who pours out his treasure into the lap of a diligent labourer, peasant, and artisan, while he is deaf to the humble prayers of foreigners that he should entrust his gold to them; they seem to compete with each other to promise the highest interest. And as his treatment of the former cannot lessen their evident diligence, gratitude, and satisfaction, so his behaviour to the latter must cause visible dejection and vacillation.

'The same Dutchman and two other gentlemen are busy making a trial of home-made spectacles, which are beheld with the greatest attention and rapture.

'There is also a crowd of persons . . . hurrying towards the State Building in order to join with those who are already there, not only to support it, but to restore it to its former bloom and lustre, and to Piety, Truth, Love, Trust, and Steadfastness, which previously were ready to sink down. In the foreground is a proud lion, making a motion to rise, wherewith an emaciated dog crawls in fear, and a cock, who is biting the dog's back, springs aside. Finally, in the distance, there is a prodigious fleet on the open sea, safe and sailing to port under the direction of Mercury.

'Dedicated to all the people of the praiseworthy patriotic company of Hoorn and to the economic branch of the Dutch Company at Haarlem.'

A warning against investments by Dutchmen in British securities, both on economic and political grounds, see Nos. 5717-19, 5724, and a plea for economic self-sufficiency; see also No. 5724.

The title is taken from the printed explanation, the second title from the printed pamphlet which accompanies No. 5728. A reduced copy is No. 9 in No. 5728.

Van Stolk, No. 4322. Muller, No. 4370.

8 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5721 [HET TEGENWOORDIG VERWARD EUROPA.]* [? 1780]
[EUROPE IN HER PRESENT DISORDERED STATE.]

Engraving. A printed explanation accompanies the print. A curiously carved chest, or seat, representing 'The English Bank of Exchange' (Wisselbank) is suspended like a pair of scales by chains from the horn of a unicorn whose head emerges from clouds. It tilts down on the r., where a stout Englishman, 'an English lord', sits precariously, exclaiming in alarm as a Frenchman (r.), standing on the ground beneath, pulls him by the leg. The Frenchman's r. hand is on the hilt of his sword. The balance is further depressed by America, a naked child crowned with feathers, who is seated on the 'Bank' beside the Englishman and holding his arm, admonishing him with an upraised finger. A Spaniard holding a crutch crouches on the ground beside the Frenchman.

A 'Dutch skipper' (l.) holds one leg of the 'Bank' to prevent its being dragged down by France. He turns to speak to a 'merchant of Amsterdam' seated on a chest and writing in a ledger. Round the chest are 'sacks of gold', bales of goods, cheeses (one stamped with crossed keys), and rolls of textiles. In the background (c.) is a Dutch landscape; a group of six windmills flying a flag with three stripes, and four cows, two of which are being milked.

Beneath the design, verses are engraved in two columns, English (l.) and Dutch (r.).

*Bold Jack! pray, what's the business to-day!
Phoo—! pox—! a plot, mistaken for a play.
This hurly-burly spoils your sport—: you'll find,
There's humour to your face—, and more behind.
Amazing Fool—! yet tottering on thy bench,
Tho' scorn'd by Spain, and cosen'd by the French — —
Only the Dutch, not laughing at your nose,
Good-natur'd helps, to snatch what-e'er you lose.*

*Hoeeze! tienduizendmal! van dikhout zaagt men deelen.
't Gaat wel: by kris en kras! dat heet een hoofdrol speelen.
Puf Spaansch en Fransch: Messieurs! die poen heeft maakt figuur.
Maar lieve Jack! zie toe: dat stomlen staat je duur.
O Boston! Delaware! ó Washington! ó Fransen!
Zo mogt Mylord welhaast een hangman's hornpyp dansen.
De Batavier houdt noch uw Bankspel in den haak.
Vermeete! Loon die trouw, of vrees geregte wraak.*

A translation of the last three lines:

So might Mylord soon dance a hangman's hornpipe.
The Batavian still holds your bank on the square.
Do you dare! Reward this faithfully or fear revenge.

From this and from a printed explanation which accompanies No. 5728, it appears that the Englishman is in danger of falling because his 'Bank of Exchange' begins to fall aslant. America (though an infant), France, and Spain combine to humiliate him, only the Dutch skipper saves him from further disaster. The merchant of Amsterdam is 'in a dispassionate and quiet posture giving to each his due'. In Holland in the distance, 'no corn comes from the mills and the cows are being milked', probably an allusion to the toll of Dutch commerce taken by the English Navy and privateers, see No. 5628, &c. The Batavian holding 'your bank on the square' is probably an allusion to Dutch investments in England, which were attracted there by the higher rate of interest than in Holland, see Nos. 5717-20, 5724, here supposed to be maintaining British credit. England is warned that Holland is her sole protection against France, Spain, and America. Evidently designed before the capture of Bylandt's convoy (cf. No. 5712), see No. 5721 A.

The title is taken from the pamphlet which accompanies No. 5728.

No. 10 in No. 5728. Van Stolk, No. 4323. Muller, No. 4371.

$6\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5721 A*

Another state in which the design is surrounded by a heavy border of masonry with plants growing from the crevices between the stones, representing a wall through an opening in which the figures and the Dutch landscape are seen. The verses are engraved on the masonry.

Van Stolk, No. 4323. The drawing for one of these two states was advertised for sale at 'f 40' in the Leydse Vrydagse Courant of 29 Oct. 1779. Ibid.

$9\frac{3}{4} \times 11$ in.

5721 B*

A water-colour drawing, the original (or possibly a copy) of No. 5721. It differs in the arrangement of the bales of goods, &c.; across a sack lie two long-stemmed pipes. Perhaps the drawing advertised in 1779.

$11\frac{1}{2} \times 14\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5722 ENGELSCH NIEUWS.*

[ENGLISH NEWS.]

Engraving. Men grouped on the sea-shore with allegorical figures in the clouds above. They have numbers referring to a printed text in two columns beneath the print giving the words they are supposed to speak. There is no relation between a Dutch group, an English group (l.), and the solitary figure of Lord George Gordon (r.). The central group is that of a Dutch sailor (1), wearing striped trousers, who holds a paper inscribed Nieuwe Klaghten [Complaints]. He stands between (2) a man wearing a gown and bands, who admonishes him with upraised forefinger, and (3) Mercury with his caduceus, symbolizing Commerce, who is also addressing him.

Beside (2), 'Staatkunde' (Policy or Politics), is an iron-bound padlocked chest inscribed in hande, on which are money-bags, inscribed 600, 275. Beside it lie a scroll inscribed credit and a yoke. In the foreground is a paper inscribed Plan van verbetering [Plan of Reformation].

The Dutchman says 'The English must get to know us better, we ourselves know best what we should do. Trade and politics are always our business. I do not doubt but that the daily oppressions will turn out to the disadvantage of their perpetrators.' Policy advises him, 'Complain unceasingly, forget not to recite the violations of our coasts and ships in the strongest terms, hold fast to your friend Mercury, through him will you be welcome everywhere, and so long as he stays with you you will be necessary to, and respected by, all your neighbours; for since everyone would gladly be under his protection, so will each one always keep an eye on him. It would be a disgrace for a lion not to roar once if his tail is unjustly pulled, it is imprudent to provoke him, because he grants everything in reason, and it is known that he is generous by nature.' (For the Dutch lion see Nos. 5712-14, &c.)

Mercury says, 'So long as you remain a true Dutchman, I will not leave you. I am in my right place with you, for my disposition is rather to take care of myself than another. Your continual industry, your enterprise and reasoned though slow ingenuity, can make me flourish although the present times are very dangerous for me, but where can I now enjoy permanent rest, without being one day obliged to rise out of my little cell from my book of reckoning, in order to extend my thoughts and vision over more spacious fields.'

On the l. is a group of five Englishmen: (4), 'a very eminent Englishman', wearing a long cloak, evidently George III, stands with outstretched arm facing (5) 'Lord N' [North]. He says, 'Ah my dear Lord, what is wrong now, let your eyes feast once on this still unfinished picture, troubles within and without consume us.' He is pointing to a picture inscribed Het verwar de Eiland (the distracted Island), which a kneeling man holds up. It depicts the Gordon riots, incendiaries are burning a building. North, with a downcast expression, answers 'Let us treat this hot fever with which the entrails of the state tremble, even if it should become worse, on the old lines, like the Scottish affair, firmly but according to their wish. It is well, since we can now grant it as masters, but above all things do not leave out the words "since we now find it of service to us". A reward has been offered for the discovery of the Delinquent of Delinquents, but as regards foreign troubles, shall we begin with the Dutch? Their complaints, I fear, are not without reason, it would be fortunate if there were one among us who could discover the suitable remedy, we expect much from Lord Shelburne—but unfortunately a duke is indisposed, and thus an important matter intended to be settled as soon as possible, was held back. Our navy also ought one day to be overhauled. Rodney writes a great deal, but what avails a victory which decides nothing; daily we risk a frigate with officers whose conduct demands an enquiry—soon it will be as hard to get captains as sailors, yet this task Sandwich and the others can bungle. I hope Heaven may bless us all.'

Lord Shelburne (6), his back towards North and the king, puts a finger to his forehead as if in deep thought. He says, 'What a heavy burden it is to carry a weight which the whole nation might lighten, each new event encroaches on my schemes. The Dutch make ever stronger complaints, and now begin to threaten a little. The French have now a strong influence in that country, they do not obstruct their trade, or capture their ships, yet it is we who pass for friends and what is more, for allies.' With this group, but without a number, is a man seated on the ground in back view, writing.

On the r. Lord George Gordon (7) stands alone on a hillock, supporting his head on his hand. He says, 'Well begun, but not yet completed. Should the resentment of the passionate public not subside, what will happen to Gordon? It does not become a nobleman not to adhere to his purpose. People might say, "What is that hot-headed fanatic beginning to do? If he meant well, why is his country in such straits, filled with domestic disturbances and disasters? This is the conduct of a fool, and if he is not that, he must surely be a rogue, since he lays in wait in order to overthrow by violence and mishandling, when he was engaged on other business, suited to a proud nobleman, which never gave occasion for unrest and entanglement." But those who say this, may be pleased to know that our religion lies close to my heart, although many moral precepts, such as, love your enemies, . . . meekness of spirit, &c., I find rather difficult to practise. —To oppose the great influence of the Catholic doctrine, I would even support with my presence a question, a petition, but who knew that passion would go so far? . . . even to violence and arson—truly, I have nothing to do with it. Do not believe that I who humbly embrace the pure doctrine in my heart, can so far degrade my reason in order to trumpet forth my name everywhere, even if it should cost me . . . my life. . . . No, all my desire is for the salvation, alleviation and comfort of my fellow citizens, could my bonds only heal the wounds which the imprudence of zealots have inflicted on my worthy fellow citizens. Ah if only we were all like lambs and not like wolves in the sheepfold!'

In the clouds a helmeted figure (? Victory) holds out a picture of a small single-masted vessel with a crew of four men, on whose mainsail is an eye, it flies a pennant with three stripes. On the l. is the Dutch lion holding up a spear supporting the hat of freedom and a striped pennant. On the r. is a winged female figure (? Fame) with a globe on her head, holding out a laurel wreath towards the picture. She holds a cornucopia from which fall flowers and a hat.

At sea, between the Dutch and English groups, is a naval engagement between ships flying the British and (?) French flags. Behind Gordon (r.) are two parties of men firing at each other, a dead body lies between them. Black clouds extend over the heads of the English group (l.) and over Gordon (r.), above whom is a large flash of lightning.

The violation of Dutch coasts refers probably to the case of a French privateer which was beached off the port of Helvoetsluis in 1779, boarded and captured by English ships. It was the occasion of a protest to London from the States General as 'an insult to the Republic's sovereignty'. Van Loon, Fall of the Dutch Republic, pp. 248–9. See also three Memorials from the Dutch Merchants to the States General, 12 Sept. 1778, against search and seizure of Dutch ships bound for French ports. Ann. Reg., 1779, pp. 412 ff. For the incessant complaints of Dutch merchants see Edler, The Dutch Republic and the American Revolution, 1911, pp. 101, 105, &c.

North and George III discuss the situation after the Gordon Riots. They propose to repeal the Catholic Relief Act as it had been withdrawn in Scotland, see No. 5534. In July 1780 there were renewed proposals for a coalition ministry. The obstructive Duke is probably Richmond, who was unacceptable to the king. Corr. of George III, ed. Fortescue, v. 99 ff. Hist. MSS. Comm.; Abergavenny MSS. 1887, pp. 31-2. No overtures were made at this time to Shelburne, who is not mentioned in the correspondence, and who expressed indignation at the negotiation with Rockingham and retired into the country. Fitzmaurice, Life of Shelburne, 1912, ii. 62-3. Shelburne had, however, made an important speech on 1 June 1780 denouncing the English policy with regard to Dutch shipping as 'a most bullying and oppressive conduct', and interpreting the Anglo-Dutch treaties of 1674 and 1716 in a manner favourable to Holland. Parl. Hist. xxi. 629 ff. The 'Delinquent of Delinquents' appears to refer to the suspicion that the riots had been engineered by one of England's foreign enemies. For Rodney's victory, 16 Jan. 1680, see No. 5646, &c.

One of several prints showing the great impression made in Holland by the Gordon Riots, see Nos. 5725, 5728(13), 5734.

A reduced copy is No. 11 in No. 5728.

See No. 5723, an English copy.

Van Stolk, No. 4324. Muller, No. 4372.

$8\frac{1}{16} \times 12\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5723 THAT & THIS SIDE OF THE WATER OR DUTCH & ENGLISH POLITICKS.

Publish'd as the Act directs Sept'r 29th 1780 by W^m Richardson Engraving. An ill-drawn copy of No. 5722. The figures are numbered as in the original, but the explanation is missing. The thin Dutch sailor (1) is altered into a stout Dutchman wearing baggy breeches. His paper is inscribed, Fresh Complaint Whereas. The other inscriptions are translated. The picture of London in flames is inscribed Confus'd Island. George III and Lord North (4) and (5) have been altered to make them less grotesquely unlike their subjects. At Gordon's feet lies a document inscribed Protestant Petition.

$8\frac{3}{16} \times 12\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5724 DE WANHOOPIGE BRITTEN, EN DE VERNOEGDE AMERICANEN, OP DE TYDING VAN DIFFENSIVE ALLIANTIE, ON-BEPAALT CONVOY, EN GEWAPENDE NEUTRALITEIT!*

[THE DESPAIRING BRITON, AND THE CONTENTED AMERICAN, AT THE NEWS OF DEFENSIVE ALLIANCE, UNLIMITED CONVOY, AND ARMED NEUTRALITY.]

Engraving. Plate between two pages of printed explanation, to which numbers on the print refer. On the r. 'George Garther' (1), George III, sits on a pile of papers leaning his head on his hand, his elbow resting on a block on which is a document with pendent seals. At his feet are playing-cards, broken china, and papers. Behind him, North (2), his hands clasped in dismay, stands in front of a circular tent. 'George Garther' looks with a melancholy expression at empty money-bags and at the sealed papers of the recently concluded negotiations. He exclaims, 'Ah had we only dealt more tolerantly with our brothers the Americans, we should not have squandered such countless treasure in a useless war, and the English nation would not have such countless debts, but alas! Now we are in desperate straits and I am at my wit's end.'

(2) 'North, A well-known English Lord in a despairing posture . . . exclaims, "This neutrality, this defensive alliance, of Russia, Sweden, Denmark, Portugal,¹ the United Provinces, and all the Hanse Towns! . . . Oh Garther, Garther! [Garther] only now do I begin to become rightly anxious. I now see clearly that one cannot let the ship drift, as was foretold by No. 2 in the plate of The lion attacked by cunning and force".' (See No. 5712.)

Four Dutchmen in the middle distance are Nos. 3-6. (3) 'A master of a Dutch merchant ship sitting on a bale of sail-cloth and recounting with a joyful face to the Merchant (5), and the Manufacturer (4), various smuggling expeditions, which were carried out by himself and others in former times, and are still performed in these troubled times; he also tells of rough and unfair treatment inflicted on him by the English privateers, . . . giving the Manufacturer (4) a printed book called The Mirror of Youth or British Tyranny . . . saying, "read, read, my friend, what fine allies and friends of our country are the English; see here in this book what fine encounters the Dutch have had with their friends, and alas! allies".

(4) 'A Dutch manufacturer showing a Dutch cloth to Nos. 3 and 5, pointing out the good quality of the Dutch in contrast to the English, and lamenting over the decline of manufactures in our fatherland, and the trifling trade in Dutch manufactures; at the same time, telling not much good of the English, with regard to the displacing of our manufactures and the adroit collecting of our ready cash by alluring trade propositions and prompt payment of high interest.

(5) 'A Dutch merchant in a dejected posture informing (3) and (4) that in these troubled times he has not yet made so good a bargain as many of his confrères, and that it is good to fish in troubled waters, this he further learnt from an account of the Dutch merchant shipping which recently arrived in the port of Brest, and the Dutch convoy of Byland, thus escaping the attention of the English commodore Fielding at the right time, when the others were captured, at which he and other ship-owners, insurers, agents, skippers, &c. have recently made great complaints by memorials, because others who sail free and unhindered, rejoice greatly and make great profits.

(6) 'A Dutch distiller of gin and brandy pushes (3) on the arm with a full bottle of Hollands gin, asking him if he will offer George Garther and Lord North a Dutch drink since they both seem so anxious and downcast never ceasing to cry out "Oh this Neutrality, oh these 6000 Northmen on the sea, and then alas, twenty Russian war-ships and perhaps another twenty standing by. . . ."'

In front of the Dutchmen, two Spaniards sit on the ground in conversation, they are '(7), a Spanish Don and (8), a Spanish Duke . . . seeming to be in earnest conversation over the fate of Spain, as well at the present as in former times; they complain of the conduct of the Spaniards at all times, and at the seizures suffered by them during all the last wars as well as in the recent war . . . (7) now complains no more about the past, but rather at recent events, of the encounter between Rodney and Don Langara, and the sea-battle near Gibraltar (that great apple of discord) between Spain and England. . . .'

In the foreground (1.) (9) a French project-maker ('Project maaker') holds up a canvas on which are various animals to (10), a seated man wearing a gown who is 'a pious and demure Dutch philosopher'. He is showing 'some of the fables of the French De la Fontaine, as that of the Ape and the Cat, the Fox and the Ape, the Lion and the Bear, &c. whereat the Philosopher appears to marvel, . . . pressing his heart to demonstrate his anxiety at these fables with double meanings'.

¹ Portugal did not join the league till 1782; the allusion to Rodney's encounter with Langara as recent suggests an earlier date for the print.

In the background is the sea with ships, on the coast (l.) a cannon is being fired from a castle. Near the shore stands a man on a minute scale dressed as an American Indian holding a spear. He is (11) 'Massina Ramby [sic] an American, at a safe distance watching the turbulent English, French, Spaniards, &c. and himself speaking about the prudence, and the dispassionate and wise conduct of H.H.M. [their high Mightinesses the States General] and praising also the punctilious and praiseworthy neutrality so far maintained by the Fathers of the Fatherland. . . .'

Behind him two tiny figures manipulate a barrel on the sea-shore. They are (12) and (13), 'Balsepf and Jersey [sic], both well pleased and zealously continuing carefully to collect and pack the produce of their country to deliver it to the ships; at present they are not anxious about their Mother Country which has gone astray, but full of peace over their forthcoming independence and free trade, which they hope for under the protection of France.—I hope that they will not see themselves cheated of it, it would make my heart very sad for those good men.'

It was a burning question whether naval stores were contraband, as England contended, involving the principle of Limited Convoy, or whether they could be freely carried in neutral ships and covered by convoy, as France contended, the principle of Unlimited Convoy. F. P. Renaut, Les Provinces-Unies et la Guerre d'Amérique, 1924, pp. 217 ff. Edler, The Dutch Republic and the American Revolution, Baltimore, 1911, chap. v. See No. 5712.

One of a number of prints on Van Bylandt's convoy, see No. 5628, &c.; on the situation caused by Dutch investments in English securities, see Nos. 5717-20; on the Armed Neutrality, see Nos. 5713-16, &c.; and on relations in general between Holland and England, see Nos. 5712-22.

A reduced copy is No. 12 in No. 5728.

Van Stolk, No. 4325. Muller, No. 4373.

$6\frac{1}{16} \times 4\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5725 DAN ONDER DAN BOOVEN.*

[UNDER AND OVER.]

Engraving. The figures have numbers referring to an explanation printed in two columns below the print. The naked figure of Time stands (1) beside a large wheel whose hub is supported by a stand; he turns a handle attached to the hub with his l. hand. In his r. hand is his scythe, on his head is his hour-glass. He is 'keeping the wavering wheel of war in a continued motion'. On the top of the outer rim of the wheel are four figures: England (r.), holding a firebrand or torch, fights with France and America: a lean Frenchman seizes him by the cravat; America, wearing a feathered Indian head-dress, strikes him in the eye with her fist. These three are kneeling. Lower down the wheel (l.) Spain lies behind France watching the combat. 'Now the Englishman is shifting a little, the reason being that the Frenchman, American, and Spaniard have had abundant dealings with him and to profit by some good blows from the Englishman [who says] "would you fight against an Englishman? Then you deceive yourself, we might yet rule over the whole world, therefore it is the same thing if we have friends or foes”.’

Beside the wheel (1.) stand two Dutchmen. One (2), a ‘young, lusty Dutchman’ dressed as a sailor in a short petticoat, holds out his arms imploringly. The other (3), ‘a prudent statesman’, wearing a long cloak, puts a restraining hand on his shoulder. (2) is asking for restitution for the damages he has suffered. He says, ‘If you my lord consider me as not damaged in my honour and property, I shall one day see if I am always to be opposed by you. Be sure that my patience is coming to an end, and however haughty you may be, you should know that no-one can hold out against superior numbers, and you will certainly repent of it in the end. I put it to you once more . . .’. The ‘prudent statesman’ answers, ‘Calmly, calmly, Brother, and cease to ask vainly for restitution or to deliver memorials; will you secure restitution, then arm yourself and make good preparations. I have left no stone unturned to get their High Mightinesses [the States General] to face the danger but in vain. They may be English, but let us show that we are Dutchmen.’

A monk (4) stands behind Time, his arms outstretched towards a burning city (r.) in the background. Another spectator (5) also points to the conflagration. They are watching London, during the Gordon Riots; the monk says, ‘See those mad heretics making havoc, it is intolerable! Oh Roman Powers! Is that doing your duty? Punish such sacrilegious persons, or what will be the end?’ (5) is a ‘Protestant calming the monk’, he says, ‘Do not make so much noise my friend. I feel ashamed myself over the shamefulness of these doings. But these fellows did not respect their own king, but cut off his head, shall they then respect their fellow-citizens and not do violence to them. They are only fanatical and rebellious persons and for such scum one cannot venture; moreover we shall soon see what a glorious reward they will receive.’

A plea for war with England which differs from others of the collection in making no reference to the Armed Neutrality. The allusion to the Gordon Riots illustrates the preoccupation of the Dutch with the affair, see Nos. 5722, 5728 (13), 5734. A reduced copy is No. 14 in No. 5728.

Van Stolk, No. 4328. Muller, No. 4376.

5726 [TOESTAND DER ENGELSCHER NATIE.]* [? 1780]
[STATE OF THE ENGLISH NATION.]

Engraving. A copy on a larger scale of No. 5472. The ship is inscribed Eagle and the town Philadelphia as in No. 5472. With the plate is a printed explanation (verklaring) which is a translation of the original explanation in the Westminster Magazine, the allusion to the appointment of commissioners to negotiate with the Americans being omitted. The artist was ignorant of the evacuation of Philadelphia (June 1778) and the return of the Howes to England. The multiplication of copies of this print, see Nos. 5726 A, B, and C, and No. 5727, shows its propaganda-value as damaging to British prestige, and illustrates both the hopes which were entertained in Holland and France of securing the commerce with the colonies which England had monopolized, and also the belief in the efficacy of commerce-destroying in war, especially against a commercial country like Great Britain. See Mahan, Influence of Sea Power upon History, 1890, p. 539. It was also copied for American circulation in 1778 and (apparently) again in 1780, by Paul Revere, see No. 5472. See also No. 5859, a sequel to this print.

A reduced copy is No. 15 in No. 5728. The title is taken from the explanatory pamphlet which accompanies No. 5728. In the Verklaring it is den Staat der Engelsche Natie in 1778.

Van Stolk, No. 4287 (1). Muller, No. 4337 (1).

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 10\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5726 A [No title.]

[? 1780]

Engraving. A copy (?) of No. 5726 with the same inscriptions but without numbers on the plate.

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 10$ in.

5726 B [No title.]

[? 1780]

Engraving (partly coloured). A copy (?) of No. 5726 with the same (English) inscriptions. Beneath the plate is a printed explanation which is a French translation of (probably) the Dutch version of the English original. It differs in Nos. 4 and 5: Derriere la vache sont un François & un Espagnol; le premier, d'un air très-content, emporte une jatte pleine de lait; & le second, tenant toute prête une moindre jatte, semble en attendre sa part.

$6\frac{5}{8} \times 10\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5726 C [No title.]*

[? 1780]

Engraving. A copy (?) of No. 5726 or of No. 5726 B, the ship inscribed Aigle, the town Philadelphia, and with numbers on the print which refer to the French explanation printed beneath it which is the same as in No. 5726 B. With it is a copy of the printed explanation to No. 5726.

$6\frac{5}{8} \times 10\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5727 MAL LUI VEUT MAL LUI TOURNE¹ DIT LE BON HOMME RICHARD.

[? 1780]

Engraving. A copy of No. 5472 or No. 5726, or No. 5726 A, B, or C. It differs from all in having no name on the ship's stern, the town is Philadelphie. Below the title is engraved Sujet Mémorable des Révolutions de l'Univers. Numbers are engraved on the plate which refer to the engraved explanation beneath the plate, which appears to be a free translation either of the original English or the Dutch version: (1) Le Commerce de la Grande Bretagne sous la forme d'une Vache. (2) Le Congrès représentés [sic] par l'Américain occupé a lui enlever ses armes deffensive en lui sciant les Cornes. (3) Le Hollandois d'un air content tire la Vache. (4) Un François s'avance avec politesse pour avoir du lait. (5) Un Espagnol d'un air grave se presente aussi pour le même objet. (6) Un seul Vaisseau [sic] de la formidable Flotte Anglaise paroît seul et est embourbé pres Philadelphie. (7) Les Généraux dans l'inaction dans cette Ville. (8) Le Lion Britannique profondement endormie pendant qu'un petit dogue simbole de la vigilance lui marche sur le corps. (9) L'Anglais en deuil, consternés et abatu n'a pas la force de réveillé [sic] de Lion pour deffendre ses prerogatives.

'Le bon homme Richard' is a reference to Benjamin Franklin, then American envoy in France; it was the name given to the French ship (previously Duc de Duras) in which Paul Jones attacked the Serapis, see

¹ A translation of one of Poor Richard's maxims.

Nos. 5559-64. For the immense vogue in France of Franklin's Poor Richard's Almanack see B. Fay, The Revolutionary Spirit in France and America, 1928, p. 154 f.

Collection de Vinck, No. 1212.

$6\frac{1}{2} \times 10\frac{1}{8}$ in.

Another version is No. 1211 in the Collection de Vinck. The Frenchman, carrying off his bowl of milk, is walking on a peacock. The French text is identical with that of No. 5726 B and C, with the addition of the words, after 'le Francois . . . emporte une jatte, pleine de lait', et marche sur le paon, Symbole de l'orgeuil [sic] Britannique qui malgré la perte de sa plus belle plume fait encore entendre l'aigre son de sa Voix. It is without numbers on the plate.

$6\frac{1}{4} \times 10\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5728 ALGEMEENE STAATKUNDIGE KONSTPLAAT VAN 'T JAAR 1780.* TAILLE DOUCE POLITIQUE ET GÉNÉRALE DE L'ANNÉE 1780.

Engraving. Reduced copies of political satires arranged in five rows, divided only by lines, and numbered (1) to (13). In the topmost row are Nos. (1) to (4), copies of Nos. 5712-15. In the second row are Nos. (5) to (7), copies of Nos. 5716-18. In the third row are Nos. (8) to (10), copies of Nos. 5719-21. In the fourth row are Nos. (11) to (13), copies of Nos. 5722, 5724. (13) is not copied from a published print but was designed on a small scale to fill a gap in the plate. In the lowest row are Nos. (14) and (15), copies of Nos. 5725, 5726; they are divided by a rectangular space decorated with a conventional scroll of ribbons and bows, ornamented with the seven arrows representing the United Netherlands; in the centre is a group of a trumpet, horn, and palm-branch with an open book inscribed Staatkundige Fabel Rol. [Sheet of political fables.]

The printed explanations which accompany the original plates are re-printed in a pamphlet of 60 pages. It begins with Bericht aan der Leeser (title-page perhaps missing).

No. 13 is also described in this pamphlet:

[ENGLAND VAN BINNEN EN BUITEN BEROERD.]

[ENGLAND MISERABLE WITHIN AND WITHOUT.] [1780]

Engraving (part of No. 5728). A small coach (1.), in which a man is seated, is drawn by a number of men in place of horses. Behind (1.) are buildings on fire. In a river or harbour (r.) are ships. Above them are clouds from which looks out the sun with a face in it, sending out rays. From the cloud issues a scroll and a pair of scales, unevenly balanced, on each of which is a large book. In the foreground (l.) are buildings, probably intended for the Tower of London, a great crowd of people, and, at the water-side, a gallows from which three bodies hang. Isolated figures stand in the foreground. The figures have numbers referring to the explanation.

(1) is Lord George Gordon's coach, his lordship inside, drawn in triumph by the people of London. Beside the coach stands (2) the coachman, saying, ' . . . you my lord have henceforth no need of horses, still less of a coachman. Therefore I take my leave.' (3) 'Lord Gordon' says, 'You must stay you comical fellow, . . . it will not be for ever that I shall be treated like Wilkes'. (2) answers, 'So much the worse for me, good Sir, for if you lose the people's esteem, you run the risk of going to a place where you will not need a coach or even shoes . . .'. (4) A magnificent English lord (Heer) calls out in astonishment, 'What an honour! . . . I would rather be you than any king. . .'. (5) An elderly, intelligent, and experienced London citizen says to (4), 'You have not had much experience, . . . if Gordon only looks at the building before which we are standing, . . . so must he tremble with fear. Experience has taught me that the homage of rebels leads to rigorous imprisonment, yes, even to worse and more shameful things.'

(6) A dissolute English sailor says, 'Ha, it goes well, I see what I have long wished for. God bless Lord Gordon that he gives us this chance to satisfy the lust for plunder innate in the British nation on the pretext of challenging Popish liberties.'

(7) A virtuous, reasonable, and freedom-loving Englishman in a dejected posture says, 'Go ahead you scum, through you and your like, the honour of the English Nation is stained. All these tumultmakers, now leaping with joy, will surely wish to be called Protestants. But no, they are rather barbarians. . . . But it seems that Englishmen must always be astir. Why do they not look at our neighbour Holland? Balance and scales whereon lie the books of war and peace should teach us what is most beneficial for us. One might well liken the Blessed Netherlands to the great sun . . . which through her light lets it be seen that peace is better than war. No wonder that one sees in this picture, a letter flung from the sky, by the clamours and sighs of the Dutch, couched in these terms and written in letters of gold. "Nowhere is there any more freedom except in the Netherlands, God bless our high and mighty and beloved Prince." Yet there is nothing here for the British nation. Heavens, what a blow. The mighty power of gunpowder does the work and our ships are blown to pieces. This thundering voice will, I hope, sober the people. Ah, but no! for look at the conflagration made by the plunderers; on all sides rise up horsemen and soldiers, servants of the crown to oppose the Prince's own subjects, and what will their consequences be? Before long the gallows, which are there in the distance, will be covered with rioters. I am frightened and turn back, methinks the Heavens forbear to lighten on the building since Parliament is assembled. Ah I can no longer look. Heavens! to you I entrust our country. Give vision to the Prince, to the Ministry, to see that they give such consideration to affairs as do the States and Stadtholder of the Netherlands.'

For other Dutch prints showing the great impression made in Holland by the Gordon Riots, see Nos. 5722, 5725, 5734. The intention here seems to be to identify English sailors with the plundering London mob.

Muller, No. 4375.

3 × 5 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

The whole design, Van Stolk, No. 4329. Muller, No. 4361.

15 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 15 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5729 [A DUTCH VIEW OF GEORGE III, LORD NORTH AND OLIVER CROMWELL]* [? 1780]

Engraving. Beneath the plate is a printed verklaring (explanation), to which refer numbers engraved on the design. (1) George III (r.) seated on a throne in profile to the l.; two young men wearing trousers and feathered caps have seized each a leg and are pulling off his stockings. G.R. is engraved on the king's coat; he is calling for help: O Nord Nord.

(2) A man on horseback, to whom the king is calling, slowly rides towards him, a placard on his breast inscribed L. Nord King from London.

(3) A large head on a pedestal (3) inscribed, Uytvinder van Heersch en baatzugt (Inventor of ambition and covetousness) (1.), is intended to represent Oliver Cromwell. Three men (4) kneel obsequiously before it. Above their heads is (5) Justice, holding scales in her l. hand, and in her r. a sheaf of thunderbolts with which she is about to strike them down.

The king, who is being stripped of his clothes by 'good-natured Americans', calls Lord North to his assistance. Cromwell, as representative of English 'insupportable ambition and covetousness' is adored by 'some English lords' who are about to be struck down by Justice. Cromwell, however, wears a flat Tudor cap, and is a portrait of Thomas Cromwell (executed 1540), ignorantly mistaken for Oliver. For other prints showing the rancour with which Cromwell was regarded by the Dutch see Nos. 5718, 5719, 5730, 5731, 5732. Cf. also the Dutch prints attacking Cromwell for the Dutch War of 1652-3 and the peace of 1654: Nos. 741, 742, 754, 757, 784, 818, 844, 850, 857, 863, 866, 874.

7½ × 11⅜ in.

5730 GEWAPENDE NEUTRALITEYT

[1780]

[ARMED NEUTRALITY]

Engraving. A number of figures in pseudo-classical costume are grouped on the sea-shore. They have numbers referring to a printed explanation below the plate. On the extreme l. sits Justice, (3), enthroned beneath a canopy holding her sword and scales. Before her are two figures, both symbolizing the Netherlands (1) 'Vryheid' (Liberty), and (2), 'Voorzichtigheid' (Prudence). Liberty kneels holding up the hat of liberty on a staff, Prudence stands holding a caduceus and a book, at her feet are an hour-glass and an owl. In the centre the Netherlands are again represented by (5) 'Lankmoedigheid' (Endurance), a woman on hands and knees beneath a yoke which (4) 'Heerschzucht' (Ambition), a feeble-looking woman personifying England, presses on her shoulders. A man in Roman armour (9), 'Dapperheid' (Valour), personifying Denmark, stoops forward to raise Endurance from the ground; (10) 'Wysheid' (Wisdom), and (11) 'Sterkte' (Strength), representing Sweden and Russia, stand by approvingly, Wisdom (or Minerva), a woman with a helmet and spear, holds out a directing hand, Strength holds a large club and a sheaf of arrows. Behind Strength stand (13) 'Hoop' (Hope), with an anchor, and (14) 'Standvastigheid' (Constancy), with a pillar. Behind Ambition (r.) stand three other figures also personifying England: (8), 'Armoede' (Poverty), (6), 'Onbedachtzaamheid' (Thoughtlessness), and (7), 'Roofzucht' (Rapine). Poverty is a beggar woman with outstretched hand, a sack over her shoulder; a bird sits on her head. Thoughtlessness is a woman poised insecurely on one foot on a mound of sand. Rapine is a figure in Roman armour, a wolf by his (or her) side, a bird of prey perched on his helmet. On the ground at their feet is a torn document inscribed Traktaat Cromwell. On the extreme r. stands (12), 'Dankbaarheid' (Gratitude), a woman wearing an imperial crown with the arms of Amsterdam on her breast; beside her stands a stork.

In the centre of the upper part of the design which it dominates, an arm holding a sword emerges from clouds. From it are suspended by a chain the arms of Russia in an oval, surrounded by three shields, bearing the arms of Denmark, Sweden, and the United Provinces. Across them all is the motto Gewapende neutraliteyt, these words forming the title of the print. From other clouds (1.) a large eye directs rays upon Justice and the figures numbered 1, 2, 3, 14, 13, 11, 9, and 10.

From the explanation printed below the design it appears that Liberty and Prudence (the Netherlands) complain to Justice of the rupture of their alliance, the infringement of maritime rights, and the capture of their vessels: 'Are we then to sigh for ever! To be for ever the toy of ambition! . . .' Ambition says to Endurance (the oppressed Netherlands), 'This yoke is to gall her shoulders, whilst her commerce still ploughs the ocean, whilst her navy is still far distant or dispersed and her frontiers are devoid of troops and succour.' Thoughtlessness, Rapine, and Poverty, representing England, say, 'Whatsoever it may cost we must remain masters and whosoever does not act according to our wishes, we will rob him of his own, even though destitution should ensue.' Valour, Wisdom, and Strength, representing Denmark, Sweden, and Russia, say to Endurance 'Could we stint our courage, ability, and force whilst we see you attacked by the claws of ambition and love of plunder? No! We will save you and then will Thoughtlessness led by love of rapine probably bring about her own ruin. Gratitude (Amsterdam) says, 'To eternity we will not forget to offer unto you, O Valour, Wisdom, & Strength! our gratitude, if by your united forces we shall triumph over despotic and rapacious ambition.' Hope and Constancy say 'We will hope and be content, convinced that Justice cannot behold our oppression, without also rescuing the oppressed.'

The explanation ends with an appeal to the Deity represented by the all-seeing eye: 'O thou Supreme Being so just, assist with thine awful power those firmly-knit forces of war, may our fortune thus soon attain its height, then shall we with joy waft up to thee frankincense from our altar of thanksgiving.'

One of a number of prints which were part of the propaganda of the anti-British interests in the Dutch Republic (notably Amsterdam) which were eager for war. It expresses the exaggerated expectations formed of the Armed Neutrality; see Nos. 5713-16, &c.

For the rancour with which Cromwell was regarded see also Nos. 5718, 5719, 5729, 5731, 5732, the 'treaty of Cromwell' being that of 1654, which ended the first Anglo-Dutch war, see Cambridge Hist. of the Br. Empire, i. 224.

Van Stolk, No. 4331. Muller, No. 4378.

6½ × 11¾ in.

5731 DEN ENGELSMAN OP ZYN UITERSTE.* [c. 1780]
L'ANGLOIS A TOUTE EXTREMITÉZ.

A Lyon, chez Nicolas Ciseau, à l'Enseigne des Armes de Bourges.

Engraving. On the print are numbers referring to a printed explanation below the plate in two columns, Dutch (1.), French (r.). The Englishman (1) lies on a low bed draped with curtains; he is vomiting into a chamber-pot held by (7) a Dutch peasant. Standing behind his patient is an apothecary (2), holding a syringe which he is about to use. Behind the apothecary is an American (3), who wears trousers and a feathered cap. A crowd of doctors and apothecaries (4), some holding syringes, appear through a wide doorway on the extreme l. Their desire to succour the patient is frustrated by (5) a Frenchman, sword in hand, and (6) a Spaniard. Over the doorway is an oval medallion containing a head in profile to the r., perhaps intended for Cromwell. On the extreme r. through an open window two ships (8) are visible.

The French explanation:

1. L'Anglois couché sur un Lit, demande un remede à ses maux.
2. Un Apoticaire, lu Seringue à la main, veut le secourir.
3. Un Américain l'en empeche, en le retirant.
4. Une Troupe de Medecins & d'Apoticairees viennent en foule, avec des Seringues dans les mains.
5. Un François L'épée à la main.
6. Et un Espagnol, leur en deffendent l'entrée.
7. Un païsan Hollandois, tend le Pot de Chambre à ce Gourmand & regarde s'il ne vomira pas quelque Article du Traitez de Cromwel [Traktaat van Cromwel].
8. Etonnement de deux Batiments Anglois, qui viennent s'échouer sur les Côtes de la Hollande, & y apporter des richesses pour faire la Guerre à l'Angleterre.

England declared war on Holland on 20 Dec. 1780. For other allusions (direct and indirect) to the Traktaat van Cromwell see Nos. 5718, 5719, 5729, 5730, 5732.

For other Dutch prints on the relations between England and Holland before the outbreak of war, see Nos. 5712-30, 5732.

Van Stolk, No. 4333. Muller, No. 4379.

$6\frac{7}{16} \times 9\frac{15}{16}$ in.

5732 DE VERLOSTE HOLLANDER, OF DE GEDWONGEN DOG.

[THE LIBERATED DUTCHMAN OR THE CONQUERED

DOG.]

[1780 or 1781?]

Engraving. A flat landscape with the sea as background, into which a slightly raised causeway (l.) extends. In the foreground (l.) is a bridge (resembling rather an embankment) with a railing, over which leans a Dutch peasant pointing with satisfaction to what is going on beneath the bridge: on a wall supporting the bridge is a placard inscribed traktaat van Cromwel, this a woman is tearing down, while another woman looks from a doorway in the wall holding up her hands in delight. On each side of the door is placarded a portrait head in profile to the r. On the bridge are three prostrate bodies, or corpses, lying face upwards, on one of them (r.) a second Dutch peasant is walking in profile to the r., his arms outstretched towards America, in the person of an Indian brave with a girdle of feathers, who advances to meet him also with outstretched arms.

Between the bridge and the sea, on an ornamental seat or throne with a high back, lies a lion, small and of strangely dog-like appearance. Between his paws is a staff supporting the hat of liberty. A crowned woman (l.) advances towards the lion holding out a dish, in her l. hand is a sceptre. Behind the lion's throne stands Justice, holding her sword and scales. On the r. a Frenchman wearing a hat and sword holds on a leash a dog, which he forces with a scourge to lap up the excrement which comes from the lion. Behind the Frenchman stands a Spaniard, in slashed doublet, cloak, ruff, and feathered hat, he puffs with a pair of bellows into the Frenchman's ear.

On the causeway in the background an Englishman (l.) kneels in supplication before a Dutchman, who offers him a piece of bread. On the horizon (r.) is a town; some of its buildings are falling over and sinking below the sea. From the clouds a glory of rays descends upon the group of the lion, Justice, and the crowned lady.

Beneath the plate is a printed explanation here translated: 'A Dutch peasant standing on a bridge points with a satisfied smile at what is happening beneath it. On the bridge some dead Englishmen are lying, over whom another Dutch peasant goes to meet an American to embrace him, at which the American (rejoiced at the overthrow of the English) appears very well pleased.

'The lion, holding between its paws a staff bearing the Hat of Freedom, is sustained, that is, offered help, by a Crowned Woman, while a dog laps up the excrements of the Lion, being constrained thereto by a Frenchman, through love of the Lion, who holds the Dog on a leash, thereby signifying that he has been victorious over him. A Spaniard blows into the Frenchman's ear instructions for his further behaviour as regards the Dog.

'In the distance is seen, among other things, a decrepit Briton, who kneels before a Dutchman and is offered by him a piece of bread, whereat the Briton snatches greedily. There is also seen the English kingdom, already more than half submerged.'

As in other Dutch prints, the 'crowned lady' represents Catharine of Russia, giving aid to Holland by the Armed Neutrality. Holland is the lion, England is the dog. The 'treaty of Cromwell' is that of 5 Apr. 1654 ending the first Anglo-Dutch War. By it the Dutch had been forced (inter alia) to submit to the Navigation Act of 1651, embodying a policy which was renewed and extended after the Restoration, see Nos. 5718, 5719, 5729, 5730, 5731. For other Dutch prints on the relations between England and Holland before the outbreak of war see Nos. 5712-31, those on the Armed Neutrality being Nos. 5713-16, 5718-19, 5724, 5730, 5733.

This print may have been issued after the declaration of war by England on 20 Dec. 1780.

Van Stolk, No. 4334. Muller, No. 4380.
6 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 10 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5733 [ECHTE UITLEGGING VAN EENE ENGELSCH E KUNST-
PRENT.] [1780 or 1781]

[TRUE INTERPRETATION OF AN ENGLISH PRINT]

Engraving. The title is taken from a printed explanation which accompanies the print. The interior of a room in which a man sits on a chair (l.), legs crossed, in profile to the r., listening attentively to a man who stands opposite him at the other side of the room, gesticulating theatrically.

The only furniture, except the chair, is a draped table, somewhat resembling an altar, which stands against the centre of the back wall supporting a framed picture which is the 'English print' of the title. It represents a sea-battle, with flags unattached to ships; in the water rolled documents are just visible. High up on each side wall is another picture of a sea-fight, that behind the seated man being inscribed 1665.

The two men are an English 'lord' and his colleague, discussing the policy of war with Holland, as appears from the explanation here translated:

“This picture shows an interior. A large drawing is seen, upon which, in the background, is portrayed the stopping and plundering of Dutch ships. In the foreground is seen the capture of the ship in which Laurens had been, and his papers being fished up. Under this is hinc ill[e] Lacrimae] the remaining words being illegible. Moreover, it is shown that the whole picture has been heavily varnished over, yet in such a way that the varnish seems to be a film of vapour or smoke. But by some cracks at the side it is clear that the panel has been painted over, and that there was originally something else, under the place where the words are. It is also evident, from some tops of masts which can be seen appearing in places through the later painting—faintly, yet clearly enough for the flags of Russia, Sweden, Denmark, and Holland to be distinguished, showing that it was the Armed Neutrality which was first portrayed there; and therefore the cause of their [the English] action is not to be found in the present picture but was rather determined by their acting according to what was represented before, and that which is on it now was a handy way for them to give an appearance of legality to their actions.

“Before the picture sits a well-dressed gentleman. He seems to have wished to wash off the vapour or smoke, and is unhappy because he cannot manage it and is afraid that the secret will be discovered. A lord standing opposite him points at a picture which hangs on a side wall, and shows a sea-battle under which 1665 is written, and seems to say, “How now Sir! What do you fear? Collect yourself, consider what has happened, and believe that the courage of our heroes is not yet extinguished.” But the other, instead of being relieved by this, seems to answer him, “Yes indeed, Sir, I remember what happened all too well. But remember what the outcome was, never forget their heroes, think of de Ruyter, Tromp, Brakel, and the others, and consider that they still have heroes who are fully their equals. Just look at this picture,” pointing to a small painting hanging opposite him [r.], on which the Dutch expedition to Chatham is portrayed —“if they were to come again . . . !”

The first picture evidently depicts the English victory over the Dutch off Harwich on 3 June 1665, which was succeeded in 1667 by the Dutch entry into the Medway, and the burning of the ships at Chatham, cf. No. 5719. The papers which Laurens threw overboard when the ship in which he was sailing was taken by the English were recovered and showed that a treaty with Congress had long been under negotiation by Pensionary Van Berckel, on behalf of Amsterdam, see No. 5845, and was on the point of being concluded. The discovery was the occasion of the Declaration of War on 20 Dec. 1780, see No. 5825, the cause being the way in which the Dutch flag had long been used to cover French and American goods, including naval stores and munitions.

For the Armed Neutrality see Nos. 5713–16, &c. For the rancour left by the Anglo-Dutch wars of the seventeenth century cf. Nos. 5719, 5729, &c.

8½ × 12¾ in.

5734 WAARE AFBEELDING VAN LORD GEORGE GORDON, GEVOLGT NA HET ECHTE POURTRET.

[A TRUE LIKENESS OF LORD GEORGE GORDON, TAKEN FROM HIS REAL PORTRAIT.] [n.d. 1780 or 1781]

Engraving. A (supposed) room in the Tower of London. A man (very unlike Gordon) clasps his hands and exclaims in despair. He wears a wig, laced coat, &c., has black bushy eyebrows. The back wall of the room consists of stone arches, the two behind the prisoner (r.) being filled with a rectangular pattern of stout iron bars, through which appear buildings, a gallows, and the execution of rioters. On the extreme r. is the cart in which a man stands, another is suspended from the gallows. Two men stand below, one a clergyman; behind are the faces of a crowd of spectators, the masts of ships appearing above their heads. The arch on the l. of these gratings is filled with a heavy door in which is a small aperture, through which can be seen the head of the 'Warden' who is watching his prisoner, one finger raised admonishingly.

The room, though of dungeon-like appearance, is furnished with chairs and tables of elaborate design. On the r. is a round table with a festooned cloth, showing carved legs with claw-feet. On a round table on the l. are elaborately bound and clasped books and writing materials. Beneath the title is an explanation, of which the following translation is pasted on the print: 'Representing his Lordship in a wild despairing situation; occasioned by the News told him by the Warden of the Tower, viz. several of the Rioters and particularly Jack Ketch [cf. No. 5679] were hanged (which is seen; through the Grate), which News his Lordship heard with great astonishment, but without emotion; standing at a Table covered with victuals and drink: but as soon as left alone, he flew like a wild Creature, stamping with his Foot on the floor of the Prison (which is here represented to the Life); the noise which his lordship made, made the Warden return to look through the Wicket of the door to hear what was the matter, by which means he not only was an eye Witness, but who heard his Lordship exclaim with folded hands, O Heaven!—O God!—was I then to be the occasion to bring so many unfortunate People to this shameful Death! Commons of Britain, wherefore was I not understood. Never did I think of making a Riot (then he kept silence for some time—). After that with a frightfull loud Passion, he cried O God!—what shall be my Fate?'

One of several prints showing the impression made in Holland by the Gordon Riots, see Nos. 5722, 5725, 5728. Reproduced in De Castro, Gordon Riots, p. 208.

Van Stolk, No. 4337. Muller, No. 4389.

$7\frac{3}{4} \times 11\frac{1}{8}$ in.

1780

PERSONAL SATIRES

5735-5747

Series of Tete-à-tete portraits.

5735 N° XXXIV. THE ABANDONED WIFE.

N° XXXV. THE SEDUCING CAPTAIN.

Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr near St Johns Gate, Jan^y 1. 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xi. 625. (Supplement.) Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of a nephew of Lord Falmouth, evidently George Boscawen, and of the wife of a baronet with a large property in the W. Indies. She is evidently Annabella, second d. of the Rev. C. W. Bunbury, who married (c. 1765) Sir Patrick Blake of Langham, Suffolk, and St. Kitts. She was divorced by Act of Parliament in Apr. 1778 and subsequently married George Boscawen (b. 4 Sept. 1745), M.P. for St. Mawes 1768-74 and for Truro 1774-80. G.E.C., Complete Baronetage.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5736 N° XXXVII. MISS LUCY LEERWELL.

N° XXXVIII. THE CONSCIENTIOUS PARSON.

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate Jan^y 20. 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xi. 681. (Supplement.) Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the holder of a Yorkshire living who took part in the movement for relief of the clergy from subscription to the thirty-nine articles, subsequently resigned his living and officiated in a chapel opened in 1774. He is apparently Theophilus Lindsey, the Unitarian (1723-1808), rector of Catterick 1763-73, see D.N.B. Lucy is a wronged and unfortunate young woman who has attended his chapel, their relations being probably platonic.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5737 N° II. THE LOVELY MISS L—WS—N.

N° III. THE HARDY COMMANDER.¹

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate, Feb^y 1. 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Sir Charles Hardy (1716?-80), defending him from the sarcasms on his conduct in a late naval campaign: 'the caricatures in the shop-windows are the effects of insignificant poverty stimulated by calumny' He had been given command of the channel fleet in 1779 on the resignation of Keppel, and did not attack the combined French and Spanish fleet, his cautious policy being probably correct. J. K. Laughton in D.N.B. He died of apoplexy in May 1780. Miss L. (the seduced and deserted teacher in a boarding-school) claims to be the daughter of 'the celebrated Doctor L—ws—n' who became notorious because his absurdities were mimicked by Foote on the stage. A doctor John Lawson is mentioned by Munk (ii. 264) as 'a native of Middlesex but not a graduate in Arts or Medicine'. Admitted L.R.C.P. 1 Apr. 1765. In Foote's Diversions of the Morning, 1747, one of the characters was 'a certain physician who was much better known for the oddity and singularity of his appearance than from his eminence in his profession'. Baker, Biog. Dram., 1812, i. 246.

¹ H. Bleackley identifies him with Lord Howe, who is, however, also mentioned (though incorrectly) in the Tête-à-tête.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5738 N° IV. MRS LOV—B—ND.

N° V. LORD M—T—T.

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate March 1; 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Lord M., one of the smallest men in England, whose near relation Lord — shot himself because he could not pay a gaming debt at Arthur's. He is Thomas Bromley, Lord Montfort (1733-99); his father shot himself on account of debts, 1 Jan. 1755. H. B. Boulton, White's, i. 105. Mrs. L. is a widow, the daughter of an Irish father who traded for large amounts in America, became bankrupt owing to the political situation, on which she married her father's attorney L., whose death left her destitute.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5739 N° VII. MISS C—E.

N° VIII. THE ADMIRABLE ADVOCATE.

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate April 1; 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 121. Two bust portraits in oval frames, one (r.) that of a barrister in wig and gown. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-tête annexed; . . .'. An account of a barrister born in Herefordshire and of Miss Ch—d—le, daughter of an eminent cabinet-maker of St. Martin's Lane, evidently Chippendale, alleged to have been his mistress for two years. He is conjecturally identified by H. Bleackley as Howarth.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5740 N° X. MRS B—TT.

N° XI. ADMIRAL P—E.

Published by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate. May 1. 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames, that of the man in profile to the l. having a very large nose. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the amours of Sir Thomas Pye (1713?-85), which were in fact notorious, see D.N.B. Mrs. B. is the daughter and widow of a naval officer and is identified by H. Bleackley as Agnes Maria Bennett. They are said to have lived together for some years and to have several children.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{16} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5741 N° XIII. THE DRAMATIC ENCHANTRESS.

N° XIV. THE DOATING LOVER.

Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate June 1st 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames, better characterized than is usual in this series. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Mrs. Robinson (Perdita) and of George Capel, Viscount Malden, 1757-1839, Earl of Essex, 1799. G.E.C., Complete Peerage. His lavish proposals, and a pair of diamond ear-rings at the first interview, are said to have overcome the scruples of Mrs. Robinson, after she had rejected many other proposals.¹ Malden introduced her to the Prince of Wales, see Corr. of George III, v. 269. See also Nos. 5767, 5858, &c.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{16} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5742 N° XVI. THE ADORABLE ALICIA.

N° XVII. THE MANAGER IN DISTRESS!

Published by A. Hamilton Junr, near St John's Gate July 1st 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 289. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of George Colman (1732-94); the 'distress' alluded to appears to be his loss of the large fortune said to have been promised to him by General Pulteney if he would quit the stage and give up Miss Ford, his subsequent wife, here alluded to as secretly married to him. Alicia is a young woman of great beauty, the daughter of an impecunious army officer, who came to London to make her fortune by marriage and has now become Colman's 'ostensible and favourite sultana'.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5743 N° XXII. THE FAITHFUL MISTRESS.

N° XXIII. COL. W—.

Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate Aug^t 1; 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. Col. W. 'is descended from an ancient and illustrious family, who have for some centuries figured with great éclat in our history; having filled many important offices as well civil as military'. Of eight colonels and lt.-colonels in the Royal Kalendar, 1780, whose names begin with W., Sir John Wrottesley, Bart., Col. in the 1st Foot Guards, appears the most likely. The lady is a Miss Lennox, daughter of a gentleman keeping a boarding-school at Hammersmith, said to have been decoyed by a procuress, and rescued by Col. W.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

¹ Mrs. Robinson mentions in her Memoirs many persons who made proposals to her about this time which she rejected: they include the Duke of Rutland, Lord Lyttelton, the Earl of Pembroke, 'a royal Duke', a 'lofty Marquis'.

5744 N° XXII. MRS C—XE.

N° XXIII. LORD C—.

Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate Sepr 1; 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Lord Craven (1738-91). His extravagances and that of his wife Lady B— are said to have induced him to go to the Continent. She was Lady Elizabeth Berkeley (better known as the Margravine of Anspach); they separated in 1780. G.E.C., Complete Peerage. Mrs. Coxe's story as told to Lord C. is that she was a parson's daughter who tried to support herself by novel-writing, married, was deserted and destitute and became a prostitute, until taken under the protection of Lord C.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5745 N° XXV. MISS H—.

N° XXVI. THE VALIANT COMMANDER.

Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate Octr 1; 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 457. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of a naval commander, separated from his second wife, whom he had married for her fortune, and of Miss H., a relative of his first wife, who keeps house for him and looks after his children.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5746 N° XXVIII. MRS FL—D.

N° XXIX. SIR J— HOGSTIE.

Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate Novr 1st 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 513. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of Sir J. Hogstie and M^{rs} Fl—yd'. An account of Sir Joseph Mawbey, Sir Joseph of The Rolliad, the Southwark distiller, recently elected for Southwark. He is here the subject of ridicule, cf. Nos. 5190-2. Distillers kept large quantities of hogs, fed on the grains which had been used in distilling. An anonymous satire of 1773 beginning You I love my dearest life . . . has the couplet,

More than country squires their dogs
More than Mawbey loves his hogs.

quoted in G.E.C., Complete Peerage, i. 1910, Appendix H. Cf. No. 5829.

Miss Fl—d is a tricked, seduced, and deserted parson's daughter and milliner's apprentice whom Mawbey has established in 'an elegant villa near Vauxhall'.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5747 N° XXXI. MISS B—DG—R.

N° XXXII. LORD L—N.

Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr near St John's Gate. Decr 1; 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 577. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Lord Lincoln, recently defeated at the Westminster election, see Nos. 5698, 5699, it is here said, because he unduly despised his opponent's interest and influence. Miss Br—dg—r is the daughter of an eminent hosier, whose losses forced him to flee to Dunkirk; she therefore became waiting-maid and companion to a peevish spinster, at whose house Lord L. met her.

Ovals, $2\frac{7}{8} \times 2\frac{7}{16}$ in.; $2\frac{7}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5748 [LADY CECILIA JOHNSTON]

[Gillray.]

Publish'd May 18th 1780 by H. Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving. H.L. sketch portrait of a thin and elderly lady in profile to the l. Her hair is dressed high and decorated with feathers and lace.

She is Lady Cecilia Johnston (1727-1817), the daughter of Lord De La Warr, m. 1763, Lieut.-General James Johnston, known as 'Irish Johnston'. She was much caricatured by Gillray.

Grego, Gillray, p. 30.

$2\frac{13}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5749 [LADY (MOUNT) EDGCUMBE]

[? Gillray.]

Publish'd May 18th 1780 by H. Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving. Bust portrait in profile to the l. of an elderly woman, thin and of witch-like appearance. Her hair which recedes from her forehead is dressed high and ornamented with a lace cap.

A portrait of Lady Mount-Edgcumbe, who, like Lady Cecilia Johnston (see No. 5748), was a favourite subject of Gillray's satire; they both appear in La Belle Assemblée, 12 May 1787. She was Emma, d. of John Gilbert, Archbishop of York, m. in 1761 George, 3rd Baron Edgcumbe, cr. Viscount Mount-Edgcumbe, 1781, Earl, 1789. She died in 1807. Identified by Miss Banks.

$3 \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5750 [EARL OF HERTFORD]

[Gillray.]

Pub June 1st 1780

Engraving. Caricature bust portrait of Lord Hertford in profile to the r. His hair or wig receding from his forehead is in a black bag. He is wearing the ribbon and star of the Garter. He is Francis Seymour Conway (1719-94), then Lord Chamberlain, cr. Marquis of Hertford, 1793. See Nos. 5966, 6018.

Grego, Gillray, p. 30. (Reproduction.)

$3\frac{3}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{16}$ pl.

5750^A [EARL OF HERTFORD]

[Gillray.]

Publish'd 1st June 1780.

Engraving (coloured impression). Portrait of Hertford, similar to No. 5750 but reversed.

5751 I HAVE LOST MY STOMACH

[Gillray?]

Pub: June 1st 1780.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Caricature head of Lord Kelly in profile to the r. He is bending forward, his face bloated and pimpled, his lank and scanty hair in a black bag. Lord Kelly or Kellie, the 6th Earl, b. 1732, d. unmarried at Brussels in Oct. 1781. He had a considerable reputation as a musician. Cf. No. 6128.

$3\frac{3}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5751^A [LORD KELLY.]

[Gillray?]

Publish'd 1st June 1780.

Engraving. Portrait of Lord Kelly, similar to No. 5741 but reversed. On it is written in ink 'I have lost my stomach'.

$3\frac{13}{16} \times 2\frac{7}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5752 [LORD AMHERST.]

[? Gillray.]

Publish'd 3^d July 1780.

Engraving. Head of Lord Amherst in profile to the l. much caricatured. Amherst, as acting commander-in-chief, responsible for the suppressing of the Gordon Riots, was much caricatured..

$3\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{9}{16}$ in. (pl.).

5753 [COL. BODENS.]

Pub by M Darly July 24, 1780, 39 Strand

Engraving (coloured impression). Portrait (H.L.) in profile to the r. of a fat man with a small head and very thick neck. His wig has a small looped queue; he wears a small hat with a cockade, a very bulky great-coat, with a nosegay under his chin. George Bodens (or Boden or Bowden) was commissioned in 1762. A member of Boodle's, 'the fattest, best-tempered and most popular man in London', and a protector of Mrs. Mahon. H. Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, p. 279. See No. 5868. A companion portrait to No. 5754.

$2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5754 [LORD CLERMONT.]

Pub by M Darly July 24, 1780 (39) Strand.

Engraving (coloured impression). A companion portrait to No. 5753.

Lord Clermont (H.L.), wearing a hat, stands in profile to the l., his eyes screwed up, his mouth open as if shouting. He is very high-shouldered. He is William Henry Fortescue (1722-1806), cr. Baron Clermont of Clermont, Co. Louth, 1770; Viscount, 1776; Earl, 1777. He was looked on as the father of the Turf, winning the Derby in 1785. He was a friend of C. J. Fox and the Prince of Wales. G.E.C., Complete Peerage. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, v. 25-31.

$2\frac{13}{16} \times 2\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5755 A SPIRITED ATTACK

[n.d. ? 1780]

Engraving. C. J. Fox (W.L.), in the attitude of an orator, his head turned in profile to the l. His r. arm is raised and extended, the fist clenched, his mouth open as if shouting. In his l. hand he holds his hat. He stands with his feet apart. He is plainly dressed, except for a ruffled shirt.

Cf. No. 5878 where his gesture is less violent.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5756 BENJAMIN B.

[? 1780]

[G. Humphrey.]

Pub^d march 20 by H Humphrey Old Bond S^t.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). H.L. portrait of an elderly clergyman in profile to the r. with a long sharp nose and receding chin. He wears bands and an academic hood. One impression has been dated (by Mr. Hawkins) 1782, another has been identified as 'D^r Benjamin Buckler of All Souls Cambridge' [sic], i.e. Buckler (1718-80), fellow of All Souls, Oxford, where there is a portrait of him ascribed to Gainsborough. Below one impression is written 'My first Etching—G.H. May 1813', G. H. being identified on the back as G. Humphrey.

$6 \times 3\frac{13}{16}$ in. (pl.)

5756 A BENJAMIN B.

A close copy or perhaps an earlier version of No. 5756.

$7 \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ in. (pl.)

5757 THE ANTIQUARIAN MASTIFF

[c. 1780?]

F Grose Del: et Sculp:

Engraving. Caricature bust portrait full face of Michael Lort, D.D. (1725-90). He wears a bag-wig, squints, and his pug-nose and heavy jowl have something of the bulldog.

$3 \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5758 [PORTRAIT OF A VIOLINIST.]

[n.d. c. 1780?]

Engraving. An elderly man seated in a chair in profile to the r. playing a small violin or dancing-master's kit. He wears pince-nez, has a large nose and small pointed chin. His high toupet wig and pigtail queue suggest that he is Italian or French. He reads from music supported on a stand. The manner resembles that of the two Brethertons.

$7\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5759 EX MUSEO NEAPOLITANO.

[n.d. c. 1780?]

C. Bretherton fecit [sic]

Engraving. Design in an irregular oval. Bust portrait in profile to the r. of Gaetano Pugnani (1727–1803), violinist and composer. He has a grotesquely large nose, large arched eyebrow, and small slit-like eye. He wears a bag-wig and ruffled shirt. Under his arm is a violin.

5 $\frac{1}{16}$ × 3 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5760 NOSCITUR EX NASO.

[c. 1780?]

NOSEE NOSEE

J. Ironmonger inv.

Engraving. W.L. caricature portrait of a man sitting on a four-legged stool in profile to the r. He has a large sharp nose. In his l. hand he holds a paper inscribed Newgate Contract. On the ground are two papers, one inscribed To Mr Nic, the other, Speech ag^t City Place Bill. He is plainly and neatly dressed, his wig in a tight pigtail queue. Mr. Hawkins has written on the print Sharp an Ironmonger in Leadenhall Street. In the London Directory for 1780 James Sharpe, Ironmonger, is at 15 Leadenhall Street. The building of new Newgate Prison began in 1770 and was not finished until after 1780.

6 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.5761 THE DELIGHT OF PLY—(MOUTH¹)Pub^d by H Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street Jan 1st 1780.

Engraving. A fat man in profile to the l. climbing up a ladder to reach the seat of a phaeton, perched on springs high above the wheels of the carriage. He is identified by Mr. Hawkins as the fifth Earl of Plymouth (1751–99). Behind him (r.) appear the heads and forelegs of two horses (whose relation to the phaeton is obscure) held by a neat groom. To the head of each horse is attached a small closed sunshade.

This is in the manner of the series issued by Darly 1776–8, see Nos. 5369, 5370, &c.

13 × 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5762 A GARTER'D DILLY, OR MASTER OF A HORSE TURN'D TRADER.

A Critical Observer pinxt.A Queer dog fecit.Published as the Act directs, Jan^y 30 1780.

Mezzotint. The duke of Northumberland (caricatured), his arm round the shoulder of a lightly-draped woman. She holds a scroll inscribed 300 per Ann for life. He is wearing the ribbon of the Garter at his knee and a star. A small dog stands on its hind-legs behind him. Beneath the title is engraved, Solving a Problem in the Rule of Barter—O tempora! O Mores! Northumberland (1715–86) was Master of the Horse from 1778–80.

Oval, 6 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.¹ Depicted.

5763 AQUILA HAPSBURGHIIENSIS

['Lord de Ferrars delin'.]¹['Publish'd 27th May 1780']²

Engraving. The Habsburg eagle with a single head, that of a man in profile to the l. wearing a bag-wig, with a huge aquiline nose. On the body of the eagle on a shield surmounted by a coronet are the arms of the earls of Denbigh, who claimed descent from the Habsburg family, the Fieldings (including Henry Fielding) using as a crest the double-headed Habsburg eagle. Over the head is suspended a conical-shaped cap with an ermine border. Beneath the title is inscribed, Monstrum, Horrendum Informe, Ingens, cui Lumen Ademptum.

Quale Portentum neque militaris

Daunia in latis alit Esculetis, nec Juba et ellus generat, &c &c

Humbly dedicated to Garter King at Arms, and all other the Officers of the College of Arms, London.

A satire on Basil, 6th Earl of Denbigh (1719-1800), who was a Lord of the Bedchamber, Master of the Harriers and Foxhounds, and a strong supporter of the Ministry in the House of Lords. His features were given a political significance by Barré's description when denouncing Court Lords: '... with such a villainous aspect, squinting eyes and features so compressed that his hooked nose could scarce squeeze itself into its place, was so hideous that he had been persuaded it was not a human face but a mask' (13 Dec. 1770). Walpole, Memoirs of the Reign of George III, 1845, iv. 288. See also Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 102-3. See Nos. 5976, 6162.

11 × 8½ in.

5763_A [AQUILA HAPSBURGHIIENSIS.]

Engraving. The head and neck surmounted by the cap, copied from No. 5763; masked, in a lozenge.

3¼ × 2 in.

5764 ITALIAN AFFECTATION

REAL CHARACTERS

[Rowlandson.]

P^e 6^d

Pub^d According to Act Sep^r 1st 1780 by T. Rowlandson & J. Jones at N^o 103 Wardour St^h Soho

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Two Italian opera-singers, much burlesqued, singing a duet. The man (l.) is Pacchierotti, his three-cornered hat is clutched in both hands, and he sings with a love-sick expression. The lady with her arms outstretched to the r. looks upwards over her r. shoulder. Both are fashionably dressed.

¹ Written on one of the impressions in a contemporary hand. Walpole calls Ferrers 'a great herald'. Letters, x. 381.

² Contemporary note on the print. On another impression is written 'Publish'd 28th Dec^r 1780'.

For Gasparo Pacchierotti (1744-1821) see Mme d'Arblay's Diary, i. 155, 323, 324, &c. 'M^{rs} Sheridan declared [1779] she could not hear him without tears,' ibid., p. 187.

Grego, Rowlandson, i. 98.

8 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 7 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5765 A BARBERS SHOP.

[Rowlandson.]

Pub^d Acc^d to Act Dec 13th 1780 by T Rowlandson & I. Jones N^o 103 Wardour Street Soho

Engraving, partly mezzotinted. The interior of a barber's shop. A very old and completely bald man reclines in an arm-chair (l.), a cloth over his shoulders; a fat barber is about to place on his head a tie-wig. On the ground at his side lies a wig with a long pigtail queue which is being befouled by a dog. Behind, on a tall stand, is a barber's block fitted with a small wig. The barber's assistant, a lean man wearing spectacles and an apron, fits a small wig on the head of a stout man, who stands in profile to the r., his hand in his coat-pocket. On the r. is a lattice window in three divisions; a man sits in a chair facing the window. Wigs are hung up in the window. On a high shelf (l.) are round wig-boxes. Next the shelf is nailed up a print of Absalom hanging from a tree, while his horse gallops away. Beneath this is written in ink, Oh! Absalom my Son. If thoud'st worn a Perriwig This wou[ld] neever been done. The ceiling is raftered.

9 $\frac{7}{16}$ × 13 in.

5766 THE QUINTESSENCE OF QUACKISM, FOUNDED ON PRINCIPALS TRULY CHIMERICAL ÆTHERIAL MAGNETICAL, ELECTRICAL, & IMMATERIAL, & THE FOUR QUARTERS OF THE GLOBE RANSACK'D TO MAKE IT INGENIOUSLY REDICULOUS. DEDICATED TO THE EMPEROR OF QUACKS, BY MYSELF.

Publish'd as the Act directs .Oct 30th 1780. P. Mitchel North Audley St^t: Grosvenor Sq.

Engraving. Beneath the design is engraved a musical score with the words of a song. A burlesque representation of the quack doctor James Graham (1745-94), who opened his 'Temple of Health' in the Adelphi in the autumn of 1779. Graham stands full-face; he holds in his mouth the end of the tail of a monkey which sits on his head. The monkey holds out a duck by one leg, which is saying Quack Quack. Graham holds out in his r. hand a circular box inscribed Æthereal Pills. A medallion hangs round his neck, on which is a woman's head, inscribed Female Historian. She is Mrs. Catherine Macaulay (see index) whom he treated at Bath, so gaining his first start. He stands between two gigantic men wearing large laced hats and long coats; one, Gog (l.), in back view, the other, Magog (r.), stands full-face holding a paper inscribed Sketch of the Plan of the Temple of Health. These represent the gigantic footmen or porters who were among the attractions of the 'Temple' and who distributed bills advertising the establishment, see No. 6346 and Angelo, Reminiscences, 1904, i. 97.

Between them, and above Graham's head, the words Hail Wonderous Combination! are etched. By the l. margin of the print, two men are gazing at the spectacle, one clasps his hands in admiration or supplication. On the opposite side is a man grinning with two small boys who laugh and point, one of them a little chimney-sweep with brushes and sack. The song beneath the design begins,

See Sirs, see here a Doctor rare, who Travels much at home, Here take my Bills, take my Bills I cure all ills past, present, and to come.

Graham was a lavish advertiser, now chiefly remembered for his 'celestial bed'. At this time Colman was producing at the Haymarket the Genius of Nonsense, an extravaganza which 'faithfully delineated The Bottle Conjurer of the Adelphi', Bannister playing the 'Emperor of the Quacks' (Graham). Baker, Biog. Dram., 1782, ii. 134. For Graham see D.N.B. and Nos. 6323-7, &c. As the 'Bottle Conjurer' he is compared with the great hoax of the century, see Nos. 3022-7.

7 × 13½ in.

5767 FLORIZEL AND PERDITA.

Publish'd as the act Directs November 10th 1780

Price Six Pence

Engraving (coloured impression), beneath which is a printed song. Perdita (Mary Robinson, 1758-1800) stands in profile to the r. in the centre of a circle holding a wand which rests on her shoulder. In her l. hand she holds out a book, Essay on Man, to 'Florizel', the Prince of Wales (1762-1830), who looks at her with admiration, both hands raised as if dazzled by her beauty. She wears a high-crowned Welsh hat on the top of a pyramid of hair with its head-dress of lace and ribbons. He wears a loose tunic over Roman armour, a long furred cloak, and the insignia of the Garter. His coronet, decorated with two ostrich feathers and a leek, emblem of Wales, is falling from his head. Behind Perdita stands a man who points at her with his r. hand. His head is decorated with stag's horns, and in his l. hand is a paper inscribed Sr Peter Pimp: he is Thomas Robinson, her husband. The scene is probably the Green Room at Drury Lane. At Perdita's feet are rectangular and arched-top boxes inscribed Whitewash, Carmine, Dentrifice, Perfume, Pomatum; on the last is a paper inscribed To Florizel. Behind her is an elaborately carved sofa with satyr's legs, its head ornamented with a cupid and two birds. The wall behind is draped with a large looped curtain. Against it stand two ornate pedestals each surmounted by a tazza. On the wall are two medallions: the larger represents a nymph and goat-herd with two goats (?) and is surmounted by a cupid with a bow and arrow who wears a high-crowned Welsh hat decorated with a leek. The other is the profile-head of a satyr (?).

Mrs. Robinson played Perdita in Garrick's adaptation of the Winter's Tale in her last season at Drury Lane, 1779-80, and attracted the admiration of the Prince of Wales who sent her a letter signed 'Florizel', thus beginning a correspondence between Florizel and Perdita which led to her short-lived establishment as the prince's mistress.

The first meeting in the Green Room at Drury Lane is said to have occurred on 3 Dec. 1780, after the date of this print, Genest, vi. 136-7. For the liaison see also Corr. of George III, vol. v. 269; Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 350; Tom Taylor, Life of Reynolds, i. 345-6.

The song, Florizel and Perdita, is to the tune of 'O Polly is a sad slut! &c'. The second of eight verses is:

*A tender Prince, oh well-a-day!
Of Years not yet a Score,
Had late his poor Heart stol'n away,
By one of 's many more;*

The first of many satires associating the Prince and Mrs. Robinson. See Nos. 5865, 6115, 6116, 6117, 6221, 6263, 6266, 6318, 6319, 6320.
5¼ × 7¼ in.

5768 THE POLYGAMICAL DOCTOR [c. 1780]

Engraving. Dr. Madan (pilloried as the author of Thelyphthora a treatise on female ruin . . . which advocated polygamy) is seated on a chair against the wall (r.) at the back of the room; he rests his chin on two books which he holds in each hand. He wears a bushy wig and a doctor's gown which is turned up to show his knees and under-garments. A dog sits by his side barking; a cat on a shelf above his head stretches a paw to clutch his wig. In front (l.) one woman helps another to put on a pair of breeches, which Madan has apparently taken off. Both are fashionably dressed, and of meretricious appearance. Beneath the print is written Rara Avis in Anglia tres in una conjunctae; this appears to be copied from an inscription which has been cut off. Thelyphthora was reviewed in the Gentleman's Magazine for August 1780. It was the subject of two farces at Covent Garden, Thelyphthora or More Wives than one, by Pilon (8 Mar. 1781), and Chit Chat or the Penance of Polygamy by Welwyn (20 Apr. 1781). Genest, vi. 192-3, 194.

For Madan see Nos. 4470, 5496.

7⅜ × 8⅞ in.

5769 [COLLA DI PARMA] [c. 1780]

[Ph. L. de Louthembourg *del.*¹] [F. Bartolozzi sculp.² c. 1780].

Engraving. A pretty young woman, elegantly dressed, stands, her petticoats lifted up, while a lean and elderly man (l.) fits on false posteriors. She wears feathers in her hair, and a nosegay; she looks over her r. shoulder. At his side is a large pot, inscribed Colla di Parma [glue of Parma], in which is a brush. This is intended to indicate that he is the composer Colla born at Parma about 1730, who came to England about 1770, finally returning to Parma, where he died in 1806. From his coat-pocket papers protrude inscribed Abel riceuta and Cantata del Principe Chigi in occasione del apertura del Pantheon. On the floor is an oboe lying under a paper inscribed Cantata per il Benefizizio [sic]. By the pot are a lyre, a laurel wreath, and a paint-brush.

Colla married (1780) Lucrezia Agujari, 1743-83, known as la Bastardina, the famous soprano, who was engaged at the Pantheon for a salary of £100 a night. See Grove, Dict. of Music. She is the lady here depicted.³

Calabi, Bartolozzi, 1928, No. 2232.

5¾ × 3½ in.

¹ Written on the margin in an old hand.

² So attributed by Calabi.

³ Note by Mr. Hawkins. See also Mount Edgcombe, Musical Reminiscences, 1834, p. 10.

5770 IL MILANESE.

[G. T. Stubbs after Cosway.]

Published as the Act Directs mayth [sic] 25 1780.

Engraving. Portrait (T.Q.L.) of a man seated in a chair in profile to the r., addressing a rat which he holds in his r. hand, his l. fore-finger raised admonishingly, saying God dammuck the devil a bit nothing at all Signify to me, you be one damm Rat you broil very well. He is thin and old and wears spectacles, but is neatly dressed. His bag-wig is well curled and his shirt is ruffled. His r. elbow rests on an oval table on which is an open rat-trap; beside it lies the dead body of a rat, labelled for Supper. On the table (l.) are also a cracked chamber-pot and a wig-block. On the print is written in an old hand, 'Nobody Know wat sort a man I be'. On the back of one impression is 'Marini an Italian painter', but according to the Catalogue of Cosway by F. B. Daniell, this is Magnini a picture-dealer with whom Cosway probably quarrelled, as on the impression in the possession of Sir Philip Currie is written in a contemporary hand, 'Cosway had this print etched in ridicule of him'. Perhaps Gaetano Manini, painter, of Milan. $9\frac{3}{8} \times 7\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5771 THE CATCH SINGERS.

[c. 1780?]

REAL CHARACTERS.

Mezzotint. Three catch singers (H.L.) seated round a small circular table on which is a punch-bowl. Two sit facing each other in profile, each has a punch-glass in his hand; the one on the r. who resembles Lord Sandwich points his forefinger at his vis-à-vis. The third singer (c.) is on the farther side of the table, looking towards the singer on the r. and pointing with his r. forefinger to the man on the l.

The scene is lit by one candle standing on the table, on which are also a piece of music (l.) and an overturned punch-glass spilling its contents. A violin hangs on the wall (r.).

Beneath the design the words of the catch are engraved:

*T'was you S' T'was you Sir—
I tell you nothing new Sir,
T'was you that kiss'd the Pretty Girl—T'was you S' you.*

 $4\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

In book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

5772-5776

A set of prints by William Austin.

5772 BRITISH INVALID DRIVING FOREIGN ANIMALS FROM PROCEEDING TO THE CAMP.

W^m Austin inv^t et sculp^tLondon Published as the Act directs Jan^y 1. 1780.

Engraving. On the l. is a troupe of men with performing bears and monkeys. On a bear's back sits a monkey. The cavalcade is starting back in alarm at the sight of a countryman and his wife advancing towards them across a stream. The men with the animals, from their ragged foppishness and lean and vagabondish appearance, are evidently intended for Frenchmen. The bear leader, wearing a bag-wig and ruffled shirt, plays a trumpet. Behind is a monkey dressed as a petit-maitre with a sword and bag-wig. The countryman (r.) threatens the troupe with a crutch, his hat has fallen into the stream. The woman rides a donkey which is braying at the bears; she has let go the ducks and hens which she was carrying, a basket of eggs is being upset and the contents of a barrel are pouring out. A dog barks violently. In the distance are tents. Beneath the title is engraved You vile pack of Vagabonds what do you mean.

$9\frac{7}{8} \times 12\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5773 THE SPANISH DONS OVERTAKEN BY AN ANCIENT BRITON IN ATTEMPTING THEIR ESCAPE. [1 Jan. 1780]¹

W^m Austin inv^t et sculp^t

Engraving. A soldier on a great horse holds a rope attached to the legs of two prisoners who sit behind him facing the animal's tail; a drawn sword is in his r. hand. Behind (r.) is a haystack, on the top of which are two other Spaniards, much alarmed at the approach of a countryman who threatens them with his pitch-fork. A man and woman (l.), both wearing coats with military facings, watch the scene; she points, he looks through a small telescope. In the foreground a sow and three young pigs are galloping. In the background is the sea, with fishing-boats.

$9\frac{7}{8} \times 12\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5774 RECRUITING SERJEANT AND CONTENTED MATES.

[W. Austin.]

London Published as the Act directs 1st Jan^y 1780.

Engraving. A thin man wearing a coat with military facings, draws after him (r. to l.) a small four-wheeled carriage, similar to a bath-chair or perambulator, inscribed Cox Heath. In it sits a child with a doll. A dog stands at her feet barking at the man who draws the carriage, who has a bundle strapped to his back, apparently containing hay. At the back of the carriage in the place of a footman stands a ragged dwarfish man. On the farther side of the carriage is a recruiting sergeant playing a fife. In the foreground (r.) a fat woman, the wife of the man drawing the carriage, walks along carrying a basket containing bottles and a large umbrella in her r. hand; a musket is tucked under her l. arm. She and the three men all wear oak-leaves in their hats. In the distance the tents of the camp are indicated. An inscription beneath the title has been cut off.

One of a number of satires on the militia and the camp of Coxheath, see No. 5523, &c.

$10 \times 12\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5775 FRENCH SPIES ATTACKED BY BRITISH BEES ON THEIR FIRST LANDING. 5.

W^m Austin inv^t et sculp^t

London. Published as the Act directs 1st Jan^y 1780:

Engraving. Two grotesquely caricatured Frenchmen attacked by a swarm of bees. One (l.), who is very lean, wearing a bag-wig and the huge jack-boots worn by French postilions, fires a pistol at the bees. The other waves his hat, flourishing a cutlass; bees are in his hair, which stands on end, his long pigtail queue streams out in the wind. On the extreme l. appear the head and arms of a Frenchman who appears to be lying on the ground; he has dropped his cane and is clasping his hands, a small poodle also appears to be in distress. On the r. is the sea, with fishing-boats. On the edge of the shore is a Frenchman on a horse whose head, like that of his rider, is being attacked by bees—the horse is kicking violently. In the distance on the r. are soldiers, with muskets, their officer on a horse. Beneath the title is engraved, Mon Dieu they make my Hair all stand on end.

¹ Publication line cut off.

$9\frac{3}{4} \times 12\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5776 PUBLIC ORDINARY

[W. Austin.]¹

London. Published as the act directs 1st Jan^y 1780: by Robert Wilkinson at N^o 58 in Cornhill.

Engraving. Men and women eating in the open air, at a table, some sitting, others standing. In the background are the tents of a camp; in the middle distance (r.) eight men and women holding hands are dancing in a ring. A man of grotesque appearance, one eye covered with a circular patch, sits full-face, plying a knife and fork. Behind him stands Wilkes, who is chucking a pretty maid-servant under the chin so that she spills the wine which she has just poured out. This attracts the amused attention of a man standing behind Wilkes, and of one sitting at the table. The other figures are indicated only by their heads, which are perhaps portraits: there are two women of attractive appearance, one, whose high-dressed hair is decorated with feathers, the other with a hat trimmed with a cockade and feathers; a grotesque-looking old man with unkempt hair who is drinking wine; an old man with a grenadier's cap. A man seated on the bench shows only a wig and a broad back. On the bench is also a sucking-pig which a dog is seizing. On the ground are bottles, a pile of plates, and a brimming punch-bowl. Two cocks (r.) are fighting.

Beneath the title is engraved Oh what a charming Thing is eating. One of many satires on militia camps, especially that at Coxheath, see No. 5523, &c.

5777 THE MINOGOAT.²

[c. 1780?]

[W. Austin.]

Engraving. The interior of a fruiterer's shop. Behind a counter sits a man (l.) with long goat's horns and a goat's beard. He holds up his hand with an expression of dismay at a man who shows him a bust portrait of himself with horns and beard. The man, who wears a cockaded hat, is laughing. His arm is held by a man who stands behind him smiling and pointing a cane at the horned man, or 'Minogot'. The latter's hand rests upon the counter on a sheaf of newspapers: Gazeter, London Spy, Morning Her[ald], London Chronicle, London Gaz[ette]. A dwarfish newsboy stands in front of the counter blowing his horn, and offering him the Morning Post. The boy is very bandy-legged; his cap is decorated with a leek, suggesting that it is St. David's day. On the ground (r.) is a basket containing pottles of fruit which a goat is befouling.

¹ On the print is written in ink 'Austin. J. fecit'.

² Mino is an obsolete form of mina, myna, &c., the talking jackdaw of India. It was used in combination, as mino-grackle (O.E.D.). Perhaps used here to mean a chattering goat.

In what appears to be an inner room or recess (r.) a table is laid with dishes of fruit, glasses, and an urn; four people are seated at it: a man and woman laughing and talking together in an absorbed way; a man who points out this couple to a companion. Wilkes (unmistakable from his squint) stands behind holding out his hat.

Fruit hangs in the panes of the shop window which is immediately behind the Minogoat, who appears to be a Welsh shop-keeper. On the upper and lower margins of the print ten lines of verse are engraved, beginning,

*Come & purchase poor Taff's dainty cakes & fine Fruit,
Hur will give you Lies, Noise, News & Nonsense to boot.*

This print cannot be earlier than Nov. 1780, as the first issue of the Morning Herald was on 1 Nov. 1780.

9 × 13 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5778 FRONTISPIECE [to the Town and Country Magazine]

Dighton del.

Published as the Act directs 1st Feb^y 1780.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, vol. xii. A woman, fashionably dressed and of rather meretricious appearance, holds in her hand a number of the magazine, the open page showing a Tête-à-tête engraving, to which she points angrily, looking towards Mercury holding a caduceus, who sits (r.) one foot resting on three bound volumes; he points at the open page with a mocking smile. A grinning face looks over his shoulder with a hand pointing also at the open magazine. Behind the lady (l.) is a leering satyr, a bound volume under his l. arm, his r. finger laid against his nose. At the lady's feet are another number of the magazine open at a Tête-à-tête, and a closed number inscribed Town and Country Magazine 1780. The background is of pseudo-classical architecture with a heavily draped curtain.

The lady is angry at finding herself the subject of a Tête-à-tête, the chief feature of the Town and Country Magazine, see Nos. 4903-12, &c.

5 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 3 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5779 THE RECRUITING CUCKOLD. A SONG.

[? Gillray.]

Publish'd Feb^y 4th 1780 by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand. Pr. 6^d

Engraving. Three women are recruiting: a tall woman (l.) holds up her r. hand in an appeal for recruits, in her l. is a long staff surmounted by stag's horns; she wears a gorget and military coat, a looped hat with a feather is on her high-dressed hair; a short stout woman (c.) beats a drum. She wears a very low-cut dress with a grenadier's cap. A woman (r.) wearing a hat in the prevailing fashion blows a flute. Behind them (l.) march a company of recruits, their hats decorated with horns. On the r. is a group of spectators; a thin man looks at the women through his glasses, a woman puts her arm on his shoulder. Beneath the design a song of four verses is engraved in two columns: the first being,

*Since the Foes of Old England so Saucy appear,
And the land is in danger, from Spain & Monsieur,
For each Subject to Arm, in the Nation's defence,
Is the Language of Reason, the Language of Sense,
Like bold Volunteers, let each Cuckold attend,
For Cuckolds we know—have their Horns to defend!
Come Cuckolds, Come! Come!
At the Sound of the Drum!
These boasting Invaders, we soon will drive Home.*

For satires on the militia and militia camps see No. 5523, &c.
5 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5780 [HEADS.]

I. Mortimer del¹

C. R. Ryley fecit.

Publish'd as the Act directs, by C. R. Ryley March 1st 1780.

Engraving. Heads arranged in three groups, almost all gazing intently with varying expressions. Two of the groups are theatrical in character; the lowest group appears to have been sketched from life: a row of four profile heads, caricatured, looking intently over a barrier protected with spikes; a woman's head, full-face, is at one end (l.) of the row; at the other a man looks over his shoulder. They are probably seated in the gallery of a theatre. The dresses suggest the period 1778-9.

10 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. (clipped).

5781 [SKETCHES IN CARICATURE.]

ƒ. Mortimer del^t

C. R. Ryley fecit.

Publish'd as the Act directs, by C. R. Ryley March 1st 1780.

Engraving. An arrangement of profile heads, with three W.L. figures, apparently taken from a sketch-book. Five of the heads, all in profile to the l., are of men wearing academic dress: mortar-board, gown, and bands. Of the W.L. figures one, a seated man draped in robes, is not caricatured, and is perhaps an artist's model. The other two are on a smaller scale, one is in academic dress, the other is a doctor with an enormous syringe held over his l. shoulder; he wears a voluminous coat or gown. A H.L. sketch of a man similarly dressed with his hands in a muff is perhaps of the same person.

11 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 9 (clipped).

5782 SUNDAY EVENING.

ƒ. N. [Nixon?] fecit.

Pub^d March 29, 1780 by W. Wells, Printseller N^o 132 opposite Salisbury Court, Fleet Street.

Engraving (coloured impression). Two London citizens driving home from their Sunday outing, along a country road, by a milestone (r.) III Miles from London. They sit side by side in a small two-wheeled cart drawn by a diminutive horse or pony. Both are smoking long pipes. The one who holds the reins (l.) is gazing reflectively at the scene on his r., he wears a hat, but has taken off his wig which is on his knee.

¹ Mortimer died 4 Feb. 1779.

6 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5783 HE WOU'D BE A SOLDIER, &c.

R. Dighton delin'

London. Printed for J. Smith, N^o 35 Cheapside, and R. Sayer and J. Bennett, N^o 53 Fleet Street, as the Act directs, August 1st 1780.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of a fat citizen-soldier walking or marching in profile from r. to l. He holds a bayoneted musket in his l. hand against his shoulder. In his r. is a nosegay which he holds to his face. He wears a cockaded hat, a coat with military facings, a ruffled shirt, crossed bandolier, and spatterdashes. His curled wig has a long pigtail queue.

After the Gordon riots had been suppressed by the army, 'Military Associations' were formed in the City and in several other parishes, both to guard against further disturbances and to show that the use of troops was unnecessary, cf. No. 5687, &c. This soldier is, however, probably one of the London Trained Bands.

No. 5784 is a sequel to this print.

6 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 5 in. (pl.).

5784 THE SOLDIER TIRED OF WARS ALARMS.

[R. Dighton.]

Published as the Act directs Sep^r 6th 1780 & Sold at N^o 132 Fleet Street.¹

Engraving. The citizen-soldier of No. 5783 stands at his bench, wearing an apron. He is looking intently at his own caricature, He wou'd be a Soldier, see No. 5783, which he holds in his l. hand. In his r. is an implement for rolling or pressing, and on the bench are small disks, perhaps indicating that he is a button-maker. On the ground at his feet lie his hat, musket, bayonet, bandolier, and cartouche box, the last decorated with the City Arms. His shoes are unbuckled, his stockings ungartered, his breeches unbuttoned at the knee.

'The Soldier tired of War's Alarms' was sung by Ann Catley at Marylebone Gardens in 1771. Wroth, London Pleasure Gardens of the Eighteenth Century, 1896, p. 105.

6 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 5 in.

5785 HE LEADS THE—VAN—AGAIN,

Pub by M Darly Aug^t 26 1780 39 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A fat citizen-soldier marching in profile from l. to r. A cartouche box attached to his bandolier flies out behind him. In his r. hand is a musket. His hat has an oval ornament in place of the usual cockade. On his bandolier he wears a flat brush indicating his trade. He marches on a flag-stone pavement; behind is the dome of St. Paul's; two steeples and tall houses are freely sketched.

¹ The address of W. Wells.

A caricature of Thomas Vanhagen, 'a famous fat pastry cook', who had a shop facing the north gate of St. Paul's, and held a commission in the trained bands or city militia. E. Hardcastle [W. H. Pyne], Wine and Walnuts, 1823, ii. 204. He was Common Councillor for the Ward of Farringdon Within in 1780.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Another impression with the publication line, Pub by W. Wells Aug^t 26 1780 N^o 132 Fleet Street, Darly's name, &c., having been obliterated.

5786 THE CHESELD¹ SOLDIER, RETURN'D TO BUISNESS, OR THE NEWGATE STR—T BUTCHER

[T. Colley?]

Pub Accor: to Act Oct 5 1780 by T. Colley N^o 288 Strand.

Engraving. A fat butcher, full-face, stands beside his block. In his l. hand is a calf's head, in the r. he holds up a knife. He wears a wig, an apron, and over-sleeves from wrist to elbow. His musket leans against his block, on which is a joint of meat. His cockaded hat, bandolier, and bayonet hang together on the wall behind him. A caricature of a member of the London Trained Bands or of the London Military Association which had sprung into activity after the Gordon Riots, as soon as the troops had secured the City from danger, see No. 5687, &c.

$8\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5787 FEILD DAY, OR THE ADJUTANT IN A BUSTLE,

[? 1780]

Pub by W. Holland N^o 50 Oxford Str^t

Engraving. A short and fat military officer in uniform walking in profile from r. to l. He is raising his hat in salutation of some passer-by. His hair is in a very small pigtail queue which sticks our rigidly. He wears a sash, sword, and spurred top-boots. He resembles the caricature of Captain Grose, called 'a Gross Adjutant', see No. 5511. Possibly, however, this is intended for some adjutant called Feild.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5788 ALL JOY AND TRANQUILLITY HIGH LIFE AND FESTIVITY AS LONG AS WE LIVE.

Publishd as the Act Directs Nov^r 1. 1780 by W. Phelps²

Engraving. It decorates a printed list of lottery schemes for raising sums of from one to five millions, the prizes being annuities of from £20,000 to £2 a year, the tickets costing from £100 to £20. Two marginal columns of explanatory text headed 'Plate the Second. To the Public', show that the schemes are not ironical.

¹ A rope-maker called Chesel appears in the London Directory for 1780. Chesel is an obsolete form of chisel or chesil, small pebble, gravel, or shingle.

² The sheet is Published as the Act directs, November 1, 1780, and Sold by Messrs. Almon and Debrett, in Piccadilly; Messrs. Bull, Ludgate Hill; Edward Hedges, at the Royal Exchange; and James Mathews, No. 18 in the Strand, near Charing-Cross.

Price one-shilling and sixpence Plain, and Two shillings colour'd.

[Entered at Stationers Hall.]

A lottery wheel stands on the r. surmounted by a crown, on two panels is an A, that on the l. being surmounted by a crown. The third panel (l.) is concealed by Fortune, a woman in pseudo-classical draperies, who holds up a scroll inscribed 20:000£ which she has just drawn; she is blindfolded; her r. hand rests upon a coach-wheel. A coach drives off (l.), a fortunate couple seated inside it clasp hands; the lady holds a scroll inscribed 10,000£ P^r annum for our Lives. The footman behind the coach waves his hat, a scroll coming from his mouth is inscribed 50£ P^r Annum. Between the coach and the lottery-wheel prize-winners are dancing in glee, scrolls coming from their hands or mouths showing what prizes they have won; a woman in a cap and apron waves 1000£ P. Annum; a man waves his hat and a scroll inscribed 5000£ P^r Annum. Figures in the background have won 2000£ . . . , 40£ . . . , 100£ . . . , 100£ . . . , 400£ . . . , 5£ P^r Annum.

According to the accompanying text, 'Had such Plans as these been adopted when I first offered them in the year 1773 when the Stocks bore a good Price . . . I am bold to say, this Nation would have been Thirty Millions less in debt at least; the War might have been carried on with Vigour, and not a single Tax laid on any Article whatsoever . . . and by this Time that unnecessary word Financier erased out of the English Dictionary'.

One of a series, the first plate dated 1 May 1780, the third, 1 Mar. 1781. See No. 5834.

$3\frac{5}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5789 THE LOTTERY ADVENTURERS

London, pub^d as the Act directs Dec^r 1st 1780, by Rob^t Wilkinson at N^o 58 Cornhill.

Engraving. A design in two compartments, one (l.) inscribed Prize, the other Blank. On the l. a man stands holding out in his r. hand a ticket inscribed 20^m000, he smiles, saying,

*I own I had enough before,
Yet this is pleasing to be Sure.*

His l. hand is in his waistcoat pocket. Behind him (l.) is a lottery-wheel, surmounted by a crown, its panels inscribed G.R., beside it is another wheel in back-view.

On the r. the loser stands frowning, his chin resting on a stick held in his r. hand; in his l. is a ticket inscribed Blank. His waistcoat pockets are turned inside out. Behind him are two lottery wheels.

Beneath the winner is inscribed:

*One Hand in his Pocket, in t'other a Prize,
What Joy is exprest, in this lucky ones Eyes!
O; Fortune; we know, thou art a frolicksome Jade,
Tho; this you've raised high, you've the other, betrayd.*

Beneath the loser:

*How gloomy alas; this poor Fellow is seen,
His Luck is sufficient, to give him the Spleen,
In chance Work he must deal, like those in high Rank,
He's emptied his Pockets, to buy him a Blank.*

This print was published during the drawing of the lottery for 1780, which began on 16 Nov., the thirty-sixth day's drawing being on 28 Dec. London Chronicle, 16-18 Nov. and 28-30 Dec. For lotteries see also No. 4077, &c., and index.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 11$ in.

5790 "AH, GRANT A ME VON LETEL BITE".

[Gillray.]

London. Publishd Dec^r 1st 1780 by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand

Engraving. Design in a circle. Two boys (T.Q.L.) stand against a stone wall. An English boy (r.) with tousled hair and wearing a shirt which is out at elbows, holds a large bone in both hands. Ribs of beef project from the pocket of his apron. He is perhaps intended for a butcher's boy. A French boy (l.) stands beside and slightly behind him, the tips of his fingers held together, begging for 'von letel Bite'. He wears a toupet-wig and bag, and is fashionably dressed. This is the familiar theme of the foppishly dressed but starving Frenchman. Cf. Nos. 5611, 5612.

Diam., $5\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5791 BRUTALITY DISPLAY'D, IN A LATE INSTANCE NEAR TRUMP STREET.

Pub^d as the Act directs 26 Dec^r 1780 & Sold at N^o 132 Fleet Street.

Engraving. A man (l.) is pushing and kicking into the street from the door of a house a young woman with an infant in her arms; another woman is with her, clasping her hands in despair; both are clad only in shifts, and have bare feet. The man wears a nightcap, waistcoat (unbuttoned), shirt, and breeches which are unbuttoned at the knee. A building on the opposite side of the street (r.) is in flames, outside it a small detachment of soldiers stands at attention, beyond them a crowd is indicated. A fireman directs a stream of water at the blaze. Over the door in which the man stands is inscribed . . . APMan, Stationer. A side street at r. angles to the house is Lawrence Lane. In the background a steeple appears, beyond or upon a high building.

Lawrence Lane is a turning off Cheapside. In 1780 William Chapman, stationer, lived at 36 King Street, Cheapside. London Directory, 1780.

$7\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5792 AN ENGLISHMAN'S DELIGHT OR NEWS OF ALL SORTS.

Published as the Act directs 30 Dec^r 1780 by W. Richardson N^o 68 high Holborn

Engraving. A newsboy blowing his horn as he runs from l. to r. His sheaf of papers is supported by a band over his l. shoulder inscribed Noon Gazett[e]; the topmost paper has a list of the papers he sells: Morning Herald [1st issue, 1 Nov. 1780], Morning Chronicle, Morning Post, Gazeteer, St. James Evening [Post], Lloyds Evening [Post], Public Ledger, Public Advertiser, Sunday Chronicle. He holds a purse or wallet in his r. hand. A street is indicated by a freely sketched house. Beneath the design is engraved:

*All Englishmen delight in News
In London there 's enough to chuse*

*Of morning papers near a Ream
Fill'd with every kind of theme
At Noon there 's such a duced Clatter
Strangers must wonder what 's the matter
And E'en that day the Lord hath blest
Is now no more a day of rest
Forth from the Press the Papers fly
Each greedy reader to supply
Of battles fought, and numbers slain,
Of Towns besieg'd and prisoners ta'en,
Engagements both by Sea and Land
Eccho from Aldgate to the Strand
Hail! happy land, sure none 's so blest
With News to comfort every breast.*

All the newspapers whose titles are here given (in whole or in part) were current in 1780 except the Sunday Chronicle, which did not appear till 1831. The first Sunday newspaper was F. Johnson's British Gazette and Sunday Monitor, appearing in 1779, of which Crabbe wrote:

Then, lo! the sainted Monitor is born,
Whose pious face some sacred texts adorn.
The Newspaper, 1785.

Bourne, English Newspapers and Times Hand List of Newspapers.
6 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5793 A MUSHROOM FROGSTOOL AND PUFF. [1780]¹

B E [or E B] f. (Monogram).

Engraving (coloured impression). A design satirizing the umbrella and the broad-brimmed hat. A man stands full-face wearing a hat with an enormous circular brim slightly turned up at the edges. Wisps of hair project stiffly from each side of his head. His hands are thrust into his breeches-pockets. Under his l. arm is a whip with a short handle and a thick plaited lash. He is wearing top-boots. A stone by his feet is inscribed From a Dunghill. Behind (r.) a rough-looking obese man walks in profile to the l. He wears a similar hat and jack-boots; he holds a knotted stick resting on his r. shoulder; his l. hand is on his hip. On the r. a man foppishly dressed with a wide three-cornered hat, coat with epaulettes, and sword is walking away from the spectator carrying an umbrella. A shop window is indicated in the background in which broad-brimmed hats are displayed on blocks. There is faint or obliterated lettering on the print, partly illegible: Modern Extinguishers and And A Broadb. . . Beneath the title is etched Here to-day & gone to-morrow.

The umbrella, in spite of the efforts of James Hanway (d. 1786), was still an object of derision in London when used by men. John Macdonald, a footman, used one from Jan. 1778 and was at first greeted with the shout 'Frenchman, Frenchman! why dont you call a coach?' John Macdonald, Travels, ed. J. Beresford, 1927, pp. xxiii. 236. See No. 6132.

5 $\frac{3}{16}$ × 3 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

¹ Dated 1780 in Miss Banks's hand. Such dates are usually those of purchase, not necessarily of publication.

5794 SHOOTING OF RUBBISH.

[c. 1780?]

I. Nixon del^tLondon Pub^d by W. Holland. Oxford Str^t¹

Engraving. An overturned cart on a country road leading to a camp (r.). The cart lies on its side as does the horse; its occupants, four men, two women and a boy, lie on the ground or fall on each other, one, the driver (r.) has fallen into a stream which is in the foreground of the design and runs beside the road. Another man with a wooden leg appears about to fall in. The cart is two-wheeled, shaped like a box, with planks across it for seats. The men appear to be citizens, the women are perhaps courtesans. Two young pigs (l.) run away from the cart, the boy falls against one of them.

A man and woman ride pillion away from the camp (r. to l.), in the opposite direction from that in which the cart was driving. A signpost points (l.) to the camp, To . . . [word erased, the traces resemble Coxheath].

A party of soldiers are cooking over a camp-fire in the middle distance (r.), and behind them soldiers are being drilled. The scene is a wooded landscape, with fields and hedges, resembling the scenery of Kent, and is possibly intended for the Maidstone district near Coxheath. In the foreground (r.), by the stream is an enormous thistle, so much out of scale with the figures that it is probably intended to express antipathy to Scottish influence.

Perhaps a reissue after visits to Coxheath had ceased to be of topical interest.

For Coxheath see No. 5523, &c.

$8\frac{5}{8} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5795 BILLIARDS.

[c. 1780?]

R. Dighton delin.Publish'd by R. Sayer, 53 Fleet Street.

Engraving. A group of eight men (caricatured) round a billiard table. One player is about to make a stroke, his opponent (r.) looks on with an expression of horror, biting his thumb. Bets are depending on the result; a pleased spectator (l.) holds a handful of coins, another puts his hand into his purse. A very obese man (l.) with a wooden leg watches through a glass. The score is shown by two clock-face dials, on one of which the marker puts his hand. Cues stand in racks against the wall. For billiards see also Nos. 5803, 5913.

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 8\frac{15}{16}$ in.

In book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

5796 BEATING UP FOR RECRUITS.

[c. 1780?]

R. Dighton delin.Printed for Robert Sayer, N^o 53 Fleet Street.

Engraving. A recruiting officer stands holding a drawn sword against his shoulder and holding up a netted purse before the eyes of four yokels (caricatured) who stand in a row facing him: one stoops down, his hands on his knees, the next, a waggoner holding a whip, holds out his hand for the King's shilling, grinning sheepishly at the companion on his l., a very lean man, scratching his forehead. The fourth, whose body is cut off by the r. margin of the print, gazes with a fixed grin at the officer. Behind the officer is a smart drummer (l.) beating his drum and looking with a cynical half-smile at the yokels. The scene is outside a country ale-house (l.). In the distance is a wagon drawn by three horses.

¹ Another publication line appears to have been burnished out.

$6\frac{5}{8} \times 8\frac{11}{16}$ in.

In book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

5797 JACK ON A CRUISE.

[? 1780]¹

Printed for Robert Sayer, N^o 53 Fleet Street.

Engraving. A sailor follows a young woman walking (r. to l.) in a park. She (l.) holds a closed umbrella or sunshade in her r. hand, and looks coyly to her l. She wears a large hat tilted forwards, ankle-length skirt, projecting paniers at the back arranged over a petticoat which is ornamented in front with an apron. The sailor wears striped trousers and a cutlass, his arms are folded, and he carries a cane; he looks insinuatingly at the lady. A small dog runs beside her. On the r. is an urn with serpents on a high rectangular pedestal under a large tree. In the background among trees is a pavilion in the form of a temple with a dome, pediment, and Corinthian columns. Beneath the title is engraved, Avast there, back your Main-top-sail.

A companion print to No. 5797. Cf. also Nos. 5083, 5313.

A mezzotint of this design is reproduced in C. N. Robinson's British Tar in Fact and Fiction, 1909, p. 266. The subject is sometimes found on mugs and jugs; ibid.

$8\frac{1}{8} \times 6\frac{11}{16}$ in.

In book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

5798 JACK GOT SAFE INTO PORT WITH HIS PRIZE. [? 1780]

Printed for Robert Sayer, N^o 53 Fleet Street

Engraving. A sequel to No. 5797. Jack and his prize, the young woman of No. 5797, sit side by side on a settee, his l. arm round her waist. Beside the woman (r.) is a circular table, on which is a wine-bottle and two glasses, one of which she holds. The room is well furnished with a patterned carpet, on the wall which forms the background is a picture of a man seated at a table drinking punch, and a mirror in a carved frame with candle sconce.

$8\frac{1}{16} \times 6\frac{5}{8}$ in.

In book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

5799 CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME.

[? c. 1780]

R. Dighton delin.

Printed for R. Sayer 53 Fleet Street.

Engraving. A stout parson (l.) riding a good horse towards the spectators on a country road is accosted by a ragged sailor with a wooden leg who holds out his hat to beg. The parson, who is putting a flask to his mouth, scowls at the sailor. A country-girl (r.) holding a basket of chickens, apparently for tithe, is counting some money, and a small boy has put down the basket he was carrying to search in his pocket. Although burdened with tithe they are more charitable than the well-to-do parson. One of many satires on the clergy, see Nos. 6153, 6154, also by Dighton.

¹ A small mezzotint of this subject was published by Sayer and Bennett, 14 Nov. 1780. (In the collection of Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street, 1932.)

6 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 8 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

In book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

5800 THE CONTEMPTABLE PARSON, SLAUGHTERING HOGS FOR MARKET AT THE PARSONAGE HOUSE. [c. 1780?]

Engraving. A yard in which a pig has just been killed. Behind a paling is a village church and other buildings among trees. The pig lies on its side on a bench, beside a tub. The parson in his gown and bands throws a pail of water over its head. His man (r.) pours the contents of a bowl over the animal. A maidservant stands behind the parson, saying, Sir a man is come to know what you will sell your Pork a Pound; he answers, Five pence half-penny. Dont you think I can afford to sell it at that Price John. John says, You cant afford to sell it for less; they are full as good as those you Advertised last Year I am sure; consider how much Tythe Milk they have had.

The carcass of an enormous pig hangs head downwards (r.). Three young pigs (l.) feed from a trough. One of a number of satires on the clergy and tithes.

10 $\frac{3}{16}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5801 TIGHT BASTING,

AS IT WAS PERFORM'D AT THE W—E B—R [WHITE BEAR] IN P—C—LLY. [c. 1780?]

Engraving. A scene in the White Bear Inn, Piccadilly. An elderly man stands between two young ones. He holds one (l.), who is kneeling, by the collar, while he threatens the other, whom he appears to have just kicked, with his stick. Both the young men have expressions of anger and alarm. On the ground (l.) is a bag (?) inscribed From Oxford, and a mortar-board cap, and (r.) a hat, sword, pistol, and a paper inscribed Hazar[d] & C^o [Si]ate Lott[ery].

A waiter, his napkin under his arm, stands behind a chair. A coachman or carter looking like a countryman stands (r.) holding out his hat as if asking to be paid. Through an open door (r.) is the head of a staircase. On a table are a punch-bowl and glass. It appears to represent the escapade of an undergraduate just arrived in London from Oxford, perhaps interrupted by an irate father.

7 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 11 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

RECRUITS.

See No. 4766—1. Jan. 1780

(Watson and Dickinson after Bunbury. No. 2 of a Series.)

There is a French copy in reverse, called Recrues anglaises (caricature), by J. Juillet, 1780. Collection de Vinck, No. 1201.

5802 A RIDING-HOUSE.

Mr Bunbury del.

J^s Bretherton f.

Published by J^s Bretherton, 15 Feb^y, 1780.

Engraving. The interior of a riding-school. A number of men riding round in a circle; those in the foreground ride from r. to l., those in the background from l. to r. The riding-master stands in the centre, pointing with hand and cane, and grinning at a short fat man in a clerical wig who is running across the room, alarmed at the horses. A short obese man in back-view on the extreme r., who is about to mount his horse (r.), is identified by a contemporary note as Captain Grose (see Nos. 4683, 5511, 5787, 6145). Next him is a man with a grotesque impression of alarm riding a plunging horse. Among the riders are two with clerical wigs. One horse is galloping, out of control, the others are quietly ambling round.

Two sides of a high rectangular room or hall are visible; in each wall are two high arch-topped windows.

Two impressions, one aquatinted.

$14\frac{3}{8} \times 21\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5803 BILLIARDS.

H. Bunbury Esq^r Delin^t

Watson & Dickinson Excud^t.

London. Publish'd Nov^r 15th 1780 by Watson & Dickinson, N^o 158, New Bond Street.

Stipple. No. 4 of a series. A game of billiards is being played on a table, one corner of which only is visible, so curiously elongated that it gives the impression of a triangular table. The two players stand by the corner of the table, the one who is about to make a stroke appears from his leanness, frogged coat, and long pigtail queue to be a Frenchman; he leans over the table in profile to the l., wearing pince-nez. His opponent watches him, standing on top-toe, his cue held over his l. shoulder, his face screwed up in anxiety; he wears a bag-wig. A number of spectators look on with expressions of amusement or concern: on the r. two men stand together grinning; on the l. a man watches open-mouthed; behind the table a man watches with an expression of alarm, another takes cover behind him with a grin; a small boy stands beside them. In the foreground are two dogs, one, a greyhound, stands between the player's legs.

On the wall behind the table is a rack of cues and two clock-faced scoring boards both pointing to the figure X. On the r. is a door, on the l. a small casement window. Pictures and prints decorate the wall (l. to r.): a print of Wilkes (bust) with two caps of liberty; a print of a nymph and satyr; a print of a man seated, T.Q.L.; a print of a man and woman W.L.; two framed landscapes.

There is another version of this design, apparently etched by Rowlandson; impression (n.d.) in the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge.

$10\frac{1}{16} \times 14\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5804 A COLLEGE GATE,

DIVINES GOING UPON DUTY.

H. Bunbury Esq^r Delin^t.

Watson & Dickinson Excud^t.

London Publish'd Nov^r 15th 1780, by Watson & Dickinson N^o 158, New Bond Street.

Stipple. No. 5 of a series. Three men riding in different directions, having come through a large gateway of square brick pillars surmounted by stone vases. The rider in the centre on a clumsy horse wears a clerical wig, broad-brimmed hat, and gaiters. On the r., and riding in profile to the r., is a man on a stout cob, wearing boots and a bob-wig. Behind him is a fat old woman with outstretched arms shouting in alarm. On the l., riding in profile to the l., is a thin man riding a more spirited horse, and dressed like a layman. Behind him walks a fat divine wearing an academic cap, bands, and a long gown.

Through the gateway in the distance a short fat man in a clerical wig stands on a mounting block, a groom beside him holding his horse. With him are two men wearing mortar-boards and long gowns. Behind a large rectangular building is indicated and behind it a church steeple. For other Cambridge caricatures by Bunbury see Nos. 4723-9.

10 × 14 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5805 THE TAYLOR TURN'D JOCKEY, OR GOOSE UPON GOOSE.

[c. 1780?]

W.H.B. [Bunbury] inv^t

Engraving. A tailor, in profile to the r., rides a goose, his legs thrust forward on each side of the bird's neck. He wears a small lace-trimmed hat perched on a high toupet-wig. In place of a bag, a cabbage is tied to his queue, emblem of the pieces of cloth called 'cabbage' which tailors were supposed to appropriate, cf. No. 5399. He holds a yard-stick for a whip, on the end of which is a gherkin-like cucumber. A pair of shears protrudes from his coat-pocket. He wears spatterdashes and sharp spurs resembling those worn by game-cocks. In the upper r. corner of the plate is etched, A Poor Taylor riding against time for a bushell of cucumbers N B A Dung!

In a perennial dispute between London master-tailors and their journey-men, those who belonged to clubs (embryo trade unions) and resisted the masters were called Flints, the others were stigmatized as Dungs. See F. W. Galton, The Tailoring Trade. In the summer there was much seasonal unemployment among tailors and there was a London saying, 'Tailors two a penny, cucumbers twice as many'.

5 $\frac{5}{16}$ × 4 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

In book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

5806 THE COMPLIMENTS OF THE SEASON

KIBE HEELS AND CHILBLAINS.

[c. 1780?]

W.H.B. [Bunbury] inv^t

Engraving. The interior of a poverty-stricken room. An old man (l.) seated in a chair is rubbing one foot which rests on a low stool with the contents of a bottle held in his r. hand. He wears a night-cap, his hat and wig hang on the back of his chair. A witch-like woman, wearing large spectacles, is seated by the fire, she holds on her lap the bare leg of a young man, and is about to apply to it the contents of a pot which she is stirring on the fire. He is yelling with pain. On the wall is a placard, D' Steers Opedeldoc for Chilblains.

Poverty is indicated by the untidy bed, a broken casement window, and the character of the chimney-piece, on which is a lighted candle, a tea-pot, and a broken cup. Over it is a print of a man, T.Q.L. Probably a quack chiropodist's establishment of a very humble kind.

6 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 5 $\frac{11}{16}$ in.

In book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

5807 [PEDLARS]

[n.d.]

*Eliza B. Gulston*¹ fecit.

Engraving. A freely drawn sketch of three figures. A Jew in profile to the r. holds a glass show-box which is supported by a strap round his shoulders. Facing him in profile to the l. is a man with a large pack tied to his back, he is looking at the Jew's wares, one hand held up as in surprise. Between them, and full-face, stands a Dutchman (?) wearing trousers and smoking a pipe; he is looking at the Jew's show-case.²

Above the heads of the figures a devil is flying, he holds two strings, one of which is attached to the neck of each pedlar.

Probably a satire on the dishonesty of pedlars and hawkers. Cf. Colquhoun, Treatise on the Police of the Metropolis, 1796, &c.

7 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 6 in.

'Honorary Engravers', ii, No. 70.

5808-5813

A series of six plates, numbered 1-6, all with the same publication line and date.

5808 BOOK 25 THE MODERN HARLOT'S PROGRESS, OR ADVENTURES OF HARRIET HEEDLESS

HARRIET HEEDLESS, APPLYING TO A STATUE [sic] HALL FOR A PLACE; IS SEEN BY A RAKE, AND DECOY'D BY A BAWD. AN OLD FELLOW CHUCKS A GIRL'S CHIN, AND OTHER CHARACTERS ARE LOOKING FOR SERVANTS, OR SERVICES. 97

Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, No 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard London.

Published as the Act directs, 15 May 1780.

Engraving (coloured impression). The first of a series of six plates; they appear to have formed 'Book 25' of a larger series, in which this is No. 97. As the title shows it is a modernized imitation of Hogarth's Harlot's Progress (see Nos. 2031, 2046, 2061, 2075, 2091, 2106). As in Hogarth's series, the first plate represents the arrival of a country girl in London to find a place as a servant. The place of the inn-yard is taken by a 'Statute Hall', that is, a room where masters and mistresses went to inspect and engage servants, a few pence being paid for admission.

The hall here depicted appears to be well built and clean. The window is in three divisions, the centre one arched. On each side of it hangs an elaborately framed oval mirror. The door (r.) opens on a rod, to ensure its automatic closing. Two sporting prints or pictures are on the wall (l.). The manager of the place stands at a high writing-desk writing, and in conversation with the 'Rake' who is looking at Harriet Heedless through an eye-glass. He is in riding-dress.

The two centre figures are Harriet (r.) and the 'Bawd' who stands in profile to the r. handing the girl a card inscribed [Pal]l Mall. Harriet is neatly dressed like a country girl in a cap, a kerchief over her bodice, and an apron. In her l. hand is a small box inscribed H. H. The 'Bawd' is dressed like a woman of fashion, with high-dressed hair. A man in riding dress seated on a stool watches their conversation with interest. A dog lies near him. A woman of similar appearance and dress to the bawd, holding a fan, stands against the wall (l.) with a younger woman who is more plainly dressed. By the door (r.) is a group of maid-servants and men who may be either servants, spectators, or employers. Behind, a man is chucking a demure-looking girl under the chin.

¹ d. 1780.

² In 1765 Cole compared the Paris shop-windows to the show-cases carried about by Jews. Cole's Paris Journal, 1931, p. 50.

Such statute-halls are described by R. King in The Frauds of London detected . . . [c. 1770] as a flagrant and bare-faced cheat, the proprietors often procurers. The name derives from the annual statute fairs or mops held in the country for the hiring of servants.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 10\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5809 HARRIET INTRODUCED TO THE RAKE, IN THE CHARACTER OF A SERVANT, WHILE THE BAWD SKULKS BEHIND THE DOOR. 98

Engraving (coloured impression). See No. 5808. A well-furnished panelled room in which a large curtained bed (l.) is partly visible. A man is seated beside a table on which is a white cloth: on it are a book and the Morning Post newspaper. He wears a flowered dressing-gown and his hair is in curl-papers. Harriet advances into the room carrying a round tray, on it is a bowl and plate. She wears a cap, a kerchief round her bodice, and a looped-up apron over a quilted petticoat. 'The bawd' stands by the door (r.), which she appears to be opening for Harriet. Through the open door is seen the staircase with a tall sash window. A maid-servant with a broom stands outside watching Harriet's entry.

The room has a carpet with an arabesque pattern, two chairs stand against the back wall on which are two T.Q.L. portraits: one of a lady in a domino holding a mask, the other of a man wearing a hat. Between them is an oval picture of Cupid, blindfolded, with a bow and arrows. On the r. of the door (r.), which is at r. angles to the back wall, is an oval mirror in an ornate frame, with candelabra.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 10\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5810 HARRIET IN HIGH KEEPING, EQUIP'D IN A RIDING HABIT, ATTENDED BY A BLACK; THE FOOTMAN PEEPING AT HER WITH INTENT TO DELIVER HER A LETTER PRIVATELY. 99

Engraving (coloured impression). See No. 5808. Harriet and her protector sit side by side on a settee. He looks at her, holding her l. hand, his r. hand rests on her shoulder. He is in riding-dress; she wears a riding habit: full skirt, coat and waistcoat of masculine cut, and a cravat; elaborately-dressed hair, and a feathered hat. In her r. hand is a riding switch. She looks straight in front of her, not at her lover. A little black boy (l.) offers her a glass of wine on a salver. A dog sits on the settee, his front paws on his master's knee. On the r. is an open door round which a footman is furtively looking.

They are in a panelled room, of which two walls are visible. In the centre of the back wall is a window through which can be seen a lady driving in a high phaeton, a coachman on the box; behind are houses. On each side of the window is a framed landscape. In the l. wall is another window, through which trees are visible. Next it (r.) is an oval mirror elaborately framed. In front of the window is a small oblong table covered with a cloth, on which are a bottle of wine, a glass, &c. To the r. of the settee stands a dressing-table, with a muslin cover, its looking-glass draped with white muslin. Chairs with carved oval backs stand against the wall. On the floor is a carpet with an arabesque pattern.

6 × 10 in.

5811 HARRIET BEING DISCOVERED BY HER KEEPER IN MAKING AN APPOINTMENT WITH HIS FOOTMAN, FAINTS AWAY, WHILE THE MAID LISTENS TO KNOW THE RESULT. 100.

Engraving (coloured impression). See No. 5808. Harriet sits as if asleep in a high-backed arm-chair by a round table, over which her protector leans, holding a large sheet of paper on which is engraved Dear William meet me under the Piazza at 6 o'Clock. An ink-stand and pens are on the table. Harriet is plainly dressed in a cap, a checked kerchief, a lace-trimmed apron; her dress is worn over a quilted petticoat. Her lover is in riding dress. Through an open door (l.) a maidservant is looking. Two walls of the room are visible. In the back wall is a window in three sections, the centre one having a semicircular top. Through the window trees and a lake or river are visible. On each side of the wall are two pictures, one above the other; three are landscapes, the fourth (r.) is of a lady (T.Q.L.) at whom a cupid is aiming his bow. To the r. of the window is a semicircular dressing-table. A flowered dressing-gown lies on a chair by the table. Against the wall to the l. of the window is a tall curtained bed, whose curtains are almost completely drawn. The room has a carpet with an arabesque pattern.

$6\frac{1}{16} \times 10\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5812 HARRIET BEING DISCARDED FOR HER INFIDELITY, TAKES LODGINGS, TURNS COMMON, IS ATTENDED BY RAKES AND GAMESTERS, AND FURNISHED BY THE MILLENER, WITH DRESSES TO CONTINUE HER PROSTITUTION. 101

Engraving (coloured impression). See No. 5808. Harriet seated by a table; she holds a snuffbox and appears to be taking snuff. A negress stands by her (l.) filling a wine-glass from a jug. They are being watched by a man who stands behind the table holding a cane or riding whip, his hands on his hips. At the end of the table (r.) sits a fashionably dressed milliner in profile to the l.; she holds a lace cap with lappets. On the table are playing cards and an open book, Hoyles Games. Behind the milliner and standing near the open door (r.) is her apprentice, holding a box; she is being chucked under the chin by a soldier who sits in a chair against the wall. At a round table (l.) a soldier sits with a tankard, a pipe with a broken stem is on the table.

Only the back wall of the room is visible; in it are two open doors, one on the r., the other behind Harriet; a man looks from behind this door with a grin. Through it a window is visible, and through the window appear the masts of a ship, suggesting that Harriet has found lodgings in the doubtful neighbourhood of Wapping. Next the door (r.) a ballad is pinned up, Man of Fashion, headed with a design of a ship. Next this is a large framed picture of Roman architecture in ruins. A plain mirror hangs next it. Over the door on the r. is a framed picture of a naval battle. On the extreme l. is a curtained bed, the curtains hanging from a bent rod. The floor is of boards, but under and round the table is a carpet or large rug. Except for the bed the room has no appearance of squalor.

6 × 10½ in.

5813 HARRIET TAINTED WITH DISEASE, GOES INTO A WORKHOUSE; WHERE THE DOCTOR ATTENDED BY HIS FOOT-BOY, BRINGS HER A DRAUGHT; THE NURSE DESCRIBES HER ILLNESS, AND THE OTHER FIGURES ARE CURIOUSLY EMPLOYED. 102

Engraving (coloured impression). See No. 5808. The interior of a large room. Harriet reclines in an arm-chair, her head and shoulders wrapped in a shawl, looking very ill. The central figures of the design are the doctor and the nurse; she is a stout gaily-dressed woman, standing full-face, one hand on her hip. The doctor is handing her a bottle, with a label inscribed Going to rest. He wears a hat, a large curled wig, and a cloak, and holds a long cane; behind him stands his foot-boy carrying a basket containing medicine bottles. On the r. is a large open fire, by it sits a woman nursing an infant, an old woman smoking a pipe sits on a bench opposite the fire; two old women stand by it, one supported by crutches holds out a wine-glass to the other. In the foreground (r.) a heap of coal lies on the floor, a shovel lies beside it. A kneeling man fills a tankard from a large leather bottle, he has perhaps been shovelling the coal. A small boy sits on the ground (r.) by a large window, using the window seat as a table, he is eating with a spoon from a plate. Above the fireplace is a framed inscription: Rules for the better Regulation of Workhouses. On a shelf beneath this is a teapot, cups, and other pieces of crockery. Two square posts support the ceiling, to each is hung a woman's hat and cloak. They serve as supports for a clothes' line on which hang a patched blanket or curtain, a pair of stockings, and other garments. Along the back wall of the room are high curtained beds.

This series shows an interesting change of manners since Hogarth's Harlot's Progress (1734). The most striking change is in the substitution of the workhouse for punishment in Bridewell (see No. 2075). In this print the doctor and the nurse appear to be doing their best for the patient in marked contrast with the scene in Hogarth's fifth plate (No. 2091).

6½ × 10½ in.

Thirteen prints from the series of mezzotints published by Carington Bowles.¹

5814 A MAN-TRAP.

[?J. R. Smith.]

412. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Publish'd as the Act directs [date erased c. 1780].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A young woman, fashionably dressed, reclining on a garden seat, under trees, her dress cut very low. Behind the seat (r.) is a notice board, Spring Guns set here.

¹ No. 3761 has the imprint of Bowles and Carver, the uncoloured impression that of Carington Bowles.

Similar in manner to Nos. 5820, 5823, 5824.

Reproduced, M. C. Salaman, Old English Mezzotints, 1910, Pl. lxxv.
12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in. 'Caricatures', ii, p. 92. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5815 THE CONTEMPLATIVE CHARMER.

413. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard. Publish'd as the Act directs, 6th Jan^y 1780.

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A young woman seated on a settee, directed to the l. but looking coyly to the r. Her legs are crossed and are well defined under her skirt, she wears an elaborate muslin cap. Behind her (l.) hangs on the wall a vertical letter-rack with divisions for each day of the week from Sunday to Saturday; in each of these are cards, the lowest being inscribed Admit two to the Boxes Ca Bo. . . . A candle sconce also hangs on the wall.

Another impression is in 'Caricatures', ii, p. 93.

12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5816 A SOFT TUMBLE AFTER A HARD RIDE. [c. 1780]

John Collet, del.

414. Printed for & Sold by Bowles & Carver, at their Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs Mezzotint (coloured impression). A hunting scene. A huntsman falls over the head of his horse, which has fallen in leaping a five-barred gate (l.). He is about to fall on to a young lady who lies on her back, having been thrown from her horse, which is galloping away (r.). A second lady is leaping the gate, her whip raised high above her head. Four dogs add to the confusion.

12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in. 'Caricatures', i, p. 226. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5817 THE LADIES SHOOTING PONEY.

415. From the Original Picture by John Collet, in the possession of Carington Bowles.

Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard London. Published as the Act directs [date erased c. 1780].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A lady, in profile to the r., is firing a gun which she supports on the neck of a pony which is quietly grazing. She wears a feathered hat, a coat of masculine cut over a narrow skirt, with high-heeled shoes. A powder-horn is slung across her shoulder. A man dressed as groom or postilion crouches down behind her (r.). A second lady stands behind him putting a ramrod down the barrel of her gun. Trees and water form a background.

12 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. 'Caricatures', ii, p. 73. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5818 THE PLEASURES OF SKAITING—OR, A VIEW IN WINTER.

417. From the Original Picture by John Collet, in the possession of Carington Bowles.

Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs 12 Apr. 1780.

Mezzotint (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A skater lies on his back on the ice, his hat has fallen off, his muff and cane lie beside him. From his pocket projects a paper, The Art of Rolling made easy. Behind him a lady skates with ease and assurance, her arms folded. Behind her another man lies on the ground. Behind (r.) a skater looks at the prostrate man through an eye-glass. In the middle distance two skaters, a man and a woman, face each other. In the background are bare shrubs and trees and a country house.

Another impression in 'Caricatures', B.M.L., Tab. 524, ii, p. 75.

12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5819 THE PRETTY WATERWOMAN, OR ADMIRAL PURBLIND JUST RUN A-GROUND BY PEGGY PULLAWAY.

418. From the Original Picture by John Collet, in the possession of Carington Bowles.

Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard London. Published as the Act directs, 12 April 1780.

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A gaily-dressed young woman sculling a naval officer who sits in the stern, holding his cane in the water and looking through a single eye-glass at a swan accompanied by a cygnet. A King Charles dog puts its paws on the edge of the boat and looks at the swan. The admiral is in naval uniform with a pigtail queue. The lady wears a feathered hat tilted forward on her high-dressed hair and a low-cut bodice; on the stern of the boat is a design of a cupid riding on a dolphin. The water winds among lawns, trees, and bushes. In the middle distance two ladies are fishing; one holds a rod over the water, the other, seated beside her, holds up a fish.

Reproduced, C. N. Robinson, The British Tar in Fact and Fiction, 1909, p. 248.

12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5820 THE ANGELIC ANGLER.

[1780]

[J. R. Smith del et sc.]

420. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A young woman stands full-face beside a stream; in her r. hand is a fishing-rod, in her l. she holds the line, pulling out of the water a fish she has hooked. She is dressed in the fashion of the day, wearing a hat and a cloak over her dress with its muslin apron. Trees form a background.

Beneath the title is engraved,

To be decoy'd is Men and Fishes fate,—With Cupid's Line when Beauty is the Bait.

12 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', ii, p. 80. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

A smaller version:

5820_A THE ANGELIC ANGLER.

309. Printed for Carington Bowles, N^o 69 in St Paul's Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs 12 Apr. 1780

5 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

This design (pl. 9 × 7 in.) was published by J. R. Smith, June 10, 1780. Frankau, p. 53.

5821 MISS CALASH IN CONTEMPLATION.

421. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in St Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased 1780].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A young woman walking (r. to l.), looking towards the spectator, her arms folded, holding a book. She wears a barrel-shaped calash-hood (see No. 5433). She is framed in the mouth of a grotto, behind her is a piece of artificial water which surrounds a grass plot planted symmetrically with trees. Beneath the title is engraved, This Lady reads, then Tripping Thro' the Grove.—Turns all her thoughts to rural bliss and love.

12 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', ii, p. 97. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

THE TRIPLE PLEA (422)

See No. 3761—15 May 1780

After Collet.

A satire on the Clergy, Lawyers, and Physicians. Also a dated impression, uncoloured.

5822 THE VICTIM.

From the Original Picture by John Collet, in the possession of Carington Bowles.

426. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in St Pauls Church Yard, London. Publish'd as the Act directs [date erased, 1780].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). An elderly man seated in an arm-chair, in night-cap and dressing-gown, a crutch by his side, holds by the wrist a young girl, who is being brought to him by a stout woman. The girl holds a handkerchief to her eyes; she is gaily and meretriciously dressed.

A monkey (l.) holds a cat; a dog sits on a chair (r.); a cat plays with a glove which hangs from the chair. On the wall (r.) is a framed picture of a sheep about to be sacrificed before an altar. On the ground are books:

on the Art of Love (l.) stands a bottle of Viper Wine. A large volume (l.) is labelled Rochester, indicating that it contains the works of the rake, Rochester (d. 1680). On it is an open book inscribed,

*This Bud of Beauty, other Years demands,
Nor should be gather'd by such wither'd hands.*

This is adapted from a picture by Collet, an engraving after which is No. 4184 (1767), where the figures are T.Q.L. Among other changes, the costumes have been altered to adapt them to the prevailing fashion.

$12\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{15}{16}$ in.

'Caricatures', B.M.L., Tab. 524, i, p. 199.

Reproduced C. E. Jensen, Karikatur-album, 1906, i, p. 152.

5823 A LADY IN WAITING.

[J. R. Smith del et sc.]

427. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Publish'd as the Act directs [date erased c. 1780].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A lady seated on a grassy bank under trees in the fields near London, the buildings of which with the dome of St. Paul's are seen in the distance (r.), across a piece of water. She is fashionably dressed, with a large hat and elbow-length gloves. She looks coyly expectant.

Reproduced, M. C. Salaman, Old English Mezzotints, 1910, Pl. lxxiv.

This design (pl. $9\frac{3}{4} \times 7$ in.) was published by J. R. Smith, June 10, 1780, see Frankau, pp. 156-7.

$12\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', ii, p. 95. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5824 A FOOLISH WOMAN.

[J. R. Smith del et sc.]

428. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Acts directs 2 Sep 1780.

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A courtesan seated on a curiously shaped wooden seat placed against a wall at right angles to the door of a house. She sits directed to the l., her legs crossed, one hand raised as if beckoning. She is similar in dress and appearance to No. 5823. The seat is ornamented with a satyr's mask and a carved vine-branch with clusters of grapes. Beneath the title is engraved, For she sitteth at the door of her house on a seat, in the high places of the city: To call passengers who go right on their ways. Proverbs, Ch. IX. vers 14 & 15.

Frankau, p. 125. Another impression is in 'Caricatures', ii, p. 99. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

$12\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

A WIFE AT CONFESSION . . . (429)

No. 3778—[1780]

POLITICAL SATIRES

5825 THE DUTCH IN THE DUMPS.

Pub^d Jan: 4 1781 by H Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Two English sailors (1.) exulting together over Dutch prizes. They clasp hands, one (r.) holds up a Dutchman's breeches, the pocket turned out, and shakes coins from it; he has a club under his l. arm. The other holds the end of his club in his r. coat-pocket saying, Dam-me Jack who Pays the Reckoning now; the other answers, The Dutch my boy. A Dutch sailor (r.) stands with his hands held by his sides, his shoulders hunched despondently; he is saying, Damn de French & Spaniards I wish ve had nothing to do wit dem for dis Jack English vil trim our hides most damnably. Three small Dutch single-masted vessels are lying by the shore, dismantled, the British flag flying above the (plain) Dutch flag. On the ground in front of the figures are a square bottle inscribed Hollands Gin, another pair of breeches, with the pocket inside out, disgorging coins, and a bale of goods.

Beneath the design is etched:

*Perfidious Dutchmen now beware
When e'er you treat with France
For as they all can caper well
It's we will make you dance.*

On 20 Dec. 1780 a manifesto was published giving reasons for the commencement of hostilities, letters of marque and reprisal were granted against the Dutch and within a few days many ships were taken. See Ann. Reg., 1781, pp. 162 ff.

The declaration of war was popular in general, though it was attacked by the Opposition. Cf. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 342.

See also Nos. 5664, 5712-33, 5826, 5827, 5828, 5830, 5837.

Van Stolk, No. 4310.

6½ × 9 ³/₁₆ in.

Van Stolk describes (No. 4338) a pseudo-English, Dutch print by P. Dutsman, BEDLAM OF THE WORLD, Published according to Act of Parliament, 5 Jan. 1781. George III as the button-maker, see No. 5573, &c., with a card of buttons in his hand, asleep, holding the manifesto to the Netherlands of 10 Dec. 1780 [? 20 Dec.]. A snake is inscribed Sir J. York. On a placard is the inscription New Description of the whole of Great Britain except the estates of Richmond, Portland, Devonshire, Ferrers, Rockingham, Harcourt and Fitzwilliam.

The names show that the print was published after 25 Jan. 1781, and is a comment on the important debate in the Lords on that day on the rupture with Holland, when a protest against the Address on the rupture was signed by Richmond, Portland, Fitzwilliam, Harcourt, Ferrers, Rockingham, Devonshire, Pembroke, and Coventry. Parl. Hist. xxi. 1075-7.

For other Dutch prints see Nos. 5712-34, 5839, 5859, 6292.

5826 TRIA JUNCTA IN UNO.

OR

THE THREE ENEMIES OF BRITTAIN.

I. Nixon, Fecit.Pub^d as the Act directs, 17 Jan^y 1781, by W. Wells N^o 132, opposite Salisbury-Court, Fleet Street.

Engraving. Caricatures of a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard, representing France, Holland, and Spain. All have large heads, and expressions of great alarm. France (l.), in profile to the r., a foppish petit-maitre with an enormously long pigtail queue and voluminous lace ruffles, holds out his hands, saying to Holland, Ah! Myneer vat is de mater? Holland (c.) is a fat peasant or burgher wearing breeches reaching almost to the ankles, and a hat like an inverted flower-pot, a pipe thrust through the hat-band. His hands are in his breeches-pockets and he says Oh Yontlemans, Yontlemans! da English be playing de very diable mid us. Spain (r.) is a don with a feathered hat, ruff, slashed doublet and breeches, cloak, and spurred boots; he has a beard and long moustaches. He holds out his hands in alarm and turns to Holland, saying Vat News Myneer? Beneath the design is engraved:

*Three Bullys in three distant Countries born
France, Spain & Holland, would adorn;
The first in Craft & Cowardice, surpased
The next in Haughtiness, in both the last.
Old Satans power could no further go
To make a Third he join'd the former Two.*

One of many satires on the Dutch in connexion with the declaration of war, 20 Dec. 1780. See No. 5825, &c.

6 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5827 THE BALLANCE OF POWER

R. S. (Monogram).London. Published as y^e Act directs, Jan^y 17. 1781. by R. Wilkinson, at N^o 58 in Cornhill.

Engraving. A pair of scales whose beam is engraved The Ballance of Power. On the l. scale, which rests on the ground, stands Britannia holding her shield in her r. hand, and in the left a short Roman sword inscribed The Sword of Justice. She says, No one injures me with impunity. On the other scale are the four enemies of England; in spite of the desperate efforts of Holland who clings to one of its ropes, his feet on its base, this scale is in the air, outweighed by Britannia. America as an Indian woman with a head-dress of feathers sits on the scale, her head resting on her hand, her eyes closed in an attitude of despondency; she says My Ingratitude is justly punished. France and Spain dressed in the conventional manner of caricature, one as a French fop, the other in the slashed doublet and cloak of a Spanish don, stand behind America. France says, Myneer assist or we are ruin'd; Spain says, Rodney has ruined our Fleet. Holland, as a Dutchman smoking a pipe, is saying I'll do any thing for Money; coins inscribed Ill got wealth, are pouring from his unbuttoned breeches-pocket; two papers are also falling from him, one inscribed S^t Eustatia Saba S^t Martin, the other Demerary Issequibo.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*America, dup'd by a treacherous train,
Now finds she's a Tool both to France and to Spain;
Yet all three united can't weigh down the Scale:
So the Dutchman jumps in with the hope to prevail.
Yet Britain will boldly their efforts withstand,
And bravely defy them by Sea and by Land:
The Frenchman She'll Drub, and the Spaniard She'll Beat
While the Dutchman She'll Ruin by Seizing his Fleet:
Th' Americans too will with Britons Unite,
And each to the other be Mutual Delight.*

This is an allusion to the 'ill got wealth' of Holland by contraband trade in which she used her islands in the West Indies and her possessions on the South American coast, see No. 5557, &c. It anticipates the capture of the Dutch colonies: the capture of St. Eustatius, 3 Feb. 1781, with its dependencies, St. Martin and Saba, and the capitulation of Demerara and Essequibo to privateers, 14 Mar. 1781. Adolphus, Hist. of England, 1841, iii. 259, 261. See No. 5825, &c. Cf. No. 5712.

8 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 13 in.

No. 5827 appears to be the original of a German print altered by the addition of a background showing Gibraltar, published A Augsbourg chez J. Mart. Will Fauxbourg S. Jacques. Beneath the print is an explanation in German and bad French in two columns, the French being, (1) La balance de la puissance. (2) [England] Ne personne m'offense sans puni. (3) L'Epee de la Justice. (4) [Spain] Rodney a ruiné notre Flotte (4) [France] Monsieur, aidez à nous ou nous sommes perdu. (6) [America] Mon ingratitude est puni come tous raison. (7) [Holland] Je ferai quelque chose pour l'argent. Probably issued after the defeat of the attack on Gibraltar, see No. 6035, &c. Collection de Vinck, No. 1181.

5828 JACK ENGLAND FIGHTING THE FOUR CONFEDERATES.

Printed for Jn^o Smith N^o 35 Cheapside, Rob^t Sayer & Jn^o Bennet N^o 53 Fleet Street, Jan^y 20; 1781.

Engraving (coloured impression). An English sailor (1.) with clenched fists faces Holland, France, Spain, and America, all but the first appearing hors de combat. Numbers indicate the names of the 'Four Confederates' which are given below the design. (1) America (r.), Yanky Doodle, an Indian brave with a feathered head-dress and girdle, is prone on the ground, his spear beside him; he says This fall has hurt my Back. (2) France or Monsieur Louis Baboon dressed as a French fop with a bag-wig, is vomiting, his hand across his breast, his knees bent; he says, Dem Jersey Pills have made a me Sick. (3) Spain or Don Diego, dressed as a Spanish don, is bleeding from one eye, he stands behind America, saying by S^t Jago he has almost Blinded me. These three are grouped together on the l., turning away from Jack England. No. 4 or Mynheer Frog, dressed as a Dutch peasant, is standing with his legs wide apart, his fists clenched, smoking a pipe, he faces Jack, saying I have almost forgot how to fight. In the background are ships.

Beneath the title is engraved:

To Arms you Brave Britons to Arms the Road to Renown Lyes before you.

This represents the situation at the beginning of 1781. The taking of Charlestown on 12 May 1780 by Clinton, the victory of Cornwallis at Camden (16 Aug. 1780), and a temporary British naval supremacy on the American coast had reduced the Americans to serious straits. The declaration of war with Holland (20 Dec. 1780) was hailed as an opportunity for the British navy and privateers, since Holland was 'less troublesome as a declared enemy than as a very nominal neutral'. Camb. Hist. of the Br: Empire, i. 750. See No. 5557, &c. At the beginning of 1781 the French made a second attempt on Jersey and surprised St. Helier on 6 Jan., but were immediately afterwards completely defeated by Major Pierson and forced to surrender. Ann. Reg., 1782, pp. 96-9. London Gazette Extraordinary, 9 Jan. 1781.

There is an aquatint of the fighting in St. Helier on 6 Jan. in the Print Department, published on 24 Apr. 1781 by Colley and Hedges, 288 Strand. $6\frac{5}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5829 ADMINISTRATION & OPPOSITION AS EXHIBITED APRIL 3RD 1780 AT THE PANTHEON MASQUERADE.

O'Brien Inv^t & c^t.

Publish'd as the act directs Jan'y 1781 price 1s. plain, Col^d 1 s. 6^d.¹

Engraving (coloured impression). Two men dressed as if for a masquerade stand side by side. The bodies of both are covered with grotesque masks, which are intended as caricatures of supporters of the Ministry and Opposition respectively. Each wears a peaked cap almost covered by a pictorial placard. Administration (l.) is a stout rubicund man capering with an expression of convivial jollity; he holds a wine-bottle in his r. hand, an embossed goblet in his l. On the placard on his cap is a fat pig guzzling grapes inscribed Administration. His person is almost covered by seven masks, all grinning with expressions of sly satisfaction. One beneath the wearer's chin appears to be intended for North, next it on the r. is probably Sandwich; all are grotesquely caricatured, with large mouths and a display of teeth.

The figure on the r. and the masks with which he is decorated have expressions of melancholy ferocity. The placard on his cap is inscribed Opposition and depicts a fox trying in vain to reach the grapes above his head. The only mask which can be identified with any certainty is that of Wilkes, squinting violently. Opposition holds out to Administration a paper inscribed The Scourge. N^o 17. To the Ministry. This was a libellous and scurrilous pamphlet against the Government issued by one W. Moore weekly from 1 Jan. to 8 June 1780, which was followed up during the Gordon Riots by inflammatory leaflets entitled 'The Thunder' and 'England in Blood', see Nos. 5685, 5844. No. 17 (20 May 1780) contains inflammatory verses, 'The Cries of Liberty for a Redress of Grievances. Vox Populi Vox Dei', ending with an appeal for 'another glorious Revolution', unless grievances are redressed. (B.M.L., P.P. 5394 d.)

¹ '1 s' and '1 s 6^d' have been written in ink in space left by the engraver.

In his l. hand Opposition holds out papers inscribed Scheme of Oeconomy in the State and Count[y] Petiti[ions].

Beneath the design, in two columns, songs are etched :

Song by ADMINISTRATION.

*Let hungry Patriots lick their lips at our rich-season'd dainties,
And snap & snarl, we mind them not, well knowing all in vain 'tis;
Inquiries & Impeachments, & State Reformation schemes Sir
To Us (when seated round good Wine) are but as mirthfull themes Sir,
For of our annual Thousands sure in Coffers we can store 'em,
To laugh & joke & sing & smoke & push about the Forum.*

(Two more verses follow.)

Song by OPPOSITION.

*Tho' laughter now characterize our vile Administration,
The Curs will snivel when we've just'd each one from his Station.
For like Distiller's grain-fed Hogs they swill & gorge & sleep,
But soon for food they shall be forc'd a sharp look out to keep,
So Brother Patriots, one & all, let's steadfast be & warm O,
In carry'ng on our rustling, bustling tustling State Reform O.*

(Two more verses follow.)

Across the bottom of the sheet is etched :

Song, sung by the above Characters, after having form'd a Coalition.

*1st Since Opposition has at length put on her Wings & fled,
And Coalition's taken place in party jingling's stead.*

A drinking we will go &c'

*2nd I say since we're all friends together let us sing & drink,
And deem that Man an Ass who from his bumper first does shrink,
And sneaking home does go &c'*

*3rd Now North Germaine & Sandwich Richmond Shelburne Fox & Barre,
No longer need bark at each other till their jaws are weary,*

But a drinking may all go &c.

*4th And as for State reforming plans—why we shall let them drop,
Since from the dripping pan each party now can take a sop.*

Then a drinking may all go &c'

This, of course, is far from representing the political situation in 1781. The overtures to the Rockingham Whigs in 1779 and 1780 had come to nothing and the coalition of Fox and North could not then have been anticipated. One of the few satires attacking the Opposition, see Nos. 5334, 5644, 5665, 5836, 5962. For County Petitions see No. 5638, &c.

$8\frac{3}{16} \times 11\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5830 MYNEER NIC FROGS LAMENTATION;

OR DUTCH MILK A FINE RELISH TO ENGLISH SAILORS.

Wells del.

Pub^d as the Act directs by W. Wells (Feb^y 2^d, 1781) N^o 132 Fleet Street.

Engraving. A Dutchman (l.) stands in front of a cow, holding up his hands and turning up his eyes in lamentation; he is smoking a pipe and his breeches pockets are unbuttoned. He says Oh I have lost mine Milk & I shall break mine heart. An English sailor (r.) walks off with a full milk-pail, he turns towards the Dutchman, saying You shall have no more Mani-festo's Mynheer Bushel A—se,—but a little of your milk we will have by Virtue of Mani-Fisto's. In the background is the sea, with two ships, one of which is firing her guns.

As a result of war the situation shown in Nos. 5472, 5726, 5727 has been reversed, see No. 5825, &c. 'Nic Frog' was the name given to Holland in Arbuthnot's famous pamphlet, Law is a bottomless Pit . . . 1712, cf. No. 5541.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 8\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5831 THE JUNTO, IN A BOWL DISH.

Pub^d as the Act directs Feby 11th 1781 by W Richardson, N^o 68 High Holborn.

Engraving. A bowl or boat floats on the sea within the jaws of a monster with a cat-like face. In it sit seven people, full face, all but one with cat's whiskers. In the centre is a judge, probably Thurlow the Lord Chancellor, on his l. is a Scot wearing a plaid, probably Bute, still regarded as potent, or perhaps Lord Loughborough (Wedderburn), next, a figure whose anchor shows that he is Sandwich, first Lord of the Admiralty. Then comes North, wearing his ribbon and star and (incorrectly) a baron's coronet. On the Chancellor's r. is a man with a Grenadier's cap and a banner, perhaps Jenkinson, the Secretary at War. Next him is a cat-faced man, and on the outside (l.) a judge whose head is framed in a gallows, probably Mansfield.

Four dogs are swimming towards the bowl, their collars inscribed respectively America (l.), France, Spain, and Holland (r.), the last smaller than the others and smoking a pipe. In the foreground on the r. is the shore; on it is a decayed oak-tree, overgrown with fungus, in which is planted a Union flag. Beneath it a skeleton-like greyhound (Scotland) is devouring a heart and entrails (England's vitals). Beneath the design is engraved:

*Behold the Ministerial foul Fish
Float in Political Bowl Dish,
Drove at the Pleasure of the Tide,
Assail'd by Foes on ev'ry Side.*

*Alas, Old England, must you Fail
And for such Miscreants turn Tail
America Insults the Nation
And says a Fig for your Taxation.*

*France, Spain & Holland, Join the Cry
And Drive them to their Destiny,
While Scotland pleas'd at all their Deeds
Upon Old Englands Vitals Feeds.*

Van Stolk, No. 4339.

$7\frac{1}{8} \times 12$ in.

Another impression, n.d. Pub^d by W. Humphrey, N^o 227 Strand.

5832 THE VIRTUOUS AND INSPIR'D STATE OF WHIGISM IN

BRISTOL 1781

[c. Feb. 1781]

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5833. An electioneering procession. A candidate (Henry Cruger) seated in a chaise drawn (r. to l.) by two men; behind them is the Devil. Cruger is saying I come to Establish America's Independance. Listen to my Voice behold my People. In his l. hand he holds a striped flag inscribed The Voice of Rebellion is a supreme Law which passeth all Understanding. The men drawing the chaise are saying, America shall be independent and We'll have his Head if the Devil & You will help Us. One tramples on the royal crown, the other on the scales of Justice. The Devil says, I'll help You my Children Down with their Ch—h & K—g.

Behind the chaise walks a bull, decorated with rosettes, as if to represent John Bull decked out for sacrifice, and ridden by an American sailor who holds out a flag inscribed with thirteen stars. At his back is a bundle inscribed Secreted Copies. He is saying You English Scoundrels hers the American Flesh & Blood of a Bull.

In front two men with favours in their hats are conversing: one (l.) says You have made Your Escape for Forgery robbery & a Rape P—n [Parson] Green. The other (r.), who wears a parson's wig and bands, answers, And tis my Belief You'r a Pauper & Thief M' Chairman. A pregnant woman holds up a broken pitcher saying Croker shall have it; a child standing beside her asks Is that Daddy Croker Mammy. Behind her a man waves his hat saying D—n your Eyes you Bch cry Croker. A chimney-sweep (r.) holds up his brush shouting No blue [word obliterated], Obadiah & S' Abigail for ever.

Henry Cruger was member for Bristol from 1774 to 1780, when (like Burke) he was defeated at the general election. Sir Henry Lippincott, one of the successful candidates, died shortly afterwards, and there was a close contest between Cruger and George Daubeny. By 20 Feb. 1781 both candidates had obtained 2,474 votes. Public Advertiser, 20 Feb. 1781. His election was financed by the Treasury, see Parliamentary Papers of John Robinson, ed. Laprade, 1922, p. 37; Corr. of George III, v. 466, 470. See also Oldfield, Representative History, iv. 415. Cruger was born and educated in America, and his correspondence shows that he had in fact been eager for the independence of America.¹ Namier, England in the Age of the American Revolution, p. 297. At the election of 1780 the American flag was hoisted on many of the churches to suggest that he wished for the success of America. Einstein, Divided Loyalties, 1933, p. 260. He became Mayor of Bristol in 1781, and again M.P. for Bristol in 1784.

Evidently the work of an amateur.

5 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5833 LIBERTY ENLIGHTNED

[n.d. 1781]

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5832. An elderly man supports on his head and shoulders a younger man wearing a bag-wig, who lies limply, ¹ He congratulates John Hancock (5 Mar. 1783) and his countrymen on 'the accomplishment of our most sanguine wishes—the Liberty and Independency of America', and informs him of the connexion he has formed with men 'whose attachment to the American Cause and whose open exertions in it, have at times brought upon them the most furious persecutions of the Enemies of Liberty. As we have long been united in one political principle, which at length is happily Triumphant, we are encouraged to form a Commercial Connexion . . .'. New-England Historical and Genealogical Register, xxviii. 51.

holding a striped American flag, and saying, Go on the Voice of My People is the Voice of God, But Oh Im Sick I feel myself Falling; CRUGER. A ticket is tied to his leg addressed To Peter Wick Philladelph[ia]. A little boy says to the man supporting Cruger, Twig Father Peach. Cruger was the son-in-law of Samuel Peach, a prominent Bristol merchant and slave-trader. America, as an American Indian with a head-dress and girdle of feathers, a tomahawk and scalping-knife in his belt, stands (l.) looking at Cruger, saying Is our Poor Doodle sick then Farewell, Independence; his feet are the claws of a bird of prey. (Cruger was known in Bristol as Doodle Doo. Einstein, Divided Loyalties, p. 247.) On the l. three men stand behind America: one holds up his hands saying, O we Poor Devils of Yankeys the English have Deceiv'd us, another says, and our Spy, is Surrounded by a Thousand Various Difficulties. The third, who holds a staff and a lantern, says Lighten our Darkness we beseech O Liberty; these two wear election favours in their hats. At their feet is a large coil of rope inscribed, I shall be of Service to Your Congress, probably implying that Cruger had been exporting naval stores to America. On the r. a man with a wooden leg is playing a fiddle, from his mouth comes a label In Old Oliver's Days &c. Behind are two small figures with flags, one inscribed Cruger and Wooden Loaf will gull the Mob, the other, Supporter of rebellion; one waves his hat saying Behold this Pious Dame. At their feet is a fire on which is an open book inscribed Fast Day Prayer. (Fast days were ordered from time to time, when there was a service with prayers and sermon for the successful issue of the war.)

Behind is a church, a flag flies from its tower inscribed Everlasting Prosperity to our Church & King DAUBENY. Outside it are men holding up clubs and stones, saying an excellent place for S^t Abigals. In the sky (r.) is a figure of Fame with two trumpets; through one she announces, A Broughtonian Bully a Slanderer of Virtue a Yankee Whoremonger.

This illustrates the contest between Cruger and Daubeny at the by-election for Bristol in February 1781. Cruger was born and educated in America, and eager for the independence of America, see No. 5832 n., though his speeches in the House of Commons in 1775 had been moderate. Einstein, op. cit., Chap. vii, and Dict. Am. Biog.

6×9 $\frac{3}{8}$ in (pl.).

5834 THE BUDGET.

*Published as the Act directs March 1, 1781 by W. Phelps.*¹

Engraving between two columns of explanatory text attacking the finance of the Government. Plate III in a set of three, see No. 5788. A grotesque monster with four feet, two arms with claws, and a second head in place of its tail represents the National Debt. On its back sit three headless men. It carries a standard inscribed I am the Kings Friend It's I that Builds his Ships, Mans his Navy, Recruits his Army & I am Grand Pay Master. A label above its head is inscribed I will support my friends I have had enough for them all. It devours a paper inscribed 20 millions more. Under its feet are papers inscribed 30 Millions more and 40 Millions more. With one of its claws it gashes the breast of Britannia (l.), who stands by its head, one of its fore-paws rests on her foot. She puts her hand on a small British lion which frolics beside her, saying to it, Oh Woe is me poor fellow thou canst not help me. The monster is saying to Britannia, I have you & will keep you fast. On one of its arms hangs a watch and a bunch of seals. The headless rider in the centre (whose figure suggests Lord North) is saying my heart will Burst through my skin for Joy we Carry every thing our own way, the other two say: & mine; and mine too.

¹ The whole sheet is Published as the Act Directs, March 1, 1781, and Sold by Messrs. Almon and Debrett, in Piccadilly; M^r Shepperson, No. 137 Oxford-Road; James Mathews, No. 18, in the Strand, near Charing-Cross; Messrs. Bull on Ludgate-Hill; and Edward Hedges, at the Royal Exchange; &c. &c. &c. [Price One Shilling and Sixpence plain, & Two Shillings and Sixpence coloured.]

The head at the tail of the animal resembles that of a tiger, it is disgorging a quantity of empty bags and papers inscribed, empty; empty, &c., and is saying, there my Friends take all the Produce for you Richly Deserve it. A well-dressed man (r.) stoops over the heap and picks up a bag, saying heres nothing in it! what all Empty. Another behind him says, we are all undone.

Behind the monster (r.) stands a man holding a flag, pointing to the beast and saying Your Friends have no Heads. His flag is inscribed I should be sorry he had no Better [? head]. It is you that Strips the Country of our finest Youths and Robs the Parents of their Children the Maidens of their Sweet hearts & Drain the land of its wealth for a Shadow. Behind him stands a crowd of melancholy-looking citizens, the two foremost are saying we are all undone what must we do, and Oh, oh, oh.

In the lower part of the print (l.) a basket and a sack are inscribed Salt, three casks inscribed respectively Tobacco, Porter, Wine, and two chests, one inscribed 120,000 guineas for America. A cat-faced monster is nibbling at the barrel of Porter. In the centre is a low square table laid for a meal, the centre dish being an infant inscribed a luscious Bit; demons and almost-nude men with claws surround the table, one is about to devour the child. Behind the table two monsters, one semi-human, are devouring a ham, one saying its Mine. A basket of loaves and three fish are inscribed Provisions for our Friends. Another group (r.) of casks, &c., is inscribed Cider, Sugar, Rum, Brandy; two monster-like animals are trying to devour their contents.

In the upper l. corner of the print is engraved as if on a placard or poster:

Stock Exchange

3 p ^r Cent Reduced	Nil
3 D ^o Consol	58
3 & ½	Shut.
4 p ^r Cent Consol	57
4 p ^r Cent 1777	71
Short Annuities	Shut
South Seas	Shut
Navy	13 Dis ^s .
Omnium Nil.

The explanatory text suggests, though not explicitly, that these monsters are financiers fattening on the wealth of the nation, while the population is heavily taxed and impoverished.

This (unless ante-dated) anticipates the attack by the Opposition on Government finance and the 1781 Loan. See Parl. Hist. xxi. 1325 ff., 1379 (1, 7, and 21 Mar.), and Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 90 f. See No. 5835.

8½ × 9½ in.

5835 A FOLLOWER OF ST LUKE.

T P G

Pub by M Darly N^o 159 Fleet Street, March 20. 1781.

Engraving. A market-woman sits on a low stool; beside her is a wicker cage containing ducks, one of which has escaped and walks across the pavement. She says to a boy who stands watching, Go my lad catch that duck for me its lame & cannot run far. He answers Tis a pity to spoil an old proverb—Birds of a feather flock together. The duck is walking behind a man foppishly dressed, but out at elbows, and with holes in his coat and breeches. His beard and profile show that he is a Jew. He says, Tis hard to be cut off with a 6th part when I sent up my name for £100,000. I had borrowed money to make up the first payment & I now find I am quite thrown out. Behind is the wall of a building inscribed Bank; in it are two open arches. Beneath the title is engraved, St. Luke Chap. 10 & 4 Verse, Carry neither purse nor Scrip.

A person who cannot keep his engagements on the Stock Exchange was called a lame duck, the Jew and the duck being 'birds of a feather'; cf. No. 6273. A satire on the then common practice of raising Government loans by which the loan was distributed among bankers and merchants, subdivided among their customers, and sold at a premium, the first contractors being seldom called on to pay more than a first instalment, after which they sold at a profit. The Government was violently attacked for using the 1781 Loan (twelve millions) as a means of corruption. See No. 5834.

6½ × 9¼ in.

5835 A Another impression, probably earlier, in which the publication line is without a date. The Jew is saying, Tis hard to be cut off with a Shilling [ut supra].

5836 THE HONBLE CHARLES JAMES FOX.

[1 Apr. 1781]

Engraving. Political Magazine, ii. 157. Bust portrait of Fox in an oval frame; beneath the oval is an 'Emblematical Representation of Opposition' (p. 159) illustrating a very hostile account of Fox and the Holland family, pp. 156–9. In front of Westminster Hall stands the headless statue of a king holding the orb; he stands on a rectangular pedestal inscribed MAGNA CHARTA. A satyr (l.) is breaking the sceptre across his knee. The king's head lies on the ground beside him. A man with ass's ears raises a pickaxe to strike the pedestal, he is 'Ignorance with his mattock attacking Magna Charta'. A dishevelled woman holds the staff and cap of liberty, she is 'faction disguised under the ensign and masque of liberty'. A man with a raised club (r.) is about to strike the statue. He is 'popular rage depicted under the figure of a clown' (p. 159). This scene is bordered by a draped curtain, it and the portrait of Fox are set in a rectangle decorated with engraved lines.

For similar attacks on Fox cf. Nos. 5962, 5979, &c. One of the few prints attacking the Opposition, see No. 5334, &c.

5⅞ × 3¾ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 3557 v.

5837 THE DUTCHMAN IN THE DUMPS.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d April 9th 1781, by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. Figures representing the five countries who were at war. A tall Dutchman stands looking up with a face of despair, in his l. hand he holds out a paper inscribed, Eustatia lost, Oh! Oh! He says,

*I shall Die, I'm undone!
My best hope is now gone!*

A laughing English sailor (l.) standing on his r. holds a small bottle inscribed Gin to his nose, saying,

High & Mighty's^t your Grief, Smell this for Relief.

In his r. hand he holds a netted purse taken from the Dutchman. On the r. stand the other enemy powers: Spain, in slashed doublet, cloak, feathered hat, and top-boots, is reading a newspaper Gaze, [London Gazette] and saying,

*If this News is true,
It will make us all rue.*

Behind him are France (l.) and America (r.). France holds up his hands with an expression of alarm, saying,

S^t Eustatia by Gar, Vas de Storehouse of War.

America, a slim youth, the most insignificant of the five, is saying,

*America now,
To Old England must bow.*

The Dutch island of St. Eustatius, a great depot under a neutral flag for provisioning the enemy since the beginning of hostilities, see No. 5557, &c., was seized by Rodney, with much shipping and valuable stores, on 3 Feb. 1781. A convoy which had just left for Europe with a Dutch flag-ship was also taken. The news was published in an Extraordinary Gazette of 13 Mar. 1781. See Nos. 5838, 5839, 5842, 5923.

7 $\frac{5}{16}$ × 7 in.

5838 THE OVERJOY OF M. DE. LA. MOTTE. PIQUET. AT THE BRINGING OF THE S^T EUSTATIA FLEET INTO BREST.L: Sandwig Inv^tPub. May .II. 1781. by E. Hedges Cornhill London as the Act Directs

Engraving (coloured impression). The French admiral grotesquely caricatured is dancing with joy, trampling on a flag inscribed Colour[s] of England. He is lean and dressed like the French officer of caricature, with a very long pigtail queue, a laced and feathered hat, a tasselled cane under his l. arm, and tassels on his sword. He wears top-boots, striped stockings, ruffled shirt, and large epaulettes. His r. fist is clenched. Over his head is engraved Begar how we did make the English run. In the distance is a fleet of ships in full sail making for a castle flying the French flag and inscribed Brest.

¹ An allusion to Hogen Mogen, 'the high mightinesses', or the States General of the United Provinces.

Rodney sent captured merchandise from St. Eustatius in thirty-four merchant ships convoyed by two ships of the line and three frigates under Commodore Hotham. The British Grand Fleet was relieving Gibraltar, so La Motte Piquet was ordered to sea on 25 Apr. to intercept the convoy. He captured twenty ships whose cargoes were valued at nearly £5,000,000 and took them into Brest. The remainder managed to reach Berhaven. W. M. James, The British Navy in Adversity, 1926, pp. 305-6. The artist's name attributes the misfortune to Lord Sandwich. See Nos. 5837, 5839, 5842.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 4\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5839 ENGLISHCH PRINTET.

[1781]

[ENGLISH PRINT.]

Engraving. The figures have numbers referring to a printed explanation in Dutch below the print. In the foreground is a procession (l. to r.) of men and animals: in front is a stout-looking man (4) being thrown by a donkey whose heels are in the air. Next comes a unicorn on whose back sits a cock (5), reins going from the animal's mouth to the cock's feet. Next is a goat on which sits a man (6), his face to the animal's tail. Last comes a small two-wheeled cart drawn by a lion which is rather smaller than the goat. A man (7) sits in the cart driving the lion.

Behind, across two-thirds of the design, is a long table behind which sit eight men conversing with each other in pairs. The four on the l. wear wigs, without hats, the other four wear hats. All wear clerical or legal bands. The first four heads have been copied from the heads in No. 5170, Wigs, one (r.) being that which is probably a portrait of Lord Chancellor Bathurst. All are in reverse except that two heads facing one another in profile are from the same original. The other four heads are copied, also in reverse, from No. 5169, Hats, bands having been added in two instances. These eight persons are all numbered (1).

In the upper r. corner of the design four sailors (2), wearing trousers, are dancing to a fiddle which is played by a man (3) with long feathers in his cap.

The explanation is here translated:

N^o 1. My lords and noblemen in the parliament assembly. Lord North pointing to the atlas [not depicted] where he wishes to have a good part for himself, and the rest for his good friends.

N^o 2. Four French sailors dancing, delighted at the capture of the convoy from S^t Eustatius which has arrived safely at Brest.

N^o 3. An American musician playing an English 'Contredans'.

N^o 4. The Englishman on an American ass which flings him to the ground. Although the long-eared beast is accustomed to bear burdens He feels this one is too heavy, and will endure no British blows. He flings down this big idiot, yet it seems that he calls out, I am, oh sick of roast beef, your living stink-ass no more.

N^o 5. The French cock driving the British unicorn. One can well keep a snorting horse from running away, So shall I, your lordship, prevent it from running away;

*While this brisk cock with its spurs
Shall teach you your paces in the hot open sand.*

N^o 6. *The Englishman sitting backwards on a Spanish goat.
How this goat smiles at the British appearance and tricks:
Let England's chief wear baby-clothes
Would the man then become a child? Wretched Parliament!
Do it all in a mad fit of passion! but look however to the conclusion.*

N^o 7. *An Englishman sitting in a small cart driving a lion.
Already the Dutch lion begins to look round
Fear then faithless Ally, he shall not yield to you
Ancient Batoos, famous of old, known everywhere
Makes him see how this wheel turns round and round.*

Batoos is the legendary founder of Batavia. For the capture of the convoy from St. Eustatius see No. 5838. For other Dutch prints see Nos. 5712-34, 5859, 6292.

Van Stolk, No. 4336. Muller, No. 4383.

6 × 11 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5840 A MEMORIAL CYPHER, PORTRAIT AND ARMS, OF LORD GEORGE GORDON, PRESIDENT OF THE PROTESTANT ASSOCIATION.

C. Hall del et Sculp.

Published as the Act directs May 18. 1781. by Hall N^o 2. Grafton Street Soho London.

Engraving. A miniature bust portrait in an oval, as if suspended from a cypher, G G, formed of garlands of ivy-leaves (the Gordon badge) and roses. From the base of the oval is suspended (incorrectly) a baron's coronet and arms, three boars' heads on a shield. Intertwined with the cypher is a ribbon on which is engraved Called and Chosen and Faithfull. Above the cypher is a wreath, from which spring conventional palm-branches to suggest a martyr's crown. Within the wreath is engraved Feb^{ry} 6th 1781; above the wreath is Patiens, Passus, Honorably Acquited.

Gordon was tried for high treason in the King's Bench on 5 Feb., the court sitting from 8 a.m. till 5.15 a.m. on the following day. He had at this time gained great popularity among the Methodists. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, pp. 348, 366, 373.

For Gordon as the Protestant Hero see also Nos. 5672, 5694, 5841. For other prints published in the interests of the Protestant Association see No. 5534, &c. For the Riots see Nos. 5679, 5684, 5685, 5686, 5841, 5844. 6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5841 THE MEMBERS OF THE PROTESTANT ASSOCIATION OF LONDON, WESTMINSTER, SOUTHWARK, &c. . . . [? 1781]

Engraved from an Original Drawing by Mr Wooding.

Published by Alex^r Hogg at the Kings Arms Paternoster Row.

Engraving. Plate from Fox's Book of Martyrs, ed. Paul Wright, n.d. (after p. 952). Palace Yard filled with an orderly procession of soberly-dressed and highly respectable men marching l. to r. At their head, but preceded by a body of men with a banner, is a stout man carrying on his shoulders an enormous roll inscribed Protestant Petition. Three banners are carried, two inscribed Protestant Association, the other No Popery. A few men wave their hats. In the background (l.) are houses, the windows filled with spectators, and (r.) the House of Lords. In the foreground (l.) sits an apple-woman beside her stall. After the title is engraved, peaceably proceeding to the House of Commons, on Friday June 2, 1780 (in consequence of which being previously advertised, upwards of 40,000 Persons had assembled in St George's Fields . . . with their Petition which was carried by Mr Hodgkinson, and presented to the House by their President, Lord George Gordon . . . on which occasion the mischievous Emissaries of the Papists, taking advantage of the opportunity, caused the subsequent Insurrections & Riots that the odium might be thrown on the Protestants . . . & Lord George Gordon was committed close Prisoner to the Tower, as the principal Abettor of the Riots but was honourably Acquitted . . . Feb^{ry} 6 1781, to the entire Satisfaction of all real Friends to Civil & Religious Liberty, and the Protestant cause. Nor was there ever one single Person either convicted, tried or even apprehended, on suspicion . . . who was a member of that Respectable Body, the Protestant Association.

No-Popery propaganda, the procession having no resemblance to the disorderly scene in Palace Yard on 2 June 1780. For the Gordon Riots see Nos. 5679, 5684, 5685, 5686, 5844, and for Gordon as Protestant Hero Nos. 5672, 5694, 5840. For other prints published in the interests of the Protestant Association see No. 5534, &c.

$7\frac{3}{16} \times 12\frac{1}{2}$ in. (subject), $8\frac{7}{8} \times 13\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5842 THE LATE AUCTION AT ST EUSTATIA.

[T. Colley?]

1781. Pub: by E. Hedges N 92 Cornhill London June 11.

Engraving. The interior of an auction-room; through an open door (l.) is the sea, with ships flying the British flag. In the auctioneer's rostrum, on the extreme r., stands Admiral Rodney, in profile to the l., holding up a shoe-buckle in his r. hand, a hammer in his l. He is saying, This fashionable Pair of Buckles going to be knock'd down to their Original Owner at one Guinea does nobody advance upon one Guinea 2 going going 22^s is bid Gentlemen. His clerk, in officer's uniform (General Vaughan), stands below him in the desk which forms the lower part of the rostrum; he is writing (with his l. hand) The Last days sale. . . . A man stands obsequiously in front of him, hat in hand, a folded umbrella or parasol under his l. arm, saying if I purchase the Provision & naval Stores that were formerly mine, may I Ship them to any Neutral Island. Vaughan answers, Ay Ay, if you give a good price for them you may Ship them to the Devil, & goe with them yourself as super-cargo if you like it. On the side of the rostrum papers are nailed up inscribed, Inventories of Effects belonging to the Inhabit^{ts} of St Eustatia. Below hangs a bunch of keys labelled Keys of the Stores. Behind the man speaking to Vaughan is a group of three men: a Spaniard in a cloak and feathered hat is seen in back-view; a man facing Rodney bids a Guinea for the buckles, his own shoes are without buckles and unfastened; behind him a Dutchman with a folded parasol under his arm says, Twenty two Shillings.

On the l. three men stand in conversation; one says, When will Ad—l Rod—y & Gen^l: Vaun leave this Island. A Spanish don answers him:

I shou'd imagine tomorrow, as the Sale will be closed to night. The third, who holds a closed umbrella, says, if he had done his Duty, & had been with his fleet instead of keeping 3 ships of the line here while he was minding the sales we should have beat the french off Martinico.

On the extreme l., looking out to sea through the open door are a Frenchman and a Dutchman. The Frenchman asks What ship is that; the Dutchman (in back view) answers The Sandwich waiting till the sales are Close'd to take Adm——l Rod——y & Gen Vaun to the Fleet. Outside the door a man is about to enter the auction-room. A man standing by the door offers him a paper, saying walk in Sir heres a Catalogue.

A satire on the conduct of Rodney and Vaughan at St. Eustatius. Rodney wrote, 4 Mar. 1781, to Germain, 'Except for supplies from the island and from British subjects there, who meanly condescended to become Dutch burghers (and as such they shall be treated) the American Revolution had long been at an end'. Hist. MSS. Comm., Stopford Sackville MSS., ii, 1910, p. 202. The spoils were given by the king to the Army and Navy, consequently, it was alleged, Rodney and Vaughan remained there for three months, and were accused of plundering and deporting Englishmen. Rodney confiscated the whole of the merchandise, sold some by auction and sent the rest under convoy to England (see Nos. 5837-5839), and deported English, Dutch, Jews, French, and Americans. Charges and counter-charges filled the newspapers, and there was an important debate on 14 May 1781, on Burke's motion for an inquiry (cf. No. 5854). It was defeated, but was again brought forward on 4 Dec. 1781, when Rodney and Vaughan defended themselves, Rodney asserting that his seizure was for the sole benefit of the Crown, since he did not learn of the king's gift till long afterwards. Parl. Hist. xvii. 218 ff., 769 ff. Ann. Reg., 1781, p. 195; 1782, pp. 137 ff. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii, pp. 115-17. W. M. James, The British Navy in Adversity, 1926, pp. 254 ff. The seizure of English goods involved Rodney in long and expensive lawsuits, claims being made against him exceeding the whole value of the captured property. Mundy, Life of Rodney, ii. 366-9. J. F. Jameson, 'St. Eustatius in the American Revolution', Am. Hist. Review, viii, p. 697 ff. To Rodney's prolonged stay at St. Eustatius has been attributed the loss of the command of the sea leading to the surrender at York Town. Mahan, Influence of Sea Power, 1890, pp. 382-400.

For St. Eustatius see No. 5557, &c., and p. 559.

For the dismay caused to the patriots by its capture see No. 5923.

8 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5843 A PHILLIPICK TO THE GEESE

Pub. by E. Hedges N^o 92 Under the Royal Exchange Cornhill June 25 1781

Engraving. A fox (l.) on its hind-legs addresses four geese standing by the side of a pond who stretch out their necks towards him. In the pond five goslings are swimming. The fox, C. J. Fox, says, I promise ye upon my Honour that I always was & will be a friend to the Geese. The geese (l. to r.) say pray accept of a Gosling; Fox is the guardian of the Geese; Fox for ever; O Noble Fox. The scene is a field with a hedge in the background. Beneath the design is engraved:

*As far as Geese could Judge they Reason'd Right
But as to Fox mistook the matter Quite. Pope*

The first of many satires in which geese represent the electors of Westminster, or other persons beguiled by Fox, see Nos. 6013, 6211, 6215, 6220, 6261, 6278, 6287 (2).

6½ × 8½ in.

5844 AN EXACT REPRESENTATION OF THE BURNING, PLUNDERING AND DESTRUCTION OF NEWGATE BY THE RIOTERS ON THE MEMORABLE 7TH OF JUNE 1780.

O Neil del.

H. Roberts sc.

London Publish'd as the Act directs, July 10th 1781 by P. Mitchell.

North Audley Street Grosvenor Square and J. Fielding N^o 23. Pater Noster Row.

Engraving. Gordon rioters in front of Newgate, which is in flames. This is a more or less exact representation of the scene (with some details introduced which occurred elsewhere during the riots) as described in letters, &c., in the press, and by the witnesses at the subsequent trials—a combination of frenzy, drunkenness, and good humour. Flames are pouring from the central façade of the prison, a man on a ladder holds up a torch and a hammer. The foreground is crowded with figures. There are three No Popery flags. A man on horseback (r.) harangues the mob with a drawn sword saying Courage my boys this is for the glory of the good old Cause. Released prisoners (r.) still in irons are talking and drinking with young women. On the l. a smith removes the irons from a prisoner. A black wields an axe, another carries off a large box. On the l. a man is delivering pamphlets inscribed England in Blood, The Scourge, and The Thunderer. These were very inflammatory pamphlets directed against the Government, the King, Lord Mansfield, &c., published on the eve of the riots by W. Moore, against whom Wilkes issued a warrant on 10 June. De Castro, Gordon Riots, p. 191, see also No. 5829. A man stands on an improvised platform holding up a sword and a paper inscribed Death or Liberty & No Popery. The keys of the prison are held up on a pitchfork. A man rings a hand-bell. A man (l.) sits on the box-seat of a coach waving his hat. A woman wheels a drunken man in a wheelbarrow. A released prisoner in irons is carried on a man's shoulders, he waves his hat, calling No Popery d—n my eyes. Almost all the men wear ribbon favours in their hats, the blue ribbon of the Protestant Association.

For the Gordon Riots see Nos. 5679, 5684, 5685, 5686, 5841, &c.

11 × 17 in.

5845 PENSIONARY VAN BERKEL.

J. Van Shroeter pinx^t—J. Kent fecit.

[Gillray.]

London. Pub^d July 4th 1781 by J. Kent

Aquatint. H.L. portrait in an oval, facing T.Q. to r., of Van Berckel. He is stout, wears a conical cap, a furred robe over a waistcoat; a plain cravat is tied round his neck. He was Pensionary of Amsterdam, very hostile to England, and the chief advocate in the United Provinces of war with England. See F. P. Renaut, Les Provinces-Unies et la Guerre d'Amérique, v, 1925, p. 235, &c., and No. 5733. The names of the artists may have some political or personal significance now obscure. A companion print to No. 5846. A coloured impression is in 'Caricatures', v, p. 17. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

Grego, Gillray, p. 32.

$8\frac{7}{16} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5846 MARQUIS LA FAYETTE.

La Fevre pinxt J. Kent fecit.

[Gillray.]

London Publ July 4th 1781 by J. Kent

Aquatint. Bust portrait in an oval of Lafayette looking to the l. Scarcely a caricature except that the face and figure are somewhat elongated. At this time Lafayette was at the head of the forces opposing Cornwallis in Virginia. A companion print to No. 5845.

Grego, Gillray, p. 31.

$8\frac{5}{16} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5847 F H DE LA MOTTE

Pub: as the Act directs By J^{no} Smith Price Sixpence 27 July 1781

Engraving. Bust portrait (not caricature) in profile to the r. of the French spy de la Motte. His hair is in a short pigtail queue, he wears a plain coat and ruffled shirt. The portrait is in an oval which is tied by a ribbon (on which the title is engraved) to a nail. The oval is surrounded by foliage and by objects representing and symbolizing the sentence for high treason: a knife and broken column (l.), an axe, a rope, and a fire (r.).

De la Motte was sentenced at the Old Bailey, 14 July 1781 (State Trials, xxi. 687 ff.). He had systematically collected important naval and military information since Jan. 1780 and had sent it to France. On 27 July he was executed at Tyburn before an immense crowd. There seems to have been little hostility towards him, and newspaper comments on his death are sympathetic. Cf. London Chronicle, 26-8 July 1781.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ in. (oval, $4\frac{1}{16} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ in.).

5848 A SKETCH OF THE ENGAGEMENT UNDER THE COMMAND OF VICE ADMIRAL PARKER ON THE DOGGER BANK WITH THE DUTCH SQUADRON OF MUCH SUPERIOR FORCE AUG^T 5. 1781

Drawn by an officer on the Spot. [T. Colley?]

Pub Aug^t 9. 1681 by Tho^s Colley N^o 288 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A plan of the naval engagement of 5 Aug. 1781, showing the English coast from the Wash to Ipswich and the Dutch coast west and east of the Texel. The English ships, the Dutch fleet in action, and the Dutch convoy are indicated by letters (A to Q). The English ships are named, and a flag above the surface of the sea shows A 74 Dutch ship sunk in 22 fathoms of water. The title and the key to the letters indicating the ships are engraved in a rectangle inset at the lower l. corner. This rectangle partly conceals an English sailor who strikes with his fist the head of a disconsolate Dutchman, who makes no resistance. The sailor says, Bla—t my Eyes Get Back in the Texel. The Dutchman says I'm sinking.

This engagement was claimed by the English and Dutch as a victory: the Dutch losses exceeded the British, the British homeward-bound convoy returned safely, the Dutch convoy, outward-bound, returned to the Texel in disorder. See W. M. James, The British Navy in Adversity, 1926, pp. 310 ff. It was the subject of many Dutch prints, see Van Stolk, Nos. 4365-84, 4387-9. (Nos. 4385 and 4386 are English prints of the battle.)

Parker's letter (not dispatch) of 6 Aug. was published in an Extraordinary Gazette of 9 Aug., which suggests that the print may be ante-dated.

$9\frac{3}{8} \times 13\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5849 THE C—Y [CITY] CANDIDATES.

Publis^d as the Act Sept^r 11th 1781 [sic] Price 6^d

Engraving. A race between three candidates for the by-election for the City of London, caused by the death of Alderman Hayley on 30 Aug. In front is Sir Watkin Lewes, the Lord Mayor, riding a goat as an emblem of Wales; his civic chain is round his neck and he holds up the City mace in his l. hand. He wears a gorget and the hat of a military officer. (He was colonel of the Sixth Regiment of the City Militia.) He says, Ye Quakers of Wors'ter Farwell. Next comes Lord George Gordon riding on the back of a Scottish presbyterian minister, wearing a plaid and clerical bands, who proceeds on his hands and feet, spurred by his rider. Lord George holds up an open book, inscribed on one page Scotlands Opposition, on the other, To the K—g. He had recently written to North, asking leave to present to the king in person a book, 'Scotland's Opposition to the Popish Bill'. London Chronicle, 4-6 Sept.; Corr. of George III, v. 277-82. He is saying My Flaming Virtues will recommend me (an allusion to the Gordon Riots). Lord G. Gordon, amongst others, 'presented himself as a candidate' to succeed Hayley. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 372.

The third candidate is riding astride on the stone of a grindstone which is inscribed, knives to grind. He holds up a short staff inscribed Law and is saying I hope I sha'nt be always Last.

The only two candidates who ultimately presented themselves for election were Watkin Lewes and Alderman Clark. Lewes, one of the City patriots (see index), was elected; in his speech to the Livery he said he had thrice been a candidate, had had 'an undoubted majority of the legal, uncorrupt voters' at Worcester [1774] but had been defeated on petition. He was elected (29 Sept. 1781) by 2,685 to 2,387. London Chronicle, 22-5 Sept., 27-9 Sept. For the king's anxiety for his defeat see Hist. MSS. Comm., Abergavenny MSS., 1887, pp. 43, 44-5. See also No. 5852.

An undated print, S^r Watty on full gallop to the election, has been dated by Miss Banks Apr. 1784, showing that it was used for the general election of that year, and it is catalogued under that date. It may, however, have been first issued for the election of 1781.

$5\frac{3}{16} \times 10$ in.

5850 THE STATE NURSES.

[? After Viscount Townshend.]

Pub: by T. Colley Oct^r 1. 1781. High Holborn

Engraving. The British Lion in a cradle, surrounded by barking dogs; the two 'State Nurses' are Mansfield and Sandwich, one on each side of the cradle. The lion is asleep, and tucked under a coverlet on which are laid a rose and a thistle, the thistle lying across the rose to indicate the supposed predominance of Scottish counsels. The head of the cradle is decorated by three crowns. Two dogs stand together (r.), one inscribed Spain, the other, very lean, is France. Spain says I'll have Gibraltar Minorca and Florida; France says, Barbadoes Jamaica Jersey &c. &c. for me. The two other dogs, America and Holland, stand in front of the cradle. America is befouling a paper inscribed Tea Act and is saying, Independance & no Taxation. Holland says Armed Neutrality & free Navigation. Mansfield (l.) is seated on a chair by the head of the cradle, he is in judge's wig and robe which is thrown open to display knee breeches and bare legs with short tartan stockings indicating his Scottish nationality. He holds two broken poles against his shoulder, and is saying to the dogs, Hoot avau ye bougers do ye no ken the bairns asleep. One foot rests on two documents, Habeas Corpus and [Magn]a Charta. Sandwich stands by the cradle on the other side, saying Get away raw head & bloody bones here is a Child dont fear ye. From his pocket hangs a musical score and a paper inscribed Lets drink & lets sing together, an allusion to his fondness for singing catches, see No. 5540, &c. For other references to the tax on tea see No. 5490, &c., for the Armed Neutrality No. 5714, &c.

In the background (l.) is a rocky mound inscribed Gibraltar round which is a semicircle of guns, lobbing cannon-balls over a line of fortifications. On the r., on rising ground, is a castle flying the Union flag inscribed Windsor. At the base of the hill a stag-hunt is in progress, the stag, dogs, and three huntsmen being on a minute scale. The third rider, who is partly cut off by the r. margin of the print, appears to wear a Garter ribbon and is evidently the king, cf. No. 5961.

In the manner of Lord Townshend.

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 10\frac{11}{16}$ in.

5851 ADDRESS

Cap^t Morse del.

Stephanoff Sculp, Oct. 4 1781.

Publish'd as the Act Directs.

Stipple. The king on the throne (r.). Behind him on the dais is a group of ladies, among whom Queen Charlotte, putting a smelling-bottle to her nose, is conspicuous. They watch the approach of the Lord Mayor followed by aldermen in furred livery-gowns, Wilkes being on the extreme l. The Mayor with a deprecatory expression is being dragged forward by Hertford, the Lord Chamberlain. Officers holding halberds make a pathway for their approach to the throne. Ministers and courtiers stand round the dais. Thurlow, in Chancellor's wig and gown, holds the bag of the Great Seal. North stands on the king's l. The ladies have expressions signifying contempt or amusement. After the title is written in a contemporary hand, 'or Approach of the Mayor and Corporation of London to the Throne'. The Mayor, 1780-1, was Sir Watkin Lewes.

An imaginary scene. Unless ante-dated it cannot represent the 'Address, Remonstrance and Petition' from the Lord Mayor, Alderman, and Livery voted in Common Hall 6 Dec. 1781. This was a protest against the war and a request that the king should dismiss all 'the Advisers both public and secret of the measures we lament'. As this was not the address of the Corporation (the Common Council having abstained) the king refused to receive it on the throne, offering to do so at the levée, to which the City would not consent. The Address was therefore not presented. London Chronicle, 6 Dec. 1781; Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 286; Sharpe, London and the Kingdom, iii. 193 ff.; Corr. of George III, v. 308-12. Cf. No. 5959.

8½ × 14½ in.

5852 AN ELECTI^oNEERING [sic] PROCESSION FROM THE M—N [MANSION] HOUSE TO G—D [GUILD] HALL.

J.N. [Nixon]

Pub^d Oct^r 25,¹ 1781. by W. Wells N^o 132 Fleet Street

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). An election procession of thirteen patriots walking from r. to l. wearing the colours of Sir Watkin Lewes, elected M.P. for the City, 29 Sept. 1781, see No. 5849. Two flags are carried, one Lewes & Freedom, the other, No Ministerial Influence, in reference to Lewes' speech on his election on 29 Sept. Two of the men are playing flutes, a third blows a horn. The figures are probably portraits; two are butchers wearing aprons, their steels hanging from their waists; beside one of them walks a muzzled dog with a collar inscribed Liberty; this butcher is eating as he walks. One man drinks a glass of wine, holding a lump of food in his l. hand. One with a swathed and gouty leg walks on crutches. All have election favours in their hats, these are inscribed respectively Lewes for ever; S^r Watkin for ever; Freedom; Lewes; No Bribery; Lewes; No Corruption. In the hat of the butcher with the dog is Freedom's my plan S^r Watkin is the Man.

The background is formed by the lower part of the façade of two houses in a street, the front of two shops being indicated. On the pavement (l.) four little chimney-sweeps are shouting and waving their hats and brushes.

Beneath the title is engraved:

*These stanch friends to freedom you here do behold,
Will be bribe'd with good eating tho' they spurn at y^r gold.
For offer them money it's such a disgrace,
'Tis a thousand to one they dont spit in your face.
But give them pudding & beef with compliments civil,
To serve you they'll go ay e'en to the devil.*

9½ × 15½ in.

5853 VIEW OF THE GUARD-HOUSE AND SIMSBURY-MINES
NOW CALLED NEWGATE,

A Prison for the Confinement of Loyalists in Connecticut

Pub: by J. Bew Pater Noster Row Nov 1st 1781. London.

Engraving. Political Magazine, ii. 596. The elevation of a small building and beneath it the section of a mine showing a vertical shaft or ladder leading from under the building, or guard-room, to the gallery of a mine which descends from it. A pipe descending vertically from the surface of the ground to the lower end of the mine, representing a shaft 70 feet in depth, and $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter, 'the only passage by which the prisoners are furnished with air'. Letters on the plan give references to the explanation which has been quoted.

¹ In the coloured impression '25' appears to have been altered to '26' or '28'.

One of the few pieces of graphic propaganda hostile to America, since it appears to have been an accurate representation of the mines which were used as a prison.

The explanation of the diagram concludes: 'The perusal of Capt. Hathaway's case, and glance at the sketch of the dungeon in which the Connecticut Rebels confine the loyalists, are recommended to the orators who harangued in Parliament in favour of the Rebel Prisoners.' A reference follows to the printed debates of 29 June 1781, in which the Opposition had complained that the food of American prisoners at Plymouth was insufficient. See Parl. Hist. xxii. 608 ff.

An account of the mines and of the escape of Hathaway was published in Rivington's Gazette, 9 June 1781, and is quoted by F. Moore, Diary of the American Revolution, 1863, ii. 434-6. For other anti-American prints see No. 5401, &c.

$6\frac{1}{16} \times 4\frac{3}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 3557 v.

5854 DON VOLASEO. THE FAMOUS SPANISH PARTIZAN.

Pub. by T. Colley Nov. 21. 1781. N^o 257, high Holborn

Sold by Cornell Bruton Street Bond Street

Engraving. A man in the dress of a military officer seated on a horse in profile to the r. He holds a drawn sabre in his r. hand. He wears spectacles and resembles caricature portraits of Burke. In the middle distance is a large military tent or marquee, like those in representations of the camps at Coxheath and Warley. In front of it, at a small round table, sits a lady drinking wine and gazing at the cavalier. On the sky-line is the façade of a house, the pediment of which has been grotesquely elevated into a steeple, perhaps intended for Gregories, Burke's country house.

Perhaps a satire on Burke's attitude to the war. He had violently attacked the confiscation of property on the Dutch island of St. Eustatius, see No. 5842, which included the property of Dutchmen, Americans, French, and Spaniards. Parl. Hist. xxii. 218 ff., 769 ff.

$8\frac{1}{4} \times 12\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5855 STATE COOKS, OR

THE DOWNFALL OF THE FISH KETTLE.

Pub^d Dec^r 10. 1781, by W. Wells N^o 132 Fleet Street.

Engraving. George III (l.) and Lord North (r.) stand disconsolately in a kitchen looking at a large open pan which has fallen to the floor from a hook over the fire; the fish, inscribed with the names of American colonies, have fallen out. There are thirteen, but New England is one and they include Quebec, Nova Scotia, E. Florida, and W. Florida. The king and North are wearing aprons, and the insignia of the Garter; their facial resemblance is stressed. From North's coat-pocket hangs a paper inscribed Plan of Taxes 1782. The king is saying O Boreas, the Loss of these Fish will ruin us for ever. North answers, My Honored Liege never Fret. Minden [Lord George Germain, Secretary of State for the Colonies] & I will cook

'em yet. On the wall behind North is a large Plan of North America in which York Town is conspicuous.

A satire on the effect of the surrender of Cornwallis at York Town on 19 Oct., news of which reached London on 25 Nov. See Walpole, Last Journals, ii. 378. Wraxall, Historical Memoirs, 1884, ii. 138 ff. See also Nos. 5856-61.

10 × 8 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5856 THE STATE WATCHMAN DISCOVER'D BY THE GENIUS OF BRITAIN, STUDYING PLANS FOR THE REDUCTION OF AMERICA.

[Rowlandson.]

Pub^d by I. Jones, 10 Dec. 1781.

Engraving. A circular design. George III (or Lord North) asleep on a sofa. He is in profile to the l., his head falling forwards, his r. arm resting on the back of the sofa, his r. leg extended on the sofa, his l. leg on the ground. Behind the sofa stand two figures: Britannia (l.) holding the cap of liberty on its staff, while her r. hand rests on the back of the sofa. An oval medallion ornamented with a St. George's cross hangs from her wrist, probably representing the arms of the City of London. She says Am I thus Protected? A small man leans on the back of the sofa saying Hollo Neighbour! what are you asleep. Published after news of the surrender at York Town, see No. 5855, &c.

Grego, Rowlandson, i. 105.

Diam. 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5857 LE GÉNÉRAL BURGOYNE A SARATOGA, LE 17 O^{bre} 1777.
A ÉTÉ PRIS PRISONNIER DE GUERRE AVEC TOUTE SON ARMÉE [n.d. 1781]

Engraving. A French satire. A soldier stands behind a turkey-cock holding both ends of a staff which has been put in the bird's beak. The turkey, which represents Burgoyne, wears top-boots and is shackled by his r. leg, on which is a garter inscribed Honi soit, though he was not a knight of the Garter. Other soldiers of the Continental Army stand in a semicircle behind the bird. Beneath the title is etched:

Extrait d'une lettre du général burgoyne. Et quoi vieux Renard, toi qui avais promis a la patrie de venger ses malheurs et réparer le mien, te voila pris toi même! Cependant, Milord, ne nous decourageons pas; tant quil restera un anglais, les destinées de la grande bretagne ne seront pas desespérées.

This purports to be a letter to Cornwallis on his surrender at York Town, which is the subject of a companion print by the same artist, see No. 5858.

Collection de Vinck, No. 1185.

4 $\frac{5}{16}$ × 4 $\frac{15}{16}$ in.

5858 LE GÉNÉRAL CORNWALLIS A YORCK LE 19 8^{bre} 1781
A ÉTÉ PRIS PRISONNIER DE GUERRE AVEC TOUTE SON ARMÉE [n.d. 1781]

Engraving. A French satire on the surrender at York Town. A companion print to No. 5857. A seated soldier (r.) holds a fox by its brush, while another lifts an axe in order to chop off the animal's tail. A third soldier with a musket stands at the head of the fox, Lord Cornwallis. The scene is the sea-shore and the sails and figure-head of a ship appear on the r. Beneath the title is etched:

Extrait de la réponse du général cornwallis Oui, je suis pris, mais n'ompas [sic] comme un dindon: je le suis sans que mon Etourderie ni ma jactance aient contribué à l'exécution des sages projets de nos Ennemis; cependant le sort maccable [sic] sans me décourager. J'espère tout de la fortune britannique et de la valeur de nos braves anglais; ils ont juré comme nous ils tiendront leur parole.

An answer to Burgoyne's letter, see No. 5857. See also No. 5855, &c.

For another French satire on Cornwallis see No. 6048. Collection de Vinck, No. 1185.

$4\frac{15}{16} \times 4\frac{5}{16}$ in.

An engraving by Godefroy, Reddition de l'Armée du Lord Cornwallis, after le Barbier, shows English officers giving up their swords and British soldiers piling their muskets.

No. 10 in Recueil d'Estampes représentant . . . la Guerre qui a procuré l'Indépendance aux Etats unis de l'Amérique. In Print Department.

Collection de Vinck, No. 1184.

5859 YORK TOWN

[1781]

N^o 2.

Engraving. A Dutch print, a sequel to No. 5726, which was copied from No. 5472. A symbolical representation of the surrender of Cornwallis at York Town. In the foreground (l.) is the cow representing English commerce, much emaciated, one horn cut off, the other broken, she tries to graze from bare thorny branches which lie by the sea-shore. Behind her is a Spaniard leaning on an altar inscribed Mexico Peru Chili, on which lies his sword; he holds a bowl. In front of him are a Frenchman and a Dutchman, representing France and Holland, the former holding a bowl and pointing towards buildings inscribed York Town; the latter walks off carrying a heavy pail. In the foreground is a large thistle and bare thorn branches, indicative of the Scottish advice which has brought English commerce to this extremity.

In the foreground (r.) is the grave Englishman of Nos. 5472, 5726, and 5727, kneeling on one knee, his hands clasped with an expression of despair. Behind him (r.) is the British lion seated, howling with pain and holding up a wounded paw. He has been hurt by the 'American Tea-pot', which lies at his feet. The dog looks at the Englishman. From an open chest rats have dragged bank-notes and bills, which they are gnawing, one is inscribed 600.

In the middle distance (r.) the surrender at York Town is taking place. Under a canopy, America, as a Red Indian woman, is seated on a bale of goods holding an unstrung bow, and stretching out her r. hand towards a Scot in Highland dress and three Englishmen who approach her with gestures of humility. At America's feet lie a yoke and shackles, both broken. Behind her stand a number of Americans with feathered head-dresses and persons in classical draperies: Justice with sword and scales, Perseus (?) with his Medusa shield, Hercules with his club, Truth with her mirror. Beside them (r.) another American is nailing up a cask inscribed Kadix, two other casks are inscribed Nantes and Marseille, indicating the commerce between America and Europe in which England (by implication) will no longer share. These figures are drawn with delicacy on a very small scale. Behind are towers and other buildings and a palm-tree. Off the shore is the ship Eagle, of No. 5472, &c., wrecked and half-submerged, but flying the British flag. Farther out is the French fleet with a ship's boat flying the French flag.

No title except the words etched over the buildings.

Another indication (cf. No. 5726, &c.) of the advantages which the Dutch expected to derive from commerce with America. For York Town see No. 5855, &c. For the Boston tea-party see No. 5490, &c.

Van Stolk, No. 4287 (2). Muller, No. 4337 (2).

$6\frac{1}{16} \times 10\frac{7}{16}$ in.

5860 JOHN · BULLS · ALTERNATIVE

[Pub. M. Darly. ? 1781.]¹

Engraving. John Bull stands on a stone on tiptoe under a tree, a rope round his neck attached to a branch of the tree. He holds the rope with both hands, to prevent strangulation. On the r. stands a Frenchman (France) holding out a leek to John Bull, between them is a stream or river. John Bull is a moderately stout man with a thick neck, wearing an ill-made bob-wig, not the characteristic John Bull of later satires, who had already appeared, see Nos. 5611, 5612. The Frenchman is very thin, wearing a night-cap, a long pigtail queue, a ruffled shirt, and sabots stuffed with grass.

John Bull must either eat the leek or be hanged. Perhaps a comment on York Town, see No. 5855, &c.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 9$ in.

5861 THE ANTIGALLICAN SPIRIT; HUMBLY INSCRIB'D TO CAPT: FORSTER & THE MANAGERS OF THE ANTIGALLICAN PRIVATE SHIP OF WAR. [? 1781²]

*Sold by T. Ewart the Corner of Hudsons Court near S^t Martin's Lane
Strand. Pr. 6^d*

Engraving. Two sailors stand on a quay, a river with ships behind them. Each grasps the other's l. hand. One (r.) waves his hat, saying, May the French Fleet be put up to Auction & the French King not have a penny of money to bid for it. A French flag flies from a building behind him. The other (l.) holds a brimming punch-bowl, and says, Here's to our noble Capt Forster and a safe Arrival of the Three Prizes in the River Thames. Beneath the design is engraved:

*Would Statesmen but this Picture View
Wear Hearts as honest and as True
The Haughty Gauls with Purse proud Spain
Would be our Vassals on the Main.*

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

¹ One of the prints included in the volume of Darly's caricatures with the title-page dated 1 Jan. 1776, see No. 5369. It is, however, without date or publication line. The latest print in the collection with Darly's imprint is No. 5835.

² Dated 1781 by Miss Banks, the date presumably of purchase.

5862 RECRUIT FRANCOIS | RECRUIT ANGLOIS OR THE CON-
TRASTED RECRUITS

[? c. 1781]

T. Colley Inv'

Engraving. A French recruit (l.), an English recruit (r.) face each other in profile, both are standing erect in a soldierly way, but are in civilian clothes except for the favour in the Englishman's round hat, and except for the bulky knapsack of fur or skin which each wears. They are described in words engraved beneath the title: Monsieur all ruffles no Shirt Wooden Pumps and Stockingless and Jack English with Ruddy face and belly full of Beef. The Frenchman holds a slim cane, the Englishman a stout cudgel. Behind the former (l.) are frogs and rats or mice, behind the latter cows and sheep, to illustrate the supposed contrast between French and English fare.

11 $\frac{7}{16}$ × 8 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

1781

PERSONAL SATIRES

5863-5875

Series of Tête-à-tête portraits.

5863 N° XXXIV. MISS SP—R.

N° XXXV. LORD S—.

Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street, Jan^y 1, 1781.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 633. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of Lord S—, (the Proselyte Peer) and Miss S—r'. An account of the Earl of Surrey (1746-1815), afterwards 11th Duke of Norfolk. He abjured the Roman Catholic Church in 1780 and became M.P. for Carlisle. Miss S. is the daughter of an attorney who did business for Lord S., but died insolvent.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5864 N° XXXVI. THE SUBTLE SEDUCER.

N° XXXVII. THE AMERICAN FINANCIER.

London, Published by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street Jan^y 20, 1781.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xii. 689. Two bust portraits in oval frames. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. A very hostile account of Dr. Richard Price, stressing his treatise on population, quoting his remarks on the increase of building in London, which he ascribes to an increase in luxury combined with a decrease in population. Miss P. is the daughter of an underwriter who has lost a fortune during the American War. Their relations are thought to be platonic, on account of the man's age, though he is alleged to be an adherent of Dr. Madan's views on polygamy, see No. 5768.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5865 N° II. THE FAIR OPHELIA.

N° III. THE ILLUSTRIOUS HEIR.

Published by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street Feb^y 1.; 1781.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the Prince of Wales, and of an actress who had married an attorney's clerk, whom the prince saw first in the part of Ophelia. Evidently Mrs. Robinson, but no allusion is made to the part of Perdita in which she impressed the Prince on 3 Dec. 1780.¹ Hamlet was played at Drury Lane on 21 Apr. 1780. Genest. vi. 133. This Tête-à-Tête is written with a certain reticence and decorum, with no allusion to the earlier one on Mrs. Robinson, see No. 5741. For the liaison see No. 5767, &c.

¹ The rupture between the Prince and Mrs. Robinson, and her threat to publish his letters, is referred to as 'chocolate house chat' in the Town and Country Magazine, Apr. 1781, xiii. 210.

$2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5866 N° IV. MRS B—N.

N° V. THE DARING MAGISTRATE.

Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street March 1; 1781.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or, Memoirs of the Daring Magistrate and M^{rs} Br—n'. An account of Brackley Kennett, Lord Mayor, notorious for his cowardice during the Gordon Riots. Beginning as an ostler in Yorkshire, he became a waiter in a Pall Mall house; he saved money and won a lottery prize, and 'commenced wine merchant'. Having acquired the good will and patronage of persons of quality by 'his former faithful services in many particular cases that required some address', he acquired a fortune, and his patrons, 'finding he made an excellent Butt', often admitted him into their company. He has admitted to 'a certain patriotic alderman' [Wilkes] that during the riots he was seized with a fit of temerity, and had not the power to move'. See also Nos. 5688, 5689, 5690, and City Biography, 1800, p. 139 f. Mrs. Br—n is the daughter of a bankrupt soap-boiler and the young widow of an officer in the customs, forced by destitution to accept the disagreeable offer of the daring magistrate.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5867 N° VII. MRS B—E.

N° VIII. THE CEREMONIAL MASTER.

Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr in Fleet Street, April 1; 1781.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 121. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .' [ut supra]. An account of a descendant of a noble family which has for a succession of years held a conspicuous post in the royal household. He is Sir Clement Cotterell-Dormer, Master of the Ceremonies, a post held for several generations in the Cotterell family. Mrs. B. was Betty Williams, daughter of a labouring man in Cobham, who became a nursemaid, lived with a naval surgeon, passing as his wife, and was left destitute.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5868 N° XIII. THE BIRD OF PARADISE.

N° XIV. COL. WITWOU'D.

London. Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street May 1st 1781.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. From his portrait he appears to be Colonel Boden, a favourite subject of the caricaturist, see Nos. 5753, 6064. He is here called Witwou'd because he is 'one of the greatest simile mongers in the three kingdoms'. His father was an officer in the army, much esteemed by the late Prince of Wales, through whose interest 'our hero obtained a pair of colours at a very early age'. He has thus been 'so long a public character'. He always paid great attention to 'the first-rate demi-reps, who took a pleasure in his company on account of the singularity of his conversation, accompanied by an extraordinary stammering'.

The lady, Mrs. M. [Mahon], descended from a noble family, tried unsuccessfully to make a good match, married M., from whom she separated, being kept first, it is said, by Lord L——n [Lyttelton]. On finding herself without a protector she obtained an engagement at Covent Garden, and 'has acted several times this season'. This was followed by a settlement from a nobleman, which enabled her to keep an elegant chariot with the arms of her family. His marriage was followed by overtures from Colonel W. See No. 5948.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5869 N° XIII. MRS F—G.

N° XIV. THE LENIENT COMMANDER.

Publish'd June 1st; 1781 by J. [sic] Hamilton Junr Fleet Street.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Thomas Gage (1721-87), here called 'the Lenient Commander' because of his reluctance to engage in hostilities in America. Mrs. F——g was the daughter of one L——d, a poor parson, who became a fashionable milliner's apprentice, a 'high road to perdition'. After being seduced she passed as the wife of Mr. F——g, a naval lieutenant, whose prolonged absence at sea forced her to seek another supporter.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5870 N° XVI. MRS L—B—T.

N° XVII. THE NAUTICAL SCRIBE.

London. Publish'd July 1; 1781, by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 289. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. He is evidently Philip Stephens, Secretary (since 1763) of the Admiralty and M.P. for Sandwich, cr. a baronet in 1795. He is here said to have assisted Beau Nash at Bath and to have first introduced the Gunnings to public places in London. Mrs. L. is the wife of a penniless man; after acting at Brighton she became the mistress of a peer, and on being deserted by him accepted the arrangements offered by the Nautical Scribe.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5871 N° XIX. THE CAPTIVATING MRS C—PB—LL.

N° XX. THE GENEROUS GALLANT.

London. Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street. 1. Augst 1781.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. He is 'descended from an ancient and noble family who have made a conspicuous figure in the annals of this country'. He built himself 'an elegant house from a plan drawn by himself . . . now a very conspicuous building in the purlieus of Marylebone'. This would apply to Stratford Place, built c. 1775, from the plans of Edward Stratford, second Earl of Aldborough, d. 1801, on the site of the Old Banqueting House on the Tyburn Road (Oxford Street). But there is nothing by which the subject of this Tête-à-Tête can be identified with certainty. Mrs. Campbell is the widow of a lieutenant in the army killed in America, who is seeking for a place as housekeeper to a single gentleman, and is said to have agreed to a settlement of £300 a year.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5872 N° XXII. MRS W—TS—N.

N° XXIII. THE CONNOISSEUR.

Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street 1 Sepr 1781.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. He is descended from an ancient family, a near relation of his father being a Lord Chief Justice at the beginning of the century. He is thought the best whist-player in England, with expert knowledge of pictures. He married a dowager duchess, after which he was promoted to the rank of colonel, and has since obtained an office of profit under Government. He is presumably Staats Long Morris who married in 1756 the widow of the 3rd Duke of Gordon, who died 1779. He was then (1756) of New York; in 1781 a Major General and M.P. (1774-89) for Elgin Burghs.

Mrs. W. is the daughter of a poor parson and the widow of a lieutenant of marines, to whom he makes 'as ample an allowance as his circumstances will afford'.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5873 N° XXV. THE ENGAGING MRS F—Y.

N° XXVI. THE CONSTANT ADMIRER.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street Octr 1st 1781.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 457. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of George, third Earl of Orford, grandson of Sir Robert Walpole, the nephew whose attacks of insanity gave so much anxiety to Horace Walpole. Nothing of that appears in this account which is concerned with his travels, and his judicious avoidance of politics. Mrs. F—y is Patty, daughter of a Norfolk farmer, one of his tenants, who became his housekeeper and to whom he has been faithful for over twenty years. She is the 'Patty' whom Walpole calls Orford's 'Dalilah'. Ap. 9, 1779. Letters, x. 218.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5874 N° XXIX. MISS F—.

N° XXX. THE INTREPID COMMODORE.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street 1 Novr 1781.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 513. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of the career of Commodore George Johnstone (1730-87), alluding in veiled words to his expedition against the Cape of Good Hope of 1781, see No. 5960.

Ovals, $2\frac{11}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5875 N° XXXI. M^{RS} J.—S.

N° XXXII. THE HUMANE J—E [JUDGE]

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Jun^r Fleet Street 1 Dec^r 1781.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 569. Two bust portraits in oval frames, one that of a judge in wig and gown. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Sir Henry Gould (1710-94), the clues being his Somersetshire origin, his appointment as K.C. in 1754, and an allusion to the Gordon Riots. His early (supposed) amours are recounted. Mrs. Jones is the daughter of a Welsh clergyman, and a milliner's apprentice, who became a courtesan, whom the judge is said to have established in a snug house in Marylebone.

$2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

5876 SIR SAMUEL HOUSE.

[Gillray.]

London Published July 12. 1781, by C Knight, Berwick Street.

Aquatint. Portrait (W.L.) of Sam House seated in an arm-chair, a wine-glass in his r. hand, his l. hand on his hip. At his r. side, on a small rectangular table, is a punch-bowl inscribed Fox for eve[r]. He is in his well-known dress, see No. 5696, &c., and wears ungartered stockings. Beneath the title is engraved:

Libertas et natula [sic] Solum.

A companion print to No. 5877.

Grego, Gillray, p. 32.

$8 \times 6\frac{9}{16}$ in.

5877 SIR TOBY THATCH, CANDIDATE FOR GARRET.

[? Gillray.]

London Published July 12. 1781 by C. Knight Berwick Street.

Aquatint. A companion print to No. 5876. Portrait (W.L.) of a man leaning back in an arm-chair, his legs crossed. His r. hand hangs downwards, holding a tankard whose contents are pouring on the floor. In his l. hand he holds the stem of the pipe which he is smoking. He wears a small wig, and is neatly and plainly dressed, with buckled shoes. On the r. is a rectangular table on which is a foaming tankard, inscribed Sam House, Wardour Street, S^t Ane. Beneath the title is engraved Jocando Bibendo Vivimus. His utere.

He is evidently a well-known frequenter of the public-house kept by Sam House, see Nos. 5696, 5697, 5876. After a dissolution of Parliament a burlesque election was held at Garrett, Wandsworth, to elect a 'Mayor of Garrett', who was usually some well-known character in low-life. See Malcolm, Manners and Customs of London, 1808, p. 222. The successful candidate in 1785 was Jeffery Dunstan. Toby Thatch was a character in O'Keefe's London Hermit, 1793.

8 × 6 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5878 THE HON^{BLE} CHAS^S JAS^S FOX.

[After Bunbury.]

J. Baldrey Sculp^t

*London Publish'd April 12th 1781 by J. Baldrey N^o 37 Green S^t
Gros^r Sq^r & E Hedges N^o 92 Cornhill.*

Stipple. Fox (H.L.) in profile to the l. in the attitude of an orator, r. arm outstretched, the hand and wrist cut off by the margin of the print. See No. 6313, a later copy. Cf. No. 5755.

Reproduced, W. Sichel, Sheridan, 1909, ii. 2.

4 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ (oval).

5879 [LADY ARCHER.]

Bretherton Jun^r f: Pub^d as the Act directs J^y 8th 1781.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Portrait (H.L.) of Lady Archer in profile to the r., her aquiline nose exaggerated, and she is frowning. She wears a hat tilted forward, her hair being dressed high with a club resting on her shoulders.

She was Sarah (1741–1801), d. of James West, and widow of Andrew, 2nd Baron Archer. Her profile shows no trace of the 'perfect and lovely' features admired by Fanny Burney in 1783. Diary, ii. 179. See No. 6114. She was a noted whip, and was also noted for painting her face, cf. 'A was an Archer and painted her face', Walpole, Letters, xiii. 322, and 'Lacker faced A—ch—r', Lord Townshend, Misc. Poetry, p. 10.

4 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 3 $\frac{7}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5880 [GENERAL OGLETHORPE.¹]

Publish'd as the Act Directs J^y 13th 1781. C. B. [Bretherton] Jun^r

Engraving (coloured impression). Profile head, caricatured, of Oglethorpe the philanthropist (1696–1785). He has an enormous nose and a projecting jaw, giving the appearance of extreme old age. He wears a short bushy wig. At his death he was believed to be a centenarian. L. F. Church, Oglethorpe, 1932, p. 1.

3 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 3 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5881 [JOHN WILKES.]

C. B. J^r [Bretherton.]

Publish'd according to Act of P^t J^y 16th 1781.

Engraving (coloured impression). Caricature bust portrait of Wilkes in profile to the l., the r. eye just visible, showing his squint. He has the appearance of an old and toothless man, 'in corporeal ruin', as described by Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 49. See No. 6067.

4 × 3 $\frac{1}{8}$ in. (pl.).

¹ Identified by Miss Banks.

5882 [LORD THURLOW.]Chs: Bretherton f.[After James Sayers?]¹*Publish'd Aug^t 8th 1781*

Engraving. Bust portrait in profile to r. A caricature of Thurlow, the Lord Chancellor, wearing a low-crowned hat and tie-wig.

4¼ × 3½ in. (pl.).

5883 [JAMES WALLACE.]Ch^s Bretherton J^r[After James Sayers?]¹*Publis^d Nov^r 23^d 1781.*

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Bust portrait in profile to the l. of Wallace, Attorney General, Aug. 1780–Apr. 1782. He wears a legal wig and gown.

4¼ × 3½ in.

5884 [VESTRIS JUNIOR OR VESTR' ALLARD.²]C^s Bretherton f.Publish'd Aug^t 18th 1781

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Bust portrait in profile to the r. of the famous dancer. His head is thrown back with an arrogant expression and protruding under-lip. His hat is under his arm; his hair or wig is in a black bag. See Nos. 5903, 5905, 5906.

5⅞ × 4½ in. (pl.).

5885 [UNIDENTIFIED CARICATURE PORTRAIT]Ch^s Bretherton Jun^r Published Nov^r 26th 1781.

Engraving. Bust portrait of a man in profile to the r., much caricatured. He is narrow-chested, wears a bag-wig and ruffled shirt.

4½ × 3⅛ in. (pl.).

5886 THE PAW-MINY.

THE COCK A TOE VULGURLY CALL'D COCKATOO.

Publish'd as the act directs J^y 23^d 81. C.B.J: [C. Bretherton Jun^r?]

Engraving. A man in profile to the r. standing on tip-toe in the attitude of a dancing-master. His elbows are held out, he holds his hat. He is very thin and is dressed like the Frenchman of caricature, with a high toupet wig. Mr. Hawkins writes 'a MS note calls him "Mr. Fitzgerald"'. He has some resemblance to caricatures of the elder Vestris.

6½ × 4½ in. (pl.).

5887 ['SIR' JOHN GALLINI³]C^s Bretherton f.Publis'd Aug^t 16th 1781.

Engraving. Bust portrait in profile to the r. of a man holding under his arm a kit or small violin. A ballet dancer and dancing-master (1728-1805) who, having been given the knighthood of the Golden Spur by the Pope, assumed the style of Sir. He married Lady Elizabeth Bertie, daughter of the Earl of Abingdon.

¹ Impressions with the works of James Sayers.² Identified by Miss Banks.³ Identified by Mr. Hawkins.

$7\frac{7}{8} \times 5$ in. (pl.).

Another impression, coloured, with T. Cornell, Bruton S^t in place of signature.

5888 [LOUIS WELTJE]

C. Bretherton Jun^r f.

Publish'd Nov^r 1st 1781.

Engraving. W.L. portrait in profile to the r. of a plainly dressed man standing, his r. hand in his breeches-pocket. A well-known German cook and confectioner who kept the Cocoa-nut in St. James's Street, born 1745 Brunswick, died 1810. At this time there was 'a club at Weltje's' consisting of young men associated with the Ministry. Hist. MSS. Comm., Carlisle MSS., 1897, pp. 555, 573, 579, 580. He was afterwards associated with the politics of the Prince of Wales, and from 1785-9 was Controller of the kitchen and cellars of Carlton House, where he was a well-known character. See Gent. Mag., 1800, ii. 1109; Angelo, Reminiscences, 1904, i. 330; ii. 35-8; Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, v. 307. For Mrs. Weltje's shop see No. 6317.

$10\frac{7}{8} \times 7\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5889 [THE DUCHESS OF NORFOLK?]

[n.d. c. 1781]

Publish'd as the Act Directs

C^s Bretherton f^t

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Caricature portrait of a lady (T.Q.L.) seated at a table playing cards. She is in profile to the l., is stout, with a small nose and projecting underlip. She wears a cap over her high-dressed hair. She holds her cards in her r. hand; her l. hand is in her lap, under the table, holding an ace, another card lies beside it. A pile of coins is on the corner of the table to her l. On one impression is written in an old hand 'The Dutchess of N——k'.

She was Katharine, d. of John Brockholes, m. Charles Howard, the 10th duke, 8 Nov. 1729, and d. 21 Nov. 1784.

$4\frac{3}{16} \times 3\frac{5}{16}$ in.

5890 [UNIDENTIFIED CARICATURE PORTRAIT]

B. T. Smith F Publish'd Dec^r 30th 1781.

Engraving (coloured impression). Bust portrait, caricature, of a man in profile to the r. His nose projects sharply, almost at a r. angle with his forehead. He is deep-chested, and wears a shirt-frill. Similar in general character to the small portraits etched by Charles Bretherton.

$4\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5891 LORD R—B—H

Etch'd by a Lady

[*Aug: 1781?*¹]

Engraving. Bust portrait of a young man in profile to the r. much caricatured. He has a large aquiline nose, large eye, receding forehead and chin, long thin neck, and sloping shoulders.

¹ Dated in Miss Banks's hand, presumably the date of purchase.

The letters suggest no peer except the Duke of Roxburghe (1740-1804), noted as a collector of rare books and broadside ballads. The portrait has no resemblance to that engraved after W. Hamilton in Doyle's Official Baronage, ii. 294.

$4\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5892 SIGNOR PUPPY. FIRST CATGUT SCRAPER.

Pub^d Nov. 27. 81. by H. Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured impression). Portrait (W.L.) of a man standing in profile to the r. holding a violin in his r. hand, a bow in his l.

He is Giuseppe Puppo (1749-1827), an eminent violinist who was in England for some years before 1784. Grove, Dict. of Music.

The original water-colour is in the Print Department, No. 12 in volume lettered 'Designs supplied by Amateurs to Gillray'.

$4\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5893 [HENRY GORDON. BUTLER TO TRIN: COLL: CAMBRIDGE 1781.]¹

*J. H. fecit.*¹

Engraving. Bust portrait, looking to the r., of an elderly man with a large nose and a stern expression. He wears a short curled wig; his staff of office rests against his r. shoulder. Beneath it is etched:

*Ecce minister ego Bacchi, custosq. sacelli,
Indicat officium candida virga meum.
Multa equidem merin de praesule, multa decano
Sedulitatae, Fide, religione, mero.*

$4 \times 3\frac{1}{4}$ in. (pl.).

5894 MR C—M—L. THE JOLLY PRESENTER OF THE CANNON-GATE KIRK IN EDINBURGH,

Pub^d by H Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street [c. 1781²]

Engraving. H.L. portrait in profile to the l. of a man holding a music score. He is fat and smiling, and wears his own scanty hair. After the title is engraved, Singing Psalms of a Morning and over a Bowl of Punch Scotch Tunes at Night.

He is John Campbell, teacher of music and precentor of the Canongate Church from 1775 to his death in 1795. The subject of a portrait by Kay. See Paton, Portraits and Etchings by John Kay, 1887, ii, pp. 92-5.

$4\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5895 [GEORGE III AND HIS FAMILY.] [1781]

Drawing in pen and wash, indented with a stylus and blackened on the reverse for transfer to a plate. A procession walking in couples (r. to l.) across a quadrangle or court. They go in order of age: the two youngest infants, each in the arms of a lady, go first, the king and queen last. Prince Frederick and the Prince of Wales walk together; the next couple, the Princess Royal and Prince William Henry, turn round to look at their elder brothers. Princess Augusta Sophia has her arm round the shoulders of her brother Edward; next, Princess Elizabeth walks with an arm across the shoulders of Ernest; two little boys, Augustus and Adolphus, are next. In front of them are two little girls, Princess Mary and Princess Sophia. The two infants in arms are Octavius and Alfred (born in 1779 and 1780). The figures, on a very small side, are drawn with much delicacy, and a certain humorous intention.

¹ Written on the print in an old hand.

² Dated 1781 by Miss Banks.

$4\frac{1}{4} \times 6\frac{5}{16}$ in.

5896 [A SATIRE ON ONE FLINT.]

Pub^d Augst 20th 1781 by I. Williams N^o 34 Strand

Engraving, above engraved verses. The head of a military officer, grossly caricatured, in profile to the r. within a circle formed by a snake. His unkempt hair is in a small pigtail queue. The outside circle is engraved:

*He's Ugly, He's False, His Friends he'll betray
In this, & in that, & in that kind of way*

On each side of the circle are military emblems: a flag, a tent, a pile of drums, a row of halberds.

The verses are signed Belzebub and begin,

*My best Friend,
O thou despis'd of all Mankind
Whose Soul to me has been consign'd*

The lines,

*To deck thy Lady's Room Dear Fl . . t
I with my Love send thee this Print,* leave no doubt as to the name of the subject.

$2\frac{3}{8} \times 3\frac{1}{16}$ in. (pl. 6×4 in.).

5897 WINDSOR CASTLE IN A CONSUMPTION, OR THE LITTLE MAN'S MISTAKE.

Pub^d acc^g to Act Feby 3. 1781 by M Darly N^o 159 Fleet Street.

Engraving in illustration of a dialogue printed below it. The figures have numbers referring to the dialogue. Windsor Castle is falling into ruins, part of it shored up by beams; a stream of water pours through an archway. In the foreground are groups of small figures discussing the repairs: 'The Little Man' appears to be 'No. 1', or 'M^r T—ds—y', evidently T. Tildesley, Clerk of the Board of Works at Windsor Castle and the Queen's Lodge. He is in naval dress, and stands (r.) holding a handkerchief to his eyes, saying 'I would rather been [sic] buried in the ruins than thus treated'. A group of officers of the Board of Works is seated at a round table (l.) with books and plans. Among these are (11) 'Sir Wm. C—mb—rs [Chambers], see No. 5157, the Comptroller; (12) 'M^r S—db—y' [Thomas Sandby, Architect]; (13) 'M^r C—se' [Kenton Couse, Secretary and Clerk Itinerant]. On one of the towers stands the Devil with a trident, and on the top of the broken wall (6) 'Sl—gs—y', who says, 'Huzza, boys, this is a rare job for me'. Labourers are working at the walls. It appears from the dialogue that Tildesley is to be dismissed because, owing to his alterations by stopping up drains or watercourses, the building has been endangered; moreover, he has acted without consulting the Board of Works, and is accused of a 'fiery pitch, tow and tar temper'. The disasters, says the Clerk to the Board, are 'no wonder . . . when sailors are appointed surveyors'. 'All the tradesmen' say 'If a worse come in his place it must be that gentleman [the devil] upon the adjacent tower'.

In the centre is (8) smoking a pipe and holding a cane who is 'Mr W—ds—r [? George III], he says, 'Well B——th, I understand that part of the Castle is tumbling down, if so I shall have more labourers to pay all the winter. Let me have a fresh pipe and a pint upon the strength of it.' Surveying implements lie on the ground. See also No. 5898.

7 $\frac{5}{16}$ 13 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5898 JOHN DOUBLE FACE OR THE DECEITFUL VULCAN OF WINDSOR

Pub^d as the Act directs Augst 1st 1781 by I. Williams N^o 34 Strand London.

Mezzotint. A tall thin man and his wife walking (r. to l.) in a street. He has two faces and the long ears of an animal; the face in the normal position has a regular profile, the one facing backwards, though resembling it, is sinister and more aquiline. He has a forked tail, his l. leg is that of an animal with a cloven hoof. The woman has a feathered hat, beneath her skirt appear a forked tail and a cloven hoof. She looks at him, holding a ball or medallion between her r. thumb and fore-finger, saying, My dear Jacky as we have lost the Sun-fire Office let us pursue our plan. He answers, I will my dear & ruin him that got it if we can. Attached to his coat is the sign of the Sun Fire Office, a sun with a face surrounded with rays. Beneath it is the date (or number) 1777. He holds in his hand a print headed Dn Fall of the Little Man. It represents part of Windsor Castle as in No. 5897 with a stream of water flowing through an archway as in that print. At their feet are papers inscribed M^r Miller Printer of the Lonⁿ Even^g [Post] and To M^r Say in Ave Maria Lane.¹

Behind (r.) two men (father and son) are standing in conversation. One, stout and middle-aged, wearing an apron, the other, slim and fashionably dressed, has his r. hand on his father's shoulder, his l. fist is clenched. The father, whose r. hand holds his son's r. wrist, is saying O Son O Son remember I am your Father and you had better not have drawn the plan. The son answers, Let me hear no more I was persuaded to it.

In the background (l.) is a shop-front; the door, whose upper part is of glass panes, is surmounted by the royal arms. On one of the panes is inscribed Davis Smith. In the windows on each side of the door watches are suspended, and one pane (l.) is filled by the dial of a clock. A very slim passer-by, with papers under his arm and walking with a tasselled cane, is looking in at the window.

This satire evidently relates to the same subject as No. 5897, that is, to the dismissal of Tildesley, the Clerk of the Works at Windsor, whose alterations to the castle have endangered its stability.

8 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

¹ Edward Say, in Ave Maria Lane, was Printer of the General Evening Post in 1763. T. Mortimer, Universal Director, 1763, p. 61.

5899 THE CONTENDING LAWYERS OR WHO SHALL FIRST BOARD THE CATHARINE FRIGATE.

publishd as y^e Act Directs 10 Feb^y 1781.

No 4086 oposite Hungry Market in the Stand. [sic]

Engraving. The interior of a grocer's shop. A lady wearing a hat and short cloak sits on a chair, her wrists crossed, she is saying I'll Do any thing for money. On each shoulder leans an admirer. One (l.) is labelled Pady Swirk, from his pocket protrudes a document Rygate Assize. He is saying, Hara by my shoul if you'l Leave your Jerry Sneak you shall have your Law for nothing atill atall my Dear Kitt fig. The other (r.) wears a cockaded hat; a document projecting from his pocket is inscribed Spirituall Court. He is saying, My Dear Kitty Figg I are an Officer in the Malitia yet Bread to the Law & have a Damnd good Memory My Dear M^{rs} Figg. Behind these three stands the husband holding a pair of stag's antlers on his head and saying I think the[y] fit me what cant be cur'd must be endur'd. On the l. stands a man whose r. leg ends in a cloven hoof; he holds a label inscribed Willegig Tea Dealer Bishop Street and points to his l. saying Though I Dare not own my self a Partner I'll be your very good Friend for old acquaintance sake in the Bench (implying that both have been prisoners for debt in the King's Bench). It is not clear whether he is addressing the husband or Pady Swirk. A little boy says to him Pa Pa what shall I sware.

On the r. of the room, ranged on a shelf or in the window (r.), are rows of sugar-loaves, below them are boxes and canisters inscribed Bohea Tea Gree Tea. At the back are more rows of canisters, and a festooned curtain probably dividing the shop from the parlour behind it.

This appears to record some personal scandal relating to a grocer's wife. It is the in-drawn work of an amateur.

$6\frac{1}{4} \times 8\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5900 A PEEP INTO WESTMINSTER HALL ON A CALL OF SERJEANTS.

R. Dighton del.

London, printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett N^o 53 Fleet Street, & J. Smith N^o 35 Cheapside, as the Act directs March 1: 1781.

Engraving. The interior of a panelled room. Two judges (r.) sit side by side on a settee, in profile to the l., in their wigs and furred robes. On the l. stand a number of barristers in wigs and gowns, one of whom (l.) already wears the coif of the serjeant-at-law. Two barristers, one wearing the black patch of a serjeant,¹ appear to be acting as masters of the ceremonies, both hold papers. On the ground before the judges are two flat mattress-cushions, on one kneels a serjeant-elect, the judge is putting the coif on his head. Behind the judge stands a barrister grinning and looking through a single eye-glass.

A note on an impression in the Ashmolean Museum identifies the judges as Mansfield and Loughborough.

¹ The serjeants-at-law were a superior order of barrister (distinguished by wearing a white coif or cap with a black patch) from whom the judges were chosen. They were abolished in 1880.

On 8 February 1781 Cranley Thomas Kirby and Giles Rooke were admitted Serjeants. Haydn, Book of Dignities, p. 249. Beneath the design is engraved, Esto Perpetua.

8½ × 6⅞ in.

5901 [LORD DERBY FOLLOWING MISS FARREN]

[After Bunbury.]

Published July 20th 1781 by J. R. Smith N^o 83 Oxford Street nearly opposite the Pantheon.

Aquatint. A short man riding (r. to l.) after a coach, the back of which only appears in the print, with a footman standing behind it. The rider's head is turned to his r. concealing his profile. His legs are thrust forward on each side of the horse's neck. On a building (r.) is a placard, Angel Fetter Lane Derby Diligence continues flying daily as usual. Inside [the poster is torn at this point] Outsides & Children on the Lap half price. perform'd (if God permit by Bull & Co. Beneath the design is etched:

*When I follow'd a lass that was forward & shy
Oh I stuck to her stuff but she would not comply*

A portrait of Edward, 12th Earl of Derby, following the coach of Miss Farren (1759-1829) the actress. The attachment was the occasion of many squibs, and of other caricatures. Lord Derby married her in 1797 on the death of his wife, from whom he had long been separated.

This must be the print of which Hare wrote to Lord Carlisle, 29 Dec. 1781, 'Derby is still in pursuit of Miss Farren. . . . I really believe he has attained his object, which is, being stared at by the whole Play-house, and talked of by the whole Town. The Caricatura has had the good effect of mending his seat on horseback which is totally changed and consequently improved.' Hist. MSS. Comm., Carlisle MSS., 1897, pp. 555-6. See No. 6263.

7 × 9 in.

5902 A VISIT TO CAMP OR THE ROGUES MARCH, [1781]

[Imprint perhaps cut off.]

Engraving. An elderly and obese man, wearing spectacles and a hat, a dark gown over his coat, is walking slowly (l. to r.), his hands behind him, in front of a crowd of soldiers (l.), blowing fifes and beating drums, while others wave their hats, point and laugh. On the r. is a military marquee. Two small dogs bark at the man's heels. In the foreground (l.) is a milestone, Rye 1. Mile.

With the print are verses, cut from a newspaper, entitled, To T. Lamb Esq. Mayor of Rye, on being, what they call, Drumm'd out of Camp by the Sixth Regiment of Foot. They do not explain the incident, but the press-cutting incidentally shows that their date is 1781.

7 × 12⅜ in.

5903 BASS RELIEF FOUND AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

[P. Sandby.]¹*Published 7 April 1781 as the Act directs by R. Meadows.*

Engraving, partly mezzotinted. A design in several compartments purporting to represent five fragments of a stone bas-relief dug up 'at the laying of the foundation of the Opera House', depicting the dancing of the two Vestris. In the upper part of the print are two equal fragments of a frieze: [1] An ape capers between Vestris fils (l.) and Vestris père (r.). The two dancers are standing on one leg, their arms held out, in attitudes which though caricatured are graceful. The son has a feathered hat, the father a cap surmounted with a coronet of ostrich-feathers. The ape, dressed in a coat and waistcoat, has a muff slung round its neck and a head-dress of peacock's feathers. He mimics the pose of the dancers. On the r. is a classical statue of a nude man, the l. hand broken off at the wrist. Beneath the ape are the words In Fashione, beneath the statue, Out of Fashione; across the top of the fragment is inscribed Son of this Father.

[2] A similar design of an ape dancing between the two Vestris. The ape is not dressed up, but has branches of oak leaves attached to its head in imitation of the head-dress of the elder Vestris. On the l. is a similar statue inscribed, Grace in olde Times. Across the top of the fragment is Vest . . . s father and son; and below Vestris père (l.), Moderne Gracefull Postures.

The lower part of the print is in three compartments. [3] Vestris père (l.) dances, above his head is inscribed I am alone. An ape dressed up in feathered hat, coat, and sword, takes a pinch of snuff, above its head is inscribed, No Pardieu behold your tutor. Behind (centre) is the lower part of a classical statue of a man from which the torso and head have fallen and lie on the ground. It is inscribed Simplicity adieu.

[4] On the r. is a companion design inscribed Vestris en Roy. Vestris, in feathered hat, coat, and top-boots (l.), capers in front of a dressed-up ape who bows before him, doffing its hat, a large muff is slung across its shoulders and hangs down its back.

[5] In the centre between [3] and [4] is the principal and central design, within a shield whose supporters are, dexter, a zany in a striped suit, and sinister (r.), a fool in parti-coloured dress and high fool's cap. In the centre of the shield is a man in pseudo-Elizabethan dress wearing a ribbon and star, behind him are two ladies, one of whom wears a coronet. All three hold out bags of money to a dancer who strikes an attitude on their l. In one hand he holds out a ticket inscribed Box, in the other, a paper, Vestris Opera second benefit. His tunic is decorated with fleurs-de-lys. On the nobleman's r. a man kneels with a face of distress, holding out a paper inscribed Opera . . . Sufferers . . . Barbadoe[s] . . . America. Behind him a building has been shattered by a violent storm, clouds and lightning fill the sky above it. The nobleman repels the suppliant with his hand, while he tramples under his feet a paper inscribed Barbados. Beneath the shield is a scroll, inscribed with words addressed to the suppliant from Barbados (l.), Away we have no time to attend to Trifles and (r.) addressed to Vestris, Your owne price secure us but places. The shield is surmounted by a crest of a fool's cap and bells with the motto Wear me who will.

Beneath the r. and l. compartments of this design is engraved: *To such of the Nobilitie, Gentrie &c. of G*t B*tn whose hearts are so un-* naturallie devoide of feeling, as to prefer the squandering away of that Wealth, which God has put them in possessione of (as Stewards of his bountie) upon impertinent Coxcombs, the very scum of a rival Nation, and at best but the shadow of a Contemtable animal, to nobly relieving the Distresses of their unfortunat Countrie Men, this Sculpture is humbly Dedicated.

¹ So attributed by E. Hawkins. Similar in manner to Sandby's aquatinted balloon satires of 1784.

Attached to the print is a printed 'Description of the curious ancient BASS RELIEF which was found upon laying the Foundation of the present Opera-House, in the Haymarket'. The 'friendly Reader' is requested to 'compare the Barbarity of the old Times with the Politeness of the present'. 'Could we . . . believe that our Ancestors were so totally lost to true Taste and Judgment as to sit with patience to behold the ridiculous unmeaning Attitudes of a French Posture-Master especially when the Artist had so evidently produced the original Brute, from whence this wretched Plagiary borrowed his chief Graces?' The supporters of the Arms are explained as 'Folly and Absurdity'. The print 'is faithfully copied from an old Drawing in Bister. . . .'

Barbados was devastated by a hurricane in October 1780. On 24 Jan. Lord North proposed a grant of £80,000 for the relief of the island, which was unanimously agreed to. The print contrasts the support given to the performance on behalf of the Barbados sufferers with that given to the benefit of the younger Vestris, see Nos. 5905, 5906.

In the season of 1780-1 London society went mad over the dancing of the two Vestris who had come from Paris. Walpole, Letters, xi. 340-1, 346, 368, 374, 381, 406, 422. For the sake of the benefit of Vestris filis, on 23 Feb. 1781, the second reading of Burke's Bill of Economic Reform was postponed, Burke saying, 'to a great part of that House, a dance was a much more important object than a war, and the Opera House must be maintained whatever became of the country'. Parl. Hist. xxi. 1243. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 348. Much resentment was roused by the popularity of the French dancers and the enormous sums made by them during a war with France. See 'Memoirs of Signor Vestris, Senior' in the London Magazine, Apr. 1781. The king incurred disapproval by not attending the Barbados benefit given by Sheridan but going instead to Covent Garden. Hist. MSS. Comm., Carlisle MSS., 1897, p. 459. See also Nos. 5904-11. $7\frac{7}{8} \times 12\frac{1}{8}$ in. (pl.).

5904 THE MODERN MERCURY AND HIS TWO WINGS OR MONSIEUR V—STR—S IN TRIUMPH

Pub^d Acc^s to Act Aprⁱ 26th 1781 by J. Staton and J. Jones N^o 13 Parliament Street London.

Mezzotint. Design in an oval within a rectangle. Vestris in the centre dancing with two ladies of the ballet, the three holding hands. He wears a cap decorated with heavy plumes of ostrich feathers; his hair falls in curls on his shoulders. He wears a striped suit cut low in the neck with a sash round the waist, full sleeves to the elbow. The ladies are perhaps dressed as shepherdesses. They have feathered hats poised on their high-dressed hair, which falls on their shoulders. Their petticoats and the paniers of their dresses are trimmed with wide borders of flowers. On each side of the stage a scene of trees is indicated.

For Vestris see Nos. 5903, 5907, 5908, 5909, 5910, 5911.

$6\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5905 TΩN MENTOI XHNΩN OUK EΣTIN OΣTIS OU[? N. Dance del. Bartolozzi and Pastorini sculp.]Published 2nd April 1781

Aquatint. Design in a circle inset in a square. A companion print to No. 5906. A young dancer, Vestris fils (Vestr' Allard) in the centre of the stage. He is poised on the r. toe, his l. leg extended horizontally, his arms held out, a wide-brimmed hat, trimmed with ribbon and flowers in his r. hand; his head thrown back rests on his r. shoulder and he is smiling. Trees form the background, and on the r. of the stage are flats, also of trees. In each of the lower angles of the square is a goose, standing on one leg. Beneath the design is engraved:

A Stranger at Sparta standing long upon one Leg, said to a Lacedaemonian, I do not believe you can do as much; 'True (said he) but every Goose can'. See Plutarch's Laconic Apothegms Vol. 1. Page 406.

In spite of the satiric intention the dancer has much grace and charm. A satire on the benefit of the younger Vestris, see Nos. 5903, 5906. Attributed to Nathaniel Dance by Angelo, who says it was 'exhibited in all the print-shops and very much like'. Reminiscences, 1904, ii. 348. Calabi, Bartolozzi, 1928, No. 2235 (attributed to George Dance). Reproduced, Paston, Pl. lxx.

Also a later impression, By Torre, No. 44 Market Lane engraved below the date.

Also an impression before aquatinting, without inscriptions but with date. $12\frac{5}{8} \times 12\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5906 OH QUI GOOSE-TOE!¹ [O CHE GUSTO!][? N. Dance del. Bartolozzi and Pastorini sc.]Pub^d May 16th 1781 by W. Humphrey No 227 Strand.

Aquatint. A companion print to No. 5905. Vestris fils, as in No. 5905, on the same stage, is dancing in a similar pose, poised on his r. toe, his back to the audience, looking over his l. shoulder smiling. In his r. hand is his hat, held out as before but full of notes or bills, inconspicuously inscribed gui, £1100, and £20,000. In his l. hand he holds out a netted purse to which is attached a label inscribed English Guineas. In place of the goose of No. 5897 in each lower angle of the square is an ape dressed as a dancer and with his hat held out, cf. No. 5903; one (l.) matches the pose of Vestris in No. 5905, the other (r.) his pose in this design. Beneath the design is engraved:

He Danc'd like a Monkey, his Pockets well cram'd; Caper'd off with a Grin, "kiss my A & be D——d".

Calabi, Bartolozzi, 1928, No. 2236.

$12\frac{5}{8} \times 12\frac{5}{8}$ in.

¹ The prologue for the opening of the summer season at the Haymarket, 27 June 1781, referring to the (belated) end of the opera season:

No more from Voice, or Ear, her profits flow;
The Soul of Opera fixes in Goose-toe!

Public Advertiser, 27 June 1781.

5907 A VESTRICIAN DISH, OR, CAPER SAUCE FOR A GOOSE PYE.

*Pub^d Acc to Act June 16 1781 by F. Assen & J. Jones Hayes's Court
Soho*

Mezzotint. A satire on Vestris. The stage at the Opera-House in the Haymarket. A dancer is posing gracefully on the r. foot, his body thrown back, his arms extended; he has the head of a fox and a fox's brush. The l. of the stage is seen from the r., with three tiers of boxes on the l. and some of the seats in the pit immediately below the stage. In these seats and boxes are men and women with the heads of geese, their necks thrust eagerly forward. A scenery of trees is indicated on the l. of the stage.

Beneath the design verses are printed, 'The Words by G. S. C.'. They express the strong feeling against the Frenchman's receiving so great an ovation and so much money while England and France were at war. The first and last verses are:

I

If a Fox should appear from a pilfering band,
Who has riff'd your Roots and have damag'd your Land
What Loons wou'd allow such a Thing still to fleece,
If they were not a meer Set of Cackling Geese.

6

I now have a Guess at the Reason, I vow;
So the longer we live, still the wiser we grow;
It is a French Fox, all Pomatum and Grease,
That so prettily tackles our English Geese.

For Vestris see also Nos. 5903-4, 5908, 5909, 5910.

6¼ × 8½ in.

5908 SIX GUINEAS ENTRANCE AND A GUINEA A LESSON

[1781]

[P. Sandby.]

Aquatint. Design in a circle, the heading to engraved verses. Gaetan Vestris stands stiffly, his elbows bent, his toes turned out, facing a goose to which he is giving a dancing lesson. He wears a high toupet wig. Behind (l.) and in shadow, a man seated on a chair plays the violin. The floor is of boards, a plain wall forms the background. Shadows fall from the l. leaving Vestris and the goose in full light. The title is engraved on a scroll beneath the circle. Below the verses is a miniature tailpiece of a fool's cap, a cap and bells, and a dancing-master's kit or fiddle. The ten verses are printed in full in W. Sandby's Thomas and Paul Sandby, 1892, pp. 41-3. No. 8 runs:

*The Soldier risks Health, Life and Limbs, his Fortune to advance,
While Pique and Vestris Fortune make, by one Night's single Dance
And a dancing we will go, will go, &c.*

Sandby is said to have called at a house to give a drawing lesson, to have been obliged to wait until a dancing lesson by Vestris was finished, and to have made the sketch while waiting. Ibid. For dancing lessons by Vestris cf. Walpole, Letters, xi. 368, 14 Jan. 1781, to Lady Ossory, 'shall not Lady Anne learn of Vestris, while you have a shilling left?' and No. 5911.

Apparently not intended for publication. An impression in R. Bull's collection of 'Honorary Engravers', p. 250, has the note 'Engraved by Paul Sanby [sic], sibi et Amicis; the song by J. Sanby'.

For the two Vestris see Nos. 5903-11.

$3\frac{7}{8}$ in. diam. Pl. $9\frac{1}{8} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5909 SIX GUINEAS ENTRANCE AND A GUINEA A LESSON

[P. Sandby.]

Publishd as the Act directs by P Sandby St Georges Row. June 20 1781.

Aquatint. An enlarged version of No. 5908. (W. Sandby, T. and P. Sandby, 1892, p. 43.) The circle is inset in a square. No verses.

$12\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5910 JASON ET MEDÉE BALLET TRAGIQUE.

[? N. Dance del. Bartolozzi sc.]

Publishd July 3rd 1781 by John Boydell Engraver in Cheapside London.

Aquatint. Design in an oval. Gaetan Vestris as Jason between two ladies of the ballet. He staggers back, with an expression of horror facing Medea (r.), who clutches a dagger. Behind him (l.) the danseuse appears about to swoon. The dresses are interesting examples of theatrical costume. Jason wears a toupet wig, a tunic with a jewelled star on the breast, a cloak, and elaborately puffed trunk-hose. The ladies wear wide hooped and flounced petticoats, their hair dressed in a high pyramid with feathers. The background is architectural, at the back a high archway leads to a balcony backed by trees. Below the level of the stage and in the foreground are the heads and shoulders of three members of the orchestra, one (centre) plays a flute, the others play oboes. Below the design a line of music is engraved.

A satire on the combination of tragic poses with the steps of the ballet. For Selwyn's opinion of the ballet see Hist. MSS. Comm., Carlisle MSS. 1897, pp. 502-3. Its performance, 19 June 1781, was expected to be the last appearance of Vestris in London, ibid. This was actually not until 26 June 1781. For the Vestris see Nos. 5903-11. Cf. No. 6322.

Similar in manner to Nos. 5905, 5906.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. lxxi.

$14\frac{1}{16} \times 18$ in.

5911 REGARDEZ MOI

[1781]

[Gillray.]

Engraving, slightly aquatinted. Gaetan Vestris (r.) giving a dancing lesson to a gigantic goose with a human head and long pigtail queue. They face each other in profile. Vestris stands with his legs together, chest thrown out, his arms curved. 'Regardez-moi' was his characteristic admonition. On a stool behind the goose is an open book inscribed Electrical E. E. L.; on the ground at its feet is another inscribed The Torpedo. Dedicated to I^d — C ——. My Lord, I take the Liberty — The greatness of whose Parts are known. . . . This indicates that the goose is Lord Cholmondeley (1749-1827), 'The Torpedo, a Poem to the Electrical Eel addressed to Mr John Hunter Surgeon' and 'Dedicated to . . . Lord Cholmondeley,' 4th ed. 1777, was a coarse and scurrilous poem, three lines of which are,

'What tho' Lord Ch—lm—d—ly may conceal
A most enormous length of Eel
Admir'd for Size and bone:'

In the wall which forms the background are two sash-windows and a door (l.) round which a grinning youth, probably a servant, is looking. On the wall are H.L. portraits: three in ovals of elderly ladies in profile, one of a clergyman, full-face, wearing a biretta, his l. hand on a book. There is also a picture of Fox, with a fox's head, seated opposite Cholmondeley; they are throwing dice. Fox appears satisfied, the other clenches his fist and exclaims in anger. A devil is climbing on the top of the frame and holds out a claw to grab the head of Fox. On the picture are the words A Nick by God. Like Fox, see No. 5972, Cholmondeley held a faro bank at Brooks's. G.E.C., Complete Peerage.

Walpole alludes to prints on dancing lessons by Vestris, Letters, xii. 30, see also No. 5908. For the Vestris see Nos. 5903-11. For Cholmondeley, No. 5497.

Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830.

Grego, Gillray, p. 44.

10¼ × 14⅛ in.

5912 SKETCH'D BY HUMPHREY—SPOIL'D BY GILLRAY.

Sold by R. Wilkinson, N^o 58 Cornhill London Nov. 1st 1781

Engraving. T.Q.L. portrait of a child wearing a hat. A satire by Gillray on his own work as an engraver. A portrait of William Lamb, afterwards Lord Melbourne (b. 15 Mar. 1779). The plate has been defaced by scratches. Beneath the title is engraved, Dedicated to all Lovers of your bold, Masterly Touches, & Publish'd Nov^r 1st 1781 by J. Gillray, to shew the bad effect of Cobbling & Altering.

"Fool that I was thus to Cobble my Shoe."

Oval, 7 × 5½ in. (pl. 10⅝ × 8 in.).

5913 BILLIARDS.

Mr Bunbury del.

J^s Bretherton f.

Publish'd 27th Jan^y 1781.

Engraving. One corner of a billiard-table is visible, the rest being cut off by the r. margin of the print. A player, in profile to the r., holds up with exaggerated care a cue in front of a ball lying near the corner. He wears a long pigtail queue, on the back of his coat is a large ribbon bow or cockade to which a key is attached. A number of spectators stand round watching intently: of two behind the player, one resembles a footman. Two others stand behind the corner of the table, one wearing a hat like that of a coachman; two others stand on the r. behind the table. They are probably all men-servants.

The wall behind is papered or stencilled in a pattern of horizontal lines and spots. On it are a rack of cues, the [Rules of the Ga]me [of Billia]rds, three framed pictures: (a horse-race, a duel, and an oval portrait) and what appears to be a satirical print.

For billiards see also Nos. 5795, 5803.

10⅝ × 14 in.

5914 N° 6. HINTS TO BAD HORSEMEN.

N° 1. SYMPTOMS OF RESTIVENESS.

H. Bunbury Esq^r delin.

Watson & Dickinson Excud^t

*London, Publish'd May 10th 1781, by Watson & Dickinson N° 158
New Bond Street.*

Engraving. No. 6 of a series. A stout rider on a small horse or cob standing by a sign-post (l.) on a country road. The horse's head is held down and looks back along the road behind him. In the background on the r. is a church spire surrounded by trees. The first of a series of four 'Hints . . .'; beneath the title in this and the other prints in the series, Nos. 5914-17, is engraved:

*Ah me! what various Ills betide
The Looby who presumes to ride.*

Other prints after Bunbury on bad horsemanship are Nos. 6339-41. Cf. also No. 5901.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5915 N° 7. HINTS TO BAD HORSEMEN.

N° 2. SYMPTOMS OF STARTING

H. Bunbury Esq^r delin.

Watson & Dickinson Excud^t

*London, Publish'd May 10th 1781, by Watson & Dickinson N° 158
New Bond Street.*

Engraving. No. 7 of a series. A man on horseback on a country road; the horse is shying violently at a man (l.) crouching among some bushes by the roadside. The rider has lost his seat, and is clutching the reins; his hat is in the air behind him. In the distance is a windmill (r.). One of a series of four 'Hints . . .', see No. 5914.

7 $\frac{1}{16}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5916 N° 8. HINTS TO BAD HORSEMEN.

N° 3. SYMPTOMS OF KICKING.

H. Bunbury Esq^r delin^t

Watson & Dickinson Excud^t

*London, Publish'd May 10th 1781, by Watson & Dickinson N° 158
New Bond Street.*

Engraving. No. 8 of a series. A horse is kicking violently, its head down, the rider has lost his seat and his stirrups and is clutching the animal's mane. The scene is a country road, a village is indicated in the distance (r.). One of a series of four 'Hints . . .', see No. 5914.

6 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 8 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5917 N° 9. HINTS TO BAD HORSEMEN.

N° 4 SYMPTOMS OF TUMBLING.

H. Bunbury Esq^r delin.

Watson & Dickinson Excud^t

*London, Publish'd May 10th 1781, by Watson & Dickinson, N° 158
New Bond Street.*

Engraving. A horse has fallen on its knees, its rider is flying over its head, his hands clutching the animal's neck, his legs in the air. The scene is a farmyard; a goose (l.) hisses at the falling man, ducks run away quacking. In the background are trees, a barn, and a paling. One of a series of four 'Hints . . .', see No. 5914.

$6\frac{5}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5918 5. CORPORAL FEAR.

H. Bunbury Esq^r del^t

J. Baldrey Sculp^t:

London. Publish'd Nov^r 1st 1781, by R. Wilkinson, N^o 58 Cornhill.

Stipple. Design in a circle. A highwayman has stopped a couple who have been driving in a two-wheeled gig. He stands behind the horse aiming a candlestick as if it were a pistol, in his l. hand is a netted purse. His victim stands up in the gig, his waistcoat-pockets turned out, his hands outstretched, with an expression of distress, his attitude implying that he has given up all his possessions. His hat and whip lie on the ground, and with them a miniature violin, or dancing-master's kit, and bow. A fat woman has just clambered out of the gig, her l. foot is on the shaft, her r. on the ground, and she appears to be taking cover behind the vehicle. The horse stands quietly, the reins hang to the ground. The scene is a country road, on the l. is a milestone inscribed 11 Miles, and a group of trees; on the r. is a signpost.

Putting 'in corporal fear' was part of the phraseology of an indictment for highway robbery, &c.

Diam. $11\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5919 MORNING, OR THE MAN OF TASTE.

Design'd by W. H. Bunbury Esq^r

London, Publish'd Oct^r the 10th 1781, by J. R. Smith, N^o 83 opposite the Pantheon, Oxford Street.

Stipple. Design in a circle. A man and wife seated at a circular breakfast-table. The man, who is obese and a gourmand, sits in profile to the r. holding a bowl with a spoon in it in one hand, a bill of fare in the other inscribed Soup . . . Turbot. Duck . . Lamb. He is wearing spectacles and a large piece of food projects from his mouth. The cook (r.) is showing his master a dead duck, which he holds up in his r. hand; in his l., and partly supported by his knee, is a tray on which are two lobsters and a turbot. The lady, who is also fat, holds up her hands in horror at the cook, who, from his leanness, his profile, and his bag-wig, solitaire, and ruffled shirt, is evidently a Frenchman. He wears a white cap and an apron, a large knife is thrust under his belt. On the l. a footman enters carrying in each hand a plate piled with muffins. Tea-things are on the table. Under the table a small dog, befouling the floor, is partly visible. Behind is a screen of several leaves, on the top of which is a bird, resembling a large dove. A companion print to No. 5920.

Diam. $11\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5920 EVENING, OR THE MAN OF FEELING.Design'd by W. H. Bunbury Esq^rLondon, Publish'd Oct^r the 10th 1781, by J. R. Smith N^o 83 opposite the Pantheon, Oxford Street.

Stipple. Design in a circle. Three men sit by a rectangular supper-table, a grandfather-clock behind them points to XI. The man on the l. is having his jack-boots pulled off by a small boy; the boy stands astride his r. leg pulling hard, his back to the man, who is scowling and pushes his other booted foot against the boy's back; on the floor are a pair of spurs, a pair of slippers, and a boot-jack. A man (r.) wearing a night-cap, but otherwise completely dressed and wearing spurred boots, leans one elbow on the table, his face contorted as if in pain, he holds his hand to his thigh. On the table beside him is a small packet inscribed Diaculum. In the centre, and on the farther side of the table, the third man leans both elbows on the table, his hair is tousled and his eyes are shut. A man-servant behind, yawning, is carrying off a square box, probably a wig-box, while a maid-servant stands on the r., a candle in one hand, a warming-pan in the other, watching with amusement the efforts of the boy to pull off the boot.

Three hats hang on the wall; a bottle, a plate, three wine-glasses, and a guttering candle, burnt down to the socket, stand on the table.

A companion print to No. 5919.

Diam. 11 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5921 N^o 10. A FAMILY PIECE*H. Bunbury Esq^r Delin.W. Dickinson Excud^tLondon, Publish'd October 15th 1781, by W. Dickinson N^o 158 New Bond Street.*

Stipple. No. 10 of a series. A portrait-painter painting a family group of a man and wife and their little boy. The group (r.) is raised on a low semicircular platform, the couple sit on a high-backed settee without arms, the little boy on a stool in front of his mother. The child, though in his ordinary clothes, is holding a cupid's bow and a sheaf of arrows (reminiscent of the family portrait in the Vicar of Wakefield); a large quiver holding arrows is slung across his shoulders, a wreath is on his head; he yawns violently.

The man, in profile to the l., is obese and wears a short bushy wig, a dove sits on his l. wrist; only the toes of his shoes reach the ground. His wife sits on his r. holding a dove on her r. hand; she turns towards her husband, looking straight forward with a fixed and painful smile; she wears ringlets and a cap of lace and ribbons on her high-dressed hair. The artist (l.) stands at his easel which supports a large canvas and is placed close to his sitters. He wears spectacles, a bag-wig, and ruffled shirt, and holds a palette in his l. hand. He looks towards his sitters with an insinuating smile, which, together with his attitude and the figure of the man sketched on the canvas, shows that he is intent on flattery. High up on the wall behind him are two oval bust portraits, one (l.) of a clergyman, the other of a lady. Behind the sitters is a tall screen of several leaves.

Reproduced, S. Brinton, The Eighteenth Century in Caricature, 1904, p. 42.

9 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 14 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5922 N^o 11. A CHOP-HOUSE.H. Bunbury Esq^r delin^tW. Dickinson ExcuditLondon, Publish'd Oct 15th 1781; by W. Dickinson N^o 158 New Bond Street.

Stipple. No. 11 of a series. The interior of a chop-house. At a small square table, a fat elderly man (r.) with a bushy wig sits facing a younger man. The older man is identified in a contemporary hand as 'Dr Johnson', who is much caricatured. His vis-à-vis is evidently Boswell (cf. a profile etched by S. Lysons). Johnson is intent on his plate; Boswell's elbows rest on the table, holding his knife and fork vertically erect he looks at Johnson, a cutlet-bone (?) protrudes from his mouth. He wears a three-cornered hat and spurred boots. Johnson's hat is supported on his massive stick, which is propped up beside him. Two dogs look expectantly at the table. A waiter (r.) with a napkin under his arm is bringing in a dish. On the l. is a small round table, at which sits a man who is not yet served. He is reading a newspaper with a scowl of concentration. Behind him a man in back-view stands looking at himself in an oval wall-mirror. Behind the waiter (r.) is a tall screen of several leaves.

11 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.5923 N^o 12. THE COFFEE-HOUSE PATRIOTS; OR NEWS, FROM S^T EUSTATIA.H. Bunbury Esq^r Delin^tW. Dickinson ExcuditLondon. Publish'd Oct^r 15: 1781; by W. Dickinson N^o 158 New Bond Street.

Stipple. No. 12 of a series. The interior of a coffee-house, the customers, with one exception, deeply interested and dismayed at the news in a Gazette Extraordinary, which the title shows is that on the capture of the island of St. Eustatius by Rodney, see Nos. 5827, 5837, &c., the Extraordinary Gazette being that of 13 Feb. 1781.

On each side of the room is an oblong table flanked by wooden settles. Between the tables and in the centre of the design three men stand, one of whom reads from a Gazette Extraordinary. His two companions look at him with scowling attention; one, his hat under his arm, has both hands thrust deep into the pockets of his coat; the other holds his forehead, from which his wig has been pushed back. A dog gazes up at them.

At the table on the l. a man sits in full face gaping with dismay, his hands rest on the table grasping his knife and fork. Two men sit on opposite sides of the table on the r.; one holds a glass in his l. hand, while he looks up at the group with the newspaper. His vis-à-vis has turned sideways, his hands on his knees, with an expression of melancholy alarm. Behind him, one hand on the back of the settle, stands John Wilkes, conspicuous by his squint and his characteristic wig; he holds a glass of wine and frowns. At his side is a man leaning back asleep.

A cockatoo's cage is hung from the roof, the bird head downwards, as if about to screech. Half of the dial of a large wall clock is visible on the extreme r. On the l. is a folding screen.

A satire on the dismay with which the city patriots received news of English successes, cf. No. 5334. On the taking of St. Eustatius it was found that many British merchants had been using the island as a base for trading with the enemy. The news of the capture was 'a thunderbolt to the Opposition', Selwyn to Lady Rodney. Mundy, Life and Corr. of Rodney, ii. 51. See Nos. 5557, 5837, 5839, 5842.

11 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 14 in.

5924 N^o 1 'THE RELIEF.

H. Bunbury Esq^r delin^t

W. Dickinson Excud^t

London, Publish'd Oct^r 21st; 1781, by W. Dickinson, Engraver N^o 158 New Bond Street.

Stipple. One of a series, the number illegible. Three soldiers stand at attention outside a tent (r.) holding bayoneted muskets. Two wear high plumed busbies, the third a laced three-cornered hat. The officer facing them (l.), holding a musket without a bayonet against his shoulder, gives the word of command. A stout man and a fat woman stand behind him. In the foreground (r.) a drummer boy, sitting on the ground, one arm resting on his drum, puts a plumed busby on the head of a dog. Two rough-looking men wearing ribbon favours in their hats, probably intended for Gordon Rioters, point jeeringly at the three soldiers. In the background are trees.

Camps were established in London during the Gordon Riots in Hyde Park, St. James's Park, and the garden of the British Museum, remaining there for several weeks. For the camp in Hyde Park see the series of prints by Paul Sandby.

10 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5925 HYDE PARK 1780

[1781?]

H Bunbury del.

Engraving. Riders in Hyde Park. A fat coachman (r.) rides (l. to r.) a coach-horse in blinkers, his mistress is seated behind him, in back-view, wearing an enormous calash hood, see No. 5434, &c., and holding a fan. The horse has planted its forefeet on the ground, its rider is applying spurs and a coach-whip. On the l. a lady and a slim and elegant young man are galloping from r. to l.; he turns towards her, she looks straight ahead. Behind them rides a groom. In the background (r.) is a group of trees, in the foreground grass and (l.) three dogs.

The title and artist's name are etched conspicuously across the lower r. corner of the design.

Nos. 5926, 5927 are companion prints, all three probably etched by Bretherton.

23 × 21 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5926 [HYDE PARK?]

[After Bunbury]

J Bretherton f. 23rd Feb^y 1781

Engraving. Riders, probably in Hyde Park, with a pedestrian who is being worried by four dogs, apparently on account of his dress. He stands (l.) on tiptoe, in profile to the r., holding up his arms, a stick in his r. hand. His coat is spotted like a leopard and it and his waistcoat are edged with fur. He is probably a Frenchman. Two dogs worry at his coat, a larger one standing on its hind-legs, puts one paw on his chest, a fourth is biting his long pigtail queue. Three riders, riding from r. to l., look with interest at the man and dogs. The foremost is a military officer in uniform, with holsters and rolled cloak on his saddle. A fourth man rides stiffly from l. to r., looking straight in front of him. A companion print to Nos. 5925, 5927.

¹ Blank or illegible.

$23\frac{1}{8} \times 20\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5927 [HYDE PARK?]

[After Bunbury.]

Engraving. Riders, probably in Hyde Park, looking with astonishment at an elderly lady (r.) walking from l. to r. followed by a little black boy carrying her umbrella. She wears an enormous calash hood, see No. 5434, &c., and holds in her l. hand a shepherdess's crook. Three men (l.) ride side by side, from l. to r., the nearest pulls on his reins, leaning back, the next looks at the lady through his spy-glass, the third, staring open-mouthed, lashes his horse. The horse of a stout man riding from r. to l., immediately behind the lady, is rearing. In the foreground an old woman sits by the roadside with a sheaf of ballads or newspapers. Behind (l.) are trees. A companion print to Nos. 5925, 5926.

$23\frac{3}{16} \times 20$ in.

5928 E, O, OR THE FASHIONABLE VOWELS.

[Rowlandson.]

Pub^d Oct. 28. 1781 as the Act directs

Engraving. Gamblers seated and standing round an E.O. table. The table is octagon-shaped, the circular roulette mechanism being sunk in its centre, surrounded with the letters E.O. for even and odd. In the foreground (r.), in profile to the l., a man leans back in his chair asleep, an empty purse on the table beside him; he resembles Captain Topham.¹ The others are probably also portraits, but are more caricatured; they watch the table with gestures and expressions of anxiety and despair. There are fourteen figures. Rowlandson, a confirmed gambler, must have taken part in many such assemblies. See also Nos. 6118-20.

Grego, Rowlandson, i. 101-3. (Reproduction.)

$7\frac{1}{4} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

This print was reissued by Fores with the date Jan^y 1st 1786 and the title Private Amusement.

5929 BROTHERS OF THE WHIP

A. Grant del^t [Rowlandson.]²

Pub: as the Act Directs Nov: 27. 1781 by H Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving. A group of four men. On the l., in profile to the r., stands a stout coachman, with short wig, three-cornered hat, and laced coat; he holds a tankard in his r. hand, a whip in his l., the butt resting on the ground. Next him, full face, is a postilion wearing a livery coat with epaulettes, round hat, and top-boots; he holds a whip resting on his l. shoulder. The other two appear to be amateur whips: one stands in profile to the l. holding a large oval snuff-box, he wears a long coat, broad-brimmed hat, and buckled shoes. In the centre is a man wearing a short striped jacket, broad-brimmed hat, and buckled shoes.

¹ See a caricature of Topham by Rowlandson called Cap^t Epilogue, published 7 Mar. 1786.

² Attributed by E. Hawkins to Kingsbury.

In the background (r.) are elaborately built stables, with two pediments over semicircular windows. Outside them stands a coach and a groom with two carriage-horses. For the signature A. Grant, cf. No. 6133.

Grego, Rowlandson, i. 103.

7×9 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5930 CHARITY COVERETH A MULTITUDE OF SINS.

[Rowlandson.]

[Published by H. Humphrey. Nov^r 27, 1781]

Engraving (coloured impression). A young military officer wearing a gorget stands at the door of a house, his l. hand on the knocker, looking up at two courtesans who lean out of a sash-window over the door. He puts a coin into the hat of a disabled sailor who stands behind him, supported on crutches, his forehead bandaged. Behind the sailor are two itinerant musicians: a man carrying a rectangular box, and a woman turning the handle of a hurdy-gurdy or vielle which is slung round her neck, her mouth is open as if singing.

The door of the house is ornamented with a carved wooden pediment, and bears a plate M^{rs} Mitchel. The knocker has a lion's head. Only the corner of the house appears, the street is Cleveland Row. A brick wall extends from the house to the l., over it appear trees, and a notice-board inscribed Men Traps are laid here: every Night also . . . On the wall a placard is pasted, D^r Leaks Pills. . . .

Mrs. Mitchell was one of the chief keepers of fashionable houses of ill fame; a Mrs. Welch kept such a house in Cleveland Row. H. Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, pp. 143, 183.

Grego, Rowlandson, i. 105. (Reproduction.)

12 $\frac{1}{4}$ ×9 $\frac{13}{16}$ in.

The publication line has been cut off.

5931 AN ESSAY ON HATS.

I Nixon Fec^t

Pub^d: May, 16. 1781 by W. Wells, N^o 132, Fleet Street, London.

Engraving. Three men, two on horseback, wearing new-fashioned hats. The centre figure is seen in back view on horseback, he wears a large hat with a high cylindrical crown round which are spaced six hat-bands. In the foreground (r.) is a man wearing a wide-brimmed hat whose crown is shaped like an inverted flower-pot. He is looking through a small telescope. These two both carry knotted sticks. The third man who is cantering (l. to r.) in the middle distance (l.) wears a similar hat. All three wear spurred top-boots in the fashion of the moment, with very long tops descending well below the calf of the leg.

This seems to be the first appearance of the embryo top-hat. See also Nos. 5933, 5934, 5935.
 $8\frac{3}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5932 [A CORNISH HUGG. SCENE BILLINGSGATE]¹

I. Nixon Del

Publish'd June 5th 1781 by W^m Wells N^o 132, (opposite Salisbury Court,) Fleet Street, London.

Engraving. A tall, stout fish-wife has seized a fashionably dressed man round the waist and lifted him up; his hat and tasselled cane have fallen to the ground. She is neatly dressed, with a flat hat tied over her cap, a checked apron, clocked stockings, and buckled shoes, but she wears a soldier's coat over her dress. There are three spectators: a woman (r.) in profile to the l., gapes with astonishment; a neatly dressed man wearing an apron standing behind a fish-stall looks on with quiet amusement; an apple-woman sits (l.) grinning, arms akimbo. Beside her is a large basket heaped with a pyramid of fruit. A fish-stall and a basket have been overturned (r.) and the contents lie on the ground.

In the background is Billingsgate Dock, with masts and rigging; on the r. is one of the market buildings, inscribed BILLINGSGATE.

$11\frac{5}{8} \times 8\frac{7}{8}$ in.

Crace Collection, xx, No. 71.

5933 THE NEW GIG.

Colley Fec^t.

Pub^d Aug^t 11. 1781. by E. Hedges, N. 92. Under the Royal Exchange. Cornhill.

Engraving. Two people seated in the minute body of a gig which is poised on springs high above the spider-like wheels. The two horses are tandem, a groom rides the leader (l.) as postilion. Both occupants wear the high-crowned hats and boots with deep tops which had just become fashionable, see No. 5931. Beside the gig a man rides a small horse, looking up at the driver; he also wears one of the new hats, and carries a grotesquely knotted stick. On the panel of the gig is a coronet. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. cxxi.

$9 \times 13\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5934 GIGG DRIVER.

H. A—o del.

Publish'd 24th August 1781 by John Williams N^o 34 Strand.

Engraving. A man wearing the new-fashioned hat and boots for riding and driving, see Nos. 5931, 5933, 5935. He stands in profile to the l., slightly stooping, a driving whip with a long lash under his r. arm. He is gaping with a vacant expression. Beneath the design is inscribed:

*Thus view him gifted and accouter'd
 Not on the Inside but the Outward
 The Chapeau Blanc serves as a Token
 Of Puppies grown up into Fashion.*

$7\frac{13}{16} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in.

¹ Written in ink.

5935 BOOTS AND SPURS.Pub^d Oct^r 31st 1781 by J. Williams N^o 34 Strand.

Engraving (coloured impression). A young man standing in riding dress, holding a long riding whip, his l. hand is in his breeches pocket. The tops of his boots descend almost to his ankles, as do their dangling straps; one enormous spur is visible. His hat has a high crown like an inverted flower pot, and his hair without wig or powder hangs on his coat-collar. He wears a very long coat, a short check waistcoat, with a bunch of seals hanging from his fob. Behind him an ass is freely sketched. See also Nos. 5931, 5933, 5934.

Reissued 1 Sept. 1791 by Fores, with the title A Buck of 1781.

12¼ × 8¾ in.

5936 [MODERN WOMAN, 1781.]Agnes T—nPub^d 29th June 1781 by H Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A phaeton, whose small body is raised on springs high above the wheels, drawn by four long-tailed horses, absurdly small in proportion to the carriage. It is driven by a lady standing up and wielding an enormously long whip; next her sits a man without a hat, his hands held up, his face contorted with terror. The lady wears a hat of rather masculine fashion, with two erect ostrich feathers, a short coat, waistcoat, and ruffled skirt. On the side of the carriage is a crest—a stag's head in an oval, with the motto Fashion.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*Talk not to me Sir of y^r old Fashion'd rules,
E'en laugh'd at by Children, the Joke of the Schools:
They might do for y^r meek minded Matrons of old,
Who knew no use of Spirit but thier Servants to scold.
But for me Z—ds & Blood am not I fit to command,
I can swear Sir, & What's more drive four Horses in Hand.*

The signature suggests that the lady may be Agnes Townshend, a noted courtesan, known as vis-à-vis Townshend, see No. 5416, a noted whip, who drove her phaeton and four all over the country. H. Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, p. 282. See also No. 5375. For the signature cf. Nos. 5937, 5938.

6 × 9⅞ in.

5937 THE GREAT AND GLORIOUS DAYS OF QUEEN BESS.Agnes T—nPub^d 30th June 1781 by H Humphrey, N^o 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving. A procession (from l. to r.) of Queen Elizabeth and her maids of honour on horseback, the ladies all seated sideways, behind the rider of the horse, the cavalier always in profile, the lady in full face, except for one lady who is in back view. Two soldiers on foot carrying muskets, march in front, a mounted soldier rides behind. The dresses are pseudo-Elizabethan. The ladies wear ruffs and stiff wide-patterned petticoats, with scarves or hoods over their caps. One lady holds her hood. The procession consists of the Queen and three of her ladies. Beneath the design is inscribed:

*Think of the great Days when void of all fears
Of Wind & Rain sweet Queen Bess appears
She taught her Maids of Honour their Caps to defend
With oil skin hoods—when her Breakfast they attend.
Behind her good Chancellor seated;
And are with Beef Steaks & Onions all treated.*

Though drawn in a different manner, this appears to be a companion print to No. 5936; it contrasts the Elizabethan woman with the woman of 1781.

$5\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5938 LES PLAISIR [sic] DU MÈNAGE.

Agnes T—n. [Gillray.]

Pub^d Aug^t 1st 1781 by H. Humphrey New Bond St

Engraving (coloured impression). A domestic interior. In the upper margin is engraved, Give me the sweet delight of Love—a Catch, and the design illustrates the lines of the catch:

A smoky house, a failing trade,
Six squalling brats, and a scolding jade.

A man (full-face) stands disconsolately, his hands clasped while his virago of a wife (l.) threatens him with her fist. One small child pulls his coat and points to a little brother kicking on the floor, while a rather older girl weeps with her pinafore to her eyes, and another boy blows a trumpet. This group is on the r. On the l. one child clutches another by the hair.

The man's toes protrude through one of his shoes, he is without breeches, and these hang from a nail on the wall (r.) next his wife's hat. A parrot sits screeching on the outside of its cage. The plaster has fallen from the wall in patches, showing bricks. A smoky fire burns in the grate (l.); on the chimney-piece are tea-things.

Grego, Gillray, p. 32.

Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830.

$7\frac{3}{4} \times 10\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5939 TWO IMPURES OF THE TON DRIVING TO THE GIGG SHOP, HAMMERSMITH.

R. Dighton del.

London. Printed for R. Sayer & J. Bennett N^o 53 Fleet Street, J. Smith N^o 35 Cheapside, as the Act directs Feby 6; 1781.

Engraving. Two ladies driving in a gig, advancing diagonally towards the spectator from l. to r., on the road from Hyde Park Corner to Knightsbridge. The gig, which has a crest on its panel, is drawn by a pair of ponies with long tails and manes. The lady driving is standing up, she wears the fashionable driving dress of the period, coat and waistcoat of masculine cut, full skirt without a hoop, large feathered hat; a bunch of seals hangs from her waistcoat. Her companion (r.) sits demurely with folded arms; her dress is more feminine. The faces of both are patched. The background shows the front of St. George's Hospital (l.); under the pediment is a large board inscribed Saint Georges Hospital for Sick. Next it (r.) is a gate into Tattersall's; over the wall appears the top of a pedestal inscribed Tattersal which supports the statue of a horse.

8 $\frac{3}{16}$ × 6 $\frac{11}{16}$ in.

Crace Collection, ix. 61*

5940 DEFENDING NATIONAL HONO'R

A^{xr} M^c Pharson fec^t

Publish^d accord^d to the Act Febr^y 14. 1781 by T^s Gundry. p^{cc} 6^d

Engraving. A sow is rubbing herself against the base of a wooden lamp-post. A Highlander (r.), in tartan kilt and plaid with a feathered cap, raises his sword and is about to strike the animal, saying No national reflection yea auld Bitch. A coachman standing behind the Scot raises his whip, saying Ill cool your Pride Sawney. The scene is the road at Hyde Park Corner, showing wall, buildings (l.), pavement, and part of the road in the foreground. On the l. of the lamp-post are spectators: a woman in cloak and hat carrying a bundle, says Well don Jehu. A fat woman beside her says Heaven deliver us from Evel. Two little boys stand together, one says to the other, a chimney-sweep, Tom will crack his Lice. A carter with a whip, wearing a smock, says egad he has him. Another man (l.) says, Well don Tom give him a cooler.

Beneath the title is etched, Once upon a time as the Historian relates Sr Andrew M^c Ire in his peregrination near HydePark-Corner, where an old Sow was rubbing her scabby sides against a Lamppost: It so enraged the valiant Knight [sic] that old Bess should partake, or cast reflections on his Country's pleasures; with great wrath drew his Andrewfararara to avenge that Affront; but the happy incident of Tom the hackney Coachmans Whip prevented the tremendous [sic] blow—so saved poor Bess.

6 × 11 in.

NORTH AND SOUTH OF GREAT BRITAIN.

See No. 3799—11 June 1781

Will^m Hogarth delin. F. B.—sculp. [? Bartolozzi.]

Probably designed not by Hogarth but by Paul Sandby.

A satire on the Scots.

5941 THE FLOWERS OF EDINBURGH,

Pub^d Aug^t 1st 1781 by J. Langham, S^t Brides Passage Fleet Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). An Edinburgh wynd or close. A man seated on a bucket is using it as a latrine. A man holding a bucket stands behind him, screening him with his cloak, and turning round to call Haud your Hond Lossie to a woman who is emptying a bucket of filth from a first-floor window. A man is seated on the ground on the r. by a steaming cauldron, across which is a large spoon. He is calling Twa dips & a wallop for a Baubee. The men are in Highland dress. Beneath the title is engraved:

*Yi dunna ken what I can dee
For I can set ye doon & cure ye tee*

For this well-known danger of the Edinburgh streets see Boswell's Johnson, i. 119, n. 1, and cf. the Edinburgh word gardyloo (gardez l'eau).

A print with this title was advertised by Holland in a 'Catalogue' appended to Jordan's Elixir of Life, 1789, cf. No. 6126.

12 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5942 SAINT GEORGE FOR ENGLAND. 1

Published as the Act directs, 2 Jan. 1781.

Seven Prints of the Tutelar Saints.

Printed for Carington Bowles, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London.

Engraving. No. 1 of the series. A sailor riding (r. to l.) the British lion; in his r. hand he holds out a foaming tankard, in his l. is a sword resting on his shoulder and thrust through a huge sirloin of beef. His hat is decorated with a St. George's cross in a medallion, and with sprays of oak-leaves and acorns. On the lion's head is a spray of roses, his r. fore-paw rests on a plum-pudding in a dish. His tail is raised almost vertically. Behind, seen through the lion's legs, are ships in full sail, clouds of smoke showing that a naval battle is in progress.

This design is surrounded by a border: The two circles are of hops twining round a pole, with oak-leaves and ears of wheat at their summit. The upper edge is the title on a scroll, with oak-leaves. The lower is formed of oak-leaves, acorns, and roses centred by a punch-bowl. Below the border is engraved:

*Behold your Saint with Glorious English Fare,
Noble Sirloin, Rich Pudding and strong Beer.
For you my Heart's of Oak, for your Regale, Here's good old English Stingo Mild & Stale.*

*This Porter is by Famous Calvert made,
Justly Renowned of all the Brewing Trade.
Such cheer as this will make you Bold & Strong,
Who'd not on such a Noble Saint, Rely on.*

See also Nos. 5943-5.

Reproduced, M. D. George, England in Transition, frontispiece.

8 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5943 SAINT DAVID FOR WALES. 2

Publish'd as the Act directs, 2 Jan. 1781.

Printed for Carington Bowles, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Ch. Yard, London.

Engraving. No. 2 of the series, see No. 5942. A man riding (l. to r.) a goat. In his r. hand he holds out a large leek, in his l. is a slice of cheese on a toasting-fork. At his back is slung a Welsh harp ornamented with the head and torso of a winged woman. His hat is decorated with a leek, he wears jack-boots with large spurs. Fish are thrust through his belt, and a holster containing a bottle is inscribed Welch Ale.

In the background are mountainous hills on which goats are prancing. The border at each side is formed of a leek garlanded with leaves and surmounted by a goat's head. At the top is the title on a scroll and some small leeks. The lower border is of foliage centred by a crown surmounted by the ostrich plume of the Prince of Wales. In the two lower corners are piles of cheeses at which rats are nibbling.

Beneath the border is engraved:

*The Glorious Ancient British Saint Behold,
David the great in Fames Records Inroll'd,
Loaded with Grand Repast his Sons to Treat
And set's before them fine Welch Ale & Meat.*

*Herrings, Leeks, Black Puddings mustard, toasted Cheese,
With Goats Milk, Butter & such food as these.
Then brings his Minstrells Harp of gracefull sound.
Whose Musick cheers their Hearts & makes their Voice Rebound.*

8 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5944 SAINT ANDREW FOR SCOTLAND 3

Publish'd as the Act directs, 2 Jan. 1781.

Printed for Carington Bowles, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London.

Engraving. No. 3 of the series, see No. 5942. A Scotsman in kilt and plaid riding (l. to r.) a horse with a unicorn's horn and the tufted tail of a lion. He holds across his l. shoulder a long broadsword on which is spitted a sheep's head. In his r. hand he holds out an open snuff-box or mull. Between his teeth he holds the stem of a rose. His cap is decorated with feathers and a medallion of St. Andrew on his cross; in his belt are pistols and a dirk. The horse's bit is decorated with thistles. From the front of the saddle hang a small sack and a fish, from the back a set of bagpipes. Behind is the sea-shore, with two castles.

The border of the design at the two sides is of targets and broadswords, pistols, the Union Jack flag, roses and thistles, and of two bunches of leaves which are perhaps tobacco-leaves. The upper border is the title on a scroll. Below are roses and thistles. Below the design is engraved:

*View well S^t Andrew a saint of Muckle Pride,
In Northern Robes Array'd and by his Side
His trusty broad Sword, Dirk, & Pistols ride,
Likewise his Oatmeal pouch, Snuff, mull & Ling fish dry'd.*

*His roast Sheep's Head, Haggoss & Scotch Cale
With Sparkling Viskey Barley Cakes & Ale.
Then on the Bagpipe plays a pleasing Tune,
To celebrate his Joyfull Month of June.*

8 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5945 SAINT PATRICK FOR IRELAND. 4

Published as the Act directs, 2 Jan. 1781.

Printed for Carington Bowles, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London.

Engraving. No. 4 of the series, see No. 5942. An Irishman riding (l. to r.) on a horse. He is dressed as a military officer, with epaulettes. In his hat is a cross in a medallion. In his r. hand, and resting on his shoulder, is a sword on which potatoes are spitted. In his l. hand he holds out a wine-glass. Two fish are slung on his r. arm, under it is a sickle. Various objects are attached to his saddle or his person including a tankard, a small set of bagpipes, a candle-stick, a large fish; a small Irish harp decorates the hind-quarters of his horse. The background, seen between the horse's feet, is the sea-shore with ships.

A border decorates the two sides of the print, surmounted (l.) by a frowning mask, with a dagger through one eye, and (r.) by a smiling mask. To a vertical line of conventional fruit and foliage are attached a number of objects, including a horn and goblet, a flute, a flail and rake, a wine-bottle and glass, a sheaf of corn and a sickle.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*So sweet St Patrick comes, Dear Joy to Day,
Smiles on his face with Merriment & Play.
With good store of Tattoes, Sweet Buttermilk, & Whisky,
Small Pipes, & Usquebaugh to make us Dance Frisky.*

*Then banish all care, and meagre sorrow,
We'll Celebrate this Day not trust to morrow.
Let's Rant & Roar & make the House Ring,
Drink to St Patrick's Day in the Morning.*

8½ × 9 in.

5946-5957

Series of mezzotints published by Carington Bowles.

5946 DECEITFUL KISSES, OR THE PRETTY PLUNDERERS.

From the Original Picture by John Collet, in the possession of Carington Bowles.

432 Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in St Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, 1781].¹

Mezzotint (coloured impression). Interior of a bedroom. A stout man is being kissed by three pretty young women who put their arms round his neck. One takes his watch and seals from his fob; another robs him of his pocket-book, the third pulls a ring from his finger. On a table (r.) is a punch-bowl and a wine-bottle. A monkey seated on the top of a cupboard holds an open book inscribed, Who's the Dupe; this was a farce by Mrs. Cowley, first acted at Drury Lane, 1779.

12½ × 9⅞ in.

'Caricatures', i. 228. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5947 FIELDING'S MYRMIDONS SPOILING BOB BOOTY'S MORNING DRAUGHT.

From the Original Picture by John Collet, in the possession of Carington Bowles.

433 London: Published as the Act directs, 1 May 1781 by Carington Bowles N^o 69 in St Pauls Church Yard.

Mezzotint. Three Bow Street officers burst open the door (r.) of a room where three persons are sitting up in bed, much alarmed at their entry. The highwayman or burglar in the centre, wearing a night-cap, spills the contents of a punch-bowl held in his l. hand; over his arm is a netted purse containing coins. The two girls wear mob-caps, one (r.) seizes the man's arm in terror, the other (l.) takes up one of a pair of pistols lying by the bed (r.). On the ground lie top-boots, a mask, &c., the man's coat lies across the foot of the bed, on it is a bank-note. The constables are forcing backwards furniture with which the door had been barricaded; a chair, placed on a table, is falling over. On the wall is a framed print of Jack Sheppard, shackled and sitting on the ground in prison. The foremost Bow Street officer, wearing a striped waistcoat, has a sword under his arm; behind him are two men with constable's staves. Sir John Fielding died in Sept. 1780.

¹ Collet died in 1780.

$9\frac{7}{8} \times 13\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5948 THE BIRD OF PARADISE.

435 Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in St Paul's Church Yard, London. Publish'd as the Act directs [date erased, 1781].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A lady, seated on a settee smiling, her r. hand rests on the arm of the settee, in her l. is a black mask. On the cushion of the settee is a card Admit M^{rs} M—— to the Mask'd Ball. She is attractively dressed in the fashion of the period, with a muslin apron. Her coiffure is extravagantly large, with curls on her neck, and is covered by an elaborately frilled muslin cap. A rural landscape is seen through a window (r.).

She is Gertrude Mahon, née Tilson, b. 1752, whose mother was the daughter of the Earl of Cavan and widow of the Earl of Kerry. After eloping (1769) with Mahon, a musician and gamester, and being deserted by him, she became a courtesan. She also attempted to go on the stage (Covent Garden, 1780-1). She was called the Bird of Paradise (c. 1776-) from her love of bright colours, and was the subject of many press paragraphs. H. Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, 1909, pp. 247 ff. See No. 5868.

The subject of this portrait is incorrectly said to be Perdita Robinson by Wright, Caricature Hist. of the Georges, 1867, p. 257, and by Grego, Gillray, p. 38. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. clixiii. Bleackley, op. cit., p. 290.

$12\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ in. (clipped).

'Caricatures', ii. 94. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5948A A reduced version, No. 325 in Bowles's smaller series, published 2 Jan. 1781.

$5\frac{3}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in.

5949 LIKE MISTRESS—LIKE MAID.

[J. R. Smith?]

438 Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in St Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, 1781].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). Two women meet on the pavement outside a public-house. The mistress (r.) totters with dangling hands and half-closed eyes; the maid (l.) looks pertly at her with arms akimbo. The background is part of the front of the house, showing the lower part of a sash-window (l.) and an open door (r.) within which are seen a cask marked B and a shelf with glasses. Between window and door is a board inscribed Dealer in Spirituous Liquors . . . unds &c., the rest being obscured by the lady's large hat.

Beneath the title is engraved:

Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise. Proverbs Ch. xx. verse 1st.

Similar in manner to No. 5824; it appears to belong to the set of prints illustrating Proverbs, see Frankau, pp. 125, 199.

$12\frac{15}{16} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', ii. 40. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5950 MASTER LAVENDER QUALIFYING HIMSELF FOR THE ARMY.

439 Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Publish'd as the Act directs [date erased, 1781].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A young man in profile to the r. (l.), elegantly dressed, lounges beside a lady on a settee. He holds a coffee-cup. She sits before a round table on which is a coffee-pot, &c., on a tray. Her dress is of quasi-military cut and she wears a large feathered hat; they look towards each other. On the wall (l.) is a framed picture of a camp scene. Through the large sash-window (r.) are trees and (?) tents.

One of many satires on the militia camps at Coxheath and Warley. See No. 5523, &c. Similar in character to Nos. 6156, 6157.

$12\frac{5}{8} \times 9\frac{13}{16}$ in.

'Caricatures', i. 105. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

441. LOFTY RIDING, OR MISS FOLLY'S HEAD EXALTED

See No. 3786—[1781]

(After Collet.)

320. LOFTY RIDING . . . (Reduced version.)

See No. 3787—[1781]

5951 AN ENGLISH MAN OF WAR, TAKING A FRENCH PRIVATEER.

454 Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, 1781].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A young sailor overtakes and takes by the r. hand a young woman walking from l. to r., carrying one of the arched-top coffers which were used by milliners. She wears a hat, long gloves, and a cloak bordered with ermine. The sailor is dandified, in spite of his striped trousers, jacket, and round hat; a bunch of seals dangles from his waistcoat, and he carries a thin cane under his arm.

The background is the wall of a bridge over the Thames, it is surmounted by balustrades, through which is seen the river, and buildings on the opposite bank. A bill is posted on the wall, All Able Bodied Seamen. . . .

Reproduced, C. N. Robinson, The British Tar in Fact and Fiction, 1909, p. 172.

$13\frac{1}{16} \times 10$ in.

'Caricatures', i. 66. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5952 AN ENGLISH SLOOP ENGAGING A DUTCH MAN OF WAR.

455 Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, 1781].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A Dutchman (l.), smoking a short pipe, hands in his pockets, is being chucked under the chin by a gaily dressed courtesan (r.), her l. hand on her hip. He wears the round hat and baggy breeches of the Dutchman in caricature. Both stand full-face, each looks towards the other.

The background is formed by the lower part of houses in Covent Garden showing the arcade of the Piazza, a sedan chair (r.) stands under an arch. Immediately behind the two figures are vegetables and baskets.

Reproduced, C. N. Robinson, The British Tar in Fact and Fiction, 1909, p. 166.

12 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', i. 67. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5953 LADY GORGET RAISING RECRUITS FOR COX-HEATH.

456 Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, 1781].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A lady seated on a settee (r.) looking towards three yokels who stand before her (l.). She is wearing riding-dress of a military cut, an officer's coat with epaulettes, and a gorget, the sign of an officer on active service. A bunch of seals hangs from her double-breasted waistcoat. She wears a large feathered hat with a military cockade, and holds a tasselled cane under her l. arm. She is addressing a young man wearing spatterdashes and holding his hat, he smiles sheepishly. Another young man wearing a hat stands behind him (l.), one hand on his shoulder. The third, wearing a smock frock, holds his hat to his mouth, grinning. Outside the window (l.) are the tents of the camp.

One of many satires on camp-life connected with the camps at Coxheath and Warley. See No. 5523, &c.

12 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

'Caricatures', i. 55. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5954 A MAN OF WAR, TOWING A FRIGATE INTO HARBOUR.

459 Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles at his Map & Print Warehouse N^o 69 in S^t Paul's Church Yard London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, 1781].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A sailor walking (r. to l.) arm in arm with a young woman, her r. arm in his l. He wears striped trousers, and carries a cane. She wears a ribbon-trimmed hat, short petticoat with an over-dress draped above it at the back, and an apron. Behind are steps leading to a sea-wall, with ships. On the l. are trees.

Reproduced, C. N. Robinson, The British Tar in Fact and Fiction, 1909, p. 296.

12 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', i. 68. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5955 MR DEPUTY DUMPLING AND FAMILY ENJOYING A SUMMER AFTERNOON.

463 Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard London [1781].

Mezzotint (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A family party walking past the entrance to Bagnigge Wells: A fat citizen, his wig awry and dripping with perspiration, carries a little girl who holds a whip. His stout wife walks behind (r.) holding a fan in one hand, a tasselled cane in the other, she smiles complacently. In front, a small boy drags a small four-wheeled chair in which sits a doll-like child holding a doll. The background is the corner of a brick house (r.) showing part of a bow-window inscribed Dealer in Coffee, and a gate inscribed Bagnigge Wells with an ogive-shaped decoration surmounting the architrave. Behind are trees. The design evidently derives from Hogarth's Evening, see No. 2382 (1738).

12 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

Coloured impression in 'Caricatures', ii. 43. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5956 AN ENGAGEMENT IN BILLINGSGATE CHANNEL, BETWEEN THE TERRIBLE AND THE TIGER, TWO FIRST RATES.

464 Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, 1781].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). Two Billingsgate fish-women face each other with clenched fists, one (l.) is very stout; a small boy clasps her by the leg, in alarm. The other wears a cloak, the hem of which is being tugged at by a small boy who stands behind her, attempting to stop the engagement. Their baskets of fish are on the ground. Two men (r.) watch the fray, one, holding a sack over his shoulder, has a beard and appears to be a Jew; a boy puts his hand into the sack. The side of a vessel (r.) shows that the place is by the side of Billingsgate quay or dock. Behind is a public house, the sign displayed on a first-floor balcony: three barrels, and the name CHURCH.

12 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 9 $\frac{13}{16}$ in.

'Caricatures', i. 73. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

5957 A FLEET OF TRANSPORTS UNDER CONVOY.

[After R. Dighton.]

465 Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard London. Published as the Act directs [9 Nov. 1781].¹

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A man (l.) leads by a rope the foremost of a crowd of prisoners sentenced to transportation who follow him from l. to r. The two foremost are bearded Jews. Behind comes a knock-kneed youth taking a pinch of snuff; a man behind him is gnawing a large bone. There are ten prisoners in all. The background is part of the façade of Newgate prison.

¹ The date has been erased but is supplied from an impression in the possession of Mr. W. T. Spencer, New Oxford Street.

At this time the transportation of convicts had temporarily ceased, owing to the American war, and hulks in the Thames were used as a substitute.

$12\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{13}{16}$ in.

'Caricatures', i. 196. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

POLITICAL SATIRES

5958 A—B^P LAUD CHARGING HIS CLERGY,Burnet Inv^t &c.Pub^d as the Act directs Jan^y 1st 1782. Price 1^{sg} to be had at N^o 14 Dover Street.

Engraving. The interior of a church. Archbishop Markham (l.) delivering a charge to his clergy. He stands (l.) within the chancel rails; in his left hand he holds up a flaming torch; in his r. hand, which rests on a balustrade, he holds a birch-rod and a paper inscribed Factious C—y—n. [Countrymen], A Lamentable Want of Sobriety, Foremost in mischief. This is no Gainfull Traffick—Nonresistance &c. Explain'd. Vide my Sermon. Charity Thinketh no Evil &c. A perfectly detestable Faction &c.

On the r., in the body of the church, sit clergymen dressed in gown and bands, they listen with varying expressions. Behind the archbishop is a table of the Ten Commandments, on which is inscribed, . . . VI Thou shalt do no Murder and IX Thou shalt not bear false Witness &c.

Below the design is etched, Remarks upon a late charge delivered not 100 Miles from Y—k. Vide Remem^r. p^t. 2nd 1781—page 239.

Beneath the title is etched, "Hac itur ad astra" Anglicè—This is the Road to Lambeth.

The print illustrates a criticism in the Remembrancer on a charge of Markham to the York clergy in which he blamed them for having 'not only cast away the gravity of their character, but stood foremost in mischief'. This was directed against the part taken by some of the York clergy in the County Association (see Nos. 5638, 5657, &c.), the chief of whom were Christopher Wyvill and Mason. See Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii, 302, 330, 339; Wyvill, Political Papers, 6. v. York, 1794–1802. Markham's openly expressed opinions on the American War and party politics had made him very unpopular with the Whigs, see No. 5553, &c.

The artist's name is perhaps an allusion to Gilbert Burnet (1643–1714) as both a bishop and a leading Revolution Whig.

By the same artist, perhaps an amateur, as Nos. 5975, 6045, 6181.

7 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

A design in two compartments,

5959 TIME PAST.

Pub by E. Hedges Jan^y 20. 1782 Cornhill

Engraving. A stout English soldier pursues with clenched fists two French soldiers, who are emaciated petits-mâtres. They wear long pigtail queues, ruffled shirts, and large top-boots. The Englishman says, Lower your Topsails Monsieurs; the Frenchmen say We are bold Frenchmen. The Englishman is trampling on a French flag which lies on the ground. A British flag is partly visible on the l. behind the Englishman. In the distance (r.) a party of French soldiers is seen in flight, over them is inscribed, Run Frogs.

Beneath the title is etched, When we beat them ten to one.

8 $\frac{3}{16}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

TIME PRESENT.

Pub. Jan^y 20. 1782 by E. Hedges Cornhill

Engraving. A French soldier (l.), with clenched fists, kicks the back of a fat English soldier. He says Begar we will make you now lower your Topsails. The fleeing Englishman looks round to say I'm an English man of War. In the distance (r.) English soldiers with a flag, the words Run Beef Heads inscribed over their heads, are in flight. The British flag, inscribed Dis-colour'd, lies on the ground. A French flag, inscribed Lewis le Grand, extends over the head of the victorious Frenchman.

Beneath the title is etched, The Case is alter'd. This represents the resentment at the military and naval situation: on 4 Dec. the Livery of London voted a remonstrance to the king, using the words, 'Your armies are captured; the wanted superiority of your navies is annihilated; your dominions are lost.' Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 386.

8 $\frac{3}{16}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. Pl. 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 13 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5960 COMMODORE ST. JAGO RETURNING VICTORIOUS.

Ch^s Bretherton Jun^rPublish'd Jan^y 22^d 1782.

Engraving. Commodore Johnstone, in naval uniform, walking in profile to the r., two large bundles attached to his shoulders, on the top of which sits a small monkey with a label round its neck inscribed Caught at S^t Jago by the people ashore. The bundles are inscribed Plunder, Plunder and A large Body of News digested by a very promising officer Lieut^t D—. Under his r. arm are bundles of papers inscribed List of Kill'd at S^t Jago; Romney none, and Charge against Cap^t Sutton. In his r. hand he holds documents inscribed: Articles of Capitulation in Case I had taken the Cape—But alas! I was mistaken; Prize Lists and Blank Commission. Above the design is etched, I took the charge of Pilotage on myself—turn'd by traverses into the Bay and made even the kings of the East bow to my victorious arms.

These words burlesque Johnstone's dispatch of 21 Aug. 1781 published in an Extraordinary Gazette of 15 Oct. 1781. The print is a satire on Johnstone's Expedition against the Cape of Good Hope. He put into Porto Praya in St. Jago, one of the Cape Verde Islands, on 11 Apr. for supplies, where he was followed by de Suffren, whom he defeated in circumstances which showed his lack of seamanship. French reinforcements reached the Cape which made Johnstone relinquish his intended attack. As an alternative he attacked some Dutch East Indiamen in Saldanha Bay. His dispatch relates the pursuit of the East Indiamen; in it he says, 'I took the charge of pilotage upon myself and run in shore under cover of the night. At this time also a Boat was seen rowing to our ship, filled with People in Eastern garb, making humble signs of submission: They proved to be the Kings of Tamare and Tidore, with the Princes of their respective Families; whom the Dutch East-India Company had long confined on the Isle Robin, with different Malefactors, but had lately removed them from that island to Saldanha.' The monkey sitting on the bundle of 'plunder' appears to represent these kings and princes. Cf. Ann. Reg. 1782, pp. 110–12. The reference to the 'large body of News . . .' is also to Johnstone's dispatch: 'From Captain Pigot I received a Body of Intelligence [of the East Indiamen], digested by Lieutenant d'Auvergne, a very promising young officer . . .'. The Romney was Johnstone's flag-ship, a Fourth Rate of 50 guns.

In this expedition Johnstone lost important opportunities by lack of seamanship, see W. M. James, The British Navy in Adversity, 1926, 381 ff. Mahan, Influence of Sea Power upon History, pp. 421 ff. Cf. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 129 and n. Cf. also No. 6048.

10 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. (pl.).

An English satire on the capture of St. Eustatius, No. 1202, Collection de Vinck,

BE NOT SURPRISED. NE SOYEZ PAS SURPRIS.

Kobon [Cockburn] pinxit. Marq. de Bouillé fecit.

London, Publish'd Feb. 12. 1782. by H. Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving. A French officer (de Bouillé) with a drawn sabre, holding four British flags which trail on the ground, escorts two prisoners, one in night attire, the other (James Cockburn, commandant at St. Eustatius) in uniform. In the background are the fortifications of St. Eustatius, with other prisoners (l.) being led off. A French soldier stands in a sentry-box, his cap inscribed d'Auxerrois. On the wall is a placard inscribed:

667 { Anglois } 68 peices of cannon.
 { English }

379 { Francois }
 { French. }

Point de Retreat.

Retreat cut off.

4 pair of colours.

4 Pavillons.

The garrison of St. Eustatius, taken Feb. 1781 by Rodney, see No. 5837, &c., was surprised at 6 a.m. on 26 Nov. 1781 by a party of Chasseurs d'Auxerrois and of Dillon's Irish brigade. The names of the artists indicate the defeat by de Bouillé of Colonel James Cockburn, for which he was tried by court-martial (1783) and cashiered. The inscription on the print states accurately the relative strength of the garrison and of the French.

5 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 10 $\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5961 THE ROYAL HUNT, OR A PROSPECT OF THE YEAR 1782

South Briton fecit North Briton Inv^t

[? After

Viscount Townshend.]

Published according to Act of Parliament by R. Owen, in Fleet Street Feb^y 16th 1782.

Engraving beneath which are printed verses entitled The Chase. A companion to No. 5988 also ascribed to Townshend. In the foreground (l.) a party of ministers is carousing. Members of the Opposition watch them with indignation. In the distance (l.) behind them mounted men with hounds chase a stag. On the r. the Temple of Fame is being demolished by the enemies of Britain. Many of the figures have numbers referring to notes engraved beneath the design.

The central figure in the ministerial group is (4) Sandwich (S—h) seated on the ground playing a violin, between two courtesans, each of whom holds a goblet of wine. He turns to one of them, saying, D—mn the Navy, Give me t' ther Glee; she holds a torn paper inscribed How merrily we live. An open book, Catches Glee's, in front of him, is supported by a wine-bottle. In the l. corner of the print is (5) North (N—h) seated on a small sack inscribed Budg[et], he is yawning, his arms stretched above his head. Three men stand behind him: a man in Elizabethan dress wearing a tall hat and ruff who is (9) R—by [Rigby] in the Character of Bobadil. He says (apparently of Sandwich) I would he were in the Bottomless Pit. Cf. Nos. 5982, 6052. For the time-serving Rigby's attack on Germain and Sandwich, and flattery of Pitt (14 Dec. 1781) see Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 390, and Parliamentary Hist. xxii. 847. Behind him and whispering into his ear, stands 8, Lord Amherst (A—rst), very thin, saying, Dick Rugby [sic] Stand Close. Behind Amherst stands 7, Lord George Germain (G—mn) saying Jeffry Barebones [i.e. Amherst], this is worse than Minden.

Next on the r. stands the group of patriots: (6) Pitt (W—P—t) looking towards North, says Shake off this Indolence. (3), Fox (F—x), pointing towards the Temple of Fame (r.) and frowning, says, Wheres your Navy, wheres your Islands. (2), Burke (B—k) is saying Wout even Destruction move ye. (1), The Duke of Richmond (R—d) says Curs'd be those men who owe their Greatness to their Countrys Ruin.

In the foreground (r.) Britannia, seated on the ground on her shield, weeps, a handkerchief held to her eyes. Behind her is (10) The Temple of Fame, formerly the Wonder of the World, but now in Ruins, a building with a fluted dome on which the winged figure of Fame without her trumpet is poised on one foot, the other leg being broken off. The building is supported on a colonnade of pillars, all but two of which have been broken away and lie on the ground. The largest fallen column is inscribed America, it lies across another, Rh . . . de Island, suggesting that the artist believed Rhode Island to be one of the West India islands. The other fallen columns are: St. Kitts, Tobago, Eustatius, Nevis, Dominique, St. Vincents, Grenadoes, Minorca. St. Kitts and Nevis did not capitulate until 12 Feb. 1782; the news did not reach London till 3 March. Corr. of George III, v, p. 376. The two still remaining columns are Gibraltar and Jamaica Barbadoes. A chain of four men is tugging at a rope placed round the 'Gibraltar' pillar, the first is Spain, next Holland, next America, and last France.

On the r., between Britannia and the temple, the kings of France and Spain stand looking on; France says, Brother our Work is near Over.

The upper part of the temple, though precariously poised, is still intact. In the centre of the façade is a pediment decorated with the head of Geo Secundus, wearing a laurel wreath in an oval, and with smaller ovals inscribed with the names of British admirals: Hawke, Saunders, Boscawen, Pocock. These surround a tablet inscribed with British victories: Quebec, Portobello, Havannah, Belle-Isle, Martinique. On each side of the pediment is a window. Within one (r.) are seen minute figures in Highland dress; one says Egad Sawney we'd better gang. A Scotsman is getting out of the other window. This scene and the names of the supposed artists imply that disaster in the war has been due to the schemes of Bute and a Scottish faction, carried out by English ministers, but that this faction is now ready to depart, an allusion to the expected fall of the ministry.¹ See Nos. 5963, 6005.

¹ Cf. Morning Herald, 30 Mar. 1782: 'The Butean system is to be entirely abolished, and all Scotsmen to be wrested out of public offices, military as well as civil, in as quick manner as possible.'

In the distance is a fleet of ships in full sail (r.) advancing towards four dismantled ships with brooms at their mast-heads showing that they are for sale (l.), a gibe at the (supposed) comparative positions of the British Navy and the allied fleet. The Royal Hunt is taking place on the l. George III is on horseback, a label hanging from his pocket is inscribed The mightiest Hunter I. With him are four other riders and dogs; they chase the stag up a hill.

Much importance was ascribed to this print by the Morning Herald, Bate's newspaper, see No. 5550, &c. On 25 March a paragraph alleged that it had been shown by the Prince of Wales to the king and (a clearly baseless assertion) had induced him to dismiss the Ministry. On 28 March the paper attributed the print to 'a noble lord . . .' [Viscount Townshend]. On 30 March it called for the withdrawal of satirical prints, especially the Royal Hunt, a 'well-timed but most insolent exhibition', since 'His Majesty has at length returned to the voice of his people'. On 1 Apr. it records the publication of a 'new descriptive song' of eight stanzas, given with the print 'with which the people seem much captivated'.

This song appears to be the one printed beneath the plate, showing that it is a reissue at some date probably after 1 Apr. News of the loss of Minorca did not reach London till March. The verses (The Chase. To the tune of The Dusky Night) are put into the mouth of George III, who expresses his disregard of national disaster, provided he can still go 'a hunting'. One verse, to which is added a note "This song was written before the change of the Ministry", runs:

VI.

If Fox and Burke and Barré still
Should circumscribe our space.
Leave me but round sweet W—d—r's [Windsor's] hill,
Sufficient for the chase
That a hunting we may go, &c.

It ends:

VIII.

Half Nimrod's fame belongs to me,
Ev'n patriots wont deny,
The mightiest of all warriors he,
The mightiest hunter I.
Then a hunting . . . &c.

The exaggerated allegations of disaster to British arms resemble Burke's speech of 6 March, which, however, the print anticipates. See Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 214 f., Parl. Hist. xxii. 1110 f. The first appearance of Pitt in the Catalogue.

8 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 12 $\frac{1}{16}$ in.

THE BULL OVER-DROVE: OR THE DRIVER IN DANGER.

London Publish'd as the Act directs Feby 21. 1782, by I. Harris, Sweetings Alley Cornhill.

A reissue of No. 5640.

5962 THE KNAVE OF HEARTS.

Published as the Act directs Feb^r 1782. Price 6^d.

Engraving (coloured impression). The Knave of Hearts in a pack of cards, but with a fox's head and representing Charles Fox, standing within an oval border round the top of which is twined a vine branch with dangling bunches of grapes inscribed Places and Pensions. Fox looks up towards them, his tongue out, his mouth dripping saliva, saying, They are Sour. In his r. hand he holds a staff on which is the cap of liberty, from inside the cap hangs a streamer inscribed Liberty and Property, to which are attached small bells, implying that the cap is a fool's cap, cf. No. 5010.

The only example in the Catalogue of a satire directed against the Opposition shortly before the change of government. Cf. Nos. 5829, 5836, 5970, 5972, 5979, &c.

5 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. (pl. 6 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 5 in.).

5963 ['AS IT WAS, OR']¹ THE STATE SAMPSON FIREING THE FOXES, OR BOREAN MAJORITY.

['Pub^d March 15 1782 by H. Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street'¹]

Engraving. Lord North, in profile to the l., kneels on one knee holding a fire-brand to the tail of a fox. He blows a visible blast at the flame to kindle it. Other foxes with flaming tails run away from him. Above his head a number of cherubs seated on clouds are directing blasts of air at the burning foxes; some puff with distended cheeks; one plies a pair of bellows; another, labelled Scotch Assistance, and wearing a tartan plaid, puffs from a set of bagpipes. Above North a monkey collects in a funnel held in his mouth the blasts blown by three cherubs and discharges them at the foxes through his fundament.

By 15 March the 'Borean majority' had virtually disappeared: Conway's motion on 22 Feb. to declare the subduing of the colonies impossible was defeated by one vote only, cf. No. 5985. On 13 March it was publicly given out that Lord North was to resign. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 406 ff. The situation, however, was still full of uncertainty, see Walpole, Letters, xii. 190-3, 197-8. On 8 Mar. Lord John Cavendish's Resolutions of Censure had been defeated by ten votes; the 'Scotch Assistance' may allude to the speeches in defence of the Government by Dundas, the Lord Advocate, and by Adam, who had taunted Fox with looking outside parliament for the wishes of the people, Parl. Hist. xxii. 1114 ff. North thereupon wrote to the king (at 3 a.m. 9 Mar.): 'After such division, Lord North is obliged to repeat his opinion that it is totally impossible for the present Ministry to conduct His Majesty's business any longer.' Corr. of George III, v. 381. Negotiations took place between the king and Rockingham through Thurlow but were broken off after eight days. Rockingham Memoirs, ii. 451-9. Cf. No. 5972, where Thurlow is the 'shuffler'. On 20 Mar. North announced in the House of Commons that his Majesty's ministers were no more. Parl. Hist. xxii. 1215.

A companion print to No. 5981 by the same artist.

6 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

¹ The words in brackets have been added in a contemporary hand, evidently after the fall of the Ministry on 20 Mar.

5964 CHANGING PLACES;—ALIAS; FOX STINKING THE BADGER OUT OF HIS NEST.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d March 22nd 1782 by W. Humphrey N^o 227, Strand

Engraving. North (l.) in the guise of a badger, runs off leaving a little cave under a rock. Charles Fox as a fox (r.) snarls at him, while he excretes a stream inscribed Eloquence. The badger is identified as North by a ribbon tied round his body, and by the four points of the compass in a circle on his head, his snout being inscribed North. The fox stands over a bag inscribed Faro Bank from which guineas are pouring, playing-cards are strewn on the ground at his feet. In the foreground is a small bundle inscribed Budget within which are bars inscribed Soap and a small barrel inscribed Small Beer in allusion to the taxes proposed by North in his budget speech of 11 Mar. Behind the badger is a sign-post, the two arms of which terminate in well-drawn hands. The hand of the arm pointing l., in the direction to which North is running, holds the head of a halberd, the arm is inscribed To Tower Hill. The other arm points downwards at the cave which the badger has left, and is inscribed To the Treasury. Behind Fox is a terminal statue inscribed Janus, one head being that of a bearded old man, the other that of a fox, it is crowned by a cylindrical head-dress (? a dice-box) on which are two dice. The scene is a wooded landscape with hills. In the distance a hunt is in progress, a stag pursued by dogs; the foremost rider is the king, a minute figure who is falling from his horse after having leapt a gate. His crown falls from his head, his saddle, with the stirrups flying, is falling to the ground.

North resigned on 20 Mar., see No. 5963; on the 25th Fox took office as foreign secretary under Rockingham. For Fox's faro bank see No. 5972 and for North's budget, Nos. 5965, 5968, 5969, 5970, 5971, 5974, 5975, 5977, 5982, 5986, 5988.

For threats to North of the scaffold see No. 5969, &c. No. 6176 is a sequel to this print; see also Nos. 6186, 6196, 6204.

$9\frac{3}{8} \times 13\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5965 L—D SAND—G DROVE FROM HIS MOORINGS OR TACK ABOUT IS FAIR PLAY. [c. 25 Mar. 1782]

Sold by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand

Engraving. Three outgoing ministers are being knocked off their seats by their successors. The ministers are or have been seated on stones resembling mile-stones, engraved with the title of their office. They are all in profile to the l., facing their successors. Sandwich (centre), on a stone inscribed First Lo—d of the Adm—ty, is being knocked backwards by Admiral Keppel, his successor, who threatens him with clenched fists, saying, Strike your false Colours. Sandwich is saying That broadside has broke my Bowsprit. From his pocket falls a small paper, List of the navy. Round his waist is a rope with a broken end, the other end of which is still attached to an anchor which lies on the ground beside him, inscribed Rotten for want of care.

Lord North (r.), very short and fat, is being knocked backwards by Fox, who has a fox's head. His stone is inscribed Prime Minis—r; he says, O Reynard if I fall I shall burst. Fox says to him, Buss Constable. By this stone lie two bars inscribed Soap and a cask inscribed 12 Shilling Small Beer, to indicate the taxes recently proposed by North, see Nos. 5964, &c. To the l. Lord Amherst, in general's uniform and wearing spurred top-boots, is seated on the stone inscribed [Gen]eral of al[l] the Land Forces. Conway stands opposite him, threatening him with his fists and saying, That Staff shall be mine. Amherst says, Where 's my reserved courage—oh—its in my breeches.

In the foreground (l.) sits Britannia, her shield beside her, holding her spear and stretching out an arm towards Keppel. She says Britons strike home.

This print was probably published after North's resignation on 20 Mar. and before the formation of the new ministry on 27 Mar. The artist's anticipations are correct as regards Conway and Keppel; there had of course been no likelihood that Fox would succeed North as premier, although he was the leading spirit of the Opposition (cf. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 25.), the possible alternatives to Rockingham being Shelburne and Gower. Walpole, Last Journals, ii. 422 ff.; Fitzmaurice, Shelburne, 1912, ii. 87. Cf. No. 5963. The title of the print stresses the replacing of Sandwich by his old enemy Keppel, see No. 5537.

7 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5966 DAME RAT, AND HER POOR LITTLE ONES.

[Gillray.]

Publish'd March 26th 1782 by J: Browning. Oxford Street

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Lord Hertford, Lord Chamberlain since 1766, with his wife, five sons and two daughters, who are making obsequious overtures to Charles Fox, the central figure of the design. Hertford stands stiffly in profile to the l., his staff of office in his hand. His wife and children all have rat's heads. Fox, with a fox's head, strolls past the family ignoring their advances, and turning his back on Lady Hertford. She, very stout, has her r. hand in her husband's arm, and turns to her l. to address Fox, saying Happy to see you on Monday Mr. Reynard. The sons and daughters (r.) stand in a line behind their parents: on the r. is an elder daughter holding the hand of a little girl, who holds a young brother by the arm. Next come four tall young men, all holding their hats and bowing obsequiously towards Fox. The scene is an open rectangular space with buildings on the r. and at the back, perhaps a free rendering of one of the courts of St. James's Palace.

This illustrates a paragraph in the Morning Herald: Lord Hertford gave a grand ball on 19 Mar.; Fox received an invitation on that morning in the presence of Selwyn, and smiled as he read it, 'Pray what have you got there says George. A petition, replied the other, from a poor woman with thirteen children.'¹ The origin of the story appears in a letter from Selwyn to Lord Carlisle of 18 Mar. 'Charles called the card which he had from Lady Hertford, a letter from a poor woman with a large family of small children.' Hist. MSS. Comm., Carlisle MSS. 1897, p. 598; see also pp. 589, 590. Hertford was very reluctant to resign his office, and is said not to have surrendered his gold key until after the appointment of the Duke of Manchester on 10 April 1782. Cf. Carlisle MSS., pp. 606, 607, 621. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, p. 428, and No. 5988. Hertford (1719-94), afterwards 1st Marquess Hertford, had seven sons and six daughters, none of whom was so young as the youngest son and younger girl here depicted. The youngest child was the Hon. George Conway, b. 1763, called by Walpole, 3 June 1780, 'the handsomest giant in the world'. Letters, xii. 5. Hertford closely resembles the small caricature head by Gillray, see No. 5750. His brother General Conway became Commander-in-Chief under the new ministry, see No. 5965. For the Conways as rats see also No. 6018. For Hertford's restoration to office see No. 6218.

¹ Transcript (n.d.) by E. Hawkins.

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 10\frac{13}{16}$ in.

5967 THE NORTHERN PHIZ

[T. Colley?]

Pub^d by T. Colley March 27, 1782 Rolls Buildings fetter Lane

Engraving. Lord North, very short and fat, in profile to the r. conversing with a Jew. He holds up in his l. hand a mask, representing his own face, and says, This countenance is always the Same let your deeds be ever so Black. The Jew, in profile to the l., has a beard, and wears a wide-brimmed hat and long coat; he holds up his r. fore-finger, saying to North, Its such Base Metal its only fit to make Halfpence on't. Fox, with a fox's head, stands behind North (against whom he is urinating) and says, he'll come North about you if you don't mind Mordeca[i]. Beneath the design is engraved, A Copper Countenance, Selling by Private Contract, the property of a Noble Lord out of office having no further use for it.

A satire on the fall of North's ministry, 20 Mar. 1782.

$7\frac{3}{8} \times 6\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5968 LORD NO—H IN THE SUDS.

Pub. by T. Evans Oxford Street M^{ch} 27. 1782. London.

[? T. Colley.]

Engraving. North seated in a circular wash-tub, which froths with lather; he is surrounded by angry women. On the extreme l. the head and fore-paws of a fox (Charles Fox) appear, he is saying, Give him Pearl ash ha ha ha. A woman (l.) in profile to the r., looks towards him clenching her fists; she is smoking a short pipe and carries a large basket on her head, a knife hangs from her waist, she is probably a Billingsgate fish-wife. A short woman wearing a hat stands behind him, she applies a scrubbing-brush to his shoulder and says, Salt the Scoundrel. Next her on the r. another woman pours soap-suds on his head from a ladle or dipper, saying Lather him he has taxt Soap. A fourth woman (r.) holds out an open snuff-box towards him, saying, Snuff his Eyes out. On the extreme l. stands the devil, with horns, hoofs, and a tail, holding a trident; he says, I'll Contract for him. North is saying Da—n that Fox. Beneath the design is engraved:

*For taxing of Salt Tobacco and Soap,
Some say that Lord North is deserving a Rope.
His Lordship you see he his now in a Tub,
While the old woman lathers & give him a Scrub.*

North in 1782 proposed to increase the duty on soap, which, since 1714, had been $1\frac{1}{2}d.$ a lb. by $\frac{3}{4}d.$ a lb. on hard cake soap and $\frac{1}{4}d.$ a lb. on soft soap¹ (22 Geo. III. c. 68). He also increased the salt duty (22 Geo. III. c. 39). The budget was actually passed after his fall. He was accused of using Government contracts as bribes, cf. Parl. Hist. xxi, p. 1391, and No. 5835. For other references to North's budget see No. 5964, &c. See also No. 5988.

$5\frac{7}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5969 LORD SOPESUDS WASHING FOUL LINEN FOR THE GOOD OF THE NATION.

Publish'd April 1. 1782 by E. Dachery, N^o 11 St James's Street.

Engraving. Lord North at a wash-tub, washing clothes, with women standing round him. He stands in profile to the l. stooping over a tub resting on a square stool or table; he is in his shirt, with his sleeves tucked up, but wearing his garter ribbon. His coat, with its star, lies on a stool behind him. He says, Oh Lord I wish that Fox at the Devil. In the foreground (l.) a fox with playing-cards under its feet, is biting a sack inscribed Budgett. One woman, in profile to the r., holds up her hands, saying Poor man he must want a drop of comfort [i.e. gin]. A woman standing full face, behind the tub, says, Look at him, see what he has got by his Taxation. The third woman stands behind North holding a cloth, and saying He deserves this Clout pin'd to his tail. A small child with curly hair is looking over the edge of the wash-tub. Over North's head is suspended an axe, suggestive of the impeachment and capital punishment with which he had been threatened by the Opposition and Press, cf. Nos. 5660, 5661, 5964, 6046, &c.² The room is poverty-stricken, with plaster coming off the walls. On the table (l.) is bottle and glass. In the foreground (r.) is a barrel lying on its side inscribed Gin. On the wall hangs a paper or broadside inscribed, to praise Lord North i thirst it (?) no ten for he has [?illegible forborne] to tax our Dear Gin.

North is not caricatured, but his profile shows little resemblance either to his portraits or to the conventions of pictorial satire.

For North's budget see No. 5964, &c.

$8\frac{5}{16} \times 11\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5970 A WARM BIRTH FOR THE OLD ADMINISTRATION.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d April 2^d 1782 by W. Brown.

Engraving (coloured impression). George III on his throne asleep, while the new ministry, helped by devils, drive out the king's old advisers. The king, his throne raised on a dais of three steps covered with a fringed carpet, leans back, his mouth open, his feet crossed. His ermine-trimmed robe hangs open and shows a crown stuffed into the pocket of his coat.

¹ North justified this at some length, maintaining that it would not be burdensome to the poor, since their consumption of soap was very small, and since the price of soap had fallen considerably, owing to new processes, &c., and would probably continue to fall. Parl. Hist. xxii. 1153-4.

² Threats of impeachment and the block had been made by Burke and Fox, e.g. by Fox, 27 Nov. 1781, Parl. Hist. xxii. 692: Ministers would be trusted expiate their measures 'on the public scaffold'.

From his r. hand his sceptre is falling; in his l. he holds a book, inscribed Pinchee on Snuffers, an allusion to Pinchbeck, the supposed 'king's friend', see No. 5234, &c. Cf. W. Mason's 'Ode to Mr. Pinchbeck upon his newly invented candle-snuffers', 1776. In the centre of the room, at the foot of the dais, stands Charles Fox with a fox's head, in back view, his l. hand on the shoulder of the Devil, his r. holding North by his neck-cloth. He looks at the Devil saying, This is Boreas; he'll make an excellent pair of Bellows Old Boy. Large bunches of grapes protrude from the pockets of Fox's coat, cf. No. 5962. The Devil wears a toupet-wig and queue, coat, ruffled shirt and trousers, showing bare feet with talons. He has horns, tail, and claws, and holds in his r. hand a long pitchfork, ornamented with tassels. North puffs from his mouth a visible blast; from his coat pocket project bars inscribed Soap, an allusion to the tax laid on soap. Cf. No. 5964, &c.

Behind, demons are carrying off the king's late advisers through a wide doorway, over which is carved Pandaemoniu[m], towards flames and smoke. A demon (r.), clad in a pair of breeches, runs towards the door holding on his shoulders Sandwich and Germain (created Viscount Sackville on 11 Feb. 1782) tied back to back, Sackville underneath looking over the demon's back; he holds in his r. hand a broken sword, in his l. a Pla[n] of Minden in allusion to his supposed cowardice at Minden. Sandwich's legs hang over Sackville's shoulders, he holds out his arms, crying Wee'r sailing in a damn'd hot Latitude. A small imp or winged serpent above their heads darts flames at them. Bute in Highland dress is being pushed towards the flames by a small demon who prods him with a pitchfork saying Gee up lazy Boots. On Bute's l. is Mansfield,¹ in judge's wig and gown, a flying demon has clutched him by the wig and is dragging him towards the flames. A demon's head looks out of the fire at the advancing victims.

On the wall of the room, to the r. of the king, is a picture, the Wisdom of Solomon; where the incident of the two mothers, the infant, and the executioner is freely sketched on a small scale.

Beneath the title is engraved, Take the Wicked from before the King and his Throne shall be establish'd in Righteousness, a text hardly consistent with the representation of Fox, in league with the Devil, his pockets stuffed with the grapes which he has at last reached, cf. No. 5962. See also Nos. 5982, 5984. Grego, Gillray, p. 46, giving the date as 2 April 1783, when the plate was reissued. Reproduced, C. E. Jensen, Karikatur-album, 1906, i. 263.

8 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5971 SAILING TO THE HOUSE, WIND FULL NORTH.

[? T. Colley.]

Pub^d April 10th 1782, by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. North, very short and fat, walking in profile to the l., carrying a large sack on his shoulder. The Devil, with horns, hoofs, and forked tail, walks behind, supporting the sack. North says, Give us a Hoist Nick. The sack is inscribed BUDGET Small beer Soap Tobacco Insurance Carriages Tea. The Devil says, mind the Small Beer my old Boy. They are walking towards a rectangular brick building partly visible on the l., out of a window or opening in which looks a fox (Charles Fox), saying This North wind blows no good. The road on which North is walking is bordered by posts and chains which form a background.

¹ Thurlow, according to Grego.

One of many satires on North's budget of 1782, which was introduced on 11 March shortly before his resignation on 20 March, see Nos. 5964, &c. See Parl. Hist. xxii. 1150 ff. The items are correct, except that while beer was taxed, small beer was favourably treated. He also proposed to tax salt, see Nos. 5968, 5977, and entertainments, see No. 5974.

$4\frac{1}{16} \times 6\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5972 BANCO TO THE KNAVE.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d April 12th 1782 by H. Humphrey, N^o 118 New Bond Street.

Engraving. Members of the old and new Ministry seated and standing round a large card-table. Coins, cards and bank-notes lie on the table; two rectangular wells sunk in the centre are full of coins. In the centre of the farther side of the table sits Lord North throwing his cards down on the table; he looks down dejectedly, saying Its all over.¹ On the r. sits Fox, with a fox's head, a pile of coins and bank-notes in front of him, on which lies a court-card with its corners turned up. He is saying Gentlemen the Bank is mine, & I will open every Night at the same hour. Streamers issue from the mouths of the late Opposition and join a scroll which floats over their heads, inscribed HUZZA, HUZZA HUZZA. The defeated Ministry is represented by four figures only, who sit at the centres of the farther and nearer sides of the table, and of its r. and l. sides. Facing Lord North, in back view, is a player whose chair is inscribed John Shuffler Esq. He is saying Alas! what a Deal. This is Thurlow, the Lord Chancellor, who retained his office under the new Ministry, cf. No. 5963. At the extreme r. of the table is a dejected player in profile to the l., saying, I want a new Master; his chair is inscribed, Sir Grey Parolle, that is Sir Grey Cooper, one of the Secretaries of the Treasury who commonly sat on North's l. hand and supplied him with facts for points arising in debate, giving him 'the parole'. These two are without cards or coins; croupier's rakes lie on the table in front of them. On the extreme l., at the opposite point of the table, sits a man holding a croupier's rake and saying, dejectedly, Atkinson cut the cards. (Richard Atkinson, of The Rolliad, had been a prominent contractor for loans issued by North (cf. No. 5835). Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 433-5.) He is perhaps Robinson, the other Secretary of the Treasury.

The other players (twenty-two) are all partisans of the new ministry and all, except Fox, are saying Huzza. They are grouped chiefly on the farther side of the table, some looking over the shoulders of those who are seated. On Fox's r. sits a minister with a ribbon and star who appears to be Rockingham, the new prime minister; his guineas are very few compared with those of Fox. Standing behind Grey Cooper, his hand on the back of his chair in profile to the l., is the Duke of Richmond. Standing next him (l.) is Dunning, in a barrister's wig and gown. Two men standing together on the l. can be identified with some certainty from their resemblance to portraits as Barré and Lord John Cavendish. Sitting behind Sandwich and on his l. is Wilkes, leaning eagerly forward. A man standing behind ¹ Temple wrote to Rockingham on 20 Mar. to tell him 'that Lord North, after having been with the King for near three hours, said to several persons . . . that the game is up.' Rockingham, ii. 462. Memoirs.

Lord North, looking downwards with a broad smile, is perhaps intended for Burke. A complacent player on North's r. resembles the Earl of Surrey. The figure most resembling portraits of Shelburne stands immediately in front of Cavendish and Barré, leaning forward with both hands resting on the table.

While this is a satire on ministerial changes, Fox and North as usual being the chief protagonists, cf. No. 5964, &c., it is also a satire on the faro bank at Brooks's held by Fox and some of his friends, which had been very profitable, see Hist. MSS. Comm., Carlisle MSS., 1897, pp. 476, 483, 484, 489-90; Walpole, Letters, xi. 441, and Nos. 5996, 5997. Fox gave it up while he was a minister, cf. No. 6013. Grego, Gillray, pp. 34-5; Wright and Evans, No. 2. Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830.

Another impression in which Rockingham (?) has no ribbon and star.
9 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 13 in.

5973 THE AMERICAN RATTLE SNAKE.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d April 12th 1782, by W. Humphrey, N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. An enormous snake, so coiled as to make three circles; from its mouth protrudes a forked fang and a label inscribed:

*Two British Armies I have thus Burgoyne'd,
And room for more I've got behind.*

Inside two of the circles are solid squares of British soldiers, while British flags lie on the ground. They represent the armies of Burgoyne and Cornwallis which had been forced to surrender. The last coil, nearest the tail, is empty; on the top of the tail which rears in the air a placard is hung, inscribed An Apartment to lett for Military Gentlemen.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*Britons within the Yankee Plains, [Mind?]¹ how ye March & Trench,
The Serpent in the Congress reigns,
As well as in the French.*

In the foreground are stones and foliage, the background is a mountainous landscape.

The snake emblem² had been chosen by the Americans and used as a device on their flag before the adoption of the stars and stripes, see Nos. 5336, 5401, 6004, 6039, &c. Reproduced, Drepperd, Early American Prints, p. 209.

8 $\frac{11}{16}$ × 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5974 A CHILLING NORTH BLAST OR A TAX UPON LAUGHTER.

(Pub^d April 13th 1782 by H. Humphrey at N^o 18 New Bond Street³)

Engraving. A harlequinade scene on the stage. North, in profile to the r.,

¹ Mutilated.

² A disjointed snake had been designed by Franklin in 1754 for the Pennsylvania Gazette, and was frequently used in other colonial newspapers from ten to twenty years later, with the legend 'unite or die'. After the first Congress in 1774 this was superseded by a living snake encircling a tree or staff of Liberty which is supported by the arms of the twelve colonies represented at Philadelphia with the legend 'united now alive and free . . .' This headed the New York Journal or the General Advertiser of 15 Dec. 1774. Reproduction, Halsey, The Boston Port Bill, p. 125; see also pp. 3, 270.

³ Written in ink on the plate.

reclines on a settee, one foot on the seat, one on the floor; he points at one of several figures who are rising through openings in the floor, saying, Hence Babbling Visions, you threaten here in Vain. He has a cap on his head, and wears a ribbon and star. Behind him (r.) stands Harlequin, masked, who has just risen through an opening in the floor, in which his feet are still hidden; he strikes North on the head with his club, saying, Do you hear tax them not for they are the abstract and brief chronicles of the time after your death you were bett^r have a bad Epitaph than their ill report while you live.

In the foreground three figures visible from the waist upwards emerge from separate apertures looking at North: A man (l.) in profile to the r., wearing a ruff, and holding a cross-hilted dagger in each hand says Oh I have fed upon this woe already and now excess of it will make me surfeit doth Shakespear know that we are tax'd. A man in back view (centre) with a feathered cap, holding a round shield and short broad-sword says Hang him a taxing salt butter Rogue I will awe him with my Cudgell It shall hang like a Meteor ov^r his Head. A man in armour (r.) wearing a helmet, holds a cock in his r. hand, a small lantern in his l., says List O List tax us not. This is the man at whom North is pointing.

Behind (r.) the figures of three witches are emerging from one circular hole; they wear steeple-crowned hats and point at North. One, holding a torch says, Boreas, Boreas, BO! Another says, For this be sure thou shalt have cramp^t side stiches that shall pen thy breath up. The third, holding up a broom, says Thou shalt be pinch'd as thick as honey-combs each pinch more stinging than bees that made them. A stage curtain in festoons is indicated across the upper part of the design on which the title is engraved.

A satire on North's proposed tax on places of public entertainment, which varied from 3*d.* where the price of admission did not exceed 1*s.* to 5*s.* on each admission over 10*s.* 6*d.* Parl. Hist. xxii. 1158-9, 11 Mar. 1782. It did not become law. One of many satires on North's budget proposals. See No. 5964, &c.

$8\frac{7}{16} \times 10\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5975 THE M—N—S—R [MINISTER] REDUCED, OR SIR OLIVER BLUBBER IN HIS PROPER STATION.

B. K. inv^t & [sic].

Publish'd as the Act directs April 16th 1782 at N^o 14 Dover Street

Engraving. Lord North caricatured as a very fat old woman, stands washing linen at a shallow tub which is supported on a stool. He is in profile to the r., a cloth tied over his head, a large handkerchief over his shoulders. The bag of his wig hangs over the handkerchief, and his Garter ribbon is worn under it. The background shows the corner of a room, in the wall on the r., in the upper r. corner of the print, is a window, through which two grinning old women are looking in at the washer-woman. On the wall (l.) is inscribed, Linen Wash'd 50 PC^t Cheaper than at any oth^{er} Place in London by Mary North. Author of the Treatise upon washing without Soap, and many other Ingenious Performances.

Another allusion to North's tax on soap; see No. 5964, &c.

By the same artist as Nos. 5958, 6045.

$6\frac{5}{8} \times 5\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5976 THROWING UP HIS MAJESTY'S FOXHOUNDS.

Publish'd as the Act directs April the 16. 1782 by J. Langham. N^o 11 S^t Bride's Passage.¹ & sold by T. Cornhill. Bruton [sic] Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Lord Denbigh (r.) stands in profile to the l. on a country road, his aquiline nose exaggerated. A procession of six foxhounds, the last of which has just left his mouth, runs down his body and along the road from r. to l. A fox runs across a field on the r. and Denbigh holds out his r. arm as if directing the hounds towards it. The road is edged by trees; a sign-post behind Denbigh has two arms, one (l.) points To Coventry, the other (r.) To Lutterworth. On the r. is a milestone, XI miles to Coventry. The background is an undulating landscape of grass and trees with a rectangular country house in the distance.

Basil Feilding (1719–1800), Earl of Denbigh, was Master of the Royal Harriers and Foxhounds from 1762 until the change of ministry in March 1782. The post disappeared as a result of Burke's Bill of Economical Reform. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 287. The house probably represents Newnham Paddox, his estate in Warwickshire. Walpole called him in 1773 'the lowest and most officious of the Court-tools'. Last Journals, 1910, i. 175. See Nos. 5763, 6162.

$8\frac{9}{16} \times 10\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5977 L N [LORD NORTH] ON THE STOOL OF REPENTANCE OR THE ILL EFFECTS OF MEDDLING WITH SALTS

Published According to Act of Parliment

[? J. K. Sherwin²

[n.d. c. April 1782]

Engraving. North, fat and ungainly, seated on a close-stool, his chin supported on his hands, his face is contorted and he clutches The London Courant, one of the most bitter of the anti-ministerial newspapers. On the design is etched, The Primier's only Motion made to fill the Treasury and enrich the Country or a Dose before the Tax Given by the Op[osition] by way of Experiment. An allusion to North's tax on salt. He raised the duty on common salt by 25 per cent. and put a duty of £1 per cwt. on medicinal salts, which, he said, 'although they pay no duty, bear an extraordinary high price'. Parl. Hist. xxii. 1155. For other satires on his budget see No. 5964, &c.

$7\frac{5}{8} \times 6\frac{3}{4}$ in. (pl.).

5978 THE MINISTER IN.
THE MINISTER OUT.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d April 22^d 1782 by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A design in two compartments.

[1] (l.) Fox, indicated by his fox's head, and the brush which replaces the queue of his wig, is squatting down, his hands clasped; three obsequious men surround him. One (r.) offers him a chamber-pot decorated with the royal arms. One standing behind holds in both hands a smoking receptacle. The third (l.) kneels supporting Fox by one hand, while he licks his r. forefinger. Beneath is etched:

¹ The address omitted on one (uncoloured) impression.

² According to a pencil note on one impression this is 'Said to be the only caricature etched by J. K. S.'

*When the Ministers In, how subservient his Friends,
They'll wipe his Backside, to obtain their own Ends.
Hold the Pot of Convenience, their Fingers will lick,
And at no dirty Work, you will e'er find them stick.*

$7\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

[2] Lord North, standing, his arms outstretched in dismay is being insulted by the three sycophants of the companion design. One (r.) holds him by his Garter ribbon, while he pours the contents of the chamber-pot over his head. Another empties his receptacle on North's head, the third holds a piece of paper to his face. Beneath is etched:

*Yet change but the Scene; shew him once out of Place,
And the Stink Pots they'll empty direct in his Face;
'Tis the Post, not the Person, they worship you find,
And when out of Office, they're soon out of Mind.*

In both designs the floor is flagged and the background is a panelled wall. Reprinted G.W.G., 1830.

$7\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{1}{8}$ in. (pl. $9\frac{1}{2} \times 13\frac{7}{16}$ in.).

5979 THE CAPTIVE PRINCE—OR—LIBERTY RUN MAD.

Pub^d 23^d [April?] 1782. by Eliz D'Achery St James's Street.

Engraving. George III stands passively in profile to the r. while members of the new ministry fix shackles to his wrists and ankles. He is saying, Oh! my misguided People. Rockingham is walking off (r.) holding the crown in his r. hand, saying Dispose of these Jewels for the Publick Use. He wears trunk hose and cross-hilted sword, a long robe trails on the ground behind him. The Duke of Richmond, in profile to the l., is fixing a shackle to the king's l. wrist; he says, I Command the Ordnance. (On 30 Mar. he was appointed Master General of the Ordnance.) In front of him a thin man kneeling on one knee, in profile to the l., is adjusting a fetter on the king's l. ankle; he is probably Lord John Cavendish. On the king's l. Fox kneels attaching a fetter to his r. leg; he has the head of a fox and is saying, I Command the Mob. Behind him, holding the chain which the king holds in his r. hand, is Admiral Keppel in naval uniform, saying, I Command the Fleet. He had been made a Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty on 30 Mar., the Admiralty being put in commission. On his r. stands General Conway in military uniform, clasping his hands, and looking to his r.; he says Which way shall I turn? How can I decide? He had been made Commander-in-Chief on 30 Mar.; in spite of his famous resolution of 22 Feb. (see No. 5963) he was not a whole-hearted supporter of the new ministry. On the extreme l. stands Burke, looking to the r. but taking no part in the proceedings. He holds a paper inscribed Pay Master, and is saying The best of Ministers The best of K... A reference to Burke's eulogy, on 15 April, of the king's message recommending the 'effectual Plan of Economy', his words being, 'It was the best of messages to the best of people from the best of kings'. Parl. Hist. xxii. 1269. See also Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 440-1; Camb. Mod. Hist. vi. 460.

For allegations of republicanism against the new Ministry cf. Walpole to Mann, 2 Apr. 1782, Letters, xii. 216: 'Every devil is at work to divide us, and half Styx at work to calumniate our party and represent us as worse levellers than John of Leyden and his Anabaptists.' See also Nos. 5964, 6006, 6007. For Fox's conversation (real or alleged) see Selwyn to Carlisle, 19 Mar. 1782, 'He talked of the king under the description of Satan . . .' and 23 Mar. 1782, [Charles said] 'That this Revolution which he brought about was the greatest for England that ever was; that excepting in the mere person of a King, it was a complete change of the constitution . . .' Hist. MSS. Comm., Carlisle MSS., pp. 599, 604, see also p. 623. See Nos. 5962, 5970, 5987, and cf. Nos. 5665, &c., 5843, &c.

According to a note by Mr. Hawkins the print was re-engraved [re-issued] on 29 May. The month is here omitted from the publication line. $8\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

5980 A GAME AT PUT FOR THE CHIEF JUSTICE SHIP.

Pub^d Ap^l 25. 1782 by E Darchery St^e James Street

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Two birds with human heads in profile stand opposite each other on a circular table playing a game of cards. One is a magpie (l.), with a short wig surmounted by a baron's coronet; his cards are held up in his l. claw. This is Dunning who, with Fox, Burke and others, had been admitted to the Privy Council on 27 Mar. and was created Baron Ashburton on 8 Apr. An owl (r.) with a judge's wig, his cards held in his r. claw, represents Lord Mansfield.¹ Both portraits are good. On the table are two wine-glasses, a decanter labelled clarret, a punch-bowl, three pipes, a book, and a paper of tobacco.

The new ministry were anxious to provide for Dunning, and would have liked to get rid of Mansfield, but he retained the Chief Justiceship of the King's Bench till his resignation in 1788. Dunning became Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 17 Apr. Cf. a paragraph in the Morning Herald 22 Mar. 1782, 'The King's Bench will probably hold its present principal durante vita. But the privy council is no longer to be benefited thereby.' On 27 Mar. that paper announced, 'The terms which Mr. Dunning has made for himself are the reversionary grant of the Chancellorship or Chief Justiceship of the King's Bench according to the first vacancy in either, by resignation or death, till when he accepts the Attorney Generalship.'

$7\frac{1}{2} \times 11\frac{5}{8}$ in.

5981 AS IT IS OR THE WIND CHANGED

Pub^d April 1782 by H Humphrey Bond Street

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5963. Lord North fleeing from l. to r. before a number of pursuing foxes, his hands held up in alarm. He looks over his shoulder at the foxes with an expression of terror saying, Take it, take it, I resign I'm out I'm out. This is addressed to the foremost fox (evidently Charles Fox), who has seized the end of North's garter ribbon in his mouth and is pulling it off. Labels in the mouths of the three foxes who come next after their leader are inscribed: Where's your Puffing Majority now; You might have kept your breath to have cool'd your porridge; Let the boisterous Gentleman go for I have piss't his fire out & he cannot Longer do any Mischief; this animal is urinating on a smoking torch which lies on the ground. North resigned on 20 Mar. See Parl. Hist. xxii. 1214 ff. and No. 5963, &c.

¹ This has been written on one impression in an old hand, and is clearly correct. On another impression, however, Miss Banks has written 'Lord Camden'.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

5982 THE POLITICAL MIRROR OR AN EXHIBITION OF MINISTERS FOR APRIL 1782.¹

*Razo Resio inv.*²

Crunk Fogo sculp

Engraving. Members of the old Ministry (r.) falling into a pit, clutched by demons, while supporters of the new Ministry (l.) watch the spectacle. Britannia with her shield and spear sits in the foreground (l.) saying They would have ruined me if they had staid in power. In the air (r.) Bute, in Highland dress, is about to fall from the back of a witch on whom he has been riding. She is riding on a broom and is heading downwards towards the pit in which North and others are being engulfed. To her leg is tied a bag inscribed Ill gotten pelf. Bute wears a large jack-boot, and his Garter ribbon; his riding whip falls from his hand. Above this couple is inscribed on a label England's Exil Genius unhorsed or the downfall of Witchcraft. Truth (l.), a winged and naked woman in the clouds, directs the rays from a circular disk inscribed The Mirror of Truth on to the ex-Ministers.

The figures, l. to r., are Thurlow the Lord Chancellor in profile to the r., standing behind Britannia holding a book. He is saying, England shall never be wronged whilst a Thurlow lives, showing how little the artist knew of the political situation, since George III had insisted on retaining him as Chancellor from the old Administration, cf. No. 5987. Next stands General Conway, in military dress, saying, Your War with America I always condemned. Behind him stands a judge saying, Your whole proceedings were contrary to Equity & Justice; he is Lord Camden, President of the Council in the new Ministry. Next stands Col. Barré, in military dress, holding a document inscribed Bill for the Examination of Accounts, and saying Your Army expenditures have been enormous & Shameful; an allusion to Barré's speech on 26 Apr. on 'Army Extraordinaries', see Parl. Hist. xxii. 1344-5. Burke, in the attitude of an orator, r. hand extended, l. pointing upwards, is saying You have denied God deceived your King plundered your [blank]. The Duke of Richmond, wearing a star, says, Their duplicity as Ministers is beyond parrallel. Rockingham turns towards Richmond saying Honest Yorkshire will be true to the last. (He was Lord Lieutenant of the West Riding.) Next, and the most prominent of the new Ministry, is Charles Fox, holding a document inscribed Petition for redress of Grievances, and saying Your Crimes stink stronger than all the Foxes in England. Two small figures stand behind: one (?Wilkes) says, Your tax on Women Servants fills our Streets with Whores; the other says, Your partiality in the house has ruined you; the words suggest George Byng, M.P. for Middlesex, see Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 90 ff.

The remaining figures are those of the old Ministry: on the brink of the ¹ Perhaps the frontispiece to the April number of a periodical, in which case the date of publication would be 1 May. It seems to have been folded to fit a book.

² Two satires against Bute (by Lord Townshend) are similarly signed: No. 3829 (1761) is Siegnor Rhezio Inv.; No. 3847 (1762) is D. Rhezio Inv. Bute is compared with another Scottish favourite, Rizzio.

abyss and hurrying towards it is Sandwich holding a violin in his l. hand; a label inscribed Catches & Glee's hangs from his pocket, and he is saying Damn the Navy give me a Who? and a Bottle (cf. No. 5961). Inside the pit appear the head and shoulders of a demon, he holds up a bottle in one hand, a glass in the other, saying to Sandwich Wellcome my dear Lord to your old Friend. Next Sandwich, about to fall over and covering his face with his hands, is Rigby, saying This is a damn'd Rigg by the Bye. North is falling backwards into the pit, he holds a paper inscribed Taxes on Soap, Salt and Small Beer and is saying I died of an Apoplexy and made no Will. Behind him stands Mansfield, in a furred gown, stooping and covering his face, saying, This Truth is a most cruel Libel on us all (an allusion to Mansfield's unpopular directions to the jury in libel trials (1770) arising out of the publication of Junius's 'Letter to the King'). In front of Mansfield the head and shoulders of another man are visible. Lord George Germain, falling backwards, is being clutched round the body by a demon who says Ah Cousin Germain I have got you fast. These unfortunates are in the full rays of 'The Mirror of Truth'. Black clouds (r.) are a background for Bute and the witch, the sun (l.) appearing from clouds directs its rays on the new Ministry. For North's unpopular budget proposals see No. 5964, &c. Cf. Nos. 5970, 5984.

5 $\frac{13}{16}$ × 9 in.

5983 THE GAME OF HAZARD.

[? After Charles Loraine Smith.]

Published as the Act Directs May 1st 1782 by M^r Rack London.

Aquatint. Fox and North sitting at a small round table throwing dice, surrounded by spectators who watch the contest with intense interest. Fox (l.) in profile to the r. holds the dice-box, and has just thrown; his much-tilted chair rests on one leg, his r. hand is in his breeches pocket. He is plainly dressed. North (r.) in profile to the l. watches with an expression of concern, he holds the front of his hair or wig with his r. hand, his l. rests on the table. Three divines in gowns and bands stand over Fox; one puts his arm across Fox's shoulder and leans over the table with an expression of satisfaction. Another (l.) rests his hand on the shoulder of the former. The third looks up stretching out both arms as if in thankfulness. Behind North a parson walks away, looking over his l. shoulder and holding up the back of his gown. Two men wearing ribbons look on, one clasping his hands with an expression of distress. All are probably portraits, caricatured except Fox, who has the appearance of having been observed from life. Beneath the design is inscribed, Here goes at the Treasury and all in the Ring, Seven's the Main & Seven's a Nick.

This satire was out of date at the time of publication since North resigned on 20 March, see No. 5963. For the episcopal preferments dependent on the change of ministry see Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 31 f., where it is assumed that the appointments of the Rockingham Ministry would be made by Fox, who was believed to have designed the Archbishopric of Canterbury for Shipley of St. Asaph or Hinchcliffe of Peterborough. The manner resembles that of No. 6125.

Attributed to Bartolozzi by Calabi, No. 2237, who describes another state without aquatint.

10 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5984 WAR OF POSTS

T. Colley Fec'Pub^d by W. Richardson N^o 68 High Holborn London May 1, 1782.

Engraving (coloured impression). The new Ministry (l.), seated on 'posts' or small columns inscribed with their offices which they ride like hobby-horses, holding reins, attack the old Ministry (r.), who are being driven by the help of a devil into the jaws of Hell. Behind in the centre is the temple of the Constitution, a dome supported on five pillars and built on a rock. Its base is inscribed Founded on a Rock, and its three nearer pillars are inscribed Habeas Corpus (c.), Representation (r.), and Free Press (l.).

The identity of the combatants is shown by numbers which refer to names in the lower margin. (1) (Pi—t) stands (l.) holding a sheaf of thunderbolts, a black cloud is above his head, from which dart zigzags of lightning inscribed Vox Populi Vox Dei, and extending across the design to the ex-Ministers; he is saying, The Lightning [sic] of my father. (2) (Kepp—l), astride on a post inscribed L^d of the Adm[iralty], in naval uniform with a drawn cutlass is saying Encrease your navy. (3) (Conw—y), in general's uniform with a drawn sword, on a post inscribed of all the [land] Forces is saying The Cloven tongued crew. (4) (Burk—), riding a post inscribed Pay Master, holds a paper inscribed Economy and says, Pay the Taxes by Economy. (5) (Fox), in the form of a fox, astride a post inscribed Secretary [sic] of State, says, An infamous administration. (6) (Richm—n), astride on a cannon or gun-carriage, inscribed [Mas]ter of the Ordnance, points, saying, They have Sapped the Constitution.

The Treasury Bench, a four-legged stool, lies upside down between the two parties. The Devil (7) (Nick) prods (8) (Sand—ch) with a fork, saying Bid them go to Hell to Hell they go,¹ Sandwich says All hope is Over. He stands by a broken anchor on which (9) (Amher—t) stands, saying, I'd promote the Devil for money. (10) (No—th) stands on papers inscribed Taxes, Soap, Beer, he says beat in the War of Posts; his arms are stretched out and his back is to the spectator. Behind him stands (11) (Mansf—ld), who says, we have passed the Rubicon; he is standing in the flames inscribed (12) (Hel—), which issue from the jaws of Hell, the open mouth of a monster, partly cut off by the r. margin of the print.

Behind (r.) three minute figures dangle from a triangular gallows inscribed respectively An English Sec . . . An Irish Sec. . . a Scotch Sec. . . The three Secretaries of State in the outgoing Ministry were Lord Stormont, a Scot and a nephew of Lord Mansfield, Lord Hillsborough, an Irish peer, and Lord George Germain (Colonies). As a pendant to this a stout man (l.) stripped to the waist stands in a pillory, while another man scourges him. This is inscribed Thirteen Stripes and probably represents John Bull beaten by America, see No. 6202.

The second appearance of Pitt in this Catalogue, an interesting indication of the part he already took in popular estimation, though he was not in the Ministry. Cf. Mason's Ode to the Honourable William Pitt, dated 11 May, 1782 (B.M.L. 840, l. 4/13). For North's unpopular taxes, see No. 5964, &c.

8¼ × 12½ in.

¹ A quotation from Johnson's translation (London) of Juvenal's third satire, cf. 5133.

5985 THE LATE BOMBARDMENT OF GOVERNMENT CASTLE.

C. Goodnight Sculp.

Pub^d May 1st 1782 by J. Barrow. Sold by E. Rich at the little Print Shop facing Anderton's Coffee House Fleet Street. And at Mr Turners Frame maker and Print Seller, N^o 40. Snow hill.

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5986 by the same artist. The late ministers and the new Ministry spitting cannon-balls at each other, the former from a partly ruined castle flying a flag with a St. George's Cross. The heads are poorly characterized and few can be identified with certainty. 'Government Castle' (r.) stands on the edge of a ravine into which part of it has disappeared, its door being cut vertically in half, only the r. half remaining. Three heads look from the top of the tower, five emerge from lower apertures. Immediately over the door the head of the king appears, he has not ejected a cannon-ball but is saying, My Lords and Gentlemen remember Kingdoms fall by discord. A man (r.) wearing the large wig of the Speaker (Cornwall) says To order, to order. From the mouths of the others come blasts, each connected by a dotted line with a cannon-ball to which is attached a label or streamer on which the words of the speakers are inscribed. These say: You plague us more than Congress (?North); You are enemies to both Church and Castle (this is probably from Markham, Archbishop of York, he wears a clerical wig and bands); You expose all our plans to the enemy; You want our heads to get into our places; Our plans were good tho' unsuccessful (Germain); Destruction to Patriots.

The late Opposition stand below and on the r. spitting out similar balls, some of which are about to descend on the heads of the defenders of the castle. A crowd of spectators stand behind them on the extreme r. in two groups: three members of the group in the foreground say, Success Boys to the Bombardment; Give them no Cessation and The Fox Bomb for ever. The other group is better dressed and is inscribed Expecting promotion, the foremost of these is saying, They will certainly soon surrender.

The words attached to the balls bombarding the castle are: How much Specie have you got left? (The speaker is probably Fox.) A man dressed as a military officer (Conway) is saying Treat speedily with America (a reference to Conway's famous resolutions of 22 Feb. for treating with America, and of 27 Feb. declaring its subjugation impossible, see No. 5963. You have brought us to a State of Bankruptcy (the speaker resembles Dunning). No Landman ought to preside at the Admiralty (the speaker appears to be Keppel). Burke (wearing spectacles) says the war hath cost 1000000000£; You have lost us America; You err both in law and policy. A man turns aside, holding a handkerchief to his face, saying This is hot work for both parties.

This was out of date when published as North announced his resignation on 20 Mar. and the new Ministry was formed by 30 Mar. See No. 5963. $9\frac{3}{4} \times 13\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5986 THE SURRENDER OF GOVERNMENT CASTLE, IN MARCH 1782, TO THE LATE BESIEGING MINORITY

Pub^d according to Act of Parliament by J. Barrow, May y^e 10th 1782. Sold by E. Rich, at the little Print Shop opposite Anderton's Coffee House Fleet Street

Engraving. A companion print to No. 5985 by the same artist. Government

Castle (r.) is in good repair, cannons instead of heads project from the embrasures. The king in profile to the l. leans over the battlements, his arms held out, saying to his defeated ministers,

To lose you Sirs, concerns me more Than all I lost by you before.

A foot-guard stands as sentry at the gate.

In the upper part of the design a procession of defeated ministers and their adherents (the garrison) walk r. to l. from the castle, headed by a tall thin man in general's uniform (Lord Amherst); he says, We ought to have had the honours of war for we have stood a long Siege. After him walks North, one hand on his breast, saying, I leave the Castle as clean as Soap can wash, one of many allusions to his unpopular tax on soap, see No. 5964, &c. The next two say There are stores in the Castle but the Specie is almost spent, and We have held out like veterans. A stout man in clerical wig and bands, probably Markham, Archbishop of York, says These hot Patriots deserve cooling in a Spanish Inquisition. (Cf. No. 5958.) A man in a tie-wig says, My Lord they are guilty of an Assault, or I do not understand Law (he is probably Mansfield). The next three say: It is better to surrender than hold out and lose our heads; Our fate is not the hardest, we have got something, and lost neither head nor limb; G. Conway's attack carried all before it. Next comes Sandwich, saying, Well I shall be no more plagu'd with combin'd fleets. The last two say: We were overpower'd by numbers, and Let us be resign'd to the fortune of war.

After these leaders, and in front of a group of followers, walks the Devil, with horns, hoofs and forked tail, saying, I am sorry we have lost Brimstone Hill. (Brimstone Hill, a fortification on St. Kitts, surrendered to de Bouillé on 12 Feb. 1782.) The followers, who represent the subordinate placemen, are immediately to the l. of the castle; they say, We shall have no more golden Eggs for Fox has got the goose.

The castle and the departing garrison fill the upper part of the print. Below is a procession of the new Ministry and their camp-followers marching from l. to r. to occupy the castle. Facing them and immediately beneath the castle is a mob (r.) of men and boys shouting acclamations to the new garrison. One shouts General Conway for ever. A man with an apron bawls, Fox for ever, another shouts Keppel for ever. The new Ministry is headed by a man in military uniform holding up a drawn sword, saying For our Country let us be vigilant. As in No. 5985 the figures are poorly characterized, appearance and words often appear out of character. The succeeding figures say: Let us be vigilant and faithful; There must be much better æconomy; Keppel in naval uniform says, We must watch the Combin'd Fleet like a Hawke.¹ The next say, We shall silence the Dutch; Early Intelligence must be attain'd; I hope we shall reconcile America; We must shew the Monsieurs old English play; Placemen and salaries must be reduc'd. The last, who is in riding dress, says No contractor must sit in Parliament. The Contractors' Bill was in committee before the fall of North, it was debated in the Commons 8 April, and became law 27 May. The placemen and followers say, We shall do pretty well with half their Salary.

¹ Hawke died in 1781 and his name had scarcely come before the public since his retirement from the Admiralty in 1771, except that he had signed in Dec. 1778 the protest of the admirals against the court-martial on Keppel. The remark, however, is singularly apt, as his views had been expressed in a memorandum: 'Our enemies being peculiarly attentive to their marine, our fleet could only be termed considerable in the proportion it was to that of the House of Bourbon.' W. M. James, The British Navy in Adversity, 1926, p. 15.

Beneath the title is engraved N.B. The old Garrison and Placemen are marching out, the new Garrison and new Placemen are marching in. Success to Old England.

In the upper l. corner of the print is engraved, Articles to be observed by the Garrison.

1. All the Privates to remain in the Garrison.

2. All the principal Officers to march out, not allowed the honours of war.

3. They shall lay down their Titles and Symbols of honour where they received them.

4. They shall not enter any of his Majesty's Fortifications except it be the Tower.

5. They shall be accountable for the Specie expended in Government Castle.

6. Their parole shall be from Government Castle to Tower hill, and from Tower hill to Temple bar and no farther, till they shew satisfactory accounts.

Threats of impeachment were hanging over the heads of the ex-Ministers; for North's fears see R. Lucas, Lord North, 1913, ii. 209 ff. Cf. Nos. 5660, 5661, 5969, 6046.

$9\frac{3}{4} \times 12\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5987 BRITANIA'S ASSASSINATION.

OR — THE REPUBLICANS AMUSEMENT

[Gillray.]

Pub^d May 10th 1782. by E. D'Archery St James Street

Engraving. The new Ministry attempting to pull from its base a headless stone statue of Britannia, who is seated on a globe, holding a broken spear; her r. leg from the knee and her l. arm have been broken off. A fox (Charles Fox) with its fore-paws on the square base bites her leg. Two judges in their robes, Thurlow and Mansfield, on the extreme r. pull at ropes to keep her in position. Within the ropes stand a group of patriots threatening Britannia: Wilkes in the forefront, a book No[rth] B[riton] under his l. arm, his r. hand, holding a rolled document inscribed Libel, is raised to strike. Behind him Dunning holds over his head in both hands a book inscribed Sydney on Government. Next is the Duke of Richmond, holding above his head in both hands a musket by its barrel, with which he is about to smite the statue. He is saying Leave not a Wreck behind. Behind him stands Burke (?) raising in his l. hand a rolled document inscribed Reformation Bill. The last is Keppel, who, turning his back on Britannia, holds a flagstaff from which he is hauling down the flag, saying

*He that Fights & runs away,
May live to fight another day.*

This is an allusion to the battle of Ushant, 27 July 1778, see No. 5992, &c.

Britannia's foreign enemies are running off with the spoil. On the extreme l. America, as a Red Indian in a feathered head-dress and girdle, runs holding Britannia's head in his l. hand while her arm, in which is an olive branch, is held over his r. shoulder. Next comes France running in pursuit with arms extended, saying You dam Dog, you run way wit all de Branche, prophetically implying America would forestall France by separate peace negotiations, cf. No. 6051. Spain follows, carrying Britannia's leg over his

l. shoulder. Holland, a short cheerful-looking burgher, runs towards the spectator carrying Britannia's shield on his head and shoulders.

Britannia, assassinated by republicans at home and despoiled by enemies abroad, is defended by Mansfield and Thurlow. Cf. a letter of 8 Mar. in which North anticipates that Thurlow 'will oppose a firm barrier against any dangerous popular measures', Corr. of George III, v. 380.

This print was described in the Morning Chronicle of 15 May as 'a very extraordinary caricature. . . . Since the Newcastle administration there has not been seen a bolder satire in caricature stile against ministers than the above described. This is the second production in the print way that has ventured to arraign the conduct of the present gentlemen in office.' The first was probably The Captive Prince, No. 5979. Cf. also Nos. 5962, 5970. For other allegations of republicanism see Nos. 6006, 6007; in Nos. 6217, 6239 Fox is compared to Cromwell. Cf. also Nos. 5334, 5836.

Grego, Gilray, p. 35.

8½ × 13½ in.

5988 ANTICIPATION, OR, THE CONTRAST TO THE ROYAL HUNT.

Published May. 16th 1782. by W^m Wells N^o 132 (opposite Salisbury Court) Fleet Street. London.

Britons fac^t

[? After Viscount Townshend.]

Engraving. A sequel to No. 5961, probably by the same artist. The new Ministry in process of restoring the temple of Fame. In the foreground on the extreme r. Britannia sits on a globe, her shield and spear beside her, holding out an olive branch. Some of the figures are identified by numbers referring to names in the lower margin. 1, C—n—y (Conway), standing (r.) in front of the Temple of Fame, is holding erect the broken pillar inscribed America, a reference to his famous resolutions, see Nos. 5963, 5985, 5986. A military officer and two sailors are lifting up fallen pillars inscribed Charles Town and St. Vinc[en]ts. The only pillars remaining on the ground are Eustatius lying across Rhode Island. The Temple has still only two columns intact, Gibraltar and Jamaica Barbadoes, but these are stouter. One of the broken columns, Tobago, is in process of repair by two sailors, one of whom, standing on a ladder, is about to fit in a missing section. The rope which was tied round Gibraltar trails on the ground and the figures which were pulling it in the earlier print are otherwise engaged: America holding a short or broken spear in the l. hand holds out in the r. an olive branch, while a naval officer standing next him with a cutlass in his r. hand, holds out an olive branch towards America. Holland, a pipe stuck in his hat, kneels before the officer, his hands raised in supplication. Spain and France are in flight towards the l., their hands outstretched.

The upper part of the Temple has undergone a change. The figure of Fame has regained her trumpet and her lost leg and is now intact. Three minute figures stand within the r. window. 2, Fox (F—x), with a fox's head, is saying Manus haec inimica tyrannis. 4, Camden (C—md—n), in Judge's robes, says Peace with America War with all the World. Burke, standing behind the other two, says Nummi¹ post virtutem. From the l. window, 9, C—rll—n (Sir Guy Carleton) is firing a musket to the l., and bringing down the Gallic cock, which is about to fall on the head of the fleeing figure of France. (Carleton had been appointed Commander-in-Chief to succeed Clinton on 23 Feb., after the old Ministry had shown that their intention was merely to keep the posts they held in America and direct their efforts against France and Spain.) The centre of the temple façade is now decorated with the head of George III crowned with laurel in an oval and with four smaller ovals, in which are heads, all with laurel wreaths, inscribed Howe, Ross, Parker, Barrington, showing that much was hoped from the recent naval appointments of the new Ministry: Howe (2 April 1782), Commander-in-Chief in the Channel; Sir John Lockhart Ross, Bart., was with Howe as Rear-Admiral. Vice-Admiral Parker was appointed Commander-in-Chief in the East-Indies. Vice-Admiral Barrington was Howe's Second-in-Command.

¹ The second 'm' has been added in ink.

In the background a naval engagement is in progress, ships flying the British flag are firing at the enemy, some of whose ships are sinking. This cannot represent the Battle of the Saints (12 April), news of which reached London only on 18 May, but an old hand has written over two of the ships 'Formidable Sr. George Rodney', and 'Ville de Paris', the French flagship which surrendered to Rodney.

In the centre foreground 5, S—h (Sandwich), in profile to the r., his cane under his r. arm, stands holding a sheaf of broadside ballads in his r. hand labelled Catches and Gleees. On this is a print of a man hanging from a gallows. In his l. hand he holds a ballad from which he is singing, A Sow'r Reformation crawls outthorough the Nation An Old Song new set. From his pocket hangs a paper inscribed 24 Songs in a Book for a Halpenny. He has been reduced to the position of a ballad-singer.

In the foreground on the l., in profile to the l., Lord North as a stout woman, his bag-wig showing under a cap, stands at a wash-tub. From his mouth comes a label inscribed *My *Northstrums had almost totally blinded him [the king] & ruin'd his constitution. The wash tub was a lucky Thought Welcome my Dernier resource Few even of my Friends will know me in the Suds Erratum lege nostrums. (cf. No. 5968). Behind North are two packing-cases, one marked with a circle and anchor and inscribed Untaxed Soap 2200 lb.; a small case behind it is marked 119 lb. For other satires on North's tax on soap see No. 5964, &c.

In front of North, in the l. corner of the print, is a bundle inscribed M—nd—n's [Minden's, i.e. Lord Sackville's] foul linnen. Next it is a bundle inside a basket inscribed For S' J. Delaval. On 8 Mar. 1782, during the debate on Lord John Cavendish's resolutions of censure on the Ministry, Sir John Delaval (M.P. for Berwick) 'rose as a country gentleman just to say that he had a high opinion of his Majesty's Ministers.' (Parl. Hist. xxii. 1134.)

Behind North and to the l. George III is seated in an arm-chair while an oculist applies an instrument to his eye. The oculist wears a ribbon and is Lord Rockingham; a label attached to his hand is inscribed:

—to nobler sights
 —the film remov'd which that false Gold that promis'd clearer sight had bred.

The king and Rockingham are in front of a small building from which curtains have been pulled back showing part of a window. On the extreme l. part of another building is visible, with the royal arms over the door. Above the arms is inscribed D' R—M. (Rockingham) occulist to his [Majesty].

In the middle distance are two small figures: 6. H—d (Hertford) with clasped hands saying My L—d I have lost the key of the House of Office, an allusion to the story that Lord Hertford was loath to surrender the gold key of his office as Lord Chamberlain (cf. No. 5966) to the Duke of Manchester, who succeeded him. 7. G—m—n (Germain) runs with outstretched arms towards Hertford, saying Where, Where shall I fly, an allusion to his supposed cowardice at Minden.

In the background (l.) is a building, open in front to show an auction of horses and hounds. This is TATERSHALLS and on the roof is inscribed All the Hunters & Hounds of a certain great personage now selling off by Auction. Although on a minute scale, four horses, dogs, the auctioneer in his box, and the spectators are visible. This shows that the king's 'Royal Hunt' depicted in the companion print is now over, with the curious implication that he no longer neglects matters of State for the chase. Jamaica, &c. were saved not by the new Ministry or the naval officers here mentioned, but by the victory of Rodney, whom they had determined to disgrace, see No. 5991, &c.

Above the design is engraved 'The Prospect of the glorious restoration of the Temple of Fame'.

8½ × 13½ in.

5989 THE RECONCILIATION BETWEEN BRITANIA AND HER DAUGHTER AMERICA.

[T. Colley.]

[c. May 1782]

Pub^d by W. Humphrey. N^o 227 Strand.¹

Engraving. Britannia and America embrace, while France and Spain try to pull America away, Holland (l.) watches their efforts and Fox (r.) points out the struggle to Keppel. Britannia, in profile to the l., with her shield beside her decorated with a St. George's Cross inscribed George for Ever, rushes into the arms of America, in profile to the r., a Red Indian wearing feathered head-dress and girdle, sandals and flowing hair confined by a ribbon. Britannia has her spear, America her flag, its staff surmounted by a Phrygian cap inscribed Liberty. Britannia says, Be a good Girl and give me a Buss. American answers, Dear Mana say no more about it. France holds both ends of a scarf passed round America's waist and tugs hard at it, Spain behind him pulls at a strap or ribbon which is passed over France's shoulder, over this tie between them is inscribed Combin'd. France, as a petit-maitre with feathered hat and large bag-wig, is saying Begar they will be friends again if you dont pull a little harder Cus . . . Spain, pulling hard and looking over his r. shoulder at France, says, Monsieur Toad stool me do all I can to keep them asunder pull her hair, but take care she Dont kick you. On the extreme l. Holland, a fat Dutchman smoking a pipe, leans against a barrel of Dutch Herrings. By his side is a square bottle of hollands Gin. He is saying, I'll Delliberate a little to see which is weakest, then I'll give you a direct answer Kate Rusia.

Russia had offered to mediate in 1781. Fox's first step on taking office was an unsuccessful attempt to negotiate separately with Holland through the medium of Russia. Corr. of C. J. Fox, i. 331; Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884.

¹ Another publication line has been etched within the design and almost obliterated by cross-hatching: Pub. by T. Colley N^o 5 Acorn Court Rolls Buildings Fetter Lane Old England.

ii. 277-9; Camb. Hist. of the British Empire, i. 773; see No. 6014. It is clear, however, that the simple-minded artist knows little of the realities of politics and diplomacy.

Fox stands pointing to the l. Under his feet are cards, dice, and a dice-box inscribed Forgot. (While in office Fox suspended his systematic gaming at Brooks's, see No. 5972.) A fox's head appears from behind him, perhaps from his coat-pocket, saying Sharp as a Sword. A fox's brush hangs down below his coat. He is saying, Da—n that Frenchman & his Cousin Don, how they strain to part them, make haste my boy Keppel & give them a Spank. Keppel, in profile to the r., partly cut off by the margin of the print, is saying That I will my Prince of bold Action they shall have fore and aft.

Beneath the title is engraved:

1

*A curse upon all Artifice
May Briton never thrive*

2

While Roguish Minis—rs they keep to Eat them up alive

3

*By Lots they sell oh Dam—em Well
Each place we put our trust in* 4

*Cut them of [sic] short twill make good sport
Whilst honest men are thrust in.*

The date of this print is probably after the formation of the new Ministry on 30 Mar., and before 18 May when news arrived of Rodney's victory, a favourite subject with this artist. Reproduced, Drepperd, Early American Prints, p. 203.

8 $\frac{1}{10}$ × 12 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5990 EVACUATION BEFORE RESIGNATION.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d May 21st 1782 by H. Humphrey New Bond Street

Engraving. Design in an oval. Rockingham, in profile to the r., sitting over a circular close-stool inscribed Publick Reservoir. A document projecting from his pocket inscribed Marquiss of R . . . leaves no doubt of his identity. Members of the new Ministry stand round him. He is vomiting into a hat held out to him by Burke (r.), who kneels before him. Rockingham is saying All for the Public Good; Burke says We must save every thing, an allusion to his 'Economic Reform'. Behind stands a man holding in both hands a hat with steaming and unsavoury contents, saying This is really for the landed Interest. Over his head is inscribed P . . . S. He is Thomas Powys, M.P. for Northamptonshire, cr. Baron Lilford 1794, who was himself the mouthpiece of the country gentlemen or independent county members and who had played an important part in the defeat of North, see Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 154-5, 200, 217-19. Fox stands on his r., and on Fox's r. is Lord John Cavendish holding up both hands, saying, Oh how he strains every Nerve for the Publick Good. He does my business, 'tis I who should cast up the Accounts. Cavendish was Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Burke and Cavendish, neither of whom is recognizably drawn, are indicated by hands drawn like those on the end of the signpost in No. 5964, inscribed Bu—ke and L^d J. C—n—sh. Apparently a satire on Burke's Bill of Economical Reform. Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830.

7 × 9 $\frac{11}{16}$ in.

5991 COUNT DE GRASSE DELIVERING HIS SWORD TO THE GALLANT ADMIRAL RODNEY.

[T. Colley.]

Pub. by P. Mitchell May 27th 1782 as the Act directs North Audley St Engraving. An imaginary picture of the quarter-deck of Rodney's ship the Formidable after the Battle of the Saints (12 Apr.). De Grasse, the French admiral, a tall figure, on a larger scale than the English sailors, is exchanging compliments with Rodney. He stands, bowing, in profile to the r.; in his l. hand he holds out his sword, in his r. he holds a cross which is suspended round his neck. He wears the bag-wig and top-boots characteristic of French officers in English caricature. He is saying You have fought me handsomely. Rodney, a much smaller figure in profile to the l., holds out both hands saying, I was glad of the Opportunity. Two sailors stand in the rigging of the after-mast (l.), waving their hats and shouting Huzza; one wears a petticoat, the other striped trousers. On the lower deck, part of which is visible on the l., a sailor holds up a bottle in his r. hand, a full wine-glass in his l., he is looking up and shouting. He stands by a midshipman who waves his hat, shouting Huzza Rodney. An ensign flag riddled with holes hangs at the stern and is an important part of the design. Cannon-balls lie on the deck, and there are holes made by the cannon of the enemy in the sides of the ship. The poop is carved and decorated. The details of the rigging, port-holes, &c. appear to be drawn with accuracy.

News of this important victory (which was the subject of great controversy) reached London on 18 May. The Ville de Paris, de Grasse's flagship, actually surrendered to the Barfleur, commanded by Sir Samuel Hood. Lord Cranston went on board the Ville de Paris and received the sword of de Grasse, who was removed from the Barfleur to the Formidable after two days. The Ville de Paris was the great ship presented by Paris to Louis XV, 'the finest national trophy ever won at sea' (Rodney to Lord Dalrymple). Rodney wrote to his wife, 'I hope the good people of England will now be pleased, and Opposition hide her head.' Mundy, Life of Rodney, ii, 243, 263, &c. Stanhope, Hist. of England, vii, p. 176. For the political aspect of the victory see No. 5992, &c. See also Nos. 5993, 5994, 6000, 6008, also by Colley, and No. 6031. Cf. No. 5988.

There is a plate of de Grasse delivering his sword to Rodney on the Ville de Paris in E. Barnard's History of England [n.d. c. 1791].

10 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 16 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

5992 RODNEY TRIUMPHANT—OR—ADMIRAL LEE SHORE IN THE DUMPS.

Political Characters & Caracatures of 1782. N^o 3 [Gillray]

Pub^d. May 31st 1782 by E'D'Achery St James Street London.

Engraving. A representation of Rodney's victory causing dismay to the ¹ Mrs. D'Achery advertised on 30 May that the plate was worn out and would be new Ministry. Rodney, standing on the sea-shore, receives the submission of de Grasse, who bows before him in profile to the l., holding down the French flag so that Rodney stands on it, while in his r. hand he holds out the hilt of his sword to Rodney. De Grasse is excessively lean and elegant, frogs are jumping from his coat-pocket. Behind him stand ranks of emaciated French sailors with expressions of distress, their hands tied behind them; they wear bag-wigs, ruffled shirts, long trousers, with bare ankles and wooden shoes. A baron's coronet is suspended above Rodney's head, inscribed from Jove, implying that the honour did not come from the Ministry. Behind him is a procession of cheering sailors, waving their hands and shouting Huzza. Two of them carry chests, one inscribed Lewis d'ors, the other D° N° 26, which they have just brought on shore. Behind them are ships in full sail, the nearer ones with the British flag flying above the French flag, showing that they are prizes. A ship's boat rows towards the shore with the Ensign flying above the fleur-de-lys, in it a minute figure stands waving his hat.

In front of a dilapidated building (l.) stand the politicians. Fox, Keppel and the Duke of Richmond are in consultation in the foreground watching Rodney's triumph with expressions of displeasure. Fox, with a fox's head in profile to the r., says Dam the French for coming in his way say I. Keppel (Admiral Lee Shore) stands with his hands folded, thumbs touching, saying, This is more than we expected: more than we wished. Richmond (Master-General of the Ordnance) says, Tis the last Fleet he shall have the opportunity of beating however. Behind them North and Sandwich walk together; North in profile to the l., his r. hand holding Sandwich by the arm, points to Keppel saying, Ha! Ha! Ha! behold Augustus y^e 27th, an allusion to Keppel's action off Ushant on 27 Apr. 1778 for which he was court-martialled. Sandwich says, Ha! Ha! Ha!—new measures—send a Pig to supercede a Lyon. On the wall of the building behind them and above the heads of Richmond and Keppel is a representation of a ship, bottom upwards in a hatchment, with the motto 27th July, Gloria. Below the ship is an axe inscribed Rusty, implying that Keppel deserved execution for his conduct. Plaster is coming off the wall, showing bricks.

When the new Ministry came into office, Vice-Admiral Hugh Pigot was made a Lord of the Admiralty, soon afterwards promoted admiral, appointed Commander-in-Chief in the W. Indies to supersede Rodney, whom the Ministry had determined to disgrace. He actually sailed on 18 May, the day that news of Rodney's victory reached London. An attempt to stop him as a concession to public opinion was too late and he took over the command at Jamaica on 13 July. This was a political appointment of a quite inadequate officer. 'Public dissatisfaction' was 'loudly and generally expressed in every part of London'. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 127.¹

The chests of Lewis d'ors represent the thirty-six money chests captured in the Ville de Paris, the French flag-ship. Stanhope, Hist. of England, 1858, vii. 177.

One of four satires by Gillray on Rodney's victory as a blow to the Ministry, see Nos. 5996, 5997, 6001. A special importance attaches to them republished next day with some alterations (Note by Mr. Hawkins). These probably include the coronet, Rodney having been created a baron on 28 May. Cf. Corr. of George III, vi. 36.

¹ Keppel told the king on 18 May 'He thought it absolutely necessary that some ostensible reward should be bestowed on Sir George Rodney, the more so as he did not wish this event should stop Admiral Pigot's being sent to relieve him . . .' George III to Shelburne, Corr. of George III, vi. p. 33.

since it was actually argued in Parliament that 'popularity which, running against him [Rodney], had occasioned his recall, should, now that it flows in his favour, prevent it'. (Lord Nugent) 30 May, Parl. Hist. xxiii. 79-80. The recall of Rodney, the grudging reward to him contrasted with Keppel's Viscounty (24 Apr. 1782) and the commission to Pigot, were a blow to the popularity of the Ministry. For Keppel as Admiral Lee Shore, see Nos. 5570, 5626, 5650, 5658. For Rodney at St. Eustatius, the cause of his (alleged) unpopularity, see No. 5842. Rodney, however, was a popular hero for his defeat and capture of the Spanish Admiral Langara, 16 Jan. 1780, followed by the relief of Gibraltar, see Nos. 5646-8, 5710. Prints of this action had been published on 15 Apr. 1782 (after Luny) and on 6 May 1782 (after Paton). For the battle of the Saints see No. 5991, &c. For the nature of the 'public exultation' in London at the victory see Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 319 ff. Grego, Gillray, p. 36.

$9\frac{1}{16} \times 13\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5993 THE VILLE DE PARIS, SAILING FOR JAMAICA, OR RODNEY TRIUMPHANT.

[T. Colley]

Pub. by T. Colley, Acorn Court June 1. 1782.

Engraving (coloured impression). Rodney standing on the back of de Grasse, who is crawling on his hands and knees on the water, symbolizing his own flag-ship the Ville de Paris, and drawing after him at the end of a rope a small open boat. Rodney, in profile to the r., holds in his l. hand the end of the French admiral's long pigtail queue, in his r. hand is a drawn cutlass. Along the admiral's body is engraved Count de Grasse. A cross suspended from his neck touches the water. From his head projects a torn French flag, on which is engraved Discolour'd, it hangs from a broken staff. Behind, flies erect, a British flag, inscribed Displayed. In front of de Grasse's grotesquely large nose is inscribed o Bourbon. In the distance (r.) is a castle on a promontory, flying the British flag and inscribed Jamaica. In the bows of the open boat which is being towed by de Grasse a sailor stands, shouting Down with the French; Georgey; he waves his hat, while in his r. hand he holds a club. Three French sailors in the boat kneel to him in supplication, saying o Begar.

A crude rendering of Rodney's victory on 12 Apr. in the battle of the Saints, when the French admiral surrendered, see No. 5991, &c., as a result of which the threat to the W. India islands (Antigua, Barbados, and Jamaica) was removed. De Grasse was taken to Jamaica and afterwards brought to England, see No. 5997.

$4\frac{1}{4} \times 6\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5994 COUNT DE GRASSE TAKING A PEEP IN THE WEST INDIES.

[c. May 1782]

[T. Colley]

Sold by W Humphrey, N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. A caricature of the French admiral in profile to the r., tall and thin, with an enormous nose, drawn much as in No. 5991. He holds a telescope to his l. eye, while his drawn sword is held vertically, point upwards, the blade resting on his shoulder. The deck of his ship is indicated in the background, a smoking cannon shows that the ship is in action. The cannon is inscribed Lewis, beside it is a pile of cannon-balls.

This depicts the battle of the Saints on 12 Apr., at which de Grasse's flag-ship, the Ville de Paris, was captured. See No. 5991, &c.

$6\frac{1}{16} \times 4\frac{9}{16}$ in.

5995 A CONSISTENT CHARACTER.

Publish'd June 4th 1782.

Engraving. A portrait of Lord Effingham standing on a terrace in profile to the l. pointing to a flight of steps (l.) leading upwards. The steps are flanked by a low wall on which is inscribed I can now serve my country with honor. Beneath this, and between two pointing hands, is inscribed, The true road to preferment [sic]. On each step is inscribed a word, these are, reading upwards, Sincerity, Plain-dealing, Honesty, Justice, [Co]untry, [Reli]gion, . . . y [?liberty]. An open book lies at the foot of the steps, inscribed Patriotism upon Principle. Effingham holds a baton in his l. hand; in front of him, on the low wall, is his military hat, against which leans a long wand of office. He is plainly dressed, wears his own hair, but has a sword and ruffled shirt, which recall the mot of Burke, when Effingham changed his habitually plain manner of dress for the court-suit and sword worn by those in office, that he was wearing the coat in which he had been killed in the Gordon Riots; Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, i. 250-1. In the distance, and below the terrace on which Effingham stands, a battle is in progress, indicated by men in close rank on a minute scale, with a British flag, and clouds of smoke. A large sun is rising above the horizon (r.) inscribed Pro Patria non sibi.

Thomas Howard, Earl of Effingham (1747-91), one of the Patriots, was very popular for having resigned his commission rather than fight in America. This resignation was perhaps not unconnected with his unsuccessful attempt to obtain promotion, see his letter of 1 June 1774 to the king complaining that he was only a captain of foot. Corr. of George III, iii. 107-8. Between 1770 and 1782 he had signed seventeen protests in the Lords Journals (G. E. C., Complete Peerage). On the formation of the Rockingham Ministry he was made Lord Treasurer of the Household and given a commission as Lieutenant-Colonel. As he carried his official wand as Treasurer with his Deputy Earl Marshal's baton (as he is here represented) he was called the 'Devil on two sticks'. Wraxall, op. et loc. cit. See No. 6061.

$7\frac{1}{16} \times 6\frac{3}{16}$ in.

5996 RODNEY INVESTED—OR—ADMIRAL PIG ON A CRUIZE.

Political Characters & Caracatures of 1782, N^o IV.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d June 4th 1782 by E. D'Achery St James's Street London.

Engraving. A satire on the appointment of Pigot to supersede Rodney, one of a set of four, see Nos. 5992, 5997, 6001. Rodney stands on the sea-shore, with a melancholy expression, his r. hand holding Britannia's spear, his l. Neptune's trident. Neptune rises from the sea on the r. and holds out to Rodney his trident, saying, Accept my Son the Empire of the Main.

Britannia (l.), seated on the globe, holds out her spear to Rodney, saying, Go generous gallant Rodney, — go on, pursue, maintain your Country's noble cause. In her r. hand, which rests on her shield, she holds an olive branch. The French flag lies on the ground under the feet of Rodney and Britannia, the British lion, standing behind Rodney, tears at it with his claws.

On the r. behind Neptune is a small open boat, sailing towards Rodney; it is composed of playing-cards, a knave of hearts acts as a sail. From the mast flies a pennant on which are two dice; below it, on the mast, is a dice-box. A small figure in naval uniform, with a pig's head, stands in the stern looking towards Rodney through a telescope. This is 'Admiral Pig', Admiral Hugh Pigot, who had been appointed by the new Ministry to supersede Rodney, see No. 5992. On a point of land in the distance on the r. stands Fox, a minute figure with a fox's head; he holds out a paper inscribed I. O. U. 17000, and is saying, Does the Devonshire Member want Reasons—£17000 contains cogent ones. This is an allusion to the questions asked in the House of Commons by Rolle, M.P. for Devon, on 22 May, on the superseding of Rodney in his command. Fox answered 'that for what appeared to him wise and prudent reasons he had advised his sovereign to adopt such a measure, and though he should have such reasons as all the world should approve he never would give any other answer . . . for though he was an enemy to the Crown, he would always stand forward to support its just and constitutional prerogative'. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 53, 54. See also Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 328–30.

The implication of the satire is that Pigot, a great gambler, owed his appointment to his indebtedness to Fox. This is made explicit in No. 5997. See also No. 5992. Grego, Gillray, p. 36.

$8\frac{7}{16} \times 12\frac{7}{8}$ in.

5997 RODNEY INTRODUCING DE GRASSE.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d June 7th 1782, by H. Humphrey New Bond Street

Engraving (coloured impression). One of four satires by Gillray on Rodney's victory as a blow to the Ministry, see Nos. 5992, 5996, 6001. Rodney, in profile to the r., kneels before George III (r.), seated on a throne, his sceptre in his r. hand. Rodney's r. hand is held out towards de Grasse, who stands behind him and on his r.; in his l. hand he holds a sword, its hilt resting on the ground at the king's feet. He is saying, Sire, I have done my Duty & at your Royal Feet, I lay the Scourge of these Destroyers. De Grasse, grotesquely thin and tall, stands erect, his hands folded. Fox and Keppel stand one on each side of the king. Fox, on the king's r., both hands thrust into his waistcoat, is saying, This Fellow must be recalled, he fights too well for us—& I have obligations to Pigot, for he has lost 17000 at my Faro Bank (see No. 5972). Keppel looks at a paper held in his r. hand saying, This is the very Ship I ought to have taken on the 27th of July. The word Ville is just legible on the paper, the allusion being to de Grasse's flag-ship the Ville de Paris, taken on 12 Apr. 1782. The king is seated on a small square dais, covered by a fringed carpet. On the back of his throne is a crown to which is attached an ostrich feather, the feather which Rodney has added to the Crown by his victory.

The losses of Pigot in 1781 to the faro bank held at Brooks's by Fox and Fitzpatrick were notorious, see letters of Selwyn and others to Lord Carlisle, Hist. MSS. Comm., Carlisle Papers, 1897, pp. 489-90, 491, &c. Pigot's appointment provoked the grossest allegations, cf. Morning Herald, 29 May 1782, 'It is the whisper at Brookes's that Admiral Pigot's sailing to take upon him the chief command in the West Indies could not be countermanded because it was deemed the only situation that could enable him to liquidate his debts contracted at St. James's Street Pharo Bank in a reasonable time, which he has pledged himself to do by handsome instalments.' For the faro bank see No. 5972; for de Grasse in London see No. 6019. Grego, Gillray, p. 36; Wright and Evans, No. 3. Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830.

8 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 13 in.

5998 A LOG-BOOK CANDIDATE IN FULL SAIL TO DEFEAT A WRAY OF HONESTY.

[? Hixon.]¹

Pub^d June, 11, 1782, by J. Langham, N^o 11, S^t Brides Passage, Fleet Street.

Engraving. A naval officer in uniform stands on a large open book which serves as a boat; he holds a small mast to which three pages from the book are attached as sails. The book is inscribed LOG BOOK, the sails (respectively) as torn from, the Log, and Book. The officer says, This vessel and Sails will never carry me into Westminster Port. In the upper l. corner of the print North's head appears from clouds directing a blast at the sails of the log-book boat in order to send it to the shore (r.), where two men are waiting to receive it.

A satire on Admiral Sir Samuel Hood, afterwards Baron Hood in the peerage of Ireland, who was a candidate for Westminster at a by-election caused by Rodney's peerage. Hood was then at sea with Rodney, and his candidature was managed by his son, Henry Hood. One of the two men on shore is Sandwich, who holds out both hands saying, Save your Wind Boreas for the Admiral has founder'd in is [sic] Voyage. Behind him stands a young man dressed as a naval officer, who says, My Father was blown into this Harbour, but then the North Wind was in full Power.

The other candidate for Westminster was Sir Cecil Wray, supported by Fox, who acted as chairman for his committee,² Hood being attacked as a friend of Sandwich.³ This support was so effective that Hood's candidature was withdrawn on 8 June. See addresses to the Electors of Westminster published as advertisements in the daily papers of 5-10 June 1782.

The allusion to the Log Book, however, is a confusion (perhaps intentional) of Sir Samuel Hood with his younger brother Alexander Hood, who admitted that the Log Book of his ship the Robust had been altered after the Court-Martial on Keppel had been ordered. Party faction at this time raged round the antagonism between Rodney, who belonged politically to the party of North and Sandwich, and had been supported by Sandwich, and Keppel. See Wray, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 324-8. But cf. No. 5673.

¹ So attributed by E. Hawkins.

² Pitt was expected by Shelburne to replace Rodney as M.P. for Westminster. This had the king's approval, Corr. of George III, vi. 37, 39, 20, 21 May.

³ 'Two candidates are proposed by their different friends. Sir Cecil Wray by the Westminster Committee and Lord Hood by the friends of their Country unconnected with Party.' Morning Herald, 5 June, 1782.

It was complained that the important part taken by Hood (and Drake) in the Battle of the Saints was scarcely mentioned 'in the Public Prints'. Cf. letter in the Public Advertiser, 24 May 1782. The popularity which Hood ultimately gained by the victory secured his election at the head of the poll in the Westminster election of 1784, though Fox succeeded in defeating Sir Cecil Wray. For the log-book incident see Nos. 5536, 5537. $12 \times 8\frac{1}{16}$ in.

5999 THE GOVERNORS FAREWELL.

[? Hixon.]

Pub^d June, 11th, 1782. by I. Langham N^o 11 St Bride's Passage, Fleet Street.

Engraving. Sir Hugh Palliser (l.), Governor of Greenwich Hospital, walking with a stick, and supporting himself on the shoulder of a shorter man (r.) who looks up at him. Palliser is saying, My evil Genius still pursues me, & false Oaths & Jemmy Twitcher can no more avail me. His companion, who has a wooden leg and supports himself on two short sticks, answers, What can't Jemy give you no relief alas poor Twicher, then his Fiddle is out of Tune. They are walking beside the Thames; across the river, and forming the background of the design, is Greenwich Hospital. By the river bank (l.) part of a ship is visible, flying a flag with a St. Andrew's cross. On the ground by Palliser (l.) is a large book inscribed Log-Book, an allusion to the evidence given at Keppel's court-martial, that three important pages of the log-book of Palliser's ship were missing, see Nos. 5536, 5537, 5998. Two boats are being rowed on the river, one (l.) with two oarsmen, who look round to watch Palliser and his companion, the other (r.) with a man sculling.

Palliser had been appointed by Sandwich as Governor of Greenwich Hospital, see No. 5705; his dismissal is here anticipated as a result of the fall of Sandwich. He was, however, undisturbed in his Governorship, though the new ministry, especially Fox, who called it 'indispensable after what he had said in the House of Commons', were determined on his removal and the king did not intend 'to break with the Phalanx for such a business'. Corr. of George III, v. 503-4 (29 Apr. 1782). There were many paragraphs in the newspapers asserting that he had resigned.

By the same artist as No. 5998.

$8\frac{3}{8} \times 10\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6000 THE GRUMBLING PRINCES OR THE DEV—L TAKE THE MONSIEURS

T. Colley In

Pub 12th June by T. Colley.

Engraving. George III (l.) stands on one side of a narrow channel, looking at three figures representing France, Spain, and Holland (these words being engraved on the ground at their feet. In the background are ships in action. The king stands solidly turning his head in profile to the r. to look at his antagonists. He is saying, Da—n [sic] the Peace. In his hand is a paper inscribed, Rodney Victorious: de Grasse prisoner with 6 Sail of the Line. NB. if they had not run away we Shoul'd have taken the Whole fleet. On the ground at his feet is engraved Little Britain; the channel is Georges Channel. France, dressed as a petit-maitre, stands in profile to the l., one leg raised as if about to stamp, his hand clenched; he says to George, O Da—n the War. Spain, in cloak, ruff and feathered hat, stands behind France with an expression of distress, saying, O Miserable War. Holland (r.), a very stout Dutch burgher, stands full face, looking sideways towards George III and biting his thumb with an expression of angry alarm. In his r. hand is a dagger. Both his pockets are hanging out, one inscribed Empty, the other Ditto. He is saying We 3 Loggerheads be.¹

In the background, and between George III and France, are two ships of war in close action, surrounded by smoke. The British ship (l.) is the Formidable, the French ship, with her flags hanging down from broken masts, is the Vile [sic] de Paris, de Grasse's flag-ship which surrendered to Hood at the Battle of the Saints, see No. 5991, &c.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*I Swore (said Lewis) t'other day,
My fleets should rule the Sea;
Assur'd that Britain must give way
To angry Spain and me.*

*Says Neptune, I who heard the Boast,
Vow'd George should rule the main:
You reckon'd, friend, without your host,
So reckon o'er again!*

8 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6001 ST GEORGE & THE DRAGON.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d June 13th 1782. by H. Humphrey New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured impression). One of a set of four satires on Rodney's victory as a blow to the Ministry, see Nos. 5992, 5996, 5997. Rodney, in naval uniform, strikes down an enormous dragon (r.) which lies back wounded. He stands in profile to the r., with his r. foot on the dragon's thigh, his l. hand holds the monster's jaw, his cutlass is raised to give the final blow. The dragon clutches his leg with its claws, and is breathing out fire and smoke as well as frogs. These frogs and the fleur-de-lys which decorate the dragon's wings show that it is the power of France which is being destroyed. Fox (l.) runs towards Rodney holding up his l. hand, while with his r. he holds out a baron's coronet; he is saying Hold my dear Rodney, you have done enough, I will now make a Lord of you, and you shall have the happiness of never being heard of again.

For Rodney's recall, and peerage, see Parl. Hist. xxiii. 51 ff., 59 ff., 77 ff., debates of May 22, 27, 30, 31; June 3, 5, 7; Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 324 ff.; Corr. of George III, vol. v, pp. 33-6, 39, 42, 45.

Grego, Gillray, pp. 36-7; Wright and Evans, No. 4. Reprinted G.W.G., 1830.

8 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

¹ The sign of the Three Loggerheads depicts the heads of two men, with the legend as above, indicating that the spectator was the third. A signboard by Wilson is now preserved at an inn of this name in Wales.

6002 THE RESCUE.

A VOLUNTEER DELIVERING HIBERNIA FROM THE CLAWS OF THE LION. [Probably after 27 May 1782]

Engraving. An Irish volunteer (l.) draws Hibernia from the British lion (r.), who holds between his fore-paws a book and a paper inscribed Poyning's Law's. The volunteer is in uniform and wears a large cockaded hat in which are two feathers. Hibernia is dressed in pseudo-classical draperies, and holds her harp in her r. hand. Behind the lion is a square tower of dilapidated appearance, with a tree growing from (or behind) its battlements. In the background is a river, and on its farther side another square tower, flying a flag.

The demand of the Irish volunteers for legislative independence could not be disregarded, a civil war seemed imminent. The Irish political demands were formulated and advocated by Grattan, see No. 6003. On 27 May the new Lord Lieutenant, the Duke of Portland, announced that the English parliament had resolved 'to remove the causes of your discontents and jealousies'; shortly afterwards Poyning's Law and the English Declaratory Act (6 Geo. I, c. 5) were repealed, giving Ireland legislative independence.

10½ × 8¾ in.

6003 IRISH GRATITUDE.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d June 13th 1782. by H. Humphrey New Bond Street

Engraving. Henry Grattan stands (c.) in profile to the r. facing a deputation of Irish notables who are making the presentation of the money voted to him in the Irish Parliament for his services in securing Irish independence. At the head of the deputation is a short man, the Irish Speaker, E. S. Pery, in his Speaker's wig and robes. He holds out a paper inscribed Grant of the Sum of £100000 to H. Grattan Esq^r and saying, To you S^r as the deliverer of our Country & the establisher of our Peace; the Senate & People of Ireland dedicate this Small token of their Gratitude. Behind the Speaker are two men, arm-in-arm, both wearing ribbons, others crowd behind them. A prominent figure in profile to the l., very lean, resembles caricatures of Flood.

Behind Grattan (l.) is a larger crowd of the Dublin populace, all kneeling, with hands held together as if in prayer. They are headed by a monk, behind him are a man in broad-trimmed hat and beard, probably a Jew, and a dissenting minister with lank hair and clerical bands. Other conspicuous figures are a little chimney-sweep in ragged clothes, his brush under his arm, a stout woman with a basket (? of oysters) on her head, a barber with his shaving-dish under his arm, a watchman with staff and lantern, a soldier, a tailor with scissors under his arm. Behind are buildings.

The sum first moved (on 30 May) was £100,000, but this was reduced to £50,000. Grego, Gillray, p. 37; Wright and Evans, No. 6. Reprinted, G.W.G. 1830. Reproduced, S. C. Roberts, Picture Book of British History, iii. 1932, p. 39.

8½ × 12⁹/₁₆ in.

6004 THE BRITISH LION ENGAGING FOUR POWERS.

Pub^d by J. Barrow June 14th 1782. Sold by Richardson Print Seller, N^o 68 High Holborn.

Engraving. A lion (r.) stands facing four animals standing opposite to him in a row; his r. paw is held up, his tail is erect, and he says, You shall all have an old English drubbing to make you quiet. The head of a fox (C. J. Fox) appears from the lower r. corner of the print, saying, I counsel Your Majesty to give Monsieur the first gripe. The animals stand one behind the other, from the spectator's standpoint, all in profile to the r. facing the lion. In the foreground is a pug dog (Holland) its fore-paws raised from the ground, saying, I will be Jack of all sides as I have always been. Next him is a large snake, representing America, with a barbed fang, saying, I will have America and be Independent. Next is a cock with the steel spurs of a fighting-cock saying, I will have my Title from you and be call'd King of France. Next the Gallic cock is a spaniel, saying, I will have Gibraltar that I may be King of all Spain.

In the lower margin beneath the lion is engraved:

*Behold the Dutch and Spanish Currs,
Perfidious Gallus in his Spurs,
And Rattlesnake with head upright,
The British lion join to fight;
He scorns the Bark, the Hiss, the Crow,
That he's a Lion soon they'll know.*

For the snake as the emblem of America see Nos. 5336, 5401, 5973, 6039. For Holland as a profiteering neutral see No. 5557, &c. See also No. 6229, a similar design by the same artist.

$7\frac{9}{16} \times 12\frac{9}{16}$ in.

6005 SAWNEY GANGING BACK AGAIN BEING TURNED OUT OF PLACE.

[?Bartolozzi after Viscount Townshend.]

Pub^d 14th June 1782 by Kearsley Fleet Street

Engraving. Beneath it is a printed song. The Morning Chronicle ascribes the design to 'a well known Rt. Hon. artist' [Lord Townshend], the song to 'the Man of the people', that is C. J. Fox. A Scot in Highland dress is walking away from the 'Crown Inn', he looks round at a chained mastiff (l.) which is barking savagely at him. He carries off his plunder: in his r. hand is a purse, a sceptre appears over his r. shoulder, a sack is slung on his back.

In a ground-floor window of the Crown Inn George III is visible, his head thrown back as if asleep, a bandage across his eyes. From an upper window Fox, with a fox's head, leans out, holding a rope to pull back into position the sign of the Crown which is falling from its support. Two other men, one in a judge's wig (perhaps Lord Camden), stand behind him in the window. From the next window (l.) a military officer, perhaps General Conway, leans out, pointing at the sign as if giving directions. Across the front of the house, below the upper windows, is inscribed M^{rs} Bull late in Partnership with Sawney M^c Kenzie, with her Steward.

The house is shored up by two timber props inscribed Paper Credit and Liberty of the Press. Two iron stanchions also support the house. A man in the street is putting a ladder against the beam from which the sign hangs. The end of the beam is decorated by a wide pair of horns, beneath which is suspended a small cask on which an infant Bacchus sits astride. To the r. are larger and more imposing buildings than the Crown Inn. On the l. a tree appearing above a wall forms an important part of the design, it conceals part of the inn.

Beneath the design is printed:

1.

*John Bull had a sister, her name it was Peg,
From the North of the Tweed came to London to beg,
In a filthy condition, and not worth a souse,
Whom John, out of pity, took into his house.*

Derry Down, &c.

2.

*She perverted John's wife, as I have been told,
Who from a good housewife, was grown a great scold,
And by drinking strong liquor, in Scotland call'd Whiskey,
Was grown beyond measure wrong-headed and friskey.*

Derry Down.

3.

*A lad from the North she took into keeping,
To do her odd jobs while poor John was a-sleeping;
But, lest he should wake, it plainly appears,
She bandaged his eyes, and she stopp'd up his ears.*

Derry Down.

4.

*Sawney, John's servant, grew a braw bony chiel,
Who wish'd to send John and his wife to the de'el;
He eat up his victuals and purloin'd his treasure,
Then he left his good master, to repent at his leisure.*

Derry Down.

5.

*His land being mortgaged in country and town,
Tho' he long kept with credit the Sign of the Crown;
His house in decay, and now wanting propping,
His Sign off the hinges, and down almost dropping.*

Derry Down.

6.

*But John had some friends, who together agreed
To give him some help in the great time of need;
They turn'd out his sister, divorc'd his bad wife,
And got him a new one to comfort his life.*

Derry Down.

7.

*They kick'd Sawney out, unmuzzle'd John's dog,
They propp'd up the Sign, and took off the clog;
Then kindly they bad him, take leave of all cares,
Since they for the future wou'd guide his affairs.*

Derry Down.

*Ye Natives of England, pray mind what I sing,
Who wou'd save this poor country and preserve our good King,
Make a strong pull, a long pull, and pull all together,
Let it scoul in the North, ne'er regard the foul weather.*
Derry Down.

The Morning Chronicle, 28 June 1782, regards this print as 'much superior to any thing that has appeared since the change of the ministry, that called the Royal Hunt not excepted'.

For 'Sawney ganging' as the result of the new Ministry, see No. 5961. John Bull, his sister Peg, and Sawney Mackenzie are the subject of No. 3904 (1762), a satire on Bute. In No. 3890 John Bull is George III, his house being St. James's Palace. Attributed to Bartolozzi by Calabi, No. 2239.

11 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6006 MALAGRIDA & CONSPIRATORS, CONSULTING THE GHOST OF OLIVER CROMWELL.

Political Characters & Caracatures [of 1782]¹ N^o 5.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d June [?] 1782 by E. D'Achery St James [Street London]²

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). The ghost of Cromwell (r.) addresses Fox, Shelburne, and Richmond. He is in armour, his r. foot crushing a crown, his l. foot on a broken sceptre. In his r. hand is a sword whose point rests on the ground; a long cloak is slung across his shoulders and falls to the ground behind him. He turns his head in profile to the l., stretching out his r. arm and saying, To obtain your end your Measures are right, You Arm the People—like me, you trample on Prerogative—Republicans favourite Plan—but all in vain—The Spirit of the Constitution never dies. Fox stands disconsolately on the extreme l., holding his hat in both hands, his back to Cromwell; Shelburne's hand is in his r. arm. Shelburne, holding his l. hand to his chin, looks meditatively towards Cromwell. Richmond stands on Shelburne's l., his fists are clenched, and he looks at Cromwell over his l. shoulder. He and Fox appear to be walking away from Cromwell, while Shelburne stands meditatively.

This relates to Shelburne's plan for 'arming the people'³ in a circular letter of 7 May 1782, sent to Mayors, &c., and the subject of a debate on 10 May. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 1 ff. The scheme was defended by Fox as 'an association for the defence of their common rights and properties'; he approved of the example given by the Irish Volunteers as 'an example of public virtue, activity and perseverance'. The scheme, which appears to have resulted from the attitude of the Opposition towards the use of soldiers during the Gordon Riots, see No. 5687, &c., was dropped.

For allegations of republicanism against the new Ministry see Nos. 5979, 5987, 6007.

8 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

¹ Deleted with a stroke and partly erased.

² This publication line has been almost obscured by a line across it.

³ Cf. a print (? by Colley) L. Shelburne's Plan Seconded, pub. 23 July 1782 by Turner, Snow Hill, reproduced Wheeler and Broadley, Napoleon and the Invasion of England, 1908, i. p. 28.

6007 GUY VAUX.

[c. June 1782]

Political Characters & Caracatures of 1782. No 6.

[Gillray.]

Pub by W Humphry N° 227 Strand

Engraving. George III, with an ass's head, sits on a throne asleep, his wrists shackled. Through a wide doorway a crowd of conspirators is entering led by Fox with a fox's head, as Guy Vaux, holding a dark lantern. The king, in profile to the r., is on a raised dais against the l. wall. He wears a fool's cap. Beneath his chair is a barrel inscribed Gun Powder. On the wall above his head as a decoration is an ass carrying on its back a huge crown (cf. Nos. 5669, 5683); this is enclosed in an oval formed of a buckled Garter-ribbon inscribed Honi.soit.qui.mal.y.pense. On the floor by his side, leaning against the wall is a sack, from which protrude a crown and sceptre. He is perhaps contemplating departure for Hanover, cf. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. p. 494, and the draft message of abdication in the king's hand of March 1782, Corr. of George III, v, p. 425.

On either side of Fox, and slightly behind him, are Shelburne (r.) smiling, with a cask under his l. arm inscribed Gunpowder, and Richmond (l.) holding a bundle of faggots. Behind Richmond is Wilkes.¹ Between Fox and Shelburne is the head of Keppel. Behind Keppel is Burke, wearing spectacles; Dunning is in profile to the l., like Fox and Shelburne he wears a conspirator's cloak. On the wall behind the conspirators, seen through the doorway, is the lower part of the W.L. portrait, inscribed Cataline, of a man holding a sword.

For allegations of republicanism against the new Ministry see also Nos. 5979, 5987, 6006.

Grego, Gillray, p. 34; Wright and Evans, No. 7. Reproduced, Fuchs and Kraemer, Die Karikatur der Europäischen Volker, 1901, i. p. 258.

$8\frac{9}{16} \times 12\frac{9}{16}$ in.

6008 RODNY'S NEW INVENTED TURN ABOUT.

[? T. Colley]

*[Pub by T Colley July 1 1782 Rolls building London.]*²

Engraving. Men representing America, France, Holland, and Spain each tied to the end of a turn-about, or two bars crossing at a right angle where they are pivoted on a post. They are running stripped to the waist, their wrists tied to the four ends of the turn-about, while Rodney (l.) holds up a scourge which he is applying to their backs, saying Peace you Combin'd fools, I'll give it you Monsieur for your Presumption. France, his hair in a long pigtail queue, looks over his shoulder to the l. saying, O Rodney my back. At his feet is engraved French navy reduced, an allusion to the battle of the Saints, 12 Apr. 1782.

Holland (r.) running in profile to the r. says, these strokes are to[o] severe. At his feet is engraved Tranquin . . . le [Trincomalee] lost &c. This was captured by Admiral Hughes in Jan. 1782, but the news did not reach London till 16 May. (Walpole, Letters, xii. 250. London Gazette, 18 May.)

¹ Identified by Mr. Hawkins as Powys; he has some resemblance to Powys in No. 5990, but his squint, and his striking resemblance to the Wilkes of No. 5987, leave little doubt.

² Written on the print in pencil.

Spain, behind Holland, and running from r. to l., is saying I'll be peaceable on any terms. He wears a feathered hat, ruff, slashed breeches, and top-boots. America, a red Indian, with feather head-dress and girdle, running in the same direction says, O the Deceitful French. The four ends of the turn-about are inscribed France, Dutch, Spain, America. A jack-tar (l.) looks on holding a club in his r. hand, waving his hat and saying, Da—n [sic] the Frog give him another Dozen.

Beneath the design is engraved The Little Admiral giving the Enemy's of Great Britain a Flagellation. For Rodney's victory see No. 5991, also by Colley.

$4\frac{11}{16} \times 7\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6009 THE STATE COOKS MAKING PEACE—PORRIDGE.

Pub^d July 6th 1782 by E. Hedges N^o 92 Cornhill.

Engraving (coloured impression). English ministers standing over a large copper (l.) and offering the contents, or proposals for peace, to America, Holland, France, and Spain (r.). The drawing is crude and the Englishmen are poorly characterized. Standing behind the copper (l.), a man in naval uniform, probably Keppel, converses with a colleague: Keppel says, We had better empty this & make another mess; the other answers, They like high season'd things, a few force meat Balls will make it go down. A minister kneels before the copper, blowing the fire beneath it with bellows, and saying, I must give it tother puff. Behind him stands Fox, as the chief cook, with a fox's head; he holds a large spoon over the copper, while with his l. hand he hands a bowl to a military officer, probably Conway. He wears an apron, with a knife at his waist, and is saying, I have Cook'd speeches before now, Sure I know how to Cook Porridge. Conway answers, They wont Swallow it they say it is not palatable. A plainly dressed man, perhaps Shelburne (? or John Bull), standing behind and between them says, Put in more peper of Rodney and salt of Wood.¹ Between the two groups stands the Duke of Richmond in profile to the r., dressed as a waiter with an apron, addressing Holland, to whom he has just handed a bowl of soup, saying, Pray sup a little Mynheer. Holland, a stout burgher in baggy breeches, turning his head to look at Richmond over his r. shoulder, empties his bowl saying, I have thrown mine to the ground. Behind Holland stands America as a Red Indian, with head-dress and girdle of feathers; he holds up a tomahawk in his l. hand, in his r. is a bow, a quiver is slung to his shoulders; he says, turning to Richmond, I'll have none without my friends like it. On the extreme r. stands Spain, in feathered hat, ruff, cloak, and top-boots; he looks over his r. shoulder towards his neighbour France, saying, I'll not taste a drop till I have taken Gberalter. France, a lean fop, his hat under his arm, says to him, By gar its not so good as soup Meagre.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*The State Cooks a making Peace-Porridge are found
Which they hand to our different Enimies round.
But they all seem averse, and will not hear Reason
And swear that it wants more Ingredients & Season,*

¹ Probably an error for Hood; James Athol Wood, afterwards rear-admiral, was in the battle of the Saints as Lieutenant of the Anson, but he was then unknown to the public.

*Ah! what can the Cooks do in such a hard case?
If such folks will not eat tho! F—x has said grace.
Why give them what obstinate Children deserve
Beat them well, & if they won't eat it then let em Starve.*

For the peace negotiations see Fitzmaurice, Life of Shelburne, 1912, ii, p. 111 ff.; Cambridge History of British Foreign Policy, i, p. 137 ff.; E. S. Corwin, French Policy and the American Alliance, 1916, Chap. XV; S. E. Morison, Growth of the American Republic, 1930, pp. 102-6. See also No. 6168, &c.

$7\frac{3}{8} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6010 FOX TURNING TAIL ON THE GRAPES FOR REASONS.

Pub^d by J. Barrow July 13: 1782. N^o 11 St Brides Passage Fleet Street.

Engraving. A fox (C. J. Fox) standing on his hind-legs rests his r. forepaw on a large jar (r.), full of leaves (?or raisins). In his r. paw he holds a small branch taken from the jar, saying, For these Raisins I turn from the Grapes. On the l. of the design is a tall vine laden with grapes on which the fox is turning its back.

On Rockingham's death (1 July) Lord Shelburne was appointed first Lord of the Treasury, whereupon Fox and Lord John Cavendish resigned (5 July), being followed by Burke and other members of the Ministry. On 9 July Fox gave his reasons for resigning, stating that he differed from the cabinet on the independence of America, that is, on the peace negotiations. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 159 ff. But the reasons were generally understood to be resentment at the appointment of Shelburne, with whom Fox was on very bad terms, and the claims of the Rockingham Whigs to a monopoly of leadership. See Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 445 ff.; Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 350 ff.; Fitzmaurice, Life of Shelburne, 1912, ii. 151 ff.; Journal and Corr. of Lord Auckland, 1861, i, p. 1 ff. See also Nos. 6011, 6012, 6013, 6015, 6018, 6020, 6022, 6023, 6027, 6044, 6164, 6166, 6167, 6191, 6208. $6\frac{1}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6011 PARADISE LOST.

J. S. f. [James Sayers.]

Published 17th July 1782 by Charles Bretherton New Bond Street

Engraving. The first of the series of political satires by Sayers, which were directed chiefly against Fox. Fox and Burke stand arm-in-arm, looking disconsolately to the ground, outside the gates of Paradise. Fox (l.) holds a large handkerchief in his r. hand: his l. is in Burke's arm. Burke's r. hand is thrust in his waistcoat, his l. hangs by his side, holding a handkerchief. Behind them is a high stone wall, in which is a closed gate of high iron spikes surmounted by a stone arch. On the keystone of the arch is a smiling head of Shelburne. The other stones are decorated alternately by heads and by crossed pistols or crossed swords. The lowest stone on the r. bears the head of Dunning, the lowest on the l. that of Barré. The other two heads are those of satyrs. Behind the wall and in the upper r. corner of the design is a hand holding a sword pointing downwards, whose blade is inscribed, Commission to the Lord of y^e Treasury.

Beneath the design are etched lines from Paradise Lost:

... to the eastern Side
 Of Paradise so late their happy Seat
 Waved over by that flaming Brand, the Gate
 With dreadful faces throng'd and fiery Arms
 Some natural Tears they dropt, but wiped them soon
 The World was all before them where to chuse
 Their Place of Rest and Providence their Guide
 They Arm in Arm with wandring Steps and slow
 Thro' Eden took their solitary Way.

This represents the resignation of Fox and Burke on Shelburne's appointment as First Lord of the Treasury after the death of Rockingham on 1 July, and their chagrin that their example was not followed by more members of the Ministry; other resignations were those of Lord John Cavendish, the Duke of Portland, Sheridan, and Townshend. Barré and Dunning accepted pensions for life obtained for them by Shelburne. See Walpole to Mason, 17 July, 1782. Letters, xii. 298. See also p. 307.

Fox and Burke on their resignation became the objects of bitter satire and ridicule. 'The man of the people is snouted and fox'd in the window of every gin shop and in the tap-rooms of every porter house. Such is the ingratitude of public friendship that a man no sooner behaves wrong than he is immediately abused and vilefied.' Morn. Herald, 3 Aug. The Morning Post, 3 Aug., singled out for praise The Exit from Paradise, probably this print, and the Devil's Address to the Sun, see No. 6012. See also No. 6010, &c., and for Burke's retirement, No. 6026; for Barré's pension, No. 6028. Reproduced, Fitzmaurice, Life of Shelburne, 1912, ii. 155. For other applications of Paradise Lost to Fox's exclusion from office see Nos. 6012, 6044.

9 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6012 GLORIA MUNDI, OR—THE DEVIL ADDRESSING THE SUN. Par^e Lost. Book iv.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d July 22^d by W. Humphrey

Engraving. Fox, with the legs and brush of a fox, and with horns like those of a cow, tipped to prevent mischief, projecting through the crown of his hat, stands on an E. O. table, which is placed on the summit of the globe (over the North Pole). Above, in the upper r. corner of the design is a bust portrait of Shelburne, within a circle which represents the sun and is sending out rays. He smiles cynically, looking down at Fox. Fox stands full-face, his head slightly turned upwards and to the r. towards Shelburne, saying,

*To thee I call,
 But with no friendly voice, & add thy name,
 Sh ne! to tell thee how I hate thy beams,
 That bring to my remembrance from what state
 I fell: &c. &c. &c. . . .*

His waistcoat pockets are turned inside out to show that he is penniless, and the E. O. table, see No. 5928, &c., indicates that gambling is the cause of it. On the globe is sketched a map showing the British Isles, N. Europe, &c. Clouds rise above the globe (l.) and form a background.

For Fox's resignation see No. 6010, &c. It was unusual for the resignation of office to give rise to unpopularity. For Shelburne's appointment see also No. 6018, &c. Grego, Gillray, p. 40; Wright and Evans, No. 11.

12½ × 8⅞ in.

6012 A A reduced copy (coloured impression), n.d., or date cut off.
⅞ × 5 in. 'Caricatures', xi, p. 2. B.M.L., Tab. 5247.

6013 THE KETTLE HOOTING THE PORRIDGE-POT.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d July 23^d 1782 by P. J. Leatherhead.

Engraving. Shelburne (l.), as the kettle, looks at Fox (r.), the porridge-pot, which is running away. Shelburne's body is in the form of a kettle, much blackened underneath; the handle, attached to his chest and shoulders, extends over his head. He has a complacent smile and holds out his hands, pointing towards Fox; his l. foot is on the neck of a goose, which lies on its back on the ground. He is saying, Oh do but look how black his Arse is! Fox (r.) with the head of a fox, his body a large circular pot, blackened underneath, is running away with an alarmed expression, his hands held up, his tongue hanging out. In the centre of the design, between the two figures is a sign-post, its arm, pointing to the r., is terminated by a well-drawn hand holding a die in its fingers, but pointing with its fore-finger in the direction in which Fox is running. The arm of the post is inscribed TO BROOKS'S; from it hangs a rope with a noose at the end of it. On the post is hung up a placard inscribed To be Lett—either as a Gibbet or Direction Post. A landscape with bushes forms the background.

Fox, destitute on leaving office, is running off to his gambling associates at Brooks's for his support, cf. No. 5972; while, politically speaking, Shelburne is depicted as equally black. See Walpole to Mann, 8 July, 1782. Letters, xii. 292. Fox's geese, in caricature, usually represent the electors of Westminster, see No. 5843, &c.

8⅞ × 12⅞ in.

6014 THE HIGH AND MIGHTY PUG ANSWERING FOX'S PROPOSALS OF PEACE.

Pub^d by J. Barrow July y^e 25: 1782. N^o 11 S^t Bride Passage Fleet Street.

Engraving. A fox stands with a pen in its r. paw looking up at a pug dog which sits on a raised platform (l.). The pug (Holland) holds a tobacco-pipe in its r. paw, beneath its feet is a torn document inscribed To their High Mig^{ty} &c. . . . (The States General at The Hague were styled their High Mightinesses, Hogen Mogen.) He is saying to Fox, The King Your Master proceeding so arbitrary, obliged me to join the powers at war with him; I cannot therefore treat of a separate peace. The head and shoulders of George III appear just within the r. margin of the print, he leans forward addressing Fox, whose back is turned towards him, My Fox in this negotiation thou art a mistaken goose.

When Fox became Foreign Secretary he at once made overtures through the Russian Minister in London for a cessation of hostilities with Holland as a step to a separate peace. This was received by the States General with coldness and contempt. Fox had asserted before he came into office that he had the means of making a separate peace with the Dutch. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 277-8; Malmesbury, Diaries, i. 497 ff.; Corr. of George III, vi, pp. 10, 38-9, 62. Cf. No. 5989. For the actual peace with the United Provinces see No. 6292.

$4\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6015 AHITOPHEL IN THE DUMPS.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d July 30th 1782 by E. D'Achery St James's Street.

Engraving. Fox, with a fox's head, riding (r. to l.) an ass, his hands are clasped in front of him, the reins hang on the animal's neck, he looks down with a dejected expression. The ass is looking up and braying at a gallows (l.) which bestrides the road and through which he is about to pass; it is inscribed "Let desert mount," and from it hangs a noose. In the centre of the road, and directly under the gallows, is a block against which leans a headsman's axe. Beneath the title is engraved:

"And when Ahitophel saw that his counsel was not followed, he saddled his Ass, and arose, and went & hanged himself, &c."

A satire on Fox's resignation, and chagrin at the appointment of Shelburne to succeed Rockingham instead of the Duke of Portland, who, it was supposed, would have been a man of straw, leaving Fox virtual premier. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 448 ff. See also No. 6010, &c. Reissued in 1785 with the imprint, Pub^d July 30th, 1785 W. Humphrey, Strand. Grego, Gillray, p. 71; Wright and Evans, No. 17.

$8\frac{1}{4} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6016 SIR P. J. C ES HAMPSHIRE STORY.

taken from the Gazetteer & New Daily Advertiser, June 18th 1782

Page 2^d Colⁿ 3^d

J^s Pollard del.

John Roberts Aqua^t

Published as the Act directs Augst 1st 1782, by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Aquatint. The kitchen of a country inn, three women paying great attention to two customers in Highland dress, while the host walks off with an expression of anger. This illustrates a press report of the debate on a motion by the Marquis of Graham to repeal the clauses of 19 Geo. II, c. 39: 'For the more effectual disarming the Highlands of Scotland', passed after the rebellion of 1745, which forbade the wearing of Highland dress in the Highlands. Sir Philip Jennings Clerke proposed on 17 June, that this dress should not be permitted to be worn in England: 'He remembered that there were six highlanders once quartered in a house in Hampshire, who were really as well-behaved soldiers as any he had seen, but still the singularity of their dress had put the man of the house to very great inconvenience; for finding that his wife and daughter could not keep their eyes off the Highlanders, he was obliged to take a lodging for them both.' Parl. Hist. xxiii. 114-15.

The two highlanders sit one on each side of a round table in the middle of the room, both paying attention to the landlady, who stands behind the table pouring wine on to the table instead of into the glass held out for it. Two girls of coquettish appearance are much attracted, one negligently pours the contents of a frying-pan on to the floor, scalding a cat. The host (l.), a bottle of wine in his r. hand, a napkin under his arm, walks with a clenched fist towards an open door on the extreme l. A little girl (r.) rides astride a broadsword. A set of bag-pipes lies on the floor, on which is perched a magpie.

The room is raftered with a large open fire-place (l.) with a projecting chimney, on the front of which is the sign of the inn, a parti-coloured pig, inscribed Hampshire Hog. Above the fire-place are also a stag's head with antlers, a shelf with jug and tankard. On its side is a placard, J. Clarke Breeches Maker . . ., in allusion to the speech of Jennings Clerke, and beneath it a salt-box. Over the door is a cuckoo clock. Two hams hang from the rafters. Against the r. wall is a dresser, with plates and dishes. On the back wall is a bust portrait in an oval of Gulielmus Rex and a gun. Through a doorway two men are seen drinking and smoking at a table in another room. See also No. 6017.

$7\frac{3}{4} \times 9\frac{5}{16}$ in.

6017 THE SCOTCH MADE HAPPY BY A LATE ACT OF PARLIAMENT.

[1782]

J. Grot [mutilated]¹ pinx^t.

Thistle Sculp.

Publish'd as the Act directs.

Engraving. Sixteen men in various attitudes taking off breeches and putting on kilts. One of them wears a peer's robe over his kilt. Their hair falls lankly on their necks and they wear flat Scots caps. An old Jew (l.) walks off towards a door carrying breeches on his back and in his hand; a sack on his back inscribed They Have use for Monies But none for Breeches Now. Behind a sixfold screen (r.) three young women are peeping. Another woman stretches out an arm from behind it to take possession of a pair of breeches which lies on the floor. The screen is decorated with pictures or prints, oblong and oval. Some are portraits, faintly indicated. One is a W.L. figure of Justice with sword and scales. Beneath the design is engraved, The Sixteen Elect robing and Disrobing.

The sixteen representative peers of Scotland are supposed to be taking advantage of the Act removing the ban on the wearing of Highland dress, see No. 6016. This ban applied only to the Highlands of Scotland, see Parl. Hist. xxiii. 115.

$8 \times 13\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6018 THE JUBILEE.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d August 2^d 1782 by E. D'Achery St James's Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A sequel to No. 5966. A fox (C. Fox) hangs from a gibbet, the Conway family, as rats, dance triumphantly round him holding hands, the leader, General Conway, blindfolded and led by the nose by Shelburne. Shelburne (r.) has two faces, his own looks smiling towards Conway (not a rat), saying,

¹ Perhaps intended for John o' Groat's.

*Huzza! my friends—huzza—the Monster's dead, and we Full-merrily will dance, around his fatal Tree
Honours thick falling, shall our steps attend,
Come where I lead—to Glory we'll ascend.*

He waves his hat over his head. His other face, looking to the r. is that of a devil; it says,

Unthinking Fools!—who will as tenderly be led by the Nose, as Asses are—but if he (at whose overthrow they rejoice) scourged them with Whips! they shall find I will chastise them with Scorpions!

General Conway, blindfolded, looks towards Shelburne. His sheathed sword is in his r. hand, with his l. he points up to the fox on the gallows, saying, What I'm—Political Innocence—to be sure—Ha! Ha! Ha! I'm the last to see what's obvious to all the World—am I? He! He! He!

Behind Conway and holding to his coat-tail with his r. hand is his brother, Lord Hertford (not a rat), in profile to the r., saying,

*All my prayr's are not in vain
For I shall have my Place again.*

Hertford had been forced to resign his post as Lord Chamberlain on the appointment of the new Ministry, and the newspapers accused Lady Hertford of trying to curry favour with Fox. See No. 5966.

Hertford is in profile to the r. His l. hand holds that of Lady Hertford, a stout lady with a rat's head, saying, He! He! He!—well—I always said that Dismal would come to be Hang'd—Ha! Ha! Ha! With her l. hand she holds that of her youngest son, here depicted as a young boy, who holds the hand of his young sister, cf. No. 5966. The two children are on the extreme l. of the circle of dancers; the little girl holds the hand of a grown-up sister wearing a hat, who says, La Mama! he stinks like Poverty. Next comes a brother in regimentals, saying, *Zounds! I'm almost afraid of this Gunpowder-Guy-Fox—'though he be dead—*He holds by the hand a brother dressed as a clergyman, evidently the Hon. Edward Conway, Canon of Christchurch, who is saying,

*The Year of Jubilee is come
He's gone to his Eternal home.*

The next brother, looking up at the fox with upturned eyes, says, Quite Chop-fallen by Heav'ns!—Ha! Ha! Ha! The last brother, in cockaded hat, says, pointing up at the fox with his r. hand, A Nick by Jupiter!—He! He! He! On the gallows is inscribed, Sic transit gloria Mundi. Below the design is engraved, 'Let me die the death of the Righteous—and let my latter end be like his.' A cloud beside the cross-bar of the gibbet is drawn as a profile to the r., looking with an anxious expression towards Fox and the words Sic transit.

Conway, who was Commander-in-Chief with a seat in the Cabinet under Rockingham, not only failed to resign with Fox, but defended Shelburne's administration from the attacks of Fox on 9 July. For this he was compared by Burke to Little Red-Ridinghood, hence the allusion to 'Political Innocence'. Parl. Hist. xxiii, pp. 165–8, 183; Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 451–2; Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 367 ff. Lord Hertford was reappointed Chamberlain in April 1783. For Fox's resignation see No. 6010, &c. For Shelburne as a triumphant conspirator see Nos. 6011, 6012, 6013, 6028, 6032, 6044, 6046, 6166.

Grego, Gillray, i. 41, where the rats are explained as members of the Ministry; No. 5966 leaves no doubt that they are members of the Conway family. Wright and Evans, No. 8.

$9\frac{1}{4} \times 13\frac{3}{16}$ in.

6019 MONSIEUR LE COMTE DE GRASSE.

Drawn from the life by M. Jones. [? Gillray]

Publish'd Aug^t 10th 1782 by John Harris Sweetings Alley Cornhill.
Price 1^s 6^d.

Engraving. Bust portrait of de Grasse in an oval in profile to the l. His hair is plainly dressed, he wears a plain coat with epaulettes and the ribbon of an order over a laced waistcoat. His appearance and dress are in marked contrast to the caricatures of de Grasse. Cf. No. 5997, &c.

De Grasse arrived in London as a prisoner of war on 3 Aug. 1782, staying at the Royal Hotel, Pall Mall, and walking freely about London, and it is said being recognized by a jack tar in Pall Mall was given three cheers by the crowd which collected. Lond. Chronicle, Aug. 1-3, and 6-8. Cf. No. 5997.

$6 \times 5\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6020 THE SOLILOQUY.

S: B. [Gillray.]

Pub^d Aug^t 12th 1782 by H: Humphrey New Bond Street.

Engraving. Design in an oval. Fox with a very melancholy expression, standing with folded arms facing T.Q. to l. outside a closed and padlocked gate repeating Wolsey's soliloquy from Henry the Eighth. The gate fills an archway, its top being of iron spikes, the padlock is inscribed Fast. The stone arch over the gate is inscribed Treasury. On the stone wall of the Treasury building (l.) are torn placards. One is a broadside, Last Dying Speech headed by a print of a man hanging from a gibbet; another is headed Gamester. Beneath the title is inscribed:

"Farewell, a long Farewell to all my Greatness! this is the state of Man, to Day he puts forth the tender leaves of hopes, tomorrow Blossoms & bears all his blushing Honours thick upon him: the Third Day comes a Frost a killing Frost [sic], & when he thinks good easy Man full surely his Greatness is a Ripening, nips his Root & then he falls as I do!"

Another satire on Fox's exclusion from office, by his resignation on the appointment of Lord Shelburne to succeed Rockingham. See No. 6010, &c.

$8\frac{1}{4} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6021 THE V— [VICTUALLING] COMMITTEE FRAMING A REPORT.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d according to Act of Parliament Aug^t 12th 1782 by C. Atkinson and sold in Mark Lane!!!—"let the gall'd Jade wince!"

Engraving. Members of a parliamentary committee seated round an oblong table; two tiers of raised seats are on the farther side of the table, in the centre of the upper tier sits the chairman, immediately below him the clerk of the committee is 'framing' the Report.

This is the Committee appointed to examine the conduct nominally of the Navy Victualling Board, actually that of Christopher Atkinson, a corn factor of Mark Lane, M.P. for Heydon, employed by the Board to purchase malt, &c. on commission, who was accused of cheating by overcharges and false accounts. He had been attacked by letters in the General Advertiser, at first anonymously, and then from Oct. 1780 by one Bennett. In Feb. 1781 he was dismissed by the Board, in the same month he brought an action for libel against Bennett. He did not produce his books to the Board as requested and in the winter of 1781-2 burned them. The Committee sat from 7 Mar. 1782 to 25 June 1782 and examined members of the Victualling Board.

The persons in the print are portraits, and are indicated by numbers, but any explanatory notes there may have been are missing. With the print was issued a New Song of which there is a MS. copy.¹

The Chairman (1.) (Samuel Whitbread) is saying, This is certainly the first instance of an accused Man sitting as Judge on his own Cause and requires particular attention. The clerk (2) is writing; he says, The Man who ventured to hold forth such Malpractices, has rendered his Country service. A man (3) standing on the r. of the Chairman, who from the Song appears to be Montague Burgoyne of the Victualling Office, is saying, His whole defence rests on the proof of his Partners & Clerk, & such Evidence should be cautiously trusted, they being interested. No. 4, on the l. of the Chairman, evidently one of the seven Commissioners of the Victualling Office, is saying, He has behaved so well to us that we must endeavour to bring him through, but the burning his Books is the greatest preventative. No. 5, seated on the r. of the clerk, is saying, Such infamous overcharges besides 3500£ a year, deserves the severest punishment. No. 6, on the clerk's r., says, holding down his head, We must be tender, we may be in the same situation at a future time, then this will appear as a precedent. No. 7, on the r. of the middle tier, has two faces, one in profile to the l., the other to the r. One says, He has much Money, that is what I deal in. I must be tender; the other says, I must carry appearances against him to please the Public. Probably Bamber Gascoyne, Junior, the two faces being an allusion to his house Bifrons at Barking, which had two fronts, see No. 6056; see infra the words spoken by No. 14. The next four are seated on the farther side of the table, immediately under the two upper tiers of seats: No. 8 (l.) says, clapping his hands and raising his eyes, Oh Heavens, what can we expect of the Man who burns his Books & denies his Affidavit? (That is, in his libel action against Bennett, where he swore that he charged no more for his purchases for the Victualling Board than the prices he paid.) His neighbour (9) is saying, The great overcharge on the 250:1 Malt at Plymouth, should not escape our notice. No. 10 turns to his neighbour on the r. saying, You must instruct me for his Interest, I have a refreshing Fee for You. No. 11 answers him, This damn'd Affidavit entirely oversets us!—But still we can't leave him; he is pointing to a paper which he holds in front of him inscribed, Kings Bench . . . C. A., representing the affidavit in question.

No. 12, evidently Atkinson himself, is standing up at the r. end of the table, in profile to the l., his hand on his breast, looking towards the clerk; he says, Upon my Honor & Reputation notwithstanding the Charges against me, I served them with Industry and Sometimes with Integrity. The next two are seated at the r. end of the table, both in profile to the l. No. 13 (next Atkinson) says, pointing to No. 11, The getting him upon the Committee was a noble stroke, we can now leave out the Evidence that affects him, as we have a Majority. The man next him, without a number, sits with a book on the table in front of him inscribed Letter, Scourge, W. Bennett, C. A., evidently containing the Press attacks on Atkinson. He is saying, Suppressing Evidence so material to the Enquiry & deliver'd by such unimpeachable Characters, must deserve Censure.

¹ Printed in Wright & Evans, pp. 11-13, 'from a unique impression in the possession of Mr. George Fores.'

The next six sit, r. to l., on the nearer side of the table facing the chairman. No. 14, with a pen in his hand and papers in front of him, is saying, The Quibbles used by Bam [Bamber Gascoyne] are intended to tire out the Committee. No. 15, evidently one of the Commissioners of the Victualling Office, says, The letter we gave him was intended to do him honour, & should have contented him after detection. No. 16 says, The overcharges did not affect us, & I wish the Fellow damn'd that first made them public, I feel the loss of presents. No. 17 says to No. 16, A very decent account of overcharge in which he bot of one Person; he is holding in his hand a paper inscribed Flour 1300 at 1^s, 826 at 2. 300(?) at 9, 10, 11 . . . No. 18 says, turning to No. 19, We did not dismiss or accuse him till an instance was clearly traced out & proved of his not having done Justice to the Crown. No. 19 answers, We thought him to be our confidential Servant. Nos. 20 and 21 sit at the l. end of the table; 20 says, This Burning Books seems to be a concerted plan between his Lighterman & himself, to prevent detection, as every other Person in the Trade preserve theirs.

In October 1782 Atkinson was indicted for perjury, as a result of the inquiries of the Victualling Committee. He was eventually tried and found guilty in the King's Bench before Mansfield on 15 July 1783. He was expelled from the House of Commons 4 Dec. 1784 and afterwards stood in the pillory, 25 Nov. 1785. This print appears to amalgamate the proceedings of the Commissioners of the Victualling Office with those of the Parliamentary Committee whose names are given in the Commons' Journal, vol. 38, pp. 871-2, 895, 1000. Nos. 3, 14, 15, 16, 18 and 19 are evidently Commissioners of the Victualling Board; these were Jonas Hanway, A. Chorley, Joah Bates, James Kirke, John Slade, William Lance, and Montague Burgoyne. The print is further explained by the song, 'The V— Committee. A new song of the year 1782': in this 'Bam' (Bamber Gascoyne), 'Air' (Anthony Eyre, M.P. for Borough Bridge, or Francis Eyre, M.P. for Great Grimsby), and Kke (James Kirke) are accused of shielding Atkinson. 'Sir Philip' (Jennings Clerke) is praised for his honesty. The affair produced a considerable literature in the years 1784-5, see B. M. L. Catalogue. See also Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 259, 410. There are several prints of Atkinson in the pillory. Grego, Gillray, p. 41. Wright and Evans, No. 10.

9¼ × 13⅜ in.

6022 "GUY-VAUX & JUDAS-ISCARIOT".

[Gillray.]

Dialogues of the Dead: Page 1782.

[Pub^d Aug^t 14th 1782 by E. D'Achery St James's Street]¹

Engraving. Fox (l.), with a fox's head and brush, directs the rays from the dark-lantern of a conspirator upon Shelburne (r.), who is wrapped in a cloak, and carries a small sack inscribed Treasury. Fox, who is out at elbows, his breeches unbuttoned at the knee, his stockings ungartered, his shoes dilapidated with his bare toes protruding, is saying, Ah! what I've found you out, have I? Who arm'd the high Priests & the People? Who betray'd his Mas— Shelburne, with a smile of complacent triumph, is saying, Ha! Ha!—poor Gunpowder's vexed!—He, He, He!—Shan't have the Bag I tell you, Old Goosetooth! (Cf. No. 5843, &c.) The background is shaded to suggest night, Shelburne's head and shoulders being brilliantly lit by the rays of the dark lantern.

¹ Supplied from the reproduction in the Life of Shelburne.

A satire on Fox's chagrin at the appointment of Shelburne to succeed Rockingham, Fox having demanded the appointment of Portland. See No. 6010, &c. For Shelburne as the triumphant conspirator, see also Nos. 6012, 6013, 6019, 6032, 6044, 6162, 6166. Cf. also No. 6007. Grego, Gillray, pp. 41-2. Reproduced, Fitzmaurice, Life of Shelburne, 1912, ii. 164.

$8\frac{9}{16} \times 12\frac{13}{16}$ in.

6023 TIME WORKING OUT THE NEW M—Y [MINISTRY] IN PROPER CHARACTERS.

Pub^d by J. Barrow Aug^t 14. 1782 N^o 84 Dorset Street, Salisbury Court, Fleet Street.

N. 8.

Engraving. Time (l.), an old man with wings, wearing a loin-cloth, turns a handle which turns a mill, resembling a modern coffee-mill. In the cone-shaped receptacle or hopper the heads of ministers appear: Dunning, cr. Lord Ashburton 30 Mar., (l.) in profile to the r. says, We came in for Solomons, but I fear we shall turn out Simpletons. The other heads (l. to r.) are Burke, wearing spectacles, Lord Shelburne, Keppel, and the Duke of Richmond¹ who is in profile to the l., facing Dunning. Facing these are two heads in back view, and a boy's head turned in profile to the l., evidently Pitt, who became Chancellor of the Exchequer on 10 July. From a spout below the cone a goose, Charles Fox (r.) is emerging, its legs and tail still in the machine. It says, I went in reputed a wise Fox, but Time now proves me a silly cackling goose.

Fox had lost credit, not only by his resignation, see No. 6010, &c., but by his unfulfilled boasts of being able to secure a separate peace with Holland, see No. 6014. Burke had also resigned, see No. 6026. Dunning was Chancellor of the Duchy, Keppel First Lord of the Admiralty, Richmond Master-General of the Ordnance in Shelburne's Ministry, whose progressive disintegration is here prophetically depicted. Keppel resigned in December, Richmond ceased to attend the Cabinet, others were restive and threatened resignation, the result being the coalition between Fox and North. See Fitzmaurice, Life of Shelburne, ii. 229 ff. The speedy fall of the Ministry and the coalition of Fox and North was anticipated in July by Eden and Loughborough. Journal and Corr. of Lord Auckland, 1861, pp. 5-7. See also No. 6165. Nos. 6029, 6039, by the same artist, belong to the same series.

$6\frac{11}{16} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ in.

¹ Miss Banks has written 'Col. Barré', but the resemblance to Richmond is unmistakable.

6024 THE HORRORS OF WAR A VISION OR A SCENE IN THE TRAGEDY OF K: RICH^d 3d.

London, Published as the Act directs, Aug^t 20th 1782, by I: Sharpe.

Engraving. Two ex-ministers see a vision of the horrors of war. Lord North (l.) in profile to the r. stands with his hands behind his back, saying, Perdition seize thee! Hadst thou finished the intended Purpose, the triumphs of the junto had been complete. But now disgrace and public detestation, mark the awful resignation of our Places. Behind him, in a landscape, is the vision: Britannia (c.) sits, holding her spear and shield, saying Oh I have drank of the deadly pois'ned cup administ' red by corruption. Between her and North stands a figure (Corruption) with the head and breast of a woman, the legs and tail of a devil, holding a cup and looking towards North. She says, My good lord I have nearly done the business.

On the r. is a room, from which the l. wall has been removed, revealing the vision to its occupant who lies back on a sofa, with hands held up in alarm. He is poorly characterized, but is evidently either Germain or Sandwich. He is looking at a Red Indian woman symbolizing America. She stands on a cloud on and under which are four naked children. They lie on a number of weapons: swords, bayonets, a pike, a scalping-knife. A sword is thrust through her breast up to the hilt, she points to it, addressing the reclining minister: Canst thou behold this mangled breast—this dreadful carnage of my children & feel no keen remorse! Oh forego this bloody warfare, else can revolted nature 'eer forget her wrongs or close in amity the dire catastrophe of recent woes. The minister says to her, Hence bloody Phantom, Shake not thy gory locks at me. Approach thou like the rugg'd Rhinoceros, or fierce Hyrcanian beast take any shape but that, & my firm nerves shall never tremble. Behind him in the background is a minister wearing a bag-wig and sword (Sandwich or Germain) looking at a map inscribed Map of the British Empire in the Year 1775, which is hung on the back wall of the room. It covers a great part of two hemispheres, but the details are obscure. He is saying, O'er America's lofty summits And Africa's dusky plains; From Europe to the Ganges: And wher'eer the Atlantic bathes the western shores.

For Indian atrocities see also No. 5470, &c.

8½ × 12¾ in.

6025 THE CASTLE IN THE MOON.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d Aug^t 22^d 1782. by H. Humphrey New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Don Quixote personifying Spain, mounted on a dejected Rozinante, sits erect on his saddle, addressing Sancho (Holland) astride on a small ass. They are on the edge of a cliff by the sea. On the neck of the Don's horse stands a small monkey (France) dressed like a Frenchman with a long pigtail queue; he holds the slack reins with his l. hand while he points with his sword towards a castle in the sky in a circle inset in a crescent moon which is inscribed Gibraltar. He says, Sa—Sa—Ah—ha! dere I was have dem! & dere! Ah—ha! Don Quixote, who wears Mambrino's helmet with a feather in it, a cloak, slashed doublet and breeches, and top-boots with large spurs, has an expression of melancholy dignity; he says, Sancho! we'll sit down before the Castle & starve them out; Sancho. Sancho wears a hat like an inverted flower-pot with a short pipe stuck through its band; he says with an expression of dismay, Starve them out. O Lord! O Lord! we're like to be starv'd Ourselves first! ther's not a mouthful left in the Wallet, & I'm grown as thin as a Shotten Herring. He is far too large and heavy for the small ass which grazes the sparse plants at its feet. Beneath the title is engraved A New Adventure, not mentioned by Cervantes.

The final effort of the allies was a combined attack on Gibraltar by land and sea, the great preparations for which were well known in London. Cf. London Chronicle, Aug. 8-10, 1782. Its fall was confidently expected, France having pledged herself (12 Ap. 1779) not to lay down arms without securing its restitution to Spain. For the great attack on Gibraltar and its repulse, see Nos. 6034, 6037. Cf. also No. 6210. Grego, Gillray, p. 42. Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830.

$9\frac{1}{4} \times 13\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6026 CINCINNATUS IN RETIREMENT.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d Aug^t 23^d 1782. by E^h D' Achery. St James's Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A satire on Burke's resignation after the death of Rockingham. Burke, as an Irish jesuit, seated at a table eating potatoes. While he wears a monkish robe, a rosary hanging from his rope and girdle, and bare feet with sandals, he wears a wig and under his robe, which is open at the neck, a cravat, shirt frill, and coat-collar are visible. He wears spectacles, and is seated on a three-legged stool, facing l., and peeling with his long fingers a steaming potato taken from a chamber-pot on the table in front of him which is filled with potatoes, in which is stuck a two-pronged fork. The pot is inscribed Relick N^o 1. used by St Peter. On the table are also a wine-glass, a plate with a bare bone on it, a steaming saucepan, a birch-rod, two candles stuck in bottles, one of which hangs down broken and guttering. At the opposite end of the table from Burke is a crucifix standing on a small cask inscribed Whiskey. The figure on the cross is mutilated, the head and one leg from the knee are broken off. Beneath the table, which is oblong, plain and solid, three imps or demons dance, holding hands, naked quasi-human figures of revolting appearance.

Two walls of the room are visible; on the r. behind Burke is a large open fire-place, with wood burning on the hearth, a fender and firearms. Over the fire-place is an oval bust portrait (caricature) of a monk inscribed Bonni-face. On the back wall, over Burke's head, is a framed picture of a monk standing on the shore, preaching to fishes, among which a dolphin is conspicuous. Bricks showing in irregular patches on the plastered wall heighten the impression of squalor.

Beneath the title is engraved, falsely supposed to represent Jesuit-pad driven back to his native Potatoes. See Romish Commonwealth.

Burke, for his attitude to the Catholic Relief Act which provoked the Gordon Riots, was much abused in the virulent No-Popery pamphlets which multiplied in 1780. The Romish Commonwealth was perhaps one of these. The first of many satires by Gillray and others in which Burke is dressed as a jesuit. Cf. No. 5251. For the resignation of Burke see also Nos. 6011, 6027. Grego, Gillray, p. 41.

$9 \times 12\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6027 "CRUMBS OF COMFORT".

OR—OLD-ORTHODOX, RESTORING CONSOLATION TO HIS FALLEN CHILDREN. [c. Aug. 1782]

[Gillray.]

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). The Devil stands (c.), his widespread wings stretching across the design, between Fox (l.) and Burke (r.), who kneel at his feet facing each other in profile. He is tall, stout, plainly dressed in the manner of the day, with a legal wig and bands. Horns project from his forehead, he has a small beard and moustache, and his toes, which are talons, project through his top-boots. To Fox he hands a dice-box and dice, for which Fox, hat in hand, holds out his l. hand eagerly. Fox has a fox's head, and his hair is in a pigtail queue. Burke, wearing spectacles and kneeling on one knee, holds out his hat to receive the scourge and rosary which the Devil is handing to him; in this, as in other satires, he is depicted as a concealed Roman Catholic, see No. 6026. Behind the Devil's head is a shaded circle or dark halo; clouds form the background, suggesting that the figures are on a mountain top. One of many satires on the resignation of Fox, see No. 6010, &c., and Burke, see Nos. 6011, 6026. Grego, Gillray, p. 41.

8 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 12 $\frac{11}{16}$ in.

6028 DATE OBOLUM BELISARIO.

J. S. f. [Sayers.]

Published 24th August 1782 by Charles Bretherton New Bond Street

Engraving. Colonel Barré stands outside a gate in a high brick wall. Shelburne (r.) stands, half within, half outside the gate, his l. foot on the outside; he has a cynically complacent smile and is putting into Barré's l. hand a paper inscribed Pension 3000£ p^r Ann. Barré, who wears a coat with military facings and half-boots, holds out his cockaded hat in his r. hand as if asking for alms. Beneath the design is engraved:

*Rome's Veteran fought her rebel Foes
And thrice her Empire saved
Yet thro' her Streets bow'd down with Woes
An humble pittance craved.*

*Our Soldier fought a better Fight
Political Contention
And grateful Ministers requite
His service with a Pension.*

Shelburne had obtained for Barré a pension of £3,200 a year, which only became known when the death of Rockingham broke up the Ministry, when Barré himself obtained the lucrative post of paymaster-general. This was attacked in the House of Commons and defended by Barré in a speech which doubtless suggested the title of the print,¹ see Parl. Hist. xxiii. 153 ff.; it was regarded as scandalous and contributed to the unpopularity of the new Ministry. Walpole, Last Journals, ii. 456-7; Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 360 ff.; Fitzmaurice, Shelburne, 1912, ii, p. 156 f. See also Nos. 6011, 6032. For Shelburne as the successful conspirator see No. 6018, &c.

12 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{16}$ in.

¹ The story that Belisarius was blinded and reduced to beggary is a medieval legend, appearing, perhaps for the first time, in the Chiliads of Tzetzes.

6029 THE HABEAS CORPUS, OR THE WILD GEESE FLYING AWAY WITH FOX TO AMERICA. [No. 9]

Pub^d by J. Barrow August. 27. 1782. N^o 84. Dorset Street, Salisbury Court Fleet Street.

Engraving. A flight of wild geese flying diagonally upwards across the print from r. to l.; a ribbon intertwined with the birds is tied to the hind-legs of a fox, whose fore-paws are just leaving the ground, as he is borne away by the geese in their flight. The fox (Charles Fox) whose head is in the lower r. corner of the print is saying, I hope they will bear me safe to the dear Independent Congress. Above his head on the branch of a small tree sits a magpie, saying Farewell Brother Chatter.

From the beak of each goose issues an inscribed label. The leader of the flight says, To America he shall go for his heart is there. The others say: He is fitter to sit in Congress than in a British Parliament; My advice is to drop him in the Atlantic; How jovial he will be with Congress; Let us pity him, tho' he is a fox in form he is a great Goose in Policy; He bids fairer now to be the man in the moon than The Man of the People; We should have done this seven years ago.

Behind a straight margin of grass is the sea, above which the birds are flying; on it are two ships flying the British flag, one of which is firing her guns; farther off (l.) is a third ship.

Fox and Shelburne differed on the policy of peace negotiations: Fox wished to acknowledge at once the independence of America, Shelburne wished to defer this acknowledgement in order to use it in bargaining with France. Camb. Hist. of the Brit. Empire, i. 772 ff. Fox's geese in satire are generally electors of Westminster or other persons beguiled by him, see No. 5843, &c. Belongs to the same series as Nos. 6023, 6039 by the same artist.

8½ × 13¼ in.

6030 THE GHOST OF TYRIE. [n.d. After Aug. 24, 1782]

Published as the Act Directs by C. Westenholt N^o. 34 Church Street, Soho.

Engraving (coloured impression). The ghost of Tyrie (l.), holding up a halter, appears to Fox (r.), who raises his hand in horror. Tyrie, wearing a shroud, stands among clouds, surrounded by rays of light; he says to Fox, Deceitful Wretch remember my End & Repent. Fox says, Why do you shake your gory locks at me you cannot say I did it.

On the wall which forms the background of the design is an oval mirror with a candle sconce, beneath it is a marble shelf supported by a carved bracket on which are an ink-pot, pen, and a paper inscribed Insolvent Act. Behind Fox (r.) is a door. Fox is plainly dressed, his hair hanging loose except for a ribbon confining it at the neck.

Tyrie was tried at Winchester, 10 Aug. 1782, for sending naval intelligence to France and executed at Portsmouth on 24 Aug. According to a paragraph in the Morning Chronicle, 4 Sept. 1782, before his execution he sent an offer to the Secretary of State 'to discover a person in an elevated line of life who is caressed by the people of this country, whose connections and situation enable him to give our enemies the best information . . .'

Tyrie had become bankrupt before he procured a place in the Navy Office at Portsmouth.

Fox's supposed relations with Tyrie were one of the canards of the Westminster election, see 'Queries to the late Man of the People', a squib reprinted in The History of the Westminster Election, 1784, p. 93.

$6\frac{1}{16} \times 9\frac{1}{16}$ in.

6031 SCENE LE VROG HOUSE.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d Sep^r 3^d 1782. by E. D'Achery St^r James's Street

Engraving. Rodney (r.) stands holding an ensign flag, looking towards three French Admirals in a state of humiliation. Their names are indicated by numbers referring to notes below the design. (1) Rodney (Admiral Ro . . . y) is taking a pinch of snuff with a fastidious air, saying, Damn these stinking Dogs! brought him to Stool by G—d. (2) De Grasse is crouching down, his hands on his knees, saying, Cest Matheureux [sic], but we do dese tings wit a good grace. (3) Vadruwil, i.e. de Vaudreuil, de Grasse's second in command, who took command of the French fleet on the surrender of de Grasse, a fat man, kneels behind de Grasse, holds a chamber-pot which de Grasse is using, and saying, Il faut Vassister [sic] dans ses Mandéuvres. (4) Bougainville (l.) runs off in profile to the l., holding out a snuff-box and taking a pinch of snuff, saying, Ma foi me only run way to avoid de Stink! De Bougainville, one of Montcalm's generals in 1759, served as a rear-admiral in the American war, first under d'Estaing, then under de Grasse. The French flag lies on the ground at Rodney's feet, de Grasse and de Vaudreuil stand and kneel upon it. For Rodney's victory on 12 Apr. 1782 see No. 5991, &c.

$8\frac{3}{8} \times 12\frac{1}{16}$ in.

Also a coloured impression in 'Caricatures' IV, p. 22. B.M.L. Tab. 524.

6032 JOVE IN HIS CHAIR.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d Sep^r 11th 1782 by E. D'Achery St^r James's Street

Engraving. Shelburne, in a triumphal car, drawn (l. to r.) by two decrepit asses, with the heads of Dunning (Baron Ashburton) and General Conway. He holds reins in his l. hand, which his two steeds hold in their mouths; in his r. he flourishes a whip. He is saying, with a subtly complacent smile,

In my presence, scoundrel Peasants Shall not call their Souls their own!

Under his feet is Britannia's shield; a fleur-de-lys as a crest decorates the side of the car. His head is irradiated. At the back of the car, as a footman, stands William Pitt, very young, and holding up in his l. hand a 'horn book' with the alphabet to indicate his extreme youth. Under his r. arm are two rolled documents inscribed [Chan]cellor of Excheq^r and Ways & Means. Pitt was Chancellor of the Exchequer in the new Ministry, see Nos. 6023, 6044. In front of the asses, as a running footman, runs Col. Barré with a melancholy expression. In his r. hand is a money-bag inscribed 3000£ p^r Ann^m, indicating the pension which caused so great a scandal, see No. 6028. The wings of Mercury are attached to his hat and shoes; in his

r. hand he holds the staff carried by running footmen, with the egg-shaped top which held the egg for the runner's sustenance.

One of several satires on Shelburne as a triumphant conspirator, see No. 6018, &c.; he is accompanied by his chief supporters against the attacks of the Portland or Foxite whigs. See Fitzmaurice, Shelburne, 1912, ii, pp. 155 ff. Grego, Gillray, p. 42.

9 × 13 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6033 ECCE!

R. F. inv^t H. Hyder sculp^t. [?Gillray].

Printed as the Act directs Oct^r 1st 1782 by S. Hooper corner of Arundel Street Strand.

Engraving. Frontispiece from Beauties of Administration, a Poem . . . (B.M.L. 644. k. 21/17). A group of half-length figures in an oval. George III (l.), looking to the l., and downwards, with a melancholy expression, supporting his head on his r. hand, in which is a handkerchief. Lord North, in profile to the l., with an expression of great distress, tries to comfort him; his r. arm is over the king's shoulders, handing him a paper, Fresh Supplies; his l. hand holds that of the king. Over the king's head flies an evil spirit, a hag with serpents in her hair and bat's wings; she is 'Corruption', and is removing the crown from his head. Immediately behind the king, and looking upwards over the king's shoulder with an expression of malign pleasure, is a head wearing a Scots cap. The verses show that this is Bute though it has no resemblance to him. Lord Amherst looks smiling over North's shoulder. Behind North (r.) is Lord George Germain (Sackville), who turns round frowning towards Sandwich, who leans on his shoulder with a smile. Above and behind Germain and Sandwich three men (r.) look down towards the king with sinister smiles, they are (l. to r.) Bathurst (in profile), the Duke of Grafton, and Rigby (in profile). Behind their heads is a curtain. Beneath the title is engraved, "Mollia cum Duris, Sine pondere habentia pondus."

The author (p. ii, n.) explains that he gave directions to have the head of a satyr placed next that of Rigby, and next that, the head of an old woman: 'The Draughtsman in some measure defeated my scheme, introducing instead of them (by mistake) the Heads of L—d B—th—rst, and His Grace the D— of Gr—ft—on.' See also No. 6121 where the verses are quoted.

Resembles the manner of Gillray, cf. the signature of No. 6044.

6 $\frac{3}{16}$ × 7 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6034 GEORG AUGUST ELLIOT.

Corbutt [?R. Purcell] delin. [Will sc.]. Se vend chez J. M. Will à Augsburg.

London: Publish'd as the Act directs, 1782 by John Morris, Rathbone Place.

Mezzotint. One of a series, see No. 5290. T.Q.L. portrait of a military officer standing with his r. hand on the muzzle of a cannon, pointing with his l. to the bombardment of Gibraltar, but looking in the opposite direction with a distressed expression. Ships are firing shells against the fortress (r.), the trajectories showing that all reach the rock.

Probably a fictitious portrait of General Eliott, afterwards Lord Heath-field, prepared when the fall of Gibraltar was confidently anticipated: it was actually represented on the stage in Paris, while the ladies had Gibraltar fans which fell to pieces. Grafton, Autobiography, 1898, p. 341. The print depicts the bombardment by the (supposed) gun-proof floating batteries and gunboats from which so much was expected, see No. 6025. For the actual attack see Nos. 6035-8.

J. M. Will or Wille, engraver as well as print-publisher, was a copyist of portraits, and this plate is attributed to him by Füssli, Kunstler Lexicon, 1816, p. 5098, so that he is probably the engraver of the other Augsburg copies of plates in this series. For 'Corbutt' cf. Nos. 5405, 5406.

$13\frac{1}{8} \times 9\frac{5}{8}$ in.

A French print anticipating the fall of Gibraltar is No. 1180 in the Collection de Vinck: Siège mémorable de Gibraltar, par Terre et par Mer, par les Armées combinées de France et d'Espagne, sous les ordres de M. le duc de Crillon. . . . The Comte d'Artois, the Duc de Crillon, the Duc de Bourbon and two other personages are represented on horseback in the foreground. See No. 6036.

6035 GOV^R ELLIOT GIVING THE SPANIARDS A DOSE OF HOT BALLS FOR THEIR BETTER DIGESTION, OR PRINCE NASSAU IN A NASTY PREDICAMENT SHEERING OF IN A OPEN BOAT HAVING REC^D HIS BELLY FULL OF ENGLISH PILLS.

[T. Colley.]

Pub. by T. Colley Oct. 15. 1782 London

Engraving. A rowing boat is being rowed from r. to l. under a rain of cannon-balls, inscribed Red Hot, red, and hot, which are descending from Gibraltar, a fort indicated in the distance and in the upper r. corner of the print, where a British flag is flying, and small figures are waving their arms, shouting Huzza. In the boat are figures representing commanders of the allied fleet which bombarded Gibraltar on 13 Sept. The officer seated at the stern is leaning forward, vomiting cannon-balls. The title indicates that he is William V, the Prince of Orange and of Nassau, the Stadtholder of the United Provinces, who was in command of the battering ship Talla Piedra, see No. 6038. Facing him sits a French officer with an enormous bag-wig; he is holding up a cross and rosary in both hands in an attitude of prayer, saying, mon petit D—u. He is perhaps intended for the Comte d'Artois. Behind him sit three men rowing, with expressions of distress. All the figures are caricatured with an effective naïveté. In the water in front of the boat the heads of three drowning men appear. Between the boat and Gibraltar two vessels in flames inscribed Gun Boats are foundering and minute figures are indicated in the water.

A representation of the great French and Spanish bombardment of Gibraltar from land-batteries, floating batteries, and gunboats supported by the combined fleet on 13 Sept. 1782, which the allies believed irresistible; it was completely defeated by cannonades of red-hot shot from Gibraltar. Drinkwater, History of the late Siege of Gibraltar, 1785, pp. 288 ff. See also Nos. 6025, 6034, 6036, 6037, 6038.

There is a plate of Eliott directing the cannonade in E. Barnard's History of England, n.d., c. 1791. (B.M.L. 9502, i. 6.)

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 12$ in.

6036 THE BUM-BARDMENT OF GIBRALTER, OR F—T—G
AGAINST THUNDER.

T. Colley fecit. [sic]

London Pub by W. Holland N 50 Oxford Street Sold by W. Humphrey 227 Strand London [c. Oct. 1782]

Engraving (coloured impression). From Gibraltar (l.), represented by a stone fort built on a rock, five cannon fire balls at four figures (r.) crouching on hands and knees, who are ejecting blasts at the fort from their bare posteriors. These four figures are in a row and are dressed in the manner of French and Spanish officers in English caricature. The front figure, a Frenchman, is C. Artois, or the Comte d'Artois, the third is D. Crillon, or Duc de Crillon, the second and fourth are Spaniards. They are on the sea-shore. At sea (r.) are two of the 'gun-boats' of the allied fleet, with furled sails. Beneath the design is engraved:

*'Gainst Elliot the French, & the Spaniards, Combin'd
Are Throwing their Stink Pots you see from behind
That the Garrison's Safe you must own is no Wonder
For all that they do is but F—t—g at Thunder.*

The Bourbon royal princes and the Stadtholder of the United Provinces were present at the bombardment of Gibraltar, since its fall was confidently expected. See Nos. 6034, 6035, &c.

$5\frac{7}{16} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6037 OH! LORD, HOWE—THEY RUN OR JACK ENGLISH
CLEARING THE GANGWAY BEFORE GIBRALTER.

[T. Colley.]

Pub: by T: Colley Nov. 2 1782 London.

Engraving (coloured impression). A stalwart English sailor (r.) in profile to the l. firing a blunderbuss at figures representing France and Spain. Strapped to his back is an enormous pack inscribed Provisions for brave Elliot. In his hat is an Ensign flag; he wears trousers and a cutlass. His blunderbuss is emitting a cannon-ball as well as much fire and smoke. Spain, a Spanish flag in his hat, has fallen to the ground, and is holding a blunderbuss in his l. hand. France, behind Spain, is running away, his blunderbuss, held over his l. shoulder, is going off and ejecting a cannon-ball in the direction of 'Jack English'. His hat, in which is a French flag, flies into the air. In the distance a naval engagement is in progress; a ship flying the British flag, is sinking one of the enemy.

This represents the breaking of the blockade of Gibraltar by Lord Howe after outmanœuvring the allied fleet under Cordova. The combined fleet, though greatly superior to that of Howe, did not accept his challenge on 20 Oct., and there was only a short cannonade from the enemy, who withdrew, making no attempt to come to close quarters. Gibraltar was now well provisioned and secure and opened its gates on 6 Feb. 1783 on news of the signing of the peace. For the failure of the allied bombardment see Nos. 6035, 6036.

$5\frac{5}{8} \times 9$ in.

6038 PRINCE STADHOLD—R RESUMING HIS DELIBERATION.

[T. Colley.]

Pub. by T. Colley Oct 24. 1782 London

Engraving. The figure of a man dressed partly as the Dutchman of English caricature, but wearing laced coat, ruffled shirt, and a star. He is holding a sheathed sword which rests against his shoulder, hilt upwards; with his l. hand he is scratching his head; he puts out the tip of his tongue, with an expression of dismayed perplexity. His breeches pockets, marked M T (empty), are inside out.

A crude representation of William V, Stadtholder of the United Provinces, see No. 6035. Four labels project into the design from the r. and l. margins containing words as if spoken by persons outside the design: Your settlements in the East are taken by the English; your seamen will not fight with the french; Your fleet is now ready but dare not sail for the English; we have lost our Trade. At his feet is a ring of papers inscribed: America can't pay her Debts; French Politics Da—'d; Ville de Parris for that; English navy Encreas'd; Gibraltar not taken; Spain in the Dumps; Holland Sick.

A satire on the irresolution and delay characteristic of William V and of Dutch policy. Cf. Van Loon, Fall of the Dutch Republic, p. 164 f. Trincomalee and Negatapatam had been taken from the Dutch. See also No. 6292. For the Ville de Paris see No. 5991, &c.

6 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{13}{16}$ in.

6039 THE AMERICAN RATTLESNAKE PRESENTING MONSIEUR HIS ALLY A DISH OF FROGS. N^o 10.

Pub^d by J. Barrow, Nov^r 8. 1782. N^o 84 Dorset Street, Salisbury Court, Fleet Street.

Engraving. A large snake representing America, its head erect, addresses France (r.), a man standing in profile to the l., dressed as French petit-maitre with high toupet-wig, black bag and solitaire, laced suit, sword and chapeau-bras. Between the two stands a circular basket full of frogs; behind the snake (l.) is a small pond in which frogs are swimming, inscribed, A Fish pond for Frenchmen. The snake is saying,

*Monsieur be pleas'd to accept the frogs
I just have killed them in the Bogs.*

Monsieur answers, holding out his r. hand,

*I give you thanks my good Ally,
Some will make Soup the rest a Fry.*

Beneath the design is engraved:

*O Britons be wise
And part these Allies,
Or drive them both into the Bogs;
I think it is fit
They both should submit
To Old England, or live upon Frogs.*

N.B. The Rattlesnake is a Character chosen by America.

Separate peace negotiations with America were going on at this time, and a preliminary treaty, not communicated to France, was signed on 30 Nov. See No. 6009. For the rattlesnake as the emblem of America see Nos. 5336, 5973, 6190. Belongs to the same series as Nos. 6023, 6029. $7\frac{11}{16} \times 13\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6040 LABOUR IN VAIN OR LET THEM TUG AND BE DA—ND

[T. Colley.]

Pub. by T. Colley Novr 27. 1782. Pub. as the Act directs Nov: 27. 1782 by T. Colley. London. [sic.]

Engraving. England, on one side of a channel of water, is being tugged at by her four enemies, who are pulling at ropes attached by grappling-hooks to the ground on the English side of the water. England (l.) is represented by Neptune, the British lion, Britannia, and a sailor. The sailor (l.), in short jacket and striped trousers, stands with his l. hand on Britannia's shoulder, saying with a grin, avast heaving. Britannia is seated with her shield and spear; she smiles, saying, ha ha ha. Neptune with his trident, seated on a culvert from which water is gushing, smiles and points derisively across the water at the efforts of England's enemies. Between him and Britannia sits the British lion, also grinning. This piece of land, jutting into the sea is inscribed England. England's enemies (r.) lean backwards hauling at taut ropes, all, except France, open-mouthed as if singing a chanty. In the foreground is Holland, a stout plainly-dressed Dutchman. Next is France, a lean fop, his knees bent, holding a rope. Spain, taller and stouter, stands behind him holding him round the waist and shouting. Next is America, a scantily draped woman, with a feather head-dress and sandals holding a tomahawk as well as her rope. In the background is the sea.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*Four Foes to old England have Wickedly Join'd
To run with old England Away
Old Neptune declares it is not to his mind
And Brittania cries Stay you fools Stay*

*You may tug, & may tug, & strive all that you can
And put your selves into great pain
While Freedom & Honour is fixt on our Plan
You will find it all Labour in Vain.*

See also No. 6051. For the naval successes of 1782 see Nos. 5991, 6034-8, &c.

$7\frac{7}{16} \times 13\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6041 A COURT MARTIAL,—OR—A SCENE AT THE HORSE GUARDS.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d Dec^r 5th 1782, by E. D'Achery St James's St

Engraving. The court-martial on Lieut.-General James Murray (Nov.—Jan. 1782-3) on charges brought against him by his second-in-command, Lieut.-General Sir William Draper, for conduct in Minorca, before, during, and after the siege. A number of officers seated on both sides of a large table; at the head, and facing the spectators, is the Judge-Advocate-General who presided at the trial, Sir Charles Gould; above his head is drawn a pair of evenly balanced scales, inscribed Sterling. He looks towards a witness (r.) who is speaking. On the r. behind a barrier and raised above the level of the Court are Murray, who clutches the barrier with an anxious expression, and two counsel (?), Draper and four witnesses or spectators; a partition divides Murray and his counsel from the others. Above Murray's head is inscribed Matrimony. Draper wearing his ribbon and star (he was made K.B. in 1764) stands with both hands on the barrier with a composed expression. On his r. is a lean and ugly man speaking and gesticulating. All the men seated at the table are in uniform except Gould. On Gould's r. is an officer wearing a ribbon, evidently General Sir George Howard, K.B., the senior officer there. On Howard's r. and on the l. side of the table sit two officers looking at a map, one wearing glasses is inscribed Yankee Doodle; he is probably Lieut.-General Thomas Gage, ex-Governor of Massachusetts. The two officers on the l. of the table lean against each other, asleep, and are inscribed Capacity. Six officers on the r. of the table are in attitudes varying from sound sleep, head and arms on table, to rapt attention. Over one sleeper is inscribed Amen!!!, over another is a hand with a pointing finger and the word Attention. On the l. of the Court, behind a barrier, two men write at a raised desk, one perhaps Gurney, the famous shorthand writer who transcribed the proceedings. Papers, pens, and inkstands are scattered on the table. Beneath the title is engraved Humbly dedicated to the Duc de Crillon.

Murray was honourably acquitted of all but two (and these trivial) of the twenty-nine counts; the charges were recognized as the result of personal rancour on Draper's part. The surrender of Minorca (5 Feb. 1782) had been due to the ravages of scurvy in the small garrison. The dedication is an allusion to a bribe of a million sterling secretly offered to Murray by de Crillon, who commanded the blockading force of 16,000 French and Spaniards, and to its rejection. The names of the court—two generals, thirteen lieutenant-generals, and two major-generals—are given in the short-hand report of the trial (B.M.L. 112. e. 2.)

The design is freely drawn in the manner of a sketch from life. It is consistent with newspaper accounts of the trial which describe Murray as 'very much broke' while Draper looked 'exceedingly well and in the flower of his age, his star was very conspicuous and his arm always carefully disposed so as never to eclipse it' (D.N.B.). For a portrait of Murray probably sketched at the trial see No. 6097.

$8\frac{7}{16} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6042 RAISING THE ROYAL GEORGE.

Boreas designd it.

twitcher. sculp^t.

Publish^d as the act directs. Decem^{br} 5. 1782. by J. Langham, print Coulourer N 84 Dorset Street. &c. Sold at the print and bookseller the Corner of the Piazza^s Covent Garden.

Engraving. Four men stand in an open boat, each tugging at a rope attached to the king, whose hands and crowned head appear above the water. A Diving Bell with the head of a judge floats behind the king, attached to the boat by a slack rope. On the shore (r.) stand two men looking at the boat; one is Fox with a fox's head, the other Burke. The stern of the boat (l.) is inscribed Victory's Boat. Holding the tiller and looking over his l. shoulder with a frown is Keppel, saying, Yeo Oh;¹ next him, one foot on the gunwale of the boat, and pulling his rope with both hands, is Shelburne, saying, I Oh. Next him is Dunning (Ashburton) in legal gown and bands; he turns his head to Shelburne saying, Hum Oh (cf. Nos. 6091, 6173). On the r. of the boat, and leaning over to the r., one foot on the gunwale, is the Duke of Richmond. He looks down at the judge in the diving-bell (probably Thurlow) saying, Never fear to dive my Lord, that's Born to be hang'd will never be Drown'd. The Judge says I'll go down because I am a Judge. Fox, who stands with his hands in his pockets, says,

As malignida [Shelburne] now does reign, all their labour is in vain.

Burke, pointing at the boat, says,

if Boreas was here he woul'd much Swell and prevent the effects of the Diving Bell.

The title of this rather confused satire on the political situation is an allusion to the loss of the Royal George with Kempfenfeldt and about 1,000 persons on 29 Aug. 1782. The meaning appears to be that Shelburne and his Ministry are endeavouring to restore the royal influence which the Rockingham Ministry, and especially Fox, had aimed at destroying, thus reverting to the policy of North and Sandwich.

Reissued 21 Jan. 1783.

9 × 13 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6043 TALEO, OR THE ROYAL SPORTSMAN, RUNNING DOWN
THE ENEMIES OF GREAT BRITAIN.

[T. Colley.]

Pub. by T: Colley Decr 9. 1782 London

Engraving. George III, on horseback, hunting with dogs whose names are those of admirals, the quarry being Spain, France, and Holland. The king (l.) on a galloping horse in profile to the r. leans forward holding out his whip, and saying with a stern expression, Taleo. Taleo. Taleo. o. o. o. Just in front of him Holland, a stout Dutchman, lies on his back, his feet in the air, his hands clasped shouting for mercy; coins are falling from his pocket. He is being worried by a dog with a collar inscribed Park[er] an allusion to the battle of the Dogger Bank, 3 Aug. 1781, see No. 5848. On the king's r. run two dogs. How in front (Admiral Lord Howe who had recently relieved Gibraltar, see No. 6037); behind and partly cut off by the l. margin of the print is Pigot, the admiral who was sent out to supersede Rodney, see No. 5996, &c. In front of Holland is a gate over which France (or the King of France) is leaping, his arms outstretched; his leg is gripped by a dog named Rodney, in allusion to the battle of the Saints, see No. 5991, &c. France wears a crown, a ribbon and star, large bag-wig and embroidered suit. On the farther side of the gate is Spain (or the King of Spain) wearing a crown and cloak, shouting, his hands held up in alarm. He is being worried by a dog whose collar is inscribed Elliot, in allusion to the defence of ¹ On the print in an old hand is written 'Lord Sandwich'. But he resembles Keppel, not Sandwich, who moreover could scarcely be associated with the other three in the boat, all members of Shelburne's Ministry.

Gibraltar, see No. 6035, &c. Across the top of the design is engraved Lewis Baboon, taking a flying leap.

The association of Pigot and Rodney illustrates the absence of political rancour characteristic of Colley's work.

7 × 12¼ in.

6044 "ASIDE HE TURN'D FOR ENVY, YET WITH JEALOUS LEER MALIGN, EYD THEM ASKANCE".

S. B. inv^t E: Hyder sculp^t [Gillray]

Pub^d Dec^r 12th 1782, by H. Humphrey New Bond Street.

Engraving. Design in an oval. A woodland scene; Shelburne and Pitt seated side by side at a rectangular table (l.) draped with a cloth on which are coins and money bags. Fox (r.) stands aloof scowling towards them over his r. shoulder, his hands thrust in his breeches pockets. Shelburne looks at Fox with a complacent smile, he holds Pitt's arm. Pitt holds a money-bag and looks at Shelburne with a sly smile.

Pitt was Chancellor of the Exchequer in Shelburne's ministry, see Nos. 6023, 6032. The first satire in the collection pointing directly to the rivalry between Pitt and Fox, but cf. No. 6023. For other applications of 'Paradise Lost' to Fox's exclusion from office, see Nos. 6011, 6012. For his resignation see No. 6010, &c. Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830. Grego, Gillray, pp. 42-3.

7 × 9½ in.

6045 [THE SHELL-BORN JES—T¹]

Ignatius Loyala Inv^t Pub^d Dec^r 18th 1782. K

Engraving. Shelburne, dressed as a monk but wearing a wig, stands in profile to the l., his mouth open as if making a speech, one hand on his heart; he has an alert, propitiatory smile. In his l. hand is a rolled document, The Speech. Beneath his feet is etched (as is the publication line) He wou'd & he wou'd not &c. In the distance is the sea with the sun, inscribed Poor Old England, sinking below the horizon.

The old name of Malagrida the Jesuit, given in 1767, was used for Shelburne after he succeeded Rockingham as First Lord of the Treasury, see No. 4917 and cf. No. 6018, &c. 'The speech' is probably that of 13 Dec. 1782 when he refused to answer questions on the exact interpretation of the independence of America in the provisional Treaty. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 305 ff. Cf. also the famous lines on Shelburne's evasive speeches in The Rolliad, quoted Rosebery, Life of Pitt, p. 51. By the same artist as Nos. 5958, 5975.

7½ × 5¼ in. (pl.).

6046 [SANDWICH AND SACKVILLE AT THE BAR.] [?1782]

Engraving. A slight sketch of two men standing at a spiked semicircular bar before a judge. Only the upper part of the figures is drawn. The culprits stand in profile to the r., the nearer resembles Sandwich, the musical score hanging from his pocket confirms the identification. His companion is probably Lord George Germain (cr. Lord Sackville, 11 Feb. 1782).

¹ Written on the back in Miss Banks's hand.

Behind and above the two men hovers Justice, threatening them with a drawn sword and holding up a pair of scales, one of which is weighed down by a label inscribed Crimes. The judge, whose face is hidden by his wig, also holds up a pair of scales, one of which is weighed down by a label inscribed 30,000. He is identified by Mr. Hawkins as Lord Loughborough, but Thurlow would seem more probable. According to a pencil note this is a first state with only two figures at the bar; the third would almost certainly be North.

North, Sandwich, and Germain had frequently been threatened with impeachment, and the new Ministry were blamed, e.g. by Walpole, for failing to attempt to punish them. Walpole attributes their escape to Shelburne, 'who had devoted himself to the king', and to Thurlow, 'whom they had pardoned and adopted'. Last Journals, 1910, ii. 430. Burke said in the House of Commons on 26 April 1786, that he had drawn up seven distinct articles of impeachment, but had been induced by Rockingham to give up the project. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iv. 311. Cf. Nos. 5660, 5661, 5964, 5969, &c.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6047 VELUTI IN SPECULUM.

[?1782]

Engraving. The Devil (r.) supports a large mirror which rests on the floor, and invites a number of military officers to look at the reflections of themselves. The foremost is Lord Amherst, who as commander-in-chief had been adviser to the Government on the American War. He advances with a gesture and smirk of satisfaction. Behind is an officer who frowns, holding his chin; he resembles General Murray, see No. 6041. Behind him Burgoyne's profile is recognizable. There are four other officers, a very small man with a riding-cane under his arm, looking with pleased satisfaction at the mirror, is perhaps Tarleton, see Nos. 6085, 6116. The other three cannot be identified, they are perhaps Cornwallis, Clinton, and Sir William Howe. On the wall are two maps: one, the plan of a fort inscribed Fort St. Philip, points to the loss of Minorca in Feb. 1782; the other, a map of America with Montreal in the south, implies that America has been turned upside down. The mirror is surmounted by a trophy of flags, a drum, a helmet, &c.

A satire on the military command during the American War. It is drawn with freedom and expressiveness.

$4\frac{1}{4} \times 6$ in.

6048 LE LORD CORNWALIS SORTANT DES CAROLINES APRÉS

Y AVOIR ÉTÉ LONGTEMPS RESSÉRÉ. [After February 1782]

LE LORD RAWDON ARRIVANT DES CAROLINES.

Engraving. Two caricature portraits on one plate. They are numbers 9 and 10 in a series of twelve caricature portraits called Collection des Grands Hommes qui se sont le plus distingués dans la Marine Anglaise, with the imprint of Esnauts et Rapilly of Paris; Van Stolk, No. 4486. For 11 and 12 see No. 6049. The first eight (not in the B.M. collection) are Képpel au Conseil de Guerre, Hugues Paliser accusant Képpel [see Nos. 5536, 5537], Lamiral Graves cherchant Hoode, Jonsthone a San jago [see No. 5960] le Commodore Stewart hélant la flotte Hollandaise, Le Lord Sandwick

Premier Lord de L'amirauté, Le G^{al} Murray Voyant débarquer Les Espagnols à Mahon [see No. 6041], Le Colonel Fergusson revenant de Tabago [taken by de Bouillé 2 June 1781].

[9] H.L. in profile to the r. with no resemblance to Lord Cornwallis. See Nos. 5855-60.

$4\frac{1}{8} \times 3\frac{1}{8}$ in.

[10] A bust-portrait in profile to the l. with no resemblance to Lord Rawdon (1754-1826), afterwards Marquis of Hastings. Rawdon was obliged to leave America for reasons of health in the summer of 1781 and the vessel in which he sailed was captured by a French cruiser and taken to Brest. He shortly afterwards returned to England on an exchange of prisoners.

$4\frac{1}{8} \times 3\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl. $5\frac{5}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{8}$ in.).

6049 DARBY ALLANT SE COUCHER Á PORTSMOUTH

LE LORD NORTH ATTENDANT DES NOUVELLES DE
L'AMÉRIQUE. [c. 1782]

Engraving. Nos. 11 and 12 in a French series, see No. 6048. Two caricature portraits on one plate.

[11] Head and shoulders of a man in profile to the r., wearing a night-cap and striped jacket, and resembling an old woman. It has no resemblance to Darby's engraved portrait (published 28 June 1781).

Darby was given command of the British fleet in Aug. 1780. He relieved Gibraltar Apr. 1781 and escorted convoys, but failed to take opportunities of attacking the combined French and Spanish fleet. On 6 Nov. 1781 he returned to Spithead, and never served again. He was 'a man of no distinction and very slender abilities', J. K. Laughton in D.N.B. See James, The British Navy in Adversity, pp. 246-7, 302 ff.

$4 \times 4\frac{1}{8}$ in.

[12] 'Lord North' (H.L.) seated, in profile to the l. wearing a round hat. He has a long pointed nose and is grotesquely unlike North.

$4 \times 3\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl. $5\frac{5}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{16}$ in.).

6050 RETALIATION OR STATE OF NATIONS.

Pub^d 1782 by Humphrey Bond Str:

Engraving. Outside a small cottage or summer-house a bee-hive stands on a table. Two men are being attacked by bees: one lies on his back waving his arms and legs, the other is behind him, running away and beating off the insects which beset him. Behind (r.) a man with a broom is coming to the rescue, but is about to be attacked himself.

Beside the cottage (l.) a man (or woman), smoking a pipe, is squatting down and excreting. From a window just above him, a man leans out, vomiting on the head of the figure beneath. A figure seated on the roof is urinating on the head of the man at the window.

The application of this satire to the international situation is general rather than precise. The coarseness of the subject is mitigated by the small scale and a sketchy treatment.

$3\frac{1}{16} \times 4\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6051 THE BELLIGERENT PLENIPO'S

T: Colley Fec'

[c. Dec. 1782]

Sold by W Humphrey 227 Strand, London.

Engraving. A figure representing each of the five powers between whom peace negotiations were going on stands each on a little island or peninsula of turf behind which is the sea. On the extreme l. George III stands holding the ensign flag. He is wearing half a crown and turns his head in profile to the r., saying with an angry expression, I give them Independence. At his feet lie a purse, an arm, and a foot, representing spoil taken by England from the other belligerents. Next him is France, wearing a crown, holding the French flag, with his l. arm (the arm which lies at the feet of George III) cut off above the elbow and dripping with blood. He is saying, I must have Canada and Grenada for my Arm.

Next, and in the centre, is Holland, holding a flag with three horizontal stripes (that of the Stadtholder), the r. foot amputated above the ankle, a crutch under his r. arm. He is weeping and holds a large spotted handkerchief to his eyes, his pockets being inside out, to show the impoverishment caused by the war to Holland. He says, I insist on Eustatia & Ceylon for my foot. Next him is Spain, with the Spanish flag, holding up both arms, he waves a crutch held in his r. hand, and stands on his r. leg, raising in the air a wooden leg. He says, By Saint Anthony I must have Gibraltar for my Leg. America, a scantily draped woman wearing a feather head-dress, holds in her r. hand the striped American flag, the cap of liberty on the flag-staff. She clasps to her breast the other half of George III's crown, and says, I have got all I wanted Empire! She is smiling, in contrast with the melancholy expression of the other figures. The little island on which she stands is fringed by miniature pine-trees. On clouds in the centre of the design, above the flags held by France and Holland, reclines Hibernia wearing a spiky coronet, holding a harp. She is saying, I deny all foreign jurisdictions & will roast my own potatoes.

Peace negotiations had been going on actively since March. On 30 Nov. 1782 Preliminary Articles were signed at Paris between England and America, with a reservation intended to obscure the breach of the Treaty of Alliance between France and America, that peace was not to be concluded till terms were agreed upon between France and Great Britain. The naval successes of 1782 are reflected in this print, which should be contrasted with No. 5959, see also No. 6040. For Ireland see Nos. 6002, 6003. The French of course made no claim to Canada, and St. Eustatius and Trinkomali had been recaptured by the French, see p. 559, No. 6292. $8\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6052-6077

A series of W.L. portraits, slightly caricatured, by James Sayers, apparently begun in connexion with the ministerial changes of Mar. 1782. The changes were accompanied by changes of costume on which these portraits are probably comments, see Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 269-70. See also Nos. 5984-6, 6256.

6052 [RICHARD RIGBY.]

ƒ S ff

Published 6th April 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Rigby, standing in profile to the l. holding out his hat in his r.

hand, as if speaking in the House of Commons, his l. hand on the hilt of his sword. For Rigby's part in the political manœuvres of Dec. 1781 to get rid of Sandwich and Germain, and so lessen the unpopularity of the Ministry, see Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 390, 393. Burke succeeded him in April as Paymaster-General. See No. 5961.

$6\frac{15}{16} \times 4\frac{7}{16}$ in. (pl.).

6053 [LORD AMHERST.]

J S Published 6 April 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Amherst standing in profile to the l. He is in uniform and wears his ribbon of the Bath. He is smiling; his l. hand rests on his sword. At the change of ministry General Conway succeeded him as Commander-in-Chief.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6054 VOX POPULI.

J S ff

Published 6th April 1782 C Bretherton

Engraving. Fox, standing, almost full-face, directed to l., in the attitude rather of a speaker on the hustings than in parliament, his fists clenched, r. arm raised, l. arm akimbo, feet wide apart.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6055 [EDMUND BURKE.]

J S f

published 6th April 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Burke making a speech. He stands in profile to the l., wearing spectacles. His r. arm is extended, his hand grasping a paper on which is etched Plan Econ, in allusion to his Bill for Economical Reform. His l. hand, holding his hat, is behind his back. Beneath is etched:

*For Rhetoric he could not ope
His Mouth but out there flew a Trope*

Reproduced, A. S. Turberville, Men and Manners in the Eighteenth Century, 1926, p. 272.

$6\frac{15}{16} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6056 [BAMBER GASCOYNE.]

J S ff

published 6th April 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Portrait of Bamber Gascoyne. A stout, plainly dressed man wearing a hat and a buttoned-up coat; he stands almost full-face, his hands in his coat pockets.

Gascoyne (1725-91), M.P. for Truro, was a supporter of North, and lost his post as a Lord of the Admiralty on the fall of North's Ministry.

He was very wealthy, son of Sir Crisp Gascoyne, the Lord Mayor who is remembered for the part he took in the case of Elizabeth Canning in 1753. See No. 6021.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ in. (pl.).

6057 [HENRY DUNDAS.]

JS ff

published 6th April 1782 by C. Bretherton

Engraving. Dundas, the Lord Advocate of Scotland, in profile to the l., stands in the attitude of an orator, his r. arm extended, his legs apart. He wears a sword and holds his hat in his l. hand. Dundas (1742-1811), afterwards first Viscount Melville, managed to keep his place under the new Ministry. For a hostile account of his part in the ministerial changes of March 1782 see Walpole, Last Journals, ii, pp. 410, 417.

$7 \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6058 7. [EARL OF SURREY.]

JS ff

Published 14th May 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Charles Howard, 1746-1815, afterwards 11th Duke of Norfolk, styled Earl of Surrey 1777-86, known as the Jockey of Norfolk. He stands in profile to the l., holding a stick in his r. hand, his hat under his l. arm, his l. hand in his breeches pocket. He is plainly dressed and wears his own hair cut short. He was noted for the slovenliness of his dress. He became a protestant and was M.P. for Carlisle, 1780-6, being a supporter of Fox.

$7 \times 4\frac{7}{16}$ in. (pl.).

6059 8. [EARL NUGENT.]

JS ff

Published 14th May 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Portrait of Robert Craggs Nugent (1702-88), Irish peer and M.P. for St. Mawes. He stands, bending forward from the waist, his head in profile to the l., his r. hand extended, his hat in his l. hand as if speaking in the House of Commons, where he was noted for speeches in a rich brogue and for his support of every Ministry in turn. He was nicknamed 'Squire Gawkey' and was also called 'the old rat of the Constitution', see Nos. 6212, 6255, 6256. Walpole calls him a 'noisy vociferous and ridiculous Orator'. Satirical Poems by William Mason with Notes by H. Walpole, ed. Toynbee, 1926, p. 121. See Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, i. 91 ff.

$7 \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ in. (pl.).

6060 9. [DUKE OF GRAFTON.]

JS ff

Published 14th May 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Grafton, standing in profile to the l., his hands thrust into his waistcoat. He wears a bag-wig, sword, and ruffles. Grafton, who had been Lord Privy Seal in North's Ministry from June 1771 to November 1775, again became Lord Privy Seal under Rockingham, retaining office under Shelburne, whose fall was made inevitable by his resignation, 20 Feb. 1783. Autobiography of Grafton, p. 322. Fitzmaurice, Life of Shelburne, ii, pp. 245 ff. Reproduced, Turberville, Men and Manners of the Eighteenth Century, 1926, p. 261.

7 × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6061 10. [EARL OF EFFINGHAM.]

JS ff

published 14th May 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving, A portrait of Lord Effingham, standing in profile to the r., holding a long slender staff in his r. hand, a short staff in the l., the two staffs of office for which he was known as the Devil on two sticks. See No. 5995. Though he is plainly dressed, wearing his own hair, he wears a sword.

7 × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ (pl.).

6062 11. [EARL OF SHELBURNE.]

JS ff

published 14th May 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Portrait of Shelburne, standing, facing three-quarters l., his r. hand thrust under his Garter ribbon, with which (with the Dukes of Devonshire and Richmond) he had been invested on 17 Apr. His l. hand rests on his sword. He wears a bag-wig and ruffles, and has the sly, complacent smile and half-closed eyes which are conspicuous in satires of Shelburne at this time. See Nos. 6018, &c.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6063 12. [LORD NORTH.]

JS ff

published 14th May 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Portrait of North, standing in profile to the l. clutching a document in his r. hand, as if speaking in the House of Commons. Reproduced, A. S. Turberville, Men and Manners of the Eighteenth Century, 1926, p. 54, and Propylaën-Welgeschichte, ed. W. Goetz, vi, 1931, p. 460.

7 × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6064 [COLONEL BODEN.]

JS

Published 4th June 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Portrait of a stout man in profile to the l. wearing a looped hat and buttoned overcoat, his hand thrust in his coat pocket. He was not an M.P. See No. 5868.

6 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6065 GAME

Published 7th June 1782 by C. Bretherton

Engraving. Portrait of George Onslow as a cock-fighter, walking from the spectator, but turning his head in profile to the l. He wears a plain hat and coat, top-boots with spurs like those attached to the legs of game-cocks, and holds a riding-whip in his r. hand. In the foreground stands a spurred game-cock, crowing.

Colonel Onslow (1731-92), M.P. for Guildford, called little Cocking George, see Nos. 4852, 4855, was a firm supporter of North's Ministry. He made a notable speech on 15 Mar. 1782 denouncing Opposition leaders as the chief cause of the loss of America. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 229-30. Parl. Hist. xxii. 1175-7. Cf. Nos. 5641, 6029.

$5\frac{7}{16} \times 3\frac{9}{16}$ in. (pl.).

6066 XII. [COLONEL BARRÉ.]

JS ff

Published 17th June 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Portrait of Barré full face, standing, his legs apart, his hat in his r. hand, his l. hand thrust into his waistcoat.

Barré was the subject of Sayers's second important political satire, see No. 6028.

$6\frac{7}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6067 XIV. [WILKES.]

JS ff

Published 17th June 1782 by C Bretherton.

Engraving. Portrait of Wilkes standing looking to the r., his arms hanging at his side. He wears a hat, bag-wig, ruffled shirt, and sword, with wrinkled riding-boots. His squint is very pronounced, he looks toothless and much older than in the earlier caricatures, cf. No. 5881. Reproduced, Turberville, Men and Manners of the Eighteenth Century, 1926, p. 46.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6068 XV. [GENERAL BURGOYNE.]

JS ff

Published 17th June 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Portrait of Burgoyne, M.P. for Preston, standing legs apart, smiling, his head turned in profile to the l., and holding out a paper in his r. hand as if making a speech. He wears general's uniform and holds his hat in his l. hand.

Burgoyne became a supporter of the Opposition after the attacks on him which followed his return from America, cf. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 45-8. Under the Rockingham Ministry (on 7 June), he was made Commander-in-Chief in Ireland.

$7 \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6069 XVI. [MARQUIS OF ROCKINGHAM.]

JS

Published 17th June 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Portrait of Rockingham standing in profile to the l. He wears a bag-wig, sword, Garter ribbon and star. Reproduced, Turberville, Men and Manners of the Eighteenth Century, 1926, p. 271.

7 × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).6070 XVII. [EARL BATHURST.]

JS ff

Published 17th June 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Bathurst standing almost full-face, but looking slightly to the r. His hands are thrust under his waistcoat; he wears a tie-wig and sword. He has a senile and almost imbecile expression.

Bathurst (1714–94), though he was removed from the Chancellorship in 1778, so that Lord Thurlow might strengthen North's Ministry, was Lord President of the Council from November 1779 till North's fall in March 1782. See No. 4888.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).6071 XVIII. [LORD GRANTLEY.]

JS

Published 17th June 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Grantley standing in profile to the l. His r. hand is thrust under his partly-buttoned coat, his l. is held under his coat-tail. He wears a tie-wig and a sword.

Sir Fletcher Norton (1716–89), Speaker from 1770 to 1780, had been created Baron Grantley on 9 Apr. 1782. He was called by satirists 'Sir Bull-face Double Face', see index. Mason in 1777 published an Ode to Sir Fletcher Norton; see Mason's Satirical Poems with Horace Walpole's Notes, ed. Toynbee, 1926, pp. 127 ff. See also Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, i, pp. 257 ff., ii, pp. 259 f. Reproduced, Mason's Poems (op. cit.), p. 123.

7 × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).6072 XIX. [LORD MAHON.]

JS ff

Published 17 June 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Portrait of Charles Stanhope (1753–1816), afterwards 3rd Earl Stanhope, styled Viscount Mahon 1763–86, M.P. for Wycombe, 1780–6. He is lean and tall, and stands in profile to the r. as if making a violent harangue, body bent forward, r. hand extended. He holds his hat and cane in his l. hand. He is plainly dressed, his lank and scanty hair tied at the neck.

Mahon, a Whig and an opponent of the American War, had come into prominence by his Bill for preventing bribery at elections. Parl. Hist.

xxiii, pp. 101 ff., 3 June, 1782; see Wraxall, Memoirs, ii, pp. 341 ff. For his revolutionary sympathies he was afterwards called 'Citizen Stanhope' and was much caricatured by Gillray, 1791-1808.

7 × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6073 XX. [SIR CHARLES TURNER.]

JS ff

Published 17th June 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Sir Charles Turner, Bart., standing in profile to the l. He is bent forward, his r. arm extended, holding his hat, as if making a speech. He is excessively thin, a cane is under his l. arm, and his l. hand is in a muff.

Turner of Kirkleatham, Yorkshire, was a Whig and a consistent opponent of the American War. He represented the City of York till his death in 1783. He was made a baronet on 20 Apr. 1782. See Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 267-9. Selwyn (1 Mar. 1782) calls him 'that starved weasel'. Hist. MSS. Comm., Carlisle MSS., 1897, p. 585. See No. 6256.

6 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. (pl.).

6074 [SIR FRANCIS MOLYNEUX AND MR QUARME.]

JS ff

Published 17th June 1782

Engraving. Sir Francis Molyneux, tall and broad, stands full-face, his hands behind his back, looking down at Robert Quarme, a very small man, standing in profile to the l. Quarme's r. hand is thrust in his waistcoat, his l. rests on his sword, his hat is under his l. arm. Both wear bag-wigs, ruffles, and swords.

Molyneux was Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, and Quarme was Yeoman Usher, both officers of the House of Lords. For Molyneux see Pigott, The Jockey Club,¹ 6th ed. 1792, pp. 36-8.

7 × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6075 [LORD JOHN CAVENDISH.]

JS ff

Published 3^d July 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Cavendish standing in profile to the r., his r. leg advanced, holding his hat in his l. hand as if making a speech in the House of Commons. He holds a document in his r. hand.

Cavendish, M.P. for York and Chancellor of the Exchequer under Rockingham, by his absolute refusal to remain in office after Rockingham's death on 1 July, removed (it is said) all chance of Fox's remaining in office. Fitzmaurice, Life of Lord Shelburne, 1876, iii. 225-6. See No. 6167.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

¹ According to Pigott: 'For him the word Bore was first brought into use. It was he who chiefly contributed to promote the currency of that word: long has he been considered as the head of that numerous body of citizens . . .' The O.E.D. has no instance of the word in the sense of a tiresome person earlier than 1812, but see No. 6144.

6076 [EARL OF SANDWICH.]JS ffPublished by C Bretherton 3^d July 1782

Engraving. Sandwich, standing directed to the r., his head in profile, his r. hand thrust in his waistcoat, his l. in his waistcoat pocket.

With the fall of North's Ministry in March 1782 Sandwich virtually retired from public life. As the accuser of Wilkes (Jemmy Twitcher), and afterwards as First Lord of the Admiralty under North, he was the subject of innumerable caricatures and lampoons.

7 × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6077 [DUKE OF RICHMOND.]JS ffPublished 3^d July 1782 by C Bretherton

Engraving. Richmond standing in profile to the l. holding his cockaded hat in his r. hand. He wears the uniform of a general with epaulettes. His scanty hair is in a small pigtail queue.

Richmond was Master-General of the Ordnance in Rockingham's Ministry. At the date of this print the question of whether he should remain in office under Shelburne, or resign with his nephew Fox, was a burning one. See Walpole, Last Journals, ii. 449-51. Though he remained in office, in January 1783 he refused to attend the Cabinet meetings, disapproving of Shelburne's 'assumption of too much power' in the peace negotiations. Ibid. ii. 477. Fitzmaurice, Life of Shelburne, 1912, ii, pp. 208, 303 f. See No. 6023. Cf. also No. 6163.

7 × 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

1782

PERSONAL SATIRES

6078-6089

Series of Tête-à-tête portraits

6078 No. XXXIV. MISS R—DS.

No. XXXV. THE PATRIOTIC SENATOR.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr, Fleet Street 1 Jan^y 1782.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 625. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-tête annexed . . .' [ut supra]. He is the relative of a peer and the anti-ministerial member for a great county, having previously sat for a borough, the Government having attempted to frustrate his election for the county at a by-election by refusing him the Chiltern Hundreds. He is George Byng, elected for Middlesex at the General Election 1780, who had previously been M.P. for Wigan. Cf. Corr. of George III, v. 23. See Royal Register, viii. 1783, p. 24; Fox's Martyrs, 1784, pp. 11-13.

Miss R. is a Miss Reynolds, reputed a near relation of Sir Joshua from her name and 'her masterly stile of painting in crayons'.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.; $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6079 No. XXXVII. THE PLIANT PENITENT.

No. XXXVIII. THE TITHE HUNTER.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street, Jan^y 20; 1782.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiii. 673. Two bust portraits in oval frames, both facing T.Q. to the l., one that of a clergyman in gown and bands. They illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-a-tête annexed . . .' He was tutor of the son of Lord S— on the grand tour, was given a valuable living near London, and also a good living in the City, and is in litigation with his parishioners over tithes. He is probably James Waller, D.D., nephew of Terrick, bishop of London, Vicar of Kensington (1770-95), Rector of St. Martin Ludgate, Prebendary of Mora and Archdeacon of Essex. E. H. Pearse, Sons of the Clergy, 1928, pp. 202-3 n. An attempt to collect tithes in kind on the choice fruit raised under glass by the Kensington market gardeners had caused much indignation. The case was decided in the vicar's favour. J. Middleton, Agriculture of Middlesex, 1798.

The lady has been one of the haut ton and a leader of fashion, and a distinguished female phaeton (cf. No. 5936) until she became converted by a sermon of the Tithe Hunter, which was followed by a friendship between them.

B.M.L., PP. 5442 b.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6080 No. II. MRS W—ST.

No. III. THE GALLANT ADMIRAL.

London, Publish'd Feb^y 1st 1782 by A. Hamilton, Junr Fleet Street.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .' Account of an admiral from whom a brother admiral obtained damages in a suit of crim. con. Mrs. W. is the daughter of a master and commander R.N., and the widow of a midshipman, who accepted the admiral's proposals and 'genteel present'.

Perhaps James Gambier (1723-89), vice-admiral 1780, who was tried for crim. con. with 'Admiral Knowles's lady', 11 June 1757. See No. 4974.

$2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6081 No. IV. MRS P—LL.

No. V. THE BRITISH FABIUS.

London, Publish'd March 1, 1782, by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'History of the Tête-a-Tête annexed: or, Memoirs of the British Fabius and Mrs. P—w—ll.' An account of Sir Henry Clinton,¹ maintaining that accusations against his fondness of dress and parade while in America, 'so that New York has . . . been another Capua', are exaggerated. The only lady with whom he was suspected of a connexion was Mrs. P—ll, daughter of an opulent planter and widow of Lieutenant P—ll who served in the British Army. She applied to the British Fabius for his protection. Clinton wears the ribbon and star of the Bath given in 1777.

B.M.L., PP. 5442 b.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

No. VII. MRS C—N—Y.²

No. VIII. THE PERSUASIVE LOVER.

London, Publish'd April 1st 1782 by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 121. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .' An account of Lord P—, a young peer who made a brilliant figure in Paris, introducing English fashions for riding dress. He returned to England on the outbreak of war (1778). Miss Connolly eloped from Ireland to be married in Scotland, where her lover died. Lord P— used the mediation of Lady Ligonier, with whom he had been intimate, to induce her to become his mistress, but her character makes her friends suspect they may be married.

Of the peers whose names begin with P., Lord Plymouth seems best to fit this description, see No. 5761.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6082 No. X. LADY MAGNET.

No. XI. THE POLAR NAUTICUS.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street May 1st 1782.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .' An account of Constantine John Phipps, 2nd Baron Mulgrave 1744-92. In 1773 he took part in an expedition to discover a northern route to India, which returned without result from Spitzbergen. He published A Voyage to the North Pole in 1774.

¹ He is identified by H. Bleackley as Cornwallis, but the details, the accusation of supineness, and the ribbon and star of the portrait point to Clinton.

² The plate is missing from the B.M. copy of the magazine, the caption is taken from a copy in the London Library.

Lady Magnet, widow of a baronet, has a son who 'though still a minor, gave the haut ton in the most elevated manner, drove one of the highest phaetons in Europe, and played as deep as any man upon the turf'. This points to Sir John Lade (see No. 5508). It was to Lady Lade, sister of Thrale, that Dr. Johnson said,

With patches paint and jewels on
Sure Phillis is not twenty-one!
But if at night you Phillis see,
The dame at least is forty-three!

Mme D'Arblay, Diary, i, pp. 141-2.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6083 No. XIII. THE LOVELY MRS ELL—S.

No. XIV. THE POPULAR GOVERNOR.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street, June 1st 1782.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .' An account of the 3rd Duke of Portland 1738-1809, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland 10 Apr.-31 July 1782, with a reference to his quarrel with the Duke of Grafton in 1766 over the attempt of the Crown to dispossess him of Englewood Forest.

Mrs. E. is Emily, daughter of a Cumberland farmer (a tenant of the duke's), and a widow, whom he met in London in distressed circumstances and provided with elegant apartments.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6084 No. XVI. MISS C—Y [sic].

No. XVII. THE GALLANT COLONEL.

London, Published by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street 1 July 1782.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 289. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed: or, Memoirs of the Gallant Colonel, and the lovely Miss Claver—g'. The Colonel is a young gentleman of an ancient family, distinguished as a leader of fashion, has not seen active service, but has fought in duels. His recent promotion was due to the favour of 'a certain illustrious character' (evidently the Prince of Wales) at whose convivial parties and petits-soupers he attends. He does not encroach upon his friend's territories, with 'Perdita, the Amst—ds, the Ell—ts, and the Birds of Paradise', i.e. Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Armstead, Grace Dalrymple or Elliott, and Mrs. Mahon, see index.

He is conjecturally identified by H. Bleackley as Col. St. Leger.

Miss C. is the daughter of an officer killed at York Town.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6085 No. XIX. THE AMIABLE MISS W—BB.

No. XX. THE INTREPID PARTIZAN.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street. Aug^t 1. 1782

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .' One is taken from Sir Joshua Reynolds's full-length portrait of Colonel Tarleton (1754-1833). It differs in certain details (the plume of the helmet, the ruffles at the neck, and the tilt of the shoulders) from the mezzotint by J. R. Smith published 11 Oct. 1782. An account of the career of Colonel Banastre Tarleton, mentioning the attentions he received from the Prince of Wales among others on his return to England after York Town, and his appearance in public with 'Perdita, the Bird of Paradise and the Arm—d'. See Nos. 6084, 6116.

Miss W. is the daughter of a solicitor of eminence who died insolvent. She became companion to a lady of fortune, and eloped with the Colonel. Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6086 No. XXII. M^{RS} P—PE

No. XXIII. THE FAVOURITE OF THE FAIR.

London. Publish'd by A. Hamilton. Junr Fleet Street. 1 Sept^r 1782.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed: or, Memoirs of the Favourite of the Fair, and the beautiful Mrs. P—pe'. An account of the amours of the heir of a Scottish duke noted for being 'an accomplished gentleman', identified by H. Bleackley as James, Marquis of Graham, b. 1755, succeeded as 4th Duke of Montrose 1790, d. 1837. See Wraxall, Memoirs, 1880, iii. 385-7. Pigott, Jockey Club, 1792, Part ii, p. 27.

Mrs. P. is the daughter of a Cheapside hosier, married to an old and infirm merchant, who eloped with her husband's head clerk and was left destitute till she accepted her present lover's attentions.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{16}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6087 No. XXV. M^{RS} C—X.

No. XXVI. THE STEADY PATRIOT.

London. Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street Oct^r 1. 1782.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 457. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .' An account of Lord Effingham, referring to his throwing up his commission when his regiment was ordered for America.

During the late Ministry he lived in retirement and met in Yorkshire Mrs. Amelia C—x, deserted by her husband after six months' marriage. This is said to be the cause of his long absence from London (after the Gordon Riots). See Nos. 5995, 6061.

Ovals, $2\frac{9}{16} \times 2\frac{1}{8}$; $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{16}$ in. B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6088 No. XXVIII. THE AMIABLE MISS D—S—T.

No. XXIX. THE RECLAIMED ROVER.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street, Nov. [1.] 1782.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 513. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . . or, Menories of the Reclaimed Rover, and the amiable Miss D—rs—t.' The descendant of a noble family, a 'very near relation' of his having been stabbed in the King's Arms, Pall Mall, by 'Mrs Philips',¹ as she records [sic] in her Apology. This was 'Sir H. P.' of Westwood Park, Worcester, i.e. Sir Herbert Pakington, d. 1748. The subject of the Tête-à-Tête is therefore probably Sir Herbert Pakington, who succeeded his brother in 1762 and died in 1795. His health was so much impaired by dissipation that he went for some months to Lisbon, where he recovered, and since his return has changed his manner of living.

Miss D., the daughter of an eminent brewer in Kent, aimed at a coronet; at a fête-champêtre at Sevenoaks she yielded to a certain duke [?Dorset], became pregnant, and has now yielded to the Reclaimed Rover.

Ovals, $2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6089 No. XXXI. MISS O'BR—N.

No. XXXII. THE HIBERNIAN ORATOR.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Jun^r Fleet Street, Dec^r 1, 1782.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 569. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .' An account of Henry Grattan (1746–1820). As a student of the Middle Temple he is said to have been particularly distinguished by Kitty Fisher and others. His grant of £50,000 for his services to Ireland (see No. 6003) is referred to, and he is reputed to have refused an Irish peerage.

Miss O'Brien is the daughter of a rich merchant of Cork who has 'been distinguished in all the gay and elegant circles of Dublin'.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6090 [MRS FRENCH.]

Publish'd as the Act Directs J^y 23^d 1782 C. B. J^y [Bretherton]

Engraving (coloured impression). Sketch portrait (H.L.) of an old lady in profile to the l. wearing a cap. She is seated in a chair holding a fan. A rectangular frame is suggested, below is a small oval medallion containing a standing figure very freely drawn on a minute scale.

She is identified by Mr. Hawkins as Mrs. French and is presumably 'Old Madam French who lives close by the bridge at Hampton Court'. Walpole, Letters, xiv. 11, 28 July 1787. She collected pictures, china, &c., dying 'at last' in Jan. 1791. Ibid. xiv. 359, 390.

$4\frac{1}{4} \times 3$ in. (pl.).

6091 ORATOR HUM.

Ch^s Bretherton Jun^r f. Publish'd Jan^y 30th 1782.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A bust portrait in profile to the r. of Dunning (cr. Baron Ashburton 30 Mar. 1782), wearing a legal wig. For the title cf. Nos. 6042, 6173. It here anticipates both the acceptance of a pension in addition to a sinecure office which was so inconsistent with his former professions, and his becoming the confidential adviser of Shelburne after Rockingham's death. This and Nos. 6092, 6093 resemble similar sketch portraits by Gillray.

$4\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{1}{10}$ in.

¹ Mrs. Teresia Constantia Phillips.

6092 [SIG^R PACCHIEROTTI^I]

Ch^s Bretherton Jun^r f Publish'd Jn^y 03th [sic] 1782

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Bust portrait of Pacchierotti the singer, in profile to the r. See No. 6125.

$4\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{1}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6093 BÖRĒAS

[C. Bretherton]

Publish'd a[s the] Act Directs J^y 31st 82 C. B. f.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A very slight sketch (caricature) of Lord North, head and shoulders, full face, wearing his ribbon.

$4 \times 3\frac{1}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6094 [C. J. FOX.]

J^{uly} 1782 J^s Bretherton f.

Engraving. A freely sketched portrait of Fox standing, full face, his hands under the flaps of his waistcoat in his breeches pockets. He wears a looped hat, and appears younger and less heavily jowled than in the caricatures of Gillray and Sayers at this time.

$7\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{7}{16}$ in. (pl.).

6095 [WILLIAM PARSONS.]

[Gillray.]

Pub^d May 4th 1782 by H. Humphrey New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured impression). H.L. portrait of Parsons the actor, standing in profile to the l., taking a pinch of snuff from a box held at arm's-length. He wears a bag-wig and ruffles, his hat is under his l. arm. He is represented in the part of Sir Fretful Plagiary; he was the original Sir Fretful in the first production of Sheridan's Critic on 29 Oct. 1779. D.N.B. Grego, Gillray, p. 35. (Reproduction.)

$2\frac{3}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{2}$ in. (pl.).

6096 THE GERMAN DANCING MASTER.

H. I. H.² [Gillray]

Pub^d April 5th 1782 by H. Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving. A dancing-master, said to be Jansen, the German maître de ballet, in profile to the l., playing a kit or dancing-master's fiddle. He stands on his r. toe, his l. leg held forwards. His lips protrude and he has a fierce expression. Facing him is his pupil, a boy, holding his hat in his l. hand, his r. arm raised: he imitates the pose and expression of his master. Behind him (l.) stands a younger boy, holding his hat in both hands. The background is a panelled wall, on it is the lower part of an oval mirror in a carved frame, beneath which is a chair on which lies an open book.

¹ Written on the back in an old hand.

² These letters are faintly etched in the l. corner of the design.

Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830. Grego, Gillray, p. 34, Wright and Evans, No. 369.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6097 GENERAL MURRAY.

[? Gillray.]¹

London. Pub^d Nov^r 15th 1782. by S. J. Neale, N^o 352, near Exeter 'change, Strand.

Stipple. Bust portrait in an oval of Lieut.-General James Murray, probably drawn at his court-martial, see No. 6041. He is in profile to the r., wearing military uniform with epaulettes, has an expression of pained surprise, and looks old and worn.

$3\frac{7}{8} \times 3\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6098 A MODERN ANTIQUE;

Trumps Fecet [sic] 1782

[? Gillray.]²

Pub^d Nov. 26th 1782 by H Humphrey N^o 51 New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A very stout and short old lady seated at a card-table in profile to the l. frowning at the cards which she holds in her gloved l. hand. She wears a cap on her high-dressed hair, and from the back of her cap a spider is suspended on its thread. She wears a flowered dress, with lace-trimmed ruffles and apron. On the table in front of her are three coins and the ace of hearts.

Probably one of the elderly leaders of fashion whom Gillray was so fond of caricaturing, cf. No. 6104.

$6\frac{1}{8} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6098 A A MODERN ANTIQUE;

Trumps Fecet, 1782.

A first state, without publication line. On this has been drawn in pen a profile of the lady with a still more ferocious scowl; opposite this is written 'Losing Game'.

6099 THOS. WEST, D.D., FELLOW OF MAGDALEN COLLEGE OXFORD.

C. Knight Sculp.

Pub. Nov 1. 1782 by J. Thane³ Printseller and Medalist Rupert Street Haymarket London.

Engraving (coloured impression). W.L. profile portrait of a man in clerical wig, bands and gown, wearing a large mortar-board cap, walking to the r., his gown blowing stiffly behind him. He holds a glove in his ¹ Supposed to have been engraved by Gillray. Note by Mr. Hawkins.

² Supposed to have been etched by Gillray. Note by Mr. Hawkins.

³ Almost illegible.

gloved r. hand. Beneath the title is engraved From an Original Drawing in the Possession of the Editor late in the Collection of Geo. Scott Esq^r F.R. & A. S. S.

West (1712(?)-81) was rector of Horsington, Lincs.

8 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 7 in.

6100 THE CALASH.

[?1782]

[Viscount Courtenay]

Engraving. Caricature of a thin lady, walking or standing in profile to the r., wearing one of the enormous hoods known as calashes from their resemblance to the hood of a gig. This entirely obscures her face; the wearer holds the edge of it with a claw-like hand. A slight and amateurish sketch. Beneath it, the collector, R. Bull, has written, 'L^y Loughborough by y^e late Visc^t Courteney'.

Charlotte, daughter of the first Viscount Courtenay (d. 1762), married Lord Loughborough in 1782 as his second wife, see Corr. of Lord Auckland, 1861, i. 33-4. Probably by her brother, the second Viscount, 1742-88. For the calash see Nos. 5434, &c.

4 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 3 in.

'Honorary Engravers', i. No. 194.

6101 ELOQUENCE OR THE KING OF EPITHETS

Pub^d Jan^y 1st 1782 by H. Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street

Engraving (coloured impression). A portrait of James Christie the elder (1730-1803) standing in his auctioneer's rostrum. His head is turned in profile to the l. He smiles insinuatingly, his hands held out, his hammer in his r. hand. The word 'eloquence' in the title is engraved at the bottom of the rostrum, and beneath the title is inscribed, Let me entreat—Ladies—Gentlemen—permit me to put this inestimable piece of elegance under your protection,—only observe; — — — The inexhaustible Munificence of your superlatively [sic] candid Generosity must Harmonize with the refulgent Brilliancy of this little Jewel!—!—.

Cf. a similar portrait of Langford, No. 5171.

Reproduced in colour, H. C. Marillier, Christies 1766 to 1925, p. 18.

10 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 5 $\frac{11}{16}$ in.

6102 A SMUGGLING MACHINE OR

A CONVENIENT COSA^UWAY FOR A MAN IN MINIATURE.

Publish'd Jan^y 1782 by H. Humphry New Bond Street N^o 18.

Engraving. A portrait of Richard Cosway, R.A., standing under the wide hooped petticoat of a tall lady, his wife, Maria, who puts her arms round him. His head and shoulders emerge from the petticoat slightly below the level of her waist; his face is in profile looking upwards. His r. hand clutches her cloak, his l. is round her waist. She wears a flat ribbon-trimmed hat, and looks down at him saying, Tis getting nothing—nay—tis getting worse than nothing.

In the background, on the wall (r.), is a picture of a little man wearing a bag-wig and sword, climbing up a ladder which rests on the breast of a woman. Beneath it is engraved:

*Lowliness is Young Ambitions Ladder,
Whereto the climber upward turns his Face
But when he once attains the upmost round
He then unto the Ladder turns his back,
Looks unto the clouds—scornin [sic] the base degrees
By which he did ascend.*

Shak. Jul. Caesar.

This represents Cosway climbing to fame, the woman being either Angelica Kauffmann or the Duchess of Devonshire. J. T. Smith, Nollekens and his Times, ed. W. Whitten, ii. 329, where the print is reproduced.

$9\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6103 OLD WISDOM.

BLINKING AT THE STARS.

[Gillray]

Pub^d March 10th 1782 by W. Rennie.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Design in an oval. Dr. Johnson, the head in profile to the r., with an owl's body and ass's ears, stands on two books, the lower his Dictionary, the upper his Lives of the Poets. The busts of poets stand on brackets (r.) above Johnson's head, each is irradiated with a star-shaped halo. They are Pope, Milton, a third head wearing a laurel wreath, the inscription concealed by Johnson's head; a fourth halo (l.) is visible. These are 'the stars' at which Johnson is blinking, but, though screwing up his eyes short-sightedly, he is not looking at them. The back wall, at right angles to the wall on which the busts are placed, is covered with bookshelves, in which folio volumes lean against one another. An open book lying beside the Dictionary is Beauties of Johnson.

The Prefaces Biographical and Critical to the Works of the most eminent English Poets, which were the occasion of this satire, were published in 1779 and 1781. See also No. 6328. Reprinted, G.W.G. 1830. Grego, Gillray, p. 33. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. c.

$7\frac{7}{8} \times 6\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6104 ST. CECILIA.

[Gillray]

Pub^b April 24th 1782. by H. Humphrey. New Bond Street

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Design in an oval. A burlesque of Reynolds's painting of Mrs. Sheridan as 'St. Cecilia'. Lady Cecilia Johnston sits at the organ in profile to the r., on a low stool, her face lit by rays which descend through clouds. The place of the two angels in Reynolds's picture is taken by two squalling cats, who sit on the player's l., a book of music propped up in front of them.

There is nothing to explain Gillray's animus against Lady Cecilia, whom, with Lady Archer, Lady Mount Edgumbe, and Lady Buckinghamshire, he repeatedly satirized for gambling and other fashionable activities.

Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830. Grego, Gillray, p. 35.

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 5\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6105 THE SHILLING OR THE VALUE OF A P . . . Y: C R'S MATRIMONIAL HONOR

Publ: as the Act Dir: by H Humphrey New Bond S^t N^o 18 Feb. 27, 1782¹

Engraving. A stout man, seated (r.) with stag's horns growing from his forehead, turns away from a lawyer in wig and gown who approaches him from the l. One of a number of prints on an action brought by Sir Richard Worsley against one Bisset, a captain in the Hampshire Militia, for criminal conversation. The case was tried on 21 Feb. 1782 before Lord Mansfield, Worsley was awarded a shilling damages on the ground that he had countenanced and connived at his wife's adultery. The action was brought after Lady Worsley had eloped with Bisset.

The lawyer (his counsel were the Attorney-General (Wallace), Lee, Dunning, and Erskine) throws down a coin on the table beside Worsley, saying, They would not believ you posses [sic] any your contrivance for his peeping has ruined your cause. In his r. hand is a document, S^r R. W . . . y Pl . . . f against Cap . . . D . . . D . . . t.

Worsley is exclaiming O Lord O Lord no more than one shilling for my lost Honor. His horns are inscribed W . . . m D . . . st &c. G . . . m &c P . . . gh &c, representing the names of those who gave evidence at the trial (Wyndham, Lord Deerhurst, Marquis of Graham, Lord Peterborough).

Above their heads, reclining on clouds, is Justice, blindfolded, her scales in the l. hand, a sword in her r. hand; she says, Take away that badge of Distinction, Shame may transfer the colour to his face. This refers to a coat of arms on the wall over Worsley's head in which the (red) hand of a baronet is conspicuous. His hat and sword lie on the ground beside him. A panelled wall forms the background; on the l. is a framed Plan of the Isle of Wight. Worsley (1751-1805) was Governor of the Isle of Wight, 1770-Apr. 1782, and published The History of the Isle of Wight, 1781.

For the scandal see H. Walpole, Letters, xii. 134, 31 Dec. 1781, and xii. 179-80, 22 Feb. 1782. The trial, and several scurrilous pamphlets in verse on the subject, are in B.M.L. 11631. g. 31, 1-5. See Nos. 6106-6112. 9 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 7 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6106 A BATH OF THE MODERNS.

Publish'd March 4. 1782 by E. Darchery N^o 11 S^t James's Street.

Engraving. The interior of a room in which a lady is dressing, an attendant standing beside her. The outside of the building is shown on the l.; a stout military officer supports on his shoulders a thin one, who is looking into the room through a window under the thatched roof. This is Sir Richard Worsley, Colonel of the Hampshire Militia, helping Captain Bissett to look into the room of a cold bath establishment at Maidstone. Worsley is saying, Captain do you view the whole Garrison. He answers Only the Breast work & cover'd way.

Lady Worsley is sitting on a chair in profile to the l. pulling on her stockings, fully dressed except that the front of her dress exposes her breast. She wears a military coat with epaulettes, and is saying, Bliss —it he goes all lengths to pleasure me. The attendant, an elderly woman in cap and apron, holds up her hands saying, Lord my lady I believe the Captain wants to be in the watering place. Beneath the title is engraved, lately discovered at Maidstone, by Sr Cuckeldome Worsle-Sly, Fellow of the Society of Antiquereones.

¹ The Morning Herald, 9 Mar. 1782, advertises this as published 'This day . . . price 1s. plain and 2s. coloured. . . .'

The evidence at the trial was that Lady Worsley was in the habit of going to the cold bath at Maidstone, where the Worsleys lived when Sir Richard was in camp at Coxheath, while her husband and his friend Bissett waited for her; that on one occasion, when she had almost finished dressing, Worsley tapped at the door, saying, 'Bissett is going to get up to look at you', and his face appeared at the window. This was the occasion of a number of pictorial satires. Worsley was F.R.S. and F.S.A. See Nos. 6105, 6107-12.

$7\frac{1}{4} \times 10\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6107 MAIDSTONE WHIM.

Pub Marth 8. [sic] 1782 by W Wells N^o 132 Fleet Street

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Sir Richard Worsley, wearing stag's antlers, stands outside a brick building, his back to the wall. On his shoulders stands Captain Bissett, looking in at a window. Between Worsley and the wall is a wooden seat; on the r. is a door over which is [T]HE BATH. Worsley is saying S—r [Seymour] B—ts [Bissetts] looking at you; words spoken by him according to the evidence at the trial. His horns are inscribed, L^d P—h, L^d D—st, M^r W—m, M: of G—m, M^r S—th, see No. 6105; see also Nos. 6106, 6108-12.

$8\frac{7}{16} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6108 THE MAIDSTONE BATH OR THE MODERN SUSANNA.

Candaules invenit. Gyges fecit. [Gillray?]

London Publish'd as the Act directs, March 12th 1782, N^o 28 at the Ancient and Modern Print Warehouse, Hay Market.

Engraving (design in a circle). A stone building in which a bath is sunk in the floor. A young woman (Lady Worsley) stands in it, the water just above her knees. An attendant stands behind her holding a towel, both look up, the attendant with alarm, at the face of a man (Captain Bissett) looking through one of two oval apertures (r.) high up in the wall. In front of and below the bath is the upper part of a flight of spiral steps leading to high iron bars at right angles to the wall at the end of the bath, through which is seen Sir Richard Worsley holding Captain Bissett on his shoulders. This part of the design is in shadow.

The attendant is an attractive young woman wearing a hat. The lady's clothes and hat are heaped on a chair behind her. On the wall above the bath is a tap and below it a small basin built into the wall. The design has delicacy and charm in spite of its scurrilous intention. See Nos. 6105-7, 6109-12.

Diam. $10\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6109 SIR RICHARD WORSE-THAN-SLY, EXPOSING HIS WIFES BOTTOM; O FYE!

[Gillray.]

Pub^d 14th March 1782. by H. Brown, Oxford Market.

Engraving. The interior of a room in the floor of which is sunk a circular bath. A lady (Lady Worsley), holding a little drapery, steps into it. Through a window high in the wall behind her (l.) appear the head and shoulders of Captain Bisset. Outside the building (l.) Sir R. Worsley stoops down, his back to the wall, to support Bisset, who stands on his shoulders. Worsley, in cockaded hat and regimentals, looks towards the spectator, saying, My Yoke is Easy & my Burden Light. Bisset is saying, Charming View of the Back Settlements S^r Richard. On the farther side of the bath (r.) stands a maid-servant of attractive appearance, holding her mistress's clothes; she holds up her r. hand saying, Good lack! My Lady the Captⁿ will see all for Nothing. On the back wall is nailed a Map of the Isle of Wight. Worsley ceased to be Governor of the Isle of Wight in Apr. 1782. See No. 6110, another version of this design. See also Nos. 6105-8, 6111, 6112. Grego, Gillray, p. 33, describing either this plate or No. 6110. 12 × 9½ in.

6110 SIR RICHARD WORSE-THAN-SLY,
EXPOSING HIS WIFES BOTTOM;—O FYE!

[Gillray.]

Pub^d March 14th 1782 by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Another version in reverse, with several alterations, of No. 6109. The two women's figures are almost identical in both plates. Worsley stands on tip-toe (r.) holding Bisset, who sits, instead of standing, on his shoulders; his hat is on the ground, and by it lies a paper inscribed My Yoke is Easy & my Burden light. The words spoken by Bisset and the maid are the same in both. In this design the ceiling of the room has a circle inset in the rectangle which may support a dome. A pair of mules stands beside the bath (r.). According to a note on one impression, this plate was suppressed and is very rare. See also Nos. 6105-8, 6111, 6112.

11¹⁵/₁₆ × 8¹³/₁₆ in.

6111 LADY WORSLEY, DRESSING IN THE BATHING HOUSE.

[n.d. Feb.—Mar. 1782.]

Engraving. Probably an illustration from a book. Lady Worsley, dressed in an undergarment or dressing-gown, seated on a chair, is putting on her stockings. Part of a circular bath sunk in the floor is shown on the r. An attendant stands behind her holding up a cloak or wrapper. The face of Captain Bisset (l.) looks in through a window over the door. On the wall (r.) is a framed picture probably intended to represent Susannah and the Elders. See Nos. 6105, 6110, 6112.

5⁵/₈ × 3³/₄ in.

6112 A PEEP INTO LADY !!!!!Y'S SERAGLIO.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d April 29th 1782. by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. On the r. is a bedroom, a man and woman embracing on a bed with a high tester draped with curtains. A man leaves the room by a door on the extreme r. On the l. is a staircase, descending from l. to r.

and ending in a door leading to the bedroom. On this stand, one behind the other, nine men. One is in military uniform, one is a bearded Jew, one is a fat parson in gown and bands. Labels inscribed with words issue from their mouths. Over the door is a picture, inscribed Lucretia; she is about to stab herself. Along the balustrade of the staircase is engraved, “One lover to another still succeeds, Another & another after that.—And the last Fool is welcome as the former: Till having lov'd his hour out he gives place, And mingles with the herd that went before him.” Rowe's Fair Penitent.

The coarseness and scurrility of the subject are not reflected in its drawing. It is an incredibly libellous comment on the case of Sir Richard and Lady Worsley, see Nos. 6105–11.

$9\frac{3}{8} \times 13\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6113 FATHER D, LEAVING HIS CATHOLICK VOWS
FOR THE JOYS OF THE FLESH.

[? Hixon.]¹

Pub May 9th 1782 by T. Cornell.

Engraving. A man and woman riding (l. to r.) on the same horse along a country road. The woman sits in front, holding the reins and riding astride. She holds up a purse in her l. hand saying, This will pay you for your Trouble Honey. The man sits behind, his feet in the stirrups, his l. hand on the woman's waist; he says, Promise me that and I will never say another Mass. The man wears ordinary riding-dress; the woman wears a feathered hat over a frilled cap, and a tight coat over a ruffled shirt.

Behind them (l.) walks a young woman, wearing a cap of lace and ribbons; she holds her apron to her eye, saying, The Old witch is carrying away my Director. The words issue from the speakers' mouths on long scrolls. A sign-post on the road (r.) points (l.) To London and (r.) To Newbury and Well Hall. In the foreground (l.) is a tree; the background is an undulating landscape with a square church tower and the roofs of a village among trees.

$6\frac{5}{16} \times 9\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6114 THE PORTLAND PLACE A—R. [ARCHER] DRIVING WITHOUT A BEAU TO R—D'S PERFUME WAREHOUSE
P—LL M—LL.

Pub^d as the Act directs June 18th 1782. by C. Clark N^o 6 Princes Street.

Engraving (coloured impression). Lady Archer in profile to the r. driving a very high gig, poised on high springs, with four horses; beside her sits a young girl. She wears a feathered hat and a coat of masculine cut. On the side of the gig is an A surmounted by a baron's coronet. A also appears on the harness of the horses.

Behind the horses on the r. is the large glass window of a shop, the door also having glass panels. Above the window on each side of the door is inscribed PERFUME WAREHOU[SE]. Over the door is written Italian Washes, Ivory Teeth, Mouse Eye Brows, &c.; and The Best French Roush. In the window various articles are exhibited: glass jars, one inscribed Marsh, switches of hair, a mask, and a fool's cap, &c. The shop is a corner one; the glass window is of unusual size and appears to extend round the corner of the shop.

¹ Hixon has been written on the print by Mr. Hawkins.

Lady Archer was noted both as a whip and for painting her face, see No. 5879.

$8\frac{7}{8} \times 13\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6115 MONUMENTS LATELY DISCOVERED ON SALISBURY PLAIN.

[Gillray]

Pub^d June 15th 1782. by H. Humphrey New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured impression). A satire on the attentions of the Prince of Wales to Lady Salisbury. In the foreground are four figures with numbers referring to explanatory notes in the margin. On the right the Prince of Wales (2), wearing a ribbon and star, stands beside (1) (Lady Salisbury), holding her r. hand in his r., his l. arm is round her waist; she holds a fan in her l. hand. They are both in profile, looking towards each other; he says,

Oh let me thus . . .

Eternally admiring, fix & gaze

On those dear Eyes; for every glance they send

Darts thro' my Soul —

In the centre stand a man and a woman whose faces and limbs resemble blocks of stone, left unfinished by a sculptor; the man (3) is James, 6th Earl (afterwards 1st Marquis) of Salisbury (1748–1823); he clenches his fists, and stamps, his l. leg raised, and saying, Zounds S^r leave my Wife alone or I'll tell the Old Wig [George III]. Rudimentary horns are sprouting from his forehead. The lady (4), whose features are more defined than those of Salisbury, stands between, and slightly behind, Salisbury and the Prince of Wales. She holds out both hands in distress saying, To leave me thus! She is Mrs. Robinson or Perdita, who had been deserted by the Prince of Wales. Behind and on the l. two ladies and three men, holding hands, dance in a ring.

In the lower margin is etched, The Figures N. 1 & 2 are Judged by Conoiseurs to have lately been animated with the Celestial Fire—N^o 3 is an unfinished'd resemblance of the Human Form, from the Vacancy of Countenance & roughness of the Workmanship this Figure cannot be supposed ever to have been intended as a companion to N^o 1. [Lady Salisbury, whom he married in 1773; she was Mary Amelia, d. of the 1st Marquis of Downshire.] N^o 4 from the Attitude &c. is supposed to represent some forlorn Dido or forsaken Ariadne of Quality &c. &c. &c.

The ladies in the middle distance may be intended for others to whom the Prince had paid attentions; his name was by Feb. 1782 already associated with Lady Jersey and Lady Melbourne. Hist. MSS. Comm., Carlisle MSS. 1897, p. 575. According to Wraxall (Memoirs, 1884, v. 369 f.), his attachment to Lady Melbourne was preceded (1780) by one for Lady Augusta Campbell, and followed by one for the Duchess of Devonshire, cf. No. 6263.

For the Prince of Wales and Mrs. Robinson ('Florizel and Perdita') see No. 5767, &c. Reprinted G.W.G., 1830. Reproduced, Paston, pl. clxv. Grego, Gillray, p. 37.

$8\frac{1}{8} \times 12\frac{1}{16}$ in.

6116 THE THUNDERER.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d Aug^t 20th 1782 by E^h D' Achery St James's Street.

Engraving. Colonel Tarleton as Bobadil stands holding out a drawn sword, his l. hand on his hip boasting of his valour. His plumed helmet caricatures that in Reynolds's well-known portrait of Tarleton. On his r., behind his sword-arm, stands the Prince of Wales, with a plume of three ostrich feathers in place of a head, the centre feather having some resemblance to a face. He wears the garter ribbon, and very wide and wrinkled top-boots with small pointed feet; in his l. hand is a riding-whip.

Bobadil is saying, They have assaulted me some Three, Four, Five, Six of them together, & I have driven them afore me like a Flock of Sheep;—but this is nothing, for often in a mere frolic I have challeng'd Twenty of them, kill'd them;—Challeng'd Twenty more, kill'd them;—Twenty more, killed them too;— & thus in a day have I kill'd Twenty Score; twenty score, that's two hundred; two hundred a day, five days a thousand; thats—a—Zounds, I can't number them half; & all civilly & fairly with this one poor Toledo!

The Prince says, I'd as lief as twenty Crowns I could talk as fine as you, Captⁿ (Col^l has been scored through and Captⁿ added with a caret, probably to show that 'Captain Bobadil' is an officer with the rank of Colonel).

They are standing outside the door (r.) of a dubious place of entertainment. Over the door is inscribed THE WHIRLIGIG Alamode Beef, hot every Night. Above this is a branch, representing a bush, the sign that wine is sold, and on a projecting beam, the sign of the house: the figure of a courtesan seated with outstretched legs and arms saying,

*This is the Lad'll kiss most sweet
Who'd not love a Soldier?*

For the whirligig, a punishment for army prostitutes, see Johnson's England, ed. A. S. Turberville, p. 72.

Beneath the title is engraved, Vide; Every Man in his Humour, alter'd from Ben Johnson.

Tarleton was very brave, and distinguished himself in the American War (though defeated at Cowpens), but was notoriously boastful. Mrs. Robinson (Perdita) lived with him after she had been deserted by the Prince of Wales. See Nos. 6085, 6221. Grego, Gillray, p. 41. Wright and Evans, No. 378. (Both identify Bobadil with Major Topham.)

12½ × 9 in.

6117 PERDITO AND PERDITA—OR—THE MAN AND WOMAN OF THE PEOPLE

T. Colley. FePub^d by W Richardson N^o 68 high Holborn Dec^r 17. 1782.

Engraving. Mrs. Robinson driving Charles Fox (r. to l.) in a phaeton or gig. Only part of one wheel and the hind-quarters of a pair of horses appear in the print, the figures being on a large scale. Fox, with the ill-dressed hair and the heavy 'gunpowder jowl' which are now beginning to characterize his satirical portraits, holds his hat in his l. hand, showing C. F. stamped inside the crown; he has a disconsolate expression. Mrs. Robinson flourishes her whip in her r. hand; she wears ringlets, a high-crowned hat trimmed with feathers, a short tight coat of masculine cut over a frilled shirt.

Her cipher, M. R., in a wreath, appears on the side of the carriage. This, and the fact that she is driving, is intended to show that she is keeping Fox. On the upper margin of the print is engraved, "I have now not fifty ducats in the World & yet I am in love". They drive past the gateway and front of St. James's Palace, which forms the background.

The title appears to be taken from a mot of George Selwyn: Walpole wrote (7 Sept. 1782) to Earl Harcourt, 'Charles Fox is languishing at the feet of Mrs. Robinson. George Selwyn says, who should the man of the people live with, but with the woman of the people.' Letters, xii. 328. A paragraph in the Morning Herald, 17 Sept. 1782, ran, 'In the late Phætonic expedition of Perdita and the eloquent Patriot it is to be distinguished that the lady gives the gentleman the airing, and not, as usual, the gentleman the lady.' Lady Sarah Napier writes 11 Sept. 1782, 'Charles lives with Mrs. Robinson, goes to Sadlers Wells with her, and is all day figuring away with her.' Life and Letters of Lady Sarah Lennox, ii. 25. The name Perdita suggests the political and financial plight of Fox.

The amours of Mrs. Robinson, the Prince of Wales, Fox, and Col. Tarleton, were the subject of many newspaper paragraphs at this time. The Morning Herald, 16 Aug. 1782, announced that Mr. Fox has entirely chassé the provincial Lieut.-Col. from the Suite of the amorous Perdita, who has now the felicity of driving the ex-minister in her pony drawn curricule for a daily airing to Turnham Green. See No. 5767, &c. and Nos. 6221, 6266, 6318, 6319, 6320.

The manner suggests that it may be by Gillray imitating the style of Colley, see No. 6228, &c.

$8\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{11}{16}$ in.

6118 A CAUTION TO THE UNWARY.

Published May ye 21 1782 by P. Dawe Goodge Street Tottenham Court Road.

Engraving. One man (r.) in profile to the l. leans over an E. O. table. Four others stand opposite him, conversing and pointing to the table. Another, in riding-dress (l.), leans against the wall of the room. One of the four wears the bag-wig, laced coat, and sword, which at this time were worn only on special occasions; another wears a clerical gown and bands. The table is lit by two candles; a lighted candle sconce hangs in the centre of the back wall. Beneath the design is etched:

*As Various Fish do Various baits require
So different men, some different Games admire,
Here Sharpers meet, in Combination¹ Wait,
And hold to every fool, his favorite Bait.*

*Some fond of Billiards, Some to Hazard go,
And some, Get quicker ruin'd at E. O.
Here Tradesmen Come, but do perhaps forget
It is their Creditors, that risk the Bett*

For the game of E. O. see No. 5928, and for the campaign against the game see also Nos. 6119, 6120.

$6\frac{11}{16} \times 7\frac{5}{8}$ in.

¹ i.e. conspiracy, see O.E.D.

6119 JUSTICE WRIG—TS A COMING OR SECRETARY E O.
ALIAS REYNARD PUT TO FLIGHT.

[T. Colley?]

Pub^d by T: Colley Aug^t 19. 1782. Rolls Building fetter lane

Engraving (coloured impression). Gamblers at an E. O. table disturbed by a peace-officer with a stick who attempts to force open a door (r.) which a man inside tries to hold shut. The circular table and two overturned chairs are the only furniture of the room. Fox, as a fox, wearing a coat and wig and with human hands, stands by the table (r.) looking over his shoulder at the door, saying, what's the Devil coming for me before my time. The peace-officer says, Open the door you Gamblers; the man holding it shut looks round saying, be quick Gents I'm over power'd. On the farther side of the table are three men: next Fox, an officer wearing a cockaded hat and epaulettes says, O Reynard the Hounds are after you in full cry. The other two are running in profile to the l., the foremost saying, by Jupiter open the back door the Justice is here. In front of the table and on the l. a short stout gambler in profile to the r. holds his ground, his hands on the table, saying, pray help gentlemen. On the floor at his feet lies a candle-stick, the candle broken but still burning.

As a result of a petition from the justices of Middlesex and Westminster, on the great number of E. O. tables in public gaming-houses in Westminster, the harm which they did and the ineffectiveness of the laws against gaming to deal with the game of E. O., a Bill was brought in 'to prevent gaming', after which the justices immediately raided gaming-houses and destroyed tables, apparently acting on the orders of Townshend, the Secretary of State. See Parl. Hist. xxiii, pp. 110-13, and cf. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii, pp. 14 f. See also Nos. 5928, 6118, 6120.

6½ × 9½ in.

6120 THE W—ST—R JUST-ASSES A BRAYING—OR—THE DOWNFALL OF THE E. O. TABLE.

[Gillray]

Pub^d Aug^t 26th 1782. by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). An E. O. table lies in the street, outside a house, its legs already broken, its central mechanism damaged. It is being further attacked with mallets and a poker by justices and constables of Westminster. The two Bow Street justices, Addington and Wright, and their clerk, Bond, have asses' heads. Justice Addington (l.), his head bleeding, is being chased from the open door of the house by a maidservant of meretricious appearance who holds a broom above her head as if to strike; she says, Come out here! I'll just-ass Addlehead you! what you'll open my Lock too, without a key will you? Addington holds his hands over his head saying, Help! Murder!—help—Fire! Thieves: Popery! help! Justice Wright, wearing a bag-wig, stands over the table, his mallet raised above his head about to strike the table. A constable attempts to stop him, holding up both hands, saying, O Lord, M^r just-ass you'r not Wright! [The W. has been scored through] they'll dite you on Magna-Charta for breaking open their Houses! & have you before the Judges. Wright answers, The Judges? damn the Judges! & Magna-Charta too! ! our Warrants above them both—This constable wears a wig, a hat in whose upturned brim is a tobacco-pipe, a belted coat, a constable's staff terminating in a crown thrust through the belt. On the r. of the table stand two other constables of disreputable appearance, one wields a poker, the other a large hammer; only the latter has a constable's staff protruding from his waistcoat pocket; his breeches are undone at the knee, his stockings ungartered. On the extreme l. Bond, the clerk at Bow Street, stands on an upturned tub, his hands on his hips, saying, Slap away Boys, slap away: I am Bond for all the mischief you do—I hope soon to be a Just-ass myself, for my Ears are now grown almost as long as Just-ass Addleheads—

The background is the lower part of the house from which the E. O. table has been taken, showing the door, part of two sash-windows. Plaster has fallen off in patches showing bricks.

Below the title is engraved N.B. The Jack-Asses are to be indemnified for all the mischief they do, by the Bulls & Bears of the City.

This satire is founded on a raid on 1 Aug. on Dr. Graham's, the quack, who had moved his Adelphi establishment, see Nos. 5766, &c., 6325, to Schomberg House, Pall Mall, calling it the 'Temple of Health and of Hymen'.¹ In a raid three days earlier the tables had been cut to pieces but the constables 'were not strong enough to take the company, for there were not less than 300 persons present'. On this occasion Justices Hyde, Wright, and Addington broke two tables, 'Mr. Addington was very severely hurt by a stroke of a bludgeon on his head—an enormous crowd gathered round the house, report having spread that Mr. Addington was killed.' The allusion to 'Bulls and Bears' was probably inspired by the statement that the laudable activity of the justices was caused 'by an application from the Directors of the Bank to Mr. Secretary Townshend, stating that they had suffered considerably by this public practice of gaming in the Metropolis, and requesting, on behalf of themselves, and the Public, that the laws now in being against gaming, might be extended as far as possible . . .' London Chronicle, 30 July—1 Aug.; 1—3 Aug. 1782.

The satire is also a characteristic attack on the methods and personnel of the Bow Street office, which Gillray followed up in No. 6121. Addington (see No. 5415) and Wright had been Bow Street magistrates under Sir John Fielding, who died in 1780. Bond was the very capable Bow Street clerk, see No. 5599, afterwards made a magistrate. See also Nos. 5928, 6118, 6119. Grego, Gillray, p. 43.

9 × 13 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6121 SAMPSON OVERCOME BY A PHYSITIAN.

[Gillray. n.d., after 1st Oct. 1782.]

Invented by a Thief!

Engrav'd by a Pickpocket!

Publshd by Bonde at the Thieftakers office Bow Street.

Engraving. Sampson Wright sitting in an arm-chair behind a small square table. He shrinks back, holding up his hands, as a man standing in front of the table thrusts his fist towards his face, saying, You Rascal! I'll break every Bone in your Body. A youth (r.) standing behind the assailant says, holding up a handkerchief, O Lord! O Lord! my poor Pap'll be killd! At the magistrate's r. hand stands (l.) a man who appears disconcerted; he is probably Bond, the clerk.

¹ Byng, M.P. for Middlesex, said on 5 June, 1782: 'E. O. tables were now to be found in every part of the town . . . he did not doubt, but shortly the electric bed itself would be turned into an E. O. table.' Parl. Hist. xxiii, p. 110.

On the wall over Wright's head are two prints, one of a rat caught in a trap called Trap'd; the other of a bird: this resembles a cock standing on a vase or pot; and if so it may represent the brutal sport of cock-throwing practised on Shrove-Tuesday, which, thanks to the efforts of Sir John Fielding and the Bow Street magistrates, had been more or less stopped in London. Possibly some such print with a cautionary intention was actually exhibited at Bow Street. Perhaps, however, the bird represents a decoy, if so it would be more in keeping with the spirit of this satire. On the table are writing materials and a purse inscribed Dirty Shillings, beside it lie coins.

It was a recurrent calumny against the Bow Street magistrates from Henry Fielding onwards that they used 'Thieftakers' to decoy persons into crime for the sake of rewards to be gained by convicting them. This is implied by the print Trap'd, as well as by the term Thief Taker's Office in the imprint. Bonde is an allusion to Bond, the clerk at Bow Street. A more recent accusation was that by their campaign against E. O. tables they had violated the liberty of the subject and 'Magna Charta', see No. 6120.

Beneath the title is etched:

*"If e'er we want a very valiant Knight,
"Have we not Sampson—bold Sir
Sampson Wright.*

Vide Beaut's of Adminⁿ.

*This Plate is humbly dedicated to the Magistrates of Westminster, as a grateful tribute to the unshaken integrity of a late Beknighted Justice, by their obliged Servant
On—slow—Dry—Butter.*

Sampson Wright, who had been Sir John Fielding's clerk, then an assistant magistrate at Bow Street, and had succeeded Fielding as Chief Magistrate on his death in 1780, was knighted on 4 Sept. 1782. The quotation (incorrect) is from a scurrilous political poem, the frontispiece to which, Ecce, dated 1 Oct. 1782, is No. 6033. The lines (p. 27) are:

When deep-laid plots of state, or war are plann'd,
Say are not N—th [North] and S—ch [Sandwich] both at hand?
And, if, to crown the whole you want a knight,
Have we not Sampson—hold—Sir Sampson Wright?

For Bond see No. 5599, and for another attack on the Bow Street magistrates by Gillray, No. 6120. Cf. also No. 5197. Grego, Gillray, p. 43. 11¼ × 9¼ in.

6122 JUDGE THUMB, OR—STICKS OF A LAWFUL SIZE FOR FAMILY DISCIPLINE.

Pub. by I. Cooke, Temple Bar Nov^r. 21. 1782. [? Hixon]

Engraving. Judge Buller in judge's wig and gown, walking, r. to l., carrying in both hands a bundle of rods resting on his l. shoulder. He is saying, Here's amusement for married gentlemen or, a Specific for a Scolding Wife; who buys of me.

In the background (l.) a man has seized his wife by the arm, and raises a stick to beat her; she says: Oh Murder! Murder! Oh cruel Barbarian. He answers, Cruel, ha! tis according to Law, you Jazabel. Both are dressed in the fashion of the day; she wears a cap, a wide petticoat, and frilled apron.

This would appear to have suggested Gillray's well-known satire, No. 6123, which it closely resembles in design; see also No. 6124. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. ccix.

$9\frac{5}{8} \times 7\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6123 JUDGE THUMB, OR—PATENT STICKS FOR FAMILY CORRECTION: WARRANTED LAWFUL!

[Gillray.]

Pub^d Nov^r 27th 1782, by E. D'Achery, S^t James's Street.¹

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Judge Buller, walking l. to r., in judge's wig and gown. He carries a bundle of rods on his l. shoulder, another bundle under his r. arm. He is saying, Who wants a cure for a rusty Wife? Here's your nice Family Amusement for Winter Evenings! Who buys here. His head is very fully characterized, and is, according to a contemporary note on one impression, 'a very striking likeness'.

In the distance, on the r., a screaming woman runs away from her husband, who raises his stick above his head with both hands. She cries Help! Murder for God's sake, Murder! He says, Murder, hay? its Law you Bitch! its not bigger than my Thumb! They are dressed like working people. The background is a high stone wall, freely sketched, with clouds above it.

Buller (1746-1800) was reported to have said that a husband could thrash his wife with impunity provided that the stick was no bigger than his thumb. See Nos. 6122, 6124. Grego, Gillray, pp. 43-4; Wright and Evans, No. 13. $12 \times 8\frac{13}{16}$ in.

A reduced copy (coloured) is in 'Caricatures', v, p. 6. B.M.L. Tab. 524. a. Another reduced copy was published in The Caricatures of Gillray [1818]. B.M.L. 745. a. 6.

Both copies, $6\frac{3}{4} \times 5\frac{1}{16}$ in.

6124 MR. JUSTICE THUMB IN THE ACT OF FLAGELLATION.

[1 Feb. 1782]

Engraving From The Rambler's Magazine. Judge Buller (r.), in judge's wig and robes, is raising a stick above the shoulders of a woman, who cowers away from him, holding up her hands. He says Tis no bigger than my Thumb. She says, Would I had known of this before Marriage. She is dressed in a cap, a petticoat, and an under-bodice; her stays lie on a chair (l.) against which a cat is rubbing itself. A dog (r.) barks. Leaning against the wall is a large bundle of rods like those in Nos. 6122, 6123. A partly-rolled document lies on the floor inscribed A Husband may Chastize his Wife with a Stick the Size of his thumb. Coke.

$5\frac{1}{8} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6125 A SUNDAY CONCERT.

[By C. Loraine Smith]²

Pub^d 4th June 1782 by M. Rack London.

Aquatint. Musicians are grouped round a piano. Their names (some misspelt) are written in the margin. The pianist sits in profile to the r. looking fixedly at his score; he is Ferdinando Bertoni, a Venetian composer who accompanied his friend Pacchierotti to England. The most prominent of the musicians is Pacchierotti, who stands behind the piano next the pianist, holding open a music book, but smiling at a lady, who sits (r.) on a bench among the performers. She is Lady Mary Duncan, whose admiration for Pacchierotti's singing was the talk of the town, carried to the point of absurdity, and of discourtesy to other singers. (Walpole, Letters, xii. 141, 3 Jan. 1782, and xv. 16-17, 4 July 1791.) She is the largest figure in the design, out of scale with the other figures. She sits in profile to the r. holding up a closed fan, gazing intently at Pacchierotti. Behind her stands the player of the bass, identified as Cariboldi. Seated on the bench next her, on her r. hand and wearing spectacles, is a man playing the oboe, identified as Hayford. Seated in a chair in front of Lady Mary and on the pianist's r. hand is the cellist, Cervetto, evidently the younger Cervetto (1747-1837), who played at the professional concerts at the Hanover Square Rooms from 1780. Behind the piano stand (l. to r.) a violinist, identified as Salpietro, an oboist, J. C. Fischer (1733-1800), who was a great attraction at the Bach-Abel and Vauxhall concerts, and another violinist, Langani or Langoni. To the r. of the piano, blowing the French horn, stands Pieltain. In the foreground (r.) in profile to the l. sits Miss Wilkes on a stool, her hands in a muff, smiling at Dr. Burney, who stands bending towards her, his hands held out. He wears a bag-wig and sword, and appears to be deep in conversation in spite of the singing of Pacchierotti, a fashionable habit much condemned by his daughter Frances, see Cecilia. Behind Miss Wilkes on the r. stands another of the audience, holding his hat under his arm.

¹ On one impression W. Humphry 227 Strand has been substituted for E. D'Achery.

² Written on the print.

A concert at Dr. Burney's. Reproduced, Burney, Hist. of Music, ed. F. Mercer, 1934.

13½ × 16½ in.

6126 THE RIVAL QUEENS OF COVENT GARDEN AND DRURY LANE THEATRES, AT A GYMNAS TIC REHEARSAL!

[? c. Oct.-Nov. 1782]

Nº 66 Drury Lane.¹

Engraving. A pugilistic encounter between Mrs. Siddons (l.) and her rival (r.), who face each other with outstretched arms and clenched fists. Behind Mrs. Siddons (l.) stands her backer, evidently her husband, holding out a lemon with an anxious expression. A fool's cap is held above her head by a satyr-like creature wearing a fool's cap who leans upon a cloud; in his l. hand is a watchman's rattle. Behind her opponent stands her backer, probably her husband, a man wearing a hat, smiling, his hands on his hips. From a cloud above his head a man of dignified appearance with rays projecting from his head holds a laurel wreath over the head of the combatant. Both the actresses are wearing the adaptation of contemporary dress then worn on the stage by tragedy queens; Mrs. Siddons's breast is bare but her rival is decorously clothed. On the extreme l. is a group of five spectators, standing below the level of the stage. In the lower margin phrases are etched which are evidently intended to be spoken by the four principals: William Siddons says, Sweet wife! you have seen cruel proof of this woman's strength I beg of you for your own sake to embrace your own safety and give over this attempt. Mrs. Siddons says, Nay, an thou'lt mouth, I'll rant as well as thou. Her opponent says, I will fight with her upon this throne untill my eyelids will no longer wag. Her backer says, Keep it up Nan! Devil bury me but the Goddess will soon do her over!

¹ The address of Holland.

This appears to be the print advertised in a 'Catalogue of Books, Pamphlets and Prints, to be had at W. Holland's Museum of Genius, No. 50, Oxford-Street . . .' in Jordan's Elixir of Life, 1789, as 'The Rival Queens; or Mrs. S—dons, and Mrs. C—f—d Boxing for the Theatrical Laurel'. Mrs. Crawford (1734–1801) or Mrs. Ann Spranger Barry, like Mrs. Yates and Miss Younge (see No. 5202), was a rival of Mrs. Siddons. Boaden, Memoirs of Mrs. Siddons, i. 300. The original title, however, suggests the rivalry between Mrs. Siddons at Drury Lane and Mrs. Yates (Mary Ann, known as Anna Maria) at Covent Garden during the season 1782–3, when both played the part of Euphrasia in Murphy's Grecian Daughter, and an anonymous critic, probably her husband, supported the claims of Mrs. Yates. Mrs. Yates played Euphrasia for the first time on 21 Oct. 1782, Mrs. Siddons on 30 Oct. with her husband as Evander. Ibid. i. 309, 339.

8 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6127 THE RESURRECTION OR AN INTERNAL VIEW OF THE MUSEUM IN W—D—M—LL [WINDMILL] STREET ON THE LAST DAY.

[? Rowlandson.]

Pub as the Act directs Feb^y 6th 1782 by H. Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured impression). The interior of a large circular building, the roof supported by two tiers of columns. This is the anatomical museum of William Hunter (1718–83), who in 1770 built a house with a lecture-theatre, dissecting-room, and museum for his anatomical and pathological collections. A row of figures extends across the foreground: in the centre is William Hunter in a tie-wig, saying, O what a smash among my Bottles and Preparations! never did I suppose that such a day could come. The other figures, those of specimens, either nude figures or skeletons, are (l. to r.): a man saying, My wife risen again!—that's one Rib more than I wish'd to find. Next, a man turning his head to the r. holds out a leg, his own l. leg having been amputated above the knee, saying, What this! arrah be easy my Dear Devil burn me if it be not my own I know it by the lump on the Shin here. His neighbour, whose l. leg is also missing, says to him, Damn me Sir that's my Legg. A headless man addresses Hunter saying, Where's my Head.

On Hunter's l. hand an old woman with a stick says to him, Restore to me my Virgin-honor did I keep it inviolated 75 Years to have it corked up at last. Next are two skeletons shaking hands with each other: one says, Prodigiously oblig'd to you Sweet Sir, the other says, My dear Madam I hope you are well I am over-joyed to see you. A fat man in profile to the r. says, Lack a day! did nobody see an odd large Stomach O what shall I do if I have lost my Stomach. (Cf. No. 5751.)

Behind is a small hunchback, ringing a bell and shouting. Under the colonnade in the distance are minute figures: a demon, two persons embracing, and a gesticulating figure. Under the upper colonnade stands another demon (r.). In the foreground at the feet of the figures are a jar, a skull and bone, a bag (?) and an arm.

The anatomical collections here satirized are now in the Hunterian Museum of Glasgow University. For Hunter see No. 5119.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 11\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6128 THE LAWYERS LAST CIRCUIT.

[?After Rowlandson.]

Publish'd April 25 1782 by J. R. Smith N^o 83 opposite the Pantheon Oxford Street London

Stipple. Four skeletons riding (r. to l.) on skeleton horses, carrying off a fat lawyer. The two foremost horses are galloping almost neck and neck apparently towards a gulf. The lawyer sits back to back with the rider of the near horse, to whom he is bound. He is shouting and struggling to get free; the skeleton holds up a bone. Behind him (r.) ride two other skeletons on skeleton horses, the foremost holding up a scourge. A sign-post (r.) points the Road to Hell. Two skulls (r.) lie in the foreground. Beneath the title is engraved:

Where be his quiddits now? his quilllets? his cases? his tenures? and his tricks? Why does he suffer this rude knave to knock him about the sconce with a rotten jaw-bone, and will not tell him of his action of battery? . . .

Hamlet.

This resembles in manner some of the plates for The English Dance of Death, 1815-16.

A reduced version (coloured), dated 1806, is No. 1, Pl. 7 in a series issued by Fores. 'Caricatures', x, p. 223, B.M.L. Tab. 524.

A later print with the same title (n.d.) by J. Baker, published by E. King, Chancery Lane, appears to have been imitated from this, though with very considerable alterations. A coloured impression is in B.M.L. Tab. 524, iv, p. 125.

$4\frac{5}{8} \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6129 HOGARTH'S CREST.

[R. Livesay sc.]¹

Publish'd April 23^d 1782, by R^d Livesay at M^{rs} Hogarths Leicester Fields.

Engraving. A scroll-work design enclosing the word Cyprus forms a pedestal to support the 'Cyprian cone', the symbolic form under which Venus was worshipped at Paphos. This cone is in the form of a spiral or a pyramidal shell. It appears in The Analysis of Beauty, No. 3217 (1753), the spiral being 'the line of grace', 'represented by a fine wire properly twisted round the elegant and varied figure of a cone'. It also appears in a medallion under The Bathos, No. 4106 (1764).

The crest was designed for Hogarth by Charles Catton the coach-painter and was painted on his coach. A. Dobson, William Hogarth, 1908, p. 150. It was done from 'a sketch in oil, now in the possession of Mr. Catton', Sketches from Hogarth on fifteen plates: with the Descriptions, By Mr. Livesay, 1788.

$12\frac{1}{2} \times 9\frac{3}{16}$ in.

¹ See A. Dobson, Hogarth, 1898, p. 150.

6130 THE VICAR AND MOSES

[T. Colley?]

Pub^d accord^s to Act 21 Jan^y 1782. by H. Humphrey N^o 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving beneath which is engraved a song, 'The Vicar & Moses'. A fat vicar, wearing hat, gown, and bands, walks in profile to the r., taking the arm of his lean clerk, who holds out a lantern to light them towards a church which is seen among trees in the distance. In the vicar's r. hand is a box inscribed Tobacco; in his l., which is thrust through the clerk's arm, he holds a long pipe with a smoking bowl. The clerk has lank hair, wide-brimmed hat, and clerical bands, his stockings are ungartered; the candle in the lantern is broken and guttering. Both smile tipsily, the vicar sings Tol de rol de rol ti dol, the clerk, di dol, the refrain of the song engraved below. The clerk had come to fetch the vicar to bury an infant, had stayed to drink with him till past midnight, when both stagger out to go to the church.

This subject was etched by Rowlandson above a similar but not identical song with the same title, the words by G. A. Stevens,¹ published 8 Aug. 1784. Rowlandson's version closely resembles this (reversed) and must have been imitated from it, though drawn with far more ability. A mezzotint of the same subject with the same verses is No. 3771, ascribed to c. 1760, but published after Oct. 1784.

The popularity 'among the vulgar' of the print of 'The Vicar and Moses' is deplored by V. Knox: it is 'often hung up on the walls of farmhouses', and will inevitably diminish the respect for the clergy among those 'who from their infancy are accustomed to behold the parson an object of derision, a glutton and a drunkard', Winter Evenings, xxvii (1787); Br. Essayists, vol. xxxviii, p. 151.

$9\frac{11}{16} \times 9\frac{7}{16}$ in.

6131 THE PHYSICAL ERROR.

P. V. delin. J. Kent Fecit. [Gillray]

Publish'd Jan. 25. 1782 by W Humphrey. N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. The interior of a doctor's surgery. A stout butcher (l.) with a knife in his r. hand has seized the cravat of a grotesquely lean and terror-stricken doctor, who puts out his hands in terror. Behind the doctor appears the end of a table or bench (r.) on which are arranged medicine phials, pill-boxes, a jar and a pestle. Behind the butcher is an open door. Beneath the title is engraved:

Butcher. Prepare Sir—you poison'd my wife — — — and by Jupiter I'll Butcher you — — — —

Doctor. Good Sir — — hear me — Indeed — — upon my Honor it was only? — — only only — — A Physical Error.

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 6\frac{5}{8}$ in.

¹ The words of the printed broadside, The Vicar and Moses, in the Roxburghe Ballads, iii. 313, ascribed to Stevens in the B.M.L. Catalogue, are those of the song on this plate, not the version illustrated by Rowlandson.

6132 A MEETING OF UMBRELLAS.P. V. delin. J. Kent Fecit. [Gillray]Pub^d Jan 25 1782 by W. Humphrey. 227 Strand.

Engraving. Three men, each holding up an umbrella, meet and seem to find difficulty in passing. An officer, his hair in a long pigtail queue, walks (l. to r.), his umbrella held in his r. hand and resting on his l. shoulder. A lean man, holding his umbrella high, and with tasselled cane in his l. hand, advances from the r. Between them, his umbrella resting on his r. shoulder, a plainly dressed citizen stands full face, holding out his l. hand as if to prevent a collision between the other two. A stone wall forms the background.

For the introduction of the umbrella see No. 5793.

Grego, Gillray, p. 32. Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xxix.

7½ × 6½ in.

6133 CROSSING A DIRTY STREET.A. Grant del. [Gillray]London. Pub^d March 28th 1782 by H Humphrey, N^o 18 New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A gentleman (l.) hands a lady across the cobble-stones of a street; both are in back view. Between the stones are pools of mud or water. The man wears a high three-cornered hat, his hair or wig has curls, with a small queue.

The lady with her r. hand lifts at the back her voluminous and draped petticoats showing her legs nearly to the knee. She wears a large hat, cloak, a lace-trimmed apron and long gloves. For the signature A. Grant cf. No. 5929.

Grego, Gillray, p. 33 (reproduced).

9½ × 7½ in.

6134 SKIRMISHING TO THE REAR.R. Bran sc.

[From an original drawing sketch'd in the Mess Room, by an Officer in Ld. S—ds Reg^t of Light Horse.]¹ [1 Feb. 1782]¹

Stipple. A camp scene: a light dragoon has been unseated by his horse, which stands, head down, ears back, heels in the air; its rider clutches the mane and is about to fall over its head, his helmet is falling off. He is facing a ragged woman (l.), with a child on her shoulders, who is laughing at him, her arms akimbo. The soldier's carbine has been discharged by the accident, it is firing at a sign-board which hangs from a post (r.). This is the head and shoulders of the Duke of Cumberland holding a staff inscribed, The Duke of Cumberland Suttling House. On the r. is a row of tents from which soldiers and women look on with amusement.

Evidently the militia regiment of light dragoons (22nd Sussex) raised in 1779 by J. B. Holroyd (cr. Baron Sheffield in 1781), of which he was Colonel. G. E. C., Complete Peerage. See Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, i. 243. 9 × 10¾ in.

¹ The publication line has been cut off; it is supplied from a note by Mr. Hawkins.

6135 TASTING.I. Nixon Inv^t et del.Publish'd May 21st 1782 by W^m Wells N^o 132 (opposite Salisbury Court) Fleet Street London

Engraving. A civic feast: men sit on each side of a table whose ends are cut off by the margins of the print. Four men sit on a bench on the near side of the table: a short man (l.) in regimentals, his hair or wig in a long pigtail queue, probably an officer in the city militia, drinks from a tankard. Next him a man in bag-wig and laced coat is waggishly pouring the contents of a sauce-boat into the coat-pocket of the man on his r. hand, who, quite unconscious of this, is stuffing into his other pocket provisions abstracted from the table. The man on the extreme l. lifts his glass in his l. hand, looking across to the man at the opposite corner of the table, who stands to return his toast. On the farther side of the table are six men. A waiter serves a stout man with wine. The wall of the room forms the background: in the centre is a chimney-piece, over which is the seated T.Q.L. portrait of a Lord Mayor wearing his civic chain and smoking a long pipe; his elbow rests on a table and on a document Pro Magna Charta. An open book is Lord Littleton on Co[ke]. On each side of the chimney-piece hang hats, one with a tasselled cane.

7 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 10 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.6136 THE TAYLOR TURN'D SPORTSMAN.

[R. Dighton?]

Published by R. Sayer, N^o 53, Fleet Street, as the Act directs, 4 June, 1782.

Engraving. The tailor (l.) drops his gun, which is going off, and staggers backwards, holding up both hands in alarm; his wig and hat are falling off. A tape-measure hangs from his coat-pocket. Four birds fly away (r.). In the middle-distance a man with a spade, his hands on his hips, is grinning at the sportsman. In the foreground (r.) is a tree, in the distance are bushes, a windmill, a thatched cottage, and a haycock. Beneath the design is engraved:

*There once was a Taylor a Shooting wou'd go,
Who before had ne'er fir'd a Gun we well know;
The Piece double charg'd hit him full on the Breast,
And gave him the Attitude here as express'd
The Gun left his Hand and the Birds flew away
And the Taylor's been sick of the Sport to this Day.*

In Sayer's book of 'Drolls'.

5 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.6137 SUMMER DRESSESJohannes Johⁿstonus in lucem protulitPublished as the Act directs Sept^r 2^d 1782.*

Engraving (coloured impression). Three ladies stand, two wearing light transparent dresses, through which their nude figures are visible. The third, who is partly concealed behind and between the other two, wears a tight coat unbuttoned to show ruffles. The other two wear lace fichus, frilled aprons, and frilled petticoats. All wear hats.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*My dear fair Friends
For two great Ends
This Summer Dress is recommended
Your Health's secured
Sweet-Hearts insured
The happy Objects here intended.*

$12\frac{7}{16} \times 9\frac{7}{16}$ in.

6138 ST. GEORGES FIELDS, OR THE POSTS NOT WIDE-ENOUGH FOR FATTY.

Printed for R. Sayer, and J. Bennett, Map & Printsellers, N^o 53. Fleet Street, as the Act directs, 21. Sep. 1782.

Engraving. A very fat woman is squeezing with difficulty between posts through which goes a foot-path. She is being helped through by two men companions, one of whom pulls her, the other (l.) pushes her from behind with his closed umbrella. All are dressed in the fashion of the day. Behind them is a board, extending over a gateway in a paling, inscribed Half Way House Cottrell, From Old Slaughters Coffee House, dealer in Foreign Spirituos Liquors. Dinners Drest on the shortest Notice. Behind are trees, through which appears the 'Half-way House'.

This is evidently the Half-way House from the Borough to Westminster Bridge, which was immediately south of the Restoration Spring Garden in St. George's Fields, at one time rival of the neighbouring Dog & Duck. W. Wroth, The London Pleasure Gardens of the Eighteenth Century, 1896, p. 264.

$6\frac{5}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ in.

A mezzotint of a similar subject, evidently imitated from this, called Labour in Vain—or Fatty in Distress, is No. 591 in Carington Bowles's series of mezzotints. [c. 1786.]

6139 FOUGHT ALL HIS BATTLES O'ER AGAIN
AND THRICE HE SLEW THE SLAIN.

Mr Bunbury del:

J^s Bretherton f

Publish'd 1st Jan^y 1782.

Engraving. Design in an oval. An old military officer with a wooden leg describes his campaigns to two cronies. He is seated in a chair (r.) in profile to the l. wearing regimentals and sword, his wig has a long loosely twisted pigtail queue; his wooden leg (r.) projects horizontally from his chair. He holds a map or plan taken from the wall, and is showing it to a stout man sitting on his r., who looks at it through spectacles. The third man standing behind, his l. arm on the back of the soldier's chair, looks over their shoulders at the map. At their feet a small dog lies asleep. Through the open street-door (l.) a man is seen dancing along while he plays a fiddle.

10×9 in.

6140 A MODERN SPREAD EAGLE.Mr Bunbury del.J^s Bretherton fPublish'd 3^d Jan^y 1782.

Engraving. In front of the sign of the (Hapsburg) Spread Eagle on a vertical post, a lady and gentleman stand together in back view, their attitude reflecting that of the bird with its two necks. She stands (l.) slightly behind him taking his arm and looking to the l., holding up a closed fan. He bends to the r. holding out his hand as if to greet an acquaintance. In the background (r.) is the side of a building.

Two impressions, one '2^d Proof', one slightly aquatinted.

9 × 6½ in.

WARLEY HO!

[See No. 4761—23 Jan. 1782]

J. Bretherton after Bunbury.

A militia officer and his wife riding to the camp.

6141 No. 14 CONVERSAZIONE.H. Bunbury Esq^r Delin^tW. Dickinson Excudit

London, Published Feb^y 11th 1782, by W. Dickinson Engraver and Printer N^o 158 New Bond Street.

Stipple. Ladies and gentlemen seated in a semicircle, while a footman holds a circular tray on which are tea-cups, &c. In the foreground a man sits (c.) his bag-wig hanging over the back of his chair facing the semicircle. On the extreme l. a man sits stiffly, hat under his r. arm, tea-cup in his l. hand; next is an elderly and ugly woman, holding a fan; then a stout man seated uncomfortably on the edge of his chair. Then a lean and ugly old woman sitting very upright, with a fan. In the centre of the circle, full face, holding a tea-cup in both hands and looking downwards, is a lady with enormously wide petticoats, who appears to be the hostess. Next stands the footman, who is glaring with scorn at a French manservant who stands behind the guests on the l. holding a plate of bread and butter.

The remaining guests are in a group on the r. A stout and ugly man, in profile to the l., stretches out his hand, either in gesticulation, or to take a cup of tea from the tray. Next him is a plainly dressed man with an enormous wig who is laughing and looking through a single eye-glass. These two are the only guests who show the slightest animation, the others sitting rigidly silent. On the extreme r. sits a young lady of pleasing appearance, in profile to the l., looking down demurely at her fan. Behind her (r.) appears the head of a good-looking young man, whose arm rests on the back of her chair. Two oval pictures are indicated on the back wall of the room.

Another impression with publication line, &c. but without title.

14¾ × 20½ in.

ENGLISHMAN AT PARIS, 1767.

[See No. 4185—23 Feb. 1782]

J. Bretherton after Bunbury.

Another impression, coloured, with the publication line,

Publish'd Feb^y 27th 1799, by J. Harris, Sweetings Alley, Cornhill, London.

6142 DR. DAWDLE IN A HURRY.

Mr Bunbury del.J^s Bretherton f. 1st March 1782.

Engraving. An elderly doctor, wearing a tie-wig, riding (r. to l.) on a wretched cob, with shaggy fetlocks and long unkempt tail. The rider, frowning fiercely, holds his whip as if about to slash the animal's head, while he is pulling hard at the reins.

Two impressions, one slightly aquatinted and without title.

$8\frac{3}{8} \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6143 RICHMOND HILL.

H. Bunbury Esq^r Delin^tW. Dickinson Excudit

London, Publish'd March 1st 1782, by W^m Dickinson Engraver & Printseller N^o 158, New Bond Street.

Stipple. Holiday-seekers driving and walking along a high-road with a margin of grass, evidently the Sunday crowd of 'cits' so often described in contemporary satire. The chief group is a high phaeton of fashionable shape, but attached to two miserable hacks, who refuse to move, though they are being dragged at the head by a man with a long whip. The driver, who wears a looped hat and top-boots, kneels in the phaeton leaning forward over the horses and raising his (broken) whip with an expression of fury. His companions are two ladies of pleasure who sit one on each side of him. The one on his r. holds up the top of the broken whip, its lash streaming behind her. The other, smiling, holds his l. arm as if to prevent his falling from the carriage in his excitement. On the panel of the phaeton are the initials ON. This carriage-full has just been passed on the r. by a fashionably dressed man driving (r. to l.) a high-stepping horse in one of the new high two-wheeled gigs, see Nos. 5933, 6146. He looks round at them laughing.

Behind (r.) is a hackney coach (number 251) driving from l. to r., the horse being cut off by the margin of the print. A woman seated on the box holds the rein. Through the window over the door (it has no side windows) is seen a man seated with his back to the horse. A man sits on the roof looking through a telescope. Riding in the same direction (l. to r.) on the off-side of the hackney coach are an elderly man on a long-tailed cob or pony and a pretty young lady on a white horse. A spaniel runs behind them.

In the foreground are pedestrians. A man stands in back view, legs apart, gazing at the stationary phaeton. On the extreme l. a dejected-looking man and his wife walk wearily along. He wears a handkerchief tied round his head, under his hat, she holds his wig in her l. hand, her r. hand rests on the small of his back. He is carrying his stick in one hand, in the other a large bouquet of flowers in a paper sheath. Two dogs approach each other. Behind the two pedestrians, a man on horseback is in difficulties, his reins are slack and he holds the mane of the horse, which appears to be about to advance across the road in front of the advancing gig. In the background is a park-paling with trees showing above it.

The drawing for this print was exhibited at the R.A., 1781, and presented to H. Walpole; see his effusive thanks, Letters, xi. 434-5.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. cxxv.

$17\frac{1}{8} \times 29\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6144 A LONG STORY*Designed by H. W. Bunbury Esq^rLondon publish'd april 25th 1782 by J. R. Smith N^o 83 opposite the Pantheon Oxford Street.*

Stipple. A number of men seated round a circular table over the wine manifesting sleepiness or exhaustion in different ways, while an officer in regimentals harangues them on some campaign. He sits over the table, in profile to the r., gesticulating with outstretched arms over a plan drawn on the table-cloth. Two overturned wine-glasses lie in front of him, two empty bottles stand on the table. On the farther side of the table a man stands up, stretching and yawning violently. His neighbour on his r. also yawns; the man on his l. supports his head on his hands, scowling at the speaker through half-closed eyes. Next him (r.) a man in profile to the l. holding a wine-glass yawns widely. Two others in profile to the r. are asleep in attitudes of extreme weariness. A very fat man, sitting on the l. turned away from the table, with outstretched legs in top-boots, yawns violently. From the r. enters a servant with tousled hair, wearing a striped jersey; he is bringing in a boot-jack and pair of slippers, he too is yawning violently. In the foreground are two dogs.

Two impressions, in one the title and publication lines are etched, in the other engraved.

11 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 15 $\frac{3}{16}$ in.

6145 A HAIL STORM*Drawn by H. W. Bunbury Esq^rLondon Publish'd April 19. 1782 by J. R. Smith, N^o 83, opposite the Pantheon, Oxford Street.*

Stipple. Three pedestrians are walking (r. to l.) into the teeth of a storm. In front is a very stout man with a globular figure, the lower part of his tightly buttoned coat blows backwards. He wears spurred top-boots, and his hands meet across his chest, holding a stick. He resembles caricatures of Captain Grose, see Nos. 4683, 5511, 5787, 5802. The next man wears a cloak which streams behind him as does his wig; he has a laced coat and hat, with two large keys tied to his wrist. A lean man (r.) puts his head down grimacing as he hastens along, his hair, queue, cravat, coat and breeches all blowing in the wind; his hands are clasped in front holding a stick which rests on his shoulder. Farther off, between the two foremost pedestrians, a man on horseback holds his nose, his bag-wig, cravat, and coat-tails blown by the wind. In front of him (l.) a short man is crouching in the lee of a bush, his hat and wig have blown off, a paper flutters from his hand. The clouds extending diagonally from the upper r. corner of the design indicate driving hail.

Another version, in reverse, etched and coloured (n.d.) is in 'Caricatures', ix, p. 52. B.M.L. Tab. 524 a.

10 × 12 in.

6146 SIR GREGORY GIGG.Designed by H. W. Bunbury Esq^rPublished July 23^d 1782 by J. R. Smith N 83 Oxford Street London.

Mezzotint. A young man driving (r. to l.) one of the new high two-wheeled gigs, see Nos. 5933, 6143. Its small body is poised high on springs above the large wheels; the driver leans forward to whip his pair of high-stepping horses, which are about to descend a precipitous hill. He wears the plain high-crowned hat which was so great a novelty in 1781 (see Nos. 5931, &c.) and top-boots. On the panel of the gig is a draped escutcheon with monogram or cipher. In the foreground are bushes and rough ground with a milestone, Miles XXI.

'Sir Gregory Gigg, or the City Beau' is the title of a song in O'Keefe's Son in Law, played at the Haymarket 1779, the songs only being printed.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. cxxiii.

11 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6147 A BORE.

C L S [?Charles Loraine Smith].

Publish'd April 6th 1782 by Ch^s Bretherton.

Engraving. Three men seated at a small round table. The one in the centre is the 'Bore'. His r. hand rests on an Ext—y Gazette which lies on the table, which he is expounding to the man who sits on his l. whom he is literally button-holing, holding the button of his coat with a fierce intent gaze. His companion on the other side lies back in his chair asleep, his mouth open, legs crossed, hands in his breeches pocket.

The word bore (or 'boar') was a new and fashionable word in 1766; 'for tiresome people and conversations'.¹

8 × 10 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6148 MODERN LOVE, PLATE I.

COURTSHIP.

Engraved after an Original Picture of Mr John Collett, in the Possession of Mr Bradford.

J. Collett pinxit

J. Goldar Sculpsit

Publish'd June 24th 1782² by John Boydell Engraver in Cheapside London.

Size of the Picture. 3^{ft} by 2^{ft}. 4ⁱⁿ

Engraving. A lady in profile to the r. seated in a wood, while a man dressed as a military officer lying at her feet, kisses her l. hand. Behind (l.) an old woman points out the couple to an elderly man, apparently the lady's father, who scowls at them. On a high pedestal (r.) inscribed Omnia Vincit Amor is a statue of Venus, with Cupid beside her; he aims an arrow at the lovers, while he tramples on a crown at his feet. A dog licks the lady's left hand. Beside her on the ground is a flute and an open book of music on which are the words, Affettuoso

*Each Art he tried the fair One's Heart to move
He sigh'd, & kist, & swore eternal Love.*

¹ Lady Sarah Lennox (Bunbury) in a letter of 9 Jan. 1766. She instances the Dukes of York and Gloucester as serving 'for an example of a boar'. Life and Letters, 1901, i, p. 179. The O.E.D. gives the word as meaning ennui in 1766, its extension to a tiresome person being dated 1812.

² Painted 1765.—D.N.B.

Beside the book is a paper inscribed, La Lettione del l' Amore A favourite Duet compos'd by Sig^r Pianissimo.

A peacock (l.) pecks at a basket of grapes. One of a series of four prints, see Nos. 6149-51.

13½ × 17½ in.

6149 MODERN LOVE. PLATE II.

THE ELOPEMENT.

J. Collett pinxit.

J. Goldar Sculpsit.

Engraved after an Original Picture of Mr John Collett, in the Possession of Mr Bradford.

Publish'd June 24th 1782¹ by John Boydell Engraver in Cheapside London.

Size of the Picture, 3^{ft} by 2^{ft} 4ⁱⁿ

Engraving. A sequel to No. 6148. A young girl (r.) is descending some steps by which she has crossed a high paling, her lover in profile to the r. receives her in his arms. An old hag waits, standing (r.) holding a purse in her l. hand. These three figures are intended for those in Plate I, but the lady looks many years younger; she wears a wide-brimmed flat hat over a close-fitting hood and a cape, instead of the more elaborate dress of Pl. I. Her lover wears military dress, with aiguillettes on the shoulder denoting a dragoon. A post-chaise and pair waits (r.) outside a low paling; on the panel is a coat of arms with the motto Ready. The postilion and coachman stand near their master (l.): the former is lifting up a small corded trunk, while a dog worries his cap which is on the ground; the coachman examines the priming of a pistol. At the foot of the ladder is a rectangular box tied with ribbon, inscribed For Miss Fanny Falsestep. Behind the paling (r.) is a notice board: Notice is hereby given that a Man Trap is set every Night within these Pales. In the lane where the post-chaise waits is a sign-post, pointing (l.) To London and (r.) This leads to the Great Northern Road. In the background are trees, a cottage with a dovecote, and the tower of a church, the clock pointing to seven minutes past five. See Nos. 6148, 6150, 6151.

13½ × 17½ in.

6150 MODERN LOVE. PLATE III.

THE HONEY-MOON.

J. Collett pinxit.

J. Goldar Sculpsit.

Engraved after an Original Picture of Mr John Collett, in the Possession of Mr Bradford.

Publish'd June 24th 1782¹ by John Boydell Engraver in Cheapside London.

Size of the Picture 3^{ft} by 2^{ft} 4ⁱⁿ

Engraving. A sequel to Nos. 6148, 6149. The young couple sit on a settee (r.) by a circular table on which are an urn and tea-things with a pot of Virgin Honey. She leans on his shoulder while she puts a lump of sugar into the cup which he holds. A manservant enters from the l. with a plate whose contents fall to the ground as a monkey seated on a cabinet pulls his queue. Three dogs and a cat are in the room.

¹ Painted 1765.—D.N.B.

The room is panelled and is a good example of a well-furnished breakfast-parlour of the period. Books and papers scattered about are inscribed with various allusions to matrimony. See also No. 6151.

13 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 17 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6151 MODERN LOVE, PLATE IV.

DISCORDANT MATRIMONY.

Engraved after an Original Picture of Mr John Collett, in the Possession of Mr Bradford.

J. Collett pinxt

J. Goldar Sculp^t

Publish'd June 29th 1782^t by John Boydell, Engraver in Cheapside, London.

Size of the Picture 3^{ft} by 2^{ft} 4ⁱⁿ

Engraving. A sequel to Nos. 6148, 6149, 6150. The interior of a parlour. The husband (r.) leans on a table looking towards a meretricious-looking maidservant (l.) who has just brought in two children: a little girl whom she holds in her arms, and an older boy who drags across the floor a broken guitar which is harnessed to a toy horse. The maid looks alluringly at her master, a paper hangs from her pocket inscribed The Willing Maid. The lady, who appears to be ill, is seated by a circular table, leaning her head on her hand. She looks with an expression of distress towards her husband. On the table is an open book inscribed Inconstancy A Poem—Eternal Love Let no Man swear, and medicine phials, one labelled A Composing Draught. A dog licks her hand. A black servant stands by the table holding two other phials; he watches the maidservant with a scowl.

The pictures on the walls, the books and the behaviour of the animals all indicate the inconstancy of the husband: two dogs (r.) coupled by a chain snarl at each other, their fore-paws resting on a book, On the legality of Divorces. A monkey (r.) seated on a toy-drum on a chair holds an open book, Paradise Lost Hail Wedded Love Mysterious Law. A book falls from the table inscribed, The Scene is Changed or the faithless Husband. The children's toys include three dolls: a king in ermine robes, crown and sceptre, a bishop, and a Harlequin.

13 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 17 $\frac{3}{16}$ in.

6152 TAX ON POST HORSES

John Nixon Inv^t 1782

[Paul Sandby aquatint.]

Aquatint. A stout elderly man on a lean hack, riding (l. to r.) towards London. His servant rides behind him, but is falling over the head of his horse, which is on its knees, collapsing under its burden: saddle-bag, a portmanteau, a bundle topped by a three-cornered wig-box inscribed Dr. Drowsey. His hat, wig, and riding-whip are on the ground. The doctor rides on, unconscious of the accident.

In the foreground (r.) is a high brick wall which a projecting sign shows to be the corner of a public-house. The sign appears to be the head of George III, on a cracked and damaged sign-board, from which the name, ^t Painted 1765.—D.N.B.

John Bull, has broken, and hangs suspended. A broom is placed over the sign. A magpie in a wicker cage is partly visible, hanging from the front of the house. In the distance (r.) are spires and towers of London with the dome of St. Paul's. A sign-post (l.) points To Oxford. Behind the riders are trees.

A tax on wagons, as part of a tax on the carriage of goods, figured in North's budget for 1782, but not one on post-horses. Post-horses were taxed in 1780. Parl. Hist. xxii, p. 1159.

10 $\frac{11}{16}$ × 17 in.

6153 A JOURNEYMAN PARSON GOING ON DUTY.

R. Dighton delin.

Publish'd by R. Sayer, 53 Fleet Street.

[? 1782]

Engraving. A companion print to No. 6154. A lean parson on a sorry-looking horse rides, r. to l., along a country road. He wears a gown and bands, with an ill-fitting wig partly concealing his hair. Under his arm is a portfolio inscribed Sermon. He has just passed an inn door (r.) in which stands a fat butcher holding a tankard, who grins complacently towards him. Two grinning yokels stand behind the butcher. The sign of a harrow hangs from a projecting beam. See Nos. 5799, 3754 (c. 1782), 3756 (c. 1785-6).

Reproduced, A. S. Turberville, Men and Manners of the Eighteenth Century, 1926, p. 288.

In book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

7 $\frac{1}{16}$ × 8 $\frac{13}{16}$ in.

6154 A MASTER PARSON RETURNING FROM DUTY.

R. Dighton delin.

Publish'd by R. Sayer 53, Fleet Street.

[?c. 1782].

Engraving. A companion print to No. 6153. A fat parson riding (l. to r.) a handsome horse arrives at the high iron gate of his house, which is seen in the background. He points arrogantly to a groom in livery, who stands (r.) holding another horse whose head appears on the r. The groom raises his hat. A butler holding a bunch of keys stands in front of the gate. In the distance among trees (l.) is a church spire. See Nos. 5799, 3753 (c. 1782), 3755 (c. 1785-6).

Reproduced, A. S. Turberville, Men and Manners of the Eighteenth Century, 1926, p. 288.

In book of Sayer's 'Drolls'.

7 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 8 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

Nine prints from the series of mezzotints published by Carington Bowles.¹

6155 A LESSON WESTWARD—OR A MORNING VISIT TO BETSY COLE.

466. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs, 2 Jan^y 1782.

Mezzotint. A girl, in profile to the l., seated on the box-seat of a four-wheeled cart drawn by a pair of horses. She is receiving a driving-lesson from a man who sits behind her on the edge of the cart in which is a sheaf of straw. On the side of the cart is a board inscribed Tom Longtrot's Academy for Young Ladies. Driving taught to an Inch, Ladies compleatly finish'd in a fortnight, for Gig, Whiskey, or Phaeton: Single Lesson half a Crown, Five for half a Guinea.

¹ No. 3754 has the imprint of Bowles and Carver.

The girl holds whip and reins very awkwardly, the hind wheel passes over one of a litter of small pigs which is with a sow in the foreground. A short stout citizen (l.) clutches a post or mile-stone in alarm at the prospect of being run over. The driver wears an elaborate hat with feathers and a muslin dress, very unlike the dress of the fashionable women-whips of the day, cf. No. 6114.

Beneath the title is engraved, Hammersmith Turnpike. and,

*When once the Women taken the Reins in hand,
'Tis then too true, that Men have no command.*

Behind the cart the upper part of the toll-house appears, with the head of a grinning spectator, probably the toll-keeper. By the toll is a large rectangular Georgian house with a square pillared porch inscribed WILLSON. This is the inn, The Bell and Anchor, which still exists (1932), altered, at the corner of Blyth Road close to Olympia.

A coloured impression is in 'Caricatures', i, p. 202. B.M.L. Tab. 524. $12\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6156 CAPT. JESSAMY LEARNING THE PROPER DISCIPLINE OF THE COUCH.

471. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in St Pauls Church Yard.

Published as the Act directs [date erased, 1782].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A young man, in military dress, of elegant and effeminate appearance, sprawls on a sofa, looking towards a young woman (r.) who leans towards him. She is of meretricious appearance, and wears the quasi-military riding-dress fashionable at this time in connexion with the militia camps of Coxheath and Warley. The room is luxuriously furnished. A round table with a wine bottle and glass is partly visible on the extreme r.

Perhaps intended for Captain Bisset and Lady Worsley, see No. 6105, &c. For satires on militia camps see No. 5523, &c. Similar in character to Nos. 5950, 6157.

$12\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{3}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', i, p. 173. B.M.L. Tab. 524.

6157 NARCISSUS AND THE NYMPH ECHO.

473. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in St Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased 1782].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A young military officer in full regimentals wearing a gorget and fringed sash, with a toupet-wig, lies on the grass admiring his reflection in a pool. His hat and sword lie beside him. A young woman, fashionably dressed, wearing a hat over a large frilled cap, stands behind a low bank (l.) holding out her hands in surprise.

Beneath the title is engraved, Ye Fates what made me chance to stroll that way,—Where Young Narcissus self admiring lay. The scene is a park, with trees and a circular temple (r.) in the background. Similar in character to Nos. 5950, 6156.

12 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', i, p. 83. B.M.L. Tab. 524.

6158 THE BARBER RIDING TO MARGATE.

474. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, No 69 in St Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [20 May 1782].¹

Mezzotint (coloured impression). Scene outside a posting inn. A man (r.) riding r. to l. clutches his horse round the neck, he has lost his stirrups and his hat flies off. The horse is rearing, startled by the drum and fifes of a recruiting party in Guards' uniform led by an officer with a drawn sword, and followed by three recruits wearing ribbon favours in their hats. The rider is fashionably dressed in riding clothes, a pair of curling tongs falls from his pocket, a box which he was carrying has fallen to the ground, where various articles of the barber's trade have fallen from it: tresses of hair, a packet of Powder, a comb, razor, &c.

In the background is a three-storied inn, with bay-windows on all floors. Spectators watch from the windows. The sign is hung from a standard (r.); behind (l.) are outhouses inscribed Licensed to [hire] post horses; a coach stands in front of them.

12 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', i, p. 190. B.M.L. Tab. 524.

6159 THE SAILOR RIDING TO PORTSMOUTH.

475. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, No 69 in St Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, 1782].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A sailor wearing striped trousers is seated outside an inn on a horse which is kicking, because one of two small boys (l.) is prodding him with a stick. The sailor holds a bowl of punch, which is being spilt as he loses his stirrups and clutches the animal's mane in alarm. In front of the horse (r.) stands a countryman with a handful of hay. At the door of the inn is a fat landlady, and on her l. a military officer of foppish appearance. The door has a small pediment inscribed M. Hewson Neat Wines. Above the door is the sign, a crescent surrounded by a huntsman's horn.

12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 10 $\frac{1}{16}$ in.

'Caricatures', i, p. 191. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

6160 A MORNING RAMBLE, OR—THE MILLINERS SHOP.

478. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, No 69 in St Pauls Church Yard, London. Publish'd as the Act directs [date erased, 1782].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). Interior of a milliner's shop, the counter running across the print, behind it are three milliners, dressed in the fashion of the day with elaborately frilled muslin caps on their high-dressed hair. Two fashionably dressed men are on the near side of the counter, intent on a flirtation. One, wearing riding-dress, sits on the edge of the counter, his legs dangling, while he leans on his elbow and looks over his r. shoulder towards a pretty young woman who is sewing, seated in profile to the r. The other visitor (r.) lounges against the counter as he hands a Masquerade Ticket to a young milliner. The third milliner stands; she is sewing at one of the elaborately frilled muslin head-dresses of the day.

¹ Date erased, but supplied from an impression belonging to Mr. W. T. Spencer of New Oxford Street (1932).

The print shows the arrangement of a shop at this period. The shop-window is partly visible on the l., with wares for sale suspended across it on cords. On the wall is an oval mirror in a carved frame, while on the r. shelves fill a recess in the wall and support boxes, inscribed Feathers, Love Coxcomb, Mode. An arched-top coffer, such as milliners in street scenes are depicted as carrying, stands open on the counter, a piece of lace hanging from it. On the near side of the counter is a tall circular stool for customers. In the foreground is a Pomeranian dog.

11 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

'Caricatures', i, p. 31. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

A MASTER PARSON WITH A GOOD LIVING (480).

Cf. No. 6154.

See No. 3753.—c. 1782.

A JOURNEYMAN PARSON WITH A BARE EXISTENCE (481).

Cf. No. 6153.

See No. 3754.—c. 1782.

6161 A RICH PRIVATEER BROUGHT SAFE INTO PORT, BY TWO FIRST RATES.

Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Publish'd as the Act directs [1782].

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A jovial sailor in a brothel holding his hat which is full of guineas. One gaily dressed woman (l.) in hat and cloak leans on his r. shoulder dipping her r. hand into the guineas. Another woman on his r. holds a watch and seals, while she puts her l. hand on his l. arm. Behind (l.) a stout woman is bringing in a large bowl of punch. A fourth woman is partly visible on the r.

Reproduced, C. N. Robinson, The British Tar in Fact and Fiction, 1909, p. 218 (with date 1782).

Also an uncoloured impression, publication line cut off.

12 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', i, p. 182. B.M.L. Tab. 524.

POLITICAL SATIRES

6162 WONDERS WONDERS WONDERS & WONDERS

Dedicated to the wonderfull wonderfull wonderer.

Sold by W. Humphrey 1783¹

Engraving. Couples of notorious enemies stand clasping hands in friendship. In the foreground (c.) is a group of three: Fox with a fox's head stands between Shelburne² (l.) and Lord Denbigh (r.), who has the body of a fox-hound. Fox holds Shelburne's r. hand, his l. arm is on the shoulder of Denbigh, who puts his forepaws affectionately on his shoulder. Fox says,

*I now will play the Foxes Part,
And gain a Secret from each Heart,*

Shelburne, smiling, says,

*I should not have used you so ill,
If I had not swallow'd a Scotch Pill,*

Denbigh says,

*Through you & Burke I lost my Place,
Yet I forgive the sad Disgrace.*

On the extreme l. stands Britannia, holding her spear, her shield beside her, the head of the British lion, couchant, appearing from behind it. Her r. hand grasps that of America, who holds in her l. hand a staff surmounted by the cap of Liberty. She wears the feathered head-dress and kilt of a red Indian. Britannia says, Come, Come, shake hands, and lets be Friends; America answers, With all my Heart, I've gain'd my Ends.

As a pendant to the pair stand Wilkes and George III on the extreme r. clasping hands, Wilkes holds up his l. hand saying,

*Your M . . . y has been long deceiv'd
And at your Subjects was much griev'd,*

The king answers,

*Enough! my Fault I own, my Subject Loyal,
And you much love, 'pon my Word Royal.*

Between and slightly behind these three groups are two other couples: the Duke of Richmond (l.) takes the hand of Parson Bate, wearing gown and bands and holding the Morn^s [H]erald. Richmond says, Parson I you forgive, I know youre Bate. Bate answers I did repent when it was too late. As a pendant to this pair, stand Sir Hugh Palliser and Keppel, both in naval uniform. Palliser rests his r. hand on a stick, Keppel grasps his l. hand in both of his. Palliser says, By Twitche's Arts I you accus'd; Keppel answers, And to forgive I ne'er Refus'd. Beneath the design is engraved:

*If Kat—to can Bring Such Wonders to pass
He sure deserves the Honor to Kiss the Kings —*

The title is taken from the advertisements which Katerfelto circulated

¹ Another publication line, a pendant to this (l.), appears to have been obliterated. Mr. Hawkins (MS. index) gives the date as 9 Nov. 1782.

² This figure is not without a certain resemblance to North, but is more like Shelburne, and the similarity to 6 in No. 6173 by the same artist leaves no doubt of his identity.

broadcast in London at this time, see No. 6326, &c. For Fox and Shelburne see No. 6022, &c. They were eventually reconciled (c. 1796) by their joint opposition to Pitt: Russell, Memorials & Correspondence of Fox, 1854, iii. 129. For Denbigh's deprivation of the Mastership of the Fox-hounds see No. 5976. The vendetta between Wilkes and George III was ended over the opposition to Fox's India Bill and their amity was the subject of caricatures in 1784. For Keppel and Palliser see Nos. 5536, 5537, &c.; for Richmond and Bate, No. 5666. Similar in manner to No. 6173.

$8\frac{3}{4} \times 14\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6163 THE RELIEF OF GIBRALTAR A CABINET COUNCIL

Devonshire Inv^t T. Colley In^s Richmond Fecit

Pub^d by Tho^s Colley Jan^y 1. 1783 London

Engraving. On a rectangular table in false perspective stands the grotesque bust of a woman whose hair forms waves which support a British man-of-war in full sail. In her breast is an open door. She appears to symbolize Gibraltar. On each side of the table sits a lady, T.Q.L., in profile, perhaps intended for the Dukes of Devonshire and Richmond (cf. Nos. 5478-80 where men are represented as women). Devonshire (l.) touches with a forefinger the object on the table. Her vis-à-vis (r.) holds in both hands the model of the angle of a fort, flying the British flag, with cannon in its embrasures. Behind the table (c.) stands a lean man, wearing a bag-wig, his head turned in profile to the r.

The intention of the satire is obscure: Keppel had been blamed by the king for negligence over the relief of Gibraltar, Corr. of George III, vi. 99, 11 Aug. 1782, but it seems more probable that it relates to the discussions (Nov.-Dec.) on the cession of Gibraltar, when Shelburne, the King, and Grafton were prepared to agree to an exchange, while Richmond and Keppel objected.¹ Fitzmaurice, Shelburne, 1912, ii. 208. Corr. of George III, pp. 159, 169, 170, 183-4; 192. Romilly, Memoirs, 1840, i. 250-5. Richmond's absorption in the Ordnance Office may also be satirized: Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 449-51. The Duke of Devonshire, though taking little part in politics, had a certain importance as the head of a great Whig family.

$6\frac{3}{4} \times 11\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6164 SECRET REFLECTION. OR THE STOOL OF REPENTANCE.

Pub^d 6th Jan: 1783 by W: Humpry [sic] N^o 227 Strand. London.

Engraving. Fox, with a fox's head, seated in a latrine, a small erection like a sentry-box with folding doors whose roof is inscribed The Gentlemens Garden. He looks down meditatively; a large label issues from his mouth inscribed:

*Sh—b—e [Shelburne] is a corrupted Government Tool
And I am a beshitten Independent Fool.*

One of many satires on the resignation of Fox on Rockingham's death, see No. 6010, &c.

$7\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{3}{4}$ in.

¹ The exchange of Gibraltar for Guadeloupe was agreed to at a Cabinet meeting on 3 Dec. 1782, Richmond and Keppel being present, but on the following day both opposed the exchange at an interview with the king. Corr. of George III, vi, pp. 170-2. See Fox's speech protesting against cession, 5 Dec. 1782. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 238-42.

6165 A LONG PULL. STRONG PULL. AND A PULL ALL TOGETHER.Pub Jan 9th 1783 by W Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. Lord Shelburne (l.) stands in the open doorway of the Treasury, his arms outstretched and pressing his hands against each side of the door, as he leans backwards to resist the efforts of four men who pull at a rope round his waist in order to drag him out of the building. Dunning, in legal wig and gown, stands behind him, holding him round the waist and by his arm, to prevent his being dragged out. Shelburne's complacent expression suggests that he expects to keep his place. The foremost of the men pulling the rope is Fox, who tugs hard, looking over his l. shoulder with an anxious expression towards Keppel immediately behind him. Keppel, who is looking at Fox with a melancholy expression, disappointed Fox by not resigning on Shelburne's appointment, and kept his post as First Lord of the Admiralty till 24 Jan. Next comes Richmond, in profile to the r., holding the rope over his r. shoulder; he was Master of the Ordnance in Shelburne's administration, although on 23 Jan. he told the king 'that disapproving of Lord Shelburne's assumption of too much power in the [peace] negotiation, he would go no more to Council' but would keep his post as Master of the Ordnance 'if the king desired it'. At the end of the rope is Burke, straining hard.

The defection of Keppel and Richmond is anticipated; they are rightly represented as adherents of Fox rather than of Shelburne. See No. 6023. $8\frac{13}{16} \times 13$ in.

6166 THE FOX AND STORK*T. Colley Fecet [sic]Pub^d by W Richardson Jan^y: 14 1783 N^o 174 near Surry Street Strand*

Engraving. The fox and stork in Æsop's fable are Fox and Shelburne. The stork (r.) is dipping his beak into a transparent long-necked jar, whose square base is inscribed The Treasury Jar, and taking the guineas which are at the bottom. The stork's head is that of Shelburne, his chin is inserted in the jar, and he smiles triumphantly; over the stork's neck is suspended the Garter ribbon. The fox (l.), with bushy eyebrows, bulbous nose, and hairy chin of Charles Fox, stands on its hind-legs, its fore-paws resting on the jar, looking at the inaccessible guineas with a melancholy expression. See No. 6010, &c., and for Shelburne No. 6018, &c. Possibly by an imitator of Colley's style. [? Gillray.]

 $5\frac{13}{16} \times 8\frac{13}{16}$ in.6167 THE SYMPATHIZING POLITICIANS.Pub^d by J. Barrow Jan^y 21. 1783. White Lion Bull Stairs Surry Side Black Friars Bridge.

Engraving. Charles Fox (l.), with a fox's head, shakes hand with a taller and slighter man who has a stag's head, with antlers. The latter says, Alas my Friend Fox, We are in the wrong Box. Fox answers Indeed my true Buck, We have very bad luck. Both wear bag-wigs and ruffled shirts. The man with the stag's head is probably Lord John Cavendish (a stag's head being the crest of the Cavendishes), who had been Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Rockingham ministry and had resigned with Fox on Shelburne's appointment as prime minister. See No. 6010, &c., and No. 6075.

6¼ × 6¾ in.

6168 L—D SHEL—, [SHELBURNE] BEGGING MONSIEUR
TO MAKE PISS OR P—E [PEACE].

Pub^d by J Barrow Jan^y 21. 1783. White Lion Bull Stairs Surry Side Black Friars Bridge.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Lord Shelburne (l.) holds out a chamber-pot towards 'Monsieur', a tall, thin, foppishly dressed man personifying France. Shelburne is wearing his Garter ribbon and star. Monsieur wears a high toupet-wig and long queue. Shelburne says, Monsieur, be so obliging as to make piss with us. Monsieur answers, By the House of Bourbon, with the War we'll go on. He stands in profile to the l., holding up his hands to ward off Shelburne's proposals and raising his l. leg to kick the proffered pot.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*He's no heart of Oak,
But he 's fit for a joke,
That will ask of a Frenchman a peace;
And such is our fate
That we have of late
Been degraded by puppies and geese.*

*To Britons success,
Against the Congress,
On the Seas & all over the plain;
May they boldly advance,
Make a Monkey of France,
And Asses of Holland & Spain.*

For the unpopularity acquired by Shelburne over the peace negotiations see Fitzmaurice, Shelburne, 1912, ii. 210 ff. See also Nos. 6009, 6171, 6172, 6182, 6184, &c.

6½ × 8½ in.

RAISING THE ROYAL GEORGE.

Boreas design'd it.

twitcher. sculpt^t

Pub 21st Jan. 1783, by W Humphrey N^o 227. Strand.

A reissue, with a different publication line, of No. 6043.

6169 THE NABOB RUMBLED OR A LORD ADVOCATES AMUSE-MENT.

[Gillray.]

Political Characters & Caracatures of 1783. N^o 1 Pub^d Jan 21. 1783 by E D'Achery. St James's Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Sir Thomas Rumbold, who stands, supported by his son, holding his r. hand to his forehead, vomits a shower of guineas into a large chamber-pot held by Dundas, the Lord Advocate of Scotland. The pot, which is ornamented with a thistle, is full of guineas, and stands on a three-legged stool. Dundas (r.), in legal wig and gown, kneels beside it, clasping it in both arms; he is saying, I weel tak them to Lochabar and wash them in the Brook. Rumbold is shackled by two chains, one attached to each ankle, and at the other end to a large weight or clog inscribed Sureties. Captain Rumbold, who wears regimentals with a gorget, holds his father's l. hand and arm, saying Ah! these dam'd Scotch Pills will kill poor Dad.

In the distance (l.) a military officer with a long queue, probably Captain Rumbold, is galloping off (r. to l.) mounted on an elephant and seated on the back of a large double sack which forms a saddle and is inscribed Roupees. He is saying I am off—I know good manners. An Indian seated behind him on the back of the elephant holds a tall umbrella over his master's head; he says, Me and Massa leave England He! He! He!

Behind the elephant a few palm-trees give an oriental touch to the landscape, which is otherwise of English character.

Rumbold was regarded as the typical nabob of fabulous and ill-gotten wealth. His prosecution in the Commons by a Bill of pains and penalties was managed by Dundas (whose Scottish accent was notoriously harsh); it was brought in on 3 May 1782 and abandoned 3 Dec. 1783. At the same time a Bill was brought in to restrain him from leaving the country, hence the clogs attached to his ankles. The charges against him broke down and were abandoned.

Captain Rumbold (d. 1786), lieutenant and captain in the 1st Life Guards, had been A.D.C. to Sir Hector Monro at the siege of Pondicherry and had been sent home with dispatches and colours. For the Rumbold case, 1781-3, see the documents, &c., in B.M.L. 583. h. 13, and The real Facts concerning Sir Thomas Rumbold, 1893. For contemporary opinion, Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 376-81; iii. 98-100. See also Nos. 5341, 6256.

An impression is in the possession of White's Club, apparently on account of the unauthenticated story that Sir Thomas Rumbold had been a waiter or even a 'black-shoe boy' at White's. See [Boulton], The History of White's, 1892, ii. 143 ff., where the print is reproduced.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 8 in.

6170 THE COMFORTS—AND—CURSE OF A MILITARY LIFE

Colley Fec'

Pub by E Darchery St James Street Jan^y 31. 1783.

Engraving. A design in two compartments, to contrast the lot of officers with and without political interest.

The design on the l. is headed FULPAY Borough Interest. Two portly and jovial senior officers in uniform with hats, sit at a round table drinking wine. One (r.) turns to the other holding up a full glass and pointing with his forefinger to the r. saying Success to the Peace Makers. The other sits with his l. hand resting on the table holding a full wine-glass which stands on a paper inscribed Promotions. His legs are crossed, his r. arm, which is over the back of his chair, holds a long tasselled cane. A bunch of grapes, a bottle labelled Claret, and a decanter are on the table. A pampered-looking spaniel lies at their feet. The luxury of their room is indicated by carpet with an elaborate pattern which reaches to the wall, by the mouldings on the wall, and by two oval mirrors in carved frames.

The other design (r.) is headed HALF PAY Ingrata Patria. The officer stands reflectively, in profile to the l., very upright, but with a wooden leg. In spite of a neat appearance, his coat is out-at-elbows, the fringe of his epaulette is worn away. A little boy hangs to his coat-tails. His wife, plainly dressed in the fashion of the day, with a large hat, sits full-face (r.) on the only chair. Behind is a square table on which is an enormous tankard inscribed Small Beer. A little boy grasps it with both hands; a smaller child in petticoats, wearing a wooden sword, holds the edge of the table. The room is poverty-stricken, the boards are bare, and there are holes in them. Its only furniture besides the chair and table is a small stool, a cask, and a broom. A book lies on the ground and a hungry-looking cat takes the place of the sleek spaniel. The plaster is coming off the wall, and its only ornaments are the officer's hat and sword, the scabbard of which is worn out, and a print, The Soldier—Tire'd of war (cf. No. 5784): an officer wearing a bag-wig raises a cane to strike an old soldier on crutches, who holds out his hat to beg. Beneath the design is engraved:

To the Commander in Chief and Secretary of War—Under all Administrations.

Gent^m

You have been ever found callous to the Meritorious claims of Veteran Soldiers and remain heroically unmoved by their memorials unless accompanied by a Bribe to your Secretarys or a Vote in a dirty Borough In hopes that the pencil may Succeed where the pen has not these contrasted Situations are humbly inscribed to you by an Injured Miles.

$8\frac{1}{8} \times 13\frac{3}{16}$ in.

6171 SHELburne—NS SACRIFICE

Invented by Cruelty.

Engraved by Dishoner.

Pub^d by E. Dashery [sic] Febth 10 [sic] 1783 St James Street.

Engraving. Two Red Indians are slaughtering American loyalists, Shelburne looks on with satisfaction and is attacked by Britannia. The figures are dispersed over the design. Beneath the title is engraved, Or the recommended Loyalists, a faithful representation of a Tragedy shortly to be performed on the Continent of America.

Shelburne (r.) stands full-face with his hands on his hips, smiling; he says, be not angry Madam, no peace, no place. Britannia (r.), in profile to the l., rushes towards him, holding up her spear to stab him to the heart, her shield on the ground beside her. She says, Inhuman smiling Hypocrite thus to disgrace my unsullied fame. Shelburne is looking to the l. towards an Indian brave with a tomahawk who is about to murder a wounded loyalist who lies on the ground. Behind the Indian (r.) a loyalist lies dead. Behind Shelburne stands a butcher, his knife and steel hanging from his waist, holding a handkerchief to his face; above him is engraved, Even Butchers weep. Three loyalists (l.) flee in terror; they are pursued by an Indian wearing a head-dress of feathers which denotes personifications of America. She (or he) has seized one of the loyalists by the coat-tail and raises a tomahawk to strike him down. He exclaims Ungratefull Britons to Abandon thus your Loyal friends. A few dwarf pine-trees indicate an American landscape.

The peace terms were much and unjustifiably attacked for leaving the loyalists to the mercy of the Americans, see Nos. 6182, 6184, 6223. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 416 ff.

$8\frac{1}{4} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6172 PEACE PORRIDGE ALL HOT | THE BEST TO BE GOT.

T Colley Eng^d:

Pub. by W Richardson Feb^y 11 1783. near Surrey Street Strand.

Engraving. Beneath are engraved the words of a song. Persons representing the powers negotiating peace stand holding basins of soup. France (l.) in profile to the r., in feathered hat, bag-wig, and ruffles, holds a smoking bowl, and smiles, saying, By gar John English you have well Crumb'd my dish.

Spain, full-face, in ruff, cloak, and slashed doublet, with jack-boots, says, my peace soup is made very good by Stewing down Minorca & the Floridas. England, stout, plainly dressed, with a large stick under his arm, stands in profile to the l., saying to France and Spain, my loss is your gain for my Soup is very Thin. America, in the foreground (l.), sits on a low bank, saying, I rest Contented with a dish of Independant Soup. She is an Indian woman with a head-dress and girdle of feathers. Holland, dressed as usual in a plain hat, short jacket, and wide breeches, stands (r.) holding a smoking tobacco-pipe in his hand. He turns away from a waiter (r.) who offers him a bowl, saying, I will not taste it yet as it is not relish'd to my mind. The waiter (l.) says, Taste it Mynheer 'tis better than you deserve.

Preliminaries of peace were signed at Versailles between Britain, France, and Spain on 20 Jan. 1783, preliminary articles for a separate peace having been signed between England and America on 30 Nov. 1782. After being violently attacked by Fox and North as a means to overthrow Shelburne, the terms were substantially accepted by the Coalition, see Nos. 6222, 6229. A truce was made with Holland at the same time, but the Dutch demands were refused and a definite peace was not made till 20 May 1784 on terms more favourable to England, see No. 6292. For the peace see also Nos. 6009, 6171, 6173, 6174, 6175, 6176, 6182, 6184, 6188, 6212, 6223, 6267.

Beneath the design the words of the SONG are engraved. Tune. Roast Beef of Old England. The first and last verses are:

*The Frenchman & Spaniard are both Cock-a-hoop
With America too they have got such nice Soup
Yet a Blow or two more might have made them all Stoop
O! the rare Soup & the Cooks boys
And O! the rare Cooks & the Soup.*

*Tho' things have gone Cross for a long time Confest
Yet now to lament, is no more than a Jest
But as well as we can out of Bad, make the best.*

6 × 8 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6173 A POLITICAL CONCERT; THE VOCAL PARTS BY

1. Miss America, 2. Franklin, 3. F—x, 4. Kepp—ll, 5. M^{rs} Britannia,
6. Shelb—n, 7. Dun—i—g, 8. Benidick Rattle Snake.

Colley Ingra^{d1}

Pub. by W. Richardson Feb 18. 1783 near Surry St Strand.

Engraving. A number of figures, sitting and standing, the words of their catch or song issuing in large labels from their mouths, their identity indicated by numbers referring to an explanation engraved beneath the title. In the centre stand (1) Miss America (l.) and (5) M^{rs} Britannia (r.), each with a hand on the staff of liberty, which is surmounted by a large Phrygian cap. America, wearing her head-dress of feathers and a draped kirtle with sandals, holds a sword; she sings, Oh give me death or liberty O give me &c. . . and 'Mrs. Britannia' holding her shield and spear, sings, Brittons never shall be Slaves. On each side of these two is a seated figure: (2), Franklin (l.) next America, and (6) Shelburne (r.) next Britannia. Franklin, a dignified figure, wearing a fur cap, as in recent French portraits, his l. hand thrust into his waistcoat, sings, We'll return it untainted to heaven well [sic] return &c. . . Shelburne, with a more jaunty air and his inevitable smile, sings, Oh what a charming thing a Battle, Oh &c. &c. Behind Shelburne (r.), his hand resting on the back of his chair, and in profile to the l., stands (7) Dunning, in councillor's wig, gown, and bands, singing, hum hum hum crick crack crick crack Cannons rattle Oh what a Charming thing a battle. Dunning was known as 'Orator Hum', see Nos. 6042, 6091. Behind Dunning, on the extreme r., stands (8) Benedick Rattle Snake, a creature with a man's body, but a snake from the waist downwards and with the head of a snake. He wears the coat of a military officer; from the pocket hangs a paper, dying Speech of Major Andree. He is singing, Blood & plunder oh what a Charming thing a Battle. Over his head is suspended a hatchment, Benedick Rattle Snake's Arms, a gallows on the cross-beam of which sits a devil playing a fiddle. He is Benedict Arnold, see No. 5331, the American officer whose treacherous design to surrender West Point in 1780 involved the death of Major André as a spy. After serving as brigadier-general with the British, Arnold came to England in 1782. Behind Franklin (l.) stands (4) Keppel, one hand thrust in his waistcoat, the other in his breeches pocket, singing, Then a Crusing we will go then a Crusing we will go. On the extreme l., next Keppel, stands Fox, his hands in his breeches pockets, singing Give Peace America with you & war with all the World.

¹ A design in the manner not of Colley, but of No. 6162.

At this time the Ministry of Shelburne was falling; the terms of the peace were being attacked, he had made unsuccessful overtures, first to Fox and then to North, who had clearly been drawing together, and at the debate on the Address on the Peace in both Houses on 17 Feb. it appeared that a coalition between North and Fox was an established fact. On 18 Feb. it was reported that Shelburne was to resign immediately. Fitzmaurice, Shelburne, 1912, ii. 230 ff.

Another impression, Richardson's imprint erased, Pub^d by W. Humphrey 227 Strand London [n.d.].

$8\frac{9}{16} \times 13$ in.

6174 BLESSED ARE THE PEACEMAKERS

Pub. by E Dachery Feb^y 24 1783 St James's Street

Engraving. A procession of the late belligerent powers walking, r. to l., along a country road. The leader is Spain, holding a large sword as if it was a walking-stick, and pointing up a hill to a building inscribed Inquisition, to which he is leading the procession. He is not dressed as the usual Spanish don, but wears a coat and breeches of modern cut. Next, his r. hand on Spain's shoulder, is France, holding the end of a rope tied round the neck of George III, who follows him. The king is walking under a gateway formed of two vertical spears with a horizontal spear as cross-bar, from which the crown, lion, and unicorn are falling. Behind the king walks Shelburne, his attitude and dress repeating that of the king, but while George looks concerned, he has his usual smile; in his r. hand he carries a large rolled document inscribed Preliminaries. Next comes America, a lean man, with short lank hair, wearing a sleeved waistcoat and breeches. He raises above his head a scourge with many lashes inscribed America, and appears about to strike Shelburne and the king. In his l. hand he holds the end of a rope, which is round the neck of Holland, a sulky boor, who turns full-face, his hands thrust into his breeches pockets, smoking a pipe. All the others are walking in profile to the l., Spain and France capering with satisfaction. For other satires on the peace negotiations see No. 6172, &c., and 6175.

13 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6175 THE PRELIMINARY SOLOMONS SURPRIZED BY THE GHOST OF JOHN HANGEMCHOP ESQR

Pub^d by J. Barrow Feb^y 24th 1783. White Lion Bull Stairs Surry Side Black Friars Bridge.

Engraving (coloured impression). Seven members of the Ministry (l.) headed by Shelburne shrink back in alarm at the entry from the r. of 'John Hangemchop', a Jack Ketch, whose head is a headsman's axe in the blade of which is an eye. A rope is coiled round his l. arm, he holds out his r. hand towards the alarmed ministers, saying, How durst you make so vile a peace? Look at me & see what you deserve. Shelburne, holding out both hands to fend off the apparition, says I will never more dabble in Politicks. The Duke of Richmond says Monsieur has actually outwitted us. Two other ministers say, Oh that we had left Lord North to his fate, and, I hope it will not be Block and Block with us. The heads of three other ministers appear over the heads of the four spokesmen; their legs have been omitted by the artist. Between the ghost and the ministers is a small round table, on which lies a document Preliminaries . . . a pen in an ink-pot stands beside it. Two chairs stand behind the table; in the foreground is an overturned chair.

The Preliminaries of Peace were signed in Paris on 20 Jan., and were attacked in Parliament on 17 Feb. in order to overthrow Shelburne, see No. 6172, &c. The terms were more justly evaluated by the king, who wrote, 24 Jan. 1783, 'When I reflect on the Want of Soldiers and Sailors to enable us to carry on . . . the War against so many enemies . . . the more I thank Providence for having through so many difficulties, among which the want of Union and Zeal at home is not to be omitted, enabled so good a Peace with France, Spain and I trust soon the Dutch to be concluded.' Corr. of George III, vi. 222.

6 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 8 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6176 SHELBN—N BADGERED & FOXED,

[? Gillray.]

Pub: by E D' Achery Feb: 28. 1783. St James Street.

Engraving. A sequel to No. 5964. Lord Shelburne, seated on a chair in a landscape, holding up a document inscribed Preliminaries . . ., is being violently attacked by a fox (l.) and a badger (r.). The fox and the badger resemble those in No. 5964. 'The fox (Fox) is tearing at Shelburne's leg with his paws, and at the Preliminaries [of Peace] with his teeth, while he is excreting and urinating against Shelburne with great violence. Shelburne looks over his l. shoulder at the badger (North), who is rushing at him from the r. and has seized his coat in his teeth.

In the background (l.) is a little circular temple, its domed roof supported on two columns. On a pedestal in its centre stands a minute figure of Shelburne, three peers wearing coronets kneel at his feet, he holds out to them two documents, one inscribed Preliminaries. The temple is inscribed Corruption; on the apex of the roof is a coronet, above it is engraved the Idol of the Lords; it resembles the temple in No. 5606, &c. On the horizon (r.) is a gallows by which stands a minute figure of Britannia, her head irradiated; she points to the gallows, saying, Impeach. Beneath the title is engraved, To the Virtuous Majority of the Commons who Voted for the Amendment to the Address on the memorable 18th of Feb^y 1783.

The attack on the Preliminaries of the Peace which revealed unmistakably the coalition of Fox and North against Shelburne took place on 17 not 18 Feb. In the Commons the Ministry were defeated by 224 to 208, in the Lords they had a majority of 13, though the terms of Peace were much attacked. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 435-98; Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 481; Fitzmaurice, Shelburne, 1912, ii. 235 ff. The first of many satires on the Coalition. Overtures to bring Fox and North together began in December and had been anticipated in July. Fitzmaurice, op. cit., ii. 231; Corr. of Lord Auckland, 1861, pp. 7 ff. The theme of the fox and the badger was developed by Rowlandson in The Loves of the Fox and the Badger, or the Coalition Wedding, 7 Jan. 1784. See also Nos. 5964, 6186, 6196, 6204.

7 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6177 OVER WITH HIM

Pub^d by E. D. Achery. Feb. 28. 1783 S^t James Street.

Engraving. Fox, with a fox's head, tumbling Lord Shelburne out of a wheelbarrow. Shelburne, arms and legs outstretched, lies on his back in the barrow, which Fox (l.) is tilting on its side. From clouds above Fox's head appears the head of Lord North as Boreas directing a blast from his mouth at Shelburne's face.

Beneath the title is inscribed, The Devil can't Stand against a Double force. Vide the Votes of H: C: on y^e 18 of Feb^y 1783. This is a reference to the adverse vote of 17 Feb., see No. 6176, where the same mistake is made. After a second adverse vote on the terms of peace on 21 Feb. due to the combined attack of Fox and North, Shelburne resigned on 24 Feb., and there was a ministerial interregnum until 2 April. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 487 ff.; Ann. Reg., 1783, pp. 168 ff. See also Grafton, Autobiography, 1898, pp. 363 ff.; Fitzwilliam, Shelburne, 1912, ii, chap. vii; Romilly, Memoirs, 1844, i. 270-5.

11 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6178 A COALITION OF PARTIES

[? Gillray.]

Pub. E. D. Achery Feb 28. 1783 S^t James S^t

Engraving. North (l.) and Fox (r.) hanging back to back, each in a noose, from a stout post. At the top of the post is a large oval shield (?) with a double St. George's cross. Nails are fixed in the shield, and to these the ropes are attached. North's arms hang limply at his side; Fox's hands are clasped, he has a fox's head. Beneath the title is engraved, Give Justice her claims. A freely sketched landscape with clouds forms the background.

See Nos. 6176, 6177, also satires on the joint attack of North and the Foxites on the Peace terms which revealed the Coalition.

11 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6179 THE COALITION.

[c. Feb. 1783.]

Yearac [Carey] Cutsit & Hac . . .¹

Engraving. North and Fox stand, bound together by a ribbon round their shoulders inscribed Tie of Interest. The l. arm of North (l.) is on the l. shoulder of Fox, he says to him,

*Though you are a Fox by name & nature
I hope to me you will prove no traitor.*

Fox answers,

*While you can give me Place & Pension
Your neck need never fear Extension.*

Under North's hand, and resting on Fox's shoulder, is a paper inscribed Vicar of Bray. Fox's l. hand rests on a table (r.) against which he leans; he is holding a paper inscribed Debts of honour to my Lord Cog—150. 1700. On the table are cards and dice, with a paper inscribed Plan for disarming the I—h. V—rs [Irish Volunteers].

On the wall which forms the background are two oval bust portraits, one (l.) behind North, of North in clerical bands and gown, inscribed Vicar of Bray; the other (r.) behind Fox, a portrait of Fox with a rope round his neck inscribed Sergius Cataline, indicating that Fox is the treacherous conspirator, North the corrupt time-server. Above the portraits are three prints. On the l. an execution scene: the cart has just moved off leaving two figures dangling from a gibbet. In the centre is a ship in full sail, being blown by a blast inscribed Boreas. The water on which it sails is the Stream of Corruption. The frame is inscribed State Vessel. On the r. is a print of a fox running off with a goose. On the ground (l.) is a large sack inscribed Budget. Beneath the design is engraved:

*Believe me friend quoth North to Fox,
While we together scratch and Box,
And in the House, incessant splutter,
Ourselves bedaubing with state gutter,
Like Æsop's Bear and Lion quar'ling,
We lose the prey for which we're snarling;
By mutual Interest bound, lets try
To make this doughty Shelburne fly,
If he's for war why zounds he's mad,
If he's for Peace 'tis all as bad,
When once we've got the treas'ry chest,
You're much in debt—mum for the rest.*

Another satire on the joint attack of North and the Foxites on the peace terms which revealed the Coalition, see Nos. 6176-8. For North as Vicar of Bray see also No. 6235. For North appealing to Fox for protection from the scaffold, see No. 6282. R. Lucas, Lord North, 1913, ii. 208 ff., contends that North's motive in joining Fox was fear of impeachment. See No. 5969, &c.

¹ Clipped. The signature follows the verses.

7×6 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6180 THE F—X, GOOSE AND PRIMER. [1 Mar. 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine, Feb. 1783.¹ Shelburne (l.) seated in an arm-chair near an ornate table, on which are coins. At his feet kneel Burke and Fox with a fox's head. Neither Shelburne nor Burke is recognizably drawn, but they are indicated by the title and the words spoken. Burke says, By Ja—s what a fool was I to turn myself out before I got in—That d—n'd F—x has made a Goose of me. Shelburne answers, Very sublime and beautiful! but you are fallen like Lucifar [sic] never to hope again. Fox says, Tho' you have stolen the Peace out of my Pocket, forgive me and henceforth Command me.

This is entirely contrary to the political situation of Feb. 1783, which is more correctly represented in Nos. 6176–9.

4 $\frac{13}{16}$ ×3 $\frac{1}{16}$ in.

6181 THE WASHERWOMAN; UP WITH THE JESUIT

Pub^d: March 1st, 1783 by A. Killingbeck Down Street

Engraving. A pair of scales; in one, which rests on the ground, sits Lord North, in profile to the l., in the other, in the air, sits Lord Shelburne, in profile to the r., dressed as a monk. North is the same fat old washerwoman with a bag-wig as in No. 5975 by the same artist. Shelburne, wearing his Garter ribbon, holds in his l. hand a money-bag inscribed Blessings of Peace, his r. is raised as if in admonition. A fox (Charles Fox) runs along the beam of the scales weighing it down so that North completely outweighs Shelburne; he says, My Weight for the People. Under the scale on which Shelburne sits is a tombstone inscribed, I have met with the fate my Duplicity deserved; had I acted with Integrity to the man who had the full Confidence of the People, my Abilities might have done Honor to myself and served my country. PW. ob^t 1783.

The allusion is to the premiership obtained in July 1782 to the chagrin and disappointment of Fox. The initials probably stand for William Petty reversed.

This satire, with No. 6232, is exceptional as a direct apology for the coalition between Fox and North, see Nos. 6176–9, &c. But cf. also the attacks on the peace terms, No. 6172, &c., which are indirect justifications of the joint attack on Shelburne by which the Coalition came into existence, and Nos. 6274, 6277, 6291.

8 $\frac{1}{4}$ ×7 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6182 THE SAVAGES LET LOOSE, OR THE CRUEL FATE OF THE LOYALISTS.

March 1783.

Sold by W Humplrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving (coloured impression). American loyalists are being murdered

¹ Note by Mr. Hawkins. There is no copy of this magazine in the British Museum. All other prints from the magazine are so annotated.

by Red Indians. An Indian (l.) seizes by the hair a loyalist lying on the ground, and holds up a knife saying I'll scalp him. Another Indian (r.) raises a tomahawk in both hands above a loyalist who kneels on one knee, saying O cruel Fate! is this the Return for our Loyalty. The Indian says, I'll tomahawk the Dog.

A third Indian (l.) pulls a rope attached to the ropes by which four loyalists hang by the neck to the branch of a tree, inscribed Recommended to Congress by lord S—e [Shelburne]. He is saying I have them all in a String.

The Indians all wear tall feather head-dresses and kilts of feathers. Of the six loyalists, two of those hanging from the tree are dressed as military officers, the others as civilians.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*Is this a Peace, when Loyalists must bleed?
It is a Bloody Piece of work indeed.*

The chief danger to the loyalists was not from Red Indians, but from penal legislation, confiscation of property, and personal molestation at the hands of Americans, who, however, are perhaps represented by the Indians. The provision for loyalists in the peace terms was resented by American loyalists and denounced by many Englishmen, sometimes factiously, sometimes sincerely. To quote a contemporary squib:

*Tis an honor to serve the bravest of nations
And be left to be hanged in their capitulations.*

But 'England had gotten for the loyalists the utmost attainable in the treaty and, later, proved honorable and generous in the highest degree by compensating the Loyalists out of her own treasury'. Van Tyne, The Loyalists in the American Revolution, 1902, p. 288. See Nos. 6171, 6184, 6223.

$8\frac{3}{8} \times 13\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6183 A COALITION MEDAL STRUCK IN BRASS

Js ff. [Sayers]

Published 3^d March 1783 by Edw^d Hedges

Engraving. A medallion on which are the heads, in profile to the l., of Fox and North, as if in relief, that of Fox superimposed on that of North. The artist has brought out both the contrast and an unexpected similarity in the two faces, both fat, both with prominent eyebrows. The expression of Fox suggests satisfied cunning, that of North bewilderment and dismay. Round the upper edge of the medallion is inscribed Par nobile Fratrum. Beneath the title is inscribed:

N.B. The Reverse may be expected in a few days

One of two famous and similar satires by Sayers, see No. 6234. The 'medal' appears in No. 6219. Cf. also No. 6198. For the coalition see Nos. 6176-9.

Diam. $6\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6184 THE NIGHT MARE OR HAG RIDDN MINISTER.

IB [J. Boyne].

London Published as the Act Direct [sic] March 4 1783 by R Rusted
N^o 3 Bridge St^t Ludgate Hill

Engraving. Lord Shelburne lying at full length, asleep, supported on two parallel rows of sharp pinnacles, representing the articles of the peace treaty. Dunning (l.), now Lord Ashburton, in counsellor's wig and gown, crouches behind his head, in profile to the r., holding a smelling-bottle to his nose, and saying, take comfort my Lord, for you I will be allways Dunning. On Shelburne's prostrate body stands Fox, with his own face, but the body of a fox; he urinates against Shelburne's face and tears at him with his fore-paws, saying If he opens his mouth I will be down his Throat. North's head (r.), suspended in space, is saying the North fog Rot Him. On the nearer row of sharp pinnacles, on the points of which Shelburne is so painfully lying, is inscribed (l. to r.), It shall be Recomend [sic] to Congress to Cut the Loyalists . . . 16 Artic^l, 14 Art^l, 10 Art^l, 6 Art^{le}, 11 Art^{le}, 7 Art^{le}, 4 Art^{le}. There is a background of minute zigzag lines or shading.

For the attack on the different preliminary articles of the peace by North (17 Feb.) see Parl. Hist. xxiii. 443 ff.; by Fox (21 Feb.), pp. 526 ff. The Articles are printed on pp. 346 ff. See also Nos. 6168, 6171-7, 6181, 6182, 6199.

Reissued, 29 March, with a different title.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 10 in.

6185 [GEORGE III HOLDING THE BALANCE.]

Pub: March 6th 1783 by T. Cornell, Bruton Street.

Engraving. George III seated on a low square stool, each leg of which rests on one of four pinnacles on the four corners of the roof of a building inscribed S^t Stephens Chapel 1783. In his l. hand he holds up a small pair of empty scales, equally balanced. Beneath the design is engraved:

I'm above all! I yet Rule the Roast!

As I please the Balance shall preponderate!

This was published during the ministerial interregnum which followed the resignation of Shelburne owing to the joint attack on the peace treaty by Fox and North. The satirist's suggestion that the king could hold the balance between Fox and North was unfounded, his unsuccessful attempts early in March to induce North to break with Fox, by interviews, first with Lord Guilford, North's father, and then with North on March 2nd and 3rd, may have inspired this satire. Corr. of George III, vi. 257-8, 259-60. The king indeed on 7 March still contemplated resistance to the Coalition, 'a desperate Faction in whose hands I will never throw myself'. Ibid., vi. 262. See also pp. 265-8. George III, so far from 'ruling the roast', contemplated abdication. See Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 494 f.¹ Cf. No. 6205.

¹ George III prepared two draft messages to the House of Commons, one calling on 'those who feel for the spirit of the Constitution to stand forth to his Assistance' against the Coalition, the other, announcing his intention to resign the Crown to the Prince of Wales and retire to Hanover. Both are conjecturally dated 28 March by Sir J. Fortescue. Corr. of Geo. III, vi. 314 ff. See also Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 35 f.

6186 A COALITION BETWEEN THE FOX & THE BADGER, OR THE HONEY MOON OF THEIR HAPPY UNION.

Pub^d according to act by W. Humphrey N^o 227, Strand. 6th March 1783

Engraving. Fox (r.) and North (l.) embracing; Fox, about to kiss North on the mouth, says I perfectly agree with your Lord Ship; he is taller and less fat than North, and has an expression of cunning, North, one of perplexed alarm. Under a tree (r.) a fox and a clumsy dog, its collar inscribed North, sniff at each other. In the distance (l.) stands Shelburne, a small figure, who points at Fox and North smiling and saying Risun teneatis Amici.

Dundas, on 17 Feb. 1783, had spoken of the coalition of North with the Foxites, as revealed in the debate of that day, as 'the honeymoon of their loves', and Sheridan's comment had been that if there was a coalition it was 'rather to be called the wedding day'. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 469, 483. See also Nos. 6189, 6193. For Fox and North as fox and badger see Nos. 5964, 6176, 6196, 6204.

A coloured impression in B.M.L., Tab. 524 a, iv, p. 58.

8 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 13 in.

6187 WAR.

[Gillray.]

Pub 9th March 1783, by H. Humphrey N^o 51 New Bond S^t

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A companion print to No. 6188. A scene in the House of Commons, a characteristic attack by Fox and Burke on North during North's ministry. The figures of Fox and Burke are rising from clouds, as if to suggest a vision of past debates. The H.L. figure of the Speaker in his chair (l.) is faintly sketched; North (l.) stands below him on solid ground. All are in attitudes characteristic of the speakers: North, his back to the spectator, his r. arm raised, is saying, want of candor, Illiberality our misfortunes entirely owing to Opposition.

Fox, standing full-face, and looking towards North, raises his r. arm, his fist clenched, saying, I shold hold myself Infamous if I ever form'd a connection with him!—deserve the Ax!—disgrace! infamy!—shame! incapacity ignorance! corruption!—love of place! blunders, wants, weaknesses, gross stupidity hardly conceivable that so much Pride Vice and Folly can Exist in the same Animal.

The words of the speakers are etched beneath them.

Burke (r.) stands in profile to the l., bending forward and gesticulating violently, both hands raised with clenched fists above his head.

A composite selection from Fox's speeches, including the famous speech of 8 March 1782, Parl. Hist. xxii. 1139, to show the monstrous nature of the Coalition, an anticipation of the method used so effectively in the pamphlet, The Beauties of Fox, North, and Burke selected from their Speeches . . . 1784. See also Nos. 6207, 6265.

Grego, Gillray, p. 45. Wright and Evans, No. 15. Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830.

5 $\frac{7}{16}$ × 7 $\frac{7}{16}$ in. (pl.).

6188 NEITHE [sic] WAR NOR PEACE!

[Gillray.]

Pub 9th Mar 1783 by H. Humphrey N^o 51 New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A sequel to No. 6187. Fox and Burke are in similar attitudes, but Fox is gesticulating still more violently and Burke stands nearer Fox. North now stands with the other two (r.), below them as before, his l. arm raised instead of his r. The Speaker is in his chair as before. The place of North in the other print is taken by a long scroll of Preliminary Articles of Peace, crowned by leaves, which hangs from the upper part of the design (l.) and rests on the floor. From beneath it a dog appears barking, Bough Wough. Beneath the design is etched,

The astonishing Coalition.

Instead of an attack by Fox and Burke on North, the three combine to attack Shelburne and the articles of the peace. While North was making his attack on 17 Feb. a dog began to bark and set all the members in a roar. Lord North laughed heartily; and when the House was restored to order, he threw it again into the loudest fit of laughter, by jocosely addressing the chair, 'Sir, I was interrupted by a new Speaker, but as his argument is concluded I will resume mine.' Parl. Hist. xxiii. 455, cf. No. 6192.

These Preliminary Articles which had been so much abused were substantially accepted by the Coalition Ministry, see No. 6267.

Grego, Gillray, p. 45. Wright and Evans, No. 16. Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830.

$5\frac{7}{16} \times 7\frac{7}{16}$ in. (pl.).

6189 THE UNION.

[E. T. ?]

Pub by Mrs D. Achery St James Street March 11. 1783.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). The devil officiates at the wedding of North and Fox. North stands in profile to the r. holding out a ring in his l. hand towards a corpulent fox, wearing a coat, who stands on his hind-legs facing him, with a sly expression. North's profile expresses bewilderment. Between them, a hand on the shoulder of each, stands the Devil capering, one eye closed, with a diabolical grin. He is a nude man with horns, tail, and the legs of a satyr. On the ground between Fox and North is an open book, inscribed Marriage Ceremony. Beneath the title is engraved "Whom — has join'd, let no Man put asunder!"

On 21 Feb. Pitt denounced the 'unnatural coalition . . . if this ill-omened marriage is not already solemnized, I know a just and lawful impediment, and, in the name of the public safety, I here forbid the banns'. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 552. See also Nos. 6186, 6193.

$5\frac{11}{16} \times 9$ in.

6190 THE TEA-TAX-TEMPEST—OR OLD TIME WITH HIS MAGICK-LANTHERN.*Pub^d March 12. 1783. by W. Humphreys. [sic] N^o 227 Strand.*

Engraving. A reduced and altered copy of No. 5490, evidently by an English artist. It is less heavily shaded, and the details are clearer. The chief alteration is a large white label issuing from the mouth of Time, covering much of the upper r. corner of the design, and inscribed, There you see the little Hot Spit Fire Tea pot that has done all the Mischief—There you see the Old British Lion basking before the American Bon Fire whilst the French Cock is blowing up a Storm about his Ears to Destroy him and his young Welpes—there you See Miss America grasping at the Cap of Liberty—There you see The British Forces be yok'd and be cramp'd flying before the Congress Men—There you see the thirteen Stripes and Rattle-Snake exalted—There you see the Stamp'd Paper help to Make the Pot Boil—There you See &c &c &c.

The scene thrown on the curtain by the lantern is copied with fair accuracy, except that the coffee-pot with its three legs and hinged lid has become an English tea-pot, its detached lid flying into the air. In place of the two books on the ground at Time's feet there is one book open at an illustration which represents a man (l.) aiming with a cross-bow at a man on horseback, perhaps intended for George III, riding from l. to r.; there are three standing figures and in the air is what appears to be a crown.

For the snake emblem on the American flag see No. 5973 &c. For other references to the Stamp Act see No. 5487, &c.

8 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6191 BLUE & BUFF OR REYNARD IN HIS CLOSET, AT HIS WIT'S END

Pub: by D. Achery. March 16. 1783 St James's Street

Engraving. Fox, with a fox's head, stands looking up at the Devil, whose head appears from clouds in the upper r. corner of the print. He holds in his r. hand a pistol, in his l. a dagger and a noose. On a table (l.) beside him is a cup inscribed Poison. Behind it is a gallows, the upright constructed of playing-cards, the horizontal of dice, while a curved strut supporting the angle is the segment of an EO table (see No. 5928), the letters O and E (for odd and even) alternating. The Devil's head is in profile looking downwards; he has twisted goat's horns, satyr's ears, and a beard, and is saying

*I have presented you with the Choice of Four,
Dagger, Pistol, Halter Poison and no more,
make haste! decide, they'll either suit you well, then to your seat below—the Red Hot Nyche in Hell.*

Fox says,

*O let me spare the tale!—
Tis full of Horror—Dreadfull was the sight!
The Hungry Lions greedy for their Prey—devoured each place and pension—
——twixt me and death—*

Beneath the title is engraved:

*——Suicide
thou Balmy friend to Disappointed pride.*

The spoken words are on large labels.

At this date the fruits of office were within sight, and Fox's financial position was correspondingly improved; this print would have had more point during Shelburne's ministry, cf. Nos. 6015, 6020, &c.

11 $\frac{13}{16}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{16}$ in.

6192 [NORTH WHITEWASHING FOX.]Fred. O'Daub fecit. [J. Sayers.]Published 17th March 1783 by Edw^d Hedges Cornhill.

Engraving. A scene in the House of Commons. Fox has taken Lord North's l. hand in both his, while North, applying a paint-brush to his face, has made a white patch on its swarthinness. Fox (l.), full-face, with an inscrutable expression, is descending the lowest step below the tiers of seats. North stands in profile to his l. looking at Fox with anxious frown. Behind are rows of members, their heads sketchily indicated. A dog looks up at North, cf. No. 6188. Beneath the design is etched, —Qui Color ater erat nunc est contrarius atro

Translated for the Country Gentlemen.

I have found him a warm Friend a fair though formidable Adversary.

The English is a paraphrase of North's praise of Fox and attempted justification of their relations on 21 Feb. 1783: 'When I had the happiness to possess his confidence and friendship, I always found him open, manly and sincere; I knew his Temper to be warm, but his nature is generous. . . . As an enemy I have always found him formidable.' Parl. Hist. xxiii. 558. See Nos. 6186-9, &c., and p. 694 n.

9 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6193 ST JAMES'S PARK.[1782¹]

[? After Bunbury or C. L. Smith.]

Engraving. Frontispiece from The Coalitional Rencontre Anticipated. 'Carlo Khan' (Fox) meets the fair Northelia by assignation in the Mall. North, dressed as a woman, looks round at Fox who has come up behind him, and addresses him with outstretched hand. They stand in a formal avenue of leafless trees which recedes in perspective behind them. North wears a cloak over a dress which trails on the ground, his hands are in a muff and a flat ribbon-trimmed hat is perched on his high coiffure. A large masculine foot protrudes from his petticoat, and he draws back coyly at the sight of Fox. Beneath the design are engraved Fox's words:

*But why so soon abroad, my dear,
At this dull season of the Year?
Why meet this early chilling, breeze?
Why stroll amongst these leafless trees?*

For similar ridicule of the Coalition, see Nos. 6186, 6189, 6197.

8 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 7 $\frac{5}{16}$ in.

6194 [FOX AND NORTH AS HEROD AND PILATE.]

[Gillray.]

Pub^d March 20th 1783 by H Humphrey N^o 51 New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Fox and North, as Herod and Pilate, contemplating the execution of Shelburne, who for this occasion takes the part of Christ. All three have the beards of Jews, the countenance and appearance of Fox, but not of the others, being Jewish. Fox stands full-face, pointing backwards with his r. thumb at Shelburne (l.), who stands with downcast eyes, his wrists crossed as if tied together, leaning against a gallows. North (r.) stands by Fox putting his r. hand on Fox's left shoulder and holding his l. hand. North and Shelburne wear bag-wigs and their Garter ribbons. Fox looks unkempt, with rough hair, his waistcoat partly unbuttoned, the empty pockets hanging inside out.

¹ This print should have been placed after No. 6276 (December 1782), since Fox is called 'Carlo Khan' in the text. W. Siehel, Sheridan, ii. 28 n. The book does not appear to be in the B.M.L.

Beneath the design is etched, And Herod and Pilate were made Friends together that same Day; for before they were Enemies one to another. Luke Chap. 23, Ver. 12.

Richard Hill, M.P. for Shropshire, had compared the Coalition to an alliance between Herod and Pontius Pilate. R. Lucas, Lord North, ii. 226. See Nos. 6176-9, &c.

Reprinted, G.W.G., 1830.

7 × 6 $\frac{13}{16}$ in.

6195 THE LOAVES AND FISHES

ƒ H inv^t

Pub by E^t Achery March 24. 1783 St James Street

Engraving. George III presides at a rectangular table at which sit past and prospective ministers, grasping at the loaves and fishes which lie on the table. On the l. side of the table and on the king's r. sit Shelburne and his supporters, on the opposite side sit those who have ousted them. The king sits in an ornate chair; on his r. sits Shelburne putting his arm on the shoulder of Dunning, who sits on his other side. Shelburne says I must submit!—may it prove Poison to them say I. Dunning answers Never mind my Lord—give them rope enough, and they will hang themselves. The king turns to Fox and North, who sit on his l. hand, and says, pointing to the table, pray help your selves Gentlemen. Fox, who has a fox's head, has seized a loaf in each hand, saying An't please your Maj—ty I'll have these for me & my friends. The loaf under his l. hand is inscribed Treasury; North, who sits on Fox's l., says, hold Charley, that 's more then comes to your Share. The other two on the r. side of the table are Keppel and Burke. Keppel, who is next North, puts his r. hand on a loaf; in his l. he holds a fish from whose mouth go lines attached to two other fish and another loaf; he is saying I'm fond of Sea fish. A naval officer opposite him hugs a loaf and grasps the tail of one of the fish on Keppel's line. He is identified in a contemporary hand as Palliser, but is more probably Lord Howe, who was First Lord of the Admiralty from 29 Jan. 1782 (after Keppel's resignation) till 8 April, when he was replaced by Keppel. He is in profil perdu but his figure and a black eyebrow suggest Howe.

On Keppel's l., and at the r. corner of the table, sits Burke grasping a loaf in his r. hand, a fish in his l. He is saying Rhetorick is of no use here! tis catch that catch can. In the foreground (r.), at Burke's side, two dogs laden with money-bags are running off to the r. Over them is inscribed Pay Office Clerks and (smaller) Fulham. On the money-bag of one is £200,000, on that of the other £100,000. Burke became paymaster-general under Rockingham, resigned office with Fox on Shelburne's appointment, and was again (on 7 April) to become paymaster. On returning to office he reinstated two clerks, Powell and Bembridge, who had recently been dismissed by Barré for malversation, for which he was attacked in parliament on 24 April and 19 May 1783. Parl. Hist. xxiii, pp. 900 ff; Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 77-86.¹

Opposite Burke, at the near l. corner of the table, sits Conway, the Commander-in-Chief, in general's uniform, grasping a fish in one hand, a lobster in the other. He is saying, I fear they'll not leave me one poor lobster. He had disappointed Fox by not resigning on Shelburne's appointment, he did not however lose office till after the dissolution of Parliament in 1784, when he resigned. In the centre of the table are three unclaimed loaves, the one nearest the king is inscribed Secretary of State.

A representation of the uncertainties and jealousies of the political situation during the ministerial interregnum between the resignation of Shelburne on 24 Feb. and the appointment of the coalition ministry under the nominal leadership of the Duke of Portland on 2 April. See Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 487-509; Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 25 ff. For the attitude of the King see No. 6185. On 14 April the Duke of Chandos, attacking the Coalition said that 'his Majesty's closet had been assailed by force . . . and that parties fought now for the loaves and fishes only'. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 755. Cf. Nos. 6223, 6240, 6248.

$8\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{13}{16}$ in.

6196 COALITION

THE FOX & BADGER BOTH IN A HOLE.

Pub W Richardson March 27. 1783 near Surry St Strand.

Engraving. An opening or cave in the side of a hill inside which sit facing each other, on their hind-legs, a corpulent badger (l.) and a fox (r.). The badger is adorned with a wide Garter ribbon, a shirt-frill, and a black bow which indicates the 'bag' which was the appendage to a wig. The front of the cave is wreathed with vines bearing many bunches of grapes. The badger (North) says,

*The grapes which round this Cavern grow in plenty
My new Friend Fox will prove to each a dainty.*

The fox (Charles Fox) says,

*Tho once I stunk you from your Hole
You now are welcome in upon my Soul*

Outside the cave (l.) stands the Devil with horns, wings, satyr's legs, and a tail. He points at the couple within with his r. hand, holding up his l. and saying

*He he he — he
They both are for me.*

On 22 March 1782 a satire by Gillray had been published called Changing places; alias; Fox stinking the Badger out of his Nest. See No. 5964, see also Nos. 6176, 6186, 6204.

$8 \times 12\frac{11}{16}$ in.

6197 COALITION MINUET

Pub: by E Dachery March 29. 1783 St James Street

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Design in an oval.

¹ Possibly the dogs were added in a later issue of the print, as they seem to refer to the scandal over Powell and Bembridge. Powell committed suicide, Bembridge was tried and sentenced.

Fox, r. (full-face), dances a minuet with Lord North (l.) dressed as a lady with enormous hooped petticoats and hair decorated with feathers, but wearing a Garter ribbon. They hold hands, Fox holding his hat in his l. hand. In the background (r.) the Lord Chancellor, Thurlow, sits playing a set of bagpipes, while he holds out his l. hand to Britannia, who sits near him (r.) in profile to the l., and hands to him a bag of money, saying I pay the Piper.

Thurlow was retained as Lord Chancellor during the ministries of Rockingham and Shelburne at the king's wish, and on Shelburne's resignation the king used him as an intermediary in attempts to form a ministry that should exclude Fox. Corr. of George III, vi. 257-8, 263-4, 269-72. On the formation of the Coalition ministry, Fox insisted on Thurlow's resignation and on 9 April the Great Seal was put in Commission with Lord Loughborough as Chief Commissioner. The bag of money which he is receiving is probably an allusion to the pension granted to Thurlow together with the reversion of a tellership of the exchequer, attacked in the House of Commons on 5 March. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 583-4.

6¼ × 9½ in.

THE NIGHT MARE, OR PRIME MINISTER HAG-RIDDEN

Pub^d 29th March 1783 by W Humphrey N^o 227 Strand

A reissue (coloured) of No. 6184. A later state.

6198 THE COMPOUND MEDALLION.

[c. March 1782]

Engraving. The heads of George III, Lord North, and Fox superimposed, in profile to the r., the King's lowest, Fox uppermost, in relief, within a circle representing a medallion. Round the edge is engraved, To Govern with Goodness, to Amuse with Falacy, to Abuse with Words, indicating the parts played respectively by the three men.

An imitation of Sayers' Coalition Medal struck in brass, see No. 6183, but drawn with more competence, the effect of a medal in relief being more skilfully rendered.

Diam. 6 in.

6199 PUKE—ATION IN ANSWER TO THE LATE STATE OF THE NATION.

Pub^d by E Hedges N^o 92 Cornhill April 1. 1783

Engraving. Candidates for office in the ministry (which was not formed till 2 April), most of them vomiting and grasping posts (cf. No. 5984). A devil with widespread bat's wings hovers over their heads, saying, These Posts my dears are temporal I have Posts below which you Shall have Eternal. The two central posts are Treasury (r.) and Admiralty (l.); a man, difficult to identify, kneeling on one knee and leaning forward, clasps the Treasury post with both hands. He says, Let me handle the stivers. Behind him, holding his forehead and resting his l. elbow on the Admiralty post, is Keppel, vomiting and saying Tis a Damnable Peace! Behind the Treasury post and to the r. stands Lord John Cavendish resting his elbow on the post, vomiting and saying So we'll tell the Game. He was to be Chancellor of the Exchequer. On the r. are the two Secretaries in the new ministry:

Fox is seated on the top of a post inscribed Secretary. He bends forward, in profile to the r., vomiting, and holding the hand of North who stands facing him, also vomiting, with one hand resting on the top of the post inscribed Northern Department. Fox says, I'll join hands with you in Darning the Peace; North says, by God 'tis Froth. On the l. a man, presumably the Duke of Portland, stands behind a tall post inscribed P. Minister Pst, both hands clasped round it, vomiting and saying It is not worth a groat. On the extreme l., his l. hand resting on a lower Post, stands Burke, saying This Peace sticks in my Throat.

Through a little window in the extreme upper l. corner of the print looks the face of Shelburne, one finger laid to his nose, saying I have sickend them all.

A large scroll or document covering the ground on which they are vomiting is under the feet of the aspirants to office. On it is written Preliminary Articles for restoring Tranquillity between the Powers at War. that they may all take a little Breath & then — at it again Pell-Mell.

Beneath the design is inscribed:

*But a short time ago, the Great Folks of the Nation
The Doctors declar'd, was in a Purgation
The case now is alter'd—such Shiting must cease
Since now all the great ones are speewing on Peace
In War or in Peace then you find out that Brittain
Must some how or other be Pukeing or Shitting.*

These lines and the title appear to refer to the print, The State of the Nation, see No. 5479, &c. Shelburne had resigned owing to the combined attack of Fox and North on the Preliminary Articles of peace, see Nos. 6184, 6188, &c.

$8\frac{1}{4} \times 12\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6200 POOR OLD ENGLAND.

[? c. Feb.—March 1783]

Criofogo (?) fecit Frizz Crump Exc.

Lillecompoop sculp

Mezzotint. Design in an oval, the title being etched across the back of an ornamental arm-chair in which George III is seated. His face is distorted and he is scarcely recognizable, but G.R. surmounted by a crown, on a corner of his shirt which hangs over his breeches, shows his identity. The design is confused and the details difficult to decipher. Beneath the oval is etched:

A Section of a Magnificent & Superb Water Closet, with an exact front view of a Little Personage bound up by excruciating evils endeavouring by main force of straining & distortion to Irradicate & exterminate by laborious perseverance those hard bound racking & growing Evils that have for a long Series of time burnt up those interiors which are most Susceptable of pain.

send him a good deliverance

Above the back of the chair is a confused design resembling a coat of arms. On a medallion a man with a sword pursues a smaller figure who from his pigtail queue and top-boots is probably a Frenchman. Above the medallion are writhing serpents, probably signifying Discord or Faction, and above these a bird which may be intended for a phoenix. The supporters are a fox and a goose.

The king clutches a paper in his l. hand, on it is American. . . . The words on a paper beside him are in reverse and almost illegible, except for the word America. His l. foot rests on a foot-stool, a crown or fragment of a crown is on the ground at his feet. Two court-officials stand behind his chair, each with a wand of office. Curtains are draped on each side of the chair, and a glass dome is indicated as the roof.

The date is probably before the formal peace with America, perhaps during a ministerial interregnum, since the blank space in the inscription may have been left for the names of new ministers.

$4\frac{11}{16} \times 4$ in.

6201 A NEW ADMINISTRATION; OR—THE STATE QUACKS ADMINISTRING.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d April 1st 1783, by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand

Engraving. Britannia, in profile to the r., kneels on the ground, bending forward with an expression of angry distress. She supports herself on her spear, the upper part of which rests against her r. shoulder. Her shield, broken, lies on the ground, her knee resting on it. Behind her (l.) are the two 'State Quacks', Fox and North, Fox, with a fox's head, sitting on the ground, lifts Britannia's petticoats in both hands. North, very stout and fat, stands (l.) in profile to the r., holding a large syringe. A mountainous landscape, with clouds, forms the background.

One of many satires on the Coalition of Fox and North. Published on the eve of the appointment of the Ministry. Cf. Nos. 6176-9, &c.

There is a coloured impression in 'Caricatures', iv. 32. B.M.L. Tab. 524. $8\frac{13}{16} \times 12\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6202 MRS GENERAL WASHINGTON, BESTOWING THIRTEEN STRIPES ON BRITANNIA. [1 April 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine. Britannia (r.), holding her shield as if trundling it, tries to escape from Washington, who holds her by a lock of her short hair, flourishing a scourge with thirteen knotted lashes. Behind Washington walk France and Spain, followed (l.) by Holland. Washington wears a military coat, hat, sword, gorget, and a petticoat. France is the conventional petit-maitre dressed in the French manner; he holds a drawn sword in his r. hand and points with the other at Britannia. Spain wears a feathered hat and ruff. Holland is a plainly dressed Dutch burgher with short jacket and bulky breeches. Britannia says, Is it thus my Children should treat me. Washington answers, Parents Should not behave like Tyrants to their Children. France says, Encore mon Amy Encore. Spain is saying, Me wish you Stripe her well. Holland, behind the others, and on the extreme l., says, Minheer deserves to be Striped for a Fool.

$4\frac{13}{16} \times 3\frac{1}{16}$ in.

6203 THE MONSTER. 1783.

[J. Boyne?]

Pub. April 2^d 1783 by W Humphrey N^o 227 Strand, near Temple Bar.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A monster representing the new ministry, which was not actually formed until 2 April, the date of publication. Its body is that of a fox, standing on one hind-leg. It has eight heads in a group and no fore-legs; two other heads are below the tail. The central and uppermost head is that of the Duke of Portland; on the l. is the Duke of Richmond, on the r. is Keppel. Below these there are four heads: l. and in profile to the l. is perhaps Lord Stormont; next probably William Eden; next Lord Carlisle; and, in profile to the r., Burke wearing his spectacles. Below these, and in profile to the l., is Lord John Cavendish. From below the upraised tail issues a blast inscribed Coalition; beneath this are the heads of North and Fox.

Above the monster is inscribed:

The Beast that thou sawest Was and Is Not, and shall ascend out of the Bottomless Pitt, and go into Perdition, and they that dwell on the Earth shall wonder when they behold the Beast that Was ☿ is Not ☿ yet Is.

Rev. c. 17 v. 8.

Beneath the design is etched:

*This many-headed Monster of the Land
At present on one Leg is seen to stand,
Sometimes 'tis in, and sometimes it is out,
And like a Weather Cock it shifts about,
Fair Speeches and some Bribes it throws away,
To gain the Ascendancy,—perhaps a Day,
Stability and Permanency it mocks.
The Head is [Portland] and the Tail a Fox.
Each different Mouth bawls loudly for itself,
Yet all agree in one thing, Snack the Pelf.*

One of many satires on the Coalition, cf. Nos. 6176–9, 6195, &c.
9 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 8 $\frac{13}{16}$ in.

A WARM BIRTH FOR THE OLD ADMINISTRATION

[Gillray.]

Pub^d April 2nd 1783 by W. Humphrey

A reissue of No. 5970 with an altered publication line.

6204 THE LORD OF THE VINEYARD.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d April 3^d 1783 by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Fox and North stand outside a high door under a stone arch, stretching out their arms to receive an enormous bunch of grapes which the Duke of Portland, who looks over the door, is handing down to them. He is saying Take it between ye. On the keystone of the arch is Portland Place.¹

Fox (l.) has a fox's head with bushy eyebrows. He has grasped the bunch in both hands and is taking a great bite at the grapes; North (r.) stands on tip-toe but is not touching the grapes.

¹ Portland Place is, of course, a punning allusion to Portland, the new prime minister. It was then recently built, having been designed by the Adam brothers about 1778. Lord Stormont, President of the Council in the new ministry, was living at No. 15.

Beneath the title is etched:

*Says the Badger to Fox,
We're in the right Box,
These grapes are most charming & fine;
Dear Badger you're right,
Hold them fast squeeze them tight,
And we'll drink of political Wine.*

One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6176-9, &c. For Fox and North as fox and badger see Nos. 5964, 6176, 6186, 6196.

Grego, Gillray, pp. 46-7. Wright and Evans, No. 12. Reproduced, A. L. Simon, Bottlescrew Days, 1926, p. 44.

12¼ × 9 in.

6205 COALITION DANCE.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d April 5th 1783 by W. Humphrey, 227 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). North, Fox, and Burke, holding hands, dance round a terminal surmounted by a bust whose face is covered by a closed book, the Whole Duty of Man. An owl perches on the head of the bust; round the terminal is a scroll inscribed K. Wisdom 3^d, to show that the bust is that of George III. Seated at the foot of the terminal on a stone is a demon, grinning diabolically and playing a fiddle. Fox capers behind the demon, his r. hand holding North's l., his l. hand takes that of Burke, who is dressed as a jesuit as in No. 6026, but wearing a high biretta below which his wig and queue hang down. A cross and rosary are in his belt and he wears sandals over bare feet. His head is turned in profile to the l., wearing spectacles; in his r. hand is an open book, Little Red Riding Hood. Fox and North gaze sentimentally at each other, cf. No. 6193, &c. The background is a mountainous landscape with clouds. Beneath the design is engraved:

"Let us dance & Sing, — God bless the King, — For he has made us merry Men all."

A satire on the king's prolonged resistance and unwilling surrender to the Coalition, cf. No. 6185. The title of Burke's book is apparently an allusion to his speech of 9 July 1782 on Fox's resignation, when he warned Conway against Shelburne, whom he compared first with the wolf in sheep's clothing who deceived Red Riding Hood and then with Borgia and Catiline. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 183. See also No. 6249.

8⁷/₈ × 12¹¹/₁₆ in.

An earlier state (coloured) without the title but having publication line and inscription.

6206 THE ONLY BOOTH IN THE FAIR—PORTLAND & CO late Shelburne

I Boyne Inv^t & exc^t

London Published as the Act Directs N^o 2 Shoe Lane Fleet St April 9 1783

Engraving. A stage in front of a show booth, in the upper part of the design; below, spectators are gazing up at the performance. On a stair leading up to the stage (r.) stands Shelburne, leaning on the bar across the front of the platform, and pointing at North who stands on the stage, ladling out guineas to Fox, who appears (l.) looking over a barrier in which is a slit inscribed American Letter Box. Fox, who has a human face and the body of a fox, is wearing a fool's cap inscribed Vox Populi. His fore-paws rest on the barrier, his hind-paws and the end of his brush appear through a semicircular aperture at the bottom of the barrier. He is represented as a performing animal at a fair. North holds in his r. hand a receptacle filled with guineas inscribed Treasury Bucket. With an insinuating expression he holds out to Fox a large ladle filled with guineas, inscribed Coalition Pay.

Through a door, inscribed Treasury, at the back of the platform (r.), the head and outstretched l. arm of Portland appear. He is saying Charly now you have Baul'd Enough come round the Back way to Portland. Shelburne, standing on the step, holding a money-bag in his r. hand, points at North, saying, A man may smile & be a Villian [sic] at least its so in England. Shelburne himself has the half-closed eyes and sly smile with which he is usually drawn.

In front of the platform is inscribed Tricks on the Cards by the Noted Charly with many New Shuffles by the Rest of the Company. The heads and shoulders of seven spectators gazing up at the platform fill the lower part of the design.

One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6176-9, &c.

10 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 in.

6207 AN ANALYSIS OF MODERN PATRIOTISM

PERFORMED BY PUBLIC OPINION & DISPLAYED BY PUBLIC INDIGNATION

PH [erased]; AW Sc^t

Pub^d Accor^s to Act, Aprill y^e 9 1783 by T Cornell Print Seller Bruton Street Engraving. A design in two compartments contrasting the politics of Fox in and out of office.

On the left Fox, with a fox's head, is seated before a fire-place with a blazing fire, to which he has just consigned An Essay on Public Spirit [sic]. From his coat-pocket protrudes a document inscribed A Panegyric on Lord North. At his r. hand (r.) is a round table on which are four books and an inkstand with pens. The books are inscribed Soame Jennings [sic] and Tucker. The table is almost covered by a large document to which Fox is pointing: I do Firmly believe that Lord North is an able & upright Minister—that the American War was pursued on Wise and Virtuous Principles—that the Perogative [sic] of the Crown is too Confined—the liberties of the People too Extensive That the house of Commons ought to be the tool of the Minister—that y^e Public Money is Well Applied in Purchasing that hon: House that a parliamentary Reform is A dangerous and Factious Measure—that I ought to do Anything to get into Place.

In the foreground (l.) is a monkey playing with an open book, The True Principle of the Constitution. On the r. four large volumes are tied up and labelled To be Sold; they are Macauley, Locke, Sydney. The books indicate that Fox has overthrown his constitutional and radical principles, and therefore disposes of the works of Mrs. Catherine Macaulay (see index), Locke, and Sydney, while he studies those of Soame Jenyns and Dean Tucker, miscellaneous writers, intended to typify supporters of the prerogative. Cf. Tucker's Treatise concerning Civil Government, 1781, and Soame Jenyns's Disquisitions on several Subjects, 1782. For Tucker see No. 5125.

In the other compartment of the design (r.), Fox, out of office, is haranguing the mob. He stands on a platform, r. hand raised, his hat in his l. hand, surrounded on two sides by a crowd of plebeian appearance, two of whom wave their hats. In front of the platform stands Jeffery Dunstan with his sack over his shoulder, see No. 5637, &c.; he says, Thank Heaven the People have Such a Friend. Fox is saying, *Gentlemen Lord North deserves the Axe—Lost an Empire Burthened you with Taxes—plunged you into Debt—Gentlemen your virtue alone can Save the Kingdom—he Butchered your American Bretheren Gentlemen—Ought to be impeached We must clip the power of the Crown Gentlemen—the King is your Servant—Each of you Gentlemen Ought to have a Voice in the House of Commons.*¹

See also Nos. 6187, 6208, 6215, 6225.

8 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 11 in.

Another impression (n.d.) with a different title,

6207_A VOX POPULI IN PRIVATE. VOX POPULI IN PUBLICK.
London, Sold by W. Humphrey, 227 Strand.

6208 THE WONDERFUL PATRIOT, OR MR FOX—AND—GOOSE.
Pub^d by J. Barrow April 9. 1783 White Lion Bull Stairs Surry Side Blackfriars Bridge.

Engraving. Fox, standing meditatively with two heads, one of a fox (l.), one of a goose. A pen is thrust behind one of the fox's ears, indicating that he is now again a Secretary of State. His hands are thrust into the front of his waistcoat. He stands on ground which is covered, or patterned, with vine branches bearing many bunches of grapes. The fox's head says My goose head once led me from the Grapes; but Fortune kinder than I am wise hath me restor'd. For Fox's misgivings on his resignation in July 1782, see his letter to Grenville, 5 July, Russell, Life and Times of Charles Fox, i. 327. Cf. No. 6010, &c.

6 $\frac{1}{2}$ × 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

¹ Fox, when haranguing the electors of Westminster or the members of the Westminster Association, was reputedly more violent than in the House of Commons, but on 13 May 1779 he said, 'when such men [Administration] grew insolent and abusive, urged their claims of merit, for which they deserve an axe; . . . to see a lump of deformity and disease (looking at Lord North), of folly and wickedness, of ignorance and temerity, smitten with pride, immediately breaks all measures of patience; it being hardly conceivable that so much pride, vice and folly, could exist in the same animal'. Parl. Hist. xx. 631 (where the words 'looking at Lord North' do not appear), quoted in Beauties of Fox, North and Burke, 1784. Cf. also Loughborough to Eden 2 Aug. 1782, 'I think it would be of use to insist that Charles Fox should keep out of Westminster Hall, as a test that he wishes for a Coalition; and it would be a great gain to himself if he could detach himself from his mug-house friends'. Corr. of Lord Auckland, 1861, i. 17. Cf. Nos. 6213, 6216, 6225, 6230, 6235, 6265, 6287.

6209 BALAAM,—OR THE MAJESTY OF THE PEOPLE.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d April 10th 1783 by W. Humphrey N^o 227. Strand.

Engraving. Design in an oval. A satire on tithes and the clergy. A tall, thin military officer, wearing a hat, gorget, and sword, carries on his shoulders an enormously fat parson dressed in gown and bands. The officer, who walks from l. to r., his head in profile to the r., is saying, I am an Independent Country Gentleman & Col^l of Militia. The parson, with a complacent expression, holds over his r. shoulder a scourge with three lashes, one, ending in a snake's head, is inscribed Pious Fraud, the second is English Statutes, the third, ending in beads and a cross, is Popish Canons. Under his l. arm he holds a basket labelled Tithes, in it are visible chickens and a sucking-pig. Behind the parson walks a dejected-looking farmer in a smock-frock, holding his hat in one hand, a branch in the other; he says, We farmers have our Bodys Eat up, for the good of our Souls. Behind the farmer (l.) are sheaves of corn, in one of which is a branch similar to that which he holds. The landscape background is mountainous. After the title is inscribed, The Lord opened the Mouth of the Ass &c.

One of many satires on the clergy and on tithes, cf. No. 4951. This attack on the Anglican Church as Popish is reminiscent of the seventeenth century.

8 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6210 THE TIMES, ANNO 1783.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d Apr^l 14th 1783. by W. Humphrey, N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Figures personifying England, France, Spain, and Holland represent the international situation. England (r.), a John Bull, stout and plainly dressed, holds up his hands, with a melancholy expression, exclaiming Tis lost! Irrecoverably lost. By his side (r.) lies a broken anchor, and above his head a demon flies off, holding up a partly-rolled map of America; he has bat's wings, and is clad in ragged breeches; he excretes a puff of smoke inscribed Poor John Bull! Ha! Ha! Ha! France, in profile to the r., a petit maître of exaggerated leanness, offers John Bull a snuff-box, and takes a pinch himself, saying, with a grimace, Ah. Ah. me Lord Angla, volez vous une pince de Snuff, for de Diable will not give you back de Amerique. Spain, the Spanish don of pictorial satire, wearing a long sword, stands, his l. hand on the shoulder of France, the r. arm outstretched, saying, See Gibraltar! See Don Langara! by S Anthony you have made me the Laughing Stock of Europe. Behind him is Gibraltar, a rock with fortifications flying the British flag, in front small vessels are exploding in smoke, evidently the floating batteries which suffered such damage in the futile attack on Gibraltar of 13 Sept. 1782, see No. 6035, &c. Don Langara had been captured by Rodney in his victory of 16 Jan. 1780, see Nos. 5646-8, 5658. On the extreme l. is Holland, a stolid burgher wearing baggy breeches and a hat like an inverted flower-pot. He is in T.Q. back view, looking to the r. and saying De Donder take you Monseür [sic] I think I have paid the Piper. Clouds above a low horizon form the background, with Gibraltar (l.) and a naval engagement (r.) in the distance.

Spain had been induced by France to enter the war by an undertaking that Gibraltar should be recovered; see terms of the Convention of Aranjuez, 12 April 1779. Doniol, Hist. de la Participation de la France à l'Établissement des États-Unis, iii. 810; cf. No. 6025. For the United Provinces and the war see No. 6292.

Grego, Gillray, p. 47.

9¼ × 13½ in.

6211 THE WESTMINSTER ELECTORS CHARING THEIR FAVORITE CANDIDATE

Pub by Mrs Darchery April 16. 1783 S^t James Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Fox, with a fox's head, is chaired from l. to r. by men with asses' heads. In front of the procession walk a flock of geese holding in their beaks threads which are attached to the front of the poles which support the chair; bystanders with asses' heads huzza. Fox is seated in an elaborately carved chair, he holds up his l. hand addressing the electors. Four men with asses' heads hold the poles on which the chair rests. Behind (l.) the front of a procession appears, headed by a banner on which are a fox and the words the Man of the People. A woman with an ass's head behind Fox is selling a ballad; she holds up A new Song the Fox & Wes^r Geese. Another stands (r.) holding Fox's election address, a paper inscribed To the Worthy Electors. . . Hats with favours inscribed Fox are being waved. Men with asses' heads and the geese shout Huzza and Fox for ever. The branch of a tree (r.) stretches over the foremost part of the procession, on this sit three owls. Beneath the title is engraved:

“Whilst Folly clap'd her hands, & Wisdom Stared.” “Rosciad”

Fox was re-elected unopposed for Westminster on 7 April, after taking office as Secretary of State, see No. 6215. For the Westminster geese see No. 5843, &c.

8¾ × 12¾ in.

6212 THE BLESSINGS OF PEACE.

[? After Viscount Townshend.]

Publish'd according to Act of Parliament, by M. Smith in Fleet Street. April 16th 1783.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Kings, ministers, and politicians in conference on both sides of the Atlantic, their identities indicated by numbers referring to notes engraved below the design. On the extreme l., beyond a piece of water inscribed Atlantic, a young girl dressed in feather head-dress and girdle, her name America inscribed over her head, sits between the kings of France (2) and Spain (3), giving a hand to each. Behind them, l., stands (1) D^r Franklin, supporting himself on his stick, and placing a wreath on America's head. A dog, probably Holland, sits in front of this group, which is in the middle distance.

On the English side of the water the sun is setting (r.) behind a hill, its rays are inscribed England's Sun Setting. In the distance groups of sailors and others are fighting with bludgeons; a soldier fires at an unarmed man who is running away. This probably represents the mutiny among the sailors at Portsmouth in March 1783 which was put down by Lord Howe. Ann. Reg., 1783, p. 199; Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 498.

A group of standing figures fills the foreground of the design. In the centre is the king (9, The —); he holds out both hands, saying, my Lords and Gentlemen, what should I do. He wears one top-boot, the other lies on the ground in front of him. This is an allusion to the supposed influence of Lord Bute. The boot had been the subject of innumerable satires early in the reign. See, e.g., No. 3860. On each side of him is a judge: (8), Lord Thurlow, in profile to the r., says Follow the Voice of the People. (This was not the general interpretation of Thurlow's advice to the king.) (10), Lord Mansfield, in profile to the l., to whom the king turns, says, Fallo your own Inclination Ye can do no wrong. He wears a judge's wig and bands, with a kilt and tartan socks. On the l. stand four persons addressing the king. (4), Charles Fox, stamping and gesticulating violently, fists clenched, r. arm raised, says, Keep Peace on any Terms. (5), D. of Richmond, says I have made 10,000 Saving in Sand Bags & Wheel Barrows. (He was Master of the Ordnance under Rockingham and Shelburne, and prided himself on his energy in introducing economies. Cf. Walpole, Last Journals, ii. 450.) (6), L^d Shelburne, stands behind the group with a complacent air, saying, I found ye in a Ruinous State and will quito you so. (7), Edmund Burke, stands foremost of this group, addressing the king with outstretched forefinger, saying nothing but deminishing your Expences and discarding old Servants, Will Save this Kingdom; in his l. hand he holds a book, B—k on Œconomy. This illustrates the unpopularity which followed the execution of Burke's scheme of economical reform, more especially since it was accompanied by pensions to Barré and Dunning. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 456-7.

The foremost of the group to the r. of the king is (12) Lord North, in profile to the l. saying, I thought to have had America at our Feet, but I see tis Otherwise. Behind him stands (14) Lord Nugent, bending forward, his hat under his arm, saying Give the Old Rat of the Constitution leave to offer a few words. (See Nos. 6059, 6255.) (11), M^r Sheridan, turns towards (13) M^r Pitt, who looks like a boy; he is saying, The next play I write, intend giving you a place in the Character of the Angry School Boy. (The allusion is to a speech on 17 Feb. in answer to one by Pitt attacking Sheridan for theatricality; Sheridan said, 'if ever I again engage in the compositions he alludes to, I may be tempted to an act of presumption, to attempt an improvement on one of Ben Jonson's best Characters—the character of the Angry Boy in the Alchymist'. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 491.) (15), Lord Keppel, turning his head in profile to the r. says, If the French had Stay'd till I drub'd them, this Bustle never would have happend, an ironical allusion to the Battle of Ushant, cf. Nos. 5570, 5992, &c., and to the recent naval mutiny. (16), Lord Ashburton (Dunning) answers, Hem, Hem, aye my lord the 27th of July 1778, might have done you Immortal Honor. (Dunning was known as 'Orator Hum', see No. 6091.) In the distance, but in front of the distant fighting, is a group of figures on a small scale: (17), Lord Amherst addresses old soldiers with wooden legs, crutches, &c., saying Gentlemen we have no further occasion for you.

In the sky, riding on a broom-stick, is a witch in a cloak and steeple-crowned hat, behind her are black clouds, across which streams a label coming from beneath her petticoats, inscribed PEACE—PEACE—P—E—A—C. In the foreground (l.) a thistle is growing, to signify the baleful influence of Scottish advisers. Beneath the design is engraved, Alas poor Country, almost afraid to know itself—Macbeth.

For the peace see No. 6172, &c.

This print is exceptional, perhaps unique, in printing in full the names of the characters, with the exception of George III, who is The —.

10½ × 13⅛ in.

6213 THE COLE-HEAVERS.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d April 16th 1783. by W. Humphrey, N^o 227, Strand.

Engraving. Fox and North, as coal-heavers, stand shovelling guineas into a sack. Fox (l.), in profile to the r., with a fox's head and brush, holds open the mouth of the sack which is nearly full. North (r.) stands full-face, holding a long shovel in both hands from which guineas pour into the sack. At his feet are piles of guineas. He is saying Pretty Pickings Charley. The sack is inscribed For Private Use. On a rope stretched along the wall behind them hang a number of empty sacks inscribed M.T. (empty) and D^o, implying that the Treasury has been raided. Over these sacks is a scroll inscribed For the use of the Publick.

The slovenly dressing for which Fox was already noted is caricatured: he wears a shirt and waistcoat, his breeches are unbuttoned at the knee, his stockings ungartered, his shoe is unfastened, his brush comes through his torn breeches. His fox's head, with open mouth, protruding tongue, and great display of teeth, has an expression of greedy satisfaction. North, enormously fat, wears a ruffled shirt and breeches, with his Garter ribbon. Beneath the title is etched:

“Two Virtuous Elves, “Taking care of Themselves.”

Cole was a slang term for gold or money. See also Nos. 6216, 6225, 6235, 6257.

A print with this title and the same theme was issued in 1756, the 'cole heavers' being Newcastle, Hardwicke, Anson, and Fox, Charles Fox's father, as a fox holding out a sack. See No. 3423.

8⅜ × 12⅞ in.

Also a coloured impression in 'Caricatures', iv. 33. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

6214 THE UP & DOWN OR WHEEL OF ADMI—RATION [ADMINISTRATION]

Pub by E Dachery April 17 1783 St Jame's Street

Engraving. The 'Wheel' which stands in the centre is of the nature of a dredger, four oblong receptacles pivot on a bar supported by two posts and worked by a crank. It is large in proportion to the figures. The crank is being turned by the Devil; he stands on the bent shoulders of George III, who is saying I've got the Devil & all upon my Back. The Devil says, ay never mind George'e lad we shall have a rare Crew in at last.

A group of small figures (l.) stand in consultation, their identity indicated by numbers referring to notes below the design. (3), F—x and (2) Nor—h stand arm in arm, holding reins which are attached to the nose of (4) the *Duke of Port—*and, showing that the nominal prime minister is led by the nose by the two Secretaries of State. North (in back view) says, Well Well Charley Ill help you and you shall hold me fast in my Place. Fox, who has a fox's head, answers, But what can I do? my late tumble hath Crippled me quite & I have not got money enough to buy a pair of Crutches. (5), Kept—ll, in naval uniform, stands watching Fox and North; while, running towards them, in profile to the r., with outstretched hand, his r. hand in a sling is (6) Bur—e, saying, Zooks I can no longer suffer Hungary Guts & empty Purse fol de rol. Behind (1.) is a ballad-singer, pregnant, and holding out a ballad in each hand, while she sings Sing Tantarara Rogues all.

To the r. of the wheel and in the distance are three minute figures, representing the late Ministry: (1), Lord Shel—ne, his Garter ribbon very conspicuous, sits on the ground, saying, Look what a crush a Pretty decent Tumble. A man lying prone (probably Barré) says Im almost kil'd; the third, sitting, who, in spite of the minute scale, resembles Lord Ashburton (Dunning), says, its all over with us my Lord.

In the background, the front of a building is indicated by two mounted sentries and by the bills which are posted on its wall. It probably represents the Treasury. The bills are inscribed, The Tower of Babel with Confusion of — to be seen without loss of Time or Lei at a moderate rent not a mile from Westminster Hall. . . . On a torn placard is inscribed Wanted 100 good recruits for a new regiment just. . . . The third is illustrated by three figures: the devil (c.) with a pitchfork, a skeleton (r), and Fame (l.) blowing her trumpet; beneath in large letters is inscribed Wonders Wonders Wonders . . . Astonish . . . World. This last is taken from the advertisements of the quack Katerfelto, cf. No. 6162.

One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6171-9, &c. The new ministry was formed on 2 April and on the 7th Burke was given his old post of Paymaster. Cf. No. 6281.

$5\frac{1}{4} \times 9\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6215 THE RE-ELECTING OF REYNARD, OR FOX THE PRIDE OF THE GEESE

I. Porter fec'

Pub by W^m Richardson Aprill 19 1783. Strand.

Engraving (coloured impression). The electors of Westminster as geese, chairing Fox on his re-election, which his appointment as Secretary of State made necessary. Fox (r.), with a fox's head, in profile to the l., is seated in a chair resting on poles, which a number of geese are supporting on the points of their beaks. He holds up a purse containing guineas in his r. hand, saying, Gentlemen, I will be of Either side for or against is Aqualy alike to me so as I get the Chink. Inside the crown of his hat, which he holds in his l. hand, are the initials C F. The back of his chair is inscribed Fill'd with [de]ceit. In front of the chair a procession of geese-electors marches with banners, staves, and musical instruments. They all wear hats with election favours. In front (l.) two geese support between them on two poles a square fringed and tasselled banner inscribed The Man of the People. At the back of the procession on a triangular banner, also fringed and tasselled, is Fox for ever.

The scene is evidently 'the piazzas' of Covent Garden. Above an arcade is a line of sash-windows, from which geese stretch their necks, saying (l. to r.) A Deceiver of the World, no Coalition; hiss hiss of with him he his [sic] a Deceiver of the Geese; Fox for ever; and O, that Deceitfull F—x.

Fox's re-election took place on 7 April without opposition but not without clamour and hisses, which, Fox claimed, proceeded, not from the electors 'but from the lowest class of society'. He said, 'To diminish the influence of the Crown in Parliament and to increase the influence of the people, he assured the Electors had ever been, and ever should be, his great object, and he hoped his past conduct had gained their confidence'. He was chaired and taken to Wood's Hotel for the election dinner. London Chronicle, 5-8 April 1783. Walpole, Last Journals, ii. 513. See No. 6211. For Fox's geese see Nos. 5843, &c.

8 $\frac{7}{16}$ × 13 in.

6216 THE BOWER OF BLISS: OR, PARADISE REGAIN'D.

Pub^d April 21. 1783. by W. Wells, N^o 132 Fleet Street.

Engraving. Fox and North sit under a vine-trellis covered with bunches of grapes; roses grow beneath the vines. Each sits facing the other in a small arm-chair, behind them is a table on which are money-bags. Behind the table is a small temple, or pavilion, the folding doors of which are open. Over the door is the bust in an oval of Portland. The building is inscribed Treasury. North (l.) turning in profile to the r., takes Fox's r. hand, and is about to place in it a money-bag, saying Now Reynard the whole Vineyard is our own, Therefore Let us be busy. Fox (r.), holding up his l. hand deprecatingly, says, That is my Sole aim, but what will the People say.

On the upper and lower margins of the print is engraved:

*Gold—will make things the most opposite in Nature, start from extremes & bind together.
Oh Sacred hunger of pernicious Gold!—
What bands of Faith can impious Lucre hold?*

See also Nos. 6213, 6225, 6235, 6257.

7 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 11 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6217 RAZOR'S LEVÉE, OR Y^E HEADS OF A NEW WIG AD—N
ON A BROAD BOTTOM.

J.S.f.[Sayers.]

Published 21st April 1783 by Thomas Cornell Bruton Street.

Engraving. The interior of a barber's shop. At one side (l.) stands the barber, a fierce, angry-looking man in an apron, washing his hands in a bowl, which appears to be attached to a double wig-stand. Opposite him, at the other side of the room, Sam House, with a bewildered frown, sits in an arm-chair, holding a foaming tankard on which Sam House is just legible. He wears a hat with a cockade inscribed Fox, as worn by Fox's supporters at Westminster elections. On the floor stand wig-blocks, each supported on a tall slender post of varying height with a circular base, the heads of which are those of members of the new ministry. The double stand, next the barber, has the heads of North and Fox: North in a bag-wig, T.Q. face, with a frown of distress, Fox, in profile to the l., with rough hair, and a smile of satisfaction. The other heads, all in profile to the l., are (l. to r.) the Duke of Portland, in a bag-wig; Lord John Cavendish in a small close-fitting wig; Lord Stormont, Lord Carlisle, and Keppel, these three all in bag-wigs. Apart from and behind the others, behind Sam House and on the extreme r. of the print is Burke, frowning, as if dissatisfied with his place; he wears his customary small pig-tail queue. On the ground (l.), behind the barber, lie three heads, they are those of the Duke of Grafton, of Dundas, and Lord Shelburne.

Although Dundas lost his office of Treasurer of the Navy on the accession of the Coalition he remained Lord Advocate of Scotland until Aug. 1783.

On the shelves on the wall are wigs and wig-boxes. On a high shelf (r.) are the heads of Lord Ashburton, full-face, and of Lord Grantley in profile to the l. These two, though once associated with Fox and Burke, are now shelved. Between them is a judge's wig in back view.

The satire is emphasized by the decorations of the back wall of the room. Immediately behind the heads of Fox and North is a large poster or play-bill headed with the royal arms, and inscribed, By his Majesty's Servants this day will be presented A new Way to pay old Debts. . . . Above it are two H.L. portraits of Charles I and Cromwell, each holding out his arms as if in friendship to the other, a parallel to the unnatural alliance between North and Fox. For other comparisons of Fox with Cromwell see No. 6239, &c. Over the fire-place is a large map, A new Map of Great Britain and Ireland; the piece on which Ireland should be, hangs down and is almost torn off. Behind Keppel's head a ballad is posted, headed by a design of two ships in full sail. This is Rule Britannia Set to a new Tune . . . 27th July. Cf. No. 5992, &c. Behind the barber (l.) is a wall, in which is a lattice window; a mirror and hat hang on the wall. Against it is a table on which are the materials of his trade (hair strung between two bobbins, a comb, and scissors) and two papers: Westminster Association your desir[ed] . . . and Quintuple Alliance, The Favour of your Company is request[ed]. . . . The Quintuple Alliance was an association of patriots of the City, Westminster, Southwark, Middlesex, and Surrey, with objects similar to those of the Westminster Association, the chief being parliamentary reform. Cf. The Remembrancer, 1783, Part II, p. 7. See also No. 6247.

This appears to represent the dismay caused to the patriots of the metropolis by the formation of the Coalition Ministry: 'When political reasons made it necessary for M^r Fox to unite with Lord North, Sam's confidence in M^r Fox was shook to the centre.' Life and Political Opinions of the late Sam House, 1785, p. 24. The barber is probably also a character well known at the time.

Walpole calls this the best of the deluge of satiric prints against the Coalition. 'It is better composed than ordinary and has several circumstances well imagined.' Letters, xii. 436, 25 April 1783. For the Coalition see Nos. 6176-9, &c.

10 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 15 $\frac{9}{16}$ in.

6218 THE LEVEE

E. T. fecet.

April 21. Pub: by E Dachery April 21 1783. St. James Street

Engraving. Ministers stand round a pole on the top of which is a head. This is turned from the spectator and is unrecognizable, but is evidently the king. The pole is being held up by Fox and North; North, in profile to the l., very stout and wearing an enormous Garter ribbon, holds it with his r. hand. Fox stands behind it, scowling downwards, legs astride, his l. hand stretched upwards against the pole. An enormously tall man, with sword and chapeau bras, stands in profile to the r. holding a long staff of office. He is probably the Earl of Hertford, who again became Lord Chamberlain, a post which he lost on the fall of North, see No. 5966.

Two men run towards the pole from the l., and two from the r.; they are much caricatured and cannot be identified. Rays come from a sun with a smiling face in the upper r. corner of the print. Beneath the title is engraved, Good Morrow to your Night Cap!

For the attitude of the Ministry and especially Fox to the Crown see No. 6239, &c.

By the same artist as No. 6189.

$6 \times 9\frac{3}{16}$ in.

6219 BONUS MELIOR OPTIMUS

OR THE DEVIL'S THE BEST OF THE BUNCH.

[Gillray.]

Thos Pether inv^t

Pub^d April 22^d 1783 by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). The Devil (r.) squats on a low circular stool before a fire which he blows with bellows to heat a cauldron hanging from a hook. He says,

*God save great George our King
God bless our noble King;
God damn the Broth it will never Boil.*

'God' (three times), 'George', and 'damn' have been scratched through but left fully legible.

Behind and on the l. sit North (l.) and Fox (r.); Fox with his r. arm round North's shoulders, North offering him a spoonful from the dish which he holds on his knees, at which (as Boreas) he is blowing. North is sitting on a cylindrical roll inscribed Budget. Fox, who has a fox's head, sits on a chest inscribed Pandora's Box. Fox says, Blow hot! Blow cold! He! He! He! with the self same Breath my Lord—give me a sup of your soup—I have often cool'd your Porridge my Lord! Hay? He! He! He! North says, My dear Reynard you are welcome to a Spoonfull—Be cautious!—a little of my Broth goes a great way—'tis d—d high season—look at my Cook he & my Freind . . . hum! . . . with the consent of the . . . hum, did both . . . hum the Nation. Over the fire-place is an oval medallion of the heads of North and Fox, called COALITION MEDAL. This is a free rendering of Sayers's print of that name, see No. 6183.

The words of the title are placed under the three characters: North is BONUS, Fox MELIOR, the Devil OPTIMUS.

An adaptation of Æsop's fable of the Satyr and the Traveller: Fox as the Satyr approves instead of blaming the Traveller for blowing hot and cold with the same breath since his only desire is for gain. One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6176-9, &c.

Grego, Gillray, p. 47.

$8\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6220 THE COALITION.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d Apr^l 25th 1783, by G. Humphrey, N^o 48 Long Acre.

Engraving. North (l.) and Fox (r.), back to back, excreting into a pan bearing the Royal Arms which stands between them. The Devil stands, crouching, with one foot on the bent back of each; he holds a long shovel in his r. hand, with which he stirs the mixture in the pan; with his l. hand he holds his nose. He is a characteristic Gillray devil with bat's wings, a human torso, satyr's ears and legs, and the feet of a beast of prey. A disk or cup supported on a point, rests on his head.

The scene is outside a closed door in a stone wall. Over the doorway is a scroll, inscribed, CATAPLASMA BELLI ET PACIS, VEL COMPOSITIONE INFERNALIS. Under this scroll is the inscription, To be used as the universal SALVE-ation of this Kingdom | By the KINGS ROYAL LETTERS PATENT, | The Original Warehouse — by — Mess^{rs} Reynard & Boreas.

Below this and on the architrave of the door is a framed print, The Fox & Geese. A fox standing on his hind-legs plays the fiddle to a row of geese, who stretch their necks and cackle. Prints of fox and geese, the geese representing the Westminster electors, were common. See No. 5843, &c.

This coarse design is powerfully drawn. North, wearing a nightcap and his Garter ribbon, is in profile to the l. He is much caricatured and has an expression of sulky melancholy. Fox, T.Q. face, with his unkempt hair, bushy eyebrows, and 'gunpowder jowl', has a more sinister scowl.

12 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.6220_A JUNCTION OF PARTIES.

[Gillray.]

N^o 1. Pub^d Apr^l 25th 1783, by G. Humphrey, N^o 48 Long Acre.

The same plate (coloured impression) as No. 6220 with an altered title. The wording of the scroll above the doorway has been altered by the substitution of the word COALITIO for COMPOSITIONE.

6221 SCRUB AND ARCHER

IB [J. Boyne.]

London Publish'd as the Act Directs Ap 25 1783 by I Boyne N^o 2 Shoe Lane Fleet S^t

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Fox (l.) as Scrub, and North (r.) as Archer, sitting on two upright chairs in close consultation as in Farquhar's play, The Beaux' Stratagem, Act III. Behind (r.), listening to their conversation, is Mrs. Robinson (Perdita) as Gipse, the lady's-maid. Fox sits full-face wearing an apron, his hands on his knees, with an expression of puzzled melancholy. North, in toupet-wig, ruffled shirt, and Garter ribbon, in profile to the l., is talking to him with the insinuating smile of the gentleman playing the part of the gentleman's gentleman. Perdita, her arms folded, wearing a frilled cap, low-cut bodice, wide hooped petticoats with an apron, looks coyly at them over her r. shoulder.

On the wall (centre) is a full-length portrait of Col. Tarleton, one foot on a cannon, a horse's head and the muzzle of a cannon indicated in the background. This is a free rendering of Sir Joshua Reynolds's portrait, of which a mezzotint by J. R. Smith was published in 1782, the background, but not the figure, being reversed. The frame is inscribed C Tarlton.

Beneath the design is engraved:

ARCH And this Col: I am Afraid has Converted the Affection of your Perdita

SCRUB Converted; ay and perverted my dear Friend for I am Afraid he has made her a Whore &c.

This is a slightly altered quotation from the play, the scene being that in which Archer and Scrub agree to be 'sworn brothers'. A satire on the Coalition and on the attachment of Fox to Mrs. Robinson, see No. 6117, &c. For her relations with Col. Tarleton see No. 6116. For the Coalition see Nos. 6176-9, &c. Similar in manner to No. 6231.

Reissued 1 Aug. 1783.

7 $\frac{5}{16}$ × 6 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6222 A JOINT MOTION OR THE HONEY-MOON OF THE COALITION. [c. April 1783]

Porter fec'

Sold by W. Humphrey. N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. A street scene, the background being the lower part of the stone wall of a building beneath which is an archway (r.). Under the archway crouch Fox and North clasping each other round the neck, and holding between them a paper inscribed Preliminaries. Both are excreting, North looks with a pained expression at Burke, who stands opposite them, in profile to the r., as an apothecary holding a large syringe inscribed Economy. Fox looks at North. Behind Burke, and in profile to the l., stands Lord John Cavendish holding a medicine bottle labelled Reform which he is pressing on a man standing under a recessed alcove in the wall. This man, wearing the court suit and sword which denoted office, stands stiffly, holding a similar bottle inscribed Office and apparently rejecting Reform. The street is Cleveland Row (close to St. James's Palace and Park). Above the design is inscribed:

*What Rhubarb Senna or what Purgative Drug
Will scower these English hence? Sc. 3 Act 5th Macbeth.*

The Coalition Ministry was at last appointed on 2 April; Burke's appointment as Paymaster was on 7 April. It is suggested that its attitude to the Peace Preliminaries, Economy, and Reform has changed since its members were in opposition. See Nos. 6176-9, 6184, &c., and No. 6229. 8 × 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6223 AMUSEMENT FOR JOHN BULL & HIS COUSIN PADDY, OR, THE GAMBOLS OF THE AMERICAN BUFFALO IN ST JAMES'S STREET.

Published 1st May 1783, by I. Fielding, Pater-noster Row.

Engraving. From the European Magazine, iii. 296. Ministers and would-be ministers are scrambling for the loaves and fishes which have been scattered in the street from the baskets of a baker and a fish-wife which lie on the ground. The fall of the baskets has been occasioned by a buffalo, whose head and shoulders appear on the r.; in front of him the fish-wife lies prone. The background is intended for the lower part of the front of St. James's Palace; the king, smiling, looks from a window over the gateway.

Two ministers kneel facing each other picking up loaves and fishes: Portland, in profile to the l., says I am thankful to you, my Lord, for this large fish, you shall have as good a one soon from Portland; the other, probably Lord John Cavendish, Chancellor of the Exchequer, says, Our Windsor Acteon in the window, seems highly tickled with his Cabinet Hounds. Behind Portland stand North and Fox stooping forward; Fox is kicking at a judge who stands behind him, and says, This American Buffalo, has occasioned glorious sport. Keep off Bigwig. The judge, probably Thurlow, on whose resignation of the Chancellorship Fox had insisted, see No. 6197, says, I will have a loaf & a fish, or the Wool-sack may go to the Devil. North says, Kick him off Charley, that Bloodhound must not come in, he'd devour the whole.

Behind Cavendish two men stand wrestling; one (l.) is Keppel, who says, This is fighting Yard-arm and Yard-arm my Lord, which you know I love (an ironical allusion to the battle of Ushant, 27 July 1778. See No. 5992, &c). His opponent, who is probably Shelburne, answers, I'll share what I get among the Loyalists, if I dont change my mind. Shelburne had been much attacked for failing to secure better terms for the American Loyalists, see No. 6182, &c. A man, running forward from the l., says, I am as deep as a Pit, when any thing of this kind is going forward. Probably Thomas Pitt (1737-93), who played an important part in negotiations during the ministerial interregnum, and was offered a Secretaryship of State by the king. Possibly William Pitt.

The persons are poorly characterized, and can as a rule be identified only by their words.

One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6176-9, &c. See also Nos. 6195, 6240, 6248, &c.

$3\frac{7}{16} \times 5\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6224 THE UNNATURAL CONNECTION. [1 May 1783]

Engraving. From The Rambler's Magazine. Fox and North stand in a library grasping each other by the hand. Fox has a fox's head, both wear court-suits. A table (r.) is covered with coronets, a mitre, the insignia of orders of knighthood, a mace, money-bags, and papers inscribed Pension. A dog, his collar inscribed Thurlo, barks at the two ministers, Bow! wow! wow. Fox says to North, When I talk'd of impeaching you I was but in jest. North says (pointing to the table) Let us hang together & all those honours & Emoluments will be at our disposal.

On the wall is a book-case and a map of Little Britain, once Great Britain, which appears to represent London and the district north of London. A heavily festooned curtain partly conceals the books.

One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6176-9, &c. For Thurlow see Nos. 6197, 6223, &c.

$5\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{7}{16}$ in.

6225 THE RT HONBLE CATCH SINGERS.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d May 2^d 1783 by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Fox and North seated on an alehouse bench, singing a rollicking song, holding between them a two-handled tankard of beer. Fox (l.) sits full-face looking towards North; in his r. hand is a pen, his l. holds one handle of the tankard. North (r.) sits behind a solid oblong table on which are writing materials, he flourishes a rolled paper inscribed Express . . . in his l. hand; his r. holds the tankard. He turns his head in profile to the l., blowing a borean blast at the froth on the tankard, making it run down the pot, obscuring the crown and the G. of the G.R. inscribed on it. The froth falls on to a Westminster Petition which lies on the table.

The words of the catch are in labels issuing from the mouths of the singers. Fox sings,

*Bring every Flow'r that can be got Pinks Hyacinths & Roses,
We two will drink out of one Pot
And Fuddle both our Noses.*

North sings,

*With Treasury Juice the Pot shall Foam
For Reynard & for N—h
The People still may wish for some
And they shall have — the Froth.*

Fox is laughing and carefree, North scowls with the effort of blowing at the froth.

One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6176–9, &c. Walpole records (7 May) that the Westminster Association (for parliamentary reform, &c.) had lately assumed a menacing tone, and had voted that they would not be content under their full demand. Last Journals, 1910, ii. 516. Their petition and the demands of 'the People' are here treated with contempt by the new ministers. Cf. Nos. 6207, 6213, 6216, 6230, 6235.

Grego, Gillray, p. 48.

8 $\frac{9}{16}$ × 12 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6225 A A copy (coloured impression), reduced, without date or publication-line, in which 'hon^{ble}' is written 'hon^{dl}'.

5 $\frac{1}{4}$ × 7 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6226 [THE COALITION STAGE COACH.]

ƒ.S.f. [Sayers.]

Published 5th May 1783 by Thomas Cornell Bruton Street

Engraving. A stage coach, drawn by two wretched hacks, is being driven (r. to l.) in the direction of a signpost (l.) which points To Bulstrode thro' Bushy Park, Bulstrode being a country house of the Duke of Portland, Bushy Park that of Lord North. Portland and Fox sit side by side on the box. Portland, with an expression and in an attitude of anxiety, is being taught to drive by Fox, who leans across him holding both reins and whip, his mouth twisted, his eyes half-shut. At the back of the coach, in the boot or basket, stands Lord North in the place of a footman, holding straps; he wears a bag-wig and his hat is under his arm. He watches the pair on the box with an expression of anger and anxiety. The coach has no windows except for oval panes let into the upper panels of the door. On the door is inscribed The New Fly | From St James's Street. | To the Land's End | performed (if God permit) by [names erased] & Co. On each panel is a ducal coronet surmounting the initial P.; on each coronet sits a fox. The road is covered with large boulders. The near front wheel has been broken, apparently in passing over a rock inscribed Loan. An irregularity in the road is inscribed, Per varios praeceps Casus rota volvitur Ævi. On the extreme r., just in front of the horses, a boulder is inscribed Reform Bill.

The terms of the loan, proposed by Lord John Cavendish, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, were attacked by Pitt on 16 April. On 6 May (a rock just ahead, at the date of this print) was the debate on parliamentary reform. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 767 ff. and 826 ff. The Westminster Association had voted that they would not be content under their full demand for reform. Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 516–17. Cf. No. 6225.

Beneath the design is etched, Such was the love of Office of the noble Lord, that finding he would not be permitted to mount the Box, | He had been content to get up behind. vide the Duke of C—— . . . s's Speech Morning Chronicle 15th April. This was a speech by Chandos on the Irish Judicature Bill, 14 April, violently attacking the Coalition: 'he particularly arraigned the conduct of Lord North, and said that not being able to get again upon the state coach-box, he had been content to get up behind.' Parl. Hist. xxiii. 755.

One of several satires on Portland as the puppet of Fox, see Nos. 6228, 6233, 6256.

11¼ × 16⅞ in.

6227 A BLOCK FOR THE WIGS—OR, THE NEW STATE WHIRLIGIG.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d May 5th 1783, by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand

Engraving. A merry-go-round in violent action, ministers seated on the horses, &c., fixed on a circular platform which is supported on a short central beam. This beam is held in place by three blocks or wedges inscribed Treasury, Navy, Army. In the centre of the platform, on a tall pedestal, a continuation of the supporting beam, is a bust of the king in profile, the features blank, the head bald, a bob-wig being supported on a pole above his head; from this pole floats a ragged British flag. The king, the centre of the structure, is represented as a wig-block, or a block for the Whigs. The foremost figure on the merry-go-round on the extreme r. is Fox, seated in a chair, in back view, with a fox's head and brush; he holds up a large money-bag in his left hand, looking over his shoulder at his followers with a jeering expression; his large brush flies out behind him. Behind him, riding a galloping horse whose legs are cut off at the knees, is North, his wig flying from his head with the violence of the motion.¹ Behind him is Burke, on a similar horse, dressed as a jesuit, wearing a large biretta as in No. 6205. He is in profile to the r., wearing spectacles, and reading from a book he holds open before him, inscribed Sublime & Beautiful (in allusion to his Philosophical Enquiry . . ., 1756). His leg is that of a skeleton, probably to indicate the character of his policy of economical reform. Behind Burke is Keppel, in naval uniform, riding on an ass with its legs folded beneath it. He is saying Dam'd rough Sailing this, I shall never be able to keep my Seat till the 27th July, another allusion to the battle of Ushant. Cf. No. 5992, &c. Behind Keppel, seated on a throne inscribed President, full-face and smiling, is a man with bare knees, short turban, breeches, and tartan stockings. From the crown which decorates the back of his throne hang two large thistles. He wears the ribbon of an order, and represents Scottish influence personified possibly in Bute, probably in Lord Stormont, who was President of the Privy Council in the Coalition Ministry and K.T. The rim of the merry-go-round opposite Keppel, Burke, and North respectively is inscribed Balaam, Economy, Secretary.

¹ A great meeting of the Electors of Westminster on 6 March was repeatedly interrupted by a heckler asking 'How long has Lord North been a Whig?' Remembrancer, 1783, i. 211.

The round-about is outside an inn, part of which appears on the l. On the sign-board, which swings from a beam inscribed Crown & Royal Bob, is a crown, above which is a bob-wig like that suspended above the king's head. Beneath is written John Bull Good Entertainment. A clock-face on the wall points to 12.15. From an upper window a man reaches out to take a large bundle which is being handed to him by a man on a ladder. Above, on the upper margin of the print, is inscribed Poor John Bull's House plunder'd at Noon Day.

On a low stool outside the inn sits a lame man, with swathed legs and closed eyes, his crutches beside him; he holds a pipe in one hand, a tankard in the other. He sings, Tis Liberty Tis Liberty, Dear Liberty alone, signifying how easily John Bull is plundered and bemused by talk of liberty. One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6176-9, &c.

Grego, Gillray, p. 48.

8 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 13 in.

6228 A PETRIFIED LUSUS NATURAE

LATELY DISCOVERED IN THE RUINS OF A TEMPLE
ONCE DEDICATED TO LIBERTY BY THE BRITONS

T. C. [? T. Colley.]

Pub. by M Thomas. Princes Street. Mayth 6. 1783.

Engraving. A large rock stands in a landscape; carved in the rock are busts in relief of Portland, Fox, and North, numbered respectively 1, 2, 3. The king (r.) stands inspecting them through a single eye-glass. He wears court-dress and a sword. He is saying, my friend Je—kinson shall write a dissertation on this Phenomenon.

The centre head, in full face, superimposed on the other two, is that of Fox, his bushy eyebrows and 'gun-powder jowl' much stressed. On the l., looking to l., is the Duke of Portland; on the r., in profile facing the king, is North. Numbers refer to notes engraved below the title:

N^o 1 [Portland] Supposed to be the head of a Patrician on close examination; Lennæus was of opinion it never contained much Brain he vainly Accepted a Situation in the common Wealth that exposed him to his fellow Citizens as he was known to be a mere tool in the hands of others.

2 [Fox] The head of a turbulent and factious Tribune of great abilities which he exerted occasionally for and Against Government as he happened to be in or out of Power in the Senate he cared not what falsehood he advanced to carry a Question against a Consul.

3 [North] The head of a Tribune of Patrician Ancestors who had been Consul and much admired for his Wit eloquence and knowledge, he had the Art to impose himself upon the People for an honest disinterested man, he was removed from the Consulate by a fachin [sic] Whose conduct he declared would ruin the State, yet rather than lose the emoluments of Office he joined his enemies, and Submitted to hold under them a Subordinate office in the Republic, his conduct in this instance was much censured by the People and gave rise to many witty Pasquinades.

The supposed secret and great influence over the king of Jenkinson, afterwards 1st Earl of Liverpool, had made him very unpopular, see Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 503, 504, 506, 508. March 1783. See also No. 6256. For Portland as the puppet of others see No. 6226, &c.

This satire appears to be an imitation of No. 3417, Lusus Naturae (1756), in which the petrified heads were those of the Duke of Newcastle, Stone, the Duke's secretary, and Henry Fox.

Either by Colley or by an imitator of his style, perhaps Gillray; the head of Fox resembles that in No. 6117.

$7\frac{7}{16} \times 12\frac{15}{16}$ in.

6229 THE (ASS)-HEADED AND (COW-HEART)-ED MINISTRY MAKING THE BRITISH (LION) GIVE UP THE PULL.

Pub by J Barrow May 8 1783 White Lion Bull Stairs Surry Side
Black Friars Bridge

Engraving. The words in brackets in the title are represented by small objects as in a rebus. The four enemy powers represented by animals are harnessed to the British lion and attempt to drag him into a circular pit. Four ministers with asses' heads drag at the lion to impede his efforts to save himself. The animals resemble those in No. 6004 by the same artist. The pit, which is in the centre of the design, is The Pit of ruin: on its farther side, watching the struggle, is the double-headed (? Russian) eagle, one head turned (r.) towards the four powers saying I am an armed Neutral, the other turned (l.) towards the British lion saying Gratitude oft prompt me on to help thee, yet I refrain'd.

The lion is on the l. of the pit, his harness terminates in a large hook, which holds three chains attached to the harness of the four enemy powers who are on the r. The ass-headed ministers stand behind the lion, dragging at a rope attached to his head. The foremost, Keppel, in a naval coat, says, He shall neither ramble nor roar in America, to disturb Congress; he shall only stand on the Defensive, one of many allusions to Keppel's lack of enterprise in the battle of Ushant, see No. 5992, &c. The next, who from his paunch and Garter ribbon must be intended for North, says, He shall make peace before Count de Estaing [sic] goes on his dreadful Expedition, an allusion to North's Conciliatory Propositions, see No. 5473, &c. The third says, My head is in a Labyrinth when I think on War, so Monsieur must have his terms. The last says, I hope the peace will be approv'd of, then we shall keep our places.

From the lion's mouth come verses, engraved in the upper l. part of the print:

*My honour'd Sirs, who me pretend to lead,
Tis plain the office does not sute your head.
Your hearts like mine all dangers should engage,
The more my foes, the more enflam'd I rage.
Who leads a Lion, should himself be bold,
But you are Dastards, and it shall be told.
By France I'm injured, yet you ask them peace,
What shall I call you? puppies, sheep, or geese?*

*To know you're such, go ask each British Tar,
Which would a Frenchman ask to end a war.
O'er the Atlantic, in the martial field,
You held me in, and now you make me yield;
And tho' I'm able to maintain my State,
I fall by Goose-caps, and by Fox's prate.
I want the brave to lead me on to fight,
To scorn a Peace, till I have all my right,
But you're scarce fit to lead me out to sh—
How hard my fate that such should me control,
Who really are without a British Soul,
For ever blush, for all the wise can see,
You are but Asses and make one of me.*

The enemy powers, who are harnessed to the chains dragging at the lion by rigid bars attached to their collars, strain neck and neck at the lion. The Spanish hound says, He is stronger than Gibraltar, but happy for us he is intangled by his leaders. Next him, and of approximately the same size, is the Gallic cock, saying The old Raskel's Roast Beef keeps him too strong for us all; but his leaders are Asses. Next, the American rattlesnake, his tail stretching in front of the pit and almost reaching the lion, says, The harangues of the British Patriots help me more to Independancy than 40000 Men. The fourth animal, nearest the spectator, is a pug-dog representing Holland, a pipe thrust through his collar; he says, I wish I could have stood Jack on both sides and smok'd my pipe, implying that to Holland neutrality had been profitable, war disastrous. Cf. Nos. 5557, 5827, 6292, &c.

Beneath the title is engraved:

This Plate is designed for a Memorial of the Strength of the British Constitution, being able to cope with four Powers: and also to truly represent a Set of frantic, sophistical Patriots, who when they had wrangled themselves into Ministry, found themselves intirely incapable of the Task, Therefore very suddenly made very humiliating Concessions to France, to obtain a Peace, to the great Mortification of every true Briton, (the British Lion being in full Strength and had just obtain'd some glorious victories over the French and Spaniards.) Thus by a desponding Ministry America got Independency, and France attain'd all her perfidious ends.

The peace preliminaries denounced by North and Fox in Feb. 1783, see No. 6172, &c., were accepted by the Coalition with only trifling readjustments. One of the few attacks on the Patriots for their attitude to the war, cf. No. 5334, &c., and No. 6065.

$8\frac{11}{16} \times 15\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6230 THE POLITICAL WEATHERCOCK

Pub by T. Colly May 10 1783 London

Engraving. Charles Fox as a weathercock. He lies prone and rigid, his waistcoat resting on a pinnacle which rises from a castellated tower from whose embrasures project cannon. His l. arm and l. leg are outstretched; in his l. hand is a large money-bag inscribed $\pounds 12:000$ for making a noise. On his back rests another bag inscribed, $\pounds 11:000$ for holding my Tongue; on the mouth of this bag rests a pack of cards showing the deuce of spades, across this lies a dice-box. This represents the upper part of the pivot of the weathercock.

His r. hand is thrust in his shirt frill, his r. leg is raised vertically from the knee, and receives the blast of North wind directed at the weathercock from the mouth of Lord North, whose head appears among clouds in the upper r. corner of the print. Fox's face, much caricatured, is turned to the spectator; on one side are the words Against the People, on the other for the people. The four points of the compass are indicated by dice. Only the summit of the stone tower is visible, and the title is engraved across it.

Cf. also No. 6207, &c. In the manner of Colley or of his imitator. See No. 6117.

$5\frac{1}{8} \times 6\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6231 FALSTAFF & HIS PRINCE.

IB [J. Boyne.]

London Publish'd as the Act Directs May 16 1783 by J. Boyne N^o 2 Shoe Lane Fleet S^t

Engraving. Fox (r.), as Falstaff, takes the hand of the Prince of Wales, who stands, slim and good-looking, in riding-dress. The prince is in profile to the r., his l. hand behind his back holding a riding-whip. His wide double shirt-frill, cutaway coat, dangling bunches of seals, close-fitting breeches, and boots are in the height of the most recent fashion, cf. No. 6233. Fox is in Elizabethan dress, with a thick curling beard, feathered hat, ruff, slashed doublet and cloak, wide wrinkled boots. He smiles, his l. hand in his breeches pocket.

Beneath the design is engraved:

PRI. There is a Gentlewoman in this Town her Name is —

FAL. Master George I will first make bold with your Money next give me Your hand & Last as I am a Gentⁿ you shall if you will Enjoy — Wife.

For the influence of Fox over the Prince of Wales see Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 496-7; Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 152-3. See also Nos. 6237, 6266. Similar in manner to No. 6221.

$7\frac{1}{4} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6232 THE TRUE STATE OF THE JUNCTION; OR MEN OF ABILITIES CALL'D FOR.

London, Publish'd May 20th 1783 by I. Freeman Strand.

Engraving. Design in an oval. Fox and North stand together in consultation (l.). Fox, holding the r. hand of North who stands on his r., points with his l. hand towards Britannia (r.), who has been thrown to the ground, and is being maltreated by Shelburne. Her shield and broken spear lie beside her. Shelburne has seized her by the hair and is tearing off her upper garments; he smiles saying, I smile at the feeble efforts of them single. Britannia looking towards Fox and North cries, Help! tis only your united strength can save me. Pitt, young and slim, stands beside Britannia, his arms folded, looking down at her and saying I see her danger, yet, better she should perish than I join the Man I hate. Fox is saying to North, Forgetting all our former disputes Quick! let us join to save her. In the foreground lies a large scroll, inscribed, BRITANIA rescue'd from the wicked designs of an artfull —, the last word hidden by a curl of the scroll.

This and No. 6181 are the only direct apologies for the Coalition. See also No. 6291, in which the fall of the Coalition is ascribed to the devil.

$5\frac{1}{4} \times 6\frac{11}{16}$ in.

6233 PUNCH AND THE JUGGLERS.

Pub by Mrs D Archery: May 20. 1783. St Jame's Street

Engraving. Lord Shelburne holds open the door to two gentlemen who enter from the r., pointing out to them a puppet on a low platform (l.) worked by strings held by North and Fox, whose heads and arms appear over a screen. The figure on the platform is the Duke of Portland, dressed as Punch, lifting his legs and arms stiffly as the strings are pulled. The two spectators appear to be the King and the Prince of Wales, tall and slim, in fashionable riding-dress, wearing a short waistcoat with two pendent bunches of seals, and tight riding-boots with long tops, cf. No. 6231. Behind him is the king, stout and shorter than his son. Both smile at the spectacle; Shelburne, wearing his Garter ribbon, says, walk in Gemmen and see the shew, two secretaries of State in the Characters of jugglers working a Prime Minister in the character of a Punch, the first Exhibition of the kind ever seen in this kingdom has had the honor of being performed before both Houses of Parliament with great Applause pray walk in Gemmen

Punch's face is quite expressionless. North (l.) holds the strings attached to his r. foot and l. hand; Fox holds the other two strings. North, turning to Fox, says, We are good men and true; Fox says, looking at Punch, Sing doodle doodle do. . . Behind the platform on a flight of steps on the extreme l. sit two demons, little nude imps with horns, long ears, one with bat's wings. One blows a pair of pipes with great vigour; the other, crouching above his head, points round the screen at Punch. A print is nailed to the wall over Shelburne's head: North, smiling and wearing his Garter ribbon, dances between a fox on its hind-legs and Punch. Over the door, in profile to the r., is a bust of George III. Beneath the title is engraved, A Pantomical performance now exhibiting in the Cabinet at St Ja—ss.

One of several satires on Portland as the puppet of Fox, cf. Nos. 6226, 6256. In the manner of Colley, resembling No. 6228, perhaps by Gillray, of whom the imps are characteristic; see also Nos. 6117, 6237, 6252, &c. $8\frac{1}{2} \times 13\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6234 THE MASK

J Sf. [Sayers.]

Published 21st May 1783 by H. Bretherton New Bond St.

Stipple. A composite mask, a full-face formed of the faces of Fox and North divided by a vertical line down the centre. Fox (l.) with black hair, swarthy complexion, drooping half-closed eye and cynical smile; North (r.) with powdered wig, fair complexion, and puzzled frown. Above the mask is engraved FRONTI NULLA FIDES. See also Nos. 6183, 6257.

$10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ in (pl.). Subject, $5\frac{1}{8} \times 5\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6235 THE SIPHON^s OR TALE OF A TUB

Pub: May 24 1783 by Tho^s Snoozel at the Cock & Bottle Maiden Head Thicket

Engraving. Fox and North, as two cellarmen, are filling casks from The Treasury Tub which lies on a wooden stand in the centre of the design. A siphon inscribed Premier is inserted in the top of the cask, from which branch a number of curving pipes, or cocks; through these the cellarmen divert its contents to receptacles for their own use. The National Tub which stands under the tap of The Treasury Tub (or cask) is empty. Fox sits on the l. in profile to the r., with a fox's head, curled wig, and long bushy queue, holding a jug on his knee and leaning forward; he says, The cask sounds empty & well it might be my Lord for we & our Friends have long been drawing from it. The cocks which extend towards him from the siphon are inscribed, C Fox's Cock, Cock Royal, and This Cock for Private Services. A cask at his side, in allusion to his gambling habits, is inscribed, For C. Fox to be left at the Rattle Box Hazard Row till called for. North (r.), very stout, in profile to the l., leans backwards pouring liquor from a jug through a funnel into the mouth of his cask, which is inscribed, For M^r Deputy Secretary to be left at the Vicar of Bray'[s] Head—Bushy Park, indicating that he is a turn-coat and a mere deputy to Fox. The pipes which extend towards him from the siphon are described Lord No . . . h's Cock; Election Bribe & Pension Cock and Admiralty. His lips are pouted towards his own cock and he is saying (in the metre of the Vicar of Bray):

*A Plenum in my Cask I shew, with Plus & Plus behind Sir;
and now that Cask runs minus low
A Vacuum some will find Sir.*

The figure of North appears to have been copied from No. 6225. Cf. also No. 6213, and for North as Vicar of Bray, No. 6179.

$8\frac{5}{8} \times 12\frac{1}{16}$ in.

6236 PATENT SADDLES INVENTED SOLELY FOR THE EASE OF BOREAS AND REYNARD.

Pub^d by T. Colley May 29 1783 London.

Engraving. Fox and North riding (l. to r.) on clumsy horses in the direction of a sign-post (r.) pointing To S^t James 5 Miles. The seats of the saddles are covered with large projecting spikes. North (r.) has lost his stirrup, and is bouncing on the spikes with a face of anguish. Under his arm is a document inscribed, Taxation. The rapidity of the horse's trot is indicated by his streaming wig and coat-tails. His breeches, like those of Fox, are covered with cobwebs. Fox is turning round in the saddle to face the spectator, having dropped the reins, one hand rests on the horse's shoulder, the other on its hindquarters. Under his arm is a document inscribed Coalition. Beneath the design is engraved:

A true Englishmans toast; a hard trotting Horse, a Porcupine Saddle, a Cobweb Pair of Breeches, for the Enemies of Great Britt—an.¹

One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6167-9, &c. The style resembles that of Nos. 6117, 6228, &c. Perhaps by Gillray imitating Colley.

$8 \times 13\frac{1}{4}$ in.

¹ This, mutatis mutandis, was a toast of the Fellowship Club, Newport, Rhode Island, in December 1773. Belcher, First American Civil War. 1911, i. 120.

6237 OUT OF THE FRYING PAN INTO THE FIRE

Colley. [?]

Pub^d by D archery May. 30. 1783. St James' Street.

Engraving. On a wooden platform a goose wearing a crown rests its neck on a block; the executioner, a fox, stands in front of him in profile to the l. holding up his axe. Two men caper with joy at each end of the scaffold. A slim young man (r.) with a high hat, in back view, sings,

*Oh what Joy's will abound
When the Goose is laid in Ground.*

North (l.), also in back view but showing an upturned cheek, sings, ♫ Ill sing fal de ral tit tit fal de ra. . .

This appears to represent the Prince of Wales and North exulting at the execution of the king by Fox.

For the association between Fox and the Prince of Wales see Walpole, Last Journals, ii. 496 ff. (March 1783): 'The Prince of Wales had of late thrown himself into the arms of Charles Fox, and this in the most indecent and undisguised manner . . . Fox's followers . . . were strangely licentious in their conversation about the king. At Brookes's they proposed wagers on the duration of his reign. . . .' See also Nos. 6231, 6266, and No. 5979, &c.

Possibly by Gillray, imitating the manner of Colley, see Nos. 6117, 6233, &c.

$6\frac{3}{8} \times 9\frac{7}{16}$ in.

6238 THE PORTLAND SHARKS, OR THE MINISTRY UPON A BROAD BOTTOM. [1 June]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine. Lord North, in bag-wig and court-suit, lies prone on the ground looking through his spy-glass at a ship, the Britannia, stranded and heeling over; three small figures walk away from her carrying their plunder in sacks. North says, I knew the Britannia could not pass the Needles—Pillage her my Boys. Four men stand on the back of North, who forms a 'broad bottom' for the ministry. Each clasps a large money-bag. Fox (l.) says, We stand upon a broad bottom & are perfectly safe. Portland, next him, says, I am but a make weight amongst you. The third figure [? Stormont] says, I was always for a Good benefit. Burke says, By my Shoul these are true flowers of Rhetoric. On the r., just behind North, stands 'Sir' Jeffery Dunstan, the street trafficker in old wigs, three times elected Mayor of Garratt. He holds out a tie-wig to North, saying Old Whigs and Sham Whigs, see No. 5637. In the distance, behind the pillagers of the Britannia, is a triangular gallows from which hang seven nooses, inscribed To be Let.

A cutting from the Rambler explains the print, as the dream or vision of a citizen who went to bed after 'punch port and politics' and meditations on a 'late unnatural alliance'. One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6176-9, &c.

$3\frac{3}{16} \times 5\frac{3}{16}$ in.

6239 A SUN SETTING IN A FOG; WITH THE OLD HANOVER HACK DESCENDING.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d June 3^d 1783, by J. Williams, Strand N^o 227¹

Engraving. Fox riding (l. to r.) the old white horse of Hanover, symbolizing the king, from a level plain down the sides of a ravine. In the valley (r.) behind heavy dark clouds the sun is setting, in the sun's disk sits the figure of Britannia. Behind the horse (l.) is a sign-post, with the expressive hands characteristic of Gillray's sign-posts: a hand (r.) in a frilled cuff points downwards To the Valley of Annihilation; the other hand, with upturned palm, points from the Pinnacle of Glory. Fox, who is less gross-looking than in most satires of this period, guides the animal with a rope halter, his reins are broken and trail on the ground, his stirrup is broken, moisture drips from the horse's eye and mouth; he flourishes a whip with a triple lash, saying Aut Cromwell aut Nihil—so come up Old Turnips. Puffs of smoke come from the animal's fundament inscribed Heigh-Ho.

Fox rides with a pair of open saddle-bags in front of him from which project a money-bag inscribed Lowis [sic] d'or, and documents: French Commiss[ion], Spanish Annuity, Settlement, P^r Ann[ui]ty. The bag is inscribed Enjoyments. A fleur-de-lys hangs from a ribbon on his waistcoat. His wide wrinkled boots are inscribed Spanish Leather. Behind him, resting on the hind-quarters of the horse, is a basket labelled Hopes & Expectations containing a head of the king wearing a laurel wreath supported on a pike; on the top of the head stands a Gallic cock, decorated with a fleur-de-lys and crowing Cock-a-doodle-doo; a crown thrust through with a sword; a torn document is inscribed Magna C[harta].

One of several satires in which Fox is compared to Cromwell, see Nos. 6217, 6290. See also No. 5979, &c., and No. 6271, &c. He is here supposed to be acting in the interests of France and Spain.

Grego, Gillray, p. 48, where it is dated 8 June.

9 × 13 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6240 THE COALITION GARLAND, OR THE STATE SWEEPS.Deling'd by Long headsExecuted by Broad bottomPub^d June 3. 1783 by W. Dent. N^o 116. Strand.

Engraving. North and Fox as chimney-sweeps, each holding a shovel and brush, caper in front of a pyramid on a circular base, inscribed Ways & Means. The pyramid is formed of three fish whose heads converge and are surmounted by a crown. Between the fishes' tails are loaves. The whole is decorated with sprays of roses. This 'Garland' appears to represent the 'Jack in the green', a pinnacle covered with green leaves round which sweeps danced in London streets on May Day, or perhaps the milk-maids' garland, a pyramid of silver plate, round which chimney-sweeps also danced. Here it symbolizes the loaves and fishes of office. Fox has an expression of cunning satisfaction; North looks expectantly towards him.

The drawing is crude. The two men are much caricatured and are heavily shaded to indicate their black condition. The Garland stands upon gently rising ground, and on this is written in an old hand 'Constitution hill'. See also Nos. 6195, 6223, 6248.

8 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

¹ The address of W. Humphrey.

6241 THE STATE WINDMILL.

Published 10 June 1783 by J. Wallis N^o 16. Ludgate Street.

Engraving (coloured impression). A windmill with four sails, two sinking to the l., one from an almost vertical, the other from an almost horizontal position, one being near the ground, the other in the air, the other two opposite these and rising to the r. The body of the mill, a small timber building, rests on a tripod of three beams springing from a low stone-built cylinder on a small mound. Politicians are climbing about the mill and others are inspecting it from the ground; they are identified by numbers referring to names engraved below the print. On the summit of the highest sail (which tilts downwards to the l.) sit (1) Lord N—h and (2) C. F—x (r.); they hold hands. North says, By G—d I am too heavy my dear friend Charley. Fox answers, Hush my gentle Boreas, stick fast & we'll support one another—The summer approaches and we shall have easy weather. (3), Mr B—ke hangs suspended in front of the sail holding on to a leg of North and a leg of Fox, saying My conscience bears me up; he wears a jesuit's biretta, as in No. 6205, &c. On the sail on the r., which is rising out of the horizontal, four men sit, gazing upwards. (4), Lord S—y [Surrey] holds up both arms, saying Here we go up! up! up! (5), Lord M—h—n [Mahon] says Up we go! his r. arm is across the shoulder of (6) Gov J—ne [Johnstone], who says Huzza for a fresh gale. Next him is (7) Lord K—p—l [Keppel] looking up. Commodore or Governor Johnstone, a supporter of Sandwich and Sir Hugh Palliser against Keppel (cf. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, ii. 68–70), seems out of place among these Foxites. Clinging to the end of the opposite sail (l.) is (8) The late C—r [Chancellor], Lord Thurlow, in judge's robes, his wig falling from his head, saying By G—d I can hold no longer What a d—m—d bluster this is. Beneath him, falling head downwards, is (9) Lord Sh—ne [Shelburne] saying, Lord what a fall. On the ground at his side is (10) T. T—s—d. Townshend, cr. Baron Sydney, 6 March 1782, for his defence of the Shelburne Ministry and the peace against the attacks of Fox and North. He is saying, What a sudden change. I'll pledge myself that by Christmas next we shall be up or down, a prophecy which was literally fulfilled by the dismissal of the Coalition and the formation of the Pitt Ministry on 22 Dec., with Sydney as one of the Secretaries of State. The next three figures are engaged in repairing (or demolishing) the foundations of the windmill. (11), Lord A—te (Dundas, the Lord Advocate of Scotland) stands in legal robes holding a saw across his shoulder, saying, It wants mending—but the foundation is good. (12), Mr S—d—n [Sheridan] stands at the foot of a ladder leading to the door of the mill, holding a beam, and saying to Pitt, Take care rash young man. (13), Mr P—tt stands on the ladder wielding an axe; he says, We must make a new Machine this is rotten & half the corn is devoured by lurking vermin.

On the opposite (r.) side of the base of the mill, four figures (unspecified) cling to the lowest sail, which is a mere ladder-like framework. Four men stand on the r. gazing up at Fox and North on the summit of the windmill. One, looking through a small telescope, says, These Stars have a black Aspect; his neighbour, waving a larger telescope, says, Past their Meridian Altitude. A man using a sextant says, Two degrees of North declination; his neighbour on the extreme l., looking through a single eye-glass, says, An Owl & a Magpie by Jasus.

At this time, though Fox had lost his popularity, the Ministry appeared firmly established, with an unshakable majority in the House of Commons. Cf. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 115 ff. Pitt's activities against the 'vermin' represent his motion for Parliamentary Reform, and his Bill for a reform of abuses in public offices, see Parl. Hist. xxiii. 827 ff. (7 May); pp. 945 ff. (2 June). For Sheridan and Pitt cf. No. 6212.

$9\frac{3}{8} \times 8\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6241A

A later state (uncoloured), having the same date and publication line with additions: rats run up the lowest sail of the mill. A bearded Jew sits on the mill holding in front of the mill holding a document inscribed Bond £10,000 Ch^s Fox to Moses Mordecai; he says, I must have my monies before Charles's Tax on Receipts. The receipt tax was announced in Lord John Cavendish's budget speech, 26 May, was petitioned against by the City of London, and was the subject of a debate in the House of Commons on 11 June, see Nos. 6243, 6244. North says after 'Charley', I wish I had some of my whip cord to keep me steady, showing that the date of the reissue is after 17 June, see No. 6254. Keppel says, This gale is nothing to the storm of the 27th of July, and no danger of a Lee Shore. Cf. No. 5992, &c.

6242 STATE PROSTITUTION

[J. Boyne.]

*London Publish'd as the Act Directs June 12 1783 by J. Boyne N^o 2
Shoe Lane Fleet S^t*

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Britannia, wearing her helmet, sits astride an animal with tail, legs, and mane of a lion, the head and ears of an ass, which symbolizes the British lion. In round panniers on each side of the animal sit Fox (l.) and North (r.) clasping hands across Britannia, who has an arm on a shoulder of each, looking towards Fox. Britannia, with her low-cut bodice, and skirts raised above the knee, has a meretricious appearance. Her shield and broken spear lie on the ground, under the feet of the British lion, who is partly transformed into an ass. The animal's large clumsy head is bent to the ground, and partly hidden by an enormous flowing mane which covers its neck and shoulders like a cloak. Beneath the title is engraved:

*Here let my Sorrow give my Satyr Place
To raise New Blushes on the British Race Dryden*

Similar in character to No. 6243.

$7\frac{1}{4} \times 6\frac{15}{16}$ in.

6243 THIS REPRESENTATION OF A PARLIMENT CUR WITH HIS DOG LIKE COMPARISION IS DEDICATED TO THE INSULTED MERCHANTS TRADERS & DEALERS OF GREAT BRITIAN [sic]

[J. Boyne.]

*London Publish'd as the Act Directs June 13 1783 by J. Boyne N^o 2
Shoe Lane Fleet S^t*

Engraving. A dog, with human arms, and wearing the coat of a naval officer, stands between a sheep (l.) and a wild boar appearing from the r., its body partly cut off by the margin of the print. Round the dog's neck is a collar inscribed I am a Govenor [sic], indicating that he is Governor (or Commodore) Johnstone, M.P. for Lostwithiel. In his r. hand is a long knife with which he cuts the throat of the perfectly placid sheep which lies on the ground. The knife is inscribed Five S[hillings] in the Poun[d]. In his l. hand he holds out to the boar a Tax on Receipts. The boar, round whose neck is a collar inscribed Comerce, advances snarling ferociously.

Beneath the title is a quotation from a speech by Johnstone which explains the print: Speaking of Taxation he said there were but two Objects the Commercial & the Landed Interests, the first of these he Compared to the Hog saying if you but touch his Bristles with your finger he'll grunt & begin to roar Whereas the other was like the Sheep you might Shear his Wool & even Cut his Throat & yet he'd make no resistance nor any Noise (vide Gov^r John—e on the Receipt Tax). See debate on the Receipt Tax, 11 June. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 997. Johnstone was quoting 'an old member of that house'.

The Receipt Tax (2d. on sums from £2 to £20, and 4d. on sums over £20) was very unpopular, and became a cry against Fox at the Westminster election of 1784. The sheep is placidly submitting to a land tax of 5s. in the £, the maximum rate being 4s. See Nos. 6241A, 6244. For the country gentlemen as sheep cf. No. 6287.

Similar in character to No. 6242.

$6\frac{13}{16} \times 7\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6244 TAX ON RECEIPTS

T. Colley Fec^t [?]

W. D. [Dent] Inv^t

Pub: June 14th 1783 by W. Dent. N^o 116 Strand

Engraving. Four men stand in a row protesting to Lord John Cavendish, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, against the tax on receipts. He turns away from them, holding in his hand a large document inscribed Tax on Receipts, to speak to a man wearing a court-suit, bag-wig, and sword who stands (r.) in profile to the l., saying Persevere my dear Lord, don't mind the Canaille—the Tax won't affect me. From his pocket hangs a paper, Memoirs of a fine Gentleman. He is perhaps intended for the Prince of Wales. Cavendish answers so Charly Says. Next Cavendish (l.) is a shoemaker, out-at-elbows, wearing a cap and apron, holding a last and a rope, his stockings ungartered and his shoe unbuckled. He says, My Lord it will throw Trade in Confusion. A stout alderman in a furred gown, the most prominent figure of the design, holds out both hands saying, Aye, and if this is allowed, Perhaps next year you'll stamp the whole Compting house apparatus—Tax receipts—Zounds! you might as well Tax Venison & Turtle. Next him is a butcher in his apron, his steel dangling from his waist, a knife at his side. In his hat is stuck a candle. He says, What if I make my Mark—I must pay for it. On the extreme r. is the well-known figure of Jeffery Dunstan, knock-kneed, with his ragged clothes, open shirt, and sack over his shoulder as in No. 5637. He says, I suppose, as how, you'll Tax complimentary Cards, by and by! The print is Humbly Dedicated to Sir Cecil Wray, Bar^t.

Wray, whose candidature for Westminster had been supported by Fox, but who opposed the Coalition Ministry, led the opposition to the Tax on Receipts. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 998, 1010. The tax is said to have been suggested by Sheridan; Sichel, Sheridan, ii. 36, an origin which invited satire. For the Receipt Tax see Nos. 6241A, 6243, 6260.

The profile head of Cavendish, a good portrait, is delicately drawn in a different manner from that of the rest of the design.

Perhaps by an imitator of Colley's manner, cf. No. 6233.

$8\frac{7}{8} \times 12\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6245 THE STATE VINTNERS.

Pub^d June 18th 1783 by W. Wells, N^o 132 Fleet Street London.

Engraving. The interior of a punch-house. In an alcove or bar (r.), behind a counter, stand North and Fox mixing punch. Over the alcove is inscribed Pro bono Publico | The Coalition Punch-house by Charles & Co. North (l.) holds a kettle in his r. hand, in his l. a ladle with which he mixes the contents of the bowl. He says, Gentlemen I can supply you with acid having had 6 or 7 years constant practice in making of it for 3 kingdoms & 13 provinces. Fox (r.), his r. hand resting on a wine-bottle, his l. outstretched, says Gentlemen tho' I have enlarged my connections I can still serve you with good Liquor & give you Good Words as usual & if that wont please you may go & be Dm—d. Each has an expression of anxiety mixed with defiance, anxiety the more prominent in North, defiance in Fox.

The guests sit on low benches in front of narrow tables, their backs to the punch-makers. Immediately in front of the bar sits a stout man in a bob-wig holding up his bowl and saying, Coalition Punch do you call it? Phow! tis nauseous as Salts or Jalap. Next him (r.) is a tall, thin military officer, wearing a cockaded hat and epaulettes and holding a tasselled cane. He holds a bowl in his l. hand, saying, Aye Friend they that drink it must take it down at a Gulph. Three men sit at a table on the l.: a roistering buck wearing the fashionable riding-dress of the day, a favour in his hat, stands up, legs astride, holding out a bowl in his r. hand, the contents spilling, he says, Right sort Charley Damme! Next him a man with a melancholy expression leans his elbows on the table, supporting his head in his hands and saying You may say poisonous indeed for it has throzn the whole Nation in a fermentation & by the addition of that cursed C^o he will loose all his good old Customers. Next him, and on the extreme l., a trim-looking citizen smoking a long pipe, his bowl on the table, says When Charles was on his own bottom, he sold wholesome tippel, but now C^o is added to his name we get a poisonous Compound.

One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6176-9, &c.

$7\frac{3}{8} \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ in.

[SIR CECIL WRAY IN THE PILLORY.]

Publish'd as the Act directs June 26th 1783 by H. Humphreys N^o 51 New Bond Street.

In spite of the date, this print, relating to the Westminster Election of 1784, cannot have been issued in 1783. Another impression is dated 7 May 1784, and it is so catalogued.

6246 THE CONSTITUTIONAL SOCIETY

W D. [Dent.]

Designed by CautionExecuted by FirmnessPub by W Dent N° 116 Strand, June 27. 1783

Engraving. Three prominent members of the 'Society for Constitutional Information' (often called the Constitutional Society) dining off roast beef at a circular table. Beneath the title is engraved:

*Dedicated to all great Corporations
Search SURREY, & all England over,
In each HOUSE Beef & Porter sure
Are TOWERS of strength, and best Tend,
The CONSTITUTION to defend.*

The persons of the satire are here indicated. Dr. Towers sits full-face, carving a sirloin of beef which is labelled Extract from John Bull. He wears a clerical wig and spectacles, a napkin is tucked into his coat. On his r. sits Lord Surrey, the 'Jockey of Norfolk', raising a piece of beef to his mouth on a fork. On Towers's l. sits Sam House, the Wardour Street publican, in his invariable dress: bald head, open shirt, breeches unfastened at the knee, see No. 5696, &c. He is eating beef with his knife. The knife blades of the three men are inscribed respectively Resolved (Towers); Nem Con (Surrey), and Amen (House). All three are stout, with 'great corporations'. Behind Sam House, a waiter enters walking in profile to the l. He is very thin, and, unlike the other three, fashionably dressed with curled wig and ruffled shirt. He carries on a salver a great foaming tankard inscribed S H Wardour Street, suggesting that the dinner is at Sam's public-house. He points at the table saying, How the poor Men do labour for the good of the CONSTITUTION.

On the wall which forms the background are two framed pictures. That on the l. is A Pastoral Dialogue: a fat parson resembling Towers sits by a round table smoking a long pipe. On the table is a steaming punch-bowl, two glasses, and papers inscribed Magna Chart[er] and Bill of Rights; a small thin man addresses him, hat in hand. On the r. is The Decoy, a man-of-war at sea, on her stern in large letters is LOWTHER. This is evidently an allusion to the offer in Sept. 1782 of Sir James Lowther (noted for his miserliness) to equip a 74-gun ship at his own expense for the war which he had opposed during North's Ministry. (See The Remembrancer, 1782, Part II, p. 258.) The peace (then in negotiation) made the offer otiose.

The Society for Constitutional Information was formed in 1780¹ chiefly through the exertions of Major Cartwright; its objects were parliamentary reform and annual parliaments. They printed and distributed gratis propaganda for reform, &c. Towers (1737-99) was a pamphleteer and presbyterian minister, and an active member of the Society which ordered extracts from his Vindication of the Political Principles of Mr Locke to be entered in their books in 1782. See Society for Constitutional Information. B.M.L., E. 2101/1. He was also 'a very convivial man'. G. B. Hill in Johnson Club Papers, 1899, p. 79.

¹ It is often confused with the earlier Constitutional Society which replaced the Society for supporting the Bill of Rights when the latter was dissolved owing to quarrels between Wilkes and Horne, see No. 4861, &c.

The satire seems to suggest that three republicans are devouring John Bull and attacking the Constitution, cf. No. 5979, &c.

$8\frac{3}{8} \times 13\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6247 THE QUINTUPLE ALLIANCE.

[1 July 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine, June 1783. The five partners in this 'alliance' are typical mountebanks, quacks, and persons of small repute. Astley, the famous equestrian, of Astley's Amphitheatre, stands on his head on the saddle of his horse, firing a pistol and saying I and my Horse levy Contributions upon Asses. Dr. Graham (l.), notorious for his Celestial Bed, holds a cylinder labelled Divine Balsam for the Ladies; it resembles his electrical appliances, see No. 6325. Behind him stands Jack Ketch, the hangman, holding up a rope and saying I am Doctor Ketch & this is a sovereign Remedy for a sore throat. Katerfelto (r.) faces Graham, saying Begar Me make de fine Puffs & de English swallow dem. He points to a black cat, which stands beside him, saying I am old Scratch. This is the black cat which usually sat on Katerfelto's shoulder and which he pretended to consult, see No. 6327.

Evidently a gibe at the Quintuple Alliance, one of the many political associations of the day, composed of the radicals of London, Westminster, Southwark, Middlesex, and Surrey, in the interests of parliamentary reform and annual parliaments. Cf. No. 6217.

$5\frac{1}{16} \times 3\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6248 THE TREASURY LADDERS, OR, POLITICAL GAPERS.

Pub^d by E. Rich July 5 [1]783 N^o 55 Fleet Street.

Engraving (coloured impression). A man wearing the order of the Garter, probably intended for Portland (who had no order, cf. No. 6251), stands with his arms folded within an open bow window, a yoke across his shoulders, from each end of which hang bunches of grapes. To this window two long ladders ascend, at the top of which stand Fox (l.) and North (r.), both grasping at the grapes. Below them on the ladders are others gaping for the spoils of the Treasury. Below Fox stands Sheridan, gaping for the excrement which falls from Fox, this process is repeated by each climber on the ladders. Fox says, Gape wide Sherry. Sheridan says, This is better than the School for Scandal. The man below Sheridan says, These are golden Drops. North says, I have still a Finger in the Pye. The man below him says, Shite away my Lord, my mouth is open, and the man below again says, I shall never have a Belly full.

At the bottom of the design the ladders are supported by groups of men (H.L.), who gape upwards for their share of the spoil. The ladders stand against a high brick wall, across which is engraved Treasury, every brick being indicated.

Beneath the design is etched:

*Some people may think this a comical Farce is,
To see them a gaping at each others A——s,
Tho' strange it may seem, its the trick of them all,
For one still to catch what another lets fall.*

*Such is the Oeconomy of our wise nation
Yet dunces will grumble about reformation;
The people may stare, but in spite of their wishes,
State Vultures will eat both the loaves and the fishes.*

See also Nos. 6195, 6223, 6240, 6251.

11 $\frac{11}{16}$ × 9 in.

6249 [BURKE]

WD. [Dent].

Pub. by W Dent July 11th 1783 N^o 116. Strand

Colley.

Engraving. Burke stands in profile to the r. dressed as a jesuit. He clasps to his breast a small female figure or doll, wearing a hat with a feather, perhaps intended to represent Little Red Riding Hood (see No. 6205); he is dressed as in that print. He is wearing spectacles and his wig appears beneath the biretta. His belt is inscribed Friendship, through it, in place of the cross, is a dagger on which are letters. This is attached to a rosary made of guineas.

Although Colley is engraved below the publication line, it is not in his manner, but in that of Dent.

8 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 6 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6250 JACK A' BOTH SIDES!

[Gillray.]

Pub^d July 11th 1783 by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand

Engraving. North balances himself on his l. toe on the centre of the beam of a pair of scales, his r. leg poised in the air. He stands so that the scale (r.) on which Fox is standing rests on the ground, while that on which Shelburne stands is in the air. His attitude suggests that he could, if he liked, weigh down the scales on Shelburne's side. Fox, enormously obese, stands looking upwards with a cunning and satisfied smile, saying Damn the Tories!!! Shelburne, with an expression of disgust, is stamping and clenching his fists; he says, Oh! Damn the Wigs! North is excreting against Shelburne a blast of smoke inscribed Anathema which swells into a cloud. From dark clouds in the upper l. corner of the design the king's head (back view) and r. arm appear. He holds over North's head an enormous wig which envelops his head and shoulders. A crown is poised above the king's head, and he is blindfolded by a tartan bandage indicating Scottish influence.

This seems to imply that the king had connived at the Coalition by converting North into a Whig in order to ruin Shelburne, an allegation with no support in common report or fact.

Grego, Gillray, pp. 48-9. Wright and Evans, No. 14.

13 × 9 in.

A coloured impression with Humphrey's publication line scored through but legible, and that of Fores added:

Pub Jan 1. 1794 by S. W. Fores N. 3 Piccadilly.

6251 THE GOLDEN-PIPPIN BOYS, ON THE BRANCHES OF STATE.

Pub^d by J. Barrow. July 24. 1783. White Lion Bull Stairs. Surry side Black Friars Bridge.

Engraving. A symmetrical apple-tree, on the branches of which sit or stand ministers of state gathering the apples. They are poorly characterized. Against the trunk stands a ladder, inscribed The Ladder by which the noble Lads ascend. Each rung has an inscription: Conceit, Lying, Swearing, Pretention, Assurance, Harangue, Flattery, Bribery, Interest, Money, Ambition, Title. The topmost and centre figure is that of the Duke of Portland, standing; he says, I hope there will be no Searching pockets when we come down. He wears (inaccurately) a Garter ribbon, cf. No. 6248. Below him sit Fox (l.) and North (r.). Fox says, They may call us what they please so they call us not—To Account. North says, I will serve my self, my friends, and my Country. Below these are Keppel (l.) and an unidentified minister (r.), perhaps Lord John Cavendish, Chancellor of the Exchequer. Keppel says, This is the best Yard-arm that I ever crost. The other says, I shall follow the old President—fill my Coffers. Of the two lowest apple-gatherers, one (l.) has a vague resemblance to Burke; he says, Apple stealing began at old Adam, and will only die with old Time. The other (r.) says, A few will never be missed.

In front of the tree is a circular railing within which stand two grenadiers holding bayoneted muskets, as in the sentry-boxes outside the Treasury.

Beneath the design is etched:

*Now, all you that stare
And grumble, and swear,
And wish that all Thieves had their whippings;
Come, don't be so mad,
Because a poor Lad,
Will pocket a few Golden Pippins.*

*No longer I blame,
Or wish to reclaim
The Statesman, because that he grapples;
For coul'd I ascend,
My self, and my Friend,
I'd serve, with the sweet, golden Apples.*

See also No. 6248, &c.

11 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 8 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6252 WAR ESTABLISHMENT.

T. Colley fecit [?].

Pub: by D. Archery Julyth [sic] 1783 S^t Jame's Street

Engraving. A pugilistic encounter between Lord Thurlow (l.) and Fox (r.), who face each other with clenched fists, stripped to the waist. Behind each stands a second wearing a bag-wig; that of Thurlow (l.) is a stout man wearing a laced coat and sword, with some resemblance to Rigby. Fox's second, probably Sheridan, holds out a lemon.

Thurlow, his judge's wig lying at his feet, says I'll have the Patent with the War fees, or break every bone in your Body. Fox says I hate Imposters.

A notice board on a post (r.) is inscribed The Grant of a Tellership. Beneath the title is engraved, Vide the Debate on Lord T—r—ws Grant of a Tellership.

This debate took place on 4 and 7 July, Parl. Hist. xxiii. 1061–95. A Bill was brought in to regulate the fees of Exchequer Officers, and especially to change the existing practice by which the Tellers of the Exchequer received annually something over £2,500 in peace time and nearly £8,000 in war. A proposal was thereupon made by Rigby to exempt Lord Thurlow from the operation of the Bill, on the ground that his promise of the reversion of a tellership had been first made in 1778 before the reform was thought of. This exemption was supported by North and opposed by Fox and others, notably Sheridan. See Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 529.

For the signature see No. 6233, &c.

8½ × 13½ in.

6253 EVE'S TOLL-GATE OR THE NEW THREE-PENNY TURN-PIKE. [1 Aug. 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine. A lady in bed (l.) hands a coin to an official with a book under his arm, while a spectacled doctor hurries away (r.) carrying an infant in his arms. The official holds a paper inscribed Rec^d Three Pence for admitting a Child into the World. J. Cavendish.

This is an allusion to the tax of 3d. on the registration of Births, Marriages, and Deaths introduced into the budget of 1783 by Lord John Cavendish, see Parl. Hist. xxiii. 935–6. See also No. 6256.

5½ × 3½ in.

SCRUB & ARCHER

Pub 1st Aug 1783, by W Humphrey, N^o 227 Strand.

A reissue of No. 6221.

6254 THE E. O. TABLE. [1 Aug. 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine. Seven players standing round an E.O. table. On the l. stand Fox and North, holding hands, both having secured the greater part of the money at stake. Fox, with a fox's head, holds a money-bag, saying, My Noble Friend this is Coalition money. North says, This is better then Dealing in Whipcord. The other figures are poorly characterized and cannot be identified. Behind Fox a man partly visible (? the Earl of Surrey) says I'll back you up Charley. A man with a melancholy expression looks at North, saying, Is it thus you Keep up your Corporation. A cheerful-looking man, with a money-bag and a pile of guineas (the only other player who has secured a share of the winnings), says, looking to two despairing players on the r., You should have gone North about. They say, I am Undone! I am Undone! and D—m E.O. and all the Vowels in the Alphabet. The last speaker resembles the Duke of Grafton.

Beneath the circular E.O. table crouches the Devil, saying I have play'd for you all & have won you all.

On 17 June, Pitt, in bringing forward his Bill for Reform of Abuses in Public Offices, instanced the waste of stationery in the Treasury under North, the bill for whipcord in 1781 being £340; see Parl. Hist. xxiii. 953; Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 458; see also Nos. 6241, 6257. For E.O. see No. 5928.

$5\frac{9}{16} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6255 THE OLD RAT OF THE CONSTITUTION ELOQUENCE.

W D. [Dent].

Pub^d Aug^t 6th 83 by W. Dent. Strand.

Engraving. W.L. portrait of Lord Nugent, in profile to the r. He bends forward, his l. hand on his breast, as if making a speech. He holds up his coat-tails, uncovering his posterior, from which a blast issues, inscribed my Son in Law. This was George Nugent Temple-Grenville, Earl Temple (1753–1818), cr. Marquess of Buckingham, 1784.

For Nugent see Nos. 6059, 6212, 6256. He had ‘all the garrulity of old age sustained by a sort of unblushing facility of utterance which might pass for a species of eloquence’. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 305.

$6\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6256 ALL ALIVE OR THE POLITICAL CHURCHYARD.

Pub according t Act by B. Pownall. N^o 6. Pallmall. Aug: 9. 1783.

Engraving. A church and churchyard, with the graves of politicians and others, whose heads look from behind their respective tombstones. The church is on the l. with a square tower (r.); on the r. are conventional trees. The three central tombstones in the foreground are those of Burke (l.), North (c.), and Fox (r.). On Burke’s is inscribed, Here Lieth Ed^d Burke Oeconomist Extraordinary to his Majesty. To Save his breath He welcom’d death. On North’s is Here Lieth L——d N——H. I’m gone to realms below, To find more Cause for woe. On that of Fox is Here Lieth C——s F——x, The game I have play’d, I have lost by a Spade, My partner was wrong For he shuffl’d to long. In the foreground on the extreme l. is a flat stone inscribed, Here Lieth G——l C——y [Conway] So fickle in his pliant mind He for a Change his life resign’d. In a corresponding position on the r. is a rectangular brick tomb, inscribed, Here Lieth his Grace the D——e of R——D [Richmond]. Since he on Earth no good coul’d find, He is at last to death resign’d. Slightly behind and to the l. of Burke’s tomb is that of the king: Here Lieth G. K——g. I govern’d all with —— decree But now alas; Death goverus me. Behind and to the r. of Fox’s tomb is that of a peer: Here Lieth L——d T——e. Behold him now laid the Grave in Who naughty man —— L——y C——N [Lady Craven]. He is perhaps intended for Lord Temple, the king’s agent in the rejection of Fox’s India Bill in Dec. 1783, cf. No. 6255.

The remaining tombs are described as they are placed, l. to r., some being in front and others behind. A rectangular upright tombstone is inscribed, Here Lieth C——s J——N [Charles Jenkinson] To your advice we ruin owe; Go then, and council fiends below. (See No. 6228.) More prominent is a rectangular brick tomb: Here Lieth L——d K—— [Keppel]. This Gallant Admiral is no more, Behold him Stranded on Death’s Lee Shore (cf. No. 5992, &c.). Behind Keppel’s tomb is that of General Elliott, cr. Lord Heathfield for his defence of Gibraltar: Here Lieth G——l E——T.

Who could bear Fire so well Cannot feel Pain in hell. To heav'n let him rise, Since he the Devil defies (see No. 6035, &c.). Next, and in the background is that of Lord John Cavendish, Chancellor of the Exchequer: Here Lieth L——d J. C——H. He woul'd have tax'd our breath Had it not been for death. An allusion to the tax on the registration of births, deaths, marriages, see No. 6253. Portland is next: Here Lieth His G——e the D——e of P——d. An easy man of keen command, He ruled a State At Second hand (cf. No. 6233, &c.). The tombstone of Shelburne is immediately behind that of the king: Here Lieth The E——l of S——N. I made my peace on Earth, And why in heav'n Should not I hope to be forgiv'n. Pitt's tomb is more elaborate, a rectangular stone tomb surmounted by a pyramid and surrounded by a railing: Here Lieth The Hon^{ble} W^m Pitt. Thou cov'rest Earth Unequall'd Worth. The grave of Governor Johnstone is next: Here Lieth G——r J——N. So fond of Snarling it is own'd, At Death he grin'd But never Groan'd. (He was a notorious duellist, cf. No. 5474.) Next and more prominent is the rectangular brick tomb of Sheridan: Here Lieth R. B. S——N. He had great merit But woul'd you know it Look not for Politicks in a Poet. Behind this, and inconspicuous, is Lord Nugent's tombstone: Here Lieth L——d N——T An old Rat (see No. 6255, &c.). Mansfield's tomb is more prominent: Here Lieth L——d M——D. Stop says the Judge, while I my Ballance fix, Death kick'd his Breech and Sent him o'er the Styx.

Behind are two stones commemorating Lord George Germain (Sackville) and Lord George Gordon. L——d G. G——N. Alas how came I here, For Death was all my fear (an allusion to his supposed cowardice at Minden). Here Lieth L——d G. G——N. For religion, Od rot him. The Devil has got him (see No. 5694, &c.). More prominent, and next to Mansfield, lies Dundas, the Lord Advocate of Scotland: Here lieth the L——d A——E. The cause of damnation he gain'd with such ease, He is gone to the Devil to ask for his fees (see No. 6169). Behind is a minute stone: Sir T—— R——d [Thomas Rumbold] His peculation has left no more. (Rumbold was, perhaps unjustly, regarded as a typical nabob of the worst kind, see No. 6169, &c.) Sir Cecil Wray's tomb is in the form of an obelisk: Here Lieth Sir Cecil W——y Honesty in him innate is, Then Let him pass; old Charon gratis. (He was enjoying a short-lived popularity for his opposition to the tax on receipts, see No. 6244, &c. Also, though M.P. for Westminster as Fox's nominee, he had not supported the Coalition.) The last tombstone on the extreme r. is that of Lord Loughborough, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas: Here Lieth L——d L——H. Tir'd of hanging he was grown, Till Death in Pity cut him Down. Inscriptions on the wall of the church commemorate three more notables, the first (l.) being David Hartley (son of the more famous David Hartley), M.P. for Hull, and at this time the emissary of Fox for peace negotiations with America): Underneath Lieth D——d H——y Esq' A man that all coul'd calculate Except the Sands which told his fate. Next is Sir Charles Turner: Below Lieth S——r C——S T——R An honest Man. (Turner, M.P. for the City of York, see No. 6073, was classed with Sir George Savile, as pre-eminent for 'independence of character and zeal for public liberty'. Oldfield, Representative History of Great Britain, 1816, v. 279.) Savile's inscription is beside that of Turner: Nigh this place Lieth S——r G—— S——E. Such humorous Satire mark'd his Fame, He made the Culprit smile in Shame. (Both were supporters of the Yorkshire movement for Parliamentary Reform, see No. 5657, &c.)

No. 6263 is a companion print; both perhaps imitate Sir Herbert Croft's very popular Abbey of Kilkhampton, 1780, &c., a collection of satirical epitaphs.

$8\frac{15}{16} \times 13\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6257 THE COALITION DISSECTED.

W D. [Dent].

Pub^d by W. Dent N^o 116 Strand Aug^t 12th 1783.

Re-pub^d by J. Cattermoul N^o 376 Oxford Street Dec^r 15th

Engraving. A W.L. figure divided vertically, half (l.) representing North, the other half Fox.

The head appears to be copied from Sayers's Mask, see No. 6234, reversed. The figure is nude except for a pair of short breeches, and the organs of the body from the neck to the waist are exposed. Common to both is the inscription, Pro privato lucro across the forehead, and the protruding tongue inscribed Truth in reversed or looking-glass characters. North's hand holds a bag inscribed Whipcord (see No. 6254, &c.). On his arm, as if tattooed, are guineas and the word Finance. On Fox's arm are a dice-box and two dice inscribed Industry. Fox's hand, inscribed Goodwill, pulls at a cord labelled Anodyne Necklace; this comes from the lungs of the body, which are inscribed Oratorical (r.), Lungs (l.). The Anodyne Necklace was a much advertised object supposed to prevent the convulsions and teething disorders of infants (cf. Johnson, Idler, No. 40). North's ribs are inscribed respectively Place, Pension, Sinecure, Contract, Loan, Title, &c. &c. Those of Fox are 13 Stripes in allusion to his attitude to the American war, cf. Nos. 6207, 6229. Each side has a heart inscribed Union, and other organs inscribed Touch-Wood, Love, Honesty. The central artery common to both is Self-interest, branches from this deviate into the respective breeches-pockets of the monster. On both sides of these are inscribed East India Bill and P—— of W——'s Establishment. The pockets into which these conduits debouch are full of guineas and are inscribed Pickings.

The debate on the Prince of Wales's establishment took place on 23, 25, and 26 June, when it appeared that Fox was in favour of a grant of £100,000 a year to the Prince by parliament; the king, with the approval of Lord John Cavendish, having proposed to allow the prince £50,000 a year from the Civil List, a disagreement which shook the Ministry. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 1030 ff. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 108 ff., see Nos. 6258, 6259. Fox's India Bill was not brought in until 11 November, so that the inscriptions relating to India must have been added for the reissue in December. A globe, in place of the stomach, common to both partners, is inscribed Indostan, and (below) Great (in reversed or looking-glass characters) Britain, to indicate (as in the case of the tongue inscribed Truth), that Britain was the reverse of Great.

The sides of North and Fox which partly cover the exposed ribs are inscribed Green Fat. North's foot, inscribed Affection, tramples on a fox which is excreting. Across his leg (l.) is written Hypocrisy, across that of Fox (r.), Prostitution. See also No. 6213, &c. For the India Bill see No. 6271, &c.

$13 \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ in. (clipped).

6258 THE ROYAL MIDSHIPMAN OR PRINCE WM HENRY'S
LEVEE. [1 Sept. 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine. Prince William in naval uniform, wearing his Garter ribbon, stands (l.) on a dais under a canopy, addressing a group of sailors. He says, Had I £60,000, my Boys you should have it all (an allusion to the sum of £60,000 given to the Prince of Wales on coming of age (Aug. 1783) for forming an establishment, in addition to his allowance of £50,000 a year, see Nos. 6257, 6259. The foremost sailor says, I should like to be Archbishop of Canterbury, tis a d—nd good See. A sailor with one wooden leg says, Make me Master of the Ceremonies. A third says, Suppose as how you give us the Great Seal among three of us. A fourth, arm-in-arm with a meretricious-looking woman, says I wish your Worship would make my Moll a maid of Honour. A sailor with crutches seated on the ground says, I should like a Birth at the Exchequer da—me.

Prince William's service as a midshipman during the war had made him very popular, see No. 5677.

$5\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6259 THE NEW VIS-A-VIS, OR FLORIZEL DRIVING PERDITA.
[1 Sept. 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine, Aug. 1783. The Prince of Wales drives (l. to r.) a coach drawn by a pair of goats. Inside sits Mrs. Robinson (Perdita) with three ostrich feathers in her hair. She looks from the window, and stretches out her hand towards a man standing at the back of the coach in the footman's place, who is handing to her a paper inscribed Grant of £60,000. He is her husband; a paper, probably a bill or cheque, protrudes from his coat-pocket. On the roof of the coach Lord North lies on his back asleep, his arms folded; his head rests on a pillow inscribed Royal favor. On Perdita's lap is a man's three-cornered hat.

This is an allusion to the grant of £60,000 to the Prince of Wales for forming an establishment on coming of age (Aug. 1783), which was given to him in addition to £50,000 a year and the revenues (c. £13,000) of the Duchy of Cornwall. Mrs. Robinson was in the habit of driving about London 'in an absurd chariot with a device of a basket likely to be taken for a coronet, driven by the favoured of the day, with her husband and candidates for her favour as outriders'. L. Hawkins, Memoirs, ii. 24. The liaison with the Prince of Wales had been broken off for some time. See No. 5767, &c., and for the Prince's establishment Nos. 6257, 6258. For Perdita and Lord North see No. 6266. For the vis-à-vis cf. No. 5373.

$3\frac{3}{16} \times 5\frac{15}{16}$ in.

6260 DUTY ON DISCHARGES, OR A COMPANION TO THE RECEIPT TAX.

WD. [Dent.]

Pub^d by W. Dent N^o 116 Strand Sep^r 2^d 1783.

Engraving. A row of four latrines, in each of which a person is seated. Through a door (l.) Lord John Cavendish is entering followed by North (l.) and Fox (r.). Cavendish, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, is writing on a large scroll held in his hand, Resources, Breathing, Eating, Drinking, Shit—North says, Set it down Johnny, it will be very productive. Fox says, Aye, Productive & salutary, for it will strike at the very bottom of luxury.

The first seated figure (1.) is that of a fat alderman in a furred gown. He is saying If the Great Houses should stamp the little houses it will fall heavy on me, for my maw is always craving and must have its fill. A letter at his feet is addressed to W. Leatherhead Esq^r Aldⁿ of F— ward. He is evidently Alderman Kitchin, of Farringdon Within, apparently a noted guzzler, see No. 6314. The next figure is a man wearing spectacles and a parson's gown and bands. In his hand is a newspaper, the Morning Chronicle, with the word Taxes in large characters. He is saying The Constitutional Society shall know of this and they will — publish some Resolves. At his feet is an open volume, British Biography. He is Dr. Towers, see No. 6246. Next him is a stout man, evidently intended either for one of the noted quacks of the day, or for a doctor whom the artist designed to pillory. Above his head is a placard, Quacks annihilated. Grand Restorer of human nature. He is saying If this is the Case who'll take my bolus, pill, potion, lotion — we may now throw Physic to the dogs indeed.

The last figure is a woman, a notorious brothel-keeper. She is saying Good heaven help me! or next the fl—c—ng Collution will stamp my dear, sweet, pretty, little Girls — playthings. — spare them Charley, for Perdita's sake. In her hand is an open book, Rambler's Mag. . . . Taxes, while she is befouling the Christian Mag^e. At her feet is a paper inscribed Mother Windsor King's place, notorious for its houses of ill-fame. Above the two central latrines is a scroll inscribed Water — Closets.

Beneath the title is etched:

*From Stamps, so sharp, and so strange, there's no stealth,
They touch if you die, or Physic for health;
The Coalition strange, our mettle to damp.
Likewise bid Johnny birth and marriage to stamp,
And, stranger still, our Commerce for to vamp,
They wisely Receipts confound with a stamp;
To prove they all others at stamping surpass,
Perhaps, they'll next order a stamp for the A—.*

Lord John Cavendish in his budget speech (25 May) proposed to increase the stamp duties and to tax 'quack medicines', i.e. those sold by persons who were not 'bred to the profession of doctors, &c.' Parl. Hist. xxiii. 935. For the tax on the registration of births see No. 6253, and for the Receipt Tax Nos. 6241A, 6243, 6244.

$7\frac{1}{8} \times 13\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6261 THE STATE GOOSE-CATCHER, OR A ST JAMES'S MARKET-MAN.

Pub^d by J. Barrow Sep^r 11. 1783. White Lion, Bull Stairs, Surry Side Black Friars Bridge.

Engraving. Fox, with a fox's head, riding in profile from r. to l. He holds a goose by the neck over his l. shoulder; another goose is tied by its feet to the horse's neck, the heads and necks of seven other geese project from two pair of saddle-bags. He is saying I have Burgoynd the Geese at last by coming North about. The horse says I blush for my Master because he cannot blush for himself. Beneath the design is engraved:

*Ye politic Wolves, that watch for the Fleece,
And sophistic Foxes, that long for the Geese,
When bluster, and storm, and harangue is all vain,
Turn, like F—x your brave leader, and then you'll obtain.*

The geese represent, as in No. 5843, &c., the electors of Westminster (or other persons deluded by Fox), whom Fox has 'Burgoynded' or (as at Saratoga) surrendered to the enemy, by joining North. One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6176-9.

$9\frac{1}{4} \times 8\frac{11}{16}$ in.

6262 THE SAILOR'S RETURN, OR BRITISH VALOR REWARDED.

S.B.

Pub^d by W. Dent Sep^t 20th 1783 N^o 116 Strand.

Engraving. Two maimed sailors support themselves on crutches on the irregular cobble-stones of a London street. One (l.), full-face, holds his hat in his l. hand as if begging, a crutch under his arm; his l. leg has been amputated, his r. arm, which is without a hand, is raised towards his face; his r. eye is bandaged. The other (r.), in back view, has lost his r. leg, and supports himself on two crutches. Beneath the title is etched:

*"Some, for hard Masters, broken under Arms,"
"In battle lopt away, with half their Limbs"
"Beg bitter bread, thro' realms their Valor sav'd"— Young's Night Thoughts.*

$7\frac{1}{4} \times 8\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6263 THE LADIES CHURCH YARD

Publish'd 22 Sept^r 1783 by B. Pownall N^o 6 Pall Mall

Engraving. A companion print to No. 6256. The scene is reversed, the church being on the r., the trees on the l. From behind the tombstones appear the busts of women. The central grave in the foreground, however, is that of the Prince of Wales, a rectangular tomb, surmounted by a truncated pyramid, above which appear the head and shoulders of the Prince. He appears perhaps in response to Perdita's appeal (see below). The tomb is ornamented at the corners with ostrich plumes. Here lies The P——s^e [sic] of W——s. How happy cou'd I be with Either Were the other Dear Charmer away But while you both Tease me together The Devil a word Will I say Tal de Ral.

On each side of this is a flat tomb: on the l.: Here lieth L——Y M—B—E [Melbourne]. Tho on my back Death Has me laid I might remain For him A Maid. On the r. Here lies the D——s of D——RE [Duchess of Devonshire] Cease Kissing Death You stop my Breath. For the prince's attachment to Lady Melbourne and the Duchess of Devonshire see Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, v. 370-2, and cf. No. 6115. The other tombs in the front row are (l. to r.): Here lies L——Y G——R [Grosvenor] A lover ne'er I Thought to lack While I so long lay on my Back (see No. 4844, &c.). The Queen has a rectangular tomb with a superstructure: Here lies Her M——y Virtue on earth No more is seen For here she lies With Britains Queen; Here lies the D—ss of R—d [Rutland] Tho beauteous she Was forced to Yield Death shook his Dart & won y^e field.

The other (less prominent) tombs (l. to r.) are: Catharine II: Here lies the E—R—S of R—A. How could you death This Empress slay For her one life she would a Million Pay; Marie Antoinette: Here lies y^e Q—N o F—CE Death has placed her on her Rump To play her cards Till the last Trump. Behind, Here lies Miss V—N [Vernon] I did not like the P—E of Ws for fops like him Might oft tel Tales. For the three Miss Vernons, daughters of Richard Vernon, the second husband of the Countess of Upper Ossory, half-sisters of Lady Shelburne, see Walpole's poem The Three Vernons, Works, 1798, iv. 388. Next is the Duchess of Cumberland (Anne née Luttrell), D—s of C—L—D Fair Lady you deserve rebuke Who could for Death desert a Duke. Next, H [sic] Lies M^{rs} S—H—N [Sheridan] To Heav'n would you find a path Go follow this Fair Maid of Bath (an allusion to Foote's play on Miss Linley). Behind is, Death like the Scandalous of Tongue You neither Spare The old nor Young, Miss Y—g [Young]. Next is the tomb of an old woman, Here Lieth L—y F—h Her loss why should another Weep Who doz'd Before now's fast Asleep. Here lies D—s of G—R [Gloucester, Maria Walpole] If charms and Virtue could life Save She neer had been within the Grave. Next, and immediately behind the Prince of Wales, is M^{rs} M—N So cold a Lover neer was known Death lies upon Me like a Stone. She is of meretricious appearance, and is probably Mrs. Mahon, see Nos. 5868, 5948, who did her best to attract the Prince of Wales. Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, pp. 279–81. Next is Mrs. Siddons with a rectangular brick tomb: Here lies M^{rs} S—D—NS Her fate weep not Whom her survive For in our mem'ry She's alive. Behind, with a pyramidal tomb, is the Queen of Spain, Q—n of S—N I die resigned in spite of Foes Since I have Scratched Britannias Nose. Next is the Princess Royal: Here lieth The P—ss R—L. Here lies the Mildest of y^e fair She was too good for Heaven to spare. Next is Perdita: Here lies M^{rs} R—N [Robinson] If with thee You'd have me dwell Go Death & Bring me Florizel (see No. 5767, &c.). Behind her is the tomb of Miss Farren, Here lies Miss F—n O Death from you This ought to far be [sic] To take poor Joan Without her Derby (see No. 5901). On the extreme r. is Lady Archer: L—y A—R Beneath lies the blooming Archer Q—sb—y D—e [Queensbury Duke] Neer Seem'd more starker (see No. 5879). On the church wall is inscribed Below lieth L—y W—s—y [Worsley] I ne'er before was sick of love I prithee Death a little move; see No. 6105, &c.

$8\frac{3}{16} \times 13\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6264 MR F—X MOVING ALL HIS PLATE & FURNITURE FROM ST JAMES'S PLACE TO WIMBLEDON. [1 Oct. 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine. A procession of domestic servants walking (r. to l.) carrying a very small quantity of household goods, indicative of Fox's poverty. Two porters (l.) carry between them a small stretcher on which are dice, playing-cards, a book, Hoyle [on whist], a small box of Title Deeds, a candlestick, small jug, and two salt-cellar. A maid-servant with a broom walks beside it. They are followed by a man carrying a bundle and a pair of tongs, a maid-servant with a mop and pail, a man with a bundle, gridiron, and pair of bellows.

At this time Parliament was not sitting and there was no reason to anticipate the speedy fall of the Coalition Ministry, which seems to be here foreshadowed.

A sale and removal of Fox's furniture by bailiffs in 1781 is described by Selwyn, Hist. MSS. Comm., Carlisle MSS., 1897, pp. 488-9, and another in 1784 by Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iv. 71.

$3\frac{7}{16} \times 5\frac{13}{16}$ in.

6265 PROTEUS YE ^{2D} IN SEVERAL AMONG HIS MANY PUBLICK CHARACTERS.

Pub^d as the Act directs (Oct^r 9) 178(3) by B Pownall N^o 6. Pall Mall.¹

Engraving. Fox in a number of contrasted situations. In the upper l. corner he is declaiming from the hustings. His supporters appear below waving their hats; among these Sam House is conspicuous. A flag is inscribed A Man of the People. A lady on horseback in profile to the r. is among the crowd, her horse inscribed Chatsworth, to show that she is the Duchess of Devonshire. Fox is saying, Gent^s & Ladies I will never Consent to any additional Taxes I will support the Majesty of the people.

Beneath is the contrasting picture: Fox and Lord John Cavendish drinking wine together, seated much at their ease, one on each side of a round table. Fox, in profile to the l., says, Tax away L^d C—h let the plebeians pay the piper I say. Behind Cavendish (l.) is inscribed, Intended Taxes by F. N. C. [Fox, North, Cavendish] & Co On Sense—On Speech—On all Victuals &c. &c. &c. &c.

In the upper r. quarter of the print are two full-length figures of Fox declaring: one (l.), says, Distraction what make peace when the Kingdom is so Flourishing; the other says, Make peace on any Terms The Kingdom is ruin'd.

Below are two other representations of Fox. In one (r.) he says, I pledge my honor I will never act in conjunction with the man That has ruin'd his Country. In the other, Fox and North stand facing one another, Fox saying My dear Lord 'am your Sincere Friend.

One of several satires which anticipate The Beauties of Fox, North, and Burke, 1784. Cf. also Nos. 6187, 6188, 6192, 6207.

8 × 14 in.

6266 FLORIZEL AND PERDITA

Pub^d as the act directs (Oct^r 16) 178(3)² by B. Pownall N^o 6 Pall Mall

Engraving. A bust portrait divided vertically by a line down the centre of the face, one half (l.) representing the Prince of Wales, the other Mrs. Robinson, or Perdita. The Prince wears the ribbon and star of the Garter; half of his pleated shirt-frill is visible. Perdita's softly curled hair, with ringlets falling on her shoulder, is framed by a light hood with a curious jagged edge. She also wears a shirt-frill, it surrounds her breast, which is bare. In the lower l. corner of the print is a small profile head of the king looking towards the prince with a melancholy expression; he says, Oh! My Son My Son. On his head is the front half of a crown. Above are the Prince of Wales's feathers with his motto Ich Dien. On the r., by Perdita's shoulder, is the head of her husband, with branching stag's horns and animal's ears; King of Cuckolds and R—N—S—N being engraved beneath. The horns support a shelf on which stand the busts of three men believed to be lovers of Perdita: Colonel Tarleton (r.) in the plumed helmet which had been popularized by Reynolds's portrait, see No. 6116; Fox (c.), see No. 6117, &c., and Lord North (l.) who looks at her through a single eye-glass, see No. 6259. For the attitude of the king to his son and Fox see Walpole, Last Journals, 1910, ii. 496, and Nos. 6231, 6237. For 'Florizel and Perdita' see No. 5767, &c.

¹ The figures in brackets have been inserted in ink in a contemporary hand, a space having been left in the publication line.

² The parts of the date in brackets have been added in ink in a space left by the engraver.

$7 \times 9\frac{3}{16}$ in.

6267 PROCLAMATION OF PEACE

Pub^d Oct^r 21st 1783, by W. Wells, N^o 132, Fleet Street.

Engraving. Peace, blowing a trumpet, and holding an olive-branch, flies above the heads of five standing figures representing the ex-belligerents; attached to her trumpet is a banner inscribed, Peace proclaimed Oct^r 6th 1783. America, on the extreme l., is a man, nude, except for a pair of striped breeches, his head decorated by a tuft of three feathers. He capers, waving a tomahawk in his l. hand, and holding in his r. the staff of liberty surmounted by a Phrygian cap; from the staff floats the striped American flag; a short length of chain lies at his feet. He says, I have got my Liberty and the Devil Scalp you all. France, next him, turns towards Spain, whose l. hand he holds, saying, Vat for do you mind dat now Diego, here be ver good man, will let you have de nice Tobacco to make you amends (cf. No. 5859); he points to America with his r. hand. He is dressed as a French petit-maitre and has a long pigtail queue. Spain, in cloak, slashed doublet, and feathered hat, looks away from France towards John Bull or England; he says, with his r. hand on his breast, Ah me Signior! your Balls dat be all fire make me Shiver & cry for peace, see No. 6035, &c. England is a burly sailor, wearing short wide trousers, holding a club in his r. hand. He turns away from Spain towards Holland, whom he holds by the neckcloth, saying, Damme but you shall make peace Myneer, or never know the taste of Spice again. Holland, a stout plainly dressed burgher wearing baggy breeches, clasps his hands in distress, saying, Vat Rob me & cut my troat too Myneer English!

Beneath the design is inscribed:

*Peace! Peace! says Monsieur, before Hood again calls;
Spain Welcomes the sound, dreading Eliotts hot Balls;
Return but my Gelt, Holland roars out in fear,
I too will make peace; Indeed! will you Myneer!
Aye Sink me you shall, and for you Miss revolt
The time may yet come, to repent of your fault.*

Peace was signed on 2 and 3 Sept., and was formally proclaimed in London on 6 Oct., see Nos. 6336, 6351. Peace was not formally made with Holland till 1784, see No. 6292. The preliminary peace-terms which had been so much abused and the occasion of the coalition against Shelburne, see No. 6172, &c., were substantially those accepted by the Coalition Ministry, and were not unpopular. See Fitzmaurice, Life of Shelburne, 1912, ii. 268, cf. Nos. 6268, 6274. Contrast with this print No. 6291.

$11\frac{1}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6268 THE BRITISH TAR'S TRIUMPH.

Published Oct^r 22^d 1783 by W. Richardson 174 near Surry Street, Strand.

Engraving. Figures representing the four European ex-belligerent nations. A Jack Tar (c.) rides on the shoulders of Holland, a Dutch burgher; Spain (l.) and France (r.) shout recriminations at one another. Jack England, as he is called in similar prints, wears wide striped trousers, from one leg of which protrudes a wooden leg; he flourishes like a whip a long stiff pig-tail queue cut from the head of France, and with his l. hand holds Holland by the nose, saying Didn't you Splinter my Leg, between ye, you Bouger. Holland is a clumsy figure in baggy breeches and steeple-crowned hat, a tobacco-pipe thrust in his hat, another protruding from his breeches pocket; he supports Jack submissively, holding his legs. Spain, running towards the l., with a face of terror, looks over his l. shoulder towards France, holding out a purse and a long sword, saying By St Jago I'll give up my Tolido & Run away. France (r.), in profile to the l., holds out his r. hand towards Jack England, in his l. is part of a broken sword; he says Begar he has taken away de best part of mine Head, wich is mine Tail. France and Spain are dressed in the conventional manner of English caricature, both wear high boots.

Beneath the design is engraved:

*The English Tar Triumphant Rides Mynheer.
And Bangs him with the Tail of Cropt Monsieur.
The Dutchman, does but gloomy looks Afford
While the Affrighted Spaniard gives his Sword.*

*Such were the Scenes, when Britain's Navy Hurl'd
Her dreaded Vengeance o'er the astonish'd World.
That glory fix'd the rage of War must Cease
And rougher Arts, give way to gentle Peace.*

See Nos. 6267, 6274.

$5\frac{13}{16} \times 8\frac{15}{16}$ in.

6269 A CURIOUS COLLECTION OF WILD BEASTS.

[1 Nov. 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine. On a platform over which is inscribed Bartholomew Fair, are politicians in the guise of performing animals. Fox, a fox with a human face, standing on his hind-legs, leads by a chain a performing bear, with the head of Lord North (l.). On a cushion (r.) sits on its haunches a lion with the head of George III. Beside him squats a monkey, with a head intended to be that of Burke, who clips the nails of the paw which the lion meekly extends. Burke sits on two steps inscribed Prerogative and Reform of the Household. Beneath the platform appear the heads of six spectators.

One of many satires on the Coalition Ministry, see Nos. 6176-9, &c., the allusions here being to its designs on the Prerogative, cf. No. 6239, &c., and to Burke's Bill of Economical Reform carried during the Rockingham Ministry.

$3\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6270 THE PROTECTOR OF FREEDOM OF ELECTION.

Liberty Pinx^tIndependance Sculp.Freedom excu^tLondon Nov. 11. 1783 Publish'd as the Act directs Engraving. A candidate stands in the foreground, his r. hand extended, l. in his breeches pocket. Two groups of electors stand in the middle distance; those on the r. are a compact body, the three foremost of whom stand with linked arms, hats are thrown up with the shout Galway for ever. The group on the l. consists of three figures only standing by a sign-post which points To Helmsley. The names of the persons are written on the print in pencil. The candidate is 'Lord Galway', i.e. Robert Monckton Arundel, 5th Viscount Galway (1752-1810), M.P. for Pontefract 1780-3, elected for York 1783 on the death of Sir Charles Turner. This evidently represents the by-election at York city caused by the death of Sir Charles Turner on 26 Oct. 1783.

The group on the l. consists of a man holding up his arms exclaiming Oh! Oh! I shall be reduced to Whalebone; on the ground at his feet is a pair of stays; he is identified as 'Kitson, Stay Maker'. Next him is a man of plebeian appearance, a yard measure round his neck, 'W^m Siddal Esq^r L^d Mayor & Taylor'; he says to the third of the group, You have not paid for your freedom. This man, 'M^r Duncombe', answers, make me your member then. (Henry Duncombe had been elected M.P. for Yorkshire in 1780.) The three figures with linked arms who are leading a procession of Lord Galway's supporters, are 'M^r Martin Frobisher Stationer', '— Coupland, Cutler', and 'Richard Garland, Butter factor'. They are evidently all freemen of York. In the background (r.) are buildings, including a Gothic church and part of the cathedral.

York was noted for independence in the exercise of its electoral rights, the electors being the freemen of the city. Oldfield, Representative History, v. 272.

5 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 6 in.

6271 A TRANSFER OF EAST INDIA STOCK.

J.S.f. [Sayers.]Published 25th Nov^r 1783 by Thomas Cornell Bruton Street

Engraving. Fox carries on his shoulders the East India House and runs with it towards an arched gateway on the r. surmounted by a crown, and resembling the gateway to St. James's Palace. He looks round to the l. with a complacent smile; from his coat-pocket protrudes a paper, New Arrange-ment Seven Emperors Eight Governors 8000 Deputy G[overnors] 10000 Collec[tors] of the Revenue. Under his l. foot is a List of Directors, under the r. a paper inscribed Resolved That the Influence of the Crown has increased its incre[asing] ough[t to be] dim[inished]. Papers flutter from the India House to the ground inscribed [Ea]st India Stock 115, India Bonds 54 to 55.

On 18 Nov. Fox moved for leave to bring in two East India Bills, one for vesting the affairs of the Company in seven Commissioners, brought in 20 Nov., the other for the better government of the territorial possessions of the Company, brought in on 26 Nov. This satire, though less effective than the more famous Carlo Khan, see No. 6276, is a brilliant summary of the attacks on the Bill (of 20 Nov.): its transference of patronage and the sovereignty of India from the Crown and the Company to Fox and the Coalition; its attack on chartered rights and depreciation of India stock. See Parl. Hist. xxiii. 1210 (18 Nov.), 1223 ff. (20 Nov.), 1255 ff. (27 Nov.), 1306 ff. (1 Dec.). Wraxall writes of this print and Carlo Khan, 'it is difficult to conceive the moral operation and wide diffusion of these caricatures through every part of the country'. Memoirs, 1884, iii. 254. This print was referred to in an attack on the Bill by Sir Richard Hill on 27 Nov. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 1289. Fox had already been traduced as Cromwell, see No. 6239, &c. For the Bills see also Nos. 6257, 6275-83, 6285, 6286, 6287, 6289, 6290. For Dunning's famous resolution on the influence of the Crown see No. 5659.

11 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 8 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6272 THE IRISH PATRIOTS.

[Gillray.]

Published according to Act of Parliament, Nov. 25, by M. Smith; and sold at N^o 46, in Fleet Street. Price one Shilling Engraving. A scene in the Irish House of Commons, Grattan and Flood, caricatured, exchanging abuse during the debate of 28 Oct. 1783. In the foreground stands Grattan (l.), in profile to the r., holding out his hat, his r. fist clenched, scowling at Flood. Flood (r.), his l. hand resting on a cane, his r. in his breeches pocket, looks over his r. shoulder at Grattan with an expression of angry contempt. In the background is the rotunda of the Irish House of Commons, with the Speaker sitting at the head of the table, members seated and standing on each side. On the r. is a crowded gallery filled with spectators among whom ladies are conspicuous; these figures are freely drawn on a minute scale. Below and in front of the gallery seated and standing members or spectators watch the antagonists. Beneath the title extracts from the debate are printed in two columns:

G—N.

Sir, your talents are not so great as your Life is infamous.—You might be seen hovering about the Dome, like an ill-omened Bird of Night, with sepulchral Notes, a cadaverous Aspect, and broken Beak, ready to stoop and pounce upon your Prey.—The People cannot trust you; the Ministry cannot trust you: You deal with the most impartial Treachery to both.—I therefore tell you, in the face of your Country, before all the World;—nay, to your Beard, you are not an honest Man!

F—D.

I have heard a very extraordinary Harangue indeed; and I challenge any Man to say that any Thing, half so unwarrantable, was ever uttered in this House.—'The Right Honourable Gentleman set out with declaring, he did not wish to use Personality; and no sooner has he opened his Mouth, than forth issues all the venom that Ingenuity and disappointed Vanity, for Two Years brooding over Corruption have produced; BUT IT CANNOT TAINT MY PUBLIC CHARACTER!'—As for me, I took as great a part with the first Office of the State at my Back, as ever the Right Honourable Gentleman did, with Mendicency behind him.

For this famous quarrel see Ireland, Parliamentary Register, ii. 35 ff., and D.N.B. (Flood). A duel was only prevented by the arrest of both on the way to an encounter, when they were bound over to keep the peace. The quotations here given are abridged from the debate of 28 Oct. 1783, on Sir H. Cavendish's motion for retrenchment of public expenses, which was printed in the London newspapers, e.g. Lond. Chronicle, 6-8 Nov.

Grego, Gillray, p. 49.

$8\frac{3}{4} \times 11$ in.

6273 A WADDLEING PROCESSION FROM THE STOCK EXCHANGE, OR THE BULLS AND BEARS MAKING LONG FACES.

[1 Dec. 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine. A procession of four ducks with human heads, wearing hats, walk (r. to l.), followed (r.) by a bull and a bear, also with human faces, and holding handkerchiefs to their eyes. The heads of four persons, with melancholy expressions, much caricatured, appear at a window. The two foremost 'lame ducks' (a term for defaulters on the Stock Exchange, see No. 5835) have Jewish beards; the first says, Me no pay 70,000 Guinea ven de Law vill not oblige Me; the next says You be wise Man a second Solomon. The third duck, who wears a wide-brimmed hat, says, The Spirit moveth Me to depart hence. The fourth, who wears clerical bands, says, They must be Saved by Faith alone.

On the approach of peace there had been much speculating in the Stocks in anticipation of a rise which did not occur. The first lame duck is Nathan Solomon, a great Jew broker who, according to the London Chronicle (26 Sept.), sent on the 25th Sept. 'a letter to the Stock Exchange declaring himself a Lame Duck; and that his intention was never more to return to that house. He complains of a confederacy formed against him by the Brokers; and that he therefore thought it his duty to take care of himself. It is said, he had bought near one million of Scrip, and that his differences were very considerable. By this letter the whole body of speculators in the funds were thrown into confusion and two or three other Brokers of inferior note waddled out of the Alley.' This settling day was said to have been marked by perhaps the greatest confusion since the institution of the Stock Exchange, five principal brokers having defaulted.

$3\frac{5}{16} \times 5\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6274 DOMINION OF THE SEAS.

Pub^d by E. D'achery St James's Street, Dec^r 1st 1783.

Engraving. Britannia (l.) sits in a small boat moored by a rope among wavelets inscribed Portland Road (in allusion to the Portland Ministry). In her r. hand is an olive branch, in her l. she holds a flagstaff, from which float two British flags, the upper a long pendant which streams across the design. By her side are her spear and sword. On the prow of the boat sits a small animal intended for a fox (Charles Fox), but with more resemblance to a badger. Facing Britannia, on the r., the four ex-enemy powers, each in a small boat, dip their national flags in the water in homage. Holland (l.), plainly dressed in baggy breeches with a tobacco-pipe stuck through his hat-band, dips a flag with five stripes. Spain, whose boat is hidden by those of France and America, in a high feathered hat and slashed clothes, dips a flag with three castles. France, with a long pigtail queue, dips the fleur-de-lys flag. America (r.), wearing a head-dress of erect feathers, dips a flag with thirteen stripes. Beneath the title is engraved:

BRITANNIA on board the FOX safe Moor'd in PORTLAND-ROAD—As Mistress of the Sea, she receives Homage from the whole World. NB A distinction contended for by our present Peace Makers.

See also Nos. 6267, 6268.

$7\frac{1}{4} \times 11\frac{3}{16}$ in.

6275 THE POLITICAL BALLOON; OR, THE FALL OF EAST INDIA STOCK.

Pub. Dec 4 1783 by W Wells N^o 132 Fleet Street

Engraving. Fox, seated on a globe, looks down at three men who fall headlong from it. On the globe is sketched a map, intended to represent India. On it are marked, Gold Mines and Madras, and, to the south, Indian Ocean. Fox holds up in his l. hand his Bill to Reform India[n] Affairs. He is saying, Thanks to my Auspicious Stars, for now I see, the Gold & Silver mines before me; 'tis this I am Soaring for. The central of the men falling head downwards wears a coat with military facings, his wig has fallen from his head; he says, What my Government gone ere I had made or unmade one Nabob? Oh perdition Seize that wiley Fox. He is perhaps intended for Hastings. The man falling on the l., evidently a Director, is saying, If the Nation knew his Treacherous heart as well as me, the directors wou'd be prefer'd. The man on the r. says, Must I for ever be hurl'd from such pretty pickings? wou'd I cou'd grapple in my fall the author of it. Coins are falling from the pockets of all three men.

The East India Company petitioned against Fox's India Bill on 24 Nov.; the East India Directors and the City of London petitioned on 25 Nov. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 1247, 1248, 1255. One of many satires on the Bill, see No. 6271, &c.

The first of many applications of the balloon, see No. 6333, &c., to political satire.

$12\frac{1}{16} \times 9\frac{1}{16}$ in.

6276 CARLO KHAN'S TRIUMPHAL ENTRY INTO LEADENHALL STREET.

J. S. f. [Sayers]. plate 2^d

Published 5th Dec^r 1783 by Thomas Cornell Bruton Street

Engraving. Fox seated astride an elephant which is being led through Leadenhall Street towards the India Office, one door of which appears on the l. He is dressed as an oriental prince, wearing a jewelled turban; his elbows are akimbo and he looks down with a triumphant smile. At his side is a flag on which The Man of the People has been erased and ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΝ (king of kings) substituted. The elephant has the face of North, with an expression of pained anxiety, from his mouth protrudes a small snake-like trunk. Burke (r.), dressed as an oriental, leads the elephant by a rope; his head is turned in profile to the r. and he is blowing a trumpet to which is attached a fringed banner on which is a map of India inscribed C F [Charles Fox]; it shows Bengal, the Bay of Bengal, the Ganges; extreme north Delhi and in the extreme south Tanjeour and F[ort] S. George.

In the background the houses of the street recede in perspective; on a chimney on a roof (l.) a raven bends ominously towards Fox, beneath it is etched, The night Crow cried foreboding luckless Time. Shakespeare.

A sequel to No. 6271, which is presumably Pl. 1st, and Sayers' most famous satire. Fox is said to have called it the most effective blow at his India Bill; its effect was multiplied by pirated copies and imitations. T. Wright, Caricature History of the Georges, p. 373; see also Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 254. Burke leads the elephant to show that he is the draftsman of the India Bill and the reputed inspirer of Fox's Indian policy, see No. 6277, &c. Nos. 6285, 6286 are sequels to this print. For the India Bill see No. 6271, &c. At this time the Coalition, having staked their existence on the passing of the Bill, regarded themselves as firmly established. See Corr. of Lord Auckland, 1861, i. 63 (letter of 9 Dec.).

Copy by F. W. Fairholt, T. Wright, op. et loc. cit. Reproduced, A. S. Turberville, Men and Manners of the Eighteenth Century, 1926, p. 464.
11¼ × 8⅞ in.

6276 A A copy with the same title but without signature or publication line.

11¼ × 8¾ in.

6277 CONFUCIUS THE SECOND; OR, A NEW SUN RISING IN THE ASIATIC WORLD!

Pub^d according to the Act by Will^m Holland N^o 66 Drury lane Dec. 12 1783

Engraving. Fox as the rising sun, his head, smiling, satisfied, fills the circle of the sun, whose rays are shed over the sky, and fall upon two groups of persons divided by the River Ganges. On the nearer side (r.) a group of Indians make obeisance to the sun with gestures of ecstatic gratitude: a kneeling prince with a feathered turban, bends low with his hands on his breast; he is The unfortunate Prince, Cheit Sing (words etched on the lower margin). Next him are four kneeling women, three young, one old; they hold out their arms with expressions of gratitude towards Fox; the most prominent turns to point out their benefactor to two young children who kneel at her side. They are The plundered Princesses, the Begums of Oude. Behind them (r.) an Indian bows his head to the ground. He is the foremost of a crowd whose arms are stretched out towards Fox, the faces of some being Nubian in type. Behind and approaching this group is a procession headed by Burke and North each on an elephant. Burke (l.), dressed as a jesuit, as in No. 6205, points at Fox, looking towards North, who stretches out his r. arm towards the rising sun; in his l. hand he holds a book, Sublime and Beaut[iful], to show that he is the author of A Philosophical Enquiry. . . . The howdah cloth of North's elephant is inscribed Plunder restored 1[7]83, on the animal's back is a bale of goods. Behind Burke and North, apparently mounted on elephants, stand two men blowing trumpets to which are attached fringed banners, as in No. 6276, one inscribed The Trumpet shall soun'd in the East and man shall be called to judgment.

On the farther side of the river a procession of 'plunderers', officers of the East India Company, being led by a man with an axe on his shoulder, he holds a chain which is attached to the wrists of the victims. They are Plunderers doomed to Execution when the new Sun [Fox] gains his Meridian.

An exceptional print in its (apparent) defence of the India Bills; the dress of Burke, and Fox as the sun ascending, suggest an ironical intention. Cf. No. 6239, &c. It is based on Burke's speech of 1 Dec., which he had printed (Walpole, Letters, xiii. 118, 1 Feb. 1784), in which (inter alia) he expounded the wrongs of the Begums of Oude and of 'Cheit Sing', and attacked Hastings, describing the rule of the East India Company's servants 'as oppressive, irregular, capricious, unsteady, rapacious, and peculating despotism, with a direct disavowal of obedience to any authority at home and without any fixed maxim, principle or rule of proceeding to guide them in India. . . .' Parl. Hist. xxiii. 1312-86. For the India Bill see No. 6271, &c.

$9\frac{1}{8} \times 13\frac{1}{16}$ in.

6278 THE TEMPTATION IN THE WILDERNESS.

Pub^d Dec^r 12. 1783. by H. Humphrey. New Bond Street.

Engraving. In the centre of the design is the summit of a mountain or rocky mound on which stands the small figure of Fox, who is addressing a number of geese who stand on the rock beneath him at different levels. He points towards an oriental landscape on the l. of the design: undulating ground dotted with palm-trees, and in the distance a bay in which are four ships at anchor protected by a fort, inscribed Madras. Over this a small circular sun sheds its rays. On the extreme r. of the plate appears part of the India House, inscribed Leadenhall Street, falling into ruins. On its broken cornice is a crown.

Beneath the design is inscribed Then Reynard taketh them into an exceeding high [sic] Mountain, and Sheved them all the Kingdoms of the East and the Glory of them, Saying all these will I give ye, if ye will fall down and Worship me.

For Fox's India Bill see Nos. 6271, &c. For Fox's geese cf. No. 5843, &c.

6279 EAST INDIA REFORMERS OR NEW WAYS & MEANS.

Pub^d as the act directs Dec^{br} 81 [sic] 1783 by T. Wiggins N^o 9 Founders Court Lothbury.

Engraving. North, Fox, and Burke in a room in the India House, the wall of which is inscribed Committe [sic] Room. They stand in front of a long table behind which is a tall arm-chair inscribed President's Chair. Fox (c.) squats over a torn paper on which he is excreting, inscribed [East] India Com[pa]ny's Charters. North, standing on Fox's r., hands him another torn paper, Rights & privileges . . . Honourable East India Company. From Fox's l. pocket projects a List of Commissonor[s] [sic]. Under North's r. arm is a large bundle of papers, some inscribed 100000, Stock, and 000; his r. hand is in his coat-pocket. Burke (r.), in profile to the r., is kicking and pushing out of the door two East India Directors, one, whose wig has fallen off in the struggle, looks round over his shoulder at Burke, who says, I will direct ye. On the r., in very incorrect perspective, are what appear to be two chests full of coins, one is inscribed Dollars. On the ground beside them are money-bags inscribed Rupees and a Lack [lakh] with a label, 100000. In the centre of the floor in front of North and Fox is a heap of coins.

On the table are torn papers inscribed accounts, India Bonds, coins, a book inscribed Ledge[r], and an ink-stand. On the wall (l.) is a framed picture of two small figures in a room, one intended for Fox; it represents a foul and scurrilous tale told of Fox (according to which he bets upon a certainty), which is related in The Gamblers, 1777, pp. 43-4, a poem, published anonymously, by Theophilus Swift. It was the subject of a print, The Gamesters, 13 May 1784.

One of many attacks on Fox's India Bill, see No. 6271, &c.

$8\frac{1}{16} \times 12\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6280 S—TE [STATE] MINERS

Pub^d as ye act directs Dec^r 21 1783 by E. D'Archery St^y James's Street Engraving. Fox and North, as miners, are undermining the rock of the constitution, which by their efforts has been reduced to a circular platform supported on an irregularly shaped and jagged pillar which dwindles as it reaches the ground. On the summit sit George III and Britannia. The king (l.) leans back in an arm-chair, his eyes closed, with an angry expression. Britannia, with a melancholy expression, her eyes closed, rests her head on her l. hand; her r. rests on her shield, her spear is broken and the cap of liberty falls from it. Over the king is poised an inverted crown on which stands a fox using it as an urinal. The rock (reading from the summit to the base) is inscribed Constitution, Trade, Justice, Laws, Charters. North (r.) is digging at the foundation of the rock with a spade inscribed Craft. Fox (l.) swings above his head a pick-axe inscribed Oratory. He wears a sleeved waistcoat, the sleeves rolled up, his breeches pocket is inscribed Full.

Behind, on a very small scale, three riders bestride the muzzled British lion. In front, wielding a scourge, is Burke, distinguished by his jesuit's dress and spectacles, see No. 6205, &c. Holding to his waist is a man wearing a Garter ribbon, probably intended for Portland, see No. 6248; a third rider sits behind him.

Between the two words of the title is a shield on which is a fox, apparently hanging by its neck from a noose. The Devil, holding a headsman's axe, sits cross-legged on the shield.

A satire on the Coalition, see Nos. 6176-9, &c., and on the India Bill as an attack on chartered rights, see No. 6271, &c. For Fox as the assailant of the Crown see Nos. 5987, 6239, &c.

$12\frac{1}{8} \times 8\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6281 BANDITTI

I. B. [J. Boyne.]

Published by E. Hedges N^o 92 Cornhill Dec. 22. 1783.¹

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Ministers, as bandits, grouped round a table, drinking and dividing their spoil. The two most prominent figures, facing each other, are North and Fox. North (l.), very stout, with a good-humoured expression of satisfied repletion, sits at the corner of the rectangular table, one hand on his breast, the other grasping a goblet which stands on the table. He is dressed in Roman armour, with buskins and bare legs, but over this is a cloak and his ribbon and star. He wears a bag-wig. Fox (r.) is dressed as a Roman centurion. The front of his plumed helmet is decorated with a fox running with a goose in its mouth; his short sleeve is ornamented with a fox's head. He leans across the table, the fingers of his r. hand stretched across three dice, inscribed Madras, Bombay, Bengal; his l. hand grasps a large dice-box. Behind him is Keppel, wearing a voluminous cloak and a plumed helmet, ornamented with an anchor and the words July 27 (cf. No. 5992, &c.). Behind North is Burke, leaning across the table dressed as a jesuit (cf. No. 6205) wearing spectacles and reading intently his Plan of oeconomy [sic]. In the centre of the farther side of the table is the Duke of Portland, looking to the r. He wears a ducal coronet, and a Garter ribbon over a furred robe (cf. No. 6248). Two keys hang from a ribbon round his neck. On his r. shoulder leans Lord John Cavendish, his head turned in profile to the r. Portland, the pay-master, looks away from Cavendish towards Lord Carlisle, who has a wallet attached to the front of his belt, and who lays his l. hand on the table to take coins which Portland is counting out to him. Between Carlisle and Keppel, his eyes fixed on the money, is Sheridan, Treasury Secretary, wearing a turban inscribed School for Scandal. He has an animal's [ass's?] ears, a beard, and a Jewish profile.

¹The publication line (on the upper margin of the print) is almost obliterated.

Under the table are the dead bodies of Dunning (Baron Ashburton, d. 18 Aug. 1783) and Shelburne, enemies routed by the Coalition, see No. 6214, &c. Under Fox's seat lies a fox. On the table is a punch-bowl. The shaded background indicates that the bandits are seated in the mouth of a cave. The title is etched across the foreground.

One of many satires on the Coalition, see Nos. 6176-9, &c., and on Fox's India Bill, see No. 6271.

$10\frac{1}{16} \times 13\frac{1}{2}$ in.

Two earlier states before the design was reduced along the upper margin:

1. Publish'd as the Act directs [erasure] Dec' 20 [?]¹ 1783, to which is added in ink, 'by E^d Hedges No 92 Cornhill'. The title engraved below the design, publication line below the title.

$11\frac{1}{8} \times 13\frac{1}{2}$ in.

2. Publish'd by E. Hedges N^o 92 Cornhill Dec' 22 1783. Title and size as above.

6282 LORD N—S [NORTH'S] SUPPLICATION TO MR FOX

[c. Nov.—Dec. 1783]²

Engraving. North, in profile to the r., kneels in supplication to Fox (r.), who stands with arms extended, feet apart, dressed as an oriental potentate. He wears a turban, ornamented with a crescent and aigrette, a long robe over a frogged tunic, girt with a sash. North kneels near the edge of a pit (l.); a round sack or bag hangs at his back, inscribed Nation's Plunder, ropes are attached to his arms and are being pulled by a Devil who appears from the pit behind North, from which flames are ascending. North is weeping, his handkerchief raised to his eye, he says, They are going to prosecute me for the American War, Charles take me under your protection and I will promise to be Gratefull. Fox answers, I would Protect you But your promise I cannot rely upon! How many poor people have you ruined by promising what you never intended to perform. Witness the Author of this, Blush, Honor, Blush. The Devil says, This is my Fav'rite! one that has dureing his whole Ministry Obey'd and made others Obey my Laws & Rules. He shall be my Prime Minister.

¹ The 'o' is written in ink over another figure, perhaps a '2'.

² Publication line perhaps cut off.

The date must be before the fall of the Coalition on 18 Dec.; Fox's oriental dress shows that it is after the introduction of his India Bill on 11 Nov., cf. No. 6179. See also No. 6207. For the India Bill see No. 6271, &c. $7\frac{11}{16} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6283 GREAT CRY AND LITTLE WOOL.

[Rowlandson.]

Published 22 Dec' 1783 by Humphrys Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Fox (r.) attempting to flee from the Devil, who has firm hold of him and is shearing his hairy chest with a large pair of scissors. The Devil is a satyr-like creature with a beard, goat's horns, and hairy legs; his fingers are talons, his feet are those of a bird of prey, he has a forked tail. He clutches Fox by the r. leg, which is bare, and fixes the talons of his l. foot in Fox's l. leg. Fox is naked except for breeches, and one stocking and shoe; he clutches his hair and looks round at the Devil, who holds the India Bill under his r. arm.

In the background (l.) is the India House. Outside it a fox is tied to a stake round which burns a fire. A circle of men holding hands dance round the fire in exultation; they evidently represent the City and East India interests which had petitioned against the Bill. The smoke from the bonfire, drifting to the r., forms a background to the figures of Fox and the Devil.

On 17 Dec., owing to the influence of the king conveyed through Lord Temple, the India Bill was rejected in the Lords, and on 18 Dec. the two secretaries were dismissed and the Ministry fell, see Corr. of George III, vi. 476 f. (the king writing to Lord North at 10.43 p.m. on 18 Dec. to return the seals); Life and Letters of Sir Gilbert Elliot, i. 89-91; Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 186 ff. For the India Bill see No. 6271, &c.

Grego, Rowlandson, i. 109.

$8\frac{1}{4} \times 12$ in.

6284 THE AEROSTATICK STAGE BALLOON.

Hanibal Scratch del

Pub^d Dec' 23 1783 by W^m Wells N^o 132 Fleet Street

Engraving. A balloon about to rise from the ground encircled by three tiers of galleries or narrow platforms, protected by railings. Behind the railings sit the passengers. In the highest tier are three ladies notorious at that time for their amours (see index): Grace Elliott or Eliot, née Dalrymple, known as 'Dally the tall', she holds a fan, turning her head in profile to the l., towards Perdita (Mary Robinson), who clasps her hands ecstatically; Lady Worsley sits on the r.

In the centre gallery sit ex-ministers: North (l.) and Fox (r.) in the centre, North's arm on Fox's shoulder; Fox turns his head to North with an expression of satisfaction. Each rests his r. hand on the railing in front of him, and these hands hold an inconspicuous thread which is attached to the nose of the Duke of Portland (l.), who turns in profile to the r. On the r., a little apart, sits Burke dressed as a jesuit (see No. 6205) looking in profile to the r. towards the Pope, who stands on the gallery, emerging from behind the curve of the balloon. He wears furred robes and his triple crown; as a pendant to him on the extreme l. is the Devil looking towards the ministers with a pleased expression; over his arm he holds a net.

In the lowest gallery sit celebrated quacks and other London characters. These are (l. to r.) 'Vestina', the goddess of Health who advertised the virtues of the celestial bed (incorrectly said to have been Lady Hamilton), sits next her employer, Dr. Graham; they look at each other; she holds a sceptre wreathed with a garland. Jeffery Dunstan, Mayor of Garrat, stands, knock-kneed, with his sack over his shoulder in his accustomed attitude when calling 'old wigs'. Sam House sits resting a foaming tankard of porter on the railing in front of him, the tankard inscribed House Ward[our] Stre[et]. Katerfelto, turned in profile to the r., gazes up at the moon through his telescope; in his l. hand is a paper, Wonders, Wonders Most Wonderful Wonders, the usual heading of his advertisements, cf. No. 6162. His black cat sits on the railing facing him, saying, are there Mice in the Moon Master. In the upper r. corner of the design is the moon, a crescent-shaped profile inset in a circle, looking down at the balloon.

The balloon is encircled longitudinally by eight ropes which meet in a knot beneath it and are there attached to four stouter ropes attached to the four corners of a platform which rests on the ground, from which the balloon appears about to ascend. On this platform is a tub inscribed Vanity, bubbling over with soapsuds inscribed Froth. Beside the platform (r.) stands a Frenchman capering on one leg and flourishing a knife. He says, Oh Begar dis be von fine Cargo.

Beneath the title is etched, Setts out from Swan with two Necks Lad Lane every Monday Mor^g.

In the background are the roofs and spires of London, St. Paul's being prominent on the l., the Monument on the r. Beneath the design is inscribed:

*Who choose a journey to the Moon
May take it in our Stage Balloon.
Where love sick Virgins past their prime
May Marry yet and laugh at time,
Perdita—W——sley Fillies free,
Each flash their Lunar Vis a Vis,
There N——th may realize his Dreams,
And F——x pursue his golden schemes
And Father B——ke may still absolve 'em
Howe'er the Devil may involve them;
The Pope may plan his Machinations
With Panders Quacks & Polititions.
Sam House enjoy his Tankard there
And Old Wigs still be Garrats May'r
Great Katerdevil work his Wonders
Spruce Gr——ham launch Electric thunders
Vestina too—nor fear a fall
St Satans Net shall catch ye all
So said Monseieur in broken Brogue
And up they mounted W——e and R——e.*

One of many satires on balloon ascents, see No. 6333, &c., here combined with a satire on the Coalition, or on politicians, who are associated with mountebanks and women of damaged reputation.

$12\frac{13}{16} \times 9\frac{11}{16}$ in.

6285 THE RETREAT OF CARLO KHAN FROM LEADENHALL ST

[J. Boyne.]

Publish'd by E. Hedges N^o 92 Cornhill, Dec. 24. 1783

Engraving. A sequel to No. 6276. Fox, seated cross-legged on an ass, his head facing the tail, holds his head in both hands while he vomits into his feathered turban. The ass has the face of Lord North, in his mouth is a bridle, the bit being represented by a crown; it is led by a draped woman (l.) representing the City of London. On the animal's hind-quarters are the letters LN [Lord North]. She wears a mural crown and, as a brooch, the City Arms. In her l. hand she holds up a whip, the lash of which is a narrow banner or scroll inscribed Public Resentment. Large saddle-bags hang across the ass's back, one (l.) containing rolled documents. Burke (r.), dressed as a jesuit, see No. 6205, follows the ass barefooted. He reads from a book, Sinners Guide. Instead of the biretta covering a wig in which he is usually depicted, he is bald-headed, which accentuates his expression of senile melancholy.

On the r. of the street is the India House, along which is inscribed Business done as usual. George III leans out of an upper window flourishing a cap of liberty on a staff; a symbol of the 'liberation' of the Crown and the East India Company and protection of chartered rights. Over the window sill hangs a document India Bill, the words scored through to signify the defeat of the Bill, see No. 6283. Over the roof of the house the sun is appearing, surmounted by a crown, and sending out rays which are dispersing the clouds. In the sun's circle is a face.

For the India Bill see No. 6271, &c., and for its defeat No. 6283 and No. 6286, also a sequel to No. 6276.

$12\frac{5}{16} \times 9$ in.

6286 THE FALL OF CARLO KHAN

Published as the Act Directs 24 Dec^r 1783 by D Brown.

Engraving. A sequel to No. 6276, and an imitation of that print by another artist. The elephant with North's head is being chased by a group (r.) of opponents of Fox's India Bill. Conspicuous among these is the king, wearing a hat, his star indicated on his coat; he prods the animal's near hind-leg with a spiked stick, drawing blood. On his l. hand, and on the extreme r. of the design, walks Thurlow, on whose advice the king had informed the peers through Temple of his desire for opposition to the Bill. On the king's r. is a judge, probably Lord Camden, who spoke vehemently against the Bill, Parl. Hist. xxiv. 190 f. Next is Dundas, the Lord Advocate of Scotland, also in legal robes, who opposed the Bill as 'highly unconstitutional', ibid., p. 51. Behind Camden is Lord Shelburne blowing a horn although he had in fact abstained from voting. Behind the king, and waving his hat, is Lord Mahon, who vehemently opposed the Bill (ibid., pp. 202-3). Behind Thurlow is the Duke of Richmond (ibid., pp. 134, &c.).

Fox is falling head-downwards from his seat on the elephant, his head is about to strike the East Ind[ia] Bill, which lies on the ground and is being boufeled by a small dog. From his mouth issue the words, Secret Influence. Burke (l.) has dropped the rope by which he was leading the elephant and is running away, turning to look over his l. shoulder; a large bundle, Plans of Oeconomy, lies on the ground beside him. Fox's turban and Burke's banner also lie on the ground; both are dressed as in No. 6276.

One side of Leadenhall Street forms a background; the India House, on the extreme l., has been shored up by Pitt with two large beams, one of which he is placing against the façade.

For the Bill see No. 6271, &c., and for its defeat No. 6283 and No. 6285, also a sequel to No. 6276.

$8\frac{5}{16} \times 11\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6287 TWO NEW SLIDERS FOR THE STATE MAGIC LANTHERN.

[Rowlandson.]

Pub 29th Dec^r 1783 by W. Humphrey 227 Strand.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Two horizontal strips each divided by vertical lines into rectangular compartments of varying width, numbered 1-5 and 6-10, depicting the Coalition and its fall.

1. VOX POPULI OUT OF DOORS. Fox (r.), as a fox wearing a coat, stands on a platform haranguing the mob, a small crowd of men and women (l.). His platform is little more than a large four-legged stool; behind him stands a man dressed like the zanies who accompanied the quack doctors who hawked their wares in public places, such as Dr. Bossy, who used to put up his platform in Covent Garden, the scene of Fox's oratory. The background is part of the portico of Covent Garden Church, the scene of Westminster elections.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

2. FIRST COALITION. North (l.) and Fox, with a fox's head (r.), stand in profile facing each other, clasping hands. North's l. hand is held behind his back, in it he holds strings attached to the neck of sheep standing behind him; these are Country Gentlemen, cf. No. 6243. Fox similarly holds in his r. hand the strings attached to a flock of geese, inscribed Wes^r Geese, representing the electors of Westminster or the populace, cf. No. 5843, &c.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{1}{4}$ in.

3. VOX POPULI—IN DOORS. Fox (l.), with a fox's head, haranguing with clenched fists an audience (r.) seated under the pillars supporting the roof of a rotunda. On the roof minute figures stand or lean over to see the orator.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{1}{2}$ in.

4. EMBLEM OF LIBERTY. Fox, with a fox's head and brush, kneels on one knee before a fire which he is feeding. In its centre is a stake, on the top of which is a cap of liberty. Attached to the stake is a large rolled document with a pendent seal inscribed India Charter. See also No. 6207.

For the India Bill see No. 6271, &c.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5. NEW STATE IDOL. North (l.) and Fox (r.) stand pressed together on a low rectangular pedestal inscribed POWER. Fox is depicted as a fox; the coat which Fox has worn in the first four designs is buttoned round both of them, the sleeves hanging limp. On the ground (r.) is a crown and sceptre.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{5}{16}$ in.

6. POLITICAL MONTGOLFIER. A parti-coloured balloon suspended in the air, from its summit protrudes the head of a fox. Below is the word Ascending. For balloons see No. 6333, &c.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

7. HIS FALL INTO THE PITT. From a balloon, the lower part only of which is visible, a fox is falling headlong. Beneath him on the ground is a circular hole, representing the ministry of Pitt which is about to engulf him.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

8. THE COALITION CANDIDATES REJECTED. Britannia seated (r.), with her spear and shield, turns her head from Fox and North who stand together (l.), North's r. arm round Fox's shoulders. Fox has a fox's head, brush, and hind-legs. By Britannia is a bust of George III. She points in disdain to the couple, who seem to be appealing for her support. On the sky-line (l.) behind Fox is a gibbet. Above Britannia's head is a sun sending out rays.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 3$ in.

9. LAST COALITION. Fox, in the shape of a fox (l.), North (c.), and Burke (r.) seated together in a cart under a gallows with two uprights, one on each side of the cart. An executioner sits astride the cross-beam arranging three nooses. The figures are minute but very expressive. Burke, wearing his spectacles, turns his head away from his companions with an expression of melancholy.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{1}{2}$ in.

10. TANTALUS . IXION . SYSIPHUS. A scene in Hades; water on the l., from which rises a rock or mountain (r.); the background is composed of flames, in the smoke of which is the figure of a minute demon. The head and shoulders of Burke (l.) as Tantalus appear from the water. Fox (a fox) as Ixion is bound to the centre of a wheel. North as Sisyphus climbs up the rock, pushing before him a spherical boulder.

For the fall of the Coalition see No. 6283, &c.

Attributed by Grego to Gillray (Gillray, p. 51). It is similar in manner and design as well as in spirit to Rowlandson's The Loves of the Fox and the Badger, 7 Jan. 1784; they were probably companion prints.

$7\frac{15}{16} \times 12\frac{13}{16}$ in.

6288 ORIGINAL AIR BALLOON

N^o 8

Pub^d as ye act directs Dec^r 29. 1783 by G. Humphrey, N^o 48 Long Acre.

Engraving. The ascent of a circular balloon, inscribed America, is watched by spectators; there are two passengers in its basket. The names of the persons are shown by numbers referring to notes in the upper margin.

(1), Spain and (2) France stand (l.) bound together by a chain held by a padlock inscribed family Compact. France, lean and elegant, though grotesque, rests his r. elbow on Spain's shoulder, he points upwards at the balloon, saying, T'will be ours Soon; within the label containing these words is a small butterfly. On the r. stands (3) D^r F—k—n [Franklin] wearing dark spectacles; in his r. hand he holds up a knife inscribed Sedition, in the

l. is an oval mask, probably symbol of duplicity. He says I've cut the bands that have long restrained my Ambition as poor Richard says, evidently implying that the ropes which held down the balloon America have been cut by him. The ground at Franklin's feet is inscribed, Once British Colonys But now to be lett on Fighting Leases; in front of him are the ends of two broken 'bands' cut by him, inscribed Loyalty and Friendship. Behind Franklin (r.) is (4) Holland, a clumsy Dutch burgher; he gazes at the balloon saying I will profit by your inexperience Mynheers; from his pocket three small devils are emerging.

A stream divides these four persons in the foreground from groups on a much smaller scale. (5) and (6), Cha^s F—x and L— N—th dance together hand-in-hand, signifying the Coalition. Beside them, piping for their dance, is the Devil capering on one hoof; he is (7) Director General. A group (l.) of prostrate and despairing figures on a minute scale is weighted down by a rectangular block inscribed Oppression, Taxes. On this block a gallows stands, from which hang three corpses inscribed respectively Trade, Wealth, Liberty. On the cross-beam of the gallows stands a small figure, (8), Military Force of G^t B—n, who appears to be sending up small oval balloons or bladders, he stretches out his arms towards the large balloon, America; a label issues from his mouth inscribed G—E H—WE C—T—N, B—G—E &c., evidently Gage, Howe, Carleton, Burgoyne.

To the balloon is attached a basket in which are two passengers: on the l. (10), Gen^t W—h—t—n [Washington] stretches out his arms towards (11) The Ghost of O Cromwell, who emerges from clouds on the l. wearing armour and holding out a crown cut in half and a headsman's axe. Washington has two faces, one in profile to the l. facing Cromwell, the other in profile to the r. On the r. of the basket is (9) Silas D—ne [Deane] covering his face with his hands at (12) the ghost of John y^e Painter emerging from clouds on the r. and holding out a gallows. Deane's hair is rising in horror.

'John the Painter' was James Aitken, who set fire to the rope-house in Portsmouth dockyard (Dec. 1776) and to a warehouse at Bristol (Jan. 1777). His aim was to destroy the shipping and dockyards of England to ensure victory for America. He propounded his scheme to Silas Deane, the American envoy in Paris, and obtained some encouragement from him and a false French passport. He was executed at Portsmouth on 10 March 1777. A pamphlet in doggerel verse, John the Painter's Ghost, was published in 1777 attacking Lord Temple for his share in obtaining a confession from Aitken. Deane afterwards acted as a British agent (1781), see Corr. of George III, v. 200, &c.

The only unfavourable representation of Washington in the collection, and one of the few satires hostile to the Americans, cf. Nos. 5329, 5401.

For balloons see No. 6333, &c.

11¼ × 8 in.

6289 THE EAST INDIA AIR BALLOON.

W.D. [Dent.]

Designed by Boreas The Figures by Le Roi Exec^d by Reynard.

Pub^d by J. Cattermoul N^o 376 Oxford Street Dec^r 30th 1783

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Fox hangs by the neck from a rope attached to the 'East India Air Balloon'; a globe on which is depicted the East India House in Leadenhall Street. On the ground beneath are two larger figures, George III (l.) and North (r.). The king is dressed as a woman in pseudo-classical draperies, wearing a laurel wreath and the ribbon and star of the Garter. He holds in his r. hand a pair of scales, equally balanced, on the l. scale half a royal crown, on the r. the word America. He stands on a solid stone dike or mound, with a broad base, under one foot is a paper inscribed Coalition, under the other is the East India Bill. The mound is inscribed Auspicium melioris ævi. The king looks towards Fox, raising a narrow bandage which has been tied over his eyes; from his mouth he directs a blast which strikes and bends the rope by which Fox is suspended. Fox holds in his hand a paper inscribed [Bill of] Pains and Penalties; a large fox's brush hangs from his person, inscribed The Man of the People. Behind his head is a horizontal scroll inscribed, Harm Watch—Harm Catch. North, with an expression of acute distress, kneels towards the king, his hands together in an attitude of prayer, saying Sire—let me be in the Closet, even the Water Closet, rather than out of office. He kneels in a mountainous landscape evidently representing the wilderness of opposition, in front of him is a Letter of Dismission, cf. the king's letter to him on 18 Dec. Corr. of George III, vi. 476.¹ Beneath him is etched, Quid feci? Above the balloon clouds are indicated.

For the India Bill see No. 6271, &c., and for its defeat No. 6283. On 17 Dec. a motion was carried that to report an opinion of the king in order to influence votes in parliament was 'a high crime and misdemeanour'. Parl. Hist. xxiv. 199.

12 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{9}{16}$ in.

6290 THE TIMES OR THE DOWNFALL OF MAGNA FAR—TA BY CARLO CROMWELL ESQ^R

Scott Fecit.

Engraving (partly coloured). A man-of-war is being raised by three balloons each fastened by a cord to the top of a mast. Beneath the ship five sailors haul at ropes attached to her; they are on a small island or sand-bank near the coast; the figures are on a very small scale. Lord North is climbing up one of these ropes which is held by a sailor who says, this Destroys the Coalition. North says I am going for More airy Promises, a paper falls from him inscribed Ch—s [Fox] is a curse on Coalitions. The other four sailors are saying, Avast hauling There; Take Ch—s with you; D—n my Eyes bring her Back; I'll be damn'd if She goes. In the upper r. corner of the print a head with demon's wings appears from clouds, directing at the balloons a blast of air inscribed No Boreas here. A winged imp or demon is flying from the balloon (r.) saying, A Paris.

On the shore (l.) stand three spectators: a man looking through a telescope says Dont go N—th; he wears a ribbon and is probably the Duke of Portland; a lady who says, His other Half is Behind; a fox on his hind-legs (Charles Fox), holding a scourge, with a paper inscribed Pains & Penalties. (Cf. No. 6289.)

On the edge of a rock overhanging the sea (l.) on the horizon is Britannia, with her shield, holding a broken spear; she is about to fall into the water. A label issues from her inscribed Britania Æterna. A ship at anchor, a ship's boat, &c., show that the scene is a harbour.

¹ ' . . . I choose this method as Audiences on such occasions must be unpleasant.' 'm. 43 past 10 P.M.'

In the lower part of the print, encroaching on the foreground, are small inset designs of irregular shape. On the r. is India scourg'd, a confused representation of a monster with wings and three heads, an angel with a sword, a number of prostrate and fleeing figures, and smoke. It is Cap. 9, which appears to be a reference to Revelation.

Below it is a design inscribed Revelations Cap. 13; a monster with seven heads is rising out of the sea. Four figures wearing crowns kneel before it, one of these has an animal's head and is perhaps intended for Fox. A beast with horns resembling an ox rises from the ground behind.

To the r. of this design is seated Fox in oriental dress, with animal's legs; he holds a sceptre in his r. hand, a sword (?) in his l. He is seated on a placard or paper inscribed My Power will last 42 Months. Fox's India Bill vested the government of the East India Company in the seven directors named in the Bill for 48 months, but 42 was the duration of the power of the Beast in the Apocalypse. A winged devil, wearing legal bands, says to him, it is only a Bit of Wax C—s, an allusion to the much-quoted speech of John Lee, Attorney General in the Coalition, who asked (3 Dec.), 'what was the consideration of a charter, a skin of parchment with a waxed seal . . . compared to the happiness of thirty millions of subjects . . .'. Parl. Hist. xxiv. 49. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 182.

On the r., and in the lower r. corner of the design, the India House, partly ruined, is falling; across part of the house is the Company's Charter with a large seal. On this charter, the Beast, a four-footed monster with wings and tail, wearing the papal crown, plants its four feet; the charter is inscribed, India Charter Well Done Man of My People. Beneath is inscribed The India House Falling.

On the extreme l. is a small design of Fox and a winged devil standing (l.) on a cliff; below (r.) is a rectangular enclosure surrounded by a wall in which are gates. Above is inscribed Bengal and Cap 21, a reference to the Book of Revelation, that is, to the revelation by an angel to John of 'the holy Jerusalem' lying foursquare.

Below the design is engraved, The Air Balloon Carrying up the Royal George and Lord N—th &c., apparently an allusion to the sinking of the Royal George at Spithead in Aug. 1782.

An elaborate and confused attack on Fox's India Bill. Fox is here, as often, represented as a Cromwell, usurping the prerogatives of the Crown, see No. 6239, &c.

The allusions to the Apocalypse are based on a speech of Scott, afterwards Lord Eldon, in the debate on the third reading of the East India Bill (8 Dec.) in which he read verses from the Book of Revelation comparing Fox to the Beast and Dragon, and the fall of Babylon to the fall of the East India Company. This is indicated by the signature. Parl. Hist. xxiv. 34-5. Wraxall, Memoirs, 1884, iii. 169-70. For the India Bill see No. 6271, &c., and for its defeat No. 6283. For balloons see No. 6333, &c.

12½ × 7½ in.

6291 TO DAY DISLIKED, AND YET PERHAPS TOMORROW
AGAIN IN FAVOUR. SO FICKLE IS THE MIND OF R—Y—L—
TY,!!! [After 18 Dec. 1783]

Yerac del' & Sculp' [? W. P. Carey.]

Engraving. Fox, North, and Burke hurled to the ground from a pedestal on which sits the king. On each side of the design is a large rectangular pedestal with a projecting base. That on the l. supports a bust of George II, that on the r. the seated figure of George III, in profile to the l., blowing a bubble, R—y—l favour, through a long-stemmed pipe. In his l. hand he holds a large scroll inscribed *Starvation, a poem written from feeling in the shades, by T. Chatterton of Bristol. The tears of genius, or merit in distress, an elegy by the Same. Rowly's poems &c.*¹ Under his arm is a book Callipedia (or Callipaedia).

At the king's feet a platform or shutter is falling; it is inscribed, New Method [sic] of executing criminals. Fall of the leaf. . . It is this which has caused the fall of the three ministers in the central part of the design between the two pedestals. The uppermost is Burke, staggering to the l.; he holds in his hand a paper inscribed Fall of Longinus The Sublim[e and the Beautiful]. Beneath him is North falling head downwards; he holds up in his l. hand a pouch inscribed Budget from which are falling papers inscribed Tax on Honesty, List of Opposition, Tax on maids, Disarming the Irish. Fox has already reached the ground and kneels with composure on his l. knee. He is saying, Truth, Honour, Justice, Warring on my side against Oppression, Cruelty & Avarice; I fall to rise more glorious. In his l. hand he holds out a paper inscribed The cries of blood & injured in - Innocence [sic], being an account of the rapacious cruelty committed in India by the I—d—a C—mp—y.

The bust of George II (l.), crowned with a laurel wreath, is in profile to the r., irradiated by a star-shaped glory; the pedestal is inscribed:

The 2nd — | The Father of his People. | British Meridian A.D. 1760. Just & necessary wars with natural & perfidious enemies; crown'd with victory & success: The admirals Hawk, Boscawen, Warren, Anson, Watson, Pocock & Saunders destroying the Enemies fleets in every quarter of the Globe: while our Generals drove them entirely out of America, and dispossess'd them of their chief Settlements in India. War concludes with a glorious, honourable & advantageous peace: Great Britain look'd up to as the Arbitress of Europe; fear'd by all the world; Sovereign of the Sea and possessed of a greater extent of Territory than Rome in the zenith of her glory!!!—

*Immortal wreaths for G—ge fair fame shall twine,
And Britain's tears bedew his msacred [sic] shrine —Yerac.*

The pedestal on which George III sits is inscribed:

— The 3^d — | The Father of his — Children! | British Sunset 1783 — | Annals of the Reign of — By Positive Telltruth, & Impartial Justice, Historians to the People. Stamp Act. Boston Port Bill. American Remonstrance disregarded—177— Irish awake 177— Start up & 177— look about them Peace broken at Concord. Battle [of] Lexington—of Bunker's Hill. Riots in Lon[don] Irish begin to think, — for themselves—Trenton, Saratoga. Cornwallis taken. Drawn Battles at sea, in the East & West Indies, Europe & Am.

Lose the Empire of the Sea. Hyder Ally defeats Col. Baily. Anarchy, Confusion & Destruction in East In[dies]. War concludes with an exhausted Treasury, distracted Councils, divided Senate decay'd Fleet, Enfeebled Army, discontented People & America not only for ever, ever lost to England, but thrown into the arms of our natural enemies!!! Oh!!! Oh!!! Oh!!! unhappy

¹ George III had nothing to do with Chatterton (d. 1770), but the Rowley-Chatterton controversy was active 1781-3.

—!!!

Tempora mutantur. . . Sic transit gloria Mundi.

The head and talons of the Devil appear from behind this pedestal threatening the falling ministers and saying So perish all who seek to disturb my empire.

At the top of the design the winged figure of Fame, in profile to the l., appears from clouds. She faces the bust of George II, blowing a trumpet inscribed Good. In her l. hand is a trumpet pointing towards George III inscribed Evil. From its mouth come the words disgrace!! How lost!!! How fallen!!

The only allusion to Hyder Ali (d. 1782) in these satires.¹ Col. William Baillie was defeated 10 Sept. 1780 by Hyder Ali, wounded and captured after a heroic defence, dying in captivity 1782. The much more important series of defeats inflicted on Hyder Ali by Sir Eyre Coote, 1781-2, is characteristically omitted.

At this time the early return to power of the Coalition was confidently expected, but not through royal favour. Cf. also Nos. 6181, 6232, which are apologies for the Coalition. For other references to the Stamp Act see No. 5487, &c., and for the Boston Port Act No. 5230. Contrast with this print Nos. 6267, 6268, 6274.

8 $\frac{9}{16}$ × 8 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6292 DE VREEDE VAN ANNO 1783.

[1783]

[THE PEACE OF 1783]

Engraving. A Dutch satire on the Peace between England and the Dutch Republic. Figures arranged in disconnected groups on the sea-shore, with numbers referring to a printed Verklaring pasted on the back of the print, here translated and abridged.

(1), 'The Dutch Maid', in profile to the l., wearing a plumed helmet, holding the hat of liberty on a staff, sits behind a low palisade of broken wicker-work. She is approached by (2) Peace, who is urged forward by an Englishman, to whom is attached a small scroll inscribed Negapatam. He is followed by 'Envy', a man with snakes for hair blowing a horn, and by 'Duplicity', a woman holding a mask.

The Dutch Maid 'is sitting in her garden which has been grievously despoiled; she says, "what will become of me? Until now I have remained unharmed by my enemies, now I am shamefully treated by my friend! By my so-called ally and co-religionist. Heaven punish the people of the Netherlands who have lent a hand to this". Peace, . . . shows the Dutch Maid a withered sheaf in place of the horn of plenty, and shackles in place of love branches.' The Dutch Maid is also addressed by two men wearing short cloaks. They are (3) 'Two notorious clergymen (predikanten) with orange favours in their hats, busy helping to ruin the Maid's garden'. They say, 'even if it should be to the destruction of our Fatherland, we will stand firm in saying that England justly inflicted the war upon us, and that his Highness in a very Christian way is carrying on the war as feebly as possible, against our ally and co-religionist. . . .'

A plainly dressed man (4) addresses four men in military uniform (5)

¹ A French satire, an aquatint by Borel, Hyder Ali, corrigeant les Anglois, un Soldat Francois lui presente les Verges, is No. 1193, Collection de Vinck (reproduction).

(r.), with a large banner with the seven arrows of the United Provinces inscribed Voor Vryheyd en Vaderland. He holds out to them a large scroll inscribed, De militaire jurisdictie en het begeben Van de Ampten Aan de Moff evernitigt. He is (4) 'a statesman full of zeal, busy cleansing the oppressed Fatherland of many corrupt monsters, showing the destruction of military jurisdiction and the abolition of the bestowal of office upon foreigners. "Henceforth will offices be bestowed on you my fellow-countrymen and natives of the free commonwealth; no foreigner will be superior to you". They are 'the citizens who take up arms to support, and the statesmen who execute his orders'.

Figures 1-5 fill the foreground of the design. Behind are a number of smaller figures on the sea-shore. Four persons (6) (r.) run in single file (r. to l.). They are 'the foreigners [Germans] who seeing now no more chance of obtaining office return to their country with bag and baggage'. They say, in very bad semi-Germanized Dutch, 'who the devil would have expected this! The war has caused it all . . . '.

On the extreme l. is a cross-beam supported on posts beneath which stand three naval officers (8), pointing to ships with furled sails which are chained to the beam. Two men stand (r.) pointing at the ships, one (7) holds the end of another chain attached to a ship. He is 'an august person with his mentor [the Stadtholder with the Duke of Brunswick], with one hand ordering the fleet to sail for Brest, while holding a chain with the other. He says, "Ha Ha Ha! I thought rightly that the time would come when I should do my cousin [George III] a great favour . . . make as if I meant to give orders that the ships should sail to Brest, though the officers might be so well instructed that in any case they would refuse to sail". The officers (8), ordered to Brest, have not departed, giving the deceitful pretext of lack of provisions . . .'. Ten Dutch vessels refused to sail to Brest to join the French fleet, Sept. 1782, saying they were not ready, causing a storm of protest and attacks on the Stadtholder. Edler, The Dutch Republic and the American Revolution, Baltimore, 1911, p. 204.

The central group in the background is Louis XVI (9), crowned and standing on a square pedestal inscribed Vivae Louis; Fame blowing a trumpet holds a wreath over his head. Four men surround the pedestal, hat in hand, with gestures of acclamation; he holds out to them a paper inscribed, Alles vry te rug. He is 'in a generous way giving everything freely to Holland; he says "see there, in spite of envy and slander I give you all freely back—my soldiers have taken up arms for you, my powder and lead is used in your service, my fleet has reconquered your lost places. Yes, my subjects have offered their lives for you, and now I give you everything freely . . .". Some Dutchmen (10), showing their gratitude, say, "For ever should we acknowledge your affection . . . and we will always show ourselves grateful to you who helped us".'

From the clouds (l.) appear the heads and shoulders of (11) 'Tromp and Ruyter who are calling down vengeance on a fleet of English ships (12), which is passing along the Dutch coast without sufficient convoy. They say, "Oh times, Oh times how are you changed! It seems as if Holland is no longer Holland . . .".'

A truce was made with the United Provinces in Jan. 1783, a preliminary treaty was signed on 2 Sept. 1783, and the final peace on 20 May 1784, on terms which were less favourable to the Republic than could have been secured earlier (cf. No. 6014). The basis was mutual restitution, except that England retained Negatapam and the Dutch were forced to allow British freedom of commerce in the Eastern Seas. See Edler, op. cit., Chap. IX. The prophecies of the party opposed to war with England, see No. 5712, had been fulfilled. The Stadtholder had been dilatory in war, cf. No. 6038, and was accused of treachery. The French navy had recovered the Dutch W. India Islands and the settlements in Guiana, had saved the Cape of Good Hope, and recaptured Trincomalee. This had encouraged the 'Patriots' who were opposed to the House of Orange; the men with the banner (5) represent the corps of uniformed militia, the Patriotic Free Corps which sprang up in Dutch towns in 1783. The predikanten (3) are conjecturally identified (Van Stolk) as Hofslede and Barueth, the statesman as Van der Kemp, the leader of the Patriots. The Duke of Brunswick left the Republic in October 1784 owing to the activities of the Patriots.

For the loss of prestige, naval and diplomatic, to the United Provinces by the war, see F. P. Renaut, Les Provinces-Unies et la Guerre d'Amérique, Paris, 1932, pp. 233 ff. For the decadence of the Dutch navy see the same author's Le Crépuscule d'une Marine, Paris, 1932. For the cumbrous naval administration and the position of the Stadtholder as Admiral-General without effective powers, see ibid., pp. 239 ff.

Van Stolk, No. 4461. Muller, No. 4516.

$6\frac{9}{18} \times 9\frac{7}{8}$ in.

1783

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL SATIRES

6293-6305

Series of Tête-à-tête portraits.

6293 N° XXXIV. MISS C—M.

N° XXXV. THE BON VIVANT.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street Jan^y 1; 1783,

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 625. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed . . .'. This appears to be an account of Bamber Gascoyne, but Sir C— G— [Crisp Gascoyne], his father, is here alluded to as his grandfather. There are allusions to his services as a Commissioner of 'a certain great board' (the Admiralty), and to the hospitality of his villa in Essex [Bifrons].

Miss C—m is said to be the natural daughter of a late Irish peer of that name, educated at a capital boarding school in Kensington, and to have been drugged and seduced by Lord B. When she was about to be discarded, she met the Bon Vivant who made her a settlement.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6294 N° XXXVII. THE ENTHUSIASTIC WIDOW.

N° XXXVIII. THE POPULAR PREACHER.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street, Jan^y 15; 1783.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xiv. 681 (supplement). Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of a Scottish divine, with two livings in or near London, who is LL.D. of Aberdeen, an authority on Botany and also on Chemistry. He has much fame as a pulpit orator, and is in great request for charity sermons. He has managed to divest himself of his Scottish accent.

'M^{rs} Deborah Dubious', daughter of a bankrupt drysalter of London, married an unfrocked Irish Jesuit, who had eloped from Douai with a nun. She takes a great interest in theology and their association may be platonic.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6295 N° II. M^{RS} W—N.

N° III. THE GENEROUS GALLANT.

London. Publish'd as the Act directs by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street, Feby 1783.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xv. 9. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Lord Hinchinbroke, afterwards 5th Earl of Sandwich, who has the musical and social qualities of his father without his political aptitudes. He is said to have been generous to 'impures of the ton' including Mrs. Armistead and the Bird of Paradise (Mrs. Mahon). He now devotes himself to Mrs. W—n, really Adc—k. She is Mrs. Wilson or Warton née Adcock, d. 1786, see D.N.B., here said to have been brought up as an actress by her father, an itinerant actor.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6296 N° IV. MISS G—D—N.

N° V. THE JUVENILE FINANCIER.

London. Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street, March 1; 1783.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xv. 65. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; or Memoirs of the Juvenile Financier and Miss G—dw—n.' An account of William Pitt. He 'seldom makes his appearance in public places . . . has never exchanged a syllable with Perdita, the Bird of Paradise, the Gold-finch or the Swan'. An economical liaison with his laundress while in chambers has now been followed by one with a milliner, Miss G—, the daughter of an officer, who had been decoyed and ravished, identified by H. Bleackley as Miss Goodwin.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6297 N° VII. MISS GR—HILL.

N° VIII. THE SUSPICIOUS HUSBAND.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street, April 1, 1783.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xv. 121. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Lord — who married Lady C— [sic] in 1764, had many children, till in 1773 they separated. He then reverted to his former intercourse with courtesans, until he wished to marry, when he attempted to get a divorce, on the ground of his wife's intimacy with a young musician, but was unsuccessful. He has therefore made an arrangement with Miss G—, a noted courtesan.

He is Edmund Boyle, Earl of Cork (1742-98). He m. Anne Courtenay, the marriage was dissolved in 1782. G.E.C., Complete Peerage.

The lady is Miss Greenhill, known as the Greenfinch. H. Bleackley, Ladies Fair and Frail, p. 285.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6298 N° X. MRS W—LL—MS.

N° XI. THE NAUTICAL CORNUTER.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street 1 May 1783

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xv. 177. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Captain Joseph Peyton, who was the occasion of the divorce of Mrs. W., née M—h, married 1774, and separated from her husband in Oct. 1780. He paid damages of £1,000, and is now living with Mrs. Williams.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6299 N° XIII. LADY B—NT—N.

N° XIV. THE IRRESISTIBLE CAPTAIN.

London. Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street June 1; 1783.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xv. 233. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of John Allen Cooper, nephew of Andrew Bayntun, the occasion of a suit of crim. con. brought by Andrew Bayntun against his wife, Lady Maria, and of Lady Maria Bayntun, daughter of Lord Coventry by his wife Maria Gunning, and of the circumstances which led up to the divorce. In the printed account of the trial (B.M.L., 518. c. 15./2) is an engraving of a dinner-table scene, Lady Maria Bayntun returning her Wedding-Ring to her Husband.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P. P. 5442 b.

6300 N° XVI. MRS H—Y.

N° XVII. THE DORKING HERO.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street July 1; 1783.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xv. 389. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Turner Straubensee, Lt.-Col. 52nd Foot, the occasion of a suit of crim. con. brought by John Hankey against his wife; and of the wife, Elizabeth Hankey, daughter of Andrew Thomson. They eloped together from Brighton to Dorking, where Straubensee's regiment was quartered. The Trial of Mrs. Elizabeth Hankey recounts the facts here alluded to. (B.M.L., 518. c. 15/5.)

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{3}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6301 N° XIX. MISS CHARLOTTE F—R.N° XX. THE PATRIOTIC ORATER [sic]

London, Publish'd Aug^t. 1; 1783, by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xv. 345. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Lord —, descended from an ancient family which has never been conspicuous. His speeches on 'Irish affairs, and the late proclamation for confining the trade of America of [sic] England' show that he speaks from conviction not interest. Conjecturally identified by H. Bleackley with Lord Sheffield (Baker Holroyd); this is supported by his speech on 15 April 1783. Parl. Hist. xxiii. 762-4.

Miss Charlotte Fisher (the name has been written in) is a well-known courtesan, the name Fisher assumed because it 'had been an excellent travelling appellation in the line of the impures'—an allusion to Kitty Fisher.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6302 N° XXII. MRS W—N.

N° XXIII. THE CAREFUL COMMANDER.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street, Sep^r; 1; 1783.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xv. 401. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. The man wears a ribbon and star. An account of the military career of Sir Guy Carleton (1724-1808) (then in New York), K.B.1776.¹ Mrs. W. was a Miss J—mes, who married Mr. W. and went with him to New York, where he went in 'a public capacity', and died there. She then accepted a proposal made her by the Careful Commander.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{8}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6303 N° XXV. THE CAPTIVATING MISS B—
N° XXVI. THE AMERICAN NEGOTIATOR.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street, Oct' 1; 1783.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xv. 457. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of Silas Deane, said to have carried on a correspondence with the late ministry, and therefore to have been obliged to quit France, and of his alleged association in Paris with Mlle Ro—lle, the mistress of a deceased farmer-general. He is said to be residing in a private manner in London.

Miss B. is a courtesan, the daughter of a farrier in the Borough, who eloped to escape from marriage with her father's apprentice. For Deane see No. 6288.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6304 N° XXVIII. THE ENGAGING MRS G—R.
N° XXIX. THE ACCOMPLISHED PEER.

London, Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street Nov' 1; 1783.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xv. 513. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of a peer who is a captain in the Dragoon Guards, and succeeded his uncle. He is George Evelyn Boscawen who succeeded his uncle Lord Falmouth (the Lord Pyebald of this series) in 1782.

Mrs. G—r was a Miss H—r—s, who was induced to elope by her dancing-master G—r [? Garnier] from a polite boarding school in Kensington under a promise of marriage, and has had a succession of lovers.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6305 N° XXXI. THE ELEGANT MRS O—N.
N° XXXII. THE APPROVED MAGISTRATE.

London. Publish'd by A. Hamilton Junr Fleet Street. Dec' 1; 1783.

Engraving. Town and Country Magazine, xv. 569. Two bust portraits in oval frames illustrate 'Histories of the Tête-à-Tête annexed; . . .'. An account of a Lord Mayor of London, M.P. for 'one of the most respectable cities of the world', presumably London, who is said to have refused a knighthood on presenting a congratulatory address. He received the thanks of the Corporation at the close of his year of office. Probably Nathaniel Newnham, M.P. for the City, 1780-90, and Lord Mayor 1782-3, who received the thanks of the Corporation in Oct. 1783. Ann. Reg., 1783,

¹ The identification is clear; he is, however, identified by H. Bleackley as Robert Monckton.

p. 219. M.P. Ludgershall 1793-6. Master of the Mercers Company, 1786, d. 1809. Founded, 1785, the banking firm of Newnham, Everett, Drummond, &c., afterwards Everett and Co. Beaven, Aldermen of London, City Biography, 1800, p. 26.

Mrs. O——n was Miss S——n, who married a rich young merchant who became bankrupt and died. The Magistrate is said to have gained her affections by presenting her with a snuff-box containing his portrait and a £500 note. He now makes her an allowance.

Ovals, $2\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{16}$ in.

B.M.L., P.P. 5442 b.

6306 A HOP MERCHANT.

Pub 14 Jan. 1783 by Cornell, Bruton Street, near Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Bust portrait of a man in profile to the l., his hair in black bag. His small eye, large blunt nose, and coarse mouth, combined with a backward tilt of the head, give him an expression of arrogance and stupidity. Perhaps a dancing-master.

$4\frac{3}{8} \times 3\frac{1}{4}$ in. (pl.).

6307 THE GOLDEN PIPPIN.

Pub: 9th Feb^y 1783 by H. Humphrey N^o 51 New Bond Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Head of an old woman in profile to the l., tilted upwards. She wears a cap which conceals her hair. 'Betty' is written on the print in an old hand;¹ she is evidently the Betty of the famous fruit shop in St. James's Street, the 'patriot Betty' of Mason's Heroic Epistle, 1773. 'Betty's' was a fashionable 'lounge' and centre of gossip, often mentioned by H. Walpole and others. She was Elizabeth Munro or Neale, 1730-97, called 'the Queen of apple-women' by the Gentleman's Magazine (obituary).

A burletta, 'The Golden Pippin', was first played 1772-3. Genest, v. 364.

$3\frac{15}{16} \times 3$ in. (pl.).

6308 [UNIDENTIFIED PORTRAIT.]

Pub 14th Feb 1783 by H. Humphrey, N^o 51 New Bond S^t

Engraving. Head of a man in profile to the r. wearing spectacles, with a very long beak-shaped nose.

$4\frac{5}{16} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6309 [M^{RS} HEXETER?]

Pub: 25 Feb. 1783 by H Humphrey 51 New Bond S^t

Engraving. Bust portrait of an elderly lady of demure appearance in profile to the r. Her hair is dressed with two side curls, partly covered by a cap. The shoulders and bust are small in proportion to the head. She is identified by Mr. Hawkins as 'M^{RS} Hexeter'.

$3\frac{1}{4} \times 2\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

¹ Mr. Hawkins expands this into 'Mrs Humphrey's Betty', but in 1796, the date of Gillray's Twopenny Whist, she was a much younger woman than this Betty in 1780, to whom she bears no resemblance. A resemblance is traceable (the ravages of time allowed for) to the mezzotint of 'Betty' by J. Dixon after Falconer, 1750. Chaloner Smith, p. 213.

6310 [UNIDENTIFIED PORTRAIT.]Pub 25 Feb^y 1783 by H Humphrey N^o 51 New Bond S^t

Engraving. Bust portrait of a man in profile to the l. with a whip under his l. arm. He is plainly dressed; his hair is brushed forward over his forehead and arranged in small curls on the neck.

$3\frac{9}{16} \times 3$ in. (pl.).

6311 [J. KEMBLE.]

[n.d. ? c. 1783]

Engraving. Bust portrait in profile to the r. of John Philip Kemble (1757–1823) (identified by Mr. Hawkins). Kemble did not appear on the London stage till 1783 when he played Hamlet at Drury Lane.

$2\frac{3}{4} \times 1\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6312 [UNIDENTIFIED PORTRAIT.]Pub ¹Feb. 1783 by H Humphrey N^o 51 New Bond Street.

Engraving. Sketch of an old man seated, turned three-quarters to the r. In his r. hand he holds a candle-stick in which is a lighted candle; in his l. what may be a print. He is drawn as far as the waist, below which his crossed legs from the knee downwards are sketched. He wears a cocked hat, the points over the ears, spectacles, and a plain coat buttoned to the chin. On a small round table (r.) are tea-things. Perhaps a portrait of a connoisseur.

$4\frac{7}{8} \times 3\frac{1}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6313 THE RIGHT HON^{BLE} CHARLES JAS FOX.

[n.d. 1783?]

[After Bunbury.]

Stipple. A copy of No. 5878. Probably published while Fox was Secretary of State.

$5\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6314 CITY COALITION.

WD. [Dent.]

Pub by W Dent N^o 116 Strand July 11. 1783.Colley.

Engraving (coloured impression). A stout alderman, standing T.Q. to the l., clasps to his chest a turtle, whose mouth he is kissing. He wears a long furred alderman's gown over a laced coat and waistcoat. Beneath the title is engraved:

*Of all Life's Dainties, says K—tch—n,
Turtle is the most bewitching.*

Henry Kitchin of Berners Street was alderman of Farringdon Within, elected in 1774. He was sheriff in 1778–9, d. 1786. Was twice Master of the Curriers' Company. Beaven, Aldermen of London, ii. 136. See City Biography, 1800, p. 119. See No. 6260.

$8\frac{1}{4} \times 6\frac{7}{16}$ in.

¹ Date illegible.

6315 THE ITALIAN POET.

WD. [Dent.]

Pub^d by W. Dent. Oct^r 10th 1783. N^o 116 Strand.

Engraving. Portrait of a man walking in profile to the r. stooping forwards. From his pocket project a book, Flames of Newgate, and two papers or letters inscribed King of Sardinia and Empress of Russia. A jagged strip also hangs from his pocket which resembles a parchment indenture; this is inscribed Lancet. He is saying, Ven I vos in Rome de Boys vos call me de little Pope.

The profile has a certain resemblance to portraits of Alfieri (1749-1803). Alfieri visited London in 1768, 1770-1, and 1783-4, when, however, he did not, according to his Autobiography, reach England till December.

7×5 in. (pl.).

6316 [WOODFORD RICE ESQ.]¹

[1783]

Engraving. Portrait of a man W.L. and full-face, wearing a coat with military facings and epaulettes. He stands with his r. hand on his hip; in his l. he holds out an open book; on the r. hand page is inscribed The Rutland Volunteers, on the l. is the portrait of himself here described. A chair (l.) and a table (r.) are behind him, on the chair are a cockaded hat and a sword, on the table writing-materials and papers, one inscribed Ode. On the wall is a plan showing two camps divided by a river inscribed Villa Vellia Ford. The camp on the north of the river is The Combined Army of France & Spain consisting of 40000 Men at 3 Miles distance. Between this camp and the river is the Spanish Military Camp. South of the river is Gen^l Burgoynes small Brigade 3000 men.

Woodford Rice published a satirical poem in 1783 called The Rutland Volunteer influenza'd or a receipt to make a Patriot, a Soldier or a Poet (Kearsley). This print appears to have been designed as its frontispiece, but is not in either of the B.M.L. copies of the book. On p. 5 are the lines

Valentia's Plains shall tell the story;
Villa-Vellia-Ford will sound the glory.

To this is appended a lengthy note describing the storming of the camp of Villa Vellia which closed the campaign in Portugal in 1762. 'Capt. Rice had the honour of contributing to the glory of that night, and received his share of the plunder. . . . Capt. Rice has no objection to wear a red ribband, get a higher rank in the army, or be appointed to an Irish Government.'

9×8 in.

6317 [M^{RS} WELTJE IN HER SHOP IN PALL MALL.][*'Capt. Hays del.'*² n.d. ? 1783]Ch^s Bretherton. Published as the Act Directs.

Engraving. The interior of a shop showing the window (l.) and a semi-circular counter or bar behind which sits a buxom lady (r.) in a chair, her head in profile to the l. On the narrow counter are pears, apples, and three dishes of fruit. Displayed in the window are pine-apples, pottles of fruit, glasses, &c., and a plant in a pot. Bunches of grapes hang in front of the window-panes; rows of glasses, glass bottles, and jars stand on narrow ledges across the divisions between the panes of glass. On three shelves (r.) above Mrs. Weltje's head are ranged jelly glasses, &c. For Weltje see No. 5888.

¹ Written on the print.² A MS. note by Miss Banks, who has also written 'M^{rs} Weltjie. Fruit Shop Pall-Mall'. On the back of another impression is written in an old hand 'next door neighbour to M^r Neville Pall Mall'.

$7\frac{1}{8} \times 10\frac{11}{16}$ in.

6318 FLORIZEL GRANTING INDEPENDENCY TO PERDITA.

[1 Feb. 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine, Jan. 1783. Mrs. Robinson (Perdita) seated on a settee (r.), her head in profile to the l., checks with her r. hand the advance towards her of the Prince of Wales; in her l. she holds a document. He says, Submit to my Royal Will; she answers, Declare me Independent and then —. On the wall is a framed picture of Danaë receiving the shower of gold; Danaë resembles Perdita, but all the heads are poorly characterized. The Prince's sword lies on the floor, his hat, cloak, and writing materials are on a circular table (l.). A small dog barks at the Prince. A festooned curtain (r.) and a patterned carpet make part of the design.

About this time Perdita, whose relations with the Prince had been broken off, was induced to return to him his bond to pay her £20,000 on coming of age; it was valueless, but she threatened to enforce it. Charles Fox acted as an intermediary and secured her an annuity of £500 a year. D.N.B.; Huish, Memoirs of George IV, i. 77. See Nos. 5767, &c., 6117, 6221, 6266, 6319, 6320.

$5\frac{7}{16} \times 3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6319 PARADISE REGAIN, D.

SB [? Gillray].

*London Publish'd as the Act directs Feby 20 1783 by J. Langham in the Great Piazza Covent Garden.*¹

Engraving. Design in an oval. Fox (c.) making addresses to Mrs. Robinson (Perdita) who stands demurely (r.) with her arms folded. The Prince of Wales (l.) watches with amusement from behind a tree. Fox's hands are clasped in an attitude of prayer, he is saying, Sweet Robenet your Eyes Jet your Teeth are lilly White your Cheeks are Roses Lips are Poses and your Nose is Wonderous Bright. Perdita wears a small cap of muslin and lace, ringlets rest on her neck, her petticoats are voluminous and adorned in front with a wide frilled apron. The Prince, who wears his star, clasps the trunk of the tree behind which he stands, saying Ha! Ha! Ha! Poor Charly. Trees (r. and l.) are indicated in the background.

For Perdita, the Prince, and Fox see Nos. 5767, &c., 6117, and 6318, &c.

$7\frac{1}{4} \times 11\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6320 [MRS ROBINSON AND FOX]

[? c. 1783]

Engraving. Fox and Perdita dancing together, she as a bacchante, he as Bacchus or perhaps Falstaff. She (l.) holds out a glass in her r. hand, a garland of leaves hangs over her l. shoulder. Fox is wearing a ruff, tunic, breeches, and shoes with rosettes and has a garland of leaves round his hips, he holds a long wand in his l. hand. Both are crowned with leaves. An open book is on the ground. On the wall which forms a background are two framed portraits (T.Q.L.): a man with horns (l.) and a woman holding an open book (r.), probably Mr. and Mrs. Robinson.

¹ Beneath this is an almost obliterated publication line showing the word Sep.

For Mrs. Robinson see No. 5767, &c., and for her association with Fox, Nos. 6117, 6221, 6266, 6318, 6319.

4 × 6 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6321 THE ROYAL ADONIS.

['E. T. ?']

March 14, 1783 Pub. by Mrs D Archery S^t James Street.

Engraving. Caricature portrait of one of the royal dukes, probably of William Henry, Duke of Gloucester, 1743-1805. He stands in profile to the l. wearing a sword and bag-wig, his hat under his l. arm. His coat has a fur collar and the star of the Garter; over it he wears the Garter ribbon. His features and the arrangement of his hair are caricatured. The open mouth, double chin, and thick neck, the recession of the hair on the temples, which are here conspicuous, are noticeable even in the mezzotint by Earlom (1771) after Hamilton.

6 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6322 LES CAPRICES DE LA GOUTE (LINE OF MUSIC), BALLET ARTHRITIQUE.

[P. Sandby.]

Published as the Act directs Jan^y 1 1783 by P. Sandby S^t George's Row, Oxford Turnpike.

Aquatint. A room in the establishment of Abraham Buzaglo, whose treatment of the gout by 'muscular exercises' is here satirized. Men with their limbs strapped into wooden cases are performing exercises. A stout man whose arms are extended by a wooden frame or jacket strapped across chest and arms, his thighs similarly encased and extended, capers on one leg, the other is swathed in a stocking (perhaps one of the 'bootikins' described by Horace Walpole, Letters, x. 342, 30 Oct. 1778, &c.). On each side of him is a man in a contorted attitude, with legs or leg encased (the other leg being swathed). Each wooden case is inscribed Buzaglo.

In the background (l.) Buzaglo himself, apparently, stands in profile to the l. superintending his assistant, who is strapping the leg of a patient into a case; the other leg is already encased; his crutches are beside him. Against the centre of the back wall is an elaborate stove, inscribed Buzaglo. On the wall (r. and l.) hang two pairs of leg-cases.

In front of the design, as if decorating the front of a stage, is a placard nailed above a pair of crossed crutches:

PATENT MUSCULAR HEALTH-RESTORING EXERCISE.

I. It takes off within the hour all Pains from the Shoulders, Elbows, Sides, Back, Knees, Calves & Ancles.

II. It radically cures the Cramp, dissipates callous Swellings round the Knees & Ancles originating from the Gout.

III. It restores wasted Calves to their former state of fullness of Flesh.

IV. It greatly facilitates the Discharge of the Gravel.

Abraham Buzaglo, a Jew (d. 1788), first attracted notice as an inventor of heating apparatus, then set up as a gout doctor, professing to cure by muscular exercises only. He advertised extensively and was considered a quack. Walpole, Letters, x. 168-9 and n. A. Buzaglo, A Treatise on the Gout, 3rd ed., 1778.

Cf. Anstey's Election Ball 1776, probably an allusion to Buzaglo:

No—I'd have thee to know that I walks pretty stout
 Zince I'v vound an invallible cure for the Gout
 Vor the Doctor I've try'd has with Wedges and Pegs
 Zo stretched out my zinews and hammer'd my Legs,
 Zo zuppl'd the Joint by Tormenting the Tendon
 My Heel I can raise, and my Toe I can bend down.

A humorous handbill advertising the print calls it 'a companion to Jason & Medee, Ballet Tragique', see No. 5910.

14 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 18 $\frac{1}{16}$ in.

6323 THE DOCTER HIMSELF POURING OUT HIS WHOLE SOUL FOR 1^s

I B [J. Boyne.]

London Published as the Act Directs Feby 12 1783 by R. Rusted N^o 3 Bridge St Ludgate Hill Engraving. Dr. James Graham, the famous quack, stands on a small platform or pedestal, addressing an audience of both sexes who sit and stand in front of him. He stands rather to the r. of the design looking l., his r. hand raised, his left holding a rolled paper as in No. 6324. He wears a bag-wig and ruffled shirt. Those of the audience whose faces are visible are probably portraits, but only Fox, Wilkes, and (?) Perdita Robinson can be identified. Three persons sit on a raised seat immediately under the lecturer and with their backs towards him: a young man puts his arm round a lady who draws back with a coy expression; the third is Fox who sits gloomily impassive, his head supported on his hand, perhaps annoyed at the way in which Mrs. Robinson looks towards the man standing next her, who stands on the extreme r. in profile to the l. He is slim and wears the fashionable riding-dress but is very ugly. Two rows of people sit on forms facing the lecturer. Others stand on the l. Wilkes is in profile to the r., an elderly beau with receding hair, sunken eyes, and broken teeth.

The lecture in question may be that on 'Generation &c.' satirized in the Rambler's Magazine, where it was, according to the Doctor, 'a poor nonsensical mutilated jumble of stuff full of false facts and representations, and not one fourth part of the matter or size of the real original lecture as I delivered it and as it is here printed'. Preface to 'A Lecture on the Generation Increase and Improvement of the Human Species! . . . with a glowing, brilliant and supremely delightful Description of the Structure and most irresistibly Genial Influences of the CELESTIAL BED!!!'.

Beneath the title is engraved:

*How Fluent Nonsense Trickles from his Tongue
How Sweet his Lectures neither S^d nor Sung*
Pope.

For Graham see Nos. 5766, 6120, 6324-7. For Fox and Perdita see No. 6117, &c.

10 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 9 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6324 THE DOCTOR HIMSELF.

[1 Mar. 1783]

Woodcut. From the Rambler's Magazine, Feb. 1783. Portrait (H.L.) in an oval of James Graham, the quack doctor, looking to the r. He wears a bag-wig in the prevailing fashion with horizontal side curls, and a ruffled shirt as in No. 6323. His r. hand is partly visible holding a bulky rolled MS. evidently the text of one of his lectures.

Beneath the portrait is an inscription in which the arrangement, division of words, punctuation, and use of capitals is such as to make it appear at first sight to be in some unknown language. It begins, Tot- | Hele, Ar n Edsci, Ent . . . | It runs, i.e. [To the learned, scientific, ingenious, celestial, rhetorical, whimsical, satirical and moving Doctor, this head is most submissively dedicated by an admirer of his talents, a lover of his warm doctrines, and his most obedient humble servant The Rambler. Feb. 1783].

See Nos. 5766, 6120, 6323, 6325, 6326, 6327.

3 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 3 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

6325 THE QUACKS.

Pub^d March 17 1783 by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. The two notorious quacks of the period, Graham and Katerfelto, demonstrating their marvels, one against the other, each standing on a stage. Graham (l.), in profile to the r., is on a stage shaped like an E.O. table, circular and surrounded by the letters E.O. (Graham's establishment in Pall Mall was used for gambling, and E.O. tables there were broken by the Westminster justices on 1 Aug. 1782, see No. 6120.) He stands astride a long cylinder, supported on a vase-shaped pillar inscribed insulated; each foot rests on a circular stool supported on a vase-shaped pillar, these are the glass insulators which he used in his electrical demonstrations. The cylinder is inscribed Prime conductor Gentle restorer Largest in the World. In his l. hand he holds up a phial or cylinder inscribed Medicated tube, he points at Katerfelto, saying, That round Vigour! that full-toned juvenile Virility which Speaks so cordially and so Effectually home to the Female Heart, Conciliating its Favour & Friendship, and rivetting its Intensest Affections away thou German Maggot killer, thy Fame is not to be Compar'd to mine (probably a quotation from one of his lectures). He wears a physician's full-curved wig, a ruffled shirt, and laced waistcoat.

At his feet stands a duck, on a label coming from its beak are the words Quack. Quack. Quack. and a thistle indicating Graham's Scottish origin. Other objects on the platform are the model of a cannon inscribed Cælestial Musick and two jars, one inscribed Leyden Vial Charg'd with Load Stones Aromatic Spices, &c. &c.; the other Tin foil or Antidote.

Above the farther side of the platform (l.) appear the heads and shoulders of the two gigantic porters who were part of his establishment, see Nos. 5766, 6346. One (l.) labelled Gog stands full-face, a placard round his neck: Temple of Health & of Hymen, the name of the establishment at Schomberg House, Pall Mall, in allusion to his 'celestial bed' for the cure of sterility. The other footman, Magog, is in profile to the r. Attached to the wall above their heads is a stuffed alligator inscribed Cured of the Dropsey & Gout in the Stomach. Beneath this is a shelf, on it are a pestle and mortar, a bust, perhaps of Galen, and a monkey seated in profile to the r. holding up a phial in imitation of Graham.

Graham had lived for two years in Philadelphia and had learned something of Franklin's experiments in electricity.

Katerfelto's stage is a flimsy rectangular structure supported on thin planks, with cross planks, one decorated with a skull and cross-bones, the other by insects, &c. (a butterfly, centipede, moth, and worm). He crouches over a cylindrical conductor supported on a pillar, similar to, but not identical with, that of his rival; it is inscribed, Positively Charg'd; his feet rest on the base of its pillar, a trident on its other end touches a barrel-shaped cylinder or grindstone which is being turned by the Devil, who says, away with it my Dear Son I'll find fire eternally for you. Katerfelto embraces his cylinder with one arm, while his r. hand points at Graham; sparks come from his thumb and forefinger, from a spike on the front of his cylinder, and also drop from his chin. He is saying Dare you was see de Vonders of the Varld, which make de hair Stand on tiptoe, Dare you was see mine Tumb and mine findgar, Fire from mine findger and Feaders on mine Tumb—dare you was see de Gun Fire viddout Ball or powder, dare you was see de Devil at mine A—e—O Vonders! Vonders! Vonderfull Vonders!

The chain of sparks from Katerfelto's chin drops on to the touch-hole of a toy cannon at his feet so as to fire it in the direction of Graham. His attitude and profile express intense excitement, and his whole person appears charged with electricity; the hair on his forehead stands up, his long pigtail queue flies out behind him as do his coat-tails. Other objects on his platform, besides the electrical appliance which he is grasping, the devil's cylinder and the cannon, are a Leyden jar, a small rectangular box inscribed Arcanum sublimum, Mask'd Battery, a toy windmill, a square bottle inscribed Tinct' Aurum Vivae, a small pent-house supported on a stick inscribed Thunder House, a bag or small sack inscribed Aurora Borealis, and an insect resembling a scorpion. Beneath the platform is a Reservoir for Dead Insects destroy'd by D' Katterf[elto]; insects are faintly indicated as if seen through a screen.

Graham was a compound of quack, fashionable doctor, and visionary, see Nos. 5766, 6284, 6323-7. Katerfelto, who appeared in London about 1782, was quack, conjurer, and travelling showman, see No. 6326. Both made great use of advertisement, in handbills, placards, and in the newspapers. Graham also published a number of pamphlets.

8 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{7}{16}$ in.

6326 THE WONDERFUL MOST WONDERFUL D^R KATE—HE—FELT—HO, HAVING PACK'D UP HIS ALLS IS TRUDGING
AWAY WITH HIS FAMILY & ALL HIS LITTLE NECESSARY
APPENDICES TO HIS OWN DEAR COUNTRY—WEEP ENG-LAND! WEEP! OH!

Pub 31 March 1783 by H. Humphrey N^o 51 New Bond Street.

Engraving. Katerfelto walking rapidly, in profile to the r., leaning forward under the weight of a peep-show or magic lantern strapped to his shoulders. He wears military uniform, his hat decorated with the skull and cross-bones of the Death's Head Huzzars in which he claimed to have served. At his l. side hangs an enormous sabre, its scabbard inscribed 10000000000 Caterpillars slain in one year. In his hat is a curious erection, three folds of which are visible, inscribed respectively, Geography, Opticks, and Astronomy. Below the first is a hemisphere or circular map, below the second, three pairs of double eye-glasses, below the third another map in a circle. In his r. hand he carries an electrical implement like that which he clasps in No. 6325, but smaller. It is inscribed Gentle Restorer. In his l. hand is a bag inscribed 5000 English Guineas. His magic lantern is inscribed Lady Catarena; from its lens rays are spreading, inscribed Wonders, Wonders, Wonders; the rays strike on three insects of fantastic appearance, probably representing the objects which he was accustomed to show through his microscope. (In an advertisement in the Morning Post, July 1782, he says, that by its aid those insects which caused the late influenza will be seen as large as a bird; and in a drop of water the size of a pin's head will be seen 50,000 insects. Sampson, Hist. of Advertising, p. 404.) Other rays project behind him from his coat-tails and his hat, the former inscribed Physic & Philosophy, the latter Fire. He is saying, Galante Show, here be de Death of Philosophy & de Glory of Legerdemain, here be de Vonders of all the Kings in Europe, Asia, Africa & America.

He is followed by his wife and children, who are on a smaller scale. The woman holds a doll-like little girl in each arm, a little boy walks behind her clutching at her garments. All four have small horns growing from their foreheads and cloven feet. The woman, who is plainly dressed, says Be good children, & you shall both go to Germany & ride in the Coach. The two children say Aynt my Daddy a Cunning Man, Mammy? and Ayn't de Englishmen great Fools Mammy? The little boy says Is my Daddy a Devil, Mammy?

See No. 6325.

$8\frac{1}{4} \times 12\frac{7}{16}$ in.

6327 THE WEST COUNTRY PUFFING FAMILY.

Published by J. Mills, April 9; and to be had at N^o 51, Bond-Street.

Engraving, heading to a song printed in three columns. Five heads, much caricatured, arranged in two pairs, facing each other, in profile, the centre head being full-face and superimposed upon the two heads which are back to back. On the l., in profile to the r., is 'honest old Coward' who faces 'Squire Richard'. On the r. 'Dick Howard', in profile to the r., faces 'Miss Bridget'. In the centre is an old woman wearing spectacles, 'Goody Gobble Cock'. The song is 'To be sung in character, to the Tune of an "Old Woman clothed in Grey"'. The song relates the efforts of all to rekindle a candle with a glowing wick by blowing or 'puffing' at it. The first and last verses are:

I.

'A Family lived in the West,
Of whom I this Story indite,
Whose Mouths were the drollest confest
That ever gave Mirrh [sic] or Delight.

VIII.

Thus Puffing's become now the Trade,
Of *Katerfelto and *Graham well known,
Whose Mouths confessedly are made,
For nought else but Puffing alone.

* Two Travelling Philosophers.'

'This Song is dedicated to those Princes of Puffs, who exist at their Wholesale Puff a de Puff Warehouses, the Sign of the Devil and Black Cat, Piccadilly; the Temple of Health, Pall Mall; the Brazen Head, S^t Stephen's Chapel [the House of Commons]; and those numourous Tribe of Puffs whose Names are on the Back Door, with Lamps in the Passage, &c. &c.

By their most humble Servant, LIVY PUFF, Jun^r.'

A satire on the advertisements so lavishly circulated in handbills, placards, and the newspapers by Katerfelto, who professed to receive advice from a black cat, and Dr. Graham at Schomberg House, Pall Mall. See Nos. 6325, 6326, &c.

3 $\frac{1}{8}$ × 12 in.

6328 APOLLO AND THE MUSES, INFLICTING PENANCE ON DR POMPOSO, ROUND PARNASSUS.

[Gillray.]

Pub^d July 29th 1783 by Holland N^o 66 Drury Lane.

Engraving. Dr. Johnson, a rope round his neck, is being driven from l. to r. by Apollo and the nine muses, who follow him with uplifted scourges and birch rods. Johnson is clad only in breeches, shoes, and stockings; on his head is a dunce's cap shaped like a four-sided pyramid, on this is inscribed the names of poets whose lives he had written: Milton, Otway, Waller, Gray, Shenston[e], Lyttelton, Gay, Denman, Collins &c. &c. &c. Over his shoulder he carries a placard inscribed, For defaming that Genius I could never emulate, by criticism without Judgment;—and endeavouring to cast the beauties of British Poetry into the hideous shade of oblivion. A tear falls from his eye and he is saying, I acknowledge my transgressions, and my sins are ever before me; an asterisk indicates a note in the margin: Vide The Last Sermon at S^t Dunstons. Apollo and the Muses wear classical draperies and laurel wreaths; Apollo holds the end of the rope which is round Johnson's neck; his head is surrounded by a halo. Above the ground by Johnson (r.) are two books, each with a pair of wings, in full flight: An Essay on the Milk of Human kindness dedicated to D^r Johnson as a Man, and An Essay on Envy dedicated to D^r Johnson as an Author.

Clouds and a rocky mountain form the background. On the summit of the mountain is a small circular temple behind which is the sun; Pegasus flies near the summit.

This is the print which was being discussed at Sir Joshua Reynolds's when Johnson entered, and being told of the caricature, said to Dr. Farr: 'Sir I am very glad to hear this. I hope the day will never arrive when I shall neither be the object of calumny or ridicule, for then I shall be neglected and forgotten.' Johnsonian Miscellanies, ii. 419–20. Churchill had called Johnson Pomposo in The Ghost, 1762. See also No. 6103.

This print (presumably) appears, price 2s., in the 'Catalogue' appended to Jordan's Elixir of Life . . . published by W. Holland, 50 Oxford Street, 1789 as 'Apollo and the Muses whipping D^r Johnson round Parnassus'.

9 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6329 THE CUCKOLDS REEL.

[1 April 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine, Mar. 1783. Three men, each with a pair of long horns, dance holding hands. On the r., in profile to the l., is a man in judge's wig and long gown. He says What Monsters our Wives have made of us Sir R——d! who would be an Advocate for Matrimony. The centre figure, evidently Sir Richard Worsley, see Nos. 6105–12, is dressed as a military officer with a gorget round his neck. He answers, Never Mind! Caesar & Pompey were both of them horn'd. The man on the l., facing the judge, is dressed as a naval officer and holds a telescope in his r. hand. He says A sailor who Marries deserves to be a Cuckold. While an Admiral is at Sea his Frigate at home must be mann'd.

Two animals seated on brackets on the wall supply the music for the dance. An ape (l.) plays a flute; a very ill-drawn goat (r.) plays a fiddle.
5 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 3 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

6330 [A COURTSHIP.]

Pub^d April 17th 1783 by H Humphrey New Bond Street.

Engraving. The interior of a well-furnished parlour or drawing-room. An elderly lady stands (l.) turning her head in profile to the r. towards a man who bends towards her, clasping his hands on his breast in an attitude of supplication, his hat under his l. arm. She holds a long stick in her l. hand. The heads of two servants peep through a partly-open door in the back wall. Against this wall (r.) appears part of a settee on the back of which two monkeys are crouching. Above it is a framed picture of a man, back view, wearing a hat and long cloak. On the l. wall is an oval mirror in front of which, on a bracket, sits a parrot. The floor is covered by a carpet with an arabesque pattern. Beneath the design is etched:

*Refulgent shine
Goddess benign,
With looks divine,
Tell me thou'rt mine,
Or ah! with Grief I pine.*

Apparently a satire on the courtship of an elderly and wealthy widow.
5 $\frac{13}{16}$ × 4 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

6331 THE ROBIN HOOD SOCIETY.

Pub^d May 25. 1783 by W Humphrey. N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. A meeting of this well-known debating society. The chairman, on the extreme r., leans over a rostrum looking down at the speaker, Jeffery Dunstan, who stands below him on a low three-legged stool, holding up his l. hand in his wonted attitude, as if crying 'old wigs', knock-kneed, his sack over his l. shoulder, with his ragged clothes, open shirt, ungartered stockings, and unlatched shoes, see No. 5637. The audience (l.) sit or stand facing the chairman in tiers, one above the other. They are all caricatured, and of plebeian appearance, their expressions are either imbecile, sly, or saturnine. On the side of the rostrum is engraved, Q. to be Debat.d. next Thursday Eve^s 'How Far is it from the 1st of Aug^t to the foot of Westminster Bridge.

A panelled wall forms the background. In the centre of this is a framed portrait of Jeffery Dunstan, his r. hand raised, wearing a civic chain, and holding a mace, the emblems of his mayoralty of Garrat. The frame is decorated with the arms of the City of London.

This debating society was for long a subject of ridicule, see Nos. 3260, 3539, and 4860, the common accusation being that the members were ignorant, atheistic, and factious tradesmen.

6¼ × 8¼ in.

6332 A SCENE IN GLASGOW, OR—SIR DONALD DICTATE IN THE DUMPS

Pub^d Oct^r 17th 1783. by W. Wells, N^o 132 Fleet Street.

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). A procession of men moving slowly from l. to r. led by a stout, plainly dressed man holding a thread which is attached to the noses of some of those who follow him, the others being onlookers, except for a man immediately behind the leader. The labels from the mouths of the characters are a prominent part of the design.

The leader, 'Sir Donald', in profile to the r. on the extreme r. says, Damn that mad Fellow I was in hopes he was half way at America by this time, he'll cut my leading strings as sure as a Gun, I'll never meddle with a Scotch thistle again aw my Life; I'll lead as lang as I can tho', I have good connections I'll take care none of our house shall give him Consignments, and as his Backs turn'd I'll do everything to hurt him: the Edin^r & Paisley Bank are twa severe cuts also, I wish the Stocks at the Devil: we had no Buissness we them. The man behind him, also in profile to the r., holds up the thread, which he is about to cut with a knife. His coat is of military cut. He says, Poor souls I'll set em all loose I shall always Glory in serving the Town I receiv'd my existance in—Damn all Norlands. I fancy he never felt before.

The foremost man with the thread attached to his nose walks with a stick under his arm, saying I mun een follow him, he set me up here & is my Brother in Law; I have ofien thought of cutting the string we the knife I got in Virginia: & have thro' necessity kept ever since. The next man on the string holds out his r. hand saying, Truth her nain sell man [? mun] gang we the Cheild. I'm obliged to do every thing he bids me, tho' I could do muckle better without him: I wish he would mind his ayn Bank, he has an excelent house & Sallary, for walking the Cross four hours every Forenoon: I hope ne body ill tell him what I have said: tho' its true. The next man on the thread is thin and lank, his arms hang beside him, the hands thrust in the pockets of his coat; he says God Folks man [? mun] Just do in this World as ether Folks does.

The last three of the procession walk together, a joint label issuing from all three mouths: they say, Altho' we are convinced he is possessed of no merit sufficient to entitle him to lead mankind, we must at present humor his dictatorial inclination, other way he won't discount our Bills. Best hope the day is almost at hand, when his fall will be more rapid then his Rise. Memento Paisley Bank Donald.¹

¹ The four last words in large letters.

Behind the procession stand three spectators. The first (r.), immediately behind the man with the knife, says, By the Lord Tam I give you credit for that. A short stout man between (but standing behind) the second and third of those led by the nose, says Hem Hum A Hem. The third, near the back of the procession, points with his r. forefinger towards 'Sir Donald'. He wears a civic chain round his neck and is saying, True he has a long Arrangement of followers, I have many more, but do not expose them so much, I flatter their different humours: but he wants the Graces. it gives me infinite pleasure that cutting fellow is gone, he had like to have give me a home slice last year; but all blew over when I was in London. Damn the Glasgow Journals.

Beneath the design is inscribed:

*In pride in reasoning pride his Error lies,
He quites his sphere & rush into the Skies;
Pride is still aiming at the Blest abodes,
Bankers would be Merchants, Merchants, Lords.*

*Who knows but he whose hand the Lightning forms,
Who heaves old Ocean, & who wings the Storms;
Pours fierce ambition, in a Caesars mind;
Or turns young Amon loose, to scourge Mankind.¹*

8 $\frac{3}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6333 THE MONTGOLSIER [sic], A FIRST RATE OF THE FRENCH AERIAL NAVY.

Observator del.

Recordum Sculp^t

Pub by E. Dachery N. II S^t James Street, the 25 of October 1783

Engraving. A Frenchman, in profile to the l., seated on a globe. To the globe are fixed vertical rods, the upper ends of which terminate in four smaller globes which are thus supported above the principal one; chains link these four globes to a fifth globe above, and slightly longer than, the other four. On this fifth globe is a child from whose bare posteriors six balls are being projected. On two (r.) of the four globes are the heads of an ass, and of a man wearing a fool's cap; to their jaws are attached reins which are held by the Frenchman whose r. hand is extended in the attitude of an orator. On the third globe is a monkey's head, which more resembles that of a sheep; the fourth globe is blank. The intention of the satire is explained by the inscription beneath the title, A F—t — An Ass — A Fool — A Monkey — A Nothing.

On the large globe on which the aeronaut sits is a cannon, its muzzle projecting upwards and to the l. beyond the contour of the globe. In the centre is the winged head of a bald and bearded man in profile to the l. Below is the stern and part of the side of a man-of-war, with cannon projecting from port-holes.

This is apparently the first reaction of an English caricaturist to the possibilities of aerial navigation² (the phrase was used immediately after the experiments of the brothers Montgolfier, see Scots Magazine, 1783, p. 651).

¹ It appears strange that so elaborate a print on a matter of, apparently, local interest only should have been published in London. The London newspapers for Oct. 1783 throw no light on its subject.

² Prints in a similar spirit were issued in France and in Germany, see F. L. Bruel, Collection de Vinck, pp. 403 ff., where they are catalogued under 'Les folies du jour'.

The first experiment was made at Vivarais on 5 June 1783. This caricature probably relates to the ascent of a balloon from Versailles on 10 Sept. with a wicker cage attached to it in which were a sheep, a cock, and a duck. Faujas de St. Fond, Description des Expériences de la Machine Aerostatique, Paris, 1783.

See also Nos. 6334, 6335, and for applications of the balloon to political satire,¹ Nos. 6275, 6284, 6287, 6288, 6289, 6290.

11 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 8 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6334 THE ASCENT OF THE AERIAL BALLOON.

Jn^o Lodge sc.

Engraved for the European Magazine.

Published Nov^r 1st 1783, by I. Fielding, Pater Noster Row.

Engraving. From the European Magazine, iv. 272. A completely circular globe to which is attached the handle of a shallow basket containing a cock, a sheep, and a duck. It is watched by a group of French spectators, one of whom, a tailor, kneels on the ground holding a pair of shears with which he has just cut the cord of the balloon. One man (l.) looks through a telescope, a petit-maitre (r.) looks through an eye-glass. A monk, a jesuit, and a man in a furred robe and cap resembling a magician or quack are among the spectators. From a circular tower (r.) an ape looks through a telescope, on his r. is an owl wearing bands, on his l. a man wearing a mortar-board cap and bands.

In the background small figures run up a hill-side. The print illustrates a paragraph which expresses scepticism of reports that animals and even the inventor, Montgolfier, had ascended into the air. See No. 6333, &c.

A sequel, The Descent of the Air-Balloon (1 Dec.), faces p. 353 of the European Magazine.

6 × 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6335 THE AIR BALLOON OR A TRIP TO THE MOON.

Publish'd 02th [sic] Nov^r by W. Humphrey N^o 227 Strand.

Engraving. A circular globe floating in the air just above the heads of three standing spectators. A witch on a broom-stick (l.) flies with her back to the balloon at which she directs a blast, labelled Inflammable Air, from her posteriors; she is suckling a cat which sits on the broom-stick. A man standing below (l.) holds a torch in the 'Inflammable Air' saying How blue it burns. On the r. two men look up at the balloon. One, in profile to the l., wearing pigtail queue, looped hat, and ruffled shirt, says We shall now have a Lunatick Journal. The letters F.R.S. inscribed at his feet show that he is a Fellow of the Royal Society. Behind him is a more plainly dressed man wearing a bob-wig and no hat; he holds up a card saying I've a card for y^e Georgium Sidus; he is A.S.S.

One of a number of satires on balloon-ascents, see No. 6333, &c.

The 'Georgium Sidus' was the planet (afterwards renamed Uranus) discovered by Sir W. Herschel in 1781 and so named by him in honour of George III. D.N.B.

8 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 13 $\frac{5}{16}$ in.

¹ Ascents to the moon by a kite had been an earlier subject of satire, see No. 4163, P[itt] and Proteus or a Political Flight to the Moon, 1766, and No. 4212, A New Flying Machine . . . 1769.

6336 THE BLESSINGS OF PEACE, OR, PROCLAMATION UPON PROCLAMATION.

[1 Dec. 1783]

Engraving. From the Rambler's Magazine. A street scene showing some of the noises of a London street. In the centre stands a man who appears to have been chased from his house by a virago, who threatens him with a long ladle; on one of his shoulders sits a parrot, on the other a magpie; a child at the woman's side is crying. A dustman ringing a large hand-bell shouts Dust ho! A mechanic sharpens a two-handed saw. A fish hawker (l.) with one basket of fish on his head and another under his arm calls Come buy my flounders. A young woman (r.) turns the handle of a hurdy-gurdy or vielle which she holds under her arm. In the foreground (l.) two large dogs are fighting.

Peace was proclaimed in London on 6 Oct., see Nos. 6267, 6351.

$3\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{13}{16}$ in.

6337 THE CRIES OF THE CURATES, OR THE GROWING EVIL.

[n.d. c. 1783]

Roulette mezzotint. A satire on the taking of orders by ex-army officers at the close of the American War. A man stands full-face, dressed half as a military officer, half as a parson. His hat, his hair, his shirt, his waistcoat, his breeches, are military on his r. side (the l. side of the print). The darker shading of the dress on his l. side indicates a clerical black. His r. breeches pocket hangs inside out to show that it is empty. In his r. hand he holds a spear, in his l. a book. A long label issues from each side of his head; that on the r. of the print encloses the words, Hear me O Lord for I am poor & needy; that on the l., and in peace I jogg on to the Devil. By his r. side is inscribed The modern call, and beneath his feet, The Reverend Captain Pennyles & many others half dyed and left unfinished 1778 by .

He stands in a landscape between two buildings: on the l. is a prison inscribed Kings Bench. On the extreme r. the corner of a plain four-storied house appears; from the highest window hangs out a flag or sign inscribed, Dying in all its Branches. The worst Reds dyed Black: or any Colour be it ever so bad; Enquire at the Key and Crook, in S^t As . . h, & at the three Cats-Heads in He . . ford. In the distance (r.) among trees is a church, inscribed Dernier resort.

On the military side of the soldier-parson is a large paper or scroll obscuring part of the prison; it is inscribed:

*No saucy remorse
Intrudes on my course,
Nor impertinent notions of evil;
So there's Claret in store,
In peace I've my Whore.*

On the other side (r.) an open book, Trusler's Sermons, lies on the ground. The Rev. John Trusler, see No. 5200, published sermons in engraved script to resemble handwriting which could be read in the pulpit and so save the clergy the trouble of either composition or transcription. These were regarded with great disfavour. Beneath the title is engraved To the Most Rev^d His Grace the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury.

Beneath the print verses are engraved:

*With spear & scarlet I'm now deck'd,
And sing a jolly song;
But pennyless I must be wreck'd,
On Limbo's rocks e'er long.*

*But hope I spy from Bishops kind,
Like Lighthouse placed high;
If for to change, I heart can find,
Catches, for Psalmody.*

*My scarlet coat I then will doff,
For quee a grizzle wear;
The outward man I will put off,
And prim as Bawd appear.*

*Away let Oxford Curates trudge
And starve with learning great:
For Bishops ne'er can wrongly judge
Who've palm'd my empty pate.*

I. Sternhold.

For an explanation of the origin of this print see No. 6338.

8 × 7 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6338 THE CHURCH MILITANT.

[n.d., not before 1793]

Engraving, partly mezzotinted and coloured. A copy of No. 6337, with certain alterations. The label running from the soldier-parson on his r. side (the l. of the print) is inscribed Come Jolly Bacchus God of Wine!

On the large scroll, in place of 'No saucy remorse . . .', is a tailor's bill:

March 10th 1783

Sir . . . put off three times . . . due now near six years; besides two new suits . . . bear it no longer . . . not paid by Tuesday next . . . will arrest you . . . go to goal for you

Y^{rs} Tho^s Thimble To Captⁿ Squander

On the sign, in place of the words St. As - - h, three Cats-Heads, and H - - ford, are marks of cancellation. Under the title, in place of the dedication is engraved See M^r Pennant's literary life. P. 21.

This work, an autobiography, was not published till 1793. In the passage referred to Pennant writes, 'I am a sincere well-wisher to the Church of England. . . . Now and then complaint has been made against the unguarded admission of persons of the most discordant professions into the sacred pale, who, urged by no other call than that of poverty, do not prove either ornamental or useful in their new character. To check the progress of a practice injurious to the Church, and highly so to those who had spent their fortune in a course of education for the due discharge of their duties, I sent a sarcastic, but salutary print into the world: at which even bishops themselves have deigned to smile.'

This passage identifies the 'sarcastic print' with No. 6338.

The allusions to St. Asaph also indicate Pennant, who took a prominent part in the local affairs of Flintshire, coming into contact with Shipley, Dean of St. Asaph.

8 × 7 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.

6339 MOSES.Mr Bunbury del.J^s Bretherton fPublish'd 23^d Jan^y 1783.

Engraving. A stout, complacent-looking man rides a small horse in profile to the l. He has a very bad seat and is pulling hard on the curb; the animal puts down its head. A servant on a rough-looking pony canters behind him, carrying a basket of hay and a triangular box or package (perhaps his master's hat-box) under his l. arm. The scene is a country road, with a signpost (l.) pointing To Hackney, To Isling[ton], and (down a turning on the r. of the riders) to Shoredit[ich]. The post stresses the idea conveyed in the drawing, that this is a citizen riding to or from his country-box in the suburbs.

A companion print to No. 6340. See also Nos. 5914-17.

$9\frac{1}{4} \times 14$ in.

6340 SYMPTOMS OF REARING.Mr Bunbury del.J^s Bretherton fPublish'd 23^d Jan^y 1783

Engraving. An elderly country parson, in profile to the r., on a horse which rears almost vertically, he clasps the animal round the neck, and is seated on his hind-quarters, having lost his stirrups and slipped from the saddle. His whip flies through the air behind him, his coat-tails fly out, and the sheets of his sermon inscribed IOB protrude from his pocket. A small dog (l.) rushing towards the animal's hind-legs and barking furiously appears to have caused the 'symptoms of rearing'.

The parish clerk, with two large volumes under his arm, beside the horse, looks over his r. shoulder and stoops or runs to escape being trampled on. Trees and a church steeple are indicated in the background (r.). A similar subject to Nos. 5914-17, also by Bunbury.

A companion print to No. 6339.

$9\frac{3}{8} \times 14$ in.

6341 ALL FOURS.Design'd by H. W. Bunbury Esq^r [? Rowlandson f.]Publish'd Mar^h 14th 1783 by J. R. Smith N^o 83 Oxford Street London

Engraving (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Design in an oval. Two men playing cards at a small round table. The man on the r. pulls out an ace of spades from the five cards in his hand and shows it with a grimace of satisfaction. His opponent (l.), in profile to the r., looks at it with an expression of consternation, frowning and opening his mouth wide. The pack and other cards lie on the table. The men are probably portraits. The successful player is middle-aged, plainly dressed, with a bob-wig; the other is younger, very thin, and more fashionably dressed, with a long pigtail queue.

The etching resembles the manner of Rowlandson.

$12\frac{5}{8} \times 15\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6342 FRONT, SIDE VIEW, AND BACK FRONT, OF A MODERN FINE GENTLEMAN.[? J. R. Smith sc.] Designed by H. W. Bunbury EsqLondon Publish'd Mar^h 24th 1783 by J. R. Smith N 83 opposite the Pantheon Oxford Street

Crayon engraving. A W.L. satirical portrait of a slim and foppish young man, in three positions. He stands (l.) in profile to the l., his r. hand resting on the head of a high cane and holding a large three-cornered hat. In the centre he stands in back view, his hat under his l. arm, his cane in his r. hand. On the r. he stands full-face, in a rather swaggering pose, cane in his r. hand, hat in his l.

The three attitudes show the fashion of the day. Hair loose and full over the forehead, a horizontal side curl below each ear, and a tightly-bound pig-tail queue. A fitting coat double-breasted at the chest, cut away to show the lower part of a waistcoat ending at the waist; its special feature is an elongated and narrow lapel projecting beyond the shoulders. A ruffled shirt, closely fitting breeches, and low-heeled shoes. In the foreground buildings are indicated.

In a contemporary hand is written on an impression in the Banks Collection, 'Col^l Gardner vel Col^l Phipps'. A William Gardiner (1748-1806) was gazetted Lt.-Col. in the 45th Foot on 29 June 1778. Col. Phipps was the Hon. Henry Phipps (1755-1831), gazetted Lt.-Col. of the 88th Connaught Rangers 4 Oct. 1780, afterwards first Earl of Mulgrave. These are the only two colonels of those names in the Army List of 1783 (Royal Kalendar), both being men of note, see D.N.B.

A companion print to No. 6343.

Frankau, p. 102.

$8\frac{7}{16} \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ in.

6343 THE INFLEXIBLE PORTER. A TRAGEDY.Design'd by H. W. Bunbury EsqLondon Published Mar^h 24th 1783 by J. R. Smith N 83 opposite y^e Pantheon Oxford Street

Crayon engraving. The roofed gateway of a great man's house. In front of an archway (l.) through which appears a staircase, an obese porter stands in profile to the r., lifting up both hands to show the impossibility of access to his master. He is addressing a would-be visitor, middle-aged and stout, who faces him with an insinuating smile, hat in hat, pointing with his r. hand towards his companion, a slim young man (r.), who stands full-face, his r. hand in his breeches pocket. The young man is dressed like, and resembles, the Modern Fine Gentleman in No. 6342, a companion print. His r. hand is in his breeches pocket, his l., holding his hat, rests on the head of his tall cane.

$8\frac{1}{2} \times 9\frac{1}{2}$ in.

6343 A A later impression with the additional publication line:London pub by S. W. Fores 41 Piccadilly

6344 ST JAMES'S PARK.

[After Bunbury.]

*London Publish'd as the Act directs Nov^r 30th 1783 by J Wallis N^o 16
Ludgate Street & E Hedges N^o 92 under the Roy^l Exchange Cornhill.
Price 2^s 6^d plain.*

Engraving. The humours of a promenade in St. James's Park: a number of figures, walking under trees. The central group consists of those watching a lady meeting an elderly beau. She walks in profile to the r. followed by a little black boy carrying one of her dogs; another, lifting a paw, gazes up at the beau. She walks with a cane and is dressed in masculine fashion, with round hat, cut-away coat, showing a shirt-frill, and a plain skirt. He bows low, holding his hat in his hand, and wears a sword. A young woman holding up a small parasol, stands between them. Other walkers stare and point at the lady; an elderly man (r.), with an ugly old woman hanging to his arm and scolding violently, looks through his glass.

On a seat (l.) a fat citizen is asleep, his wife sitting next him has two children on her lap. At the other end of the bench is a young man reading a book. On the extreme l. a stout man carrying his wig and suffering from the heat, walks in profile to the r. In the foreground (l.) some children play with a peg-top. On the extreme r. a bare-footed little boy begs from a man who raises his cane in a threatening manner.

Reproduced, Paston, Pl. xxxii.

14½ × 24⅞ in.

Crace Collection, Portfolio xii, No. 94.

6345 A TRIP TO SCARBOROUGH.

J^s Bretherton f.

Publish'd 3^d March 1783. by James Bretherton.

Engraving. A group of people, strung out in a line, standing on the cliffs at Scarborough.

On the extreme edge of the cliffs (r.) stand two gentlemen gazing at the view, the nearer holds his hat in his hand, and looks up as if absorbing the sea air. Slightly behind are two ladies, one with an arrangement of lace and ribbons on the summit of a very high pyramid of hair, the other with a calash hood concealing her equally high head-dress. Next come two quite young ladies talking to each other, one with a calash hood, the other with a large hat tilted forwards on her pyramid of hair. Next are two children: a very little girl stands between the older child and the young lady with a hat, reaching up an arm towards each.

The next couple are an elderly lady in a calash hood and a pretty young lady elaborately dressed, who looks coyly down and away from the addresses being paid her by a man who stands behind the elder of the two children. Another man, apparently a disappointed rival, turns his back. Behind, on the extreme l., are a gentleman and lady, both in riding-dress, her arm through his, with discontented expressions.

The landscape shows the line of the bay with cliffs and rising moor behind—no building is visible. For the calash hood see No. 5433, &c.

Apparently unconnected with Sheridan's play of the same title.

7⅞ × 16⅞ in.

6346 WHITSUNTIDE HOLIDAYS.

Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, N^o 69 in St Pauls Church Yard, London.

Published as the Act directs, 4th June, 1783.

Engraving. A large coach, the roof overcrowded with passengers, is driven (r. to l.) along a country road. The coach is a double one with two sets of doors and windows but four wheels, somewhat resembling the earliest railway carriages. Each door-panel is inscribed Greenwich to Charing Cross. The inside passengers are relatively quiet, the outside ones noisy and rollicking, many of them poised precariously on the edge of the roof. An elderly woman in the front part of the coach holds a cord attached to the neck of a dog which she drags along the road, the animal trying to resist and planting its four feet on the ground; this amuses the other inside passengers who look out of the window at the dog.

Sixteen people are visible on the roof of the coach, among them a recruiting party: a man wearing epaulettes and a feathered hat stands up, holding out a paper, All able bodied Men willing to serve King George; in his l. hand is a sabre. One of Dr. Graham's gigantic porters, see No. 5766, wearing the well-known large laced hat, holds out towards the recruiting officer one of Graham's hand-bills, inscribed D^r Graham in large letters. His profile resembles that of 'Magog' in No. 6325. Other soldiers are playing instruments: a man seated behind the driver blows a horn, a man sitting next him plays the fiddle; a man seated on the edge of the coach, his legs dangling over the windows, plays the fife; another on the back edge of the roof beats a drum. A sailor holds up a rough flag tied to a pole, inscribed Rodney for Ever. Another sailor, on the extreme edge of the coach, fondles a woman who sits beside him. A woman, dangerously balanced, attends to an infant which is held across her lap. A man loses his hat. A young boy, sitting on the front of the coach, leans over to embrace a woman seated on the box seat beside the driver. On a platform between the back wheels a man seated on a trunk is taking a pinch of snuff.

The coach is drawn by three horses, heavily-built animals, but very small in proportion to the coach. On the road, which has a foot-path with posts to protect pedestrians, stands a beggar (l.) supported on crutches and holding out his hat towards the coach; the driver flicks at him with his whip. A man in naval uniform sits by the road-side, holding a bundle and a knotted stick. Clouds of dust rise from the wheels and the horses' hoofs. In the middle distance, on the extreme l., is a toll-gate by which stand a man on horseback and a pedestrian. Two sailors, wearing trousers and round hats, canter towards the gate on a small horse or pony. A rural landscape of undulating ground with trees forms the background.

12 $\frac{5}{8}$ × 18 $\frac{11}{16}$ in.

THE RAPACIOUS QUACK (N^o 2)

See No. 3798—[c. 1783-8]

Stipple by J. Baldrey after a picture by E. Penny exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1782. Not a copy of No. 3797.

A companion design to No. 6347.

6347 THE BENEVOLENT PHYSICIAN.[c. 1783]¹*E. Penny PinxitJ. Baldrey Sculpsit*

Stipple. After a picture exhibited by E. Penny at the Royal Academy, 1782. A companion design to No. 3798. The interior of an artist's studio showing no sign of poverty. The physician, a young man, is walking from the room (l. to r.) followed by the artist's wife, a well-dressed and comely middle-aged woman, who offers him a coin which he refuses to take. Through a door (l.) is seen an inner room, with a man seated, leaning his elbow on a table on which are a phial of medicine and a bowl. On the lintel of the door is a classical bust. On an easel behind the doctor is a canvas with a sketch (H.L.) of a woman holding an infant. Canvases stand against the wall (r.); a portfolio leans against a chair. Two pictures are hung high on the r. wall.

Cf. No. 6350.

11½ × 9½ in.

'Caricatures', iii. 183. B.M.L. Tab. 524.

Seven prints from the series of mezzotints published by Carington Bowles.

6348 INTELLIGENCE ON THE CHANGE OF THE MINISTRY.

[? After R. Dighton.]

477. Printed for Bowles & Carver, at their Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Paul's Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs, [date erased, c. April 1783]

Mezzotint (coloured impression). Interior of a poorly-appointed barber's shop. The barber (l.) is shaving a customer who sits in profile to the l. facing the window, he holds his razor carelessly, to his customer's alarm, while looking eagerly towards another customer, who sits (r.) on a stool in profile to the l., reading from the Morning Chronicle. The barber's assistant or apprentice, a small ragged fellow, gapes up at the reader, he straddles across the stand of a barber's block on which is the wig which he is combing. Two other customers listen intently, both wear aprons, one of them is a shoemaker with a last under his arm. The man reading is shown to be a tailor by the yard-measure which hangs from his coat-pocket.

On the wall hang coat, hat, wig, a broken looking-glass, a ballad, a roller-towel. In the window wigs are suspended. On the floor are two wig-boxes (l.), inscribed M^r Deputy Grizzle and M^r Snipp, a barber's bowl, and a night-cap.

The Coalition is evidently under discussion. One of the many satires on the intense interest taken by mechanics and tradesmen in politics. Cf. No. 6351, a companion print.

12⅞ × 9⅞ in.

'Caricatures', i. 52. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

6349 TWO PRIVATEERS ATTACKING A MAN OF WAR.

482. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in S^t Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, c. 1783]

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A military officer in uniform, in profile to the l., between two courtesans, each of whom holds him by an arm. He wears a gorget, riding-boots, and spurs. The women are elaborately dressed in the fashion of the day, wearing large hats over muslin caps. Trees form the background, with an elderly man (r.) walking in profile to the r. On the l. is the back of a seat, behind which is an officer in back view. The scene is perhaps St. James's Park, where such encounters were said to be common.

¹ The publication line appears to have been cut off.

12 $\frac{15}{16}$ × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

'Caricatures', i. 19. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

6350 THE BENEVOLENT PHYSICIAN. [1783]

486. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles at N^o 69 in St Paul's Church Yard, London

Published as the Act directs [date erased]

Mezzotint (coloured impression). The interior of a room showing no trace of actual poverty. The invalid, a man, fully dressed but wearing a night-cap, sits in an upholstered arm-chair by the fire. A little girl stands at his knee; at his side on a tray or table are two bowls and a medicine bottle labelled as before.

The physician, a well-dressed man wearing a bag-wig, is about to leave the room (r.); he puts coins into the hand of a young woman holding an infant.

The room is papered, a half-tester bed with curtains stands against the wall. Tea-things are ranged along the chimney-piece, over which is a framed picture of a Biblical (?) subject.

Beneath the title is engraved:

*The Benevolent Physician takes no Fee.
Of those that need him much in Poverty.
To Poor distress'd, and those of small estate
He Money gives, takes only of the great.*

A companion design to No. 3797.

The subject and the title are probably imitated from Nos. 6347, 3798. There is, however, no similarity in design.

12 $\frac{3}{4}$ × 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

'Caricatures', i. 58. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

THE RAPACIOUS QUACK. (487)

See No. 3797—[1783]

6351 INTELLIGENCE ON THE PEACE.

[? After R. Dighton.]

495. Printed for & Sold by Carington Bowles, at his Map & Print Warehouse, N^o 69 in St Pauls Church Yard London. Published as the Act directs, [date erased, c. Oct. 1783]

Mezzotint (coloured impression). A London street, a cobbler reading the Gazette to a group of intent listeners. He stands outside his bulk or stall, which is protected by a penthouse projecting from the stone wall of a building on which are pasted a number of placards, conspicuous among which is one headed Proclamation of Peace, and ending God Save the King. A street-lamp projects from the wall on a bracket; against this rests a ladder (l.) on which stands a man who is about to insert the oil-container and wick which his assistant below is supposed to be filling. The latter, however, is watching the cobbler so intently that he pours the oil on to the ground instead of into the lamp. Facing the cobbler and looking up at him is a little chimney-sweep, his bag and brushes over his shoulder. A short stout man, carrying a basket, puts out his tongue at the reader. The other listeners are a baker with a cylindrical basket of bread on his back; a barber carrying a wig-box inscribed Mr Tho^s Tipple, and a scowling man whose head and shoulders only are visible. The cobbler has a pair of top-boots and another boot tucked under his arm; lasts and boots are hung up over his stall, over which is a board inscribed, TRISTRAM AWL. Boote & Shoe Maçer. Likevice Corns Cut in the neteest manner at home & abrode. The placards over the stall include an advertisement of Katerfelto, see No. 6326, &c., which is headed by a print (torn) of a rider on horseback below an angel and a devil; a notice of the Royal Circus with Mr Hughes in large letters; a Cock Fighting placard headed by a design of two cocks fighting, a proclamation headed by the royal arms, and a notice offering a Reward.

The theme is the favourite one of the illiterate working man who concerns himself with State affairs to the neglect of his business, cf. No. 6351, a companion design. The print is a good representation of a London street scene, and shows the lamp-lighting method of the period. The lamp-lighter standing below the ladder has a large can on the ground, a small can for filling the lamps, a bunch of lamp-wicks, and a pair of scissors tucked into his belt. In the background (r.) are high brick houses and a church spire.

The Gazette containing the announcement that peace had been signed was that of 6-9 Sept. 1783. Peace was formally proclaimed in London on 6 Oct., after which the proclamation was 'stuck up in divers parts'. London Mag., 1783, p. 363. See also Nos. 6267, 6336.

$12\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{1}{16}$ in.

'Caricatures', i. 53. B.M.L., Tab. 524.

Another impression, uncoloured, publication line cut off.

6352 A REAL SCENE IN ST PAULS CHURCH YARD, ON A WINDY DAY.

[After R. Dighton.]

504. Printed for & sold by Carington Bowles, N^o 69 in St Pauls Church Yard, London. Published as the Act directs [date erased, c. 1783]

Mezzotint (coloured and uncoloured impressions). Street-scene, outside the print-shop of Carington Bowles. Foot-passengers are having their hats and wigs blown off, their garments blown violently, by a gust of wind. In the foreground a boy wearing an apron has fallen to the ground, his tray of fish is under the feet of a lady who walks from r. to l., holding her hat, a muff in her l. hand, her hair, cloak, and petticoats streaming behind her. A stout woman in profile farther to the r. tries to catch her wig and hat which have blown from her head, she wears a cloak trimmed with ermine. Other walkers clutch and lose their hats with expressions of anger.

Behind (l.), each of twenty-eight panes of the shop-window is occupied by a print, as in No. 3758 (1774), another view of this shop, the margins being displayed, and the titles almost legible. The top row consists of seven prints of divines, in which, as in 3758, well-known mezzotint portraits of John Wesley and Whitefield are conspicuous. The other prints are humorous, among them are Nos. 3753, 3754 (1782), 5953 (these three are partly cut off by the l. margin of the print), 5951, 5952, 5954, 5955, 5956, 6348.

Over the shop window, partly cut off by the upper edge of the design, is the name of the shop, [. . . Map & Prin]t Warehouse, in large letters.

On the r. appears the door of the adjoining house, inscribed 68, with its railings and part of the front of the house.

The original water-colour for this is in the Victoria and Albert Museum, reproduced E. B. Chancellor, The Eighteenth Century in London, 1920, frontispiece.

13 × 9 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.

Crace Collection. 'Caricatures', i. 30, Tab. 524.

THE CONTRAST. (507)

See No. 3757—[c. 1783-4]

[After R. Dighton.]

A Frenchman and an Englishman disputing over the outcome of the recent war.

ADDENDA TO VOL. V

PERSONAL SATIRES

6353 [SUB-PORTER & LAMP-LIGHTER OF TRIN. COLL. CAMB
1771.]¹

Topham fecit 1771

Engraving. A man walking in profile to the r. carrying a ladder resting horizontally on his l. shoulder. In his r. hand is an oil-can.

$7\frac{3}{8} \times 5\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6354 [CREAM-WOMAN OF TRIN. COLL. CAMBR.] [1771]¹

Topham fecit

Engraving. A stout and ugly woman walking (l. to r.) in profile carrying in her r. hand a pot or pail. She wears a flat wide-brimmed hat over a hood, and an apron (torn).

$4\frac{1}{16} \times 2\frac{5}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6355 [A CAMBRIDGE WOMAN-SERVANT?] [c. 1771]

Topham inven: et fecit.

Engraving. W.L. portrait, slightly caricatured, of a woman similar in type to No. 6354. She walks (l. to r.), holding in her r. hand a pair of unlatched shoes without buckles, in her l. a pot, perhaps a blacking-pot, similar to that of the cream-woman, but smaller.

$7\frac{7}{16} \times 5\frac{3}{8}$ in. (pl.).

6356 [VOCAL AND INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC IN A CHURCH.] [c. 1777.]

Mortimer del L Bates fecit

Engraving. The musicians' gallery of a large church, the vocalists being divided by a barrier from the instrumentalists who sit below and in front of them. The musicians, whose heads and shoulders only are visible, are probably caricature-portraits. Thirteen vocalists, crowded together, are singing from music-books. The instrumentalists are lettered to show their nationalities: a man, wearing a hat and holding a horn, who sits farthest l. is inscribed Prussia. Next him a stout elderly man holding a 'cello or double-bass is Ger, he is possibly intended for Abel. Next are an oboist and a flautist blowing their instruments. Between them is the head of an elderly man wearing spectacles. Music-books in front of these three are inscribed Ital and Swiss. Farthest r. is an old man in profile to the r., who appears to be seated at a harpsichord which is not shown. He is Engl, and his profile suggests that he is Dr. Arne.

Behind the vocalists the pipes of an organ are indicated, and on the extreme l. sits a parson or clerk asleep. In the background (r.) is the body of the church: the heads of a male congregation are indicated; behind and above them is a gallery in which are seated rows of ladies, their hair in the exaggerated inverted pyramid fashionable 1776-8, cf. No. 5370, &c. The design probably satirizes (inter alia) the employment of foreign musicians, a favourite theme. Apparently a companion print to No. 6357.

¹ Written on the print in an old hand.

8½ × 11 in.

6357 [GROUP OF SATIRICAL PORTRAITS.]

[c. 1777]

Mortimer del. L. Bates fecit

Engraving. Figures grouped on each side of a central post or terminal which supports a small circular platform. The summit of the post is decorated with the heads of Comedy in profile to the l., of Tragedy in profile to the r.; between them is the head of a satyr. On the platform a kneeling female figure supports a large medallion with the head of Shakespeare (or perhaps Ben Jonson) in relief.

The two central figures are an elderly man (l.) seated with his legs crossed, fingers held together, who resembles Dr. Johnson. On the r. of the post sits a stout and aged man, in gown and bands, without a wig; he is asleep and is inscribed A Fellow of Maudlin. Farthest r., and in profile to the r., is an elderly man holding a large volume under his arm; he wears a handkerchief or turban twisted round his head, and may be intended for an artist. These three are T.Q.L. figures. Behind them fourteen other persons are grouped, whose heads or heads and shoulders alone are visible. All are men except for one sharp-featured elderly woman in profile to the r., wearing a frilled cap. One man clutches his forehead and may be intended for an actor; another reads a book with a scowl of concentration.

Apparently a companion print to No. 6356. The figure of Dr. Johnson resembles a figure in No. 4247, The Reviewers Cave (1768), which is also in the manner of Mortimer, and is inscribed in an old hand 'etch'd by Mortimer'; it is, however, attributed by Mr. Stephens to de Louthembourg.

11½ × 8½ in.

6358 [NO TITLE.]

J. H. Mortimer del. Saml: Ireland fecit.

[n.d.]

Engraving. Two figures perhaps associated accidentally from juxtaposition on the page of a sketch-book. A grotesquely obese nude man (l.) pushes, l. to r., a wheelbarrow which supports his stomach. He wears a turban with an aigrette, and has a Semitic profile. This was a traditional subject in caricature, see No. 5433.

An oafish-looking youth (r.) wearing the exaggerated buttons fashionable in 1777, see No. 5432, &c., stands looking towards the man with the wheelbarrow. He holds a round hat in his l. hand, a cane or riding-whip is under his r. arm. His dress, though fashionable, is slovenly, his coat is wrinkled, his hair ill dressed, and his attitude is slouching. His feet are cut off by the lower margin of the print.

Prints after Mortimer (d. 1779) were etched by S. Ireland between 1780-5.

6½ × 9 in.

6359 A PUFF OFF.

[? 1781]

[J. Sayers]

Engraving. Eliza Farren (l.) as Almeida, and Bensley as Omar (r.), in 'The Fair Circassian' face each other in profile. She bends towards him, clasping her hands; he stands erect holding out his r. hand towards her. He holds in his l. hand the end of a chain which is attached to his r. wrist. Almeida's body from the waist upwards is not attached to her voluminous petticoats. Omar has a beard, he wears a feathered hat or turban and an ermine-bordered robe over a tunic. Beneath the figures are etched the words spoken by them: Almeida says,

*Omar methinks I rose above my sex
Now Almorán half the human form is thine
I'm off*

Omar answers,

Puff'd off you mean for God's sake Miss go on Don't take such tragic flights but mind your Cue

Beneath the title is etched, To the greatest of all great Tragedy Writers This rude sketch of a new scene for the Fair Circassian is most respectfully offerered by his most obed hble Serv^t JS.

S. J. Pratt's tragedy of 'The Fair Circassian', founded on Hawkesworth's novel, Almorán and Hamet, was first played at Drury Lane on 27 Nov. 1781, with Eliza Farren and Bensley as Almeida and Omar. See Genest, vi. 214-15, and Town and Country Magazine, xiii, pp. 619 ff.

11 × 14 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.

6359_A. A later impression: the plate reduced along the lower edge removing the inscription. Across the upper part of the design is etched:

*A moving Scene in the Fair Circassian a woeful Tragedy written by Mr. Pratt
So Bensley stared with all his Might E'en till his Eye-ball started
So Farren flew to meet his Sight
But she had laced herself so tight
Her Top and Bottom parted.*

A detached eye, representing Bensley's r. eye, has been added to the l. of his profile.

6360 [UNIDENTIFIED PORTRAIT.]

[n.d.]

Engraving (coloured impression). Bust portrait of a man in profile to the l. His mouth is open, and he has a long upper lip and small receding chin. Similar in character to No. 6306. Cropped.

3 $\frac{7}{8}$ × 3 $\frac{1}{8}$ in. (pl.).

APPENDIX

KEY TO THE DATES OF THE SERIES OF MEZZOTINTS ISSUED BY CARINGTON BOWLES¹

THE dates have in general been erased from the prints; in reissues by Bowles and Carver they appear to have been burnished from the plate. As the series was numbered consecutively impressions which are both numbered and dated are a guide to the approximate dates of the rest of the series.

In many cases reduced versions of these prints were issued, also in a numbered but shorter series. The dates of these are sometimes identical with those of the larger version, sometimes later and occasionally earlier.

Bowles's

No.	Date.	Title.	Catalogue No.
248	17 Apr. 1772	English Gentleman at Paris	4516	Vol. IV
260	19 Nov. 1772	How d'ye like me?	4522	„
273	19 Jan. 1773	Docking the Macaroni	4527	„
283	29 May 1773	Irish Peg in a Rage	4531	„
286	13 July 1773	Old Beau in an Extasy	4532	„
293	8 Feb. 1774	Portrait of Harriet Lady Grosvenor, engr. Dickinson	—	—
300	25 June 1774	Spectators at a Print Shop	3758	Vol. III, Part II
306	12 Oct. 1774	New Method of Macarony Making. Not in B.M., see under	5232	Vol. V
—	20 Oct. 1774	Exhibition of Wild Beasts	4580	Vol. IV
—	2 Jan. 1775	Unexpected Levee for a new married couple	4581	„
323	3 Aug. 1775	Portrait of George III	—	—
332	20 Oct. 1775	Search the World . . .	4542	Vol. IV
344	25 Oct. 1776	Sleight of Hand by a Monkey	4546	„
352	25 June 1777	Six Weeks after Marriage	4549	„
365	10 Nov. 1777	Bachelor's Fare	4553	„
366	10 Nov. 1777	Amorous Thief	4554	„
368	10 Nov. 1777	Father Paul Disturbed . . .	3782	Vol. III, Part II
370	1 Jan. 1778	Miss Wicket and Miss Trigger	4666	Vol. IV
373	1 Jan. 1778	Morning Visit	5532	Vol. V
393	1 Jan. 1779	Summer	4565	Vol. IV
395	1 Jan. 1779	Winter	4567	„
308	15 Sept. 1779	Church Militant	3752	Vol. III, Part II
413	6 Jan. 1780	Contemplative Charmer	5815	Vol. V
416	25 Mar. 1780	Morning Frolic (not in B.M.)	—	—

¹ See pp. 48, 104-7, 158-9, 191, 215, 245, 278-9, 316-17, 366-7, 489-93, 551-6, 664-7, 779-82.

APPENDIX

Bowles's No.	Date.	Title.	Catalogue No.
417	12 Apr. 1780	Pleasures of Skaiting	5818 Vol. V
418	12 Apr. 1780	Pretty Waterwoman . . .	5819 „
422	15 May 1780	Triple Plea	3761 Vol. III, Part II
428	2 Sept. 1780	Foolish Woman	5824 Vol. V
433	1 May 1781	Fielding's Myrmidons . . .	5947 „
465	9 Nov. 1781	Fleet of Transports	5957 „
466	2 Jan. 1782	Lesson Westward	6155 „
474	20 May 1782	Barber riding to Margate	6158 „
495	After 6 Oct. 1783	Intelligence on the Peace	6351 „
542	9 Nov. 1784	Pit Door	(Vol. VI)

To be continued in Vol. VI.

INDEX OF PERSONS

Persons depicted, mentioned or alluded to in the prints are included, but not persons mentioned only in the explanatory notes (other than conjectural or alternative identifications). An asterisk denotes a foreign print.

- ABD-UL-HAMID, Ottoman Sultan
1780: 5711*
- ABEL, Karl Friedrich 1773: 5163.
c. 1777: 6356. 1780: 5769
- ABERGAVERNNEY, George Neville, 17th
Baron (cr. Earl 1784) 1774: 5258
- ABINGTON, Frances 1777: 5411
- ACHERLEY, Roger (works of) 1778:
5494
- ACHMET IV, Ottoman Sultan (succ.
21 Jan. 1774) 1774: 5229
- ADAIR, James 1780: 5689
- ADAM, Robert 1773: 5166
- ADAM, William 1779: 5575. 1780:
5625, 5676
- ADAMS, John 1777: 5401
- ADAMS, Samuel 1777: 5401
- ADDINGTON, William 1777: 5415.
1782: 6120
- ADOLPHUS FREDERICK, Prince (cr.
Duke of Cambridge 1801) 1781:
5895
- AGUJARI, Lucrezia 1780: 5769
- AITKEN, James (John the Painter)
1783: 6288
- ALFIERI, Vittorio 1783: 6315
- ALFRED, Prince 1781: 5895
- AMHERST, Jeffrey, General (cr. Baron Amherst 1776) 1778: 5503.
1780: 5662, 5682, 5683, 5687, 5690,
5752. 1782: 5961, 5965, 5984,
5986, 6033, 6047, 6053. 1783:
6212
- ANCASTER, Robert Bertie, 4th Duke
of 1779, 5589
- ANCRUM, Earl of (succ. as 5th
Marquis of Lothian) 1771: 4687.
1772: 4706. See also 1775: 5303
- ANDREWS, Francis 1773: 5134
- ANDREWS, Miles Peter 1776: 5346
- ANNALY, John Gore, Baron 1773:
5134
- ANSON, George, Baron Anson,
Admiral 1783: 6291
- APSLEY, Lord, see BATHURST
- ARANDA, Pedro Abarca y Bolea
1780: 5711*
- ARCHER, Sarah (West) Lady 1778:
5505. 1781: 5879. 1782: 6114.
1783: 6263
- ARMSTEAD or Armistead, Mrs. (m.
C. J. Fox 1795) 1776: 5352.
1779: 5587. 1782: 6084, 6085.
1783: 6295
- ARNE, Thomas Augustine, Mus.
Doc. 1776: 5353 c. 1777: 6356.
1780: 5668
- ARNOLD, Benedict 1776: 5331,
5331 A*. 1777: 5408. 1778:
5470. 1783: 6173
- ARTOIS, Charles-Philippe, Comte d'
(Charles X 1824-30) 1782: p.
614*, 6035, 6036
- ASHBURNHAM, John, 2nd Earl of Ashburnham 1775: 5303
- ASHBURTON, Lord, see DUNNING
- ASHE, Miss 1771: 4903
- ASTLEY, Philip 1783: 6247
- ATKINSON, Mr. (apothecary) 1779:
5603, 5614
- ATKINSON, Christopher 1782: 6021
- ATKINSON, Richard 1782: 5972
- AUGUSTA, Princess Dowager of Wales 1771: 4423, 4417, 4852,
4863, 4427, 4874, 4877, 4885, 4891
- AUGUSTA SOPHIA, Princess 1781:
5895
- AUGUSTUS FREDERICK, Prince (cr.
Duke of Sussex) 1774: 5222.
1781: 5895
- AUSTIN, William 1775: 5318. See
Index of Artists
- BADDELEY, Mrs. Sophia 1772: 4977,
4998, 4700. 1773: 5183
- BAILLIE, Captain Thomas, R.N.
1779: 5536, 5548
- BAILLIE, Lt.-Col. William 1783:
6291
- BANKES, Sir Henry 1771: 4886

INDEX OF PERSONS

- BANKS, Joseph, D.C.L. (cr. Baronet 1781) 1772: 4695, 5046. 1773: 5146
- BARCELO, don 1780: 5628
- BARKER, (Rev.) John, D.D. 1773: 5188, 5189
- BARRÉ, Lt.-Col. Isaac 1771: 4423. 1774: 5254. 1778: 5479, 5480,¹ 5481.¹ 1780: 5650, 5676. 1781: 5829. 1782: 5961, 5972, 5982, 6011, 6028, 6032, 6066. 1783: 6214
- BARRINGTON, Samuel, Admiral 1782: 5988
- BARRINGTON, William Wildman, 2nd Viscount Barrington 1771: 4423, 4852, 4427, 4903. 1773: 5106, 5109. 1778: 5479, 5480,¹ 5481.¹
- BARRY, Mrs. Ann Spranger 1782: 6126
- BARRYMORE, Richard Barry, 6th Earl of 1772: 4828
- BARUETH 1783: 6292*
- BASEVI, Giacomo ('Cervetto') 1774: 5269
- BATE, (Rev.) Henry, afterwards Bate-Dudley (cr. Bart. 1813) 1773: 5198, 5199, 5200. 1776: 5364. 1779: 5550. 1780: 5632, 5666, 5676. 1782: 6162
- BATHURST, Henry, cr. Baron Apsley 1771 (succ. as 2nd Earl Bathurst 1775) 1771: 4888. 1773: 5106, 5170. 1774: 5227. 1776: p. 216. 1782: 6033, 6070
- BAYLEY, Mrs. 1773, 5140
- BAYNTUN (i.e. Bayntun-Rolt), Andrew (succ. as 2nd bart. 1800) 1783: 6299
- BAYNTUN, Lady Maria 1783: 6299
- BAZELEY, John, Captain, R.N. 1779: 5536
- BEARDMORE, Arthur 1771: 4848
- BEAULIEU, Edward Hurrey Montagu, Baron 1776: 5349
- BECKFORD, William 1773: 5103
- BEDFORD, John Russell, 4th Duke of Bedford 1770: 4842. 1771: 4848, 4423
- BELLAMY, George Anne 1776: 5354
- BEMBRIDGE, Charles (accountant in Paymaster-General's Office 1783: 6195
- BENNETT, Agnes Maria 1780: 5740
- BENNETT, W. 1782: 6021
- BENSLEY, Robert c. 1781: 6359
- BERKELEY, Frederick Augustus, 5th Earl of 1773: 5140
- BERNARD, Sir Francis, Bart. 1779: 5574
- BERTONI, Ferdinando 1782: 6125
- BESSBOROUGH, William Ponsonby, 2nd Earl of 1777: 5409
- BINGLEY, Lord (George Fox-Lane, cr. Baron Bingley 1762) 1773: 5125
- BIRD, John 1770: 4843
- BIRD, William 1778: 5505
- BISHOP, Thomas 1773: 5197
- BISHOPP, Sir Cecil, 6th Bart. 1774: 5252
- BISSET (or Bissett), George Maurice 1782: 6105, 6106, 6107, 6108, 6109, 6110, 6111, 6156
- BLAGGE, John (of New York) 1775: 5284
- BLAKE, Mr. (of Plymouth) 1774: 5275
- BODEN (or Bodens or Bowden), Colonel George 1780: 5753. 1781: 5868. 1782: 6064
- BOLINBROKE, Frederick St. John, 2nd Viscount 1772: 4975
- BOLTON, Arabella 1771: 4852. 1172: 4971
- BOND, Mr. 1779: 5599. 1782: 6120, 6121
- BOSCAWEN, Edward, Admiral 1782: 5961. 1783: 6291
- BOSCAWEN, George 1780: 5735
- BOSCAWEN, George Evelyn (3rd Viscount Falmouth from 1782) 1783: 6304
- BOSWELL, James 1781: 5922
- BOTETOURT, Narbonne Berkeley, 4th Baron 1775: p. 196
- BOUFFLERS, Louis-François, duc de 1771: 4895
- BOUGAINVILLE, Louis-Antoine de 1782: 6031
- BOUGET, Comtesse de 1772: 4974
- BOUILLÉ, François-C.-A., Marquis de 1782: p. 559

¹ Date uncertain.

- BOWDEN, see BODENS
- BRADSHAW, Thomas 1772: 4959, 4962, 5018
- BRAGGE, Dr. Robert 1771: 4579, 4685
- BRAKEL, Johann van (Dutch admiral) 1780: 5718*, 5733*
- BRENT, Charlotte (Mrs. Pinto) 1776: 5353
- BRIDGWATER, Francis Egerton, 3rd Duke of 1775: 5310
- BROOME, Colonel (of New York) 1775: 5284
- BROWNE, Sir William, M.D. 1771: 4833. 1772: 4979
- BRUCE, James 1775: 5317
- BRUNSWICK, Louis Ernest, Duke of 1783: 6292*
- BUCKLER, Dr. Benjamin 1780: 5756, 5756 A¹
- BULL, Frederick 1771: 4886, 4887, 4433. 1772: 4937, 4938. 1773: 5129, 5130, 5131. 1774: 5235. 1776: 5327
- BULLER, Francis (cr. Bart. 1790) 1782: 6122, 6123, 6124
- BUNBURY, — 1772: 4660, 4665
- BUNBURY, Annabella, Lady Blake, afterwards Mrs. Boscawen 1780: 5735
- BUNBURY (afterwards Napier), Lady Sarah (Lennox) 1771: 4862
- BURGOYNE, John, General 1776: 5329. 1778: 5470. 1779: 5548, 5586. 1781: 5857*, 5858*. 1782: 5973, 6047, 6068. 1783: 6288
- BURGOYNE, Montagu 1782: 6021
- BURKE, Edmund 1771: 4423. 1774: 5251. 1779: 5548. 1780: 5644, 5645, 5650, 5676, 5709.¹ 1781: 5854. 1782: 5961, 5972, 5979, 5982, 5984, 5985, 5986, 5987, 5988, 5990, 6007, 6011, 6023, 6026, 6027, 6042, 6055. 1783: 6162, 6165, 6180, 6187, 6188, 6195, 6199, 6203, 6205, 6212, 6214, 6217, 6222, 6227, 6238, 6241, 6249, 6251, 6256, 6269, 6276, 6277, 6279, 6280, 6281, 6284, 6285, 6286, 6287, 6291
- BURKE, Mrs. (Jane Nugent) 1781: 5854
- BURNEY, Charles, Mus. Doc. 1782: 6125
- BURTON, John, M.D.,² 'Dr. Slop' 1773: 5215, 5216
- BUTE, John Stuart, 3rd Earl of 1770: 4840, 4841, 4842. 1771: 4416, 4431, 4423, 4849, 4859, 4863, 4427, 4877, 4883, 4885, 4891, 4770. 1772: 4949, 4950, 4952, 4953, 4955, 4956, 4961. 1773: 5106, 5109, 5124, 5125, 5127, 5132, 5135.¹ 1774: 5226, 5227, 5228, 5234, 5245. 1775: 5281, 5282, 5285, 5286, 5287, 5288, 5289. 1776: p. 216, 5328, 5340. 1778: 5470, 5474. 1779: 5541, 5569, 5571, 5573, 5574, 5580. 1780: 5624, 5632, 5635, 5636, 5638, 5639, 5645, 5659, 5667, 5668, 5669, 5671, 5675, 5711*. 1781: 5831. 1782: 5961, 5970, 5982, 6005, 6033, 1783: 6212
- BUTLER, John, Bishop of Oxford 1779–88, afterwards of Hereford 1779: 5553
- BUZAGLO, Abraham 1783: 6322
- BYLANDT (or Byland), Frederik Sigismund, Graaf van (Admiral) 1780: 5712*, 5714*, 5719*, 5724*
BYNG, George 1782: 5982, 6078
- BYRON, John, Admiral (1723–86) 1774: 5248
- BYRON, John, Captain R.N. (1756–91) 1779: 5585
- CADE, John 1773: 5103
- CAMDEN, Charles Pratt, 1st Baron (Earl Camden 1786) 1771: 4858, 4884. 1774: 5227. 1775: 5284, 5288. 1776: 5334. 1780: 5657, 5676. 1782: 5982, 5988, 6005. 1783: 6286
- CAMPBELL, John, Rear-admiral (vice-admiral, 1779) 1779: 5536
- CAMPBELL, John (pfeffer) 1781: 5894
- CARGILL, Mrs. Ann, née Brown 1776: 5346
- CARIBOLDI 1782: 6125
- CARLETON, Sir Guy (K.B. 1776, cr. Baron Dorchester 1786) 1782: 5988. 1783: 6288, 6302

¹ Date uncertain.

² Probably not a personal caricature but merely an illustration to Tristram Shandy.

INDEX OF PERSONS

- CARLISLE, Frederick Howard, 5th Earl of 1773: 5139. 1778: 5473, 5474, 5475, 5479, 5480,¹ 5481,¹ 5487. 1783: 6203, 6217, 6281
- CARMARTHEN, Amelia (D'Arcy), Marchioness of 1779: 5585
- CAROLINE MATILDA, Queen of Denmark 1772: 4945, 4946. 1774: 5222
- CARTER, Miss 1777: 5421
- CATHERINE II of Russia 1772: 4957, 4958*. 1774: 5222, 5229. 1779: 5557. 1780: 5711*, 5713*, 5714*, 5715*, 5718*, 5719*, 5732*. 1782: 5989. 1783: 6263, 6315
- CATHERLOUGH, Robert Knight, Earl of 1771: 4905
- CATLEY, Anne 1772: 4706. 1773: 5202
- CAVENDISH, Lord John 1782: 5972, 5979, 5990, 6075. 1783: 6167, 6199, 6203, 6217, 6222, 6223, 6244, 6251, 6253, 6256, 6260, 6265, 6281
- CERVETTO, James 1782: 6125
- CHAIT SINGH, Rajah of Benares 1783: 6277
- CHAMBERS, Sir William 1773: 5157. 1781: 5897
- CHANDOS, James Brydges, 3rd Duke of 1783 (speech of): 6226
- CHANNING, Dr. 1773: 5159
- CHAPMAN, William (stationer) 1780: 5791
- CHARLES I 1783: 6217
- CHARLES II 1771: 4902. 1778: 5470
- CHARLES III, King of Spain 1771: 4417. 1772: 4957. 1773: 5110. 1774: 5222, 5226. 1779: 5567. 1780: 5642, 5643, 5647, 5664, 5711*, 5717*, 5719*. 1782: 5961, 6043
- CHARLES EDWARD, Prince (the Young Pretender) 1770: 4841. 1772: 4961. 1779: 5573. 1780: 5667.
- CHARLOTTE, Queen 1770: 4841. 1771: 4898. 1773: 5126. 1778: 5489. 1779: 5573. 1780: 5673. 1781: 5851, 5895. 1783: 6263
- CHARLOTTE AUGUSTA MATILDA, Princess Royal 1770: 4841. 1781: 5895. 1783: 6263
- CHARLTON, Lucy 1775: 5299
- CHARTRES, Louis Philippe Joseph, duc de, afterwards duc d'Orléans (Egalité) 1779: 5555
- CHATHAM, William Pitt, 1st Earl of 1771: 4423, 4858, 4884. 1772: 4968. 1773: 5113, 5126. 1775: 5284, 5288. 1776: 5334. 1778: 5478*, 5485. 1780: 5638, 5657, 5668
- CHATTERTON Thomas (works of) 1783: 6291
- CHESTERFIELD, Philip Stanhope, 5th Earl of 1775: 5306
- CHIPPENDALE, Miss 1780: 5739
- CHOISEUL, Étienne-François, duc de 1780: 5711*
- CHOLMONDELEY, George James, 4th Earl of (cr. Marq. 1815) 1778: 5497. 1781: 5911
- CHRISTIAN VII of Denmark 1772: 4945, 4946. 1774: 5222. 1780: 5713*, 5719*
- CHRISTIE, James 1782: 6101
- CHUDLEIGH, Elizabeth, Countess of Bristol, 'Duchess of Kingston' 1775: 5301, 5319. 1776: 5362. 1777: 5425
- CLANRICARDE, John Smith De Burgh, 11th Earl of 1773: 5142
- CLARK (sausage-maker) 1778: 5530
- CLARK (bricklayer) 1778: 5530
- CLARK, Richard (Alderman) 1781: 5849
- CLAVERING, Miss 1782: 6084
- CLEMENT XIV, Pope 1771: 4863. 1774: 5222
- CLERKE, Sir Philip Jennings (cr. Bart. 1774) 1782: 6016, 6021
- CLERMONT, William Henry Fortescue, Earl 1780: 5754
- CLINTON, Sir Henry (K.B. 1777), General 1776: 5329. 1782: 6047,¹ 6081
- CLIVE, Robert, Baron Clive 1772: 5017. 1773: 5101, 5102, 5111, 5144
- COCKBURN, Col. James 1782: p. 559
- COLEBROOKE, Sir George 1773: 5100, 5102, 5111
- COLLA, Giuseppe 1780: 5769
- COLMAN, George 1772: 5057, 5064. 1776: 5363. 1780: 5742

¹ Date uncertain.

- COLMAN, Mrs. (née Ford) 1780: 5742
- CONNOLLY, Miss or Mrs. 1782: p. 632
- CONWAY family (children of Lord Hertford) 1782: 5966, 6018
- CONWAY, (Hon.) Henry Seymour, General 1782: 5965, 5982, 5984, 5985, 5986, 5988, 6005, 6009, 6018, 6032. 1783: 6195, 6256
- CONWAY, (Hon.) Robert Seymour, Colonel (3rd son of Hertford) 1780: 5700. 1782: 5966, 6018
- CONYNGHAM, Henry, 1st Viscount (cr. Earl 1781) 1774: 5260
- COOKE, William, D.D., Provost of King's College 1778: 5510
- COOKE, William (newspaper editor) 1780: 5666
- COOPER, Sir Grey 1779: 5606, 5607, 5608. 1782: 5972
- COOPER, John Allen 1783: 6299
- COOPER, Lucy 1778: 5494, 5496
- CORK, Edmund Boyle, 7th Earl of 1773: 5117. 1783: 6297
- CORK, Anne (Courtenay), Countess of 1783: 6297
- CORNELYS, Theresa 1771: 4928, 4929, 4789. 1772: 5066. 1773: 5194. 1777: 5425
- CORNWALL, Charles Wolfran 1782: 5985. 1783: 6187, 6188
- CORNWALLIS, Charles, 2nd Earl Cornwallis (cr. Marquis 1792) 1781: 5857*, 5858*, p. 516*, 5859*, 1782: 5973, 6047, 6048*
- CORNWALLIS, (Hon.) Frederick, Archbishop of Canterbury 1773: 5193. 1779: 5553
- COSWAY, Maria 1772: 4582. 1782 6102
- COSWAY, Richard, R.A. 1772: 5031, 4520. 1782: 6102
- COTTERELL-DORMER, Sir Clement 1781: 5867
- COUPLAND, — (freeman of York) 1783: 6270
- COUSE, Kenton 1781: 5897
- COVENTRY, George William, 6th Earl of 1775: 5302
- COVENTRY, Maria (Gunning), Countess of 5302
- COXE, Mrs. 1780: 5744
- CRAVEN, Elizabeth, Countess of (afterwards Margravine of Anspach) 1780: 5744. 1783: 6256. See Index of Artists.
- CRAVEN, William, 6th Earl of 1780: 5744
- CRAWFORD, Ann, see BARRY
- CRILLON, Louis de Berton des Balbes de Quiers, Duc de 1782: p. 614*, 6036, 6041
- CROFTS, Captain 1773: 5198
- CROMWELL, Oliver 1771: 4857. 1772: 4944, 4970. 1776: 5329. 1779: 5573. 1780: 5718*, 5729*, 5730*, 5731*, 5732*. 1781: 5833. 1782: 6006. 1783: 6217, 6239, 6288
- CROSBY, Brass (Lord Mayor 1770-1) 1770: 4843. 1771: 4849, 4850, 4853, 4854, 4857, 4864, 4880, 4885, 4886, 4887. 1772: 4938, 4953
- CROZER, John 1775: 5284
- CRUGER, Henry 1781: 5832, 5833
- CUMBERLAND, Henry Frederick, Duke of 1770: 4845. 1771: 4890, 4896. 1772: 4971. 1773: 5140
- CUMBERLAND, Anne (Luttrell), Duchess of 1771: 4890. 1772: 4971. 1783: 6263
- CUMBERLAND, William Augustus, Duke of 1771: 4896
- CUNNINGHAM, Alexander 1773: 5134
- DARBY, Rear-Admiral George 1782: 6049*
- DARCY, Baroness, see CARMARTHEN
- DARLY, Mary 1772: 4692. See Index of Artists; Index of Publishers
- DARLY, Matthew 1771: 4632. 1772: 4701. 1775: 5318. 1776: 5367. See Index of Artists; Index of Publishers
- DARTMOUTH, William Legge, 2nd Earl of 1773: 5106
- DAUBENY, George 1781: 5833
- D'AUVERGNE, P., Lieut. R.N. 1782: 5960
- DAVIS, Miss or Mrs. 1771: 4905
- DAWSON, Miss 1777: 5418
- DEANE, Silas 1783: 6288, 6303
- DE BELGIOIOSO, Count 1776: 5353

- DEERHURST, Lord (succ. as 7th Earl of Coventry 1809) 1782: 6105, 6107
- DE GREY, William (1st Baron Walsingham 1780) 1771: 4852
- DELAVAL, Sir John Hurrey (cr. Bart. 1761, Baron Delaval Oct. 1783) 1782: 5988
- DELPINI, Carlo Antonio 1776: 5361
- DENBIGH, Basil Feilding, 6th Earl of 1780: 5763, 5763 A. 1782: 5976. 1783: 6162
- D'ÉON DE BEAUMONT, Chevalier 1771: 4862, 4865, p. 18, 4870, 4871, 4872, 4873, 4881. 1773: 5108. 1777: 5427. 1778: 5512
- DE PYLEN (ex-jesuit) 1780: 5712*, 5713*
- DERBY, Edward Stanley, 12th Earl of 1779: 5587. 1781: 5901. 1783: 6263
- DESCAZEUX DU HALLEY, Chevalier Michel 1772: 5067
- DEVONSHIRE, Georgiana (Spencer), Duchess of 1776: 5373, 5375. 1777: 5413. 1779: 5600, 5601. 1782: 6102. 1783: 6263, 6265.
- DEVONSHIRE, William Cavendish, 5th Duke of 1777: 5413. 1781: p. 494*. 1783: 6163
- DIGHTON, Robert 1778: 5530. See Index of Artists
- DIGHTON (father of Robert) 1778: 5530
- DODD, (Rev.) William, LL.D. 1774: 5249
- DORCHESTER, Henry Pierrepont, 1st Marquis of 1771: 4900
- DORSET, John Frederick Sackville, 3rd Duke of 1776: 5355
- DRAKE, Mrs. 1771: 4909
- DRAPER, Sir William, K.B., Lieut.-General 1779: 5591. 1782: 6041
- DRIVER, Mr. 1770: 4847
- DRYBUTTER, Onslow (?) 1782: 6121
- DRYBUTTER, Samuel 1771: 4915, 4305
- DUANE, Matthew 1771: 4927
- DU BARRY, Marie-Jeanne, Countess 1771: 4423. 1774: 5222, 5246
- DUNCAN, Lady Mary 1782: 6125
- DUNCOMBE, Henry 1783: 6270
- DUNDAS, Henry (cr. Viscount Melville 1802) 1782: 6057. 1783: 6169, 6217, 6241, 6256, 6286
- DUNNING, John (cr. Baron Ashburton 1782) 1775: 5299. 1780: 5659. 1782: 5972, 5980, 5985, 5987, 6007, 6011, 6023, 6032, 6042, 6091. 1783: 6165, 6173, 6184, 6195, p. 688, 6212, 6214, 6217, 6281
- DUNSTAN, Jeffery or Jeffrey 1780: 5637. 1783: 6238, 6244, 6284, 6331
- DUTHÉ, Rosalie 1773: 5141
- DYSON, Jeremiah 1770: 4842. 1771: p. 36. 1772: 4936, 4942, 4955, 4962, 5030. 1773: 5098, 5106, 5109, 5125, 5132
- EDEN, William (cr. Baron Auckland 1789) 1778: 5473, 5474, 5475, 5487. 1779: 5575. 1783: 6203
- EDGCUMBE, Lady, see MOUNT-EDGCUMBE
- EDMONSTONE, Sir Archibald, Bart. 1774: 5681
- EDWARD AUGUSTUS, Prince (cr. Duke of Kent 1799) 1770: 4841, 1781: 5895
- EFFINGHAM, Thomas Howard, 3rd Earl of 1782: 5995, 6061, 6087
- EGERTON, Lt.-Colonel William 1780: 5700
- EGREMONT, George O'Brien Wyndham, 3rd Earl of 1773: 5141
- ELIOTT, General George Augustus (cr. Baron Heathfield 1787) 1782: 6034*, 6035, 6036, 6037, 6043. 1783: 6256, 6267
- ELIZABETH, Princess 1770: 4841. 1781: 5895
- ELLIOT, Sir Gilbert, 3rd Bart. 1772: 4962
- ELLIOTT (or Eliot), Grace Dalrymple 1774: 5257. 1775: 5321. 1778: 5505. 1782: 6084. 1783: 6284
- ELLIOTT (or Eliot), Sir John 1775: 5321
- ELLIS, Welbore (1st Baron Mendip, 1794) 1771: 4864
- ERASMUS, Bishop of Arcadia in Crete 1778: 5493
- ERNEST AUGUSTUS, Prince (cr. Duke of Cumberland 1799) 1770: 4841. 1781: 5895

INDEX OF PERSONS

- ESDAILE, Sir James 1778: 5470
 ESTAING, Charles-Hector Théodat, Comte d' 1779: 5581*. 1783: 6229
 EVANS, Caleb (Baptist minister) 1778: 5493, 5494
 EVERTSEN (or Everts), Cornelis (Dutch admiral) 1780: 5719*
 EWIN, William Howell 1773: 5187, 5189
 EYRE, Anthony or Francis 1782: 6021
 EYRE, Sir James 1770: 4842, 4843
 FALMOUTH, Viscount, see BOSCAWEN
 FARQUHAR (Rev.) 1772: 5068
 FARREL (or Farell), Mrs. (afterwards Mrs. Kennedy) 1779: 5622
 FARREN, Elizabeth (m. Lord Derby 1797) 1778: 5518. 1781: 5901, 6359. 1783: 6263
 FERGUSON, George, Governor of Tobago 1782: 6048*
 FERRERS, George Townshend, Lord de (2nd Marq. Townshend from 1807) 1781: p. 494*
 FIELDING, Captain Charles, R.N. 1780: 5653, 5712*, 5714*, 5724*
 FIELDING, Sir John 1771: 4405, 4929. 1774: 5233. 1779: 5599, 5618. 1781: 5947
 FISCHER, Johann Christian 1782: 6125
 FISHER, Miss Charlotte 1783: 6301
 FITZGERALD, George Robert, 'Fighting Fitzgerald' 1773: 5198, 5200. 1774: 5256. 1775: 5323
 FITZGERALD, Mr. (perhaps G.R.) 1781: 5886
 FITZPATRICK, Richard 1775: 5304
 FITZPATRICK, (Hon.) Richard, (General 1803) 1772: 4704. 1779: 5575. 1780: 5625
 FITZWILLIAM, William Wentworth, 2nd Earl Fitzwilliam 1781: p. 494*
 FLETCHER, George 1780: 5660
 FLINT, — 1781: 5896
 FLOOD, Henry. 1782: 6003. 1783: 6272
 FLORIDA BLANCA, Don José Moñino, Conde de 1780: 5711*
 FOOTE, Samuel 1773: 5201
 FORDYCE, Alexander 1772: 5016
 FORREST, Theodosius 1772: 4474. 1773: 4688
 FORSTER, Captain 1781: 5861
 FOX, (Hon.) Charles James 1771: 4859, 4864, 4892, 4894, 4811. 1772: 4943, 4944, 4962, 5010, 4829. 1773: 5098, 4810, 5109, 5112, 5113, 5125, 5145. 1774: 5223. 1776: 5334. 1777: 5424, 5424 A. 1779: 5548, 5575. 1780: 5625, 5639, 5644, 5650, 5659, 5676, 5697, 5698, 5699, 5707, 5709,¹ 5755.¹ 1781: 5829, 5836, 5843, 5878, 5911. 1782: 5961, 5962, 5963, 5964, 5965, 5966, 5967, 5968, 5969, 5970, 5971, 5972, 5978, 5979, 5981, 5982, 5983, 5984, 5985, 5986, 5987, 5988, 5989, 5990, 5992, 5996, 5997, 6001, 6004, 6005, 6006, 6007, 6009, 6010, 6011, 6012, 6013, 6014, 6015, 6018, 6020, 6022, 6023, 6027, 6029, 6030, 6042, 6044, 6054, 6094, 6117, 6119. 1783: 6162, 6164, 6165, 6166, 6167, 6173, 6176, 6177, 6178, 6179, 6180, 6181, 6183, 6184, 6186, 6187, 6188, 6189, 6191, 6192, 6193, 6194, 6195, 6196, 6197, p. 688, 6198, 6199, 6201, 6203, 6204, 6205, 6206, 6207, 6208, 6211, 6212, 6213, 6214, 6215, 6216, 6217, 6218, 6219, 6220, 6220 A, 6221, 6222, 6223, 6224, 6225, 6226, 6227, 6228, 6229, 6230, 6231, 6232, 6233, 6234, 6235, 6236, 6237, 6238, 6239, 6240, 6241, 6242, 6244, 6245, 6248, 6250, 6251, 6252, 6254, 6256, 6257, 6260, 6261, 6264, 6265, 6266, 6269, 6271, 6274, 6275, 6276, 6277, 6278, 6279, 6280, 6281, 6282, 6283, 6284, 6285, 6286, 6287, 6288, 6289, 6290, 6291, 6313, 6319, 6320, 6323
 FOX, Henry, see LORD HOLLAND
 FOX, (Hon.) Henry Edward (afterwards General) 1772: 5062. 1773: 5112
 FOX, (Hon.) Stephen (2nd Baron Holland 1774) 1772: 4944, 4649, 4648, 4829, 1773: 5114, 5123, 5208. 1774: 5223
 FRANKLIN, Benjamin 1777: 5401, 5407*. 1780: 5691*, 5704, 5711*. 1783: 6173, 6212, 6288

¹ Date uncertain.

- FRANKLIN, Welle or Walter (of New York) 1775: 5284
- FRASER, (Hon.) Simon, Master of Lovat, Major-General 1775: 5287
- FRASER, Simon, Brigadier-General 1778: 5470
- FREDERICK, Hereditary Prince of Denmark 1774: 5222
- FREDERICK II, of Prussia 1772: 4957, 4958*. 1773: 5110. 1774: 5222, 5229. 1780: 5630, 5719*
- FREDERICK AUGUSTUS, Prince (cr. Duke of York 1784) 1770: 4841. 1780: 5669. 1781: 5895
- FRENCH, Mrs. 1782: 6090
- FROBISHER, Martin (freeman of York) 1783: 6270
- FULLARTON, William 1780: 5659
- GABRIELLI, Catterina 1776: 5349
- GAGE, (Hon.) Thomas, Lieut-General, Governor of Massachusetts 1774: 5230. 1781: 5869. 1782: 6041. 1783: 6288
- GALITZIN, Prince 1780: 5714*
- GALLINI, Giovanni Andrea Battista, called Sir John 1781: 5887
- GALWAY, Robert Monckton Arundel, 5th Viscount 1783: 6270
- GAMBIER, James, Vice-admiral 1772: 4974. 1782: 6080
- GARDINER, William, Lt.-Col. (Lt.-General 1799) 1783: 6342
- GARLAND, Richard (freeman of York) 1783: 6270
- GARNIER, Mrs. 1783: 6304
- GARRICK, David 1772: 5063. 1773: 5203. 1776: 5364, 5369
- GASCOYNE, Bamber 1782: 6021, 6056. 1783: 6293
- GASCOYNE, Sir Crisp 1783: 6293
- GATES, Horatio, American Major-General 1778: 5469, 5469 A*, 5470
- GEORGE II 1771: 4898. 1772: 5105. 1782: 5961. 1783: 6291
- GEORGE III 1770: 4841. 1771: 4387, 4417, 4859, 4878, 4883, 4898. 1772: 4424, 4957, 4958*, 4968. 1773: 5098, 5105, 5106, 5110, 5124, 5126, 5132, 5135. 1774: 5222, 5227, 5234. 1775: 5288. 1776: p. 216, 5328, 5333, 5340. 1778: 5470, 5476, 5485,¹ 5489. 1779: 5534, 5540, 5544, 5545, 5546, 5547, 5549, 5569, 5571, 5573, 5574, 5580, 5582. 1780: 5631, 5635, 5636, 5638, 5639, 5642, 5643, 5645, 5667, 5668, 5669, 5670, 5671, 5673, 5675, 5678, 5680, 5683, 5687, 5700, 5707, 5708, 5711, 5722*, 5723, 5724*, 5729*. 1781: p. 494*, 5849, 5851, 5855, 5856, 5895, 5897. 1782: 5961, 5970, 5979, 5985, 5986, 5988, 5997, 6000, 6005, 6007, 6014, 6033, 6042, 6043, 6051, 6115. 1783: 6162, 6174, 6185, 6190, 6195, 6198, 6200, 6205, 6212, 6214, 6218, 6219, 6223, 6227, 6228, 6233, 6237, 6239, 6250, 6256, 6266, 6269, 6280, 6285, 6286, 6287 (8), 6289, 6291, 6292*
- GEORGE, Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV 1770: 4841. 1771: 4387, 4883, 4898. 1780: 5644, 5669, 5767. 1781: 5865, 5895. 1782: 6115, 6116. 1783: 6231, 6233, 6237, 6244, 6257, 6259, 6263, 6266, 6318, 6319
- GERMAIN, Lord George (cr. Viscount Sackville 1782) 1772: 4978. 1776: p. 216, 5340, 5342. 1778: 5470, 5479, 5480,¹ 5481.¹ 1779: 5540, 5548, 5573, 5574. 1780: 5632, 5635, 5639, 5640, 5660, 5661, 5675, 5676, 5707. 1781: 5829, 5855. 1782: 5961, 5970, 5982, 5984, 5985, 5986, 5988, 6024, 6033, 6046. 1783: 6256
- GILLAM, Samuel 1770: 4844
- GLOUCESTER, Maria (Walpole), Duchess of 1783: 6263
- GLOUCESTER, William Henry, Duke of 1783: 6321
- GLYNN, John, serjeant-at-law 1775: 5281
- GOOD (auctioneer) 1778: 5530
- GOODWIN, Miss 1783: 6296
- GORDON, Alexander, 4th Duke of 1775: 5315
- GORDON, Jane (Maxwell), Duchess of 1775: 5314. 1779: 5600, 5601
- GORDON, Lord George 1780: 5633, 5638, 5643, 5671, 5672, 5678, 5683,

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF PERSONS

- 5685, 5694, 5722*, 5723, 5728*,
5734*. 1781: 5840, 5841, 5849.
1783: 6256
- GORDON, Henry (butler) 1781: 5893
- GOULD, Sir Charles 1782: 6041
- GOULD, Sir Henry 1781: 5875
- GOWER, Granville Leveson-Gower,
2nd Earl (cr. Marquis of Stafford 1786) 1772: 4982
- GRAFTON, Augustus Henry Fitzroy,
Duke of 1770: 4842. 1771: 4423,
4859, 4877, 4634. 1772: 4955,
4959, 4962. 1773: 5132. 1775:
5324. 1776: 5334. 1782: 6033,
6060. 1783: 6217, 6254
- GRAFTON, Elizabeth (Wrottesley),
Duchess of 1772: 4989. 1775:
5324. 1779: 5600, 5601
- GRAHAM, James, Marquis of (4th
Duke of Montrose 1790-1837)
1782: 6086, 6105, 6107
- GRAHAM, James (quack doctor)
1780: 5766. 1783: 6247, 6284,
6323, 6324, 6325, 6327, 6346
- GRAHAM, William 1779: 5598
- GRANBY, Marquis of, see RUTLAND
- GRANTLEY, Baron, see NORTON, Sir
Fletcher
- GRASSE, François - Joseph - Paul,
Comte de 1782: 5991, 5992, 5993,
5994, 5997, 6000, 6019, 6031
- GRATTAN, Henry 1782: 6003, 6089.
1783: 6272
- GRAVES, Admiral Samuel 1782:
6048*
- GREENHILL, Miss 1783: 6297
- GRENVILLE, George 1771: 4423.
1776: p. 216. 1778: 5487
- GREY, Lady Jane 1771: 4901
- GRIFFITHS, Antony (of New York)
1775: 5284
- GROSE, Francis 1771: 4683. 1772:
4474. 1778: 5511. 1780: 5787,
5802. 1782: 6145
- GROSE, Sir Nash 1771: 4682
- GROSVENOR, Richard, 1st Baron
Grosvenor (1st Earl 1784) 1770:
4845
- GROSVENOR, Henrietta (Vernon),
Lady 1770: 4845. 1771: 4862,
4896. 1774: 5278. 1778: 5507.
1783: 6263
- GUADAGNI, Gaetano 1771: 4929
- GUINES (or Guignes), Comte de
1773: 5110, 5194, 4835
- GUNSTON, 'Lady' 1772: 4972, 4979
- GURNEY, Joseph 1782: 6041
- GUSTAVUS III, king of Sweden
1780: 5713*, 5719*
- HALIFAX, George Montagu Dunk,
2nd Earl of 1771: 4852
- HALLIFAX, Samuel, LL.D. 1773:
5188, 5189
- HALLIFAX, Thomas 1771: 4886
- HAMILTON, — 1778: 5530
- HAMILTON, John, 1st Marquis 1771:
4899
- HAMILTON, Lt.-General Sir Robert,
4th Bart. 1779: 5606, 5607, 5608
- HANCOCK, John 1775: 5293, 5294.
1777: 5401. 1778: 5476
- HANGER, (Hon.) George (4th Baron
Coleraine 1814) 1772: 4977
- HANKEY, Mrs. Elizabeth 1783: 6300
- HARCOURT, George Simon Harcourt,
2nd Earl 1781: p. 494*
- HARDY, Admiral Sir Charles 1780:
5737
- HARLEY, Thomas 1770: 4843. 1771:
4852. 1772: 4939, 4953, 4966,
4967. 1774: 5234, 5235
- HARRINGTON, William Stanhope,
2nd Earl of 1771: 4903. 1772:
4973, 5033. 1773: 5193. 1775:
5322
- HARRINGTON, 3rd Earl of, see
PETERSHAM
- HARRINGTON, Caroline (Fitzroy),
Countess of 1771: 4847, 4862,
4903. 1772: 4973. 1773: 5193.
1778: 5522
- HARRIS, Moses (entomologist) 1773:
5156
- HART, John (Alderman) 1778: 5499
- HARTLEY, David (jun.) 1783: 6256
- HARTLEY, Mrs. Elizabeth 1776:
5350
- HARVEY, Edward, Major-General
1774: 5259
- HASLANG, Count 1773: 4834. 1774:
5278
- HASTINGS, Warren 1783: 6275
- HAWKE, Edward, Admiral, cr. Baron
Hawke 1776 1778: 5504. 1782:
5961, 5986. 1783: 6291

INDEX OF PERSONS

- HAYFORD (musician) 1782: 6125
 HAYLEY, George, Alderman 1776: 5334
 HAYWARD, Clara 1776: 5347
 HEINEL, Mme 1773: 5145
 HELY-HUTCHINSON, John (Provost of Trinity College, Dublin) 1773: 5134
 HENDRICKS, Emanuel (tailor) 1779: 5597
 HERTFORD, Francis Seymour Conway, 1st Earl of 1780: 5750, 5750 A. 1781: 5851. 1782: 5966, 5988, 6018. 1783: 6218
 HERTFORD, Isabelle (Fitzroy), Countess of 1782: 5966, 6018
 HERVEY, (Hon.) Augustus John (succ. as 3rd Earl of Bristol 18th March 1775) 1775: 5301, 5319
 HEXETER, Mrs. 1783: 6309
 HICKMAN, Hannah 1778: 5499
 HILL, 'Sir' John 1773: 5168
 HILL, Rowland (1744-1833, preacher) 1778: 5493, 5494
 HILLSBOROUGH, Wills Hill, 2nd Viscount (cr. Marquis of Downshire 1789) 1770: 4842. 1777: 5419. 1780: 5645, 5675. 1782: 5984
 HINCHINBROKE, John Montagu, Viscount (succ. as 5th Earl of Sandwich) 1783: 6295
 HODGKINSON, Mr. (of the Protestant Association) 1781: 5841
 HOFLEDE 1783: 6292*
 HOLLAND, Henry Fox, 1st Baron 1770: 4842. 1771: 4416, 4864, 4427, 4869, 4874, 4770. 1772: 4944, 5062. 1773: 5098, 5109, 5132 1774: 5223, 5227
 HOLT, Sir John 1771: 4893
 HOOD, Alexander (cr. Baron Bridport 1796) 1779: 5536. 1782: 5998
 HOOD, Henry 1782: 5998
 HOOD, Sir Samuel Bart. (cr. Baron Hood 1782, Viscount Hood 1796) 1782: 5998, 6009, 6048*. 1783: 6267
 HOPKINS, Benjamin, City Chamberlain 1776: 5327. 1777: 5398, 5414
 HOPKINS, Ezekiel (Esek) American Commodore 1776: 5336
 HORNE, (Rev.) John (from 1782 Horne-Tooke) 1771: 4848, 4852, 4861, 4863, p. 18, 4866, 4868, 4874, 4879, 4886, 4433. 1772: 4948, 4967, 4972. 1773: 5104, 5129, 5130, 4827. 1774: 5224. 1775: 5282. 1780: 5709¹
 HORNECK, Charles 1771: 4711. 1772: 4813
 HORNECK, Mrs. 1774: 5256
 HOUSE, Samuel 1780: 5696, 5697. 1781: 5876, 5877. 1783: 6217, 6246, 6265, 6284
 HOWARD, General Sir George, K.B. 1782: 6041
 HOWARTH, Mr. 1780: 5739
 HOWE, Admiral Richard, 4th Viscount Howe (cr. Earl Howe 1788) 1776: 5342. 1777: 5399, 5406, 5406 A*. 1778: 5472, 5473. 1780: 5726*, 5726 A*, 5726 B*, 5726 C*, 5727*, p. 451*. 1782: 5988, 6037, 6043. 1783: 6195
 HOWE, General Sir William (5th Viscount Howe from 1799) 1775: 5308. 1776: 5329, 5340, 5342.¹ 1777: 5399, 5401, 5405, 5405 A*. 1778: 5470, 5472, 5473. 1779: 5548. 1780: 5726*, 5726 A*, 5726 B*, 5726 C*, 5727*, p. 451*. 1782: 6047. 1783: 6288
 HUGHES (equestrian performer) 1783: 6351
 HUMBERSTON, Thomas Frederick Mackenzie, Major 1779: 5575. 1780: 5625
 HUNTER, Miss (? afterwards m. Sir Alured Clarke) 1772: 4974
 HUNTER, Dr. William 1773: 5119. 1782: 6127
 HURFORD, William 1778: 5530
 HYDE (J.P.) 1780: 5699
 HYDER ALI 1783: 6291
 IRNHAM, Simon Luttrell, Baron, cr. Viscount Carhampton 1781 (Earl 1785) 1772: 4976. 1777: 5424, 5424 A, 5425
 JAMES II 1778: 5494
 JANSEN (dancing-master) 1782: 6096
 JENKINSON, Charles (cr. Baron

¹ Date uncertain.

- Hawkesbury 1786, Earl of Liverpool 1796) 1773: 5124. 1779: 5588. 1781: 5831. 1783: 6228, 6256
- JENNINGS, Laura 1779: 5592
- JENYNS, Soane (works of) 1783: 6207, 6207 A
- JOHNSON, Samuel, LL.D. 1774: 5273. c. 1777: 6357. 1778: 5479, 5480,¹ 5481,¹ 1781: 5922. 1782: 6103. 1783: 6328
- (works of) 1772: 4424. 1775: 5297. 1779: 5573. 1782: 6103. 1783: 6328
- JOHNSTON, Lady Cecilia 1780: 5748. 1782: 6104
- JOHNSTONE, George, Commodore, known as Governor Johnstone 1773: 5100. 1778: 5473, 5474, pp. 289–90*, 5487. 1781: 5874. 1782: 5960, 6048*. 1783: 6241, 6243, 6256
- JONES, Paul 1779: 5559, 5560*, 5561, 5561 A*, 5562, 5563*, 5564, 5565*, 5566, 5568. 1780: 5715*
- JONES, Polly 1772: 4971. See KENNEDY, Polly
- JONSON, Ben (works of) 1772: 5063, 5064
- JOSEPH II, Emperor 1771: 4388. 1772: 4957. 1773: 5110. 1774: 5222, 5229
- JULIANA MARIA, dowager Queen of Denmark 1772: 4946
- 'JUNIUS' 1771: 4879
- Letters of 1771: 4857. 1772: 4424
- KATERFELTO (or Katterfelto), Gustavus 1783: 6162, 6214, 6247, 6284, 6325, 6326, 6327, 6351
- KAUFFMANN, Angelica 1782: 6102
- KEITH, Sir Robert Murray, K.B. 1772: 4980
- KELLIE or Kelly, Thomas Alexander, 6th Earl of 1780: 5751, 5751 A
- KEMBLE, John Philip 1783: 6311¹
- KENDAL, Mrs. 1772: 4974
- KENNEDY, Matthew 1770: 4844
- KENNEDY, Patrick 1770: 4844
- KENNEDY, Kitty or Polly 1772: 5095
- KENNEDY, Polly 1773: 5204. See JONES, Polly
- KENNETT, Brackley (Lord Mayor) 1780: 5688, 5689, 5690, 5692. 1781: 5866
- KENYON, Lloyd (cr. Baron Kenyon 1788) 1771: 4929
- KEPPEL, Augustus, Admiral (cr. Viscount Keppel 1782) 1771: 4910. 1779: 5536, 5537, 5538, 5548, 5570. 1780: 5626, 5650, 5658, 5673, 5700, 5701, 5708. 1782: 5965, 5979, 5984, 5985, 5986, 5987, 5989, 5992, 5997, 6007, 6009, 6023, 6042, 6048*. 1783: 6162, 6165, 6173, 6195, 6199, 6203, 6212, 6214, 6217, 6223, 6227, 6229, 6241, 6251, 6256, 6281
- KINGSTON, Sir Evelyn Pierrepont, 2nd Duke of 1775: 5319
- KINGSTON, Duchess of, see CHUD-LEIGH
- KIRBY, Cranley Thomas 1781: 5900
- KIRKE, James 1782: 6021
- KIRKMAN, John (Alderman) 1772: 4937
- KITCHIN, Henry (Alderman) 1783: 6260, 6314
- KITE, Sir Robert 1770: 4843
- KITSON (freeman of York) 1783: 6270
- KNOWLES, Admiral Sir Charles, 1st Bart. 1772: 4974
- KNOWLES, 'Mrs', Maria Magdalena Theresa 1772: 4974
- LADBROKE, Sir Robert 1770: 4843
- LADE, Sir John, 2nd Bart. 1778: 5508
- LADE, Lady (née Thrale) 1782: 6082
- LAFAYETTE, Marquis de 1781: 5846
- LA HERRERIA, Viconte de 1780: 5712*, 5713*, 5714*
- LAMB (silversmith) 1778: 5530
- LAMB, John (of New York) 1775: 5284
- LAMB, T. (of Rye) 1781: 5902
- LAMBE, Harriot 1771: 4904. 1778: 5505
- LA MOTTE, François Henri de 1781: 5847
- LA MOTTE PIQUET (French admiral) 1781: 5838
- LANE, Lady Bridget (née Henley,

¹ Date uncertain.

- m.* (2) Hon. John Tollemache 1773) 1772: 5066
- LANGANI (or Langoni) (violinist) 1782: 6125
- LANGARA, don Juan de 1780: 5724*. 1783: 6210
- LANGFORD, Abraham 1772: 5001. 1773: 5171
- LANGFORD (Rev.) 1772: 5070
- LASCELLES, Edwin 1780: 5657
- LAURENS, Henry 1777: 5401. 1780: 5733*
- LA VAUGUYON, Paul-François de Quélen de Stuer de Caussade, duc de 1780: 5712*, 5713*, 5714*, 5719*
- LE BRUN, Mlle 1775: 5307
- LE DESPENCER, Sir Francis Dashwood, 15th Baron 1774: 5250
- LEE, Charles, American Major-General 1775: 5296, 5296 A. 1777: 5401, 5404
- LEE, John 1783: 6290
- LEEDS, Thomas Osborne (Danby), 1st Duke of 1771: 4902
- LE FLEMING, Sir Michael, 4th Bart. 1778: 5506
- LEINSTER, Robert Fitzgerald, 2nd Duke of 1776: 5356
- LEITH, Alexander 1780: 5660
- LENNOX, Miss 1780: 5743
- LEONI (pyrotechnist) 1772: 4664
- LESSINGHAM, Mrs. 1777: 5415
- LEWES, Sir Watkin 1771: 4880. 1773: 5130, 5131, 5155. 1774: 5235, 5264. 1777: 5437. 1781: 5849, 5851, 5852
- LIGONIER, Penelope (Pitt), Countess of 1771: 4862. 1773: 4801. 1774: 5278. 1777: 5425
- LILL, Godfrey 1773: 5134
- LINCOLN, Lord: Thomas Pelham Clinton, styled Earl of Lincoln 1779-94, succ. as 3rd Duke of Newcastle-under-Lyne 1794 1780: 5698, 5699, 5747
- LINDSEY, Theophilus 1780: 5736
- LIVINGSTON, Abraham (of New York) 1775: 5284
- LOCKE, John (works of) 1778: 5494. 1780: 5657, 5668. 1783: 6207, 6207 A
- LORT, Michael, D.D. 1780: 5757¹
- LOUDOUN, John Campbell, 4th Earl of 1779: 5595
- LOUGHBOROUGH, Lord, see WEDDERBURN
- LOUGHBOROUGH, Charlotte (Courtenay) Lady 1782: 6100
- LOUIS XV, of France 1772: 4957. 1773: 5110. 1774: 5222, 5226
- LOUIS XVI, of France 1774: 5229. 1777: 5401. 1779: 5567. 1780: 5636, 5642, 5643, 5647, 5650, 5668, 5711*, 5719*. 1782: 5961, 6000, 6043. 1783: 6292*
- LOW, Cornelius P. (of New York) 1775: 5284
- LOWTH (or Louth), Robert, Bishop of London 1779: 5540
- LOWTHER, Sir James (cr. Earl of Lonsdale 1784) 1773: 5136. 1783: 6246
- LUGG, William (of New York) 1775: 5284
- LUTHER, Martin 1780: 5680
- LUTTRELL, Col. Henry Lawes (2nd Earl of Carhampton 1787) 1771: 4852, 4864, 4890. 1772: 4971. 1773: 5106, 5151
- LUTTRELL, Simon, see IRNHAM, Baron
- LYTTELTON, George, 1st Baron Lyttelton 1773: 5122
- LYTTELTON, Thomas, 2nd Baron Lyttelton 1773: 5147, 5198, 5199. 1777: 5424, 5424 A. 1781: 5868
- MACARTNEY, Sir George (cr. Baron Macartney 1776, Earl Macartney 1792) 1772: 4942, 4960. 1773: 5134
- MACAULAY, Mrs. Catharine 1771: p. 18. 1772: 4972. 1777: 5410, 5441. 1779: 5598. 1780: 5766
— works of 1783: 6207
- MCCREA, Jane 1778: 5470, p. 284*
- MCDUGELL, Alexander (of New York) 1775: 5284
- MACKLIN, Charles 1770: 4846. 1773: 5175, 5203
- MADAN, (Rev.) Martin 1771: 4470. 1778: 5496. 1780: 5768. 1781: 5864
- MAGNINI, see MANINI

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF PERSONS

- MAHON, Charles Stanhope, Viscount (succ. as 3rd Earl of Stanhope 1786) 1782: 6072, 6286. 1783: 6241, 6286
 MAHON, Mrs. Gertrude 1781: 5868, 5948. 1782: 6084, 6085. 1783: 6263, 6295, 6296
 MALAGRIDA, see SHELBURNE
 MALCOMB (Malcom or Malcolm), John, Commissioner of Customs 1774: 5232, p. 169
 MALDEN, George Capel, Viscount (5th Earl of Essex 1799) 1780: 5741
 MALONE, Anthony 1773: 5134
 MALTZAHN, Comte de 1779: 5583
 MANINI, Gaetano (painter, Milan) of 1780: 5770
 MANSFIELD, William Murray, 1st Earl of 1770: 4842, 4845. 1771: 4431, 4423, 4859, 4877, 4882, 4885, 4770. 1772: 4950, 4953, 4955. 1773: 5106, 5109, 5125, 5132. 1774: 5226, 5227, 5234. 1775: 5282, 5285, 5287, 5288, 5289. 1776: p. 216, 5328, 5340. 1778: 5470, 5479, 5480,¹ 5481,¹ 5512. 1779: 5571, 5573. 1780: 5624, 5632, 5633, 5645, 5667, 5668, 5671, 5675, 5676. 1781: 5831, 5850, 5900. 1782: 5970, 5980, 5982, 5984, 5986, 5987. 1783: 6212, 6256
 MARIA, Queen of Portugal 1780: 5711*
 MARIA AMALIA, Queen of Spain 1783: 6263
 MARIA THERESA, Empress 1780: 5711*
 MARIE ANTOINETTE, Queen of France 1783: 6263
 MARKHAM, William, Bishop (Archbishop of York from 1777) 1776: p. 216, 5343. 1777: 5400. 1778: 5492.¹ 1779: 5553. 1780: 5631, 5669. 1782: 5985, 5986
 MARLBOROUGH, John Churchill, 1st Duke of 1778: 5485¹
 MARY, Princess 1781: 5895
 MARY (Stewart) Queen of Scotland 1771: 4899
 MASON (Rev.) William. 1782: 5958
 MASSERANO, Prince 1771: 4423. 1772: 4935
 MATTHEWS, 'Punch', Alderman of Shaftesbury 1776: 5341
 MAUREPAS, Jean-Frédéric-Phélypeaux, Comte de 1780: 5711*
 MAWBAY, Sir Joseph 1773: 5190, 5191, 5192. 1780: 5746
 MEDLYCOT, Thomas Hutchins 1779: 5594
 MEDOWS (or Meadows), Philip 1776: 5347, 5362
 MEEK, — 1774: 5270, 4708
 MEHEMET of Morocco 1780: 5711*
 MELBOURNE, Elizabeth (Milbanke), Viscountess 1783: 6263
 MILES, 'Captain' 1773: 5199, 5200
 MILLES, Jeremiah, F.S.A. 1773: 5160
 MITCHELL, Mrs. 1781: 5930
 MOLESWORTH, John 1776: 5360
 MOLESWORTH, Richard Nassau, 4th Viscount 1778: 5508
 MOLYNEUX, Sir Francis 1782: 6074
 MONRO, Dr. John 1775: 5318
 MONTAGU, (Hon.) John 1780: 5700
 MONTFORD, Thomas Bromley, 2nd Baron 1780: 5738
 MONTGOLFIER, Jacques-Étienne or Joseph-Michel 1783: 6333, 6334
 MORANDE, see THEVENEAU DE MORANDE
 MORRIS, Staats Long 1781: 5872
 MOUNT-EDGCUMBE, Emma (Gilbert), Lady 1780: 5749
 MULGRAVE, Constantine John Phipps, 2nd Baron 1782: 6082
 MUNDY (a shoe-maker) 1772: 4637
 MUNRO (or Neale) Elizabeth ('Betty') 1783: 6307
 MURRAY, Lieut. Alexander 1772: 4987
 MURRAY, Lieut.-General James 1782: 6041, 6047, 6048*, 6097
 MUSTAFA III, Ottoman Sultan 1772: 4957. 1774: 5222. See ACHMET IV
 NASH, William 1770: 4843. 1771: 4886
 NECKER, Jacques 1780: 5657
 NESBIT, Mrs. 1775: 5301
 NEUMAN, 'Baron' 1773: 4836. 1774: 4651

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF PERSONS

- NEWNHAM, Nathaniel 1783: 6305
 NORFOLK, Katherine (Brockholes),
 Duchess of 1781: 5889
 NORFOLK, 11th Duke of, see
 SURREY
 NORTH, Frederick, Lord (2nd Earl of Guilford 1790) 1771: 4423,
 4857, 4859, 4863, 4864, 4869, 4874,
 4877. 1772: 4935, 4939, 4942,
 4955, 4960, 4961, 4962, 4968, 4969.
 1773: 5098, 5099, 5106, 5109, 5111,
 5124, 5126, 5127, 5128, 5132,
 5135.¹ 1774: 5226, 5227, 5228,
 5231, 5238, 5242, 5243, 5244.
 1775: 5281, 5282, 5285, 5288, 5289.
 1776: p. 216, 5328, 5333, 5340,
 5342. 1778: pp. 289-90*, 5476,
 5479, 5480,¹ 5481,¹ 5487, 5493,
 5496, 5501. 1779: 5537, 5540,
 5541, 5542, 5543, 5548, 5569, 5571,
 5573, 5574, 5575, 5578, 5580. 1780:
 5624, 5632, 5633, 5635, 5636, 5637,
 5638, 5639, 5640, 5644, 5645, 5649,
 5651, 5653, 5659, 5660, 5661, 5666,
 5668, 5671, 5675, 5676, 5678, 5680,
 5700, 5703, 5707, 5709,¹ 5711*,
 5722*, 5723, 5724*, 5729*. 1781:
 5829, 5831, 5834, 5839*, 5851, 5855,
 5856. 1782: 5961, 5963, 5964, 5965,
 5967, 5968, 5969, 5970, 5971, 5972,
 5974, 5975, 5977, 5978, 5981, 5982,
 5983, 5984, 5985, 5986, 5988, 5992,
 5998, 6024, 6033, 6042, 6049,*
 6063, 6093. 1783: 6175, 6176,
 6177, 6178, 6179, 6181, 6183, 6184,
 6186, 6187, 6188, 6189, 6192,
 6193, 6194, 6195, 6196, 6197,
 6198, 6199, 6201, 6203, 6204, 6205,
 6206, 6207, 6212, 6213, 6214, 6216,
 6217, 6218, 6219, 6220, 6220 A,
 6221, 6222, 6223, 6224, 6225,
 6225 A, 6226, 6227, 6228, 6229,
 6230, 6232, 6233, 6234, 6235, 6236,
 6237, 6238, 6240, 6241, 6242, 6245,
 6248, 6250, 6251, 6254, 6256, 6257,
 6259, 6260, 6261, 6265, 6266, 6269,
 6276, 6277, 6279, 6280, 6281, 6282,
 6284, 6285, 6286, 6287, 6288, 6289,
 6290, 6291
 NORTHINGTON, Robert Henley, 2nd
 Earl of 1773: 5125
 NORTHUMBERLAND, Elizabeth (Seymour), Duchess of 1771: 4862,
 4929. 1772: 5066. 1773: 5193
 NORTHUMBERLAND, Hugh Percy
 (originally Smithson), Duke of 1780: 5762
 NORTON, Sir Fletcher (cr. Baron
 Grantley 1782) 1770: 4842, 4844.
 1771: 4431, 4859, 4860, 4869, 4885,
 4893, 4894. 1772: 4970. 1773:
 5132. 1774: 5224. 1775: 5281,
 5286. 1778: 5479, 5480,¹ 5481.¹
 1782: 6071. 1783: 6217.
 NUGENT, Robert, Earl Nugent 1782:
 6059. 1783: 6212, 6255, 6256
 O'BRIEN, Miss. 1782: 6089
 OCTAVIUS, Prince 1781: 5895
 OGLETHORPE, James Edward, General 1781: 5880
 O'KELLY, Dennis 1773: 4643
 OLIVER, Richard 1771: 4850, 4853,
 4854, 4864, 4880. 1772: 4937.
 1773: 5129, 5130
 OMICHUND (or Omichand) 1773:
 5101
 O'NEILL, Owen Roe (d. 1649) 1779:
 5572
 ONGLEY, Robert Henry 1775: 5311
 ONSLOW, George (4th Baron Onslow
 1776, 1st Earl of Onslow 1801)
 1771: 4864, 4906. 1772: 4955
 ONSLOW, George (Little Cocking
 George) 1771: 4852, 4855, 4864.
 1782: 6065
 ORFORD, George Walpole, 3rd Earl
 of 1781: 5873
 ORVILLIERS, Louis Guillouet, Comte d' 1779: 5555. 1780: 5626
 OSBERN, Mrs. 1772: 4982
 OUDH, Begums of 1783: 6277
 OWEN, Mrs. (inn-keeper) 1772:
 5011
 PACCHIEROTTI, Gasparo 1780: 5764.
 1782: 6092, 6125
 PAKINGTON, Sir Herbert, 7th Bart.
 1782: 6088
 PALLISER, Admiral Sir Hugh, 1st
 Bart. 1779: 5536, 5537, 5538,
 5543, 5548. 1780: 5673, 5676,
 5705, 5707. 1782: 5999, 6048*.
 1783: 6162

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF PERSONS

- PANTON, Thomas 1777: 5421
 PAOLI, Pasquale de 1771: p. 18.
 1780: 5711*
 PARKER, Vice-Admiral Hyde (succ. as Bart. 1782) 1781: 5848. 1782:
 5988, 6043
 PARSONS, William 1782: 6095
 PEACH, Samuel 1781: 5833
 PEARSON, Richard, Captain R.N.
 1779: 5563*
 PECK, (Rev.) Sam, Fellow of Trinity
 Coll., Cambridge 1772: 4725
 PEMBROKE, Henry Herbert, 10th
 Earl of 1772: 4974
 PERCY, Hugh, Lord (2nd Duke of Northumberland 1786) 1771:
 p. 36. 1772: 4983
 PERCY, Lady Anne (Stuart) 1772:
 4983. 1778: 5505
 PERDITA, see ROBINSON, Mary
 PERREAU, Daniel and Robert 1777:
 5425
 PERROTT, Sir Richard, 2nd Bart.
 1774: 5259
 PERY, Edmund Sexton (cr. Viscount
 Pery 1785) 1782: 6003
 PETERBOROUGH, Charles Mordaunt,
 4th Earl of 1777: 5418. 1782:
 6105, 6107
 PETERSHAM, Charles Stanhope, Viscount (succ. as 3rd Earl 1779)
 1773: 4812. 1778: 5502
 PETRE, Anne (Howard), Lady 1778:
 5489
 PETRE, Father Edmund 1780: 5670
 PETRE, Robert Edward Petre, 9th
 Baron 1778: 5489. 1780: 5670
 PEYTON, Captain Joseph, R.N.
 1783: 6298
 PHILLIPS, Mrs. 1773: 5171
 PHIPPS, (Hon.) Henry (cr. Earl of Mulgrave 1812) 1783: 6342
 PIELTAIN (musician) 1782: 6125
 PIGOT, George, Lord (cr. Bart.
 1764, Baron 1766) 1780: 5655
 PIGOT, Hugh, Admiral 1782: 5992,
 5996, 5997, 6043
 PINCHBECK, Christopher, jun. 1772:
 5055. 1774: 5234. 1782: 5970
 PITT, Thomas (cr. Baron Camelford 1784) 1783: 6223
 PITT, William, Earl of Chatham,
see CHATHAM
- PITT, William 1782: 5961, 5984,
 6023, 6032, 6044. 1783: 6212,
 6223, 6232, 6241, 6256, 6286,
 6296
 PIUS VI 1779: 5534, 5573. 1780:
 5643, 5670, 5678, 5681, 5711*.
 1783: 6284
 PLOMER, William 1779: 5615, 5616
 PLUMBE, Samuel 1770: 4843. 1772:
 4937. 1779: 5540, 5615, 5616, 5617
 PLYMOUTH, Other Hickman
 (Windsor), 5th Earl of 1780:
 5761. 1782: p. 632
 POCOCK, Sir George, Admiral 1782:
 5961. 1783: 6291
 PORTLAND, William Bentinck, 1st
 Earl of 1771: 4895
 PORTLAND, William Henry Cavendish, 3rd Duke of 1771: 4895.
 1781: p. 494*. 1782: 6083. 1783:
 6199, 6203, 6204, 6206, 6214, 6216,
 6217, 6223, 6226, 6228, 6233, 6238,
 6248, 6251, 6256, 6274, 6280, 6281,
 6284, 6290
 POWELL, Harriet (afterwards Lady
 Seaforth) 1775: 5305
 POWELL, John (Cashier in Paymaster-General's office) 1783:
 6195
 POWNEY, Penniston Portlock 1780:
 5700, 5701, 5708
 POWYS, Thomas (cr. Baron Lilford 1794) 1782: 5990
 PRATT, Miss 1771: p. 36
 PRESTON, Captain 1770: 4839
 PRICE, Richard, D.D. 1779: 5577.
 1780: 5644. 1781: 5864
 PRIESTLEY, Joseph, LL.D. 1780:
 5644
 PRINGLE, Sir John, Bart., M.D.
 1777: 5426
 PRIOR (butcher) 1772: 4656
 PROCTOR, Sir William Beauchamp
 1780: 5699
 PUGACHOFF, Jemelian 1774: 5222
 PUGNANI, Gaetano 1780: 5759
 PUPPO, Guiseppe 1781: 5892
 PURKIS, William, M.A. 1773: 5189
 PUTNAM, Israel 1775: 5292, 5292
 A*, 5292 B*. 1776: 5329. 1777:
 5401
 PYE, Sir Thomas, Admiral 1774:
 5263. 1780: 5740

- QUARME, Robert 1782: 6074
- QUEENSBERRY, Catherine (Hyde),
Duchess of 1773: 5120
- QUEENSBERRY, William Douglas, 4th
Duke of 1783: 6263
- RAWDON, Francis Rawdon-Hastings,
Baron 1783 (cr. Marquis of Hastings 1817) 1782: 6048*
- RAY, Martha 1779: 5540. 1780:
5632, 5640
- REYNOLDS, Miss 1782: 6078
- REYNOLDS, Sir Joshua 1779: 5592.
1782: 6078
- RICE, Woodford 1783: 6316
- RICHMOND, Charles Lennox, 3rd
Duke of 1778: 5479, 5480,¹ 5581.¹
1779: 5548. 1780: 5645, 5650,
5676, 5707, 5722*. 1781: p. 494*,
5829. 1782: 5961, 5972, 5979,
5982, 5984, 5987, 5992, 6006, 6007,
6009, 6023, 6042, 6077. 1783:
6162, 6163, 6165, 6175, 6203, 6212,
6256, 6286
- RIGBY, Richard 1774: 5255. 1778:
5479, 5480,¹ 5481.¹ 1782: 5961,
5982, 6033, 6052. 1783: 6252
- ROBERTS, Emily 1779: 5588
- ROBINSON, John (Treasury Secretary) 1782: 5972
- ROBINSON, Mary (Perdita) 1780:
5741, 5767. 1781: 5865. 1782:
6084, 6085, 6115, 6117, 6221.
1783: 6259, 6263, 6266, 6284, 6296,
6318, 6319, 6320, 6323
- ROBINSON, Thomas (husband of Perdita) 1780: 5767. 1783: 6259,
6266, 6320
- ROBINSON, Sir Thomas, 1st Bart.
(of Rokeby) 1773: 5116. 1774:
5253
- ROCHAMBEAU, Jean-Baptiste-Dona-tien de Vimeur, Comte de 1780:
5706
- ROCHESTER, John Wilmot, 2nd Earl of 1777: 5465
— works of 1780: 5822
- ROCHFORD, William Henry Zuylestein, 4th Earl of 1771: 4423, 4849,
4856, 4405. 1773: 5125, 5132
- ROCHFORD, Lucy (Young), Lady
1771: 4862
- ROCKINGHAM, Charles Watson-
Wentworth, 2nd Marquess of 1771: 4889. 1779: 5548. 1780:
5644. 1781: p. 494*. 1782:
5972, 5979, 5982, 5988, 5990, 6069
- RODNEY, Sir George Brydges, Bart.
(cr. Baron Rodney 1782) 1772:
4940. 1780: 5647, 5648, 5658,
5673, 5677, 5699, 5710,¹ 5722*,
5724*. 1781: 5827, p. 496*, 5842.
1782: 5991, 5992, 5993, 5996, 5997,
6000, 6001, 6008, 6009, 6031, 6043.
1783: 6346
- RODNEY, Henrietta (Clies), Lady
1771: 4862
- ROGERS, Robert, Lt.-Col. 1776:
5339*
- ROLLE, John 1782: 5996
- ROMAINE, Rev. William 1778: 5496
- ROOKE, Giles 1781: 5900
- ROPER, Captain 1777: 5417
- ROSS, Sir John Lockhart, Vice-
admiral 1782: 5988
- ROWE, Nicholas (works of) 1772:
5063
- ROXBURGHE, John Ker, 3rd Duke of 1781: 5891
- RUDD, Mrs. Margaret Caroline 1777:
5425
- RUMBOLD, Thomas (cr. Bart. 1779)
1776: 5341, 5344. 1783: 6169,
6256
- RUMBOLD, Captain 1783: 6169
- RUSSELL (broker) 1778: 5530
- RUTLAND, Charles Manners, 4th
Duke of 1775: 5309. 1776: 5358
- RUTLAND, John Manners, 3rd Duke
of 1771: 4909
- RUTLAND, Mary Isabella (Somerset),
Duchess of 1776: 5358. 1783:
6263
- RUYTER, Michael Adrian Adriaan-zoon de, Dutch admiral 1780:
5718*, 5719*, 5733*. 1783: 6292*
- SACKVILLE, Lord George (Viscount),
see GERMAIN
- ST. ALBANS, George Beauclerk, 3rd
Duke of 1773: 5148
- ST. ANDRÉ, Nathanael 1773: 5115
- ST. AUBYN, Sir John, 5th Bart.
1777: 5414

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF PERSONS

- ST. LEGER, Barry, Colonel 1782: 6084
- SALISBURY, Elizabeth (Keet), Countess of 1773: 5138
- SALISBURY, James Cecil, 6th Earl of 1773: 5138
- SALISBURY, James Cecil, 7th Earl of (cr. Marquess 1789) 1782: 6115
- SALISBURY, Mary Amelia (Hill), Countess of 1782: 6115
- SALPIETRO (violinist) 1782: 6125
- SANDBY, Thomas 1781: 5897
- SANDWICH, John Montagu, 4th Earl of 1770: 4842. 1771: 4426, 4852, 4859, 4877, 4405. 1773: 5106, 5109, 5124, 5127, 5132. 1774: 5226, 5227. 1776: p. 216, 5328, 5340, 5342. 1778: 5479, 5480,¹ 5481.¹ 1779: 5537, 5540, 5548, 5569, 5573. 1780: 5632, 5633, 5635, 5636, 5640, 5651, 5655, 5660, 5661, 5668, 5673, 5675, 5676, 5680, 5687, 5705, 5707, 5722*, 5771. 1781: 5829, 5831, 5838, 5850. 1782: 5961, 5965, 5970, 5982, 5984, 5986, 5988, 5992, 5998, 5999, 6024, 6033, 6042, 6046, 6048*, 6076
- SAUNDERS, Admiral Sir Charles 1779: 5538. 1782: 5961. 1783: 6291
- SAVILLE, Sir George, 8th Bart. 1771: 4851. 1772: 4981. 1780: 5638, 5681. 1783: 6256
- SAWBIDGE, John 1771: 4886. 1773: 5129, 5130. 1778: 5479, 5480,¹ 5481¹
- SCAWEN, Captain 1774: 5256
- SCAWEN, James 1777: 5422, 5423
- SCOTT, General 1771: 4930
- SCOTT, Lady Mary 1771: 4930
- SCOTT, John (cr. Baron Eldon 1799, Earl of Eldon 1821), speech of 1783: 6290
- SCOTT, Dr. W. 1771: 4426, 4852
- SEAFORTH, Kenneth Mackenzie, Earl of 1775: 5305
- SEAFORTH, Harriet, Countess of, see POWELL
- SEARS, Isaac (of New York) 1775: 5284
- SHAKESPEARE, John 1770: 4843
- SHAKESPEARE, William 1770: 4846. c. 1777: 6357. 1782: 5974
- SHAKESPEARE, works of 1772: 5063, 5064. 1773: 5175, 5203
- SHARPE, James (ironmonger) 1780: 5760
- SHEFFIELD, John Baker Holroyd, cr. Baron Sheffield 1781 (Earl of Sheffield 1816) 1783: 6301
- SHELBURNE, William Petty, 2nd Earl of (cr. Marquis of Lansdowne 1784) 1771: 4861, 4682, 4917. 1777: 5411. 1778: 5479, 5480,¹ 5481.¹ 1779: 5548. 1780: 5644, 5722*, 5723. 1781: 5829. 1782: 5972, 6006, 6007, 6009, 6011, 6012, 6013, 6015, 6018, 6022, 6023, 6032, 6042, 6044, 6045, 6062. 1783: 6162, 6164, 6165, 6166, 6168, 6171, 6173, 6174, 6175, 6176, 6177, 6179, 6180, 6181, 6182, 6184, 6186, 6194, 6195, p. 688, 6199, 6206, 6212, 6214, 6217, 6223, 6232, 6233, 6241, 6250, 6256, 6281, 6286
- SHERIDAN, Mrs. Elizabeth Ann 1783: 6263
- SHERIDAN, Richard Brinsley 1776: 5376. 1777: 5430, 5435. 1783: 6212, 6241, 6248, 6252, 6256, 6281
- SHORT, James 1777: 5426
- SIDDAL, William, Mayor of York 1783: 6270
- SIDDONS, Mrs. Sarah 1782: 6126.¹ 1783: 6263
- SIDDONS, William 1782: 6126¹
- SIDNEY (or Sydney), Algernon, works of 1778: 5494. 1780: 5657. 1782: 5987. 1783: 6207, 6207 A
- SMITH, Benjamin 1771: 4874
- SMITH, John (printseller) 1778: 5530
- SMITH, Charles Loraine 1777: 5412. See Index of Artists
- SMITH, Richard (General) 1776: 5352
- SMITH, Dr. Samuel 1771: 4680, 4921. 1772: 5021
- SMITH, William ('Gentleman Smith', actor) 1776: 5350
- SMYTHE, Sir Sydney Stafford 1770: 4844
- SOLANDER, Daniel Charles 1772: 4696
- SOLOMON, Nathan 1783: 6273

¹ Date uncertain.

- SOPHIA, Princess 1770: 4841. 1781: 5895
 SOUBISE (negro) 1772: 5030. 1773: 5120
 SPARKS, Miss 1778: 5504
 SPENCER, Charlotte 1777: 5413. 1778: 5501
 STANHOPE, Lovel 1780: 5676
 STANISLAUS II of Poland 1772: 4957, 4958*. 1774: 5222, 5229
 STANLEY, Hans 1773: 5117
 STANLEY, (Hon.) Thomas 1773: 5187, 5189
 STEPHENS, Philip (cr. bart. 1795) 1781: 5870
 STEPHENSON (attorney) 1778: 5530
 STEVENS, George Alexander 1773: 5201
 STEWART, (Hon.) Keith, Captain R.N., afterwards Admiral 1782: 6048*
 STORMONT, David Murray, 7th Viscount (2nd Earl of Mansfield 1793-6) 1775: 5307. 1780: 5676. 1782: 5984. 1783: 6203, 6217, 6227, 6238
 STRATFORD, Edward, 2nd Earl of Aldborough 1781: 5871
 STRAUBENZEE, Lt.-Col. Turner 1783: 6300
 STRUENSEE, John Frederick, Count 1772: 4950, 4956. 1774: 5222
 SUFFOLK, Henry Howard, 12th Earl of 1771: 4875, 4876, 4876 A, 4405, 4908. 1772: 4652. 1773: 5106, 5132
 SULLIVAN, John, American Major-General 1776: 5337*, 5338*
 SURREY, Charles Howard, Earl of (succ. as 11th Duke of Norfolk 1786) 1777: 5445. 1781: 5863. 1782: 5972, 6058. 1783: 6241, 6246, 6254
 SUTHERLAND, Captain 1771: 4930
 SUTTON, Capt. Robert, R.N. 1782: 5960
 SYKES, Sir Francis 1776: 5341, 5351
 TAGG, Thomas 1780: 5689
 TALBOT, William, Earl (2nd Baron) 1771: 4911. 1773: 5127
 TARLETON, Col. Banastre (cr. bart. 1815) 1782: 6047, 6085, 6116. 1783: 6221, 6266
 TEMPLE, George Nugent-Temple-Granville, 2nd Earl (cr. Marquis of Buckingham 1784) 1783: 6255, 6256
 TEMPLE, Richard Grenville-Temple, 1st Earl 1771: 4423, 4889. 1772: 4968, 4994
 TERRICK, Richard (Bishop of London) 1773: 5193
 THEVENEAU DE MORANDE, Charles 1774: 5246*, 5247*
 THOMAS, Mr. (banker) 1776: 5357
 THORN 1778: 5530
 THORPE, Tom (tavern-keeper) 1778: 5530
 THRALE, Henry 1772: 4691
 THURLOW, Edward, cr. Baron Thurlow 1778 1772: 4984. 1780: 5675. 1781: 5831, 5851, 5882. 1782: 5972, 5982, 5987, 6042, 6046. 1783: 6197, 6212, 6223, 6224, 6241, 6252, 6286
 TILDESLEY, T. 1781: 5897, 5898
 TISDALL (or Tisdal), Philip 1773: 5134
 TOFT (or Tofts), Mary 1771: 4865
 TOPHAM, Edward 1779: 5596. 1781: 5928. See Index of Artists
 TOPLADY, (Rev.) Augustus 1778: 5498
 TOWERS, Joseph, LL.D. 1783: 6246, 6260
 TOWNELEY, Francis 1780: 5660
 TOWNSEND, James 1771: 4886, 1772: 4967. 1773: 5130, 5193
 TOWNSHEND, Agnes 1777: 5416. 1781: 5936
 TOWNSHEND, Ethelreda (Harrison), Viscountess 1771: 4862
 TOWNSHEND, George, 4th Viscount Townshend (cr. Marquis 1786) 1772: 4942. 1773: 5106, 5133, 5134. See Index of Artists
 TOWNSHEND, Thomas, cr. Baron Sydney 1783 (Viscount 1789) 1783: 6241
 TOWSE (of Vauxhall) 1778: 5530
 TRAIL, James, D.D., Bishop of Down 1772: 5003
 TRECOTHICK, Barlow 1770: 4843
 TROMP, Cornelis (Dutch admiral) 1780: 5718*, 5719*, 5733*. 1783: 6292*

- TRUSLER, John 1773: 5200
 TUCKER, Josiah, Dean of Gloucester
 1773: 5125
 — works of 1783: 6207
 TURLIS, Tom (hangman) 1770: 4844
 TURNER, Sir Charles, Bart. 1782:
 6073. 1783: 6256
 TYLER, Wat 1773: 5103
 TYRAWLEY, James O'Hara, 2nd
 Baron 1771: 4912
 TYRCONNEL, Frances (Manners),
 Lady 1777: 5412. 1779: 5590
 TYRCONNEL, George Carpenter, 1st
 Earl of 1777: 5412. 1779: 5590
 TYRIE, David 1782: 6030
- UPPER OSSORY, Anne (Lidell),
 Countess of 1772: 5065
- VALENTIA, Arthur Annesley, 8th
 Viscount 1774: 5257. 1775: 5321
 VAN BERCKEL, E. T., Pensionary of Amsterdam 1781: 5845
 VAN DER KEMP, Adrian 1783: 6292*
 VAN-DYKE, Francis (of New York)
 1775: 5284. 1777: 5401
 VANE, William, 2nd Viscount 1771:
 4907
 VAN GALEN, Jan (Dutch admiral)
 1780: 5719*
 VANHAGEN, Thomas (pastrycook)
 1780: 5785
 VANSITTART, Miss 1773: 5106
 VAN ZANDT (of New York) 1775: 5284
 VAUDREUIL, Louis-Philippe de Ri-gaud, Marquis de 1782: 6031
 VAUGHAN, Miss Charlotte 1775:
 5308
 VAUGHAN, (Hon.) John, Major-
 General 1781: 5842
 VERNON, Miss 1783: 6263
 VESTRIS, Gaetano-Apoline-Balthazar (1729-1808) 1781: 5886, 5903,
 5904, 5907, 5908, 5909, 5910, 5911
 VESTRIS (or Vestr'Allard) Marie-
 Jean-Augustin (1760-1842) 1781:
 5884, 5903, 5905, 5906
 VICTOR AMADEUS III, king of Sardinia 1783: 6315
 VILLIERS, George, Viscount, afterwards 2nd Earl of Grandison
 1773: 4825. 1778: 5500
- VOLTAIRE, François-Marie Arouet
 de 1772: 5071
 VREDENBURGH, Jacob (of New York)
 1775: 5284
- WALKER, Kitty 1779: 5595
 WALLACE, James (Attorney-General)
 1781: 5883
 WALLER, James, D.D. 1782: 6079
 WARREN, Sir Peter, Vice-admiral
 1783: 6291
 WASHINGTON, George 1775: 5290,
 5291*. 1777: 5401. 1778: 5487.
 1779: 5574. 1780: 5641, 5721*.
 1783: 6202, 6288
 WATSON, Charles, Rear-admiral
 1783: 6291
 WATTS (butcher) 1772: 5028
 WEDDERBURN, Alexander (cr. Baron
 Loughborough 1782, Earl of Rosslyn 1801) 1775: 5287. 1776:
 p. 216. 1778: 5509. 1780: 5667.
 1781: 5831, 5900. 1783: 6256
 WELCH, Saunders 1774: 5273
 WELTJE, Louis 1781: 5888
 WELTJE, Mrs. 1783: 6317
 WESLEY, John 1775: 5300. 1778:
 5493, 5494, 5495, 5496, p. 304.
 1779: 5576. 1780: 5651, 5685
 WEST, Thomas, D.D. 1782: 6099
 WEYMOUTH, Thomas Thynne, 3rd
 Viscount 1771: 4423, 4852, 4904.
 1776: 5348
 WEYMOUTH, Hannah Catherine
 Maria (Smith), Lady 1776: 5348
 WHITBREAD, Samuel (senior) 1782:
 6021
 WHITEFIELD, George 1774: 5280
 WICK, Peter 1781: 5833
 WILKES, John 1770: 4843. 1771:
 4848, 4423, 4852, 4861, 4863, 4865,
 p. 18, 4866, 4427, 4868, 4870, 4871,
 4872, 4874, 4880, 4885, 4886, 4887,
 4892, 4433. 1772: 4937, 4938,
 4953, 4955, 4967, 4972. 1773:
 5103, 5104, 5129, 5130, 5131, 5151.
 1774: 5227, 5235, 5236, 5237,
 5242, 5245. 1775: 5281, 5282,
 p. 196, 5297. 1776: 5327, 5334,
 5340, 4623. 1778: 5479, 5480,¹
 5481.¹ 1779: 5616. 1780: 5650,
 5676, 5692, 5709,¹ 5776, 5777,

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF PERSONS

5803. 1781: 5829, 5851, 5866,
5881, 5923. 1782: 5972, 5982,
5987, 6007, 6067. 1783: 6162, 6323
- WILKES, Mary (Polly) 1782: 6125
- WILLIAM V of Orange, Stadholder of the United Provinces 1774: 5222.
1780: 5712*, 5713*, 5714*, 5718*,
5728*. 1782: 6035, 6038. 1783:
6292*
- WILLIAM HENRY, Prince (afterwards
William IV) 1770: 4841. 1780:
5677. 1781: 5895. 1783: 6258
- WILLIAMS, Mrs. 1783: 6298
- WILSON, David (bookseller) 1772:
5068
- WILSON, Mrs., née Adcock 1783:
6295
- WILSON, Thomas, D.D. 1772: 4972.
1777: 5410, 5441
- WINDSOR, 'Mother' 1783: 6260
- WITTE DE WIT, Witte Corneliszoon, de, Dutch Vice-Admiral 1780:
5718*
- WOMBWELL, Sir George (cr. bart.
1778) 1780: 5655
- WOOD, N. (gamekeeper) 1772: 5060
- WOODFALL, William 1778: 5530
- WOODWARD, Henry 1776: 5354
- WOOSTER, David, American general
1776: 5332, 5332 A*
- WORSLEY, Dorothy Seymour, Lady
1778: 5604 n. 1782: 6106, 6107,
6108, 6109, 6110, 6111, 6112, 6156.
1783: 6263, 6284
- WORSLEY, Sir Richard, 7th Bart.
1782: 6105, 6106, 6107, 6108, 6109,
6110. 1783: 6329
- WRAY, Sir Cecil, 13th Bart. 1782:
5998. 1783: 6244, 6256
- WRIGHT (distiller) 1778: 5530
- WRIGHT, Sir Sampson 1782: 6119,
6120, 6121
- WROTTESEY, Col. Sir John, 8th
Bart. 1780: 5743
- WYATT, Richard 1773: 5190, 5191, 5192
- WYLDBORE, Matthew 1774: 5272
- WYNDHAM, (Hon.) Charles 1782:
6105, 6107
- WYVILLE, Christopher, LL.D.
1780: 5657. 1782: 5958
- YATES, Mrs. Mary Ann ('Anna Maria') 1782: 6126¹
- YEO, Edward Roe 1775: 5325
- YORKE, Charles 1778: 5470
- YORKE, Sir Joseph, K.B. (cr. Baron Dover 1788) 1779: 5557, 5568,
5593. 1780: 5712*, 5713*, 5714*,
5719*. 1781: p. 494*
- YOUNGE, Elizabeth (Mrs. Pope)
1773: 5202. 1783: 6263

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF TITLES

*For portraits where the title is the name of the subject see Index of Persons
An asterisk denotes a foreign print*

- ABELARD AND ELOISA 4557
- ABLE DOCTOR, THE, OR AMERICA
SWALLOWING THE BITTER DRAUGHT
5226
- ABYSSINIAN TRAVELLER, THE 5317
- ACCOCHEUR MACARONI, THE 5047
- ACTED FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE MINISTRY 4868
- ACTRESS AT HER TOILET, AN, OR MISS
BRAZEN JUST BREECHT 5622
- ADDRESS, THE 5851
- ADMINISTRATION & OPPOSITION AS EXHIBITED APRIL 3RD 1780 AT THE PANTHEON MASQUERADE 5829
- ADMIRAL RODNEY BEFORE CARTAGENA
4940
- ADVENTUROUS MACARONI, THE, OR
THE THREE JOLLY BLADES . . . 4618
- ADVICE TO A GREAT K—G 4424
- AEROSTATICK STAGE BALLOON, THE 6284
- AGE AND FOLLY, OR THE BEAUTIES
5393
- “AH, GRANT A ME VON LETEL BITE”
5790
- AHITOPHEL IN THE DUMPS 6015
- AIR BALLOON, THE, OR A TRIP TO THE MOON 6335
- ALARM, THE; OR THE EXECUTION OF LADY JANE GREY 4901
- ALAS: POOR MUNGO 4936
- *ALGEMEENE STAATKUNDIGE KONST-
PLAAT VAN 'T JAAR 1780 5728
- ALL ALIVE OR THE POLITICAL CHURCH-YARD 6256
- ALL FOURS 6341
- ALL JOY AND TRANQUILLITY HIGH
LIFE AND FESTIVITY AS LONG AS WE LIVE 5788
- ALL SORTS 4543
- ALLEMANDE DANCE, THE 5082
- ALLIES, THE,—PAR NOBILE FRÂTRUM!
5631
- ALTERNATIVE OF WILLIAMS-BURG,
THE p. 196
- AMERICA IN FLAMES 5282
- AMERICA TO HER MISTAKEN MOTHER 5475
- AMERICAN RATTLESNAKE, THE 5973
- AMERICAN RATTLESNAKE PRESENTING MONSIEUR HIS ALLY WITH A DISH
OF FROGS, THE 6039
- AMINADAB 4914
- AMOROUS THIEF . . . , THE 4554
- AMUSEMENT FOR JOHN BULL & HIS COUSIN PADDY . . . 6223
- ANALYSIS OF MODERN PATRIOTISM,
AN 6207
- ANATOMIST (THE) OVERTAKEN BY THE
WATCH IN CARRYING OFF MISS
W—^{TS} IN A HAMPER 5119
- “AND ADAM HAD POWER OVER ALL
THE BEASTS OF THE EARTH” 5625
- ANGELIC ANGLER, THE 5820
- ANSWER, THE, AN HIEROGLYPHIC
EPISTLE FROM A MODERN FINE
LADY TO A MACARONI 5080
- ANTICIPATION. A NEW MODE OF RAISING SUPPLIES BY S^R BOREAS
BLUBBER, OR WAYS & MEANS FOR 1780 5578
- ANTICIPATION, OR, THE CONTRAST TO THE ROYAL HUNT 5988
- ANTI-GALLICAN SPIRIT . . . , THE 5861
- ANTIQUARIAN, THE 5160
- ANTIQUARIAN MASTIFF, THE 5757
- ANTIQUARIANS, THE 4771
- ANTIQUARIANS PUZZLED . . . , THE 4772
- ANTIQUE ARCHITECT, THE 5166
- APOLLO AND THE MUSES, INFLECTING
PENANCE ON D^R POMPOSO ROUND
PARNASSUS 6328
- APOSTATE PARSON, THE 4948
- APOTHECARIES—TAYLORS & C. CON-
QUERING FRANCE AND SPAIN 5614
- APPOINTMENT OF Y^E BRAVE ADM^L
RODNEY (THE) & JEMMY TWITCHER
IN Y^E DUMPS 5673
- APPOINTMENT OVERHEARD AND PRE-VENTED, THE 4576
- AQUILA HAPSBURGHIENSIS 5763,
5763 A

INDEX OF TITLES

- ARCHBISHOP LAUD CHARGING HIS CLERGY 5958
- ARGUS 5667
- ARTILLERY DUTY 4646
- AS IT IS, OR THE WIND CHANGED
5981
- AS IT WAS, OR THE STATE SAMPSON
FIREING THE FOTES . . . 5963
- ASCENT OF THE AERIAL BALLOON, THE 6334
- "ASIDE HE TURN'D FOR ENVY, YET
WITH JEALOUS LEER MALIGN EYD
THEM ASKANCE" 6044
- ASS IN THE GREEK PALLIUM TEACH-ING, AN 5576
- ASS UPON ASS 5683
- ASS - HEADED AND COW - HEARTED MINISTRY (THE) MAKING THE BRITISH LION GIVE UP THE PULL 6229
- ASSEMBLY OF THE GRINDERS, THE 5132
- [ASSOCIATION MEETING AT YORK]
5657
- ASSOCIATION, OR PUBLIC VIRTUE DIS-PLAYED IN A CONTRASTED VIEW
5638
- AUCTION, THE; OR MODERN CONNOIS-
SEURS 4770
- AURELIAN MACARONI, THE 5156
- AUSPICES, OR THE BIRTH OF THE PRESENT PRINCE OF WALES, THE 4898
- AUSPICIOUS MARRIAGE!, THE 5598
- AUTUMN 4566
- BACHELOR'S FARE . . . 4553
- BACK-SIDE OF A FRONT ROW, THE 5430
- BAGNIGGE WELLS 5090
- BAGNIGGE WELLS SCENE, A, OR NO
RESISTING TEMPTATION 4545
- BAITE FOR THE DEVIL, A 5550
- BALAAM,—OR THE MAJESTY OF THE PEOPLE 6209
- BALANCE OF CREDIT, THE 4968
- BALANCE OF POWER, THE 5666
- BALD FAC'D DOE, THE 5011
- BALLANCE OF POWER, THE 5827
- BANCO TO THE KNAVE 5972
- BANDITTI 6281
- BANK MACARONI, THE 4707
- BARBER RIDING TO MARGATE, THE 6158
- BARBER'S SHOP, A 5765
- BARGAIN STRUCK, THE, OR VIRTUE
CONQUER'D BY TEMPTATION 4530
- BARON FORCHETTA, AFTER A BETT OF FIFTY 4651
- BASS RELIEF FOUND AT THE OPERA HOUSE 5903
- BATH ADONIS WORSHIPING THE IDOL
OF HIS AFFECTIONS, A 5320
- BATH MACARONI, THE 5013
- BATH OF THE MODERNS, A 6106
- BATH STAYS OR THE LADY'S STEEL
SHAPES 5444
- BATTLE OF THE CATAPLASM, THE 5216
- BE NOT AMAZ'D DEAR MOTHER—IT IS INDEED YOUR DAUGHTER ANNE 4537
- BE NOT SURPRISED. NE SOYEZ PAS
SURPRIS p. 559
- BEAR (THE), THE LOUSE, AND RELIGION,
A FABLE 5188
- BEATING UP FOR RECRUITS 5796
- BEAU MORDECAI INSPIR'D 4525
- BEHOLD THE MAN (2) 5546, 5547
- BEHOLD THE MUSES ROSCIUS SUE IN VAIN . . . 5063
- BELLIGERANT PLENIPO'S, THE 6051
- BENEVOLENT PHYSICIAN, THE (2)
6347, 6350
- BENGALL MINUET, THE 5174
- BENJAMIN B. 5756
- BETTY THE COOK MAID'S HEAD DREST
5380
- BILLIARDS (3) 5795, 5803, 5913
- BILLINGSGATE TRIUMPHANT . . . 4541
- BILLY-BUTTON, MASTER OF THE CERE-MONIES TO AN EIGHTEEN PENNY
ROUT & ASSEMBLY 4988
- BIRD OF PARADISE, THE 5948
- BIRTH-DAY ODE, . . . , THE 5540
- BLACK AND WHITE SCUFFLE, THE, OR
BARBER AND CHIMNEY-SWEEPER AT FISTY-CUFFS 5531
- BLACK HARRY 4959
- BLACKSMITH LETS HIS IRON GROW
COLD ATTENDING TO THE TAYLOR'S
NEWS, THE 5074
- BLANK THE TAYLOR 5529
- BLESSED ARE THE PEACEMAKERS 6174
- BLESSINGS OF PEACE, THE 6212
- BLESSINGS OF PEACE, THE, OR PRO-CLAMATION UPON PROCLAMATION
6336

INDEX OF TITLES

- BLIND JUSTICE, THE, & THE SECRETARIES ONE EYE & NO HEAD EXAMINING THE OLD WOMAN AND LITTLE GIRL, ABOUT THE FIREING PORTSMOUTH DOCK-YARD 4405
- BLOCK FOR THE WIGS, A,—OR THE NEW STATE WHIRLIGIG 6227
- BLOOMING PEACH AND SHRIVELL'D APPLE . . . , THE 4526
- BLUE & BUFF OR REYNARD IN HIS CLOSET, AT HIS WITS END 6191
- BOB BLUNT IN AMAZE, OR FEMALE FASHIONABLE FOLLIES 4547
- BOLD ATTEMPT, THE 4607
- BOMBARDINIAN. CONFERRING UPON STATE AFFAIRS WITH ONE IN OFFICE 5608
- BOMBARDINIAN. IMPORTANT BLANKS IN NATURE'S MIGHTY ROLL 5607
- BOND AND JUDGMENT, A 5599
- BONUS MELIOR OPTIMUS OR THE DEVIL'S THE BEST OF THE BUNCH 6219
- BOOTS AND SPURS 5935
- BORE, A 6147
- BOREAS (2) 4969, 5231
- BÖRÉAS 6093
- BOSTONIANS IN DISTRESS, THE 5241
- BOSTONIANS PAYING THE EXCISE-MAN, OR TARRING & FEATHERING p. 169
- BOTANIC MACARONI, THE 5046
- BOUCHING TAYLOR CUTTING HIS CLOTH TO COVER A BUTTON, THE 5573
- BOTTLE COMPANIONS, THE 4622
- BOWER OF BLISS, THE, OR, PARADISE REGAIN'D 6216
- BRECHES IN THE FIERA MASCHERETA, THE 5314
- BRENTFORD GUY FAUX (THE) SETTING FIRE TO THE PILLARS OF THE LONDON TAVERN . . . 5104
- BRISTOL DUEL, THE 5072
- BRITAIN'S STATE PILOT FOUNDERING ON TAXATION ROCK 5541
- BRITANIA AND HER DAUGHTER 5647
- BRITANIA INTOXICATED, OR THE GREAT ONES IN A BAGNIO 4954
- BRITANIA'S ASSASSINATION, OR THE REPUBLICAN'S AMUSEMENT 5987
- BRITANNIA CONGRATULATING THE RIGHT HON. BRASS CROSBY, ESQ; AND MR. ALDERMAN OLIVER . . . 4864
- BRITANNIA PROTECTED FROM THE TERRORS OF AN INVASION 5629
- BRITISH INVALID DRIVING FOREIGN ARMIES FROM PROCEEDING TO THE CAMP 5772
- BRITISH LION ENGAGING FOUR POWERS, THE 6004
- BRITISH TAR AT OMOA, THE 5623
- BRITISH TAR'S TRIUMPH, THE 6268
- *BRITSEN LEOPARD TOT REDEN GE-BRACHT, DEN 5719
- BROTHERS OF THE WHIP 5929
- BRUISING SCENE BETWEEN PARSON BATE AND MR. FITZGERAL'S FOOT-MAN . . . , THE 5199
- BRUTALITY DISPLAY'D, IN A LATE INSTANCE NEAR TRUMP STREET 5791
- BUCK & DOE MACARONIES 5029
- BUCKLES AND BUTTONS . . . 5432
- BUDGET, THE 5834
- BUILDER-MACARONI, THE 4662
- BULL BROKE LOOSE, THE 5645
- BULL OF GOTHAM, THE 5131
- BULL OVER-DROVE, THE: OR THE DRIVERS IN DANGER 5640, p. 561
- BULL ROASTED, THE: OR THE POLITICAL COOKS SERVING THEIR CUSTOMERS 5636
- [BULL'S TRIUMPH] 5129
- BUMBARDINIAN, CONFERRING UPON STATE AFFAIRS WITH ONE IN OFFICE 5606
- BUM-BARDMENT OF GIBRALTER, THE, OR F—T—G AGAINST THUNDER 6036
- BUN. MACARONI, THE 4660
- BUNKERS HILL OR AMERICA'S HEAD-DRESS 5330
- BUNKERS HILL, OR THE BLESSED EFFECTS OF FAMILY QUARRELS 5289
- BUNTER'S HILL OR MAY DAY 5378
- BURNING & PLUNDERING OF NEWGATE (THE) & SETTING THE FELONS AT LIBERTY BY THE MOB 5684
- [BURKE AS A JESUIT] 6249
- BURTHENS OF PLENTY, THE 5433
- BUTCHER MACARONI, THE 5028
- BUTTON MAKERS ADJUSTING THEIR DIFFERENCES, THE 4417

INDEX OF TITLES

- BY HIS MAJESTY'S LETTERS PATENT.
 THE NEW INVENTED METHOD OF PUNISHING STATE CRIMINALS 5580
 CALASH, THE 6100
 CALL TO THE UNCONVERTED, A 5280
 CAMBLET MACARONI, THE 5040
 CAMBRIDGE MACARONI, THE 4999
 [CAMBRIDGE WOMAN-SERVANT, A]
 6355
 CAN YOU FORBEAR LAUGHING? 5396
 CANDIDATES TO SUCCEED TOM TURLIS
 4844
 CANTAB 4725
 CAPRICES DE LA GOUTE, LES, BALLET
 ARTHRITIQUE 6322
 CAPTAIN BUN QUIXOTE ATTACKING
 THE OVEN 4665
 CAP^{TN} CONQUEST AND HIS BAGGAGE-
 WAGGON 4604
 CAP^{TN} CUT-LASS 4986
 CAP^{TN} H—— [HORNECK], OR THE MILITARY MACARONI 4813
 CAP^T JESSAMY LEARNING THE PROPER
 DISCIPLINE OF THE COUCH 6156
 CAP^T MILES'S REVENGE, OR THE MACA-RONIES DISCOMFITED BY THEIR CHAMPION 5200
 CAPTIVE PRINCE, THE—OR—LIBERTY
 RUN MAD 5979
 CARLO KHAN'S TRIUMPHAL ENTRY
 INTO LEADENHALL STREET 6276
 CARLTON HOUSE JUNTO IN FEAR AND TREMBLING (2) 4867, 4427
 CASTLE IN THE MOON . . . , THE 6025
 CATCH SINGERS, THE (2) 5342, 5771
 CATGUT MACARONI, THE 5015
 CAUTION TO THE UNWARY, A 6118
 CERTAIN CITY MACARONIES DRINKING
 ASSES MILK 4814
 CERTAIN FAMOUS OLD FORNICATING
 M-N-T-R, A 4834
 CERTAIN LITTLE FAT JEW MACARONI
 & HIS SPOUSE GOING TO Y^E PAN-
 THEON, A 5077
 CHANGING PLACES;—ALIAS; FOX
 STINKING THE BADGER OUT OF HIS NEST 5964
 CHARACTER, A 5009
 CHARACTERISTICS 4938
 CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME 5799
 CHARITY COVERETH A MULTITUDE OF SINS 5930
 CHARLES JAMES CUB, ESQ^R 4811
 CHARMING MILLENER OF —— STREET
 4923
 CHATHAM'S GHOST, OR A PEEP INTO FUTURITY . . . 5668
 CHELSEA GUARD, THE 4791
 CHELSEA MACARONI, THE 4658
 CHERCHEUR DE 20^{PR} CENT, LE 4926
 CHESELD SOLDIER RETURN'D TO BUSI-NESS . . . , THE 5786
 CHEVALIER DE L'ETOIL POLAIRE 5157
 CHEVALIER D—E—N RETURN'D OR THE STOCK-BROKERS OUTWITTED
 4881
 CHEVALIER VATKENS LOUIS 5155
 CHEVALIERE D'EON 5512
 CHILD, OR A LEGACY FOR THE HOUSE
 OF COMMONS, THE 4894
 CHILLING NORTH BLAST, A, OR A TAX
 UPON LAUGHTER 5974
 CHLOE'S CUSHION OR THE CORK RUMP
 5429
 CHOP-HOUSE, A 5922
 X.MAS ACADEMICS . . . , THE 4728
 CHURCH CHORISTERS, THE 4533
 CHURCH MILITANT, THE (3) 5553,
 3752, 6338
 CHYMICAL MACARONI, THE CAPN.
 LUDGATE 5069
 CINCINNATUS IN RETIREMENT 6026
 CITIZEN OF THE WORLD SEARCHING
 FOR A WISE PRINCE, THE 4891
 CITIZEN RETIRED, THE, OR BUSINESS
 AT AN END TILL MONDAY 4519
 CITY APPRENTICE AT ST. JAMES'S, THE 4939
 CITY BLOCKHEADS 5615
 CITY CANDIDATES, THE 5849
 CITY CHANTERS, THE 4433
 CITY COALITION 6314
 CITY IN AN UPROAR, THE,—OR THE RE-TAKING OF UMBRAGE . . . 5488
 CITY JUNTO OR THE MIN—ST—L
 ALDERMEN OF GOTHAM IN CON-
 SULTATION, THE 4966
 CITY PATRIOTS (THE), OR A PICTURE
 OF THE TIMES 5130
 CITY 'PRENTICE AT HIS MASTER'S DOOR, THE 5212
 CITY RACE, THE 4886
 CITY ROUT, THE 5372
 CITY TONSOR, THE 4672
 CLERICAL BUTCHER MACARONI, THE 5048

INDEX OF TITLES

CLERICAL MACARONI, A 4997
 CLOSET, THE 5470
 COALITION BETWEEN THE FOX & THE BADGER, A, OR THE HONEY MOON OF THEIR HAPPY UNION 6186
 COALITION DANCE 6205
 COALITION DISSECTED, THE 6257
 COALITION GARLAND, THE, OR THE STATE SWEEPS 6240
 COALITION MEDAL STRUCK IN BRASS,
 A 6183
 COALITION MINUET 6197
 COALITION OF PARTIES, A 6178
 [COALITION STAGE-COACH] 6226
 COALITION, THE (2) 6179, 6220
 COALITION. THE FOX & BADGER BOTH
 IN A HOLE 6196
 [COAT OF ARMS FOR JOHN WESLEY, A]
 5493
 COCK-PIT, THE 5391
 COFFEE-HOUSE PATRIOTS, THE; OR
 NEWS FROM S^T EUSTATIA 5923
 COFFEE HOUSE POLITICIANS, THE 5973
 COLD RUMP, THE, OR TASTE ALAMODE
 5382
 COLE-HEAVERS, THE 6213
 COLLA DI PARMA 5769
 COLLEGE BUCK, THE 5277
 COLLEGE GATE, A, DIVINES GOING
 UPON DUTY 5804
 COLOSSUS OF THE NORTH, THE, OR THE
 STRIDING BOREAS 5242
 COMFORTS-AND-CURSE OF A MILI-TARY LIFE, THE 6170
 COMMISSIONERS, THE 5473
 COMMISSIONERS INTERVIEW WITH CONGRESS, THE 5474
 COMMODORE S^T JAGO RETURNING VIC-
 TORIOUS 5960
 COMPLIMENTS OF THE SEASON, THE.
 KIBE HEELS & CHILBLAINS 5806
 COMPOUND MEDALLION, THE 6198
 CONCERTO SPIRITUALE 5217
 CONFAB ON THE EVENT OF A LATE
 ELECTION, A 4874
 CONFERENCE BETWEEN THE BROTHERS
 HOW TO GET RICH, THE 5399
 CONFERENCE BETWEEN THE EARL OF PORTLAND AND MARSHALL BOU-
 FLERS 4895
 CONFERENCE IN THE SHADES, A 4848
 CONFESSION 3775

CONFUCIUS THE SECOND; OR A NEW
 SUN RISING IN THE ASIATIC WORLD!
 6277
 CONGRESS, THE, OR THE NECESSARY
 POLITICIANS 5297
 CONNOISEUR ADMIRING A DARK
 NIGHT PEICE, A 4683
 CONNOISEUR AND TIRED BOY, THE 4621
 CONNOISEURS, THE 4579
 CONSISTENT CHARACTER, A 5995
 CONSPIRATORS, THE 3760
 CONSTITUTION OF ENGLAND, THE 5240
 CONSTITUTIONAL SOCIETY, THE 6246
 CONSULTATION, THE 5267
 CONTEMPLATIVE CHARMER, THE 5815
 CONTEMPTABLE PARSON, SLAUGHTER-ING HOGS FOR MARKET . . . , THE 5800
 CONTENDING LAWYERS, THE, OR WHO SHALL FIRST BOARD THE CATHARINE
 FRIGATE 5899
 CONTINENCE OF A METHODIST PARSON,
 THE . . . 4610
 CONTRAST, THE (3) 3757, 5298, 5674
 CONTRAST, THE, OR A LADY IN Y^E
 DRESS OF 1745 & ANOTHER IN
 Y^E DRESS OF 1772 4820
 CONTRAST, THE, OR SACK & BUDGET
 5637
 CONTRAST, THE, OR THE DIFFERENT
 DRESSES FOR 1745 AND 1772 4818
 CONTRAST, THE; OR THE VIRTUOUS
 PATRIOT AT THE HOUR OF DEATH
 4965
 CONVENTION MAKERS, THE 4849
 CONVERSAZIONE 6141
 CORK RUMP, THE, OR CHLOE'S CUSHION
 5381
 CORK-RUMP, THE SUPPORT OF LIFE
 5383
 [CORNISH HUGG(A). SCENE BILLINGS-
 GATE] 5932
 CORPORAL FEAR 5918
 CORPORAL PERPENDICULAR 5316
 CORPORATION WITH THEIR CHAPLAIN
 IN EMBRIO TAKEN BY SURPRISE, A 4944
 COTILLION DANCE, THE 4599
 COUNCIL, THE 5633
 COUNCIL OF THE RULERS, THE, & THE TRIBE OF Y^E AMERICANITES 5281

INDEX OF TITLES

- COUNSELLOR COZEN CONSULTING CASES 4788
- COUNSELLOR. HUBBLE. BUBBLE 5165
- COUNT DE GRASSE DELIVERING HIS SWORD TO THE GALLANT ADMIRAL RODNEY 5991
- COUNT DE GRASSE TAKING A PEEP IN THE WEST INDIES 5994
- COUNT DE ROCHAMBEAU FRENCH GENERAL OF THE LAND FORCES IN AMERICA REVIEWING THE FRENCH TROOPS 5706
- COUNTRY CHORISTERS, THE 4611
- COUNTRYMAN IN LONDON, THE 4600
- COUNTRY SINGING CLERK ON A SUNDAY, THE 4689
- COURIER ANGLAIS 4736
- COURIER FRANCOIS (2) 5056, 4737
- COURSING MACARONI, THE 4663
- COURT COTILLON, THE, OR THE PREMIER'S NEW PARLIAMENT JIG 5244
- COURT MARTIAL, A,—OR—A SCENE AT THE HORSE GUARDS . . . 6041
- COURT OF ALDERMEN, THE 4843
- COURT OF EQUITY OR A CONVIVIAL CITY MEETING 5530
- COURTESAN AND FRIZEUR 5023
- [COURTSHIP, A] 6330
- COVENT GARDEN MACARONIES, THE 5057
- COXHEATH HO! 4760
- COXHEATH RACE FOR £100, THE, . . . WON BY MISS TITTUP AGAINST TUMBLING JENNY 5601
- [CREAM WOMAN OF TRIN. COLL. CAMBR.] 6354
- CRIES OF THE CURATES, THE, OR THE GROWING EVIL 6337
- CROSSING A DIRTY STREET 6133
- CRUMES OF COMFORT. OR OLD ORTHODOX RESTORING CONSOLATION TO HIS FALLEN CHILDREN 6027
- CUB'S FROLIC AT HOLLAND HOUSE, THE, OR THE PIG BASTED 5062
- CUCKOLDS REEL, THE 6329
- CUP PRESENTED TO MR. WILKES BY THE CITY OF LONDON IN 1772, THE 5237
- CUPID BEATING UP FOR VOLUNTEERS 5194
- CUPID TURN'D AUCTIONEER, OR, CORNELYS' SALE AT CARLISLE HOUSE 5066
- CUPID'S TOWER 5377
- CURIOUS COLLECTION OF WILD BEASTS, A 6269
- CURIOUS ZEBRA, THE 5487
- DAME RAT, AND HER POOR LITTLE ONES 5966
- DAMN BUCEPHALUS! 4730
- DAMN MAMBRINO! 4731
- DAMNATION OF OBADIAH, THE 5214
- *DAN ONDER DAN BOOVEN 5725
- DANCE BY THE VIRTUE OF BRITISH OAK, A 5554
- DANCING MASTER MACARONI, A 5014
- *DARBY ALLANT SE COUCHER A PORTSMOUTH 6049
- DARBY, P. O. A. G. B. 4632
- DARLY'S COMIC PRINTS . . . DEDICATED TO D. GARRICK, ESQ^R 5369
- DATE OBOLUM BELISARIO 6028
- DEATH AND THE DOCTOR 5457
- DEATH HUNTER MACARONI, THE 4823
- DEATH OF ROCHESTER, THE 5465
- DECEITFUL KISSES, OR THE PRETTY PLUNDERERS 5946
- DECOUVERTE, LA, OU LA FEMME FRANC MAÇON 4865
- DECOY FOR THE OLD AS WELL AS THE YOUNG, A 4529
- DEEP ONES 5445
- DEFENDING NATIONAL HONO'R 5940
- DELIGHT OF PLY-MOUTH, THE 5761
- DELIGHTS OF ISLINGTON, THE 4722
- DEPUTATION FROM JONATHAN'S AND THE FREE-MASONS, A 4871
- [DERBY (LORD) FOLLOWING MISS FARREN] 5901
- DEVASTATIONS OCCASIONED BY THE RIOTERS OF LONDON FIRING THE NEW GOAL OF NEWGATE . . . , THE 5686
- DIABO-LADY, THE 5425
- DIABOLIAD, THE 5424
- DIEU ET MON DROIT AVITO VIRET HONORE 4423
- DIFFERENCE OF WEIGHT BETWEEN COURT & CITY ALDERMEN, THE 4953
- DIOGENES LOOKING FOR AN HONEST MAN 5392
- DISCIPLINE OF A NUNNERY 3776
- DISCOVERY, THE 4615
- DISCOVERY, OR FEMALE FREE-MASON, THE 4865

INDEX OF TITLES

- DISSOLUTION OF P—T [PARLIAMENT], THE 5236
- DISTILLER IN THE SUDS, THE, OR A REAL REPRESENTATION OF THE SURREY BRUISING BOUT 5191
- DISTREST EARL OF THE SOUTHERN FOLK PRATING FRENCH TO HIS FRENCH SERVANTS . . . , THE 4876, 4876A
- DIVINE LOVE 5447
- DOCKING THE MACARONI 4527
- DOCTER HIMSELF POURING OUT HIS WHOLE SOUL FOR I^s, THE 6323
- D^R ÆOLUS TROPE, PERFORMING A SIMILE IN COACH-MAKERS HALL 5577
- D^R DAWDLE IN A HURRY 6142
- DOCTOR FORCEPS 5164
- DR. GALLIPOT, WITH HIS WIG OF KNOWLEDGE 3759
- DOCTOR GRUEL 4682
- DOCTOR HIMSELF, THE 6324
- D^R LOLL TONGUE, THE FILCHING CONOSIEUR 5159
- DOG BARBER, THE 4668
- DOG BARBER, THE, LA FRANCIA 4669
- DOLEFUL DICKY SNEER IN THE DUMPS . . . 5435
- DOMINION OF THE SEAS 6274
- DON BARCELLO, VAN TRUMP & MONSIEUR DE CRICKEY COMBIN'D TOGETHER 5628
- DON QUIXOTE'S PROCESSION TO THE INSTALLATION . . . 4873
- DON VOLASEO. THE FAMOUS SPANISH PARTISAN 5854
- *DOOR LIST EN GEWELD AANGEVALLEN LEEUW, DEN 5712
- DOUBLE ATTACK, THE, OR FRENCH POLITENESS . . . 4573
- DOUBLE DISCOVERY, THE 4861
- DOUBLE DISCOVERY, THE, OR THE DOCTOR BAULK'D OF HIS SUPPER 5209
- D—G—R [DOWAGER] QUEEN RIDING POOR D—M—K, THE 4946
- DRAWN BY MISS CALASH 1778 5527
- [DUCHESS OF QUEENSBURY AND SOUTHBISE] 5120
- DUELLIST, THE; OR, THE MODERN MAN OF HONOUR 5323
- DUKE OF LEEDS RELATING TO CHARLES 2^D A REMARKABLE CIRCUMSTANCE OF HIS ANCESTORS 4902
- DUTCH GRATITUDE DISPLAY'D 5663
- DUTCH IN THE DUMPS, THE 5825
- *[DUTCH VIEW OF GEORGE III, LORD NORTH AND OLIVER CROMWELL] 5729
- DUTCHMAN IN THE DUMPS, THE 5837
- DUTY ON DISCHARGES OR A COMPANION TO THE RECEIPT TAX 6260
- E, O, OR THE FASHIONABLE VOWELS 5928
- E. O. TABLE, THE 6254
- EAST INDIA AIR BALLOON, THE 6289
- EAST INDIA REFORMERS OR NEW WAYS & MEANS 6279
- ECCE! 6033
- ECCE HOMO (2) 5318, 5545
- ECCLESIASTICAL, AND POLITICAL, STATE OF THE NATION 5678
- *ECHTE UITLEGGING VAN EENE ENGELSCHES KUNSTPRENT 5733
- ECLIPSE MACARONY, THE 4643
- *EERSTE ECONOMISCHE PLAAT, DE 5717
- *EERWARDIGEN NEDERLANDER. DE TWEDE ECONOMISCHE PLAAT 5720
- ELECTED COBLER, THE 4709
- "ELECTION BALL" BY C. ANSTHEY, ILLUSTRATIONS TO 5385-5390
- ELECTIONEERING PROCESSION FROM THE MANSION HOUSE TO THE GUILD HALL, AN 5852
- ELOQUENCE OR THE KING OF EPITHETS 6101
- EMACIATED BATH MACARONI, THE 5032
- EMBLEM OF A MODERN MARRIAGE, AN 5326
- EMBLEMATICAL PILE, AN 5239
- EMBLEMATICAL PRINT ADAPTED TO THE TIMES 5486
- ENGAGEMENT BETWEEN D'ORVILLIERS AND K—P—L 5626
- ENGAGEMENT IN BILLINGSGATE CHANNEL, BETWEEN THE TERRIBLE AND THE TIGER, TWO FIRST RATES 5956
- *ENGELSCH NIEUWS 5722
- *ENGELSMAN OP ZYN UITERSTE, DEN 5731
- [ENGLAND, FRANCE AND SPAIN] 5556
- *ENGLISCH PRINTET 5839
- ENGLISH BARBER CARRYING HOME A COMMON COUNCILMAN'S WIG 5463

INDEX OF TITLES

- ENGLISH FARMER'S WIFE CONVERTED TO A FINE LADY . . . , THE 5075
- ENGLISH FUNN OR DOCKING THE MACARONI 4619
- ENGLISH GENTLEMAN AT PARIS, THE 4516
- ENGLISH JESUIT, THE 4917
- ENGLISH LADY AT PARIS, THE 4785
- ENGLISH LADY IN PARIS, THE 4931
- ENGLISH LION DISMEMBER'D, THE, OR THE VOICE OF THE PUBLIC FOR AN ENQUIRY INTO THE PUBLIC EXPENDITURE 5649
- ENGLISH MACARONI AT PARIS CHANGING ENGLISH GUINEAS FOR SILVER, AN 4650
- ENGLISH MAN OF WAR TAKING A FRENCH PRIVATEER, AN 5951
- ENGLISH SLOOP BRINGING IN A DUTCH MAN OF WAR, AN 5952
- ENGLISHMAN AT PARIS, 1767 4185
- ENGLISHMAN IN PARIS, THE 5477
- ENGLISHMAN'S DELIGHT IN NEWS OF ALL SORTS, AN 5792
- ENTERPRIZING MACCARONI . . . , THE 4517
- EQUES CANTAB 4723
- EQUESTRIAN MACARONI, THE 5150
- ESSAY ON HATS, AN 5931
- EUROPEAN DILIGENCE, THE 5557
- EVACUATION BEFORE RESIGNATION 5990
- EVE'S TOLL-GATE OR THE NEW THREE-PENNY TURNPIKE 6253
- EVENING, OR THE MAN OF FEELING 5920
- EVENING'S INVITATION, AN, WITH A WINK FROM THE BAGNIO 5219
- EVERY MAN IN HIS OWN HUMOUR 5681
- EVERY SOUS BEGAD! 4720
- EX MUSEO NEAPOLITANO 5759
- EXACT REPRESENTATION OF THE BURNING . . . OF NEWGATE . . . , AN 5844
- EXACT REPRESENTATION OF THE MANCHESTER RECRUITS . . . , AN 5471
- EXACT REPRESENTATION OF THE SEVEN MALEFACTORS THAT WERE EXECUTED AT TOWER HILL . . . , AN 4852
- EXCHEQUER CLERK, DREST AS THE ACT DIRECTS, AN 5158
- EXCURSION TO CAIN WOOD, THE 4885
- EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY OF PAINTING IN THE YEAR 1771, THE 5089
- EXHIBITION OF WILD BEASTS, THE 4580
- EXHIBITION OF WILD BEASTS, AN, OR THE MACARONI IN DISTRESS 4620
- EXTRA DUTY . . . 3783
- EXTRAORDINARY GAZETTE, AN, OR THE DISAPPOINTED POLITICIANS 5485
- EXTRAVAGANZA, THE, OR THE MOUNTAIN HEAD-DRESS OF 1776 5371
- FALL OF CARLO KHAN, THE 6286
- FALSTAFF & HIS PRINCE 6231
- [FAME'S REWARDS] 5233
- FAMEUX BLAISE LACOSTE, LE, LIMOSIN F : R : S. 4758
- FAMILY COMPACT, THE 5567
- FAMILY PIECE, A 5921
- FANATICISM REVIVED 5685
- FARMER G——E, STUDYING THE WIND & WEATHER 4883
- FARMER—MACARONI, THE 5020
- FARMER'S DAUGHTER'S RETURN FROM LONDON, THE 5456
- FAT LEAN . . . 4776
- FAT PLURALIST AND HIS LEAN CURATES, THE 4951
- FATE OF CITY REMONSTRANCES, THE 4387
- FATE OF FAVOURITES, THE 4956
- [FATE OF PALLISER AND SANDWICH, THE] 5537
- FATHER D—— LEAVING HIS CATHOLICK VOWS FOR THE JOYS OF THE FLESH 6113
- FATHER PAUL DISTURBED . . . 3782
- FATHER PAUL IN HIS CUPS . . . (2) 3781, 4626
- FATHER PETERS LEADING HIS MANGY WHELP TO BE TOUCHED FOR THE EVIL 5670
- FEAST OF THE GODS, THE 5692
- FEATHER'D FAIR IN A FRIGHT, THE (2) 4550, 5621
- FEILD DAY, OR THE ADJUTANT IN A BUSTLE 5787
- FEMALE CONOISEUR, THE 4692
- FEMALE COTERIE AT THE ELECTION OF ONE OF THE MALE MEMBERS OF THEIR SOCIETY, THE 4847
- FEMALE FOX HUNTER, THE 4561
- FEMALE MACORONI, A 4700

INDEX OF TITLES

- FEMALE PYRAMID, THE 4630
 FEMALE TURF MACARONI, THE 4989
 FIELDING'S MYRMIDONS SPOILING
 BOB BOOTY'S MORNING DRAUGHT
 5947
 FIRE-WORK MACARONI, THE 4664
 FIRST MEETING OF THE COTERIE FOR
 1772, THE 5065
 FIRST OF APRIL, THE 2002
 FISH STREET MACARONI, THE 4713
 FLAW IN THE ICE (A), OR STEPHEN'S DREAM OF THE MACARONI BUCKS
 & DOES TURN'D TOPSY TURVY 5123
 FLEET OF TRANSPORTS UNDER CONVOY,
 A 5957
 FLIGHT OF THE CONGRESS, THE 5401
 FLORIZEL AND PERDITA (2) 5767,
 6266
 FLORIZEL GRANTING INDEPENDENCY
 TO PERDITA 6318
 FLOWER GARDEN, THE 5442
 FLOWERS OF EDINBURGH, THE 5941
 FLUTTERING MACARONI, THE 4706
 FLY CATCHING MACARONI, THE 4695
 FOLLOWER OF ST. LUKE, A 5835
 FOOLISH WOMAN, A 5824
 FOOTE, THE DEVIL AND POLLY PATTEENS
 5201
 FOR OR AGAINST IS EQUALLY ALIKE
 5654
 (FORDYCE) MACARONI GAMBLER, A
 5016
 FOUGHT ALL HIS BATTLES O'ER AGAIN
 . . . 6139
 FORTUNATE MACARONI, THE 4697
 FOX AND HOUND, THE, OR RIVAL
 CANDIDATES . . . 5698
 [FOX AND NORTH AS HEROD AND PILATE] 6194
 FOX AND STORK, THE 6166
 FOX, GOOSE AND PRIMER, THE 6180
 FOX TURNING TAIL ON THE GRAPES
 FOR REASONS 6010
 FOX-HUNTING BREAKFAST, A 5455
 FRANCE. ENGLAND 5081
 FRENCH CAPT. OF DRAGOONS BROUGHT TO BED OF TWINS . . . p. 18
 FRENCH GENTLEMAN IN LONDON, THE 5096
 FRENCH LADY IN LONDON . . . , THE 4784
 *FRENCH LAWYER IN LONDON, THE 5246
- FRENCH-LEMONADE-MERCHANT 4782
 FRENCH MACARONY EATING OF MACA-
 ROONS, A 4830
 FRENCH MAN IN LONDON, THE 4787
 FRENCH MAROW-BONE SINGER, THE 4916
 FRENCH PEASANT (2) 4677, 4913
 FRENCH PETIT MAITRE AND HIS VALET
 4933
 FRENCH PHYSICIAN WITH HIS RETINUE
 GOING TO VISIT HIS PATIENTS, A 4932
 [FRENCH POSTILLION,] A 4741
 FRENCH SEIZURE ON THE COAST OF SUSSEX, THE 5627
 FRENCH SPIES ATTACKED BY BRITISH BEES ON THEIR FIRST LANDING
 5775
 FRIAR BALD-PATE'S ABSOLUTION TO HIS FAIR PENITENT 3779
 FROM THE HAYMARKETT 5361
 FRONT, SIDE VIEW, AND BACK FRONT,
 OF A MODERN FINE GENTLEMAN 6342
 FRONTISPEICE TO ADMIRAL KEPPELS
 TRYAL, A 5536
 FRONTISPEICE (2) 5283, 5778
 FRUIT STALL 5448
 FRUITS OF ARBITRARY POWER, THE;
 OR THE BLOODY MASSACRE PER-
 PRETRATED IN . . . BOSTON . . . 4839
 FULL BLOWN MACARONI, THE 4714
 FUMIGATING MACARONI, THE 5022
 GALLANT OUTWITTED, THE 5276
 GAMBLER DETECTED, THE 4836
 GAME 6065
 GAME AT FOOTBALL, THE 5652
 GAME AT PUT FOR THE CHIEF JUSTICE
 SHIP, A 5980
 GAME AT SKITTLES, A 4841
 GAME OF HAZARD, THE 5983
 GANYMEDE 4915
 GARTER'D DILLY, A, OR MASTER OF A
 HORSE TURN'D TRADER 5762
 *GÉNÉRAL BURGOYNE A SARATOGA
 . . . , LE 5857
 *GÉNÉRAL CORNWALLIS A YORCK . . . ,
 LE, 5858
 GÉNÉRAL SANGUINAIRE MARK-HAM
 5400
 GENEROUS JACK TARS, THE, OR FEAST-
 ING AFTER FIGHTING 5710
 GENIUS OF THE LONDON MAGAZINE
 UNMASKING THE TIMES, THE 4941

INDEX OF TITLES

- [GENTLEMAN'S TOILETTE, A] 4789
 [GEORGE III HOLDING THE BALANCE] 6185
 GEORGE'S DELIGHT, OR NECK OR NOTHING 5266
 GERMAN DANCING MASTER, THE 6096
 *GEWAPENDE NEUTRALITEYT 5730
 GHOST OF OMICHUND, THE 5101
 GHOST OF TYRIE, THE 6030
 GIFT OF NEPTUNE, OR BRITAIN'S BULWARK, THE 4897
 GIGG DRIVER 5934
 GLORIA MUNDI, OR—THE DEVIL AD-DRESSING THE SUN 6012
 GOLDEN-PIPPIN BOYS, THE, ON THE BRANCHES OF STATE 6251
 GOLDEN PIPPIN, THE 6307
 GOLDEN RULES OF FREDERICK K. OF PRUSSIA 5630
 GOV^R ELLIOT GIVING THE SPANIARDS A DOSE OF HOT BALLS . . . 6035
 GOVERNORS FAREWELL, THE 5999
 GRACE BEFORE MEAT OR A PEEP AT LORD PETER'S 5489
 GREAT AND GLORIOUS DAYS OF QUEEN BESS, THE 5937
 GREAT CRY AND LITTLE WOOL 6283
 GREAT LUMINARY OF THE LAW, THE 4888
 GREAT MAN IN DISTRESS, A 5067
 GREATEST LAWYER IN PARIS, THE 4927
 GREEN STALL, THE 5449
 GROSS ADJUTANT, A 5511
 GRUB STREET MACARONI, THE 4693
 GRUMBLING PRINCES, THE, OR THE DEVIL TAKE THE MONSIEURS 6000
 GUARDS OF THE NIGHT DEFEATED, THE 4616
 GUY VAUX 6007
 "GUY-VAUX & JUDAS-ISCARIOT" 6022
 HABEAS CORPUS, THE, OR THE WILD GEESE FLYING AWAY WITH FOX TO AMERICA 6029
 HAIL STORM, A 6145
 HALF PAY OFFICER, A, WHO HAS BEEN AT DINNER WITH CAP^N BROAD 4684
 HANS TURBOT QUARRELLING WITH A FISHWOMAN AT SOUTHAMPTON IN PRESENCE OF COUNT CORK SKREW 5117
 HAPPY PEASANT 4681
 HARROGATE, MEEK-ARONY, THE 5270
 THE H—R—G—N [HARRINGTON] HARAM 5322
 HARRY THE FATHER TO S^R HARRY THE SON OR THE WINSOR BREWER 5701
 HATS 5169
 HE! HO!—HEAVY, DULL, AND INSIPID . . . 4514
 HE LEADS THE—VAN—AGAIN 5785
 HE RULES AS ABSOLUTELY . . . AS WHEN HE OPENLY HELD THE REINS OF GOVERNMENT 4952
 HE WOU'D BE A SOLDIER, &C. 5783
 HEAD QUARTER'S 5403
 HEADS OF THE NATION IN A RIGHT SITUATION, THE 5661
 HERIOGLYPHICAL ADDRESS FROM NEPTUNE TO PRINCE WILLIAM, AN 5677
 HERIOGLYPHICAL LETTER FROM BRITANNIA TO ADMIRAL RODNEY 5658
 HÉROS DE FERNEY AU THEATRE DE CHATELAINE, LE 5071
 HÉROS FRANCOISES . . . , LES 5555
 HESSIAN GRENADEIR, A 5483
 *HET TEGENWOORDIG VERWARD EUROPA 5721
 HI! HO!—THESE LATE HOURS WILL SOON DESTROY ME 4515
 HIBERNIA IN DISTRESS 4942
 HIBERNIAN ANTIQUE, TURN'D MODERN MACARONI, A 5152
 HIEROGLYPHIC EPISTLE FROM A MACARONI TO A MODERN FINE LADY, A 5079
 HIEROGLYPHIC EPISTLE FROM LORD N . . . TH TO THE DEVIL . . . , AN 5543
 HIGH AND MIGHTY PUG ANSWERING FOX'S PROPOSALS OF PEACE, THE 6014
 HINT TO THE HUSBANDS, A, OR THE DRESSER, PROPERLY DRESSED 5467
 HINT TO THE LADIES TO TAKE CARE OF THEIR HEADS, A 5395
 HINTS TO BAD HORSEMEN 5914-5917
 HIROGLYPHIC EPISTLE FROM THE DEVIL TO LORD N . . . TH, AN 5542
 HO HE, THE BLACKGUARD MACARONI 5195
 HOGARTH'S CREST 6129
 HOLY ORDER OF ST. ALMAC 4642
 HONEY-MOON, THE 4548

INDEX OF TITLES

- HOP MERCHANT, A 6306
 HOPES OF THE FAMILY . . . , THE 4727
 HOPKINS TRIUMPHANT, OR WILKES IN
 THE DUMPS 5327
 HORRORS OF WAR, THE, A VISION OR A SCENE IN THE TRAGEDY OF K:
 RICH^D: 3^D 6024
 HORSE AMERICA, THROWING HIS MASTER, THE 5549
 HOSPITALITY ABUSED . . . 4930
 HOW D'YE LIKE ME 4522
 HUMBLE PETITION OF TEMPLE BAR TO SOME OF THE HEADS OF THE NATION
 5660
 HUMOROUS THOUGHTS OF A SCHOOL-
 BOY . . . , THE 4535
 HUMOURS OF A FAIR, THE 4840
 HUNTING MACARONI, THE 5050
 HYDE PARK (3) 5925, 5926, 5927
 I. CALCULATOR ESQ^R . . . THE CELE-BRATED CONJUROR 5360
 I HAVE LOST MY STOMACH 5751
 I WILL PAY NO MORE DEBTS OF HER
 CONTRACTING 5085
 ILLITERATE MACARONI . . . , THE
 4652
 IMPLEMENTS FOR SADDLING AN ESTATE
 . . . 5610
 IMPUDENT HAIR DRESSER DETECTED,
 THE, OR THE FRIZUER REWARDED
 5516
 INDIA DIRECTORS IN THE SUDS, THE 5102
 INDISCRETIONS OF NOBLE BLOOD
 CURED MEDECINALLY, THE 5321
 INFERNAL SLOOP, CHASING THE GOOD
 SHIP BRITANNIA, THE 4842
 INFLEXIBLE PORTER, THE. A TRAGEDY
 6343
 INISH NA GEBRAUGH 5572
 INSIDE OF THE PANTHEON IN OXFORD
 ROAD, THE 5091
 INSPIRATION, ELECTION, PERFECTION
 p. 304
 INTELLIGENCE ON THE CHANGE OF
 THE MINISTRY 6348
 INTELLIGENCE ON THE PEACE 6351
 INVISIBLE JUNTO . . . , THE 5671
 IPHIGENIA'S LATE PROCESSION FROM KINGSTON TO BRISTOL 5362
 IRISH GRATITUDE 6003
 IRISH PATRIOTS, THE 6272
 IRISH PEG IN A RAGE . . . 4531
 IS THIS MY DAUGHTER ANN 4786
 ISIS MACARONI, THE 4705
 ITALIAN AFFECTATION—REAL CHAR-ACTERS 5764
 ITALIAN POET, THE 6315
 [ITALIAN VETTURINO, AN] 4735
 JACK A BOTH SIDES! 6250
 JACK ENGLAND FIGHTING THE FOUR
 CONFEDERATES 5828
 JACK GOT SAFE INTO PORT WITH HIS PRIZE 5798
 JACK ON A CRUISE 5797
 JACK ON A CRUISE A MISSY IN Y^E
 OFFING. MASQUERADE SCENE IN
 KENSINGTON GARDENS 5313
 JAMES^S SQUARE MACARONI, THE 5036
 JASON ET MEDÉE, BALLET TRAGIQUE
 5910
 JEHU THE TRUE ENGLISH COACHMAN
 5162
 JEWS RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS 5468
 JOCKEY STATESMAN, THE, AND HIS
 D——SS 5324
 JOHN BULL TRIUMPHANT 5624
 JOHN BULL'S ALTERNATIVE 5860
 JOHN DOUBLE FACE OR THE DECEITFUL
 VULCAN OF WINDSOR 5898
 JOHN JEHU . . . 4738
 JOINT MOTION, A, OR THE HONEY-
 MOON OF THE COALITION 6222
 JOINT STOOL, THE 4949
 JOLLUX 4726
 JOSEPH AND HIS MISTRESS 5522
 JOURNEY TO LONDON, A 5262
 JOURNEYMAN PARSON GOING ON DUTY, A 6153
 JOURNEYMAN PARSON WITH A BARE EXISTENCE, A 3754
 JOVE IN HIS CHAIR 6032
 JUBILEE, THE 6018
 JUDGE THUMB, OR—PATENT STICKS
 FOR FAMILY CORRECTION: WAR-
 RANTED LAWFUL! 6123
 JUDGE THUMB, OR—STICKS OF A LAW-FUL SIZE FOR FAMILY DISCIPLINE
 6122
 JUDGMENT OF PARIS, THE 4920
 JUNCTION OF PARTIES 6220A
 JUNTO, THE, IN A BOWL DISH 5831
 JUSTICE IN THE SUDS, THE 5187
 JUSTICE WRIG—TS A COMING OR
 SECRETARY E. O. ALIAS REYNARD
 PUT TO FLIGHT 6119

INDEX OF TITLES

- KETTLE HOOTING THE PORRIDGE-POT,
THE 6013
- KITTY COAXER DRIVING LORD DUPE,
TOWARDS ROTTEN ROW 4569
- KNAVE OF HEARTS, THE 5962
- KNIGHT OF THE SPIT, A 5263
- KNIGHTSBRIDGE MACARONI, THE 5044
- LABOUR IN VAIN OR LET THEM PULL
& BE DA-ND 6040
- LADIES CHURCH YARD, THE 6263
- LADIES CONTRIVANCE, THE, OR THE CAPITAL CONCEIT 5440
- LADIES DISASTER, THE 4595
- LADIES MAID PURCHASING A LEEK, A 4603
- LADIES RIDICULE, THE 4653
- LADIES SHOOTING PONEY, THE 5817
- LADY ABBESS OF THE 1ST CLASS, A 5184
- LADY BETTY BUSTLE AND HER MAID
LUCY PREPARING FOR THE MAS-
QUERADE AT THE PANTHEON 5094
- LADY C——N DISCOVERED IN A CRIT-ICAL SITUATION WITH A CERTAIN FOREIGN AMBASSADOR 4835
- LADY DRUDGER GOING TO RANELAGH
4647
- LADY FASHION'S SECRETARY'S OFFICE, OR PETTICOAT RECOMMENDATION
THE BEST 5095
- LADY GORGET RAISING RECRUITS FOR COX-HEATH 5953
- LADY IN WAITING, A 5823
- LADY PELLICE, AND MR. MUFF 5514
- LADY WORSLEY, DRESSING IN THE BATHING HOUSE 6111
- LADY'S MAID, THE, OR TOILET HEAD-DRESS 5384
- LAST DROP, THE (2) 5172, 5513
- LAST STAKE, THE 5571
- LATE AUCTION AT ST. EUSTATIA, THE 5842
- LATE BOMBARDMENT OF GOVERNMENT
CASTLE, THE 5985
- LAUGH & GROW FAT 5528
- LAW MACARONI, A 4996
- LAWYER'S LAST CIRCUIT, THE 6128
- LESSON WESTWARD, A,—OR A MORN-ING VISIT TO BETSY COLE 6155
- LEVÉE, THE 6218
- LEWIS BABOON ABOUT TO TEACH NIC
FROG THE LOUVRE 5664
- LIBERTY ENLIGHTENED 5833
- LIBERTY OF THE SUBJECT, THE 5609
- LIGHT GUINEA, THE, OR THE BLADE
IN THE DUMPS 4534
- LIGHT INFANTRY 5041
- LIKE MISTRESS—LIKE MAID 5949
- LILLY MACARONI, THE 4687
- LION MUZZLED, THE, OR NORTH
TRIUMPHANT p. 289
- LITTLE COCKING GEORGE 4855
- LITTLE DEAN'S YARD MACARONI, THE 5021
- LOAVES AND FISHES, THE 6195
- LOFTY RIDING, OR MISS FOLLY'S HEAD
EXALTED 3786, 3787
- LOG-BOOK CANDIDATE IN FULL SAIL TO DEFEAT A WRAY OF HONESTY, A 5998
- LONDON BEAU IN THE COUNTRY, THE,
OR THE DAIRY-HOUSE GALLANT
5207
- LONG CORKS OR THE BOTTLE COM-
PANIONS 5439
- LONG PULL, A, STRONG PULL, AND A PULL ALL TOGETHER 6165
- LONG STORY, A 6144
- LONG THOMAS & MAD^{LE} G——D
GOING TO THE PANTHEON . . . 5116
- *LOON NA. WERK 1780 5715
- L[OR]D AM[HERS]T ON DUTY 5682
- LORD CHIEF JUSTICE HOLT THREATEN-ING TO COMMIT THE SPEAKER, &C.
. . . 4893
- *LORD CORNWALLIS SORTANT DES
CAROLINES, LE . . . 6048
- LORD DIMPLE & HIS MAN, IN THE COAL PIT 5365
- LORD G—— IN THE PORRIDGE POT, OR
THE RAKE'S DISAPPOINTMENT 5210
- LORD MAYOR AND ALDERMAN OLIVER
IN THE TOWER, THE 4853
- LORD NORTH AT THE SPANISH AM-
BASSADOR'S 4935
- *LORD NORTH ATTENDANT DES NOU-
VELLES DE L'AMERIQUE, LE 6049
- LORD N——H IN THE SUDS 5968
- L N [LORD NORTH] ON THE STOOL OF REPENTANCE OR THE ILL EFFECTS OF MEDDLING WITH SALTS
5977
- LORD N[ORTH]S SUPPLICATION TO M^R
FOX 6282
- LORD OF THE VINEYARD, THE 6204
- *LORD RAWDON ARRIVANT DES CARO-
LINES, LE 6048

INDEX OF TITLES

- L—D SAND—G [SANDWICH] DROVE FROM HIS MOORINGS . . . 5965
 L[OR]D SHELBURNE, BEGGING MONSIEUR TO MAKE PISS OR PEACE 6168
 LORD SOPESDS WASHING FOUL LINEN FOR THE GOOD OF THE NATION 5969
 L^P S—K [SUFFOLK] AND HIS SECRETARY LEARNING FRENCH 4875
 LORD — [VILLIERS] OR THE NOSEGAY MACARONI 4825
 LOTTERY ADVENTURERS, THE 5789
 LOVE AND OPPORTUNITY 4591
 LOVE AND WINE 4524
 LOVEJOY, MISS 4995
 LOVELY SACARISSA, DRESSING FOR THE PANTHEON, THE 5533
 LOVELY YOUTH, A, AND A CHARMING MAID . . . 4777
 LUCKY MISTAKE (THE), OR THE BUCK & BLOOD FLOURISHING MACARONI—PLAYING A SOLO ON THE JELLY GLASSES 5121
 MACARONI, A (2) 4671, 4816
 MACARONI ASS MATCH BETWEEN THE CUBS, A 5112
 MACARONI AUCTIONEER, THE 5001
 MACARONI BRICKLAYER, PRIOR TO ANY OTHER MACARONI, THE 4656
 MACARONI CAPTAINS, THE 5061
 MACARONI CARD PLAYERS, THE 4824
 MACARONI CAULDRON, THE 4829
 MACARONI COURTSHIP REJECTED, THE 4583
 MACARONI FRENCH COOK, A 5059
 MACARONI FAMILY RETURNING FROM CHURCH, A 4822
 MACARONI HABERDASHER, THE 5007
 MACARONI IN A MORNING DRESS IN THE PARK, A 4690
 MACARONI LIVERYMAN, A 5000
 MACARONI MERCER, THE 5043
 MACARONI PAINTER . . . , THE 4520
 MACARONI PARSON, THE 4827
 MACARONI PRINT SHOP, THE 4701
 MACARONI PROVIDER, THE 5018
 MACARONI RETURN'D FROM RIDING, A 4657
 MACARONI SACRIFICE, THE 5198
 MACARONI SCHOOLMASTER, THE 5051
 MACARONI SHOE MAKER TAKING HIS MUNDY'S RIDE, THE 4637
 MACARONI, THE. A REAL CHARACTER AT THE LAST MASQUERADE 5221
 MACARONI VICAR OF BRAY CONVERSING WITH PLATO, THE 5068
 MACARONI WAITER, A 4661
 MACARONI WAITER OF DRURY L—E, THE 5154
 MACARONIES, THE 4806
 MACARONIES DRAWN AFTER THE LIFE 4645
 MACARONIES INTERCEDING WITH GRACE AND RIGHT REVERENCE IN BEHALF OF THE POOR & PANTHEON 5193
 MACARONY ALDERMAN AND HIS RIB, A 4602
 MACARONY AT A SALE OF PICTURES, A 4601
 MACARONY BEAUS & BELLES IN AN UPROAR, THE, OR THE LAST EVENING AT VAUXHALL GARDENS 5206
 MACARONY DRESSING ROOM, THE 4781
 MACARONY SHOE MAKER, THE 4638
 MACARONY TAKING HIS MORNING RIDE IN ROTTEN ROW, A 4612
 MADEMOISELLE DE BEAUMONT OR THE CHEVALIER D'EON 5427
 MADRAS TYRANT, THE, OR THE DIRECTOR OF DIRECTORS 5017
 MAGISTERIAL BRUISERS, THE 5616
 MAGISTERIAL ECONOMY 5617
 MAIDSTONE BATH, THE, OR THE MODERN SUSANNA 6108
 MAIDSTONE WHIM 6107
 MAJOR G—N & LADY LANDING AT SOUTHAMPTON IN CRIPPLES WALK 5115
 *MAL LUI VEUT MAL LUI TOURNE DIT LE BON HOMME RICHARD 5727
 MALAGRIDA & CONSPIRATORS, CONSULTING THE GHOST OF OLIVER CROMWELL 6006
 *MAN IN'T HEMD, DE, OF DE GEFNUI-TATE HOOGMOED 5716 MAN OF WAR TOWING A FRIGATE INTO HARBOUR, A 5954
 MAN-TRAP, A 5814
 MANCHESTER HERO, A . . . 4556
 MARCH OF THE TRAIN BANDS, A 5438
 MARGATE MACARONI, THE 5049
 MARQUIS OF DORCHESTER, THE, ADDRESSING THE MILITIA OF NOTTINGHAMSHIRE . . . 4900

INDEX OF TITLES

- [MARRIAGE OF THE DUKE OF CUMBERLAND] 4890
 MARRIED MAID OF HONOUR, THE, OR, THE WIDOW'D WIFE AND HER TWO HUSBANDS 5319
 MARTIAL MACARONI, THE 4711
 MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS SENDING HER RING TO LORD JOHN HAMILTON 4899
 MASK, THE 6234
 MASQUERADE SCENE AT THE PANTHEON, 1772, A 5088
 MASQUERADE SCENE, A, KENSINGTON GARDENS 5083
 MASTER LAVENDER QUALIFYING HIMSELF FOR THE ARMY 5950
 MASTER OF THE ASSES, THE, OR THE WESTMINSTER LOYAL VOLUNTEERS A MEWS-ING THEMSELVES 5551
 MASTER PARSON RETURNING FROM DUTY, A 6154
 MASTER PARSON WITH A GOOD LIVING, A 3753
 ΜΑΣΤΙΦΕΥΣ (2) 4680, 4921
 MAYOR OF L—N ON THE THRONE OF EASE, THE 5688
 MAYOR (THE) RETURNING THANKS TO LORD AMHERST. . . . 5690
 MEEK—ARONI HORNPIPE— 4708
 MEETING OF CITY POLITICIANS, A 5613
 MEETING OF UMBRELLAS, A 6132
 MEMBERS OF THE PROTESTANT ASSOCIATION . . . 5841
 MEMORIAL CYPHER, PORTRAIT AND ARMS, OF LORD GEORGE GORDON . . . 5840
 MERIONETHSHIRE MACARONI, THE 5035
 MERITS AND DEFECTS OF THE DEAD BY THEIR INGENIOUS SECRETARY, THE 5122
 MERLIN 5222
 METHODIST TAYLOR CAUGHT IN ADULTERY, THE 5519
 MIDDLE TEMPLE MACARONI, THE 4826
 [MIDNIGHT MAGISTRATE, THE] 5618
 MILANESE, IL 5770
 MILITARY MACARONI, THE 5151
 MILITIA MEETING, A 4759
 MILLENERS SHOP, A 4775
 MINIATURE MACARONI, THE 5031
 MINISTER IN, THE. MINISTER OUT, THE 5978
 MINISTER IN SURPRIZE, THE 4964
 M—N—S—R [MINISTER] REDUCED, THE, OR SIR OLIVER BLUBBER IN HIS PROPER STATION 5975
 MINISTERIAL PURGATIONS, OR STATE GRIPINGS 5632
 MINOGOAT, THE 5777
 MISERIES OF A SINGLE LIFE, 4540
 MISS BUM-BARDINI 5521
 MISS CALASH IN CONTEMPLATION 5821
 MISS HEDGEHOG 5451
 MISS MACARONI AND HER GALLANT AT A PRINT SHOP 5220
 MISS PRATTLE, CONSULTING DOCTOR DOUBLE FEE ABOUT HER PANTHEON HEAD DRESS 5092
 MISS RATTLE DRESSING FOR THE PANTHEON 5093
 MISS SHUTTLE-COCK 5376
 MISS WICKET AND MISS TRIGGER 4555
 MISS^S DUMPLIN, DUCKTAIL, AND TITUP RETURN'D FROM WATERING 5518
 M^R DEPUTY DUMPLING AND FAMILY ENJOYING A SUMMER AFTERNOON 5955
 M^R F—X MOVING ALL HIS PLATE & FURNITURE FROM S^T JAMES'S PLACE TO WIMBLEDON 6264
 MR. JUSTICE THUMB IN THE ACT OF FLAGELLATION 6124
 M^R TRADE & FAMILY, OR THE STATE OF THE NATION 5574
 M^{RS} GENERAL WASHINGTON, BESTOWING THIRTEEN STRIPES ON BRITANNIA 6202
 MITRED MINUET, THE 5228
 MODERATE INTEREST. 20 P^R CENT. 5012
 MODERN ANTIQUE, A 6098
 MODERN BEAU IN DISTRESS, THE 4590
 MODERN DEMIREP ON THE LOOK-OUT, A 4922
 MODERN EPHESIAN MATRON, THE 5076
 MODERN HARLOT'S PROGRESS, THE, OR ADVENTURES OF HARRIET HEEDLESS 5808-5813
 MODERN HONOUR 5431
 MODERN LOVE 6148-6151
 MODERN MERCURY AND HIS TWO WINGS . . . , THE 5904

INDEX OF TITLES

- MODERN MOONSHINE, OR THE WONDERS OF GREAT BRITAIN 5275
 MODERN SHEILDS OR THE VIRTUE OF STEEL BUTTONS 5446
 MODERN SPREAD EAGLE, A 6140
 [MODERN WOMAN. 1781] 5936
 *MOEDIGE EN WAAKZAME LEEUW, DE 5714
 MONACHUM NON FACIT CUCULLUS 4474
 MONSIEUR LE FOUET 4753
 MON^R LE FRIZUER 4673
 MON^R LE MEDECIN 4670
 MONSIEUR LE QUE LADIES CORK CUTTER FROM PARIS . . . 5458
 MONS^R LE VIRTU 4685
 MONSIEUR SNEAKING GALLANTLY INTO BREST'S SCULKING-HOLE . . . THE 27TH. OF JULY 1778 5484
 MONSTER, THE 6203
 MONTGOLSIER, THE. A FIRST RATE OF THE FRENCH AERIAL NAVY 6333
 MONUMENTS LATELY DISCOVER'D ON SALISBURY PLAIN 6115
 MORNING NEWS, THE 5086
 MORNING, OR THE MAN OF TASTE 5919
 MORNING RAMBLE, A, OR—THE MIL-LINERS SHOP 6160
 MORNING VISIT, A, OR THE FASHION-ABLE DRESSES FOR THE YEAR 1777 5532
 MORNING VISIT, THE 5125
 MOSES 6339
 MOTHER ABBESS OF THE LAST CLASS, A 5181
 MOTHER AND THE CHILD, THE 5105
 MUCKLE SAWNEY RIDING POST, THE 4734
 MUNGO MACARONI, A 5030
 MUSHROOM FROGSTOOL AND PUFF, A 5793
 MUTUAL ACCUSATION 5279
 MUTUAL EMBRACE, THE 4613
 MY LORD — [PETERSHAM] OR THE CHAPEAU MACCARONI 4812
 MY LORD TIPTOE, JUST ARRIVED FROM MONKEY LAND 4686
 MYNHEER NIC FROGS LAMENTATION . . . 5830
 MY-SELF (2) 5265, 4551
 N. WOOD. GAME-KEEPER TO THE R^T HON^{BLE} L^D MULGRAVE . . . 5060
 NABOB RUMBLED, THE, OR A LORD ADVOCATE'S AMUSEMENT 6169
 NAMBIE-PAMBIE IN THE TIP OF THE MODE, A 5443
 NARCISSUS AND THE NYMPH ECHO 6157
 NATIONAL DISCOURSE 5695
 NATIONAL UNION 1771, THE 4858
 NAVAL TRIUMPH OR FAVORS CONFER'D 5795
 NEITHE WAR NOR PEACE! 6188
 NEW ACADEMY FOR ACCOMPLISHMENTS, A 5526
 NEW ADMINISTRATION, A; OR—THE STATE QUACKS ADMINSTRING 6201
 NEW FASHION'D HEAD DRESS FOR YOUNG MISSES OF THREE SCORE AND TEN, A 5466
 NEW FASHIONED PHAETON, THE 5394
 NEW GIG, THE 5933
 NEW METHOD OF MACARONY MAKING, AS PRACTISED IN BOSTON . . . , A 5232
 NEW MODE OF SETTLING THE AFFAIRS OF THE NATION, A, OR TRYING THE FORCE OF GOVERNMENT POWDER 5575
 NEW OPERA GLASS FOR THE YEAR 1777, A 5462
 NEW VIS-A-VIS, THE, OR FLORIZEL DRIVING PERDITA 6259
 NEWMARKET. A SHOT AT A HAWK 4717
 NEWMARKET. A SHOT AT A PIGEON 4719
 NEWMARKET MACARONI, THE 5025
 NEWS FROM AMERICA, OR THE PATRIOTS IN THE DUMPS 5340
 NIGHT MARE, THE, OR HAGG RIDDEN MINISTER 6184, p. 688
 NO POPERY OR NEWGATE REFORMER 5679
 NOBLE GAMBLER, THE 4828
 NODDLE ISLAND; OR HOW ARE WE DECEIVED 5335
 NORTH AND SOUTH OF GREAT BRITAIN 3799
 [NORTH AS AN AUCTIONEER] 5651
 [NORTH WHITEWASHING FOX] 6192
 NORTHERN PHIZ, THE 5967
 NOSCITUR EX NASO. NOSEE NOSEE. 5760
 NOSEE 5269

INDEX OF TITLES

- NOVICIATE OF A MACARONI, RANELAGH, 1772, THE 4993
- NUN OF THE 1ST CLASS, A (2) 5182, 5183
- NUN OF THE 4TH CLASS, A 5179
- NUN OF THE LAST CLASS, A 5312
- NUN OF THE 2^D CLASS, A (2) 5178, 5186
- NUN OF THE II^D CLASS, A 5185
- NUN OF THE SIXTH CLASS, A 5268
- NUN OF THE 6TH CLASS, A 5180
- NUN OF THE 3^D CLASS, A 5177
- NUPTIALS OF MISS EPICENE D'EON 4872
- *Ô QU'EL D'ESTAIN 5581
- ODDITY IN CHANGE ALLEY, AN 5167
- OFFICER IN THE LIGHT INFANTRY DRAWN BY HIS LADY TO COX-HEATH 4562
- OH! LORD, HOWE—THEY RUN OR JACK ENGLISH CLEARING THE GANGWAY BEFORE GIBRALTER 6037
- OH QUI GOOSE-TOE! [CHE GUSTO] 5906
- OLD BEAU IN AN EXTASY, THE 4532
- OLD ENGLAND, OR AN ELECTION IN THE YEAR 1580. GREAT BRITAIN OR AN ELECTION IN THE YEAR 1780 5708
- OLD FREE METHOD OF ROUZING A BROTHER SPORTSMAN, THE 3769, 3770
- OLD HAMAN THE NORTHAMPTON LAMP-LIGHTER. DRAWN FROM LIFE 5271
- OLD MACARONI CRITIC AT A NEW PLAY, AN 4699
- OLD MACARONI MISS-LED, AN 5058
- OLD MAIDS AT QUADRILLE 5453
- OLD MAIDS MORNING VISIT, THE, OR THE CALASH LADY'S 5434
- OLD PACKHORSE BRITAIN, THE, LOADED, OR WAYS & MEANS FOR 1781 5703
- OLD POLITICAL MACARONI WITH HIS WISE FAMILY AT BREAKFAST, THE 4821
- OLD RAT OF THE CONSTITUTION, THE, . . . 6255
- OLD WISDOM BLINKING AT THE STARS 6103
- *OLIVE REJECT^D, THE, OR THE YANKEES REVENGE p. 289
- ONLY BOOTH IN THE FAIR, THE, PORTLAND & CO—LATE SHELburne 6206
- *ONTWAAKTE LEEUW, DE 5713
- OPERA GIRL OF PARIS IN THE CHARACTER OF FLORA, AN 4924
- OPERATION, THE 5127
- OPOSITION DEFEATED 5644
- OPTIC CURLS, THE, OR THE OBLIGEING HEAD DRESS 5436
- OPTICAL CONTRAST, THE 4703
- ORACLE, THE, . . . 5225
- *ORAGE CAUSÉ PAR L'IMPÔT SUR LE THÉ EN AMERIQUE 5491
- ORATOR HUM 6091
- ORIENTAL MACARONI, THE 5053
- ORIGINAL AIR BALLOON 6288
- ORIGINAL MACARONI, THE 5010
- OUT OF FASHION, IN FASHION 4817
- OUT OF THE FRYING PAN INTO THE FIRE 6237
- OVER WITH HIM 6177
- OVERJOY OF M. DE. LA. MOTTE. PIQUET. AT THE BRINGING OF THE S^T EUSTATIA FLEET INTO BREST 5838
- OVERTHROW OF DR SLOP, THE 5215
- OXFORD ADONIS MACARONI, THE 5037
- OXFORD-MACARONI, THE 4990
- PADDY ON HORSE-BACK 5605
- PAGEANT, THE 4878
- PAINTER SUBMITTING HIS PICTURE TO THE EXAMINATION OF CONNOISSEURS AND ANTIQUARIANS 2008
- PAINTRESS OF MACCARONI'S, THE 4582
- PANTHEON, THE, A POEM 5278
- PANTHEON MACARONI, THE 5097
- PANTHEON NO. REP, A 4998
- PARADE MACARONI, THE 4704
- PARADISE LOST 6011
- PARIDISE REGAIN'D 6319
- PARIS SHOE CLEANER 4679
- PARK-CHARACTER 5368
- PARL^{MT} DISSOLVED, THE, OR, THE DEVIL TURN'D FORTUNE TELLER 5238
- PARRICIDE, THE. A SKETCH OF MODERN PATRIOTISM 5334
- PARSON AND CAPTAIN, THE 3789
- PART OF THE NEW COMMITY OF ENQUIRY, A 4863
- PATENT SADDLES INVENTED SOLELY FOR THE EASE OF BOREAS & REYNARD 6236

INDEX OF TITLES

- PATRIOT, THE 5544
 PATRIOTIC MISFORTUNES; OR, SIR JOSEPH IN THE SUDS 5190
 PATRIOTIC SOUP FOR POOR OLD ENGLAND 5650
 PATRIOTICK BARBER OF NEW YORK, THE, OR THE CAPTAIN IN THE SUDS 5284
 PATRIOTICK METEORS 4887
 PATRIOTS DECEIVED, THE, OR TOWNSEND TRIUMPHANT 4967
 PATTERN ADJUTANT, A 5052
 PAUL JONES SHOOTING A SAILOR . . . 5566
 PAULO PURGANTI AND HIS WIFE 4568
 PAW-MINY, THE . . . 5886
 PEACE PORRIDGE ALL HOT THE BEST TO BE GOT 6172
 PEACE-MAKERS, THE 4416
 PEASANT OF THE ALPS (2) 4675, 4913 [PEDLARS] 5807
 PEEP IN THE GARDEN AT HAYES, A 5113
 PEEP INTO LADY [WORSLE]Y'S SERAGLIO, A 6112
 PEEP INTO WESTMINSTER HALL ON A CALL OF SERJEANTS, A 5900
 PERDITO & PERDITA—OR—THE MAN & WOMAN OF THE PEOPLE 6117
 PETITIONING, REMONSTRATING, REFORMING REPUBLICAN, A 5665
 PETRIFIED LUSUS NATURAE, A 6228
 PETTICOAT AT THE FIERI MASCHARETA, THE 5315
 PHAETONA OR MODERN FEMALE TASTE 5375
 PHILLIPICK TO THE GEESE, A 5843
 PHILOSOPHICAL JUDGMENT DEC^R 1777 5426
 PHYSICAL ERROR, THE 6131
 PICCADILLY MACARONI, THE 5026
 PICTURE OF EUROPE FOR JULY 1772 4957
 PICTURESQUE VIEW OF THE STATE OF THE NATION FOR FEBRUARY 1778 5472
 PILLAR OF THE CHURCH WITH IT'S PROPER CAPITAL, A 5003
 PINCHIE, OR THE BAUBLE MACARONI 5055
 PISSING CONFLICT, THE 5192
 PLAISIR [sic] DU MÉNAGE, LES 5938
 PLEASING METHOD OF ROUZING THE DOCTOR, A, OR A TYTHE PIG NO BAD SIGHT 3785
 PLEASURES OF SKAITING, THE . . . 5818
 POACHER, THE 5428
 POLISH PLUMB-CAKE, THE 5229
 POLITE ARTIST ON ST. LUKE'S DAY UNDER THE PATRONAGE OF DR BARDANA, A 5168
 POLITE MACARONI, THE 5078
 POLITE MACCARONI PRESENTING A NOSEGAY TO MISS BLOSSOM, THE 4518
 POLITENESS (2) 5611, 5612
 POLITICAL BALLOON, THE; OR THE FALL OF EAST INDIA STOCK 6275
 POLITICAL CARTOON FOR THE YEAR 1775, THE 5288
 POLITICAL CONCERT, A . . . 6173
 POLITICAL DANCING BEAR, THE 5110
 POLITICAL LESSON, A 5230
 POLITICAL MIRROR, THE, OR AN EXHIBITION OF MINISTERS FOR APRIL 1782 5982
 POLITICAL MOON, THE, OR THE PRESENT STATE OF THE MAJORITY AS THEY APPEAR EVERY WHERE 5634
 POLITICAL RAREE-SHOW, THE: OR A PICTURE OF PARTIES AND POLITICS . . . 5548 POLITICAL RAT CATCHER, THE 5099
 POLITICAL REFORMATION 5693
 POLITICAL SEE-SAW, THE, OR MINHIRNIC FROG TURN'D BALANCE MASTER 5568
 POLITICAL STAG HUNT OR THE M——L [MINISTERIAL] HOUNDS IN FULL CRY 5676
 POLITICAL WEATHERCOCK, THE 6230
 POLITICAL WHISPER 5558
 POLITICIAN, THE 4857
 POLYGAMICAL DOCTOR, THE 5768
 POOR OLD ENGLAND 6200
 POOR OLD ENGLAND ENDEAVORING TO RECLAIM HER WICKED AMERICAN CHILDREN 5397
 PORTER MACARONI, THE 5006
 PORTLAND PLACE ARCHER, THE, . . . 6114
 PORTLAND SHARKS, THE, OR THE MINISTRY UPON A BROAD BOTTOM 6238
 . . . PORTRAIT OF THE INIMITABLE MR. JAMES MOSS . . . 4721

INDEX OF TITLES

- POSTIGLIONE GERMANICO 4740
 POSTIGLIONE INGLESE 4739
 [POSTILLION, A] 4747
 POT FAIR. CAMBRIDGE 4729
 PRATTLE THE POLITICAL APOTECARY
 5603
 PRELIMINARY SOLOMONS, THE, SUR-
 PRIZED BY THE GHOST OF JOHN
 HANGEMCHOP ESQ. 6175
 PREMIER DISTRIBUTING THE LOAVES
 AND FISHES TO THE LABOURERS IN
 HIS VINEYARD . . . , THE 4955
 PREPOSTEROUS HEAD DRESS, THE, OR
 THE FEATHERED LADY 5370
 PREROGATIVES DEFEAT OR LIBERTIES
 TRIUMPH 5659
 PRESENT EMPEROR OF GERMANY (THE)
 RECEIVING PETITIONS FROM, AND REDRESSING THE GRIEVANCES OF THE MEANEST OF HIS SUBJECTS . . .
 4388
 PRESENT STATE OF GREAT BRITAIN,
 THE 5579
 PRESENT TIMES, THE, OR THE NABOBS
 CL—VE AND C—L—KEBROUGHT TO ACCOUNT 5111
 PRETTY BAR MAID, THE 4558
 PRETTY MANTUA MAKER, THE 4991
 PRETTY SAVOYARD GIRL, THE 4925 PRETTY WATERWOMAN, THE, OR ADMIRAL PURBLIND JUST RUN A-GROUND BY PEGGY PULLAWAY 5819
 PRIEST AT HIS PRIVATE DEVOTIONS, A 5680
 PRINCE STADHOLD—R RESUMING HIS DELIBERATION 6038
 PRINTERS BEFORE A COMMITTEE OF THE ROBINHOOD SOCIETY, THE 4860
 PRIVATE ORDINATION, A 4866
 PRIVY COUNCIL, A 5569
 PRIVY COUNCIL, THE 5633A
 [PRIVY COUNCIL OF BARATARIA, THE]
 5134
 PRO BONO PUBLICO AND HIS LADY;
 REAL CHARACTERS 5359
 *PROCÈS DES TROIS ROIS, LE 5711
 PROCLAMATION OF PEACE 6267
 PROFLIGATE'S LEVEE . . . , THE 5423
 PROPORTION 5459
 PROTECTING MACARONI, THE 5038
 PROTECTOR OF FREEDOM OF ELECTION,
 THE 6270
 PROTESTANT ASSOCIATION, THE, OR THE SCOTCH S^T GEORGE AND THE DRAGON 5672
 PROTEUS Y^E 2^D IN SEVERAL AMONG HIS MANY PUBLICK CHARACTERS 6265
 PROVERB REVERS'D, THE . . . 4560
 PROVISION FOR THE CONVENT 3777
 P'SHA YOU FLATTER ME 4528
 PUBLIC ORDINARY 5776
 PUFF OFF, A 6359
 PUKE-ATION IN ANSWER TO THE LATE
 STATE OF THE NATION 6199
 PUNCH & THE JUGGLERS 6233
 PYRAMIDS, DISCOVER'D AT BATH,
 ANNO DOMINI 1777 5461
 QUACKS, THE 6325
 QUEEN OF D—N—RK CONVEYING TO PRISON, THE 4945
 QUIDNUNC, OR THE UPHOLSTERER
 SHAVING 4937
 QUINTESSANCE OF QUACKISM, THE, . . .
 5766
 QUINTUPLE ALLIANCE, THE 6247
 RAISING THE ROYAL GEORGE 6042,
 p. 671
 RAPACIOUS QUACK, THE (2) 3798,
 3797
 RAPE OF MISS DEON FROM FRANCE TO
 ENGLAND 4870
 RAT-TRAP, THE, OR VILLANY IN FULL
 BLOOM 5197
 RAZOR'S LEVEE, OR Y^E HEADS OF A NEW WIG ADMINISTRATION ON A BROAD
 BOTTOM 6217
 READ, MARK, LEARN & INWARDLY
 DIGEST 5687
 REAL SCENE IN S^T PAUL'S CHURCH-
 YARD, A 6352
 RECONCILIATION BETWEEN BRITANIA
 AND HER DAUGHTER AMERICA, THE 5989
 RECRUIT FRANCOIS, RECRUIT ANGLOIS
 . . . 5862
 RECRUITING CUCKOLD, THE. A SONG
 5779
 RECRUITING SERJEANT AND CON-
 TENTED MATES 5774
 RECRUITS 4766
 RED RIBBAND BESTOWED INSTEAD OF A HALTER, THE 4960
 RE-ELECTING OF REYNARD, THE, OR
 FOX THE PRIDE OF THE GEESE 6215
 REFIN'D TASTE 5173

INDEX OF TITLES

- REGARDEZ MOI 5911
 RELIEF, THE 5924
 RELIEF OF GIBRALTAR A CABINET
 COUNCIL 6163
 REMARKABLE CHARACTERS AT MRS.
 CORNELY'S MASQUERADE 4928
 REPRESENTATION OF A PARLIMENT
 CUR, THIS . . . 6243
 RESCUE, THE. A VOLUNTEER DELIVER-ING HIBERNIA FROM THE CLAWS OF
 THE LION 6002
 RESURRECTION, THE, OR AN INTERNAL VIEW OF THE MUSEUM IN WINDMILL
 STREET 6127
 RETALIATION OR STATE OF NATIONS
 6050
 RETREAT OF CARLO KHAN FROM
 LEADENHALL ST, THE 6285
 RETROSPECTIVE VIEW OF A CERTAIN
 CABINET JUNTO, A 5124
 RETROSPECTIVE VIEW OF THE DIFFI-CULTIES AND EMBARRASMENTS
 CAUSED BY THE COIN ACT . . . 5128
 RETURN FROM SCOTLAND, OR THREE WEEKS AFTER MARRIAGE 4625
 RETURN^G FROM READING MARKET IN A FULL BREEZE 5118
 REV^D MACARONI, A 5161
 REVIEW OF THE YORK REGIMENT 5492
 REYNARDO'S CONSECRATION BY THE GODDESS MURCIA 5496
 RICH PRIVATEER BROUGHT INTO PORT
 BY TWO FIRST RATES, A 6161
 RICHMOND HILL 6143
 RIDICULE, THE 5008
 RIDICULOUS TASTE 4629
 RIDICULOUS TASTE OR THE LADIES
 ABSURDITY 4628
 RIDING-HOUSE, A 5802
 RIGHT HON^{BLE} BRASS CROSBY . . . AND
 RICHARD OLIVER ESQ. . . THE 4854
 R^T HON^{BLE} CATCH SINGERS, THE 6225
 RIVAL QUEENS OF COVENT GARDEN AND DRURY LANE THEATRES, THE 6126
 ROAST BEEF AND PORT, OR BULLY
 BRAMBLE ESQ. . . . 5004
 ROBIN HOOD SOCIETY, THE 6331
 ROBBED BETWEEN SUN AND SUN 5223
 RODNEY INTRODUCING DE GRASSE
 5997
 RODNEY INVESTED—OR—ADMIRAL
 FIG ON A CRUIZE 5996
- RODNEY TRIUMPHANT — OR — AD-MIRAL LEE SHORE IN THE DUMPS
 5992
 RODNEY'S TRIUMPH 5648
 RODNY'S NEW INVENTED TURN
 ABOUT 6008
 ROSCIUS IN TRIUMPH, OR THE DOWN-
 FALL OF SHYLOCK ALIAS MACKBETH
 5203
 ROTATION OFFICE, A 5273
 ROYAL ADONIS, THE 6321
 ROYAL ASS, THE 5669
 ROYAL HUNT, THE, OR A PROSPECT OF
 THE YEAR 1782 5961
 R—Y—L HUNT, THE, OR THE PETI-
 TIONERS ANSWER'D 5675
 ROYAL MIDSHIPMAN OR PRINCE W^M
 HENRY'S LEVEE 6258
 RURAL MASQUERADE DEDICATED TO
 THE REGATTA'ITES 5379
 SAILING TO THE HOUSE, WIND FULL
 NORTH 5971
 SAILOR RIDING TO PORTSMOUTH, THE 6159
 SAILOR'S PRESENT, THE—OR, THE
 JEALOUS CLOWN 4559
 SAILOR'S RETURN FROM PORTSMOUTH
 TO LONDON, THE 5087
 SAILOR'S RETURN, THE, OR BRITISH
 VALOR REWARDED 6262
 SAINT ANDREW FOR SCOTLAND 5944
 S^T CECILIA 6104
 SAINT DAVID FOR WALES 5943
 S^T GEORGE & THE DRAGON 6001
 SAINT GEORGE FOR ENGLAND 5942
 S^T GEORGE'S FIELDS, OR THE POSTS
 NOT WIDE ENOUGH FOR FATTY 6138
 S^T JAMES'S MACARONI, THE (2) 5024,
 4712
 S^T JAMES'S PARK (2) 6193, 6344
 SAINT PATRICK FOR IRELAND 5945
 SAL DAB GIVING MONSIEUR A RECIEPT
 IN FULL 4623
 SALLY FROM TOM'S, A 5357
 SALUTATION TAVERN, THE 4716
 SAMPSON OVERCOME BY A PHYSITIAN
 6121
 SAMSON PULLING DOWN THE PILLARS
 5126
 [SANDWICH AND SACKVILLE AT THE BAR] 6046
 [SATIRE ON AMATEUR MUSICAL PER-FORMANCES, A] 4778

INDEX OF TITLES

- SAUNDERS'S GHOST 5538
 SAVAGES LET LOOSE, THE, OR THE CRUEL FATE OF THE LOYALISTS 6182
 SAWNEY GANGING BACK AGAIN BEING TURNED OUT OF PLACE 6005
 SAWNEY IN THE BOG-HOUSE 5539
 SAWNEY'S DEFENCE AGAINST THE BEAST, WHORE, POPE, AND DEVIL,
 &C. &C. 5534
 SAWYERS DEMOLISHING THE TEMPLE
 OF LIBERTY, THE 4431
 SCAVOIR VIVRE, THE 4698
 SCENE IN GLASGOW, A, OR—SIR
 DONALD DICTATE IN THE DUMPS
 6332
 SCENE IN ISLINGTON FIELDS, A 5205
 SCENE IN LEADENHALL STREET, . . . A 5655
 SCENE LE VROG HOUSE 6031
 SCHOOL OF ATHENS, A 5510
 SCOTCH BUTCHERY, BOSTON, THE,
 1775 5287
 SCOTCH MADE HAPPY BY A LATE ACT
 OF PARLIAMENT, THE 6017
 SCOTCH PRIDE HUMBLED OR THE RE-
 BELLION CRUSHED MDCCXLV 4896
 SCOTCH REEL, A 5374
 SCRAMBLE, THE, OR OLD GRIPUS PLUN-
 DER'D BY HIS YOUNG WIFE 4584
 SCRUB & ARCHER 6221, p. 724
 SEARCH THE WORLD YOU'LL SELDOM
 SEE—HANDSOMER FOLKS THAN WE THREE 4542
 SECRET REFLECTION. OR THE STOOL
 OF REPENTANCE 6164
 SEIGNOR CATGUTANEO 5163
 SENATORIAL CONTRAST, THE 5422
 SENATORS, THE 4970
 SETTLING THE ODD TRICK 5515
 SHAFTESBURY ELECTION, THE, OR THE HUMOURS OF PUNCH 5341
 SHAH ALLUM IN DISTRESS 5100
 SHAVER AND THE SHAVEE, THE 4756
 SHELburne BADGERED & FOXED 6176
 SHELburn'S SACRIFICE 6171
 [SHELL-BORN JESUIT, THE] 6045
 SHILLING, THE, OR THE VALUE OF A PRIVY COUNCELLOR'S MATRI-
 MONIAL HONOR 6105
 SHOOTING OF RUBBISH 5794
 SHYLOCK TURND MACBETH 5175
 SIEGE OF NAMUR BY CAPT^N SHANDY
 & CORPORAL TRIM, THE 5213
 SIGNOR GRUNTINELLI PLAYING ON A NEW INSTRUMENT (CALL'D A SWINETTA) 5261
 SIGNOR PUPPY FIRST CATGUT SCRAPER
 5892
 SIMPLING MACARONI, THE 4696
 SINKING FUND, THE 5535
 SIPHONS, THE, OR TALE OF A TUB
 6235
 S^R BIBO BULKY 4644
 SIR CHARLY DETECTED OR THE EX-
 CISEMAN CORNUTED 5211
 SIR GREGORY GIGG 6146
 SIR P. J. C. E^S HAMPSHIRE STORY 6016
 SIR RICHARD WORSE-THAN-SLY . . .
 (2) 6109, 6110
 S^R SAMUEL HOUSE (2) 5697, 5876
 SIR TOBY THATCH, CANDIDATE FOR
 GARRET 5877
 SIR TRISTE SHADOW 5325
 S^R WILLIAM WADDLE 5437
 SIX GUINEAS ENTRANCE AND A GUINEA
 A LESSON (2) 5908, 5909
 SIX-PENCE A DAY 5295
 [SIX REMARKABLE HEADS] 4962
 SIX WEEKS AFTER MARRIAGE 4549
 SKETCH OF THE ENGAGEMENT UNDER
 . . . VICE ADMIRAL PARKER ON THE
 DOGGER BANK . . . 5848
 SKETCH'D BY HUMPHREY—SPOIL'D
 BY GILLRAY 5912
 SKIRMISHING TO THE REAR 6134
 SLEEPY MACARONI, THE 4648
 SLEEPY MACARONI STE'—ALING A
 NAP, THE 4649
 SLEIGHT OF HAND BY A MONKEY—OR
 THE LADY'S HEAD UNLOADED 4546
 SLIP, THE, OR MISS WILLING TO BE IN
 THE TON 4631
 SLUMBERS OF RAGOTIN INTERRUPTED,
 THE 5218
 SMUGGLING MACHINE, A, OR A CON-VENIENT COSAUWAY FOR A MAN IN MINIATURE 6102
 SNIP ANGLAIS 4748
 SNIP FRANCOIS 4749
 SOCIETY OF PATRIOTIC LADIES AT EDENTON IN NORTH CAROLINA, A
 p. 197
 SOFT TUMBLE AFTER A HARD RIDE, A 5816
 SOLDIER TIRED OF WAR'S ALARMS, THE 5784

INDEX OF TITLES

- SOLID ENJOYMENT OF BOTTLE AND FRIEND, THE 4539
 SOLILOQUY, THE 6020
 SOOTY DUN THE DEVIL'S MEALMAN 5042
 SOUTHWARK MACARONI, THE 4691
 SPANISH DONS (THE) OVERTAKEN BY AN ANCIENT BRITON IN ATTEMPTING THEIR ESCAPE 5773
 SPANISH TREATMENT AT CARTHAGENA 4934
 SPECTATORS AT A PRINT SHOP, IN ST. PAUL'S CHURCH YARD 3758
 SPECTATUM ADMISSI, RISUM TENEATIS, AMICI? 5343
 SPEEDY & EFFECTIVE PREPARATION FOR THE NEXT WORLD, A 5441
 SPIRIT (THE) IS WILLING BUT THE FLESH IS WEAK 4609
 SPIRITED ATTACK, A 5755
 SPORTING LADY, THE 4624
 SPRING 4564
 SQUIRE THOMAS JUST ARRIV'D 5524
 STABLE ADVENTURE . . . , THE 4801
 STABLE VOTERS OF BEER LANE WINDSOR, THE 5700
 STABLE Y—D MACARONI, THE 5033
 STATE BLACKSMITHS FORGING FETTERS FOR THE AMERICANS, THE 5328
 STATE COOKS MAKING PEACE—PORRIDGE, THE 6009
 STATE COOKS, OR THE DOWNFALL OF THE FISH KETTLE 5855
 STATE COTILLON, 1773, THE 5106
 STATE DUNCES, THE 5707
 STATE GOOSE-CATCHER, THE—OR A S^T JAMES'S MARKET MAN 6261
 STATE HACKNEY-COACH, THE 5098
 STATE JUGGLERS 1773, THE 5109
 STATE MINERS 6280
 STATE NURSES, THE 5850
 STATE OF THE NATION, THE (3) 5479, 5480, 5481
 STATE PROSTITUTION 6242
 STATE SAMPSON FIREING THE FOXES . . . THE 5963
 STATE TINKERS, THE 5635
 STATE VINTNERS, THE 6245
 STATE WATCHMAN, THE, DISCOVER'D BY THE GENIUS OF BRITAIN, STUDYING PLANS FOR THE REDUCTION OF AMERICA 5856
 STATE WINDMILL, THE 6241
 STATESMAN ON STILTS, THE, OR A PRIME MINISTER IN HIS UNDRRESS 5243
 STEEL BUTTONS COUP DE BOUTON 5454
 STEPHEN CUB IN THE SUDS 5208
 STEPHEN STRUT Y^E TALLOW MACARONI 5106
 STILL LIFE: Á L'HOLLANDAISE 5619
 STREPHON & CHLOE 4755
 STRIKE—BUT HEAR 5224
 STRUENSEE'S GHOST OR LORD B—TE & M—N—D IN THE HORRORS 4950
 [SUB-PORTER AND LAMPLIGHTER OF TRIN. COLL. CAMB. 1771] 6353
 SUITERS TO HIBERNIA ON HER HAVING A FREE TRADE 5653
 SUMMER 4565
 SUMMER DRESSES 6137
 SUN SETTING IN A FOG, A; WITH THE OLD HANOVER HACK DESCENDING 6239
 SUNDAY CONCERT, A 6125
 SUNDAY EVENING 5782
 SUNDAY EVENING, A 5084
 SURRENDER OF GOVERNMENT CASTLE, . . . THE 5986
 SURRY MACARONI, THE 4694
 SYMPATHIZING POLITICIANS, THE 6167
 SYMPTOMS OF KICKING 5916
 SYMPTOMS OF REARING 6340
 SYMPTOMS OF RESTIVENESS 5914
 SYMPTOMS OF STARTING 5915
 SYMPTOMS OF TUMBLING 5917
 TAKEING OF MISS MUD I'LAND, THE 5402
 TALEO, OR THE ROYAL SPORTSMAN RUNNING DOWN THE ENEMIES OF GREAT BRITAIN 6043
 TALLE-HO PARSON GOING IN TO COVER, THE 5520
 TASTING 6135
 TAX ON POST HORSES 6152
 TAX ON RECEIPTS 6244
 TAYLOR TURN'D JOCKEY, THE, OR GOOSE UPON GOOSE 5805
 TAYLOR TURN'D SPORTSMAN, THE 6136
 TEA-TAX-TEMPEST, THE,—OR OLD TIME WITH HIS MAGICK LANTHERN 6190
 *TEA-TAX TEMPEST, THE, OR THE

INDEX OF TITLES

- ANGLO-AMERICAN REVOLUTION
5490
- TEMPLE MACARONI, A 4994
- TEMPTATION IN THE WILDERNESS,
THE 6278
- TERROR OF FRANCE, THE, OR THE WESTMINSTER VOLUNTEERS 1779
5552
- TETE À TETE BETWEEN THE PREMIER
& J^NO HANCOCK ESQ^R, A 5476
- TÊTES-À-TÊTES, 4470, 4903-4912,
4971-4984, 5136-5148, 5248-5260,
5299-5311, 5344-5356, 5409-5421,
5497-5509, 5583-5595, 5735-5747,
5863-5875, 6078-6089, 6293-6305
- THAT & THIS SIDE OF THE WATER, OR DUTCH & ENGLISH POLITICKS 5723
- THEATRICAL DISPUTE, THE, OR THE PARSON BAITED 5364
- THEODOSIUS HOMUNCULUS ESQ. 4688
- THING IN A NASTY SITUATION, THE 5709
- THIS IS SOMETHING NEW 5460
- THISTLE REEL, THE 5285
- THREE GRACES OF COX-HEATH, THE 5600
- THREE KINGS, THE. WHO PAYS THE RECKONING, OR DON DIEGO IN THE DUMPS 5642
- THROWING UP HIS MAJESTY'S FOX-
HOUNDS 5976
- THUNDERER, THE 6116
- TIGER MACARONI, THE; OR TWENTY
MORE, KILL 'EM 4087
- TIGHT BASTING, AS IT WAS PERFORM'D
AT THE WHITE BEAR IN PICCADILLY
5801
- TIGHT LACING 5452
- TIGHT LACING, OR THE COBLER'S WIFE
IN THE FASHION 5464
- TIME & TRUTH BRING STRANGER
THINGS TO PASS 5135
- TIME PAST. TIME PRESENT 5959
- TIME WORKING OUT THE NEW MINIS-TRY IN PROPER CHARACTERS 6023
- TIMES, THE 5643
- TIMES, THE, ANNO 1783 6210
- TIMES, THE, OR THE DOWNFALL OF MAGNA FAR—TA. . . 6290
- TIMOROUS SPORTING MACARONI, THE 5054
- TIMOTHY TALLOW, AND HIS WIFE . . .
4640
- TIP-TOP ADJUTANT, A 5596
[TIRED POSTILLION, A] 4742
[TITLE PAGE, (DARLY)] 4710, 4985,
5005, 5019, 5039, 4666, 5369
- TO BE SOLD TO THE BEST BIDDER 5171
- TO DAY DISLIKED, AND YET PERHAPS
TOMORROW AGAIN IN FAVOUR. SO FICKLE IS THE MIND OF ROYALTY!!!
6291
- *[TOESTAND DER ENGELSCHER NATIE]
5726
- TON AT GREENWICH, THE 5450
- TΩN MENTOΙ ΧΗΝΩΝ ΟΥΚ ΕΣΤΙΝ ΟΞΤΙΣ
ΟΥ 5905
- TOOTHLESS, HE DRAWS THE TEETH OF
ALL HIS FLOCKS 5494
- TOWER TO FOREIGN PARTS, A 4732
- TOWER MACARONI, THE 4659
- TRANSFER OF EAST INDIA STOCK, A 6271
- TREASURY LADDERS, THE, OR, POLITI-CAL GAPERS 6248
- TRIA JUNCTA IN UNO, OR THE THREE
ENEMIES OF BRITAIN 5826
- TRIAL OF M. D'ÉON BY A JURY OF MATRONS, THE 4862
- TRIAL OF THE DUKE OF C. [CUMBER-
LAND] AND LADY G—R [GROS-
VENOR] FOR CRIM. CON., THE 4845
- TRIAL OF THE SOVEREIGN EMPRESS OF THE VAST REGIONS OF TASTE 4929
- TRIP TO COCKS HEATH, A 5523
- TRIP TO SCARBOROUGH, A 6345
- TRIPLE PLEA, THE 3761
- TRIUMPHANT BRITONS, THE 5646
- *TROELFTH CAKE, THE. GATEAU DES
ROOIS, LE 4958
- TROOPS FORDING A BROOK 4608
- TRUE PORTRAITS OF THE MAJORITY OF THE PAR—L—T OF PANDEMONIUM
4869
- TRUE STATE OF THE JUNCTION, THE;
OR MEN OF ABILITIES CALL'D FOR 6232
- TRUE TOWN PICTURE, A: OR AN OLD
HAG OF DRURY PRESENTING A
CHICKEN TO HIS LORDSHIP 3788
- TUB TO THE WHALE, A, OR THE RETORT
COURTEOUS TO CITY REMON-
STRANCES 5234
- TUILLERIE MACARONIES, THE 4783
- TURF-MACARONI, THE 4634
- TWITCHER'S ADVOCATE 4426

INDEX OF TITLES

- TWO BLOODS OF HUMOUR, RETURNING FROM THE BAGNIO . . . 4521
 [TWO DESERTERS] 5366
 TWO IMPURES OF THE TON DRIVING TO THE GIGG SHOP, HAMMERSMITH 5939
 TWO JACKS, THE 5245
 TWO NEW SLIDERS FOR THE STATE MAGIC LANTHERN 6287
 TWO PRIVATEERS ATTACKING A MAN OF WAR 6349
 *TYD GEEFT VERANDERING, DE 5718
 UNEXPECTED LEVEE FOR A NEW MARRIED COUPLE, AN 4581
 UNFORTUNATE MACARONI, THE 4992
 UNION, THE 6189
 UNLUCKY ATTEMPT, THE 4614
 UNLUCKY VISIT, THE . . . 4523
 UNNATURAL CONNECTION, THE 6224
 UNWELCOME CUSTOMER, THE 4605
 UNWILLING BRIDEGROOM, THE, . . . 4780
 UP & DOWN, THE, OR WHEEL OF ADMI—RATION 6214
 UPPER CLAPTON MACARONI, THE 5153
 USURY BRIDLED OR HOPPY KIKKY HALL IN AN UPROAR 5398
 VAMP IN TRIUMPH 5656
 VAUX HALL DEMI-REP, THE 5027
 VELUTI IN SPECULUM 6047
 VENISON & CLARET, OR SR HUMPY HAUNCH BAR^T 5002
 VENUS TURN'D PROCTOR 5189
 *VERLOSTE HOLLANDER, DE, OF DE GEDWONGEN DOG 5732
 VERY DIVINE MACARONI OF WELBECK STREET, A 5070
 VERY WISE ALDERMEN OF GOTHAM SCRATCHING FOR A MAYOR, THE 5235
 VESTRICIAN DISH, A, OR CAPER SAUCE FOR A GOOSE PYE 5907
 VICAR AND MOSES, THE 6130
 VICAR PURIFI'D BY THE SHADOW OF JUNIUS, THE 4879
 VICE TRIUMPHANT OVER VIRTUE OR BRITANNIA HARD RODE 4877
 VICTIM, THE 5822
 VICTORIOUS RETURN OF THE CITY MILITIA, THE . . . 4578
 VICTUALLING COMMITTEE FRAMING A REPORT, THE 6021
 VIEW OF PLYMOUTH, A 5662
 VIEW COLMAN IN THE LAP OF MOTHER SHIPTON . . . 5064
 VIEW IN AMERICA IN 1778, A 5482
 VIEW OF THE COCKPIT, A, WITH THE REPRIMANDED MAGISTRATE IN DISGRACE 5689
 VIEW OF THE DELUGE OF SCOTCH PAPER CURRENCY FOR ENGLISH GOLD, A 4961
 VIEW OF THE GUARD HOUSE AND SIMSBURY-MINES . . . 5853
 VIEW OF THE ORIGIN OF SCOTCH MINISTERS, & MANAGERS, A 4947
 VIEW OF THE PLACE DES VICTORIES AT PARIS 4919
 VIEW ON THE PONT NEUF AT PARIS 4918
 VILLAGE BARBER, THE 5517
 VILLAGE BARBER, L.M., THE 4757
 VILLAGE DOCTOR, THE 5274
 VILLE DE PARIS, THE, SAILING FROM JAMAICA, OR RODNEY TRIUMPHANT 5993
 VIRTUAL REPRESENTATION, 1775 5286
 VIRTUE DISGRAC'D MARCH 1771, VICE TRIUMPHANT MARCH 1771 4850
 VIRTUOUS AND INSPIR'D STATE OF WHIGISM IN BRISTOL, 1781, THE 5832
 VIS-A-VIS BISECTED, THE, OR THE LADIES COOP 5373
 VISIT TO THE CAMP, A (3) 5602, 4765, 5620
 VISIT TO CAMP, A, OR THE ROGUES MARCH 5902
 [VOCAL AND INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC IN A CHURCH] 6356
 VOLUPTUOUS LUXURIOUS SPEND-THRIFT MACARONI FROM HOLLAND IN A BREATHING SWEAT, THE 5114
 VOX POPULI 6054
 VOX POPULI IN PRIVATE. VOX POPULI IN PUBLICK 6207A
 *VREED VAN ANNO 1783, DE 6292
 *WAARE AFBEELDING VAN LORD GEORGE GORDON . . . 5734
 WADDLEING PROCESSION FROM THE STOCK EXCHANGE, A, OR THE BULLS AND BEARS MAKING LONG FACES 6273
 *WANHOOPIGE BRITTEN, DE, EN DE VERNOEKDE AMERICANEN . . . 5724

INDEX OF TITLES

- WAR 6187
 WAR ESTABLISHMENT 6252
 WAR OF POSTS 5984
 WARLEY HEROES, THE, OR THE LIGHT
 INFANTRY ON FULL MARCH 5525
 WARLEY HO! 4761
 WARM BIRTH FOR THE OLD ADMINIS-TRATION, A 5970
 WASHERWOMAN, THE; UP WITH THE JESUIT 6181
 WATKIN LEWES ESQ. PRESENTING THE ADDRESSES . . . TO THE LORD MAYOR, ALDERMAN WILKES & ALDERMAN
 OLIVER IN THE TOWER 4880
 [WEDDING OF THE MARQUIS OF GRANBY] 5358
 WELCH CURATE, THE 3784
 WELCH KNIGHT ON THE LOOK OUT
 FOR A WIFE, A 5264
 WELL A DAY! IS THIS MY SON TOM?
 4536
 WELL-FED CITIZEN GOING TO HIS COUNTRY SEAT AT HORN-SEY, A 5176
 WELL-KNOWN MACARONI MAKING
 LOVE TO THE FAMOUS POLL KEN-NEDY, A 5204
 WEST COUNTRY PUFFING FAMILY, THE 6327
 WESTMINSTER ELECTION, 1780 5699
 WESTMINSTER ELECTORS CHARING THEIR FAVOURITE CANDIDATE, THE 6211
 WESTMINSTER JUST-ASSES A BRAYING,
 THE,—OR—THE DOWNFALL OF THE
 E.O. TABLE 6120
 WESTMINSTER MACARONI, THE (2)
 4654, 4655
 WHALE BONE MACARONI, THE 5045
 WHELPS TAUGHT TO READ BY AN ORATOR FROM THE NORTH 5639
 WHIMSICAL DUET, THE, OR MISS
 C—TL—Y TEACHING HER FAT DANE
 BITCH TO RIVAL MISS Y—G 5202
 WHITEHALL PUMP, THE 5227
 WHITSUNTIDE HOLIDAYS 6346
 WHORE OF BABYLON'S CARAVAN, THE,
 WITH A CARGO OF POPISH BLESSINGS
 5702
 WHORE'S LAST SHIFT, THE 5604
 WHO'S AFRAID 5149
 WHO'S IN FAULT (NOBODY) A VIEW
 OFF USHANT 5570
 *WICKED IN TRIUMPH, THE 5247
 WICKED STATESMAN, OR THE TRAITOR
 TO HIS COUNTRY, AT THE HOUR OF DEATH, THE 4963
 WIFE AT CONFESSION, A . . . 3778
 WIGS 5170
 WINDSOR CASTLE IN A CONSUMPTION, OR THE LITTLE MAN'S MISTAKE
 5897
 WINDSOR. MACARONI, THE 4667
 WINTER 4567
 WISE MEN OF GOTHAM AND THEIR GOOSE, THE p. 216
 WISE AS SERPENTS 5495
 WONDERFUL MOST WONDERFUL D^R
 KATE—HE—FELT—HO . . . , THE 6326
 WONDERFUL PATRIOT, THE, OR M^R
 FOX-AND-GEESE 6208
 WONDERS WONDERS WONDERS & WON-DERS DEDICATED TO THE WONDER-
 FULL WONDERER 6162
 WOOLWICH MACARONI, THE 5034
 WORTHIES 5103
 YANKIE DOODLES INTRENCHMENTS
 NEAR BOSTON 1776 5329
 YOUNG CUB, THE 4810
 YOUNG CUB . . . AT ARTHUR'S IN THE KITCHEN, THE 4943
 YOUNG HEIR AMONG BAD COUNCEL-
 LORS, THE, OR THE LION BETRAY'D
 4859
 YOUNG POLITICIAN, THE 4892
 YOUNG WANTON, THE 4544
 *YORK TOWN 5859
 ZEALOTS FOR, & AGAINST THE TRUE
 RELIGION, THE 5107

INDEX OF SELECTED SUBJECTS

Political events are not indexed; they will be found under the appropriate dates and by the cross-references there given.

- AMERICA 1770: 4839, 4842. 1771: 4864. 1772: 4964.¹ 1774: 5225, 5226, 5227, 5228, 5530, 5231, 5232, 5236, 5238, 5241, 5242, 5244. 1775: 5281, 5282, 5283, 5284, p. 196, p. 197, 5285, 5286, 5287, 5288, 5289, 5290, 5291*, 5292, 5292 A*, 5292 B, 5293, 5294, 5295, 5296, 5296 A*, 5297, 5298. 1776 p. 216, 5328, 5329, 5330, 5331, 5331 A*, 5332, 5332 A*, 5333, 5334, 5335, 5336*, 5337*, 5338, 5339*, 5340, 5342, 5343. 1777: 5397, 5399, 5400, 5401, 5402, 5403, 5404, 5405, 5405 A*, 5406, 5406 A*, 5407*, 5408. 1778: 5469, 5469 A*, 5470, 5472, p. 286*, 5473, 5474, p. 288, 5475, p. 289, pp. 289-90*, 5476, 5477, 5482, 5483, 5485, 5486, 5487, 5490*, 5491*, 5492, 5493, 5494, 5495, 1779: 5540, 5541, 5548, 5549, 5557, 5567, 5568, 5569, 5573, 5574, 5578, 5579, 5580, 5581*, pp. 349-50*, 5603, 5613, 5614. 1780: 5624, 5629, 5631, 5636, 5640, 5641, 5644, 5645, 5647, 5649, 5653, 5659, 5663, 5667, 5675, 5691*, 5699, 5704, 5706, 5707, 5711*, 5715*, 5716*, 5719*, 5721*, 5724*, 5725*, 5726*, 5726 A*, 5726 B*, 5726 C*, 5727*, p. 451*, 5728*, 5729*, 5731*, 5732*, 5733*. 1781: 5827, p. 496*, 5828, 5831, 5832, 5833, 5834, 5837, 5839*, 5850, 5853, 5855, 5856, 5857*, 5858*, 5859*, 1782: 5961, 5973, 5982, 5984, 5985, 5986, 5987, 5988, 5989, 6004, 6008, 6009, 6024, 6029, 6039, 6040, 6047, 6048*, 6049*, 6050, 6051. 1783: 6162, 6168, 6171, 6172, 6173, 6174, 6182, 6184, 6190, 6200,¹ 6202, 6206, 6207, 6207 A, 6210, 6212, 6223, 6229, 6257, 6267, 6274, 6282, 6288, 6291. See PAUL JONES, LAFAYETTE
- ART: Artists, architects, connoisseurs and antiquarians 1771: 4632, 4683, 4685, 4601, 4770. 1772: 4692, 5031, 4701, 4771, 5089, 4582, 4520. 1773: 5157, 5159, 5160, 5166, 5220, 4772. 1774: 2008, 3758. 1775: 5318. 1776: 5367, 4621. 1780: 5757, 5770. 1781: 5897, 5898, 5903, 5912, 5921. 1782: 6102, 6104, 6129. 1783: 6352
- AUCTIONS AND AUCTIONEERS 1771: 4770. 1772: 5001, 5066. 1773: 5171. 1780: 5651 (political). 1781: 5842 (political). 1782: 6101
- AUSTRIA 1771: 4388. 1772: 4957. 1774: 5222, 5229. 1780: 5643, 5711*
- BALLOONS 1783: 6275, 6284, 6287(6), 6288, 6289, 6290, 6333, 6334, 6335
- BILLIARDS 1773: 4667. 1780: 5795, 5803. 1781: 5913
- CAMBRIDGE: University, Colleges, &c. 1771: 6353, 6354, 6355. 1772: 4999, 4723, 4725. 1773: 5187, 5188, 5189, 4728, 4726. 1774: 4727. 1777: 4729. 1778: 5510. 1780: 5804. 1781: 5893
- CARD PLAYING 1773: 4728, 4824. 1777: 5453. 1778: 5515. 1779: 5617. 1781: 5889. 1782: 6098. 1783: 6341. See GAMBLING
- CLERICAL: the church and clergy 1771: 4866. 1772: 4944, 4948, 4951, 4972, 4997, 5003, 5021, 5068, 5070, 5075, 4725, 3789. 1773: 5107, 5125, 5161, 5188, 5189, 5193, 4827, 4611, 4726, 4533. 1774: 5228, 5233, 4618. 1775: 3784, 3760, 3785. 1776: 5343.¹ 1777: 5400, 6356,¹ 5447, 5465. 1778: 5492,¹ 5496, 5520, 4780. 1779:

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF SELECTED SUBJECTS

- 5540, 5553, 4568, 3752. 1780: 5631, 5678, 5799¹, 5800¹, 5804, 3761. 1782: 5958, 5983, 6130, 6153¹, 6154¹, 3753, 3754. 1783: 6209, 6337, 6338, 6340. See BATE, HORNE, LOWTH, MARKHAM, TERRICK
- CLERGY, nonconformist or irregular (including Methodist) 1772: 4709, 4955. 1773: 4609. 1774: 5280. 1776: 4610. 1778: 5493, 5494, 5495, 5496, p. 304, 5517. 1779: 5576. 1780: 5685. See WESLEY, WHITEFIELD
- CLUBS 1770: 4847. 1772: 4698, 5065, 5095. 1773: 4642. 1775: 5285. 1777: 5419. 1778: 5530. 1782: 5972, 6013. See LONDON, places of amusements in
- COACHMEN AND POSTILLIONS 1771: 4633. 1772: 4738, 4753, 4739, 4740, 4742, 4734. 1773: 5138, 5162. 1774: 4747, 4735, 4741. 1775: 5295. 1781: 5929, 5933. See DRIVING, RIDING
- COCK-FIGHTING 1776: 5391. 1777: 5422. See GEORGE ONSLOW
- COFFEE-HOUSES, TAVERNS, AND ALI-HOUSES 1772: 4661, 5073. 1773: 5154, 4529. 1774: 5280. 1776: 4623. 1777: 5433. 1778: 5530, 5531, 4558. 1779: 5597, 5613, 5614. 1780: 5642, 5696, 5697. 1781: 5877, 5922, 5923. 1783: 6245, 3757
- COMMERCE 1775: 5283, 5298. 1778: 5472, p. 286*, 5473. 1779: 5535, 5548 (12), 5557, 5572, 5574, pp. 349-50*. 1780: 5653, 5657, 5717*, 5719*, 5720*, 5721*, 5722*, 5724*, 5726*, 5726 A*, 5726 B*, 5726 C*, 5727*, p. 451*. 1781: 5830, 5842, 5850*. 1783: 6243. See FINANCE
- COSTUME² 1771: 4686, 4595, 4628, 4630, 4784, 4785, 4789. 1772: 5008, 5009, 4653, 4703, 5075, 4817, 4818, 4819, 4820, 4816, 5092, 5093, 4522. 1773: 5121, 5169, 5170, 4806, 4528, 5221. 1774: 4536, 4537, 4786. 1775: 4542. 1776: 5330, 5335, 5370, 5371, 5372, 5373, 5374, 5375, 5376, 5377, 5378, 5379, 5380, 5381, 5382, 5383, 5384, 5385, 5386, 5387, 5388, 4546, 4547, 5393, 5394, 5395, 4629, 5396, 4777. 1777: 5429, 5430, 5432, 5434, 5435, 5436, 5437, 5439, 5440, 5441, 5442, 5443, 5444, 5446, 5448, 5449, 5450, 5451, 5452, 5454, 5456, 5458, 5459, 5460, 5461, 5462, 5464, 4550, 4552, 5466, 5467. 1778: 5513, 5514, 5515, 5516, 5517, 5518, 5527, 5532, 5533. 1779: 5621. 1780: 5793, 5821. 1781: 5931, 5933, 5934, 5935, 3786, 3787. 1782: 6100, 6137. 1783: 6342. See FRANCE AND THE FRENCH (social), MACARONIES (c. 1771-3) passim
- COURTESANS AND THE DEMI-MONDE 1771: 4922, 4923, 4600. 1772: 4954, 4995, 4998, 5018, 5023, 5027, 5058, 5090, 5095, 4519, 4523, 4524, 5097. 1773: 4645, 5177, 5178, 5179, 5180, 5181, 5182, 5183, 5184, 5185, 5186, 5204, 5219, 4525, 4529. 1774: 5234, 5268, 4534, 1775: 5312, 5322. 1776: 4543, 4544, 4545. 1777: 5447, 4553. 1778: 5523, 5524, 4631. 1779: 5537, 5604, 4569. 1780: 5762, 5808, 5809, 5810, 5811, 5812, 5813, 5814, 5822, 5824. 1781: 5930, 5939, 5946, 5947, 5948, 5952. 1782: 6143, 6161. See TÊTES-A-TÊTES passim
- DANCING AND DANCING-MASTERS 1771: 4635, 4639, 4924, 4599. 1772: 5014, 5082, 4755. 1773: 5174. 1776: 5374. 1778: 5510, 5526. 1781: 5884, 5886, 5887, 5903, 5904, 5905, 5906, 5907, 5908, 5909, 5910, 5911, 5918. 1782: 6096. See MASQUERADES
- DENMARK 1772: 4945, 4946, 4950, 4956. 1774: 5222. 1780: 5711*, 5713*, 5714*, 5715*, 5716*, 5719*, 5724*, 5728*, 5730*, 5733*
- DRIVING, CARRIAGES 1771: 4633. 1774: 4735. 1776: 5373, 5375, 5394. 1777: 5416. 1778: 5508, 4732. 1779: 4569. 1780: 5761, 5782. 1781: 5918, 5933, 5934, 5936, 5939, 3786, 3787. 1782:

¹ Date uncertain.

² Direct satires on costume.

INDEX OF SELECTED SUBJECTS

- 6114, 6117, 6143, 6146, 6155.
1783: 6226, 6259, 6346. See
 COACHMEN AND POSTILLIONS
- DUBLIN 1778: 5488. 1779: 5572.
1782: 6003. 1783: 6272. See
 IRELAND
- DUBLIN, Trinity College 1774:
 5277
- DUELS AND DUELLISTS 1772: 5072.
1773: 5205. 1774: 5256. 1775:
 5323. 1777: 5431, 5446. 1779:
 5575. 1780: 5625
- ELECTIONS 1774: 5236, 5272. 1775:
 5288. 1776: 5341, 5389, 5390.
1780: 5697, 5698, 5699, 5700, 5701,
 5708. 1781: 5832, 5833, 5849,
 5852. 1782: 5998. 1783: 6211,
 6215, 6270
- EUROPE, powers of 1772: 4957,
 4958. 1773: 5110. 1774: 5222,
 5229. 1779: 5557. 1780: 5711*
- FINANCIAL: speculation, crises, currency, budgets, national debt
1770: 4842. 1772: 4947, 4949,
 4961, 4968, 4969, 5016. 1773:
 5100, 5105, 5106, 5109, 5124, 5128,
 5158. 1774: 5234, 5243, 4650,
 4534, 3759. 1777: 5401. 1779:
 5535, 5541, 5542, 5543, 5548,
 5571, 5578. 1780: 5632, 5633,
 5637, 5638, 5645, 5651, 5657, 5703,
 5709, 5717*, 5718*, 5719*, 5720*,
 5721*, 5722*, 5724*, 5788, 1781:
 5834, 5835. 1782: 5964, 5965,
 5968, 5969, 5970, 5971, 5974, 5975,
 5977, 5982, 5986, 5988. 1783:
 6243, 6244, 6253, 6257, 6260, 6265,
 6273, 6332. See COMMERCE
- FRANCE (political) 1772: 4957, 4963.
1773: 5110, 5124. 1774: 5222,
 5226, 5229. 1775: 5283, 5285, 5286,
 5289. 1776: 5333. 1777: 5401.
1778: 5472, p. 286*, 5473, p. 288,
 pp. 288-9*, 5477, 5478*, 5484,
 5485, 5486, 5487, 5490*, 5491*.
1779: 5538, 5540, 5541, 5548 (8),
 5549, 5552, 5554, 5555, 5556, 5557,
 5567, 5568, 5571, 5579, 5580,
 5581*, p. 349*. 1780: 5624, 5626,
 5627, 5628, 5629, 5636, 5640, 5642,
 5643, 5644, 5645, 5646, 5647, 5648,
 5649, 5650, 5653, 5658, 5663, 5664,
 5668, 5674, 5677, 5691*, 5695, 5706,
 5710, 5711*, 5712*, 5713*, 5714*,
 5715*, 5716*, 5717*, 5718*, 5719*,
 5720*, 5721*, 5724*, 5725*, 5726*,
 5726 A*, 5726 B*, 5726 C*, 5727*,
 p. 451*, 5728*, 5731*, 5732*.
1781: 5825, 5826, 5827, p. 496*,
 5828, 5831, 5837, 5838, 5839*,
 5842, 5846, 5850, 5859*, 5860,
 5861, 5862. 1782: 5959, p. 559,
 5961, 5986, 5987, 5988, 5989, 5991,
 5992, 5993, 5994, 5997, 6000, 6001,
 6004, 6008, 6009, 6025, 6031, p.
 614*, 6035, 6036, 6037, 6038, 6039,
 6040, 6043, 6051. 1783: 6168, 6172,
 6174, 6190, 6202, 6210, 6212, 6229,
 6239, 6267, 6268, 6274, 6288,
 6292.* See LA MOTTE, NECKER
- FRANCE AND THE FRENCH (social)
1771: 4668, 4670, 4673, 4913,
 4677, 4782, 4679, 4681, 4916, 4918,
 4919, 4764, 4633, 4767, 4924,
 4784, 4932, 4933. 1772: 5056,
 5059, 5067, 4830, 4787, 5081, 4742,
 4753, 4516, 4573, 5096. 1773:
 4749. 1774: 4735, 4741, 4783.
1776: 4623. 1777: 5458, 5463.
1778: 4732. 1779: 5611, 5612,
 4737.¹ 1780: 5627, 5674, 5695,
 5772, 5775, 5790. 1781: 5862,
 5919. 1782: 5959, 4185. 1783:
 6284, 3757
- GAMBLING AND GAMBLERS 1772:
 4943, 4992, 4697, 5016, 4829, 4828.
1773: 4642, 4645, 4836. 1774:
 5223, 4651. 1777: 5422, 5423,
 5424. 1779: 5548 (7), 5610. 1781:
 5911, 5928. 1782: 5964, 5972,
 5983, 5996, 5997, 6012, 6013, 6118,
 6119, 6120. 1783: 6191, 6254. See
 HORSE-RACING
- GIBRALTAR 1780: 5712*, 5724*.
1781: p. 496*¹, 5850. 1782: 5961,
 5988, 6004, 6009, 6025, 6034*,
 p. 614*, 6035, 6036, 6037, 6038,
 6043, 6051. 1783: 6163, 6210,
 6229, 6267

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF SELECTED SUBJECTS

- HOLLAND, see UNITED PROVINCES
- HORSE-RACING AND THE TURF 1771: 4636. 1772: 5025. 1773: 4643. 1774: 4720. 1777: 5421, 4717, 4719, 4730¹, 4731¹. 1779: 5601, 5610
- HUNTING 1772: 5050, 3769, 3770. 1777: 5455. 1778: 4561. 1780: 5816
- HUNTING, Stag, Royal or Windsor Hunt (political) 1779: 5574. 1780: 5675, 5676. 1781: 5850. 1782: 5961, 5964, 5988
- INDIA AND THE EAST INDIA COMPANY 1772: 4960, 4968, 5017. 1773: 5100, 5101, 5102, 5106, 5109, 5111, 5124. 1776: 5341. 1780: 5655. 1783: 6169, 6257, 6271, 6275, 6276, 6277, 6278, 6279, 6281, 6283, 6285, 6286, 6287 (4), 6289, 6290, 6291. See NABOBS
- IRELAND AND THE IRISH 1771: 4877. 1772: 4936, 4942, 4960. 1773: 5126, 5133, 5134, 5152, 4531. 1774: 5225, 5277. 1776: 5356. 1778: 5488. 1779: 5540, 5542, 5543, 5548 (11), 5572, 5573, 5605, 1780: 5645, 5653, 5659, 5667. 1781: 5945. 1782: 6002, 6003, 6051. 1783: 6272, 6291
- JACOBITISM, allegations of, 1770: 4841. 1771: 4859. 1774: 5285. 1779: 5539. 1780: 5667
- JERSEY 1779: 5548 (8). 1781: 5828, 5850
- JEWS 1771: 4926.¹ 1772: 5012, 4771, 5077. 1773: 4525. 1777: 5398, 5423, 5468. 1779: 5548 (1). 1780: 5633, 5807.¹ 1781: 5957. 1782: 5967. 1783: 6241 A, 6273, 6322
- LEGAL: lawyers and courts of law 1770: 4845. 1771: 4888, 4682, 4927. 1772: 4984, 4996, 5076, 5092. 1773: 5165, 4788. 1774: 5267. 1775: 3760. 1776: 5362, 5363. 1780: 3761. 1781: 5899, 5900. 1782: 5980, 6041, 6105, 6122, 6123, 6124, 6128. For Bow Street see JOHN FIELDING, SAMPSON WRIGHT, ADDINGTON. Cf. also 5197, 5273
- LITERARY: books, authors, &c. 1771: 4879. 1772: 5067, 5071. 1773: 5122, 5157. 1774: 5233, 5246*, 5247*. c. 1777: 6357. 1779: 5598. 1782: 6103. 1783: 6315, 6328. See NEWSPAPERS, THEATRICAL, S. JOHNSON
- LONDON, citizens of ('cits') 1772: 4966, 5000, 4640, 4814, 4602, 4713, 4714, 4715, 4722, 4519, 4578. 1773: 5176, 5196. 1776: 5372. 1777: 5433, 5438, 5450, 5463. 1778: 5528, 5530. 1779: 5613, 5615, 5616, 5617, 4565. 1780: 5782, 5783, 5784, 5785, 5786. 1781: 5851, 5852, 5923, 5955. 1782: 6135, 6136, 6138, 6143, 6146. 1783: 6314, 6339. See KENNETT and PLUMBE.
- LONDON, corporation of 1770: 4843. 1771: 4387, 4849, 4850, 4853, 4854, 4864, 4874, 4880, 4883, 4885, 4886, 4887. 1772: 4937, 4938, 4939, 4953, 4966, 4967, 5106. 1773: 5129, 5130, 5131, 5132. 1774: 5234, 5235, 5237, 5239, 5245. 1775: 5281. 1776: 5327. 1777: 5398, 5438. 1781: 5849, 5851, 5852. 1783: 6285
- LONDON, places of amusement, &c. Bagnigge Wells 1772: 5090. 1776: 4545. 1781: 5955
- Brooks's 1782: 5972, 6013¹
- Carlisle House 1771: 4928, 4929, 4789. 1772: 5066. 1773: 5194. See MRS. CORNELYS
- Coterie, the 1770: 4847. 1772: 5065, 5095. 1777: 5425
- Hyde Park 1772: 4612. 1781: 5925, 5926, 5927
- Kensington Gardens 1772: 5083. 1775: 5313
- Pantheon 1772: 4998, 5077, 5079, 5088, 5091, 5092, 5093, 5094, 5095, 4573. 1773: 5116, 5193, 5200, 5221. 1774: 5278. 1776: 5373, 5395. 1778: 5533. 1780: 5769. 1781: 5829

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF SELECTED SUBJECTS

- Pantheon (Spa Fields) 1772: 5097
- Ranelagh 1772: 4993, 4647. 1776: 5379
- Robin Hood Society 1771: 4860, 1783: 6331
- Tattersall's 1781: 5939. 1782: 5988
- Vauxhall 1772: 5027: 1773: 5198, 5206
- White Conduit House 1779: 4565
- LOTTERIES 1774: 5242, 5243, 5275. 1776: 5360. 1780: 5788, 5789
- MASQUERADES and MASQUERADE DRESS 1771: 4635, 4928. 1772: 5010, 5088, 5094. 1773: 5193, 5221. 1775: 5314, 5315. 1776: 5379. 1781: 5829
- MEDICAL: medicine, doctors, apothecaries, &c. 1771: 4670, 4833, 4932. 1772: 4979, 5022, 5047, 5069, 4757. 1773: 5115, 5119, 5164, 5168, 5214, 5215, 5216. 1774: 5274, 5275, 5279, 3759. 1775: 5318, 5321, 3760. 1776: 5362, 5368. 1777: 5457, 5463. 1779: 5603, 5614. 1780: 5758¹, 5813, 3761. 1782: 6127, 6131, 6142. 1783: 6322, 3798, 6347, 6350, 3797. See QUACKS
- MILITARY: the army, militia and soldiers 1770: 4839. 1771: 4684, 4711, 4791. 1772: 4986, 4987, 4704, 5017, 5034, 5041, 4659, 5052, 5061, 4813, 4604, 4608, 3789, 4578. 1773: 5121, 5151, 4646, 4607, 5213, 4759. 1775: 5287, 5291. 5295, 5316. 1776: 5329, 5330, 5335, 5343¹, 5366. 1777: 5402, 5403, 5438. 1778: 5470, 5471, 5482, 5483, 5492, 5511, 5523, 5525, 4556, 4562, 1779: 5548 (2 and 3), 5551, 5552, 5556, 5596, 5600, 5601, 5602, 4760, 4765, 5620, 3752. 1780: 5646, 5662, 5682, 5683, 5687, 5706, 5774, 5776, 5779, 5783, 5784, 5785, 5786, 5787, 5794, 5796, 4766. 1781: 5862, 5902, 5924, 5950, 5953. 1782: 5959, p. 559, 5973, 6041, 6047, 6048*, 6116, 6134, 6139, 4761, 6144, 6156, 6157, 6158. 1783: 6170, 6316, 6337¹, 6338¹, 6346. See names of soldiers in Index of Persons
- MUSICAL: musicians and music 1771: 4916, 4925, 4929. 1772: 5014, 5015, 5082. 1773: 5163, 5202, 4611, 5217, 4533. 1774: 5261, 5269. 1776: 5342¹, 5353, 5361. 1777: 4778, 6356. 1779: 5540. 1780: 5758, 5759, 5764, 5769, 5771. 1781: 5887, 5892, 5894, 5908, 5909, 5910, 5930. 1782: 6092, 6104, 6125. See DANCING
- NABOBS 1772: 4941, 5017. 1773: 5101, 5102, 5111, 5144, 5174. 1776: 5341, 5344, 5351, 5352. 1783: 6169. See INDIA
- NAVAL: sailors and the sea 1771: 4897. 1772: 5083, 5087. 1773: 5106. 1774: 5233, 5263, 4613. 1775: 5313. 1777: 4553, 5402. 1778: 5484, 5486, 4559. 1779: 5536, 5537, 5538, 5548 (4 and 5), 5554, 5559, 5566, 5570, 5609. 1780: 5623, 5626, 5628, 5648, 5652, 5658, 5673, 5674, 5677, 5695, 5705, 5710, 5733*, 5797, 5798. 1781: 5825, 5828, 5848, 5861, 5942, 5951, 5954. 1782: 5960, 5991, 5992, 5993, 5994, 5996, 5997, 5998, 5999, 6000, 6001, 6031, 6035, 6036, 6037, 6040, 6043, 6048*, 6049*, 6159, 6161. 1783: 6258, 6262, 6268, 6274, 6346. See GIBRALTAR. See LORD SANDWICH and names of sailors in Index of Persons
- NEWSPAPERS and THE PRESS 1771: 4426, 4860, 4861, 4879. 1772: 4937, 5073, 5074, 5086. 1773: 5200. 1774: 5224. 1779: 5550, 5613. 1780: 5656, 5666, 5676, 5792
- OXFORD, University of 1772: 4990, 4705. 1780: 5801. 1782: 6099
- PAPACY, see CLEMENT XIV, PIUS VI, ROMAN CATHOLICISM
- PARIS, persons and places in 1771: 4668, 4670, 4782, 4679, 4763, 4918,

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF SELECTED SUBJECTS

- 4919, 4924, 4931, 4785, 4932, 4933. 1772: 4516, 4669. 1774: 4650, 4783. 1778: 5477. 1782: 4185
- PARLIAMENT 1771: 4850, 4855, 4860, 4869, 4894. 1772: 4944, 4970. 1774: 5224, 4893, 5236, 5238, 5242. 1775: 5281. 1777: 5422. c. 1778: 5478*. 1779: 5548 (3). 1783: 6187, 6188, 6192, 6243. See ELECTIONS, REFORM
- PARLIAMENT (Irish) 1783: 6272
- POLAND 1772: 4957, 4958*. 1774: 5222, 5229
- PORTUGAL 1779: 5557. 1780: 5653, 5711*, 5719*, 5724*
- PRUSSIA 1772: 4957, 4958*. 1774: 5222, 5229. 1780: 5630, 5711*
- QUACKS AND CHARLATANS 1773: 5168. 1774: 5279. 1780: 5766, 5806.¹ 1783: 6247, 6260, 6284, 6322, 6323, 6324, 6325, 6326, 6327
- REFORM, parliamentary and economical 1780: 5633, 5638, 5640, 5644, 5645, 5649, 5650, 5651, 5657, 5659, 5665, 5675, 5693. 1781: 5829. 1782: 5958, 5976, 5979, 5987, 5990. 1783: 6222, 6246, 6252, 6269
- RIDING AND HORSEMANSHIP 1772: 4637, 4612, 4723, 4725, 4734, 5087. 1773: 5121. 1774: 5262, 5266, 4735. 1778: 5511. 1779: 5601, 4736, 4737,¹ 4760. 1780: 5802, 5804. 1781: 5901, 5914, 5915, 5916, 5917, 5925, 5926, 5927, 5931, 5933. 1782: 6113, 6142, 6143, 6152, 6153, 6154, 6158, 6159. 1783: 6339, 6340. See DRIVING, COACHMEN AND POSTILLIONS, HUNTING
- ROMAN CATHOLICISM 1770: 4841. 1774: 5228, 3779, 3777. 1775: 5286, 3783, 3775. 1776: 5343. 1777: 3781, 3782. 1778: 5489, 5489 A, 4626. 1779: 5534, 5539, 5540, 5548 (9 and 10), 5567. 1780: 5633, 5643, 5649, 5667, 5669, 5670, 5671, 5672, 5678, 5680, 5681¹, 5702, 5712*, 5713*, 5722*, 5723, 5725*. 7528*. 1781: 5841. 1782: 6026, 6027. 1783: 6174, 6209, 6284. See CLEMENT XIV, GORDON, Lord George, PIUS VI
- ROME 1770: 4841. 1780: 5669, 5670
- RUSSIA 1772: 4957, 4958*. 1774: 5222, 5229. 1779: 5557, p. 350*. 1780: 5664, 5711*, 5713*, 5714*, 5715*, 5716*, 5718*, 5719*, 5724*, 5728*, 5730*, 5732*, 5733*. 1782: 5989. 1783: 6229
- SCIENCE AND NATURAL HISTORY 1772: 4695, 4696, 5046. 1773: 5156, 5168. 1777: 5426. See BALLOONS
- SCOTLAND AND THE SCOTS 1771: 4896. 1772: 4947, 4734. 1774: 5225, 5244. 1776: 5374. 1779: 5534, 5539, 5540, 5548 (9), 5579. 1780: 5643, 5672. 1781: 5940, 3799, 5941, 5944. 1782: 6005, 6016, 6017. For Scottish political influence see BUTE
- SHOOTING 1772: 4663, 5054, 5060. 1776: 4624. 1778: 4555, 5532, 4560. 1780: 5817. 1782: 6136
- SHOPS AND STALLS 1772: 4937, 5028, 4701, 4787, 4605, 4756, 4775. 1773: 5212, 4527, 4590, 5220. 1774: 3758, 4619. 1775: 5318. 1777: 5458. 1779: 5535. 1780: 5765, 5777, 5786, 5793. 1781: 5898, 5899. 1782: 6114, 6160. 1783: 6217, 6317, 6352
- SKATING 1773: 5123. 1780: 5818
- SPAIN 1771: 4423, 4849, 4417, 4856, 4857. 1772: 4934, 4935, 4940, 4957. 1773: 5110, 5124. 1774: 5222, 5226. 1775: 5283, 5285, 5289. 1776: 5333. 1778: 5472, p. 286*, 5473. 1779: 5541, 5548 (1), 5554, 5556¹, 5557, 5567, 5568, 5571, 5580¹, 5581*. 1780: 5623, 5624, 5628, 5629, 5636, 5640, 5642, 5643, 5644, 5645, 5646, 5647, 5648, 5649, 5652, 5653, 5658, 5663, 5664, 5668, 5677, 5710, 5711*, 5712*, 5713*, 5714*, 5715*, 5717*, 5719*, 5720*, 5721*, 5724*, 5725*, 5726*, 5726 A*, 5726 B*, 5726 C*, 5727*, 5728*, 5731*, 5732*. 1781: 5826,

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF SELECTED SUBJECTS

- 5827, p. 496*, 5828, 5831, 5837, 5839*, 5842, 5850, 5854, 5859*, 5861. 1782: 5961, 5987, 5988, 5989, 6000, 6004, 6008, 6009, 6025, p. 614*, 6035, 6036, 6037, 6038, 6040, 6043, 6051. 1783: 6168, 6172, 6174, 6202, 6210, 6212, 6229, 6239, 6267, 6268, 6274, 6288. See GIBRALTAR
- SPORT, see COCK-FIGHTING, DRIVING, HORSE-RACING AND THE TURF, HUNTING, RIDING, SHOOTING, SKATING
- SPORTSWOMEN
 cricket 1777: 4555
 driving 1776: 5375. 1778: 4562. 1779: 4569. 1781: 5936, 5939. 1782: 6114, 6155 hunting 1778: 4561. 1780: 5816
 rowing 1780: 5819
 shooting 1777: 4555. 1780: 5817
 skating 1780: 5818
- STOCK EXCHANGE 1771: 4871, 4881. 1781: 5834, 5835. 1783: 6273
- SWEDEN 1780: 5711*, 5713*, 5714*, 5715*, 5716*, 5719*, 5724*, 5728*, 5730*, 5733*
- TAVERNS, see COFFEE-HOUSES
- THEATRICAL: the stage, playwrights, actors 1770: 4846. 1772: 5057, 4699, 5063, 5064, 5071. 1773: 5145, 5175, 5201, 5202, 5203. 1776: 5346, 5347, 5350, 5354, 5361, 5363, 5364, 5369. 1777: 5411, 6357.¹ 1779: 5550, 5622. 1780: 5764, 5767. 1781: 5903, 5904, 5905, 5906, 5907, 5910, 6359.¹ 1782: 5974, 6095, 6126. See Index of Persons
- TURF, the, see HORSE-RACING
- TURKEY 1772: 4957. 1774: 5222, 5229. 1780: 5711*
- UNITED PROVINCES 1774: 5222. 1776: 5333. 1778: 5472, p. 286*, 5473, 5490*. 1779: 5541, 5557, 5568, 5571, 5579, p. 350*. 1780: 5624, 5628, 5636, 5645, 5653, 5654, 5663, 5664, 5667, 5668, 5710, 5711*, 5712*, 5713*, 5714*, 5715*, 5716*, 5717*, 5718*, 5719*, 5720*, 5721*, 5722*, 5723, 5724*, 5725*, 5726*, 5726 A*, 5726 B*. 5626 C*, 5727*, 5728*, 5729*, 5730*, 5731*, 5732*, 5733*, 5734*. 1781: 5825, p. 494*, 5826, 5827, p. 496*, 5828, 5830, 5831, 5837, 5839*, 5842, 5845, 5848, 5850, 5859*. 1782: 5961, 5986, 5987, 5988, 5989, 6000, 6004, 6008, 6009, 6014, 6025, 6038, 6040, 6043, 6048*, 6051. 1783: 6168, 6172, 6174, 6202, 6210, 6212, 6229, 6267, 6268, 6274, 6288, 6292*
- UNIVERSITIES 1773: 4726, 4728. 1774: 4727. See CAMBRIDGE, DUBLIN, OXFORD
- USURY 1771: 4926. 1772: 5012. 1773: 5187. 1777: 5398, 5414, 5423
- WALES AND THE WELSH 1771: 4880. 1772: 5035. 1775: 3784. 1780: 5777.¹ 1781: 5943
- WEST INDIES 1779: 5540, 5557, 5573, 5581*. 1780: 5719*. 1781: 5837, 5838, 5839, 5842, 5850, 5923. 1782: p. 559, 5961, 5986, 5988, 5991, 5993, 5994, 6048*, 6051
- WOMEN, see CAMPS, COSTUME, COURTESANS, LONDON (places of amusement in), SPORTSWOMEN

¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF ARTISTS

No distinction is made between draughtsman and engraver. Doubtful and conjectural attributions are included.

- A., I. or J. 1772: 5060
 A——O. H. 1781: 5934
 ADAMS, Francis Edward¹ 1774: 4783
 ASTLE, Daniel 1776: 5366
 AUSTIN, William² (1721–1820) 1773: 5112, 5113, 5114, 5115, 5116, 5117, 5118, 5119, 5120, 5121, 5122, 5123. 1778: 5528. 1780: 5772, 5773, 5774, 5775, 5776, 5777³
- B., E. 5793³
 B., Eliz. 1772: 5009. See GULSTON, Elizabeth
 B., I. or J. See BOYNE
 B., S. 1782: 6020, 6044. See GILLRAY
 B., S. 1783: 6262, 6319
 BALDREY, Joshua Kirby (1754–1828) 1780: 5673. 1781: 5878, 5918. 1783: 3798, 6347
 BAMFYLDE, Coplestone Warre (d. 1791) 1776: 5385, 5386, 5387, 5388, 5389, 5390
 BANNERMAN, Alexander (b. c. 1730, d. after 1780) 1771: 4600
 BARROW, J.⁴ See index of publishers. No. 6278 (1783) is by the same artist
 BARTOLOZZI, Francesco (1727–1815) 1771: 4870, 4871, 4872, 4873. 1780: 5769. 1781: 5905, 5906, 5910, 3799. 1782: 5983, 6005
 BATES, L. 6356,³ 6357³
 BLAND 1771: 4864
 BONNOR, T. (worked c. 1763–1807) 1772: 4941
 BOYNE, John¹ (1750–1810) 1783: 6184, 6203, 6206, 6221, 6231, 6242, 6243, 6281, 6285, 6323
 BRAN, R. 1780: 5694. 1782: 6134
 BRANDOIN, Michel-Vincent (Charles) (1733–90) 1771: 4922, 4601, 4923, 4924, 4925, 4931, 4932, 4933. 1772: 5081, 4603, 5082, 5089, 5091
 BRETHERTON, Charles¹ (1760–July 1783) 1772: 4739, 4740, 4756, 4722, 5087. 1780: 5759.³ 1781: 5879, 5880, 5881, 5882, 5883, 5884, 5885, 5886, 5887, 5888, 5889. 1782: 5960, 6090, 6091, 6092, 6093. 1783: 6317³
 BRETHERTON, James¹ (b. c. 1750) 1772: 4649, 5083, 4757, 4738, 4753, 4669, 4712, 4713, 4725, 4723, 4755, 4714, 5084, 5085, 5086. 1773: 5213, 5214, 5215, 5216, 5217, 5218, 4758, 4759, 4728, 4726, 4716, 4721, 4748, 4749, 4762. 1774: 5279, 4727, 4747, 4735, 4741, 4720. 1777: 4719, 4717, 4730, 4731, 4729. 1778: 5510, 4732. 1779: 4736, 4737.³ 4760. 1780: 5802. 1781: 5913, 5925, 5926, 5927. 1782: 6094, 6139, 6140, 4761, 4185, 6142. 1783: 6339, 6340, 6345
 BROOKSHAW, Richard (c. 1736–1800) 1779: 5561
 BUNBURY, Henry William (1750–1811) 1771: 4668, 4670, 4673, 4913, 4674, 4675, 4677, 4782, 4679, 4680, 4681, 4918, 4919, 4764, 4633, 4920, 4921,³ 4767. 1772: 4648, 5056, 5083, 4757, 4738, 4753, 4669, 4712, 4713, 4725, 4723, 4755, 4714, 5084, 5085, 5086, 4715, 4739, 4740, 4756, 4722, 4742, 4734, 4752, 5087. 1773: 5213, 5214, 5215, 5216, 5217, 5218, 4758, 4759, 4728, 4726, 4716, 4721, 4748, 4749, 4762. 1774: 5279, 4727,

¹ See Index of Publishers.

² See Index of Persons.

³ Date uncertain.

⁴ John Barrow, jeweller, b. 1758, drew and scraped a self-portrait to illustrate Poems, 1813. (B. M. L. 993 b. 3.) The rambling account he gives of his life makes his identity with J. Barrow unlikely.

4747, 4735, 4741, 4720. 1775: 5313. 1777: 4719, 4717, 4730,¹ 4731,¹ 4729. 1778: 5511, 4732. 1779: 4736, 4737,¹ 4760, 4765, 5620.¹ 1780: 4766, 5802, 5803, 5804, 5805,¹ 5806.¹ 1781: 5878, 5901, 5913, 5914, 5915, 5916, 5917, 5918, 5919, 5920, 5921, 5922, 5923, 5924, 5925, 5926, 5927. 1782: 6139, 6140, 4761, 6141, 4185, 6142, 6143, 6144, 6145, 6146. 1783: 6193, 6131, 6339, 6340, 6341, 6342, 6343, 6344

BURNET (? political pseudonym), see K. B.

CALDWALL, James (1739-1819) 1771: 4923, 4925, 4595, 4599, 4600, 4932. 1772: 4603, 4602, 5082, 4612, 4605. 1773: 4607. 1774: 4616

CAMPBELL, Alexander (fictitious) 1775: 5290, 5291. c. 1776: 5338

CAREY, P. or W. P. 1780: 5685, 5707. 1783: 6179, 6291

COCHIN, Charles Nicolas, jun. (1715-90) 1777: 5407

COLE, I. or James 1774: 5280

COLLET, John (c. 1725-80) 1771: 4606, 4595, 4599, 4600, 4433. 1772: 4608, 4612, 4605. 1773: 4609, 4607, 4611. 1774: 4613, 4614, 4615, 4616. 1778: 4555, 4556, 4558, 4559, 4560, 4561, 4562, 4563. 1779: 5566, 5621, 4564, 4565, 4566, 4567, 4569, 5622, 3752. 1780: 5816, 5817, 5818, 5819, 3761, 5822. 1781: 5946, 5947, 3786, 3787. 1782: 6148, 6149, 6150, 6151

COLLEY, Thomas² 1780: 5627, 5628, 5649, 5674, 5706, 5786. 1781: 5842, 5848, 5862,¹ 5933. 1782: 5967, 5968, 5971, 5984, 5989, 5991, 5993, 5994, 6000, 6008, 6035, 6036, 6037, 6038, 6040, 6043, 6051, 6119, 6130. 1783: 6163, 6170, 6172, 6173

COLLEY or an imitator of his manner, perhaps Gillray 1782: 6117. 1783: 6166, 6228, 6230, 6233, 6236, 6237, 6244, 6252. Cf. 6249

'CORBUTT, C.' (?R. Purcell, c. 1736, supposed d. c. 1766) 1775: 5292, 5292 A, 5292 B, 5293, 5294, 5296. 1776: 5331, 5331 A, 5332, 5336. 1777: 5405, 5405 A, 5406, 5406 A. 1778: 5469, 5469 A, p. 286. 1782: 6034

COSWAY, Richard (1742-1821) 1780: 5770

COURTENAY, William, 2nd Viscount (1742-88) 1782: 6100¹

CRAVEN, Elizabeth (Berkeley), Baroness (Margravine of Anspach from 1791) (1750-1828) 1775: 5325

CROSLAND, George 1772: 5070

DANCE, Nathaniel (1735-1811) 1781: 5905, 5906, 5910

DARLY, Mathina (?Mary) 1777: 5441

DARLY, Matthew³ 1771: 4919, 4628. 1772: 5011, 5056, 5063, 5064. 1774: 5264, 5270. 1776: 5370, 5371, 5373. 1777: 5436, 5437, 5439, 5440, 5442, 5444, 5445, 5446, 5447, 5448, 5449. 1778: 5473, 5482, 5483

DAWE, Philip² (c. 1750-85) 1772: 4583, 5096. 1773: 4584, 5221, 4772. 1774: 5241, 5284, p. 196, p. 197. 1775: 4542. 1776: 5393, 5394, 5395, 4621, 5396. 1777: 5466, 5467. 1778: 5533

DE FERRARS of Chartley, George Townshend, Baron (b. 1753, cr. Earl of Leicester 1784, succ. 1807 as 2nd Marq. Townshend, d. 1811) 1780: 5763, 5763 A

DE LOUTHERBOURG, Philippe-Jacques (1740-1812) 1776: 5361. 1780: 5769

DENT, William. 1783: 6244, 6246, 6249, 6255, 6257, 6260, 6289, 6314, 6315

DICKINSON, William (1746-1821)⁴

¹ Date uncertain.

³ See Index of persons, Index of publishers. He probably engraved the greater number of the prints which he published.

⁴ See Index of Publishers; probably the engraver as well as publisher of these prints.

INDEX OF ARTISTS

- 1779: 4765. 1780: 4766, 5803, 5804. 1781: 5914, 5915, 5916, 5917, 5921, 5922, 5923, 5924. 1782: 6141, 6143
- DIGHTON, Robert (c. 1752-1814) 1772: 4520. 1774: 5237. 1778: 5530. 1779: 5597. 1780: 5778, 5783, 5784, 5795,¹ 5796,¹ 5799.¹ 1781: 5900, 5939, 5957. 1782: 6136, 6153,¹ 6154.¹ 1783: 6348, 6351, 6352, 3757
- DIXON, John (b. c. 1720-30, d. 1804) 1774: 5225, 5230
- DUTSMAN, P. 1781: p. 494
- E., B. 5793¹
- EARLOM, Richard (c. 1742-1822) 1772: 5089, 5091, 4520
- G., T. P. 1781: 5835
- GILLRAY, James (c. 1757-1815) 1775: 5326. 1777: 5465. 1778: 5489, 5523, 5524. 1779: 5553, 5603, 5604, 5605, 5606, 5607, 5608, 5609, 5610, 5611, 5612, 5614, 5616. 1780: 5623, 5624, 5625, 5634, 5635, 5646, 5667, 5678, 5679, 5695, 5748, 5749, 5750, 5750 A, 5751, 5751 A, 5752, 5779, 5790. 1781: 5837, 5845, 5846, 5876, 5877, 5911, 5912, 5938. 1782: 5964, 5966, 5970, 5972, 5973, 5978, 5987, 5990, 5992, 5996, 5997, 6001, 6003, 6006, 6007, 6012, 6013, 6015, 6018, 6019, 6020, 6021, 6022, 6025, 6026, 6027, 6031, 6032, 6033, 6041, 6044, 6095, 6096, 6097, 6098, 6103, 6104, 6108, 6109, 6110, 6112, 6115, 6116, 6120, 6121, 6123, 6131, 6132, 6133. 1783: 6169, 6176, 6178, 6187, 6188, 6194, 6201, 6204, 6205, 6209, 6210, 6213, 6219, 6220, 6225, 6227, 6311, 6239, 6250, 6272, 6328. See under COLLEY and E. T. (Topham)
- GODFREY, J. B. 1771: 4931
- GOLDAR, John (1729-95) 1771: 4789. 1772: 4604. 1773: 4609, 4611. 1774: 4613, 4614, 4615. 1782: 6148, 6149, 6150, 6151
- GRANT, A. 1781: 5929. 1782: 6133
- GREEN, James 1779: 5576²
- GRIGNON, Charles (1716-1810) 1771: 4895, 4896, 4897, 4898, 4899, 4900, 4901, 4902, 4922, 4601, 4924, 4606, 4933. 1772: 5088
- GRIMM, Samuel Hieronymus (1734-1806) 1771: 4857, 4784, 4785, 1772: 4604, 4602. 1773: 4533. 1774: 4536, 4537, 4786
- GROSE, Francis³ (c. 1731-91) 5757¹
- GULSTON, Elizabeth Bridgetta née Stepney (d. 1780) 1772: 5009. 1780: 5807¹
- GUTTENBERG, Carl (1744-90) 1778: 5490. 1779: 5565
- H., J.⁴ 1777: 5452, 5453, 5455, 4778
- H., J.⁴ 1781: 5893
- H., J.⁴ 1783: 6195
- H., T. 1773: 5190. 1779: 5598
- HALL, C. (?Charles Hall, c. 1720-83) 1781: 5840
- HAMILTON (?John, 1765-86) 1780: 5686
- 'HANNIBAL SCRATCH' (?John Nixon) 1783: 6284
- HASSEL, William 1776: 5386, 5387, 5388, 5389, 5390
- HAYS, Captain 1783: 6317
- HIXON, J.⁵ 1782: 5998, 5999, 6113, 6122
- HOLMAN 1771: 4864
- HONE, Nathaniel (1718-84) 1772: 4474
- HOOKE 1783: 6271 A. Cf. 6276 A
- HUMPHREY, G.⁶ 5756¹
- HUMPHREY, William⁶ (c. 1740-1810) 1775: 5295. 1777: 5454, 5456, 5457, 5465. 1778: 4779, 5523. 1781: 5912
- 'HYDER, E.' 1782: 6044. See GILLRAY
- 'HYDER, H.' 1782: 6033 See GILLRAY
- IBB., Hen. 1777: 5451
- IRELAND, Samuel (d. 1800) 6358¹
- J., H. 1778: 5514, 5517, 5521
- JOHNSTON, John 1782: 6137

¹ Date uncertain.

³ See Index of Persons.

⁴ There is nothing to suggest that these initials denote the same person.

⁵ See J. NIXON and 'HANNIBAL SCRATCH'.

² Reissue of pl. published 1754.

⁶ See Index of Publishers.

INDEX OF ARTISTS

- JONES, M. 1782: 6019. See GILLRAY
 JUNE, John (worked c. 1746-70)
 1774: 5237
- K., B. or 'Burnet' 1782: 5958, 5975,
 6045. 1783: 6181
 K., M. 1772: 5012
- KENT, J. 1781: 5845, 5846. 1782:
 6131, 6132. See GILLRAY
- KNIGHT, Charles (1743—c. 1826)
 1782: 6099
- L., J. (? J. Lockington) 1777: 5458
 LAURIE, Robert¹ (c. 1755-1836)
 1778: 5530. 1779: 5597
- LIVESAY, Richard (d. 1823) 1782:
 6129
- LODGE, John (d. 1796) 1771: 4851,
 4856. 1774: 5229. 1783: 6334
- M., M. 1778: 5515
 M., M. 1780: 5695. See GILLRAY
- MACNALLY, Leonard (1752-1820)
 1779: 5550
- MANSERGH, R. St. George 1772:
 4997, 4640, 4699. 1773: 5173,
 4643, 5176. 1776: 5372. 1778:
 5482
- MARTIN, Elias (1739-1818) 1772:
 4787. 1778: 5529
- MARTIN, Johann Friedrich (1755-1816) 1778: 5529
- MINSHULL, Captain 1772: 4781
- MORELAND, M., jun. (sic) 1779:
 5618
- MORSE, Capt. J. (Exhibited portraits at R.A. 1779-1804) 1781: 5851
- MORTIMER, John Hamilton (1741-
 79) 1776: 5359, 5362. c. 1777:
 6356, 6357, 6358. 1778: 5523.
 1780: 5780, 5781
- N.L.G.D.L.C.A.D.L. 1780: 5691
- NEWENHAM, Sir Edward (1732-1814) 1771: 4926
- NIXON, John (d. 1818) 1779: 5611,²
 5616,² 5617. 1780: 5782, 5794.³
 1781: 5826, 5852, 5931, 5932.
- 1782: 6135, 6152. See HIXON
 and 'HANNIBAL SCRATCH'
- NOTTÉ, Claude-Jacques 1779: 5563,
 5564, 5565
- O'BRIEN 1781: 5829
- OKEY, Samuel (worked in London
 1765-70, in Newport, U.S.A., 1773-80) 1771: 4433
- O'NEIL 1781: 5844
- ORDE, Thomas (1746-1807, afterwards Orde-Powlett, cr. Baron
 Bolton 1797) 1771: 4833. 1772:
 4979, 5071. 1778: 5510
- PASTORINI, Benedict (c. 1746-1839)
 1781: 5905, 5906
- PELHAM, Henry (1749-1806) 1770:
 4839
- PENNY, Edward (1741-91) 1782:
 3798, 6347
- PETHER, Thomas¹ 1783: 6219
- PHILIPS, J. 1779: 5579
- POLLARD, James (worked c. 1782)
 1780: 5704. 1782: 6016
- PORTER, I. or J. 1783: 6215, 6222
- PUGH, Herbert (worked 1758-88)
 1771: 4789
- PURCELL, Richard, see CORBUTT
- R., H. or N. 1777: 5433
- READ, I. or J. 1774: 5271
- REVERE, Paul, see under 4839, 4934,
 5226, 5228, 5472
- 'RICHARD SNEER' (?R. B. Sheridan)
 1776: 5376. 1777: 5430, 5435.
See s., R.
- ROBERTS, H. 1781: 5844
- ROBERTS, John 1782: 6016
- ROBERTS, T. 1774: 5271
- ROWLANDSON, Thomas¹ (1756-1827) 1774: 5273, 5274. 1780:
 5696, 5697, 5705, 5764, 5765.
 1781: 5856, 5928, 5929, 5930.
 1782: 6127, 6128. 1783: 6283,
 6287, 6341
- RUGENDAS, Johann Lorenz¹ 1779:
 5561 A
- RYLEY or RILEY, Charles Reuben
 (1752-98) 1780: 5780, 5781

¹ See Index of Publishers.

² Signed J. N. but resembling the manner of Gillray.

³ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF ARTISTS

- S., C. L., see SMITH, Charles Loraine
 S., G. L. 1777: 5428
 S., J.¹ 1772: 5017. 1776: 5335.
 1780: 5638
 S., P. 1777: 5463
 S., R.² 1777: 5452, 5453, 5455, 4778.
 1778: 4779
 S., R. 1780: 5665
 S., R. 1781: 5827
 SAM SHARP-EYE (?Bunbury) 1772:
 5083
 SANDBY, Paul (1725-1809) 1781:
 5903, 5908, 5909, 3799. 1782:
 6152. 1783: 6322
 SANDERS or SAUNDERS, John (1750-1825) 1772: 5090
 SAYERS, James (1748-1823) 1781:
 5882, 5883, 6359.³ 1782: 6011,
 6028, 6052, 6053, 6054, 6055, 6056,
 6057, 6058, 6059, 6060, 6061, 6062,
 6063, 6064, 6065, 6066, 6067, 6068,
 6069, 6070, 6071, 6072, 6073, 6074,
 6075, 6076, 6077. 1783: 6183,
 6192, 6217, 6226, 6234, 6271,
 6276
 SHARP, William (1749-1824) 1780:
 5641 SHERIDAN, Richard Brinley, see
 RICHARD SNEER, and R. S.
 SHERWIN, John Keyse (1751-90)
 1782: 5977
 SIMPSON, John (? fictitious) 1779:
 5573
 SMITH, A. 1771: 4927
 SMITH, B. T. 1781: 5890
 SMITH, Charles Loraine 1772: 4742,
 4734, 4752. 1782: 5983, 6125,
 6147. 1783: 6193
 SMITH, John Raphael⁴ (1752-1812)
 1772: 5090. 1773: 5220. 1774:
 3758. 1776: 4543, 4544. 1780:
 5814, 5820, 5820 A, 5823, 5824.
 1781: 5949. 1783: 6342
 SMITH, W. 1777: 5459
 SPARROW, S. (worked c. 1782-1806)
 1770: 4843
 STEPHANOFF, N. Fileter 1781: 5851
 STUBBS, George Townley (1756-1815) 1780: 5770
 T., E. (? Topham or perhaps Gillray imitating his manner)
 1783: 6189, 6218, 6321
 T., J. 1777: 5433
 TAGG, Thomas 1780: 5689
 TAYLOR, J. (?Isaac Taylor sen.
 b. 1730, or jun. b. c. 1750) 1772:
 5066
 TERRY, G.⁴ (worked 1770-88) 1772:
 5069. 1774: 5233, 5238, 5243,
 5244, 5275
 THOMLINSON or Thomlinsen (? fictitious) 1775: 5296. 1777: 5404
 THORNTON 1780: 5686
 TOPHAM, Edward (1751-1820)
 1771: 4671, 6353, 6354, 6355.
 1772: 5011, 5012, 4701. 1773:
 5171. 1775: 5317. 1777: 5438.
See E. T.
 TOWNSHEND, George, 4th Viscount
 Townshend (cr. Marquis 1786)
 (1724-1807) 1772: 4944. 1780:
 5645. 1781: 5850. 1782: 5961,
 5988, 6005. 1783: 6212
 TRINGHAM, William⁵ 1772: 5079,
 5080
 V., P. 1782: 6131, 6132
 'VAN GROG' 1773: 5195, 5196
 VAN SHROETER, J. 1781: 5845. See
 GILLRAY
 VINCENT, Christian 1779: 5536
 W., A. 1783: 6207
 W., I. or J. 1772: 4997
 WALE, Samuel (1720-86) 1771:
 4895, 4896, 4897, 4898, 4899,
 4900, 4901, 4902. 1772: 5066,
 5088
 WATSON, Thomas⁴ (1743-81) 1774:
 4786
 WELLS⁴ 1781: 5830
 WHITE, Charles (1751-85) 1772:
 4781
 WIGSTEAD, Henry (d. 1793) 1774:
 5273, 5274

¹ Probably three persons.

³ Date uncertain.

⁵ Called by H. Bleackley, the well-known book-plate engraver; he was employed by Wilkes to engrave a title-page for the Essay on Woman, Wilkes, 1917, p. 67. See Index of Publishers.

² Perhaps identical with 'Richard Sneer'.

⁴ See Index of Publishers.

INDEX OF ARTISTS

WILKINSON, John (probably fictitious) 1775: 5292, 5292 A, 5292 B, 5294. 1777: 5408. See 'CORBUTT' WILL or WILLE, Johann Martin ¹ 1775: 5291, 5292 A, 5296 A. 1776: 5331 A, 5332 A, 5336, 5337, 5339.	1777: 5405 A, 5406 A, 5407. 1779: 5582. 1782: 6034 WILLIAMS, J. ² 1771: 4852 WOODING (worked c. 1780-3) 1781: 5841 YERAC or YEARAC, see CAREY
---	--

¹ Probably engraver as well as publisher of these prints.

² See Index of Publishers.

INDEX OF PRINTSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS

- ADAMS, Francis Edward¹ 1774: 4783
- ALLEN, William, 88 Dame Street, Dublin 1779: 5542, 5543
- ALMON, John, Piccadilly (bookseller) 1772: 4968. 1779: 5541, 5571. 1780: 5631, 5641, 5687
- ASSEN, F., & JONES, J., Hayes's Court, Soho 1781: 5907
- BALDREY, J.,¹ 37 Green Street, Grosvenor Square 1781: 5878²
- BARROW, J.³ 1782: 5985,⁴ 5986,⁴ 6004⁴; 11 St. Bride's Passage, Fleet Street, 6010, 6014; 84 Dorset Street, Salisbury Court, Fleet Street, 6023, 6029, 6039. 1783: White Lion, Bull Stairs, Surrey Side, Blackfriars Bridge, 6167, 6168, 6175, 6208, 6229, 6251, 6261
- BENNET OF BENNETT, J., see SAYER
- BEW, John, [28] Paternoster Row (bookseller) 1778: 5493, 5494, 5495, 5496. 1779: 5576. 1781: 5853
- BINGLEY, William, [34] Newgate Street (bookseller) 1770: 4839
- BOWEN, T., at the Golden Pallet opposite the Hay Market, Piccadilly. (Or Opposite the Hay Market, Piccadilly) 1772: 4817, 4781
- BOWLES, Carington, 69 St. Paul's Church Yard 1771: 4514, 4515, 4579. 1772: 5092, 5093, 4516, 5094, 5095, 4582, 4517, 4518, 4519, 4520, 4521, 3789, 4522, 4523, 4524, 4591, 3769, 3770, 4573, 4576, 4578. 1773: 5219, 4525, 4526, 4527, 4528, 4529, 4530, 4531, 4532, 4590, 4533. 1774: 5232, 4534, 4535, 3779, 4536, 4537, 3758, 3759, 3777, 4539, 4580. 1775: p. 169, 4581, 3784, 3783, 3760, 4541, 3785, 3788, 4542, 3775. 1776: 4543, 4544, 4545, 4546, 4547, 5392. 1777: 4548, 4549, 4550, 4551, 4552, 4553, 4554, 3781, 3782. 1778: 5531, 4555, 5532, 4556, 4557, 4558, 4559, 4560, 4561, 4562. 1779: 5566, 5621, 4564, 4565, 4566, 4567, 3776, 4568, 4569, 5622, 3752. 1780: 5808, 5809, 5810, 5811, 5812, 5813, 5814, 5815, 5816, 5817, 5818, 5819, 5820, 5820A, 5821, 3761, 5822, 5823, 5824, 3778. 1781: 5942, 5943, 5944, 5945, 5946, 5947, 5948, 5948 A, 5949, 5950, 3786, 3787, 5951, 5952, 5953, 5954, 5955, 5956, 5957. 1782: 6155, 6156, 6157, 6158, 6159, 6160, 3753, 3754, 6161. 1783: 6346, 6348, 6349, 6350, 3797, 6351, 6352, 3757
- BOWLES & CARVER, 69 St. Paul's Church Yard (reissues of plates published by Carington Bowles⁵) 1772: 4516, 4519, 4520. 1773: 4533. 1774: 4535, 3779, 3777, 4539. 1775: 3784, 4542. 1777: 4552. 1778: 4557, 4561. 1782: 3754
- BOWLES, John, 13 Cornhill 1772: 4583. 1773: 5220, 4584, 5221. 1774: 5230. 1777: 5466
- BOYDELL, John, [90] Cheapside, London 1781: 5910. 1782: 6148, 6149, 6150, 6151
- BOYNE, J.,¹ 2 Shoe Lane, Fleet Street 1783: 6206, 6221, 6231, 6242, 6243
- BRETHERTON, Charles,⁶ New Bond Street 1782: 6011, 6028. No address, 6052, 6053, 6054, 6055,

¹ See Index of Artists.

² With Hedges.

³ All the prints published by Barrow are by the same artist, perhaps himself.

⁴ No address.

⁵ On the death (intestate) of Carington Bowles 1793, his son Carington carried on the business as Bowles and Carver. Plomer, Dict. of Booksellers and Printers, 1932.

⁶ See Index of Artists; he may have published the plates etched by himself in 1781 and 1782.

INDEX OF PRINTSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS

- 6056, 6057, 6058, 6059, 6060, 6061, 6062, 6063, 6064, 6065, 6066, 6067, 6068, 6069, 6070, 6071, 6072, 6073, 6075, 6076, 6077, 6147. 1783: 6317¹
- BRETHERTON, H.,² New Bond Street 1783: 6234
- BRETHERTON, James, 134 New Bond Street 1772: 4649, 5083, 4757, 4738, 4753, 4669, 4712, 4713, 4725, 4723, 4755, 4714, 5084, 5085, 5086, 4715, 4739, 4740, 4756, 4722, 4742, 5087. 1773: 5213, 5214, 5215, 5216, 5217, 5218, 4758, 4759, 4728, 4726, 4716, 4721, 4748, 4749, 4762. 1774: 5279, 4727, 4747, 4735, 4741, 4720. 1777: 4719, 4717, 4729. 1778: 4732. 1779: 4736, 4737,¹ 4760. 1780: 5802.³ 1781: 5913. 1782: 6139, 6140, 4185. 1783: 6345³
- BROWN, D. 1783: 6286
- BROWN, H., Oxford Market 1782: 6109
- BROWN, W. 1782: 5970
- BROWNING, J., Oxford Street 1782: 5966
- BRYER, Henry, London⁴ c. 1771: 4892, 12 Stephen Street, Tottenham Court Road. 1773: 4788
- C., T. M. 1780: 5643
- CATTERMOUL, J., 376 Oxford Street 1783: 6257, 6289
- CLARK, C., 6 Princes Street 1782: 6114
- COLLEY, Thomas,⁵ Clare Market, London 1780: 5627; 288 Strand 5674; Strand 5706; 288 Strand 5786; 1781: 288 Strand 5848; High Holborn 5850; 257 High Holborn 5854; 1782: Rolls Buildings, Fetter Lane or Acorn Court, Rolls Buildings 5967, 5989, 5993, 6000,³ 6008, 6035,³ 6037,³ 6038,³ 6040,³ 6043,³ 6119. 1783: 6163,³ 6230,³ 6236³
- COOKE, I., Temple Bar 1782: 6122
- CORNELL, T., Bruton Street 1780: 5650, 1781: 5854, 5887. 1782: 5976, 6113.³ 1783: 6185, 6207, 6217, 6226, 6271, 6276, 6306
- DARCHERY (or D'Archery) Elizabeth, St. James's Street or 11 St. James's Street 1780: 5659. 1782: 5969, 5979, 5980, 5987, 5992, 5996, 6006, 6015, 6018, 6022, 6026, 6031, 6032, 6041, 6106, 6116, 6123. 1783: 6169, 6170, 6171, 6174, 6176, 6177, 6178, 6180, 6191, 6195, 6197, 6211, 6214, 6218, 6233, 6237, 6252, 6274, 6280, 6321, 6333
- DARENY, M. S., Opposite to the King's Head, Strand 1779: 5569
- DARENY, JA^s (same address) 1780: 5629
- DARLING, W., Great Newport Street 1771: 4767. 1772: 4948
- DARLY, Mary⁶ 1772: 4752. 1776: 5369
- DARLY, Matthew,⁶ 39 Strand 1771: 4879, 4632, 4710, 4668, 4670, 4671, 4672, 4673, 4913, 4675, 4677, 4782, 4679, 4914, 4634, 4680, 4681, 4915, 4916, 4682, 4917, 4683, 4684, 4685, 4686, 4687, 4711, 4918, 4764, 4635, 4636, 4639, 4641, 4919, 4633, 4920, 4305, 4628.⁷ 1772: 4985, 4986, 4987, 4988, 4989, 4990, 4991, 4692, 4693, 4992, 4993, 4994, 4995, 4996, 4997, 4704, 4998, 4694, 4697, 4999, 5000, 5001, 5002, 5003, 5004, 5005, 5006, 4690, 4647, 5007, 5008, 5009, 5010, 4705, 5011, 5012, 5013, 5014, 4648, 5015, 5016, 4695, 4696, 4698, 4652, 5017, 4653, 5018, 4700, 5019, 5020, 5021, 4691, 5022, 5023, 5024, 5025, 5026, 5027, 4709, 4654, 5028, 5029, 5030, 5031, 5032, 5033, 4656, 5034, 5035, 4657, 5036, 5037, 5038, 5039, 4658, 4660, 5040, 5041, 4661, 5042, 5043, 5044, 5045, 4662, 5046, 4663, 4664, 5047, 5048, 5049, 4659, 5050, 5051, 5052, 5053, 5054, 4665, 5055, 5056, 4703, 5057, 5058, 4701, 5059, 5060, 5061, 4637, 4706, 4699,

¹ Date uncertain.

² H. is perhaps an engraver's error.

³ No address.

⁴ Engraver: pupil and partner of William Wynne Ryland; they were printellers at 27 Cornhill until Dec. 1771, when they became bankrupt. Bryer again had a Cornhill address in 1776. Died before 1783. D.N.B. s.v. Ryland; Chaloner Smith, i, pp. lii, 123-4.

⁵ See Index of Artists.

⁷ With R. Sayer.

INDEX OF PRINTSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS

- 4829, 4640. 1773: 4666, 4707, 5149, 5150, 5151, 5152, 5153, 4667, 5154, 5155, 5156, 5157, 5158, 4688, 5159, 5160, 5161, 5162, 5163, 5164, 4689, 5165, 5166, 5167, 5168, 5169, 5170, 4642, 5171, 5172, 5173, 4643, 5174, 5175, 4644, 4645, 4646, 5176, 5177, 5178, 5179, 5180, 5181, 5182, 5183, 5184, 5185, 5186. 1774: 5261, 5262, 5263, 5264, 4651, 5265, 4650, 5266, 5267, 5268, 5269, 5270, 4708, 4655. 1775: 5312, 4638, 5313, 5314, 5315, 5316, 5317. 1776: 5335, 5368, 5369, 5370, 5371, 5372, 5373, 5374, 5375, 5376, 5377, 5378. 1777: 5397, 5400,¹ 5429, 5430, 5431, 5432, 5433, 5434, 5435, 5436, 5437, 5438, 5439, 5440, 5441, 5442, 5443, 5444, 5445, 5446, 5447, 5448, 5449, 5450, 5451. 1778: 5473, 5474, p. 288, 5475, p. 289, 5482, 5483, 5511, 5513, 5514, 5515, 5516, 5517, 5518, 5519, 5520, 5521, 5522. 1779: 5551,² 5599, 5600, 5601, 5602, 5603, 5606, 5607. 1780: 5652, 5654, 5661, 5662, 5665, 5669; 159 Fleet Street 5670, 5671; 39 Strand 5675, 5682, 5688, 5700, 5701, 5753, 5754, 5785. 1781: 159 Fleet Street 5835, 5860,³ 5897
- DAWE, P.,⁴ [15] Goodge Street, Tottenham Court Road 1782: 6118
- DENT, W.,⁴ 116 Strand 1783: 6240, 6244, 6246, 6249, 6255, 6257, 6260, 6262, 6314, 6315
- DICKINSON, William,⁴ 158 New Bond Street⁵ 1781: 5921, 5922, 5923, 5924. 1782: 6141, 6143
- EVANS, T., Oxford Street 1782: 5968
- EWART, T., the Corner of Hudson's Court near St. Martin's Lane Strand 1781: 5861
- FIELDING & WALKER, [20] Paternoster Row (booksellers) 1779: 5548, 5618. 1780: 5684
- FIELDING, John, [23] Paternoster Row (bookseller) 1781: 5844. 1783: 6223, 6334
- FORES, S. W., 41 Piccadilly, 1783: 6343⁶
- FREEMAN, I. or J., Strand 1783: 6232
- GEHAGAN, Patrick, Oxford Road (probably fictitious) 1778: 5489 A
- GUNDRY, Thomas 1781: 5940
- HALL,⁴ 2 Grafton Street, Soho 1781: 5840
- HAMILTON, A. jun.,⁷ near St. John's Gate, Publisher of the Town and Country Magazine; his imprint is on all Tête-à-tête plates from No. 5250. See Index of Titles
- HARRIS, John, 3 Sweetings Alley, Cornhill 1771: 4764. 1780: 5636, 5637, 5640, 5673, 5694, 5699,⁸ 5795. 1782: 6019
- HART, Thomas, London (? fictitious) 1775: 5292 B, 5294. 1776: 5331, 5331 A, 5332, 5332 A, 5336, 5337, 5338, 5339. 1777: 5404, 5408
- HAWKINS, I. or J., Strand, London 1779: 5547
- HEDGES, Edward, 92 Under the Royal Exchange, Cornhill, or 2 Under the Piazzas, Royal Exchange, or 92 Cornhill 1780: 5627, 5628, 5645,⁹ 5649, 5651, 5708.¹⁰ 1781: 5838, 5842, 5843, 5878,¹¹ 5933. 1782: 5959, 6009. 1783: 6183, 6192, 6199, 6281, 6285, 6344¹²
- HINTON, W., 12 Corner of Bell Yard, Grace Church Street (copper plate printer) 1779: 5558
- HITCHCOCK, William, 5 Birchin Lane 1777: 5401, 5464
- HOGG, Alexander, The King's Arms, 16 Paternoster Row (bookseller) 1780: 5686. 1781: 5841

¹ 120 New Bond Street and 39 Strand.

³ No publication line, see print.

⁵ See Watson and Dickinson.

⁷ Son of Archibald Hamilton (1736-93), printer, d. 1792. Plomer, Dict. of Booksellers, 1932.

⁸ With Mitchell.

¹⁰ With Kearsley and Stockdale.

² No address.

⁴ See Index of Artists.

⁶ Date uncertain.

⁹ With Kearsley.

¹¹ With Baldrey.

¹² With J. Wallis.

INDEX OF PRINTSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS

- HOLLAND, William, 50 Oxford Street
5480,¹ 5787,¹ 5794,¹ 1782: 6036
— 66 Drury Lane 1782: 6126.¹
1783: 6277, 6328
- HOLT, Mrs., 111 Oxford Street,
London 1779: 5539
- HONE, Mr.,² St. James's Place 1772:
4474
- HOOPER, S., 25 Ludgate Hill 1771:
4864, 4865, p. 18, 4791, 4931.
1772: 5081. 1773: 5108; Corner of Arundel Street, Strand 1782:
6033
- HUMPHREY, G.,² 48 Long Acre
1783: 6220, 6220 A, 6288
- HUMPHREY, H. [Hannah] or Mrs.
[Miss], Bond Street 1774: 5273,
5274
— 18, New Bond Street 1779:
5596, 5602 A, 5603 A. 1780: 5630,³
5633,³ 5646, 5648,³ 5662 A, 5682 B,
5683, 5690, 5748, 5749, 5756,⁴ 5761.
1781: 5725, 5892, 5894, 5929,
5930, 5936, 5937, 5938. 1782: p.
559, 5963, 5972,⁵ 5974, 5981,⁶
5990, 5997, 6001, 6003, 6020, 6025,
6044, 6050,⁶ 6095, 6096, 6098,⁸
6101, 6102, 6104, 6105, 6115, 6127,
6130, 6133.
— 51 New Bond Street 1783:
6187, 6188, 6194, 6278, 6307, 6308,
6309, 6310, 6312, 6326, 6330
— St. James's Street, 5481,⁷
5812⁷
- HUMPHREY, William,² St. Martin's
Lane 1772: 5096, 4775. 1773:
4772. 1774: 5280, 4776
— Gerrard Street, Soho 1775:
5295. 1776: p. 216, 5357, 5380,
4777⁹
— 227 Strand 1777: 5402, 5452,
5453, 5454, 5455, 4778, 5456, 5457.¹⁰
- 1778: 5489, 4779,¹⁰ 5523,¹⁰ 5524,¹⁰
5525¹⁰
— 70 St. Martin's Lane 1778:
4780
— 227 Strand 1779: 5553,⁹ 5555,
5570, 5579, 5604,⁹ 5605,⁹ 5608,
5609, 5610, 5614, 5616.⁹ 1780:
5623, 5624, 5625, 5630,¹¹ 5633,¹¹
5633 A, 5635, 5648,¹¹ 5664, 5676,
5678, 5695, 5707, 5779, 5790.
1781: 5831 A, 5837, 5906. 1782:
5964, 5965, 5971, 5973, 5978, 5989,
5994, 6007, 6012,⁹ 6016, 6036, 6051,
6110, 6112, 6120, 6131, 6132.
1783: 6162,⁹ 6164, 6165, p. 671,
6173, 6182, 6186, 6190, p. 688,
6201, 6203, p. 691, 6204, 6205,
6207 A, 6209, 6210, 6213, 6219,
6222, 6225, 6227, 6250, p. 724,
6283, 6287, 6325, 6331, 6335
- HUMPHREY, Mrs., St. Martin's Lane
1778: 5526
- JOHNSON, G. 1778: 5487
- JONES, C., Brewer Street, Golden
Square 1780: 5703
- JONES, J.,¹² Gerrard Street 1777:
5422
- JONES, J.,¹² 103 Wardour Street,
Soho 1780: 5696, 5697.¹³ 1781:
5856⁹ Cf. 5904
- JONES, J.,¹² Hayes's Court, Soho
1781: 5907. See ASSEN, F.
- KEARLY, J., Stafford Street, Old
Bond Street 1780: 5645¹⁴
- KEARSLEY, George.¹⁵ 1772: Ludgate
Street (bookseller) 4970;
— 1780: 46 Fleet Street 5692,
5708.¹⁶ 1782: 6005
- KENT, J. (? fictitious) 1781: 5845,
5846

¹ Date uncertain. ² See Index of Artists.

³ With W. Humphrey.

⁴ Date uncertain; pub. at Old Bond Street.

⁵ 118 New Bond Street.

⁶ Pub. at Bond Street.

⁷ Copy of an earlier plate.

⁸ Pub. at 51 New Bond Street; several of the plates of 1782 have the address New Bond Street without a number, but in or before Nov. 1780 H. Humphrey seems to have moved from 18 to 51.

⁹ No address.

¹⁰ No address, cf. Nos. 5526, 4780.

¹¹ 227 Strand or 18 New Bond Street (address of H. Humphrey).

¹² Perhaps the same person, possibly John Jones, the engraver in mezzotint and stipple, d. 1797. See also Nos. 5904, 5907.

¹³ With Rowlandson.

¹⁴ With Hedges.

¹⁵ See Bleackley, Wilkes, 1917, pp. 94-5, &c.

¹⁶ With Stockdale and Hedges.

INDEX OF PRINTSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS

- KILLINGBECK, A., Down Street
1783: 6181
- KNIGHT, C., Berwick Street 1781:
5876, 5877
- LANGHAM, J., St. Bride's Passage,
Fleet Street 1781: 5941. 1782:
5976, 5998, 5999; 84 Dorset Street
6042
- The Great Piazza, Covent
Garden 1783: 6319
- Laurie, Robert,¹ 17 Rosomon's
Row, Clerkenwell² 1780: 5657
- LEATHERHEAD, P. J. (? fictitious)
1782: 6013
- LIVESAY, Rd.,² at Mrs. Hogarth's,
Leicester Fields 1782: 6129
- LOCKINGTON, J., Shug Lane, Golden
Square 1776: 5378, 5379. 1777:
5458, 5459, 5460, 5461
- LONG, D. 1780: 5639
- LOW, T. 1780: 5626
- MACINTOSH, W. (? fictitious) 1780:
5644
- MACKLIN, Thomas, 1 Lincoln's Inn
Fields 1779: 5559
- MEADOWS, R. 1781: 5903
- MILLS, I. or J., 1 Ratcliff Row near the French Hospital, Old Street
1780: 5647, 5653. 1783: 6327³
- MITCHELL or MITCHEL, P., North
Audley Street, Grosvenor Square
1780: 5673,⁴ 5699,⁴ 5766. 1781:
5844.⁵ With J. Fielding 1782: 5991
- MORRIS, John, Rathbone Place
(? fictitious) 1777: 5405, 5405 A,
5406, 5406 A. 1778: 5469. 1782:
6034
- NEALE, S. J., 352 near Exeter
'change, Strand 1782: 6097
- NICOLL, William, [51] St. Paul's
Church Yard (bookseller) 1775:
5319, 5320, 5321, 5322, 5323, 5324
- OWEN, R., Fleet Street 1782: 5961
- PETHER, T.,⁶ Berwick Street, Soho
1772: 5195, 5196
- PHELPS, W. 1780: 5788. 1781: 5834
- POWNALL, B., 6 Pall Mall 1783:
6256, 6263, 6265, 6266
- RACK, Mr., or M., London. 1782:
5983, 6125
- RENIGALD or RENEGAL, W. 1780:
5666, 5667
- RENNIE, W. 1782: 6103
- RICH, E. The Little Print Shop facing Anderton's Coffee House,
Fleet Street or 55 Fleet Street
1782: 5985, 5986. 1783: 6248
- RICHARDSON, W., 68 High Holborn
1778: 5484, 5527. 1779: 5550,
5555, 5613. 1780: 5642, 5658,
5677, 5702, 5723, 5792. 1781:
5831. 1782: 5984, 6004, 6117.
1783: 174 Near Surrey Street,
Strand 6166, 6172, 6173, 6196,
6215, 6268
- ROBERTS, J., St. Martin's Lane
1772: 5068
- ROWLANDSON, T.,² & JONES, J.,
103 Wardour Street, Soho 1780:
5697, 5764, 5765
- RUGENDAS, Johann Lorenz, Augs-burg² 1779: 5561 A
- RUSTED, R., 3 Bridge Street, Ludgate Hill 1783: 6184, 6323
- RYLEY, C. R.² 1780: 5780, 5781
- SANDBY, P.,² St. George's Row,
Oxford Turnpike 1781: 5909.
1783: 6322⁷
- SAYER, Robert, 53 Fleet Street⁸
1771: 4922,⁹ 4601,⁹ 4923,⁹ 4924,⁹
4925,⁹ 4606,⁹ 4595,⁹ 4599,⁹
4600,⁹ 4628,¹⁰ 4932,¹⁰ 4933.¹⁰
1772: 5056,¹¹ 5060¹¹, 4603,⁹

¹ See Index of Artists. He was connected with Sayer, to whose business he succeeded in partnership with Whittle. Chaloner Smith, ii, p. 796.

² See Index of Artists.

³ No address, 'to be had at 51 Bond Street' [?H. Humphrey's].

⁴ With Harris.

⁵ With J. Fielding.

⁶ Probably Thomas, a wax-modeller who exhibited portraits in wax with the Free Society from 1772 to 1781. D.N.B., s.v. Abraham Pether.

⁷ Advertised as 'To be had at Mr. Sandbys' . . . [ut s.]; and of G. Kearsley, at No. 46, in Fleet Street'.

⁸ 'The Golden Buck' till c. 1771. Also a bookseller, see Plomer, Dict. of Booksellers, 1932. ⁹ With John Smith. ¹⁰ With Daryl. ¹¹ Date uncertain.

INDEX OF PRINTSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS

- 4604,¹ 4602,¹ 5082,¹ 4608,¹
 4612,¹ 4605,¹ 5089, 5091, 5097.²
1773: 5172,² 5173,² 5176,²
 4609,¹ 4607,¹ 4611.¹ 1774:
 5261 A,² 5265.² 1778: 5511 A.²
1780: 5795,² 5796,² 5797,² 5798,²
 5799.² 1782: 6136, 6153,² 6154.²
See SAYER & BENNETT
- SAYER, R. & BENNETT OR BENNETT, J.,
 53 Fleet Street 1774: p. 169,
 5241, 4613, 4614, 4615, 4616,
 4618, 4619, 4620. 1775: 5284,
 p. 196, p. 197, 4622. 1776: 5361,
 5391, 5393, 5394, 5395, 4621, 4629,
 4623, 5396, 4624, 4610. 1777:
 5463, 5467, 5468, 4625. 1778:
 4626, 4631. 1779: 5562. 1780:
 5783.¹ 1781: 5828,¹ 5900,¹ 5939.¹
1782: 6138
- 'T. SCRATCHLEY' 1771: 4782. See
 DARLY, Matthew
- SEAGO, J., High Street, St. Giles,
 London 1777: 5428
- SHARPE, I or J. 1782: 6024
- SHEPHERD, C. London (? fictitious)
1775: 5290, 5291, 5292, 5292 A,
 5293, 5296, 5296 A.
- SHEPPARD, C., Lambeth Hill, Doctors' Commons 1778: 5477
- SLEDGE, S. (or Mrs.), Henrietta Street, Covent Garden 1771:
 4857, 4784, 4785. 1773: 5187,
 5188, 5189. 1774: 5234,³ 4786.
1777: 5462
- SMITH, John,⁴ Cheapside 1771:
 4922,⁵ 4601,⁵ 4923,⁵ 4924,⁵ 4925,⁵
 4606,⁵ 4595,⁵ 4599,⁵ 4600,⁵ 4932,⁵
 4933.⁵ 1772: 4603,⁵ 4604,⁵ 4602,⁵
 5082,⁵ 4608,⁵ 4612,⁵ 4605.⁵ 1773:
 4607,⁵ 4609,⁵ 4611.⁵ 1778: 5530.
1779: 5597. 1780: 5783.⁵ 1781:
 5828,⁵ 5847, 5900,⁵ 5939⁵
- SMITH, J. R.,⁶ 83 Oxford Street:
1781: 5901, 5919, 5920. 1782:
- 6128, 6144, 6145, 6146. 1783:
 6341, 6342, 6343
- SMITH, M., Fleet Street 1783:
 6212, 6272⁷
- STATON, J. & JONES, J., 13 Parliament Street, London 1781: 5904
- STOCKDALE, John, 181 Piccadilly
 (bookseller) 1780: 5708⁸
- SWAN, Mr., facing Norfolk Street,
 Strand 1774: 5234⁹
- TERRY, G.,⁶ Pater Noster Row¹⁰
1772: 5069. 1774: 5233, 5238,
 5243, 5244, 5275
- THANE, J., Rupert Street, Hay-market 1782: 6099. See TORRE &
 THANE
- THOMAS, M., Princes Street 1783:
 6228
- TOMLINSON, James, Oxford Street
 (? fictitious) 1779: 5573
- TORRE, 44 Market Lane¹¹ 1781: 5905
- TORRE, A., & THANE, J., Ancient and Modern Print Warehouse,
 28 Haymarket 1781: 3799. 1782:
 6108¹⁴
- TRINGHAM, William,⁶ under St.
 Dunstan's Church, Fleet Street
1772: 5079, 5080
- TURNER, Frame-maker and Print-seller, 40 Snow Hill 1772:
 4787. 1782: 5985
- WALKER, J., 13 Parliament Street
1776: 5381
- WALLIS, J., 16 Ludgate Street
1783: 6241, 6241 A, 6344¹²
- WATSON & DICKINSON,¹³ 158 New
 Bond Street. 1779: 4765. 1780:
 4766, 5803, 5804. 1781: 5914,
 5915, 5916, 5917
- WELLS, W.,⁶ 132 Fleet Street (the address, c. 1768, of T. Bradford,
see No. 4256) 1779: 5568. 1780:
 5632,¹⁴ 5660, 5668, 5680,¹⁵ 5782,

¹ With John Smith.

³ With Mr. Swan.

⁵ With Sayer or Sayer & Bennett.

⁷ Sold at 46 Fleet Street (address of Kearsley).

⁸ With Hedges and Kearsley.

¹⁰ G. Terry & Batley were engravers at 29 Paternoster Row in 1770. Chaloner Smith, iii, p. 1362.

¹¹ Torre & Brothers were Merchants at Market Lane, Pall Mall, 1784. Lowndes, London Directory.

¹² With Hedges.

¹³ See Dickinson.

¹⁴ Address only, no name.

¹⁵ Address only, 1321 Fleet Street.

INDEX OF PRINTSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS

- 5784,¹ 5785, 5791.¹ 1781: 5826,
5830, 5852, 5855, 5931, 5932.
1782: 5988, 6107, 6135. 1783:
6216, 6245, 6267, 6275, 6284, 6332
WESSON, I. or J., Litchfield Street,
St. Ann's, Soho 1771: 4789
WESTENHOLT, C., 34 Church Street,
Soho 1782: 6030
WHITE, Wm., Angel Court, Westminster 1779: 5549
WIGGINS, T., 9 Founder's Court,
Lothbury 1783: 6279
WILKINSON, Robert,² 58 Cornhill
1779: 5535, 5564. 1780: 5776,
5789. 1781: 5827, 5912, 5918
WILL or WILLE, Johann Martin,
Augsburg 1775: 5291, 5292 A,
5296 A. 1776: 5331 A, 5332 A,
5336, 5337, 5339. 1777: 5405 A,
5406 A, 5407. 1779: 5563, 5582.
1782: 6034
WILLIAMS, J.,³ 1771: 4852
WILLIAMS, John³ (bookseller),
39 Fleet Street 1774: 5278.
1778: 5470
WILLIAMS, John,³ 34 Strand 1781:
5896, 5898, 5934, 5935
WILLIAMS, J.,³ 227 Strand⁴ 1783:
6239
WILLIAMS, W., Fleet Street 1777:
5399
WILSON, Daniel, 20 Portugal Street,
Lincoln's Inn 1780: 5638
WOOD, J., on Ludgate Hill 1772:
5067
Ancient and Modern Print Warehouse, 28 Haymarket (address of Torre and Thane) 1782: 6108
14 Dover Street 1782: 5958, 5975
66 Drury Lane (address of Holland)
c. 1782: 6126
132 Fleet Street (address of W.
Wells) 1780: 5632, 5784, 5791
1321 Fleet Street 1780: 5680
The Printing Office, 3 Walker
Court, Berwick Street, Soho
(? Almon) 1779: 5536

¹ Address only, no name.

² He succeeded to the business of John Bowles. Plomer, Dict. of Booksellers and Printers, 1932.

³ Whether two, three, or all are identical is not clear. One at least is probably the John Williams who was pilloried for his share in the North Briton, Bleackley, Wilkes, 1917, p. 170. His address was Next the Mitre Tavern 1763-74, his subsequent history unrecorded. Plomer, Dict. of Printers, 1932, p. 265.

⁴ The address of W. Humphrey.

NE British Museum. Dept. of 55 Prints and Drawings
L7A3 Catalogue
1870
v.5

PLEASE DO NOT REMOVE
CARDS OR SLIPS FROM THIS POCKET

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO LIBRARY

